
Eitz, Karl Andreas (n. Halberstadt, 1848). A singing-teacher in the schools of Eisleben who since 1890 has devised and advocated a system of elementary teaching of musical structure and of the art of sight-singing by means of a syllable-notation analogous to that of the Tonic Sol-Fa system (for details, see Riemann, Musik-Lexikon, 1922). Author of several manuals relating to the principles and application of the system (1893–1911) and also of Das mathematisch-reine Tonsystem, 1891. Critiques of the system by various writers from 1908.

Ekman, Karl (Åbo, 1869). Finnish pianist, pupil of H. Barth and A. Grünfeld, since 1895 teaching at the Helsingfors Conservatory and from 1907 its director. He is said to be the best pianist of Finland at present.

Eldering, Bram (Groningen, 1865). Gifted Dutch violinist, pupil of Poortmann, Hubay and Joachim, in 1887–88 teaching at Pest and playing viola in the Hubay Quartet, from 1891 concert-master of the Berlin Philharmonic, from 1895 of the Meiningen court-orchestra, and in 1899–1903 of the Gürzenich Orchestra in Cologne, as well as head of two Quartets and teacher at the Conservatory.

Elers, Franz (?1500–1590). 16th C.

Elwijkstra, Xavier Victor van (Brussels, 1825–1888, Tirmont). Belgian amateur at Louvain, for a time director at the Cathedral and manager of sacred concerts there with orchestra. Wrote monographs on Belgian church-music (1861), on the carillonneur Van den Gheyn (1862), on various congresses about church-music (1866) and on L'État Actuel de la Musique en Italie, 1875, besides a collection of old Netherland clavier-pieces.

Elgar, Edward William (n. Worcester, 1857). Distinguished English composer, pupil of his father (long organist in Worcester), but largely self-taught. From youth he played the organ and several orchestral instruments, becoming member or leader of bands of varied form, and in 1885–89 followed his father as organist of St. George's (R. C.) Church, Worcester. In 1889 he went to London, in 1891 to Malvern, in 1904 to Hereford (in 1905–08 serving as professor at Birmingham Univ.), and of late years has lived again in London. From about 1896 his marked originality of conception and mastery of expression began to be generally recognized, leading to a rapid growth of a remarkable renown, so that notable commissions were assigned to him and in 1904 a three-day Elgar Festival was held at Covent Garden. In 1906 he visited the United States. Mus.D. of Cambridge in 1900, of Durham in 1904, of Oxford in 1905 and also of Yale; LL.D. of Leeds, in 1904, of Aberdeen in 1906 and of the Univ. of Pittsburgh in 1907. Knighted in 1904. He is also a member of numerous societies throughout Europe.

His works comprise the following (opus-numbers in brackets):

Orchestral Works

Symphonies in A-flat [55] (1908) and in E-flat [63] (1911).
Overtures—Froissart [19], Cockaigne (in London Town) [40], In the South [50] (1902).
Symphonic Study Falstaff [68] (1913); Symphonic Poem Polonia [78] (1915).
2 Suites, The Wand of Youth [1ab].
Variations, Enigma [36] (1899).
Imperial March [32] (1897, Victoria Jubilee); 2 marches, Pomp and Circumstance [39] (1901).
Violin-concerto in B min. [61] (1910).
Incidental music to Grania and Diarmid [42].
Servilana [7]: 3 pieces [10].
Sursum Corda [11], for strings, brass and organ.
Adagio, Sospiri [70], for strings, harp and organ.
Dream-Children [43], for small orchestra.
For strings—Introduction and Allegro [47] (1905), with quartet; Serenade [20]; Elegy [58].

Chamber-Works

Piano-quintet in A min. [84]; wind-quintet [6].
String-quartets [8] and [83] (1919).
Romances for violin and orchestra [1] and for bassoon and orchestra [62].
Violin-sonatas [9] and [82] (1919).
For violin—Salut d'Amour [12]; La Capricieuse [17]; Sérénade Lyrique; Allegretto [3]; 7 pieces [4, 13, 15] (the last also for small orchestra).

Vocal Works

Oratorios—The Light of Life [29] (1890, Worcester).
The Dream of Gerontius [38] (1900, Birmingham).
The Apostles [49] (1903, Birmingham), The Kingdom [51] (1906, Birmingham).
Cantatas—The Black Knight [25] (1893), King Olaf [30] (1896), The Banner of St. George [33] (1897), Caractacus [35] (1898), Coronation Ode [44] (1902, Edward VII), The Music-Makers [69] (1912).
Spanish Serenade [23] (1892); Scenes from the Bavarian Highlands [27] (1896); Masque, The Crown of India [66] (1912); The Spirit of England [80] (1916).
Psalm 48 [67]: Te Deum and Benedictus [34]; motets and anthems [2, 74]; 5 choral songs [71-73].
Recitations with orchestra—The Carillon [75], Une Voix dans le Désert [77], and The Belgian Flag [79].
About 20 part-songs [18, 26, 45, 52-54, 56-57].
Many songs [5, 16, 59-60 and without number].
Also Sea-Pictures [37], for alto and orchestra.

Monographs by Buckley, 1904, Newman, 1906, and Streatfeild, 1912, besides numerous essays and articles. G. A.

Elias Salomonis. 13th C.

Ella, John (Thirsk, 1802-1888, London). English violinist, from 1822 playing in various London orchestras, also studying with Attwood and Fétis, and continuing at the Antient Concerts and in the Philharmonic till 1849. In 1845-80 he conducted a series of morning chamber-concerts (The Musical Union) and in 1850-59 also an evening series. For both of these he prepared analytical programs. From 1855 for a time he lectured at the London Institution (library). He was also critic for various papers. Author of Lectures on Dramatical Music, 1872, Musical Sketches, 1861, '69, '78, Personal Memoir of Meyerbeer, 1868, and Records of the Musical Union. G.

Ellberg, Ernst Henrik (Söderhamn, 1868). Swedish composer, trained at the Stockholm Conservatory, at first playing in the court-orchestra and from 1903 professor at the Conservatory. Has written a symphony, 2 overtures, an Introduction and Fugue for strings, a string-quintet, a string-quartet, the ballet-pantomime Askungen. 1907. and choruses for men's voices.

Eller, Louis (Gratz, 1820-1862, Pau). Styrian violinist, pupil of Hysel, from 1842 concert-master at Salzburg, besides making wide tours (with Joachim at Paris in 1850, with Gottschalk in Spain in 1852, etc.). Wrote various violin-pieces and études.

Ellerton, John Lodge (Chester, 1801-1873, London). English composer (amateur), studying in Italy and Germany. Wrote 9 operas (from about 1825), including Dominica, 1838 (London), the oratorio Paradise Lost, 1857, 6 symphonies, 4 overtures, over 40 string-quartets and much other chamber-music, a Stabat Mater, 3 masses and other church-music, over 60 glees (Catch Club prizes from 1836), many duets and songs. He was also a poet (volumes in 1845 and 1864). [His name was properly Lodge, but he assumed that of Ellerton about 1845.] G.

Elleviou, Jean (Rennes, 1769-1842, Paris). French operatic tenor, in 1790-1813 a favorite at the Comédie Italienne, Paris, appearing at the premières of Méhul's Joseph (1807) and Boieldieu's Jean de Paris (1812). See Reichardt, Vertraute Briefe, 1810.

Ellicott, Rosalind Frances (Cambridge, 1857), daughter of the Bishop of Gloucester. English composer, trained at the Royal Academy, London, and by Wingham, from about 1885 having commissions for large works from various Festivals. In 1882 she was one of the leading promoters of the Handel Society. Has written the cantatas Radiant Sister of the Dawn, 1887 (Cheltenham), Elysium, 1889 (Gloucester), The Birth of Song, 1892 (Gloucester), Henry of Navarre, 1894 (men's voices), 3 overtures, a Fantasia for piano and orchestra, a string-quartet, a piano-quartet, 2 trios, sonatas for violin and for 'cello, part-songs and songs. G.

Elling, Catherinus (Christiania, 1858). Norwegian composer, trained mostly at Leipzig and Berlin, from 1896 teaching at the Christiania Conservatory and since 1908 on salary from the government as collector of folk-songs. Has written the opera Kosakkerne, 1897, the oratorio The Prodigal Son, music for A Midsummer-Night's Dream, a symphony, chamber-works, effective piano-pieces and songs, besides short sketches of Ole Bull, Kjerulf, Svendsen and Grieg and articles on folk-songs.

Ellis, Alexander John (London, 1814-1890, do.). Distinguished English phonetician and musical physicist, educated at Cambridge, from 1843 chiefly concerned with phonetics, but from 1863 increasingly absorbed in extending Helmholtz' researches in acoustics. He became fellow of the Royal, London Mathematical and Antiquaries' Societies, and was twice president of the Philological Society. Sc.D. of Cambridge Univ. in 1890. He translated Helmholtz' Tonempfindungen (1875, 2d ed. 1885), to which (2d ed.) he added summaries of many papers originally prepared for the Royal Society, the Musical Association and the Society of Arts (from 1864), dealing with problems of scales, temperament, making instruments capable of just intonation, oral sensitiveness, etc. Author also of Early English Pronunciation, 5 parts, 1869-89, manuals on pronunciation and singing-diction (1877-78), The Basis of Music, 1877, etc. G.

Elman, Mischa (Talnoe, 1891). Eminent Russian violinist, pupil of Fidelmann, Auer and Cui, appearing at Petrograd and Berlin in 1904, at London in 1905 and at New York in 1908, since then being everywhere recognized as an artist of the first order. He has published some transcriptions. G, A.

Elmblad, Johannes (Stockholm, 1853). Swedish operatic bass, pupil of Stockhausen and Garcia, from 1876 noted in Sweden and Germany, from 1880 singing on European and American stages, and from 1897 engaged at the Stockholm City-Theater.

Elmenhorst, Heinrich (1632-1704). 17th C.

Eloy d'Amerval. 15th C.

Elsenheimer, Nicholas J. (Wiesbaden, 1866). Hessian pianist, educated at Heidelberg University (LL.D.), in music a pupil of Jakobsthal. He came to Cincinnati in 1890 as professor at the College of Music and organist in various churches, besides appearing as pianist with the Marion Quartet, in two-piano recitals with Gorno and with orchestras. Since 1907 he has taught at the Granberry School in New York and been organist at St. Ignatius'. Has written the symphonic poem Künstler Erdenvallen, the cantata Die Weihe der Künste, 1899 (Sängerbund prize), the choral Eventide (women's voices with strings), The Angels' Song (bass, quartet, strings and organ), the tenor ballade Belshazzar, a mass, etc. A.

Elsner, Josef Xavier (Grottkau, 1769-1854, Warsaw). Silesian violinist, from 1781 in theater-orchestras at Brünn, Lemberg and (from 1799) Warsaw, where in 1815 founded the Musical Society and in 1816 became head of the music-school that in 1821 became the Warsaw Conservatory (director till 1830). He was one of Chopin's teachers. Wrote 19 operas, including Leszet der Weise, 1809, and König Zokietek, 1818, ballets, duodramas and other stage-music, 3 symphonies, orchestral polonaises, quartets, concertos, much church-music, including a Passion, masses, a Requiem, etc., 4-hand piano-sonatas, and two essays on the musical capacity of the Polish language. G.

Elson, Arthur (Boston, 1873), son of the following. American author of many useful manuals of musical information, including a Critical History of Opera, 1901, Orchestral Instruments, 1902, Woman's Work in Music, 1903, Modern Composers of Europe, 1904, The Musi- cian's Guide, 1912, The Book of Musical Knowledge, 1914, History of Vocal Music, 1918, etc. A.

Elson, Louis Charles (Boston, 1848-1920, do.). American theorist, critic and author, pupil of Kreissmann and Gloggner-Castelli, from 1876 active in Boston, writing for various papers and from 1880 on the staff of the New England Conservatory (soon head of the theory-department), besides much lecturing there and elsewhere. He was critic for the Advertiser from 1888 and was correspondent of several foreign periodicals. Author of Curiosities of Music, 1883, German Songs and Song-Writers, 1884, History of German Song, 1886, The Theory of Music, 1890, The Realm of Music, 1892, National Music of America, 1899, European Reminiscences, 1893, Great Composers, 1897, Shakespeare in Music, 1900, Folk-Songs of Many Nations, 1905, History of American Music, 1904 (revised, 1915), Music Dictionary (terms), 1905, Woman in Music, 1917, etc. Chief editor of the University Encyclopedia of Music, 10 vols., 1912, and Modern Music and Musicians, 20 vols., besides contributing to several other large works. He also made many translations and arrangements. A.

Elterlein, Ernst von [Ernst Gottschald] (Elterlein, 1826-?). Saxon lawyer, author of analyses of Beethoven's sonatas and symphonies (1857-58).

Elvey, George Job (Canterbury, 1816-1893, n. Windsor). English organist, pupil of Skeats and the Royal Academy, London, from 1835 or ganist at St. George's, Windsor, retiring in 1882, besides conducting choral societies. Mus.D. of Oxford Univ. in 1840. Knighted in 1871. Wrote 2 oratorios, several odes, considerable church-music, an orchestral march, glees and part-songs. Memoir by his widow, 1894. G.

Elvey, Stephen (Canterbury, 1805-1860, Oxford), brother of the above. English organist, pupil of Skeats, from 1830 organist at New College, Oxford, and from 1848 chorægus to the University (Mus.D. in 1838). Wrote church-music and edited a Psalter and Canticles. G.

Elwart, Antoine Aimable Élie (Paris, 1808-1877, do.). French composer and writer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1834), teaching theory there till 1871. Wrote several operas, including Les Catalans, 1840, oratorios, masses, church-music and much instrumental music, but is specially known for many teaching-manuals in sight-singing and theory, a life of Duprez (1838), histories of the Conservatory Concerts (1860) and of the Concerts Populaires (1864). G.

Elwes, Gervase Cary- (n. Northampton, 1866-1921, in accident). Gifted English concert-tenor, at first in diplomatic service, then pupil of Mandyczewski, Bouhy, Démost and others, from 1903 a favorite at numerous festivals and in London, in 1907 visiting Germany, the United States in 1909 and the Low Countries in 1914. His interpretation of Brahms and of Elgar's Gerontius were especially famous. G.

Emery, Stephen Albert (Paris, Me. 1841–1891, Boston). American theorist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory and by Spindler, from 1864 teaching in Portland, Me., but from 1867 identified with the New England Conservatory, Boston, and with Boston University, training many able pupils in harmony and composition. Wrote about 150 works of no great dimensions, a text-book in harmony (1880) and piano-studies. A.

Emmanuel, Maurice (Bar-sur-Aube, 1862). Eminent French musicologist and composer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory and of Gevaert (Litt.D. of the Sorbonne, 1895), in 1898–1905 professor (history of art) at the Lycées Racine and Lamartine, Paris, in 1904–07 director at Ste.-Clothilde, and since 1910 professor of music-history at the Conservatory. Author of articles on German conservatories and music in German universities (Revue de Paris, 1898, 1900), on music in school-instruction (Grande Revue, 1910–11), on Greek music (Lavignac's Encyclopedie, vol. i, 1911), on La Vie Réelle en Musique and Prose et Musique (Revue de Paris, 1900–01), and on Bourgault-Ducoudray (Monde Musical, 1911), with the monographs Histoire de la Langue Musicale, 2 vols. 1911 (prize from the Académie), and Traité de l'Accompagnement Modal des Psaumes, 1912. Editor for Durand of Rameau's works (after Malherbe's death in 1911), of many works of Bach and of a new edition of the classics (1915–16). Composer of the opera Prométhée Enchaîné (1915), the pantomime Pierrot Peintre, 1886, 3 Odelettes Anacréontiques, 1911 (voice, flute and orchestra), 8 Chansons Bourguignonnes, 1912 (soli, chorus and orchestra), the symphonic poem Terre de Bretagne, 1890 (soli, chorus and orchestra), an Ouverture pour un Conte, 1887, 2 string-quartets (1889, 1903), a Suite sur des Airs Populaires Grecs, 1907 (violin and piano), an organ-sonata, a piano-sonata, and many songs (some with violin and cello).

Emmerich, Robert (Hanau, 1836–1891, Baden-Baden). Hessian composer, pupil of A. Dietrich and Stauffer, after long military service (1859–73) at Darmstadt, in 1878–79 director at Magdeburg and then at Stuttgart. Wrote the operas Der Schwedensee, 1874, Van Dyck, 1875, and Ascanio, the cantata Huldigung dem Genius der Töne, 2 symphonies and songs.

Encina, Juan del (1469–1537). 16th C.

Enckhausen, Heinrich Friedrich (Celle, 1799–1885, Hanover). Hanoverian organist, pupil of Aloys Schmitt and from 1829 his successor at Hanover as court-organist and conductor of the Singakademie. Wrote the opera Der Savoyard, 1832, orchestral, piano- and church-music.

Ende, Herwegh von (Milwaukee, 1877–1919, New York), son of the pianist Amelia von Ende. American violinist, pupil of Ziehn, Vilim, Halir, Witke and E. E. Taubert, from about 1895 playing in the Berlin Philharmonic and touring in both Europe and America, and from 1903 teacher in New York, from 1907 playing also in his own Quartet and in a Trio (both with Alt-schuler). He married the daughter of the violinist Reményi. A.

Enesco, Georges (Cordaremi, 1882). Gifted Rumanian violinist and composer, trained at the Vienna and Paris Conservatories, beginning tours in 1899 and being for a time court-violinist in Bucharest, living later in Paris. Has written 2 symphonies, orchestral suites and rhapsodies, a dextuor for strings and wind, a string-octet, a piano-quintet, 2 violin-sonatas, a violin-suite, a piano-suite, 'cello-pieces, songs, etc.

Engel, Carl (Paris, 1883). Able French critic, educated at Strasburg and Munich Universities, with musical study under Charpentier and Thuille, removing to America in 1905, where he is now a citizen. In 1909–21 he was musical adviser for the Boston Music Co. and then became head of the music-division of the Congressional Library in Washington. Author of Alla Breve, 1921 (essays), and many articles in the Musical Quarterly, etc. Has also written songs, pieces for piano and for violin.

Engel, David Hermann (Neuruppin, 1816–1877, Merseburg). Prussian organist, pupil of Th. Schneider and Hesse, from 1848 cathedral-organist at Merseburg and teacher in the Gymnasium. Wrote a comic opera, an oratorio, psalms, organ-pieces, a Beitrag zur Gesch. d. Orgelbauwesens, 1855, manuals of school-music, etc.

Engel, Gustav Eduard (Königsberg, 1823–1895, Berlin). Prussian singing-teacher and critic, originally a student of philology, with musical lessons from Marx and Kotzold, from 1848 teaching in Berlin, from 1853 writing for the Spener'sche Zeitung and from 1861 for the Vossische Zeitung, from 1862 also teaching at Kullak's Academy and from 1874 at the Hochschule (many noted pupils). Author of a Sängerbrevier, 1860 (daily exercises), annotations to Gumprecht's collection of vocal classics, Die Vokaltheorie von Helmholtz u. d. Kopfstimme, 1867, Ueber das Erhabene u. Schöne in d. Musik, 1872, Die Konsonanten d. deutschen Sprache, 1874, Die Bühnenfestspiele von Bayreuth, 1876, Das mathematische Harmonium, 1881, Aesthetik d. Tonkunst, 1884 (based on Helmholtz), and Die Bedeutung d. Zahlenverhältnisse für d. Tonempfindung, 1892, besides essays in the Vierteljahrsschrift f. Musikwissenschaft.

Engel, Johann Jakob (Parchim, 1741–1802, do.). Mecklenburger teacher, tutor of the brothers Von Humboldt and Frederick William III. Author of a notable essay Ueber d. musikal. Malerey, 1780, and of other writings referring to music. Memoir by Nicolai, 1806.

Engel, Julius Dimitrievitch (Berdiansk, 1868). Russian lexicographer, pupil of Tanieiev and Ippolitov-Ivanov, from 1897 critic for the Russkija Viedomosti and author of various opera-guides, Musikhistorische Essays, 1911, In der Oper, 1911, Taschen-Musiklexikon, 1914, and of a revision of the Russian translation of Rie-mann's Musiklexikon (1896, 2d ed. 1914). He is also an industrious collector of Jewish folk-music in Russia, with several publications.

Engel, Karl (n. Hanover, 1818-1882, London). Able music-historian, pupil of Enekhhausen, Hummel and Lobe, after living at Hamburg, Warsaw and Berlin, in 1846 migrated to England, where from 1850 he became in London an authority on the evolution of instruments. Author of The Music of the Most Ancient Nations, 1864, Introduction to the Study of National Music, 1866, Musical Instruments of All Countries, 1869, catalogues of ancient instruments at a loan-exhibition in 1872 and of those in the South Kensington Museum (1874), Musical Myths and Facts, 1876, The Literature of National Music, 1879, Researches into the Early History of the Violin Family, 1883, and a large general history of all instruments (unpublished). He also wrote Reflections on Church-Music, 1856, and piano text-books. G.

Engelke, Bernhard (Brunswick, 1884). North German organist and historian, educated at Halle and Leipzig Universities (Ph.D. 1906), from 1906 singing-teacher at Magdeburg and organist at the Klostersgymnasium. Author of a thesis on Fasch (1906) and a history of music at the Magdeburg Cathedral (1913), besides important editions of old music, a translation of Pirro's Bach (1911), etc.

Engelmann, Georg. 17th C.

Engelsberg, E. S. [pen-name of Dr. Eduard Schön (1825-1879)]. A Silesian lawyer in the Austrian civil service who became noted for comic quartets for men's voices, but also wrote orchestral, chamber- and piano-works whose publication he interdicted by will.

Engl, Johann Evangelist. Secretary of the Mozarteum at Salzburg and editor of its Jahresbericht, author of an edition of Haydn's diary in London (1909) and several notes about the Mozarts.

Enna, August (Nakskov, 1860). Eminent Danish composer, at first self-taught, later pupil of Schjorring, Mathesson-Hansen and Rasmussen and finally (1888) winning the Ancker scholarship and studying in Germany. Since about 1875 he had been active in Copenhagen in theater- and dance-music, and from 1883 had composed ambitiously. In 1890-91 he was director of the Dagmar-Theater in Copenhagen and soon gained reputation as a fresh and original composer. Has written the operas Die Hexe, 1892, Die Feen, 1893, Kleopatra, 1893, Aucassin und Nicolette, 1895, Das Streichholzmädel, 1897, Lamia, 1897, Ung Elskov, 1902, Nattergalen, 1912, Gloria Arsena, 1913, and Komödianten (1916), besides three early operettas (1880-84), the ballets The Shepherdess and the Chimney-Sweep, 1901, and St. Cecilia's Golden Shoe, 1904, the choral Mutterliebe, symphonies in D min. and C min., the symphonic tone-pictures Märchen, an overture, a violin-concerto, piano-pieces and songs. G, A.

Enna, Emil (Copenhagen, 1877), nephew and pupil of the above, also of Zwicki and Schytte. Danish pianist, from 1897 appearing in Europe and America, now living in Portland, Ore. Has written the opera The Dawn of the West, 1915, a piano-sonata, etc. A.

Épine, Francesca Margherita de l' (?) -1746, London). Italian stage-singer, said to have been the first Italian to appear in England (from 1692), from 1704 at Drury Lane and from 1712 in several works of Handel. In 1718 she married Pepusch and retired. She was also a skillful harpsichordist. G.

Epstein, Julius (Agram, 1832-1918, Vienna), Noted Croatian pianist, pupil of Rufnatscha and Halm. In 1867-1901 professor at the Vienna Conservatory (Brüll and Marcella Sembrich among his pupils). He was one of the editors of the great edition of Schubert's works. His son Richard (1869-1919) was also a fine pianist and taught at the Vienna Conservatory, besides touring widely in Europe and coming to America in 1914. He was an accomplished accompanist and ensemble-player. A.

Érard, Sébastien (Strasbourg, 1752-1831, n. Paris). Distinguished Alsatian piano- and harp-maker, from 1768 in Paris, where in 1777 he made the first French piano, arousing a short-lived hostility from the luthiers' guild, and in 1786-96 worked in London, deriving thence the action used at Paris in 1796 for his first grand piano. By 1809 he had practically perfected his own repetition-action and also his double-action harp. Besides improvements in details of these he invented a 'piano organisé' (piano and organ, with two keyboards), a 'harpe à fourchette' and an 'orgue expressif.' He was succeeded by his nephew, Pierre Érard (1796-1855), and he by his wife's nephew, Pierre Schaffer (d. 1878). The Érard establishment has for a century ranked as one of the great piano-factories of the world. G.

Erb, John Lawrence (n. Reading, Pa. 1877). American organist, trained at the Metropolitan College, New York, and the Virgil School, holding his first position as player in 1892, in 1895-1905 at churches in New York and Brooklyn, in 1905-13 head of the music-department of Wooster University, in 1913-14 organist in Chicago, in 1914-21 director of the School of Music in the University of Illinois and since 1922 director at Connecticut College (New London). He has been prominent in many musicians' associations and in promoting popular music-education. Has written organ-, piano- and vocal music, a life of Brahms (1904) and text-books in harmony. A.

Erb, Maria Joseph (Strasbourg, 1860). Alsatian organist and composer, trained at the School of Classical Music, Paris, since 1880 organist at the Johanniskirche, Strasbourg, and at the Synagogue, in 1908 gaining the title of royal professor. Has written the operas Der letzte Ruf, 1895, Der glückliche Taugenichts, 1897, Abendglocken, 1900, Eifersüchtig, 1901, Der Riese Schletto, 1901, Der Zaubermantel, 1901, Die Vogesentanne, 1904, and Princessin Flunk-erli, 1912 (fairy-opera), with the ballet-opera Der Heimweg, 1907, several masses (one 6-part a cappella), a symphony, 2 orchestral suites, an octet (suite) for strings and wind, a string-quartet, a string-trio, 3 violin-sonatas, organ-sonatas, many piano-works, songs and two collections of Alsatian folk-songs.

Erba, Dionigi. 17th C. G.

Erbach, Christian (1570-1635). 17th C. G.

Erben, Balthazar (? -1686). 17th C.

Erben, Robert (Troppau, 1862), Prussian composer, from 1894 director at Frankfort, from 1896 at Mannheim, and since about 1900 living at Berlin. Has written the opera Enoch Arden, 1895, and the fairy-play Die Heintzelmännchen, 1896.

Erdmannsdorfer, Max von (Nuremberg, 1848-1905, Munich). Bavarian conductor, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory and by Rietz, in 1871-80 court-director at Sondershausen, from 1882 conductor for the Moscow Musical Society, and professor in the Conservatory (students' orchestra from 1885), from 1889 conductor of the Bremen Philharmonic, in 1896-97 director for the Petrograd Musical Society and in 1897-98 court-director at Munich and professor in the Conservatory. In 1886 he was named professor by Warsaw Univ. and in 1903 received the Bavarian Order of the Crown. Wrote various choral works, an overture, some chamber-music, etc. His wife, née Pauline (Fichtner) Oprawill (1847-1916), was an eminent pianist, pupil of Liszt, holding court-appointments at Weimar and Darmstadt (married 1874).

Ergo, Emil (Selzaete, 1853). Belgian theorist, pupil of the Antwerp Conservatory, in 1898-1900 conducting the choral society Antwerpia and in 1900-03 the Rubenskring, and since 1907 teaching at Thiébaux's school at Ixelles (Brussels). Author of a long series of essays and monographs upon topics in harmony, counterpoint and composition, largely in the line of Riemann's theories (from 1887). Has also written the cantata Hulda aan de Nyperheid, 1902.

Erk, Ludwig Christian (Wetzlar, 1807-1883, Berlin). Rhenish singing-teacher, pupil of André, from 1826 at a school at Meurs (Lower Rhine) and organizing popular festivals in the neighborhood, and from 1836 professor in the Royal Seminary, Berlin, where he was also in 1836-38 director of the Domchor (before its reorganization), in 1843 started his men's chorus and in 1852 his mixed chorus, both intended to foster distinctively 'popular' song. In 1857 he received the title of royal director and in 1876 that of professor. In 1877 he gave up his post at the Seminary. He was editor or author of a large number of collections of school-songs, folk-songs and chorales (from 1833), including Die deutschen Volkslieder, 1838-45, Volkslieder alte u. neue, 1845-46, Deutscher Liederhort, 1856 (completed in 4 vols. from the original materials by F. M. Böhme, 1893-94), Choralgesänge d. 16. u. 17. Jahrh. 1845, J. S. Bachs Choralgesänge, 1850-65, Chorabuch für evangelische Kirchen, 1862, etc. In his school-music books he was assisted by his brother, Friedrich Albrecht Erk (1809-1879) and his brother-in-law, Wilhelm Greef (1809-1875). His Allgem. Musiktheorie was completed in 1885 by Tiersch. His library went to the Royal Library. Memoirs by K. Schultze, 1876, Schmeel, 1908, and Friedländer (in Allgem. Deutschen Biographie). G.

Erkel, Alexander [Alexius] (Pest, 1846-1900, Békés-Csaba), son of the following. Hungarian conductor, in 1875-93 conductor of the Pest Philharmonic and from 1896 director of the Opera there. Wrote 4 operettas (from 1883).

Erkel, Franz [Ferencz] (Gyula, 1810-1893, Pest). Important Hungarian conductor and composer, the pioneer in developing the national opera. He was the pupil of his father, took charge of the Kaschau opera-troupe in 1834 and, going with it to Pest, from 1838 was conductor at the new Opera, founder of the Philharmonic Concerts and professor at the National Academy. Wrote 9 operas, including Báthory Mária, 1840, Hunyady László, 1844, Bank Bán, 1861, etc. (till 1874), and many songs. Memoir by Abrányi, 1897. G.

Erlanger, Camille (Paris, 1863-1919, do.). French composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1888). Wrote the operas Kermaria, 1897, Le Juif Polonais, 1900, Le Fils de l'Étoile, 1904, Aphrodite, 1906, Bacchus Triomphant, 1909, L'Aube Rouge, 1911, La Sorcière, 1912, Le Barbier de Deauville, 1917, and Forfaiture, 1921, with the dramatic legend St.-Julien l'Hospitalier, 1894 (as opera, 1896), a Requiem for double chorus, the symphonic poem Maître et Serviteur, La Chasse Fantastique and Sérénade Carnavalesque, both for orchestra, and various songs. He also wrote incidental music for André-Légrand's La Reine Wanda, 1918, G, A.

Erlanger, Frédéric d' (Paris, 1868), son of a German father and an American mother, but from about 1890 a British subject. He belongs to a well-known family of bankers in Paris. Has written the operas Jehan de Saintré, 1893, Inez Mendo, 1897, Tess, 1906, and Noël, 1912, a Suite Symphonique, a violin-concerto, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, a violin-sonata, etc. Some of his work came out under the name 'Frédéric Regnal'. G, A.

Erlebach, Philipp Heinrich (1657-1714). 17th C.

Erlemann, Gustav (Neuwied, 1876). Rhenish church-musician, trained at various Berlin conservatories, since 1904 head of a church-music school at Treves and author of Einheit im katholischen deutschen Kirchenliede, aiming to introduce more uniformity in usage in Germany, Austria, Switzerland and Luxemburg. Has also written organ-, piano- and vocal works, including a Stabat Mater (1920).

Erler, Hermann (n. Dresden, 1844-1918, Berlin). Saxon editor and publisher, at first manager for Bote & Bock in Berlin, but from 1873 starting a business of his own (later Ries & Erler). He long edited the Neue Berliner Musikzeitung and wrote for the Fremdenblatt. Author of Schumanns Leben u. Werke, 2 vols. 1887.

Ernst, Alfred (Périgueux, 1860–1898, Paris), son of Heinrich below. Author of L'Œuvre Dramatique de H. Berlioz, 1884, R. Wagner et le Drame Contemporain, 1887, L'Art de R. Wagner part 1, L'Œuvre Poétique, 1893 (part 2, L'Œuvre Musicale, not finished), a study of Tannhäuser (1895), translations of Die Meistersinger and the Ring, with various articles in reviews. G.

Ernst, Franz Anton (Georgenthal, 1745–1805, Gotha). Able Bohemian violinist, from 1778 concertmaster in the Gotha court-orchestra. Wrote a notable violin-concerto and an essay on the structure of the violin (Allgem. musikal. Zeitung, 1805).

Ernst, Heinrich Wilhelm (Brünn, 1814–1865, Nice). Eminent Moravian violinist, pupil of Mayseder, J. Böhm and De Bériot, appearing from 1832 at Paris and then throughout Europe (in England from 1843), from about 1850 living mostly in London. His playing was marked by brilliance, passion and often much interpretative power. Wrote a violin-concerto (new edition by Marteau, 1913), many effective concert-pieces and 2 string-quartets. G.

Ernst II, Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha (Coburg, 1818–1893, Reinhardsbrunn). Noted amateur composer. Wrote the operas Zaire, 1846, Toni der Wildschütz, 1848, Santa Chiara, 1853, Casilda, 1855, Diana von Solange, 1858, 2 operettas (under pen-names), several cantatas, songs, etc. Autobiography and reminiscences, 3 vols. 1887–89.

Errani, Achille (Faenza, 1823–1897, New York). Italian tenor, pupil of Vacca, appearing widely in Europe from about 1845, from 1860 touring in the United States, Cuba and Mexico and from 1864 a noted teacher in New York. A.

Ertel, Jean Paul (Posen, 1865). Prussian lawyer (degree, 1898) and composer, pupil of Tauwitz, Brassin and Liszt, in 1897–1905 editor of the Deutsche Musikzeitung (Berlin), and also critic for the Lokalanzeiger and teacher in Born's and Petersen's schools. Has written the symphony Harald, the symphonic poems Maria Stuart, 1896, Der Mensch, 1905 (with organ), Belsazar, Pompeji, Die nächtliche Heerschau, 1908, and Hero und Leander, 1909, a double fugue for orchestra and organ, a string-quartet (Hebrew themes), a concerto for violin solo, violin-suites, the baritone ballades Die Wallfahrt nach Kevlaar and Des Sängers Fluch, extended organ-works, piano-pieces and songs, besides the opera Gudrun. His later works tend much to impressionism.

Ertmann, Dorothea von, née Graumann (Offenbach, ?1778–1848, Milan?) The gifted pianist to whom Beethoven dedicated his sonata in A, op. 101. She was the aunt of Mathilde Marchesi.

Eschenburg, Johann Joachim (Hamburg, 1743–1820, Brunswick). A councillor and professor at Brunswick who from about 1770 organized concerts there, translated various works of Burney and Webbe, contributed to several periodicals and wrote an Entwurf einer Theorie u. Literatur d. schönen Redekunste, 1783 (5th ed. 1836, revised by Pinder), with illustrations (8 vols. 1788–95).

Eschmann, Johann Karl (Winterthur, 1826–1882, Zurich). Able Swiss piano-teacher, pupil of Moscheles and Mendelssohn, working at Kassel and from 1852 at Zurich. Author of a valuable Wegweiser durch d. Klavierliteratur, 1879 (9th ed. 1918), 100 Aphorismen, 2d ed. 1899, and a method.

Eschmann-Dumur, Carl (n. Zurich, 1835–1913, Lausanne). Another Swiss piano-teacher at the Lausanne Music-School, also author of a Guide de Jeune Pianiste, 2d ed. 1888 (literature), a method and an edition of Clementi's preludes and exercises.

Escobedo, Bartolomeo (?–1563). 16th C.

Escudier, Léon (1821–1881) and Marie (1819–1880), brothers, born at Castelnau-d'Aud. In 1838 they founded La France Musicale at Paris and soon opened a music-store (issuing works of Verdi, etc.), entered on political journalism and together published Études Biographiques sur les Chanteurs Contemporains, 1840, Dictionnaire de Musique, 2 vols. 1844, Rossini, 1854, anecdotes of celebrated singers, Paganini, etc. (1856). After 1862 they proceeded separately, Marie going on with their periodical and Léon starting L'Art Musical, the one continuing till 1870, the other till 1894. G.

Eslava, Miguel Hilarion (in Navarra, 1807–1878, Madrid). Eminent Spanish theorist and composer, trained as choirboy at Pampeluna, from 1828 maestro at Ossuna, from 1832 at Seville and from 1844 for Queen Isabella and professor at the Madrid Conservatory. Wrote about 150 church-works, including organ-pieces, 3 Italian operas (1841–43), some text-books and the notable Lira Sacro-Hispana, 5 vols. 1869 (collection of representative works of the 16–19th centuries). G. (with contents of the Lira).

Espagne, Franz (Münster, 1828–1878, Berlin). Westphalian librarian, pupil of Dehn and from 1858 his successor as head of the music-division of the Royal Library in Berlin, besides being choirmaster at the Hedwigskirche and editor of parts of the standard editions of Palestrina, K. P. E. Bach and Beethoven.

Esplá, Triay Oscar (Alicante, 1886). Spanish composer, originally trained as an engineer, as well as in philosophy, since 1915 writing according to a special scale based upon Oriental models. Among his earlier works are a Suite Levantina (prize at Vienna in 1909) and El Sueño de Eros (first given in Germany). To these he has added the opera La Bella Durmiente, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet and a piano-sonata.

Espósito, Michele (Castellammare, 1855). Italian pianist, trained at the Naples Conservatory, from 1873 concertizing in Italy, from 1878 in Paris and since 1882 professor at the Royal Academy in Dublin and from 1899 founder and conductor of the Dublin Orchestral Society, gaining repute, also, as an ensemble-player. Mus.D. of Trinity College, Dublin. Has written the short operas The Post-Bag, 1902, and The Tinker and the Fairy, 1910, the cantata Deirdre, 1897, an Irish Symphony, 1902, the overture Otello, an orchestral suite, Berceuse and Poem (1899), string-quartets in D (1899) and C min. (1908), violin-sonatas in G min. and E min. (1907), a 'cello-sonata (1898), 2 Irish Rhapsodies and 2 Irish Melodies, both for violin. Many of his larger works have won prizes in Dublin, London, Paris and Bologna.

Esquivel, Juan. 17th C.

Esser, Cateau (Amsterdam, 1859), daughter of the Governor of Curaçao. Dutch singing-teacher, trained at the Frankfurt and Paris Conservatories, since 1895 director of a School of Vocal and Dramatic Art at Amsterdam.

Esser, Heinrich (Mannheim, 1818-1872, Salzburg). Badense conductor and composer, pupil of F. Lachner and Sechter, from 1838 concertmaster and then conductor at the Mannheim court-theater and conductor of the Mayntnerthor-Theater in Vienna and from 1857 of the Court Opera there, besides for a time leading the Philharmonic Concerts, retiring on pension in 1869. Wrote 3 operas (1839-44), various orchestral and chamber-works, excellent men's quartets and songs. G.

Essipov, Annette (Petrograd, 1851-1914, do.). Accomplished Russian pianist, pupil of Wiehowski and Leschetizky at the Petrograd Conservatory, appearing from 1874 all over Europe and from 1876 also in America. In 1893-1908 she was professor at the Petrograd Conservatory. Her playing was marked by brilliance, passion and poetic feeling. In 1880-92 she was Leschetizky's wife. G.

Este, Michael (? -1638?). 17th C.

Este, Thomas (? -1609?). 16th C. G.

Estéban, Fernando. 15th C.

Ett, Kaspar (n. Landsberg, 1788-1847, Munich). Bavarian organist, from 1816 at the Michaeliskirche in Munich, a zealous investigator of church-music in the 16-18th centuries and a composer upon antique models. His collections went to the Munich Library.

Ettinger, Max (Lemberg, 1874). Galician composer, pupil of the Munich Conservatory, writing the opera Judith, 1921, a short play by Boeccaccio, the choral work Weisheit des Orients, 1921, an orchestral suite and other pieces, a quintet for piano and wood-wind, sonatas for violin and for 'cello, etc.

Eulenburg, Ernst (Berlin, 1847). Prussian publisher, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, since 1874 established at Leipzig, in 1892 acquiring the Kleine Partitur-Ausgabe of Payne and lately greatly extending its range.

Euler, Leonhardt (Basel, 1707-1783, Petrograd). Swiss acoustician, from 1730 professor at Petrograd, from 1740 at Berlin and from 1766 at Petrograd again. Author of Tentamen novæ theoria musicæ, 1729, and of many articles relating to musical acoustics. He was the first to use logarithms in acoustical calculations.

Euting, Ernst (London, 1874). German-English student of music-history, trained at the Berlin Hochschule (Ph.D. 1899, with a thesis on the history of wind-instruments in the 16-17th centuries), since 1899 editor of the Deutsche Instrumentenbau-Zeitung. In 1902-04 he was one of the editors of the I. M. G. Zeitschrift.

Evans, David Emlyn (n. Newcastle Emlyn, 1843-1913, London). Welsh composer, self-taught and mostly engaged in business, from 1865, however, a steady winner of prizes at the Eisteddfodau until he ceased competing. Besides cantatas, anthems, part-songs and glees, wrote a biographical account of Welsh musicians (1887) and a life of Tchaikovsky, made a notable collection of 500 Welsh airs (2 vols. 1896) and was long editor of the periodical Y Cerddor.

Evers, Karl (Hamburg, 1819-1875, Vienna). North German pianist, pupil of K. Krebs and Mendelssohn, from about 1840 more or less steadily on tour, from 1858 music-seller at Gratz and removing to Vienna in 1872. Wrote many characteristic piano-pieces, 4 good sonatas, fugues and also songs.

Ewald, Victor (Petrograd, 1860). Russian civil engineer, pupil in music of Sziglev and Sokolov, composing a string- and a wind-quintet, a string-quartet, 'cello-pieces, etc.

Ewer & Co. A London firm of music-publishers, founded in 1820 by John J. Ewer and in 1867 merged with Novello & Co. as Novello, Ewer & Co. G.

Eximeno y Pujader, Antonio (Valencia, 1729-1808, Rome). Spanish Jesuit, originally professor of mathematics at Segovia, later alternately at Rome and in Spain. Author of Dell' Origine e delle Regole della Musica, 1774, arguing against the pedantic and formal tendencies of composition and for the expressional view of music. This book precipitated an animated controversy, in which he was pitted against Martini (pamphlets on both sides). G.

Expert, Henri (Bordeaux, 1863). Eminent French musicologist, pupil of the Niedermeyer School at Paris and of Franck and Gigout, specially interested in music of the 15-16th centuries. In 1903 (with Manry) he founded the Société d' Études Musicales, in 1909 became second librarian at the Conservatory (under Tiersot), and latterly has taught at the École de Musique Classique and the École des Hautes Études Sociales. His chief work is the monumental collection of the music of French and Flemish composers of the olden time, classified under these heads: (a) Les Maîtres-Musiciens de la Renaissance Française, (b) Bibliographie Thématique, (c) Les Théoriciens de la Musique au Temps de la Renaissance, (d) Sources du

Corps de l'Art de Musique Franco-Flamande des X<sup>Ve</sup> et X<sup>VI</sup>e Siècles, (e) Commentaires, (f) Extraits des Maîtres-Musiciens. He has also issued a critical study of the Huguenot Psalter (1902), Les Maîtres de Clavecin des XVII<sup>e</sup> et XVIII<sup>e</sup> Siècles, Amusements des Musiciens Français du XVIII<sup>e</sup> Siècle, and Répertoire de Musique Religieuse et Spirituelle, besides contributions to Lavignac's Encyclopédie. G, A.

Eybler, Joseph [von] (n. Vienna, 1764–1846, Schönbrunn). Austrian composer, pupil of Albrechtsberger and a friend of Haydn and Mozart, from 1792 choirmaster at Vienna churches, from 1804 assistant court-director and in 1824–33 Salieri's successor as director, besides teaching in the royal family from 1810.

Wrote much effective church-music, including 2 oratorios, over 30 masses, a beautiful Requiem, 7 Te Deums, etc., as well as symphonies, concertos, quartets, etc., and several operas. He was for years president of the Tonkünstler-Societät. G.

Eymieu, Henry (Saillans, 1860). French critic, pupil of Gazier and Widor, now on the staff of Le Ménestrel and other journals. Author of Études et Biographies Musicales, 1892, and many essays. Has written the oratorio Marthe et Marie, 1898, an operetta, orchestral and piano-pieces, songs, etc.

Eysler, Edmund S. (Vienna, 1874). Since 1902 composer of numerous popular operettas for German and Austrian stages.

Faber, Benedikt. 17th C.

Faber, Heinrich (? -1552). 16th C.

Faber, Nikolaus. 14th C.

Fabri, Annibale Pio [called Balino] (Bologna, 1697-1760, Lisbon). Able Italian stage-tenor, pupil of Pistocchi, much sought for at various courts (as by the Emperor Charles VI), visiting England in 1729-31 to sing for Handel and soon after engaged as court-musician at Lisbon. He was a member of the Bologna Accademia and was repeatedly its president (1725, '29, '45, '47, '50). G.

Fabri, Stefano (?1550-?). 16th C.

Fabri, Stefano (1606-1658). 17th C.

Fabricius, Albinus. 16th C. G.

Fabricius, Jakob Kristian (Aarhus, 1840-1919, Copenhagen). Danish magistrate, bandmaster and composer, in 1871 establishing a fund for the publication of Danish music, from 1873 promoter and officer of the Copenhagen Concert Union and in 1884-1900 on the directorate of the court-concerts. Wrote an opera (translated into German by Mengewein), arias with orchestra, piano-pieces, choruses and songs.

Fabricius, Johann Albert (Leipzig, 1668-1736, Hamburg), son of the following. Editor of valuable collections of Greek and Latin authors and of Hebrew history which contain much relating to music (from 1705, 27 vols. in all).

Fabricius, Werner. (1633-1679). 17th C. G.

Faccio, Franco (Verona, 1840-1891, n. Monza). Able Italian conductor and composer, pupil of Bernasconi and the Milan Conservatory (Boito a fellow-student), went to Germany and was in army service (both with Boito), in 1867-68 was guest-conductor in Scandinavia, from 1868 professor at the Milan Conservatory and from 1872 also conductor at La Scala, succeeding Terziani, and gaining high repute. Wrote the operas I Profughi Fiamminghi, 1863, and Amleto, 1865 (text by Boito), the cantata Le Sorelle d'Italia, 1862 (with Boito), a symphony, a string-quartet and a set of songs. He directed the first Italian performances of Aida (1872) and of Otello (1887). G.

Faelten, Carl (Ilmenau, 1846). Thuringian pianist, pupil of Schoch and intimate with Raff, in 1870-71 served in the Franco-Prussian War, from 1874 toured in concert, in 1877-82 taught at the Hoch Conservatory, Frankfurt, from 1882 taught at the Peabody Conservatory, Baltimore, from 1885 at the New England Conservatory, Boston (director in 1890-97) and since 1897 has directed his own school in Boston with marked success. With his brother Reinhold (b. 1856) has written much pedagogical material. A.

Fago, Nicola (Taranto, 1674-1740, Naples). Italian composer, pupil of A. Scarlatti and Provenzale, from 1704 the latter's successor as director of the Conservatorio de' Turchini at Naples (Leo, Jommelli and Sala among his pupils). Wrote the oratorio Faraone Sommerso, much elaborate church-music, cantatas and several operas, including Eustachio and Astarte.

Fahrbach, Joseph (Vienna, 1804-1883, do.). Noted Austrian flutist and guitarist, self-taught, long in the court-orchestra at Vienna and then head of his own troupe. Wrote flute-concertos, methods for flute and oboe, dance-music for orchestra, etc.

Fahrbach, Philipp (Vienna, 1815-1885, do.). Austrian dance-composer and leader, pupil of Lanner, conductor of his own orchestra and later of a military band. Wrote about 150 popular dances and marches, besides 2 operas (1844-45).

Fahrbach, Philipp (Vienna, 1840-1894, do.), son of the above. Austrian dance-composer, from 1870 bandmaster at Pest and from 1885 his father's successor at Vienna. Wrote over 300 dances and marches.

Fährmann, Ernst Hans (n. Lommatzsch, 1860). Noted Saxon organist, pupil of C. A. Fischer, Scholtz and Nicodé, from 1890 at the Johanniskirche in Dresden and from 1891 also professor at the Conservatory, in 1892-1903 giving regular organ-recitals. Has written an organ-concerto, 11 large organ-sonatas and other works, a symphony, a string-quartet, 2 piano-trios, a piano-sonata and many songs. In 1889 he married the alto Julie Bächli.

Faignient, Noë. 16th C. G.

Fairchild, Blair (Belmont, Mass, 1877), American composer, originally in diplomatic service in the East, pupil of Widor and Ganaye, since 1903 living in Paris. Has written the symphonic poems East and West, Zal and Shah Féridoun, various other orchestral pieces, a violin-concerto, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, much other chamber-music, 2 organ-fugues, the pantomime Dame Libellule, 1921, 6 Psalms and In Memoriam for soli and a cappella chorus, 2 Bible Lyrics (soprano and chorus), 2 Garden Sketches for piano, several sets of characteristic songs (Tuscan, Persian, Greek, etc.), these and other works often reflecting Oriental impressions. A.

Fairclough, George Herbert (Hamilton, Ont. 1869), and William Erving (n. Barrie, Ont. 1859), brothers. Canadian organists, trained in England or Germany the former since 1900 at St. Paul (since 1904 also teaching at Macalester College), the latter from 1887 in Montreal and since 1890 in Toronto (also connected with both the College of Music and the University). A.

Faiszt, Immanuel Gottlob Friedrich (Esslingen, 1823-1894, Stuttgart). Württemberger organist, self-taught, from 1846 known as a concert-player, from 1847 settled at Stuttgart, where in 1847 and '49 he started choral societies and in 1857 the famous Conservatory (director from 1859), besides being from 1865 organist at the Stiftskirche. Ph.D. of Tübingen Univ. in 1846 and also made royal professor. Wrote cantatas, motets and much other choral music, organ- and piano-pieces, Beiträge zur Gesch. d. Klaviersonate, 1846, and (with Lebert) the noted Cotta edition of the classics and (with Stark) a singing-method. G.

Falcke, Henri (Paris, 1866–1901, do.). Able French pianist, trained at the Paris Conservatory and in Germany, developing a fine reputation for breadth of repertory and of style. Author of a good text-book on arpeggio-playing.

Falcon, Marie Cornélie (Paris, 1812–1897, do.). Remarkable French operatic soprano, though known at the Paris Opéra only in 1832–37, then losing her voice and seldom reappearing. Her name, like Mme. Dugazon's, is still often applied to leading rôles like those of Alice (in Robert), Rachel (in La Juive) and Valentine (in Les Huguenots). G.

Falconieri, Andrea (?1600–?). 17th C.

Fall, Leo (Olmütz, 1873). Moravian composer, pupil of the Vienna Conservatory, theater-conductor successively at Berlin, Hamburg, Cologne and Vienna. In 1904 he married the daughter of Jadassohn. Has written the operas Frau Denise, 1902, and Irrlicht, 1905, and many highly successful operettas (from 1905).

Falla, Manuel de (Cadiz, 1876). Spanish impressionistic composer, pupil of Tragó, Pedrell, Dukas and Debussy, living at Granada. Has written the opera La Vida Breve, 1913, 2 ballets (1915–19), a fantasia for three voices and orchestra from Don Quixote, the symphonic poem for piano and orchestra, Noches en los Jardines de España, etc.

Faltin, Richard Friedrich (Danzig, 1835–1918, Helsingfors). Prussian conductor, pupil of Markull, F. Schneider and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1856 teacher at Viborg and from 1869 conductor of the Symphony Concerts at Helsingfors, of the Oratorio Society (1871–84) and of the Opera (1873–83), besides from 1870 being organist at the Nikolaikirche and director at the University and from 1882 teacher at the Conservatory. Edited Finnish folk-songs and wrote choral and organ-pieces. See Flodin, Finska Musiker, 1900.

Faminzin, Alexander Sergievitch (Kaluga, 1841–1896, n. Petrograd). Russian critic, pupil of Vogt, Seifriz and the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1865–72 professor of music-history at the Petrograd Conservatory, from 1870 secretary of the Russian Musical Society, and writer for various papers and journals. Wrote the operas Sardana-pal, 1875, and Uriel Acosta, 1883, the symphonic poem The Triumph of Dionysos, 2 string-quartets, a piano-quintet, a violin-rhapsody, etc., with translations of theoretical works by Richter, Marx and Draeske, some collections of Russian folk-songs, and Russian essays on Slavic mythology (1889), on Russian mummers and gleemen (1889), on the Indo-Chinese scale (1889), on the gusli (1890) and the domra (1891). G.

Fanciulli, Francesco (n. Orbetello, 1853–1915, New York). Italian bandmaster, trained at Florence, from 1876 organist and teacher in New York, in 1893–98 Sousa's successor as head of the Marine Band in Washington, in 1898–1904 bandmaster of the 71st Regt. N. Y. N. G., and then of his own band. Wrote 3 operas and 2 comic operettas. A.

Fanelli, Ernest (Paris, 1860). French composer, for a time studying at the Paris Conservatory, in 1883–93 engaged on impressionistic compositions (the symphonic picture Thèbes, 2 suites, a piano-quintet, etc.) that were too extreme to gain attention till discovered by Pierné in 1912 and then brought out as in a way prefiguring Debussy and his school. See essay by Calvocoressi in Musical Times, 1912.

Fanning, Eaton (Helston, 1850). English composer, trained at the Royal Academy, London (Mendelssohn Scholar and Lucas prize), from 1878 teaching there and at other London institutions, from 1885 music-director at Harrow School, and since 1901 variously employed in London as choral conductor, examiner for Cambridge and London Universities, etc. Mus.D. of Cambridge Univ. in 1899. Has written 3 operettas (1877–82), a mass, the dramatic cantata Liberty, 1882, much other church- and choral music, a symphony, an overture, 2 quartets, many part-songs (like Song of the Vikings), duets and songs. See Musical Times, 1901. G.

Fano, Guido Alberto (Padua, 1875). Italian composer, pupil of Pollini and Martucci, but also educated as a lawyer (degree at Bologna, 1898), from 1900 teacher at the Bologna Liceo, from 1905 director of the Parma Conservatory and since 1911 of the Naples Conservatory. Has written the drama Juturna, the symphonic poem La Tentazione di Gesù, an overture and a prelude, sonatas for violin (prize at Milan, 1898) and for 'cello, the cantata Astrea, songs, etc.

Farina, Carlo 17th C.

Farinelli [properly Carlo Broschi] (Naples, 1705–1782, Bologna). Celebrated Italian artificial soprano, pupil of Porpora, appearing in Rome in 1722 with unexemplified success and in a few years (especially after studying further with Bernacchi in 1727 at Bologna) became the foremost operatic artist in Europe, unexcelled in every device of vocal technique and increasingly impressive in interpretation. From 1724 he was several times at Vienna, in 1734–37 joined Porpora in the competition with Handel at London which led to the latter's second bankruptcy and his abandonment of opera for oratorio, and in 1737–59 was a court-favorite at Madrid with Philip V and his successors. From 1761 he lived near Bologna in a sumptuous residence erected out of the enormous proceeds of his career. Memoirs by Sacchi, 1784, Ricci, 1890, Desastre, 1903, and Frati, 1913 (Rivista Musicale). G.

Farinelli, Giuseppe (Este, 1769–1836, Trieste). Italian composer, trained at the Conservatorio de' Turchini, Naples, from 1792 working at Naples, from 1810 at Turin, from 1817 at Venice and from 1819 was maestro at Trieste Cathedral. He was an industrious and clever imitator of the style of Cimarosa. Wrote nearly 60 operas, mostly comic, an oratorio, 8 dramatic cantatas, 5 grand masses and much other church-music. G.

Farjeon, Harry (Hohokus, N. J. 1878). English (-American) composer, trained at the Royal Academy, London (many prizes), and since 1903 professor there. Has written the symphonic poems Mougli and Summer Vision (score lost when sent to Germany for performance), a Hans Andersen Suite for small orchestra, a piano-concerto, 2 string-quartets, sonatas for violin, for 'cello and for piano, a Poem for violins, violas and orchestra, many and varied piano-pieces, including several suites, Four Winds, Moorish Idylls, etc., many songs, including the cycles Vagrant Songs, The Lute of Jade and The Shepherds' Garland, and 3 operettas (1899–1902). G, A.

Farkas, Edmund [Ædön] (n. Heves, 1852). Able Hungarian composer, pupil of the Pest Academy, though at first aiming to be a civil engineer, since about 1880 director of the Klausenburg (Transylvania) Conservatory, with some opera-conducting and writing for periodicals. Has written 5 Hungarian operas, including Vezeklök, 1893, and Balassa Bálint, 1896 (comic), a symphony, 5 string-quartets, an overture, other orchestral works, a mass, several choral works, ballads and songs—all with a strong Hungarian flavor.

Farmer, Henry (Nottingham, 1819–1891, do.). English violinist and organist, self-taught, living all his life in Nottingham. Wrote an overture, violin-concertos and pieces, a mass, songs, etc.

Farmer, John 16th C. G.

Farmer, John (Nottingham, 1836–1901, Oxford). English teacher, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and of Spaeth, at first employed at Zurich, from 1862 music-master at Harrow School and from 1885 organist at Balliol College in Oxford and head of a musical society there. Wrote the oratorio Christ and His Soldiers, 1878, the fairy-opera Cinderella, 1882, a comic cantata, 2 septets (strings, flute and piano), a piano-quintet, etc., and edited many popular song-books. G.

Farmer, Thomas. 17th C. G.

Farnaby, Giles. 16th C. G.

Farnsworth, Charles Hubert (Cesarea, Asia Minor, 1859), son of American missionaries. American educator, musically trained in Boston or Worcester, from 1876 organist in Worcester, from 1888 teacher and choral conductor at the University of Colorado (Boulder), and since 1901 head of the music-department of Teachers College (Columbia Univ.), New York. Has written Education Through Music, 1909, How to Produce and Listen to Music, edited several collections of folk-songs and school-songs, and written many articles. A.

Farrant, Richard (?1530–1580). 16th C. G.

Farrar, Geraldine (Melrose, Mass. 1882). Brilliant American operatic soprano, pupil of Trabadello, Graziani and Lilli Lehmann, singing in public in Boston when but thirteen and making her stage-début at Berlin in 1901, continuing there at the Royal Opera till 1904, then variously engaged throughout Europe and returning to America in 1906, where her notable combination of musical and dramatic powers has made her steadily successful. She sang at the premières of Mascagni's L'Amico Fritz (1905), Camondo's The Clown (1905), Saint-Saëns' L'Ancêtre (1906) and Humperdinck's Die Königskinder (1910). Latterly she has made a mark as a film-actress. In 1916 she married the actor Lou Tellegen [Von Dommelen]. A.

Farrenc, Jacques Hippolyte Aristide (Marseilles, 1794–1865, Paris). French student of music-history, originally a flutist, trained at the Paris Conservatory, but from 1841 engrossed in researches that later made him Fétis' collaborator in the preparation and issue of the 2d edition of his Biographie (1860–65) and his Trésor des Pianistes (1861–72). In early life he had a music-store and wrote various flute-works. G.

Farrenc, Jeanne Louise, née Dumont (Paris, 1804–1875, do.), wife of the above. Eminent French pianist, pupil of Reicha and influenced by Hummel and Moscheles, in 1842–73 professor at the Paris Conservatory. She married Farrenc in 1821 and they made many tours in France together. Later she assisted in his historical studies and after his death continued his work on the Trésor, besides herself publishing a Traité des Abréviations Employées par les Clavecinistes des XVII<sup>e</sup> et XVIII<sup>e</sup> Siècles, 1897. She was also an accomplished composer, writing 2 symphonies, 3 overtures, a nonet, a sextet, 2 quintets and much other chamber-music (twice winning the Prix Chartier), piano-sonatas, études and other pieces. Among her many pupils was her nephew Ernest Reyer. G.

Farwell, Arthur (St. Paul, Minn. 1872). American specialist in the music of the North American Indians, pupil of Norris, Humperdinck and Guilmant, in 1899–1901 lecturer at Cornell University, in 1901 founder of the Wa-Wan Press at Newton Center, Mass., for the issue of American compositions, especially those based on Indian suggestions, and in 1905 of the American Music Society, in 1909–15 on the staff of Musical America, in 1910–13 in charge of municipal concerts in New York, in 1915–18 director of the Music School Settlement there, and in 1918–19 acting-professor at the University of California. At different times since 1903 he has studied Indian life in the Far West. Has written an overture, the orchestral Dawn, Ichibuzzh and The Domain of the Hurakan, many striking piano-pieces more or less based on Indian themes, music for several pageants, masques and plays, etc., a report on Indian Songs and Spanish-California folk-songs (Am. Inst. of Archaeology), and was editor of vol. iv (Music in America) of The Art of Music. Of late years he has been deeply interested in community-music. A.

Fasch, Johann Friedrich (n. Weimar, 1688–1758, Zerbst). Eminent Saxon composer, pupil of Kuhnau, Graupner and Grunewald, beginning fruitful activity while yet a student at Leipzig University (from 1707), in 1714–19 was in secretarial work at Gera, in 1719–21 was organist at Zeitz, in 1721–22 musician to Count Morzin in Bohemia, and from 1722 court-director at Zerbst. He was an extraordinarily able and fertile composer, highly esteemed by J. S. Bach, who was his close contemporary. Wrote 7 cycles of church-cantatas, many masses, motets and other sacred works, a great number of overtures (many more properly suites in the French manner), over 20 concertos for violin, flute, oboe and bassoon, etc. Autobiography in Marpur's Beiträge, iii, and memoirs by J. A. Hiller, 1784, Engelke, 1908, and also in I. M. G. Sammelbde. 10. Several of his chamber-works have been published by Riemann. G.

Fasch, Karl Friedrich Christian (Zerbst, 1736–1800, Berlin), son of the above. Able Saxon cembalist and conductor, pupil of Hertel, from 1756 K. P. E. Bach's assistant in the court-orchestra of Frederick the Great at Berlin and in 1774–76 also temporary director at the Opera, and from about 1780 much engaged upon church- and choral music, in 1790 initiating the choral society that in 1792 became the Singakademie, of which he was conductor till his death. Of his compositions only a portion are extant, as in his last sickness he directed his pupil Zelter to burn many of them. They consist mostly of church-music (6 vols. 1839). Memoirs by Zelter, 1801, Von Winterfeld, 1839, and a centennial Festschrift, 1836, besides Blumner's history of the Singakademie (1891). G.

Fassbaender, Peter (Aix-la-Chapelle, 1869–1920, Zurich). Rhenish conductor, pupil of the Cologne Conservatory, from 1890 in charge of the Harmonie and the orchestra at Saarbrücken, from 1895 city-director at Lucerne and head of the Conservatory there and from 1911 conductor of the Zurich Harmonie. Wrote 8 symphonies, 3 concertos for piano, 2 for violin and 1 for 'cello, 3 string-quartets, 2 violin-sonatas, 4 operas, 2 masses, many choruses, etc.

Faugues, Vincent. 15th C.

Faure, Jean Baptiste (Moulins, 1830–1914, Paris). Eminent French operatic baritone, pupil of the Paris Conservatory and of Trévaux at the Madeleine, in 1852–60 appearing steadily at the Opéra-Comique and in 1861–76 at the Opéra, then retiring almost completely from the stage, though still in constant request for concerts. For a brief time in 1857 he was professor at the Conservatory. He sang at the premières of Auber's Jenny Bell (1855) and Manon Lescaut (1856), Gevaert's Quentin Durward (1858), Meyerbeer's Pardon de Ploërmel (1859) and L'Africaine (1865), Verdi's Don Carlos (1867), Thomas' Hamlet (1868), etc., besides being considered supreme in many standard rôles. He was heard in England often from 1860, in Germany from 1861, at Brussels in 1870–72 and in Vienna as late as 1878. In 1859 he married Constance Caroline Lefebvre (1828–1905), who in 1858–67 was a favorite artist at the Opéra-Comique. See Mus. Quarterly, 1918. G.

Fauré, Gabriel Urbain (Pamiers, 1845). Eminent French organist and composer, trained at the Niedermeyer School, Paris, from 1866 organist at Rennes, from 1870 assistant at Notre-Dame, Paris, served for a time in the army, returned as organist at St.-Honoré and presently St.-Sulpice, from 1877 choirmaster at the Madeleine and from 1896 organist there, continuing till 1905. Meanwhile in 1896 he took Massenet's place as professor at the Conservatory, in 1905 becoming director, succeeding Dubois (retired in 1919). In 1909 he was elected to the Académie and in 1910 was named Commandeur in the Légion d'Honneur. Has written the operas L'Organiste, 1887, Prométhée, 1900, and Pénélope, 1913, incidental music to plays by Dumas, Haraucourt, Maeterlinck and Clemenceau, the cantata La Naissance de Venus, 1895, the choral Chœur des Djinnis, 2 Requiems (1887, 1917), a symphony (1885), a violin-concerto, an orchestral suite, a piano-quintet, 2 piano-quartets, a violin-sonata, other fine pieces of chamber-music (Chartier prize in 1885 and '93), and many extremely beautiful songs, duets, etc. Memoirs by Séré, 1911, and Vuillemin, 1914. G.

Favart, Charles Simon (Paris, 1710–1792, do.). French dramatist, from 1740 producing about 150 plays, including many that gave character to the early French comic opera. From him was named the Salle Favart, which from 1783 was the home of the Opéra-Comique. His wife, née Marie Justine Duronceray (1727–1772), was a favorite actress and singer in his plays. Works, 10 vols. 1763–77.

Fay, Amy (Bayou Goula, Miss. 1844). American pianist, pupil of Tausig, Kullak, Deppe and Liszt, appearing in New York from 1876 and becoming an able exponent of the Deppe method. Author of Music-Study in Germany, 1881, which has had wide popularity. A.

Fay, Maude (San Francisco, 1883). American operatic soprano, pupil of Mmes. Von Meyerinck and Orgeni, in 1906–15 steadily engaged at the Munich Opera, besides appearances in London, Pest, Berlin, Brussels and Amsterdam.

Fayolle, François Joseph Marie (Paris, 1774–1852, do.). French critic (also mathematician and general littérateur), author (with some aid from Choron) of a Dict. Historique des Musiciens, 2 vols. 1810–11 (mostly translated, with many errors, from Gerber), a more useful series of biographies of violinists (1810), Sur les Drame Lyriques, 1813, and Paganini et Bériot, 1830. G.

Fayrfax, Robert (?1470–1521). 16th C. G.

Fechner, Gustav Theodor (n. Muskau, 1801–1887, Leipzig). Eminent physicist, from 1834 professor at Leipzig University, whose Psychophysik, 1860, and Aesthetik, 1870, supplied valuable bases for musical aesthetics.

Fedeli, Ruggiero (?–1722). 17th C.

Fedeli, Vito (Foligno, 1866). Italian composer, pupil of Leonardi and Terziani, now director of the Novara Conservatory. Has written the operas Ivanhoe, La Vergine della Montagna, 1897, and Varsovia, 1900, various masses, orchestral and organ-pieces, choruses and songs, besides historical articles for periodicals.

Federici, Vincenzo (Pesaro, 1764–1826, Milan). Italian composer, in London from 1782, becoming known as composer from 1790, in 1803 returned to Italy, from 1809 was professor at the Milan Conservatory. Wrote 15 operas (1790–1812), including the comic La Locandiera Scaltra, 1812 (Paris), cantatas, etc.

Federlein, Gottfried Heinrich (New York, 1883). American organist, pupil of his father, E. J. Biedermann, Goetschius, Saar and Hedden, from about 1905 at the Chapel of the Incarnation, New York, in 1911–19 for the Ethical Culture Society, since 1915 at Temple Emanuel and from 1921 also at the Central Presbyterian Church, Montclair, N. J. He has been active in the Am. Guild of Organists since 1904, in 1915 won its Clemson medal and in 1921 succeeded Baier as warden. Has written effective anthems, songs, organ- and violin-pieces. A.

Fehr, Max (Bülach, 1887). Swiss musicologist, graduate of Zurich University (Ph.D. 1912), from 1912 professor of Italian and French at the Zurich Gymnasium, and since 1918 the same at Winterthur. Author of essays on Zeno u. seine Reform d. Operntextes, 1912, Zürich als Musikstadt im 18. Jahrh. 1916, Eine Konzertsaison in Zürich anno 1768, 1916, Die Meistersinger von Zürich, 1916, Der alte Musiksaal beim Fraumünster, 1918, and Das alte Musikkollegium Bischofszell, 1918.

Fellowes, Edmund Horace (London, 1870). Eminent English organist and historical student, educated at Oxford University (Mus.B. 1896), pupil of P. C. Buck, Ch. Fletcher and L. Straus, from 1922 organist at St. George's Chapel, Windsor, succeeding Parratt. He was made Mus.D. by Dublin University in 1917. Editor of the collections The English Madrigal School, 36 vols. 1913–22, The English School of Lutenist Song-Writers (recently begun) and English Madrigal Verse, 1920, as well as author of The English Madrigal Composers, 1921. Has also written services, anthems, part-songs, songs, organ-pieces and a string-quartet.

Felstin, Sebastian von. 16th C.

Fenaroli, Fedele (Lanciano, 1730–1818, Naples). Noted Italian teacher, pupil of Leo and Durante, from 1755 professor at the Conservatorio della Pietà at Naples (Cimarosa, Zingarelli, Mercadante and Conti among his pupils). Wrote an oratorio (1760), much church-music and text-books in thorough-bass (1775). Critique by Consalvo, 1826.

Feo, Francesco (Naples, ?1685–after 1745, do.). Italian composer, pupil of Gizzi and Pitoni, from 1730 director of the Conservatorio de' Poveri in Naples and from 1740 of the Cons. della Pietà. Wrote 6 operas (1713–31), several oratorios, 3 intermezzi and considerable church-music. G.

Fernandez-Caballero, Manuel (Murcia, 1835–1906, Madrid). Spanish composer, trained at the Madrid Conservatory. Wrote over 220 popular zarzuelas (1854–1905), including Los Dineros del Sacristan, Los Africanistas, 1894, El Cabo Primero, 1895, La Rueda de la Fortuna, 1896, and Los Estudiantes, 1900, besides church-music. Member of the Academy from 1902.

Ferrabosco, Alfonso (1543–1588). 16th C. G.

Ferrabosco, Alfonso (?1575–1628). 17th C. G.

Ferrabosco, Domenico Maria (1513–1574). 16th C.

Ferrari, Benedetto (1597–1681). 17th C. G.

Ferrari, Carlo (Piacenza, 1730–1787, Parma), brother of Domenico below. Able Italian 'cellist, from 1758 at Paris and from 1765 court-musician at Parma. He is said to have been the first Italian to use the thumb as a capotasto.

Ferrari, Carlotta (Lodi, 1837–1907, Bologna). Noted Italian composer, pupil of Strepponi, Panzini and Mazzucato, writing (text and music) the operas Ugo, 1857, Sofia, 1866, and Eleonora d'Arborea, 1871, several masses and songs (to original poems).

Ferrari, Domenico (Piacenza, ?–1780, Paris), brother of Carlo above. Able Italian violinist, pupil of Tartini, from 1749 at Vienna, from 1753 concertmaster at Stuttgart and later prominent at Paris. Wrote a concerto, 36 sonatas and 6 trios. He is said to have been the first to use 'harmonics.' G.

Ferrari, Emilio (Allagna, 1851). Composer of the operas Il Bandito, 1880, Notte d'Aprile, 1887, Il Canticco de' Cantici, 1898, and L'Avaro, 1913, and the operetta Primavera, 1907.

Ferrari, Gabriella (Paris, 1860). French pianist and composer, trained at the Milan Conservatory and by Ketten, Dubois and Gounod, living in Paris. Has written effective piano-pieces and songs, orchestral suites and other pieces, and the operas Le Dernier Amour, 1895, Le Tartare, 1906, and Le Cobar, 1909.

Ferrari, Giacomo Gotifredo (Roveredo, 1759–1842, London). Tyrolese singing-teacher and composer, pupil of Stecher (Mariaberg) and Latilla, at first musician to Prince Liechtenstein, then to Marie Antoinette (at Paris), in 1791–93 cembalist at the Théâtre Feydeau, and from about 1795 in London. Wrote useful text-books on singing (1815 ?–27), notable autobiographical Aneddoti, 2 vols. 1830, 4 operas (1787–99), some ballets and many pieces for piano, harp, flute, etc. G.

Ferrari, Serafino Amadeo de' (Genoa, 1824-1885, do.). Italian pianist and composer, long director of the Genoa Conservatory. Wrote 6 operas (1853-64), a ballet, masses, songs, etc.

Ferrari-Fontana, Edoardo (Rome, 1878). Brilliant Italian operatic tenor, educated as a physician and from 1902 in diplomatic service in South America, but from 1906 appearing in Italy as singer, in 1910 achieving a phenomenal success at Milan in Tristan, becoming at once a favorite Wagnerian interpreter in Italy, in 1912 at Buenos Aires, and since 1913 in the United States. In 1913 he sang at the première of Montemezzi's Amore dei Tre Re. In 1912 he married the soprano Margarete Matzenauer. A.

Ferrata, Giuseppe (Gradioli, 1865). Italian pianist and composer, trained at the Accademia S. Cecilia, Rome, with some lessons from Liszt, from 1885 teaching and concertizing in Italy, from 1892 taught in various schools in America, and since about 1910 at Newcomb College, New Orleans. He has received distinguished honors from the Italian and Portuguese governments. Has written a choral symphony, a piano-concerto, 3 string-quartets, suites for violin and for organ, a Toccata Chromatique for piano, 2 masses, a Requiem, an 8-part Dies Irae, a quartet-cycle of Folk-Songs from the Spanish, and many lesser works, besides 3 unpublished operas. A.

Ferreira da Costa, Rodrigo (Setúbal, 1776-1825, Lisbon). Portuguese mathematician, author of Princípios de Musica, 2 vols. 1820-24, applying Momigny's theoretical principles to instrumental music down to Beethoven.

Ferretti, Giovanni. 16th C.

Ferretti, Paolo (Subiaco, 1866). Abbot of the Benedictine monastery in Parma and author of important studies of the rhythmic aspects of Gregorian music (1906, '13).

Ferretto, Andrea (n. Vicenza, 1864). Composer of the operas L'Amor d'un Angelo, 1893, I Zingari, 1900, Idillio Tragico, 1906, La Violinata, 1908 (revised, 1913), and two not yet given, the operetta Fantasma, 1908, 2 symphonic poems, church-music, etc.

Ferri, Baldassare (1610-1680). 17th C. G.

Ferri, Nicola (n. Bari, 1831-1886, London). Precocious Italian composer, pupil of the Naples Conservatory, from about 1855 in Paris and later in London, teaching at the Guildhall School. Wrote several operas (from 1847) and fine songs.

Feroni, Vincenzo Emidio Carmine (Tramutola, 1858). Italian composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (first prizes in composition), from 1881 teacher there and since 1888 at the Milan Conservatory, besides conducting the Famiglia Artistica. Chevalier of the Order of the Crown in 1897. Has written the operas Rudello, 1892, Ettore Fieramosca, 1896, and Il Carbonaro, 1900, the overture Ariosto, an orchestral Rhapsodie Espagnole and Hymne d'un Pâtre Lydien (prize, 1885), organ-pieces, many songs, etc.

Fesca, Alexander Ernst (Karlsruhe, 1820-1849, Brunswick), son of the following. Badense pianist, pupil of Rungenhagen, Julius Schneider and Taubert, in 1839-40 toured brilliantly, in 1841 was musician to Prince Fürstenberg and then lived at Brunswick. Wrote 4 operas (1839-49), including Der Troubadour, 1847, a piano-sextet, 2 piano-trios, a violin-sonata and many effective songs. His career was cut short by irregular living. G.

Fesca, Friedrich Ernst (Magdeburg, 1789-1826, Karlsruhe). Saxon violinist, pupil of Pitterlin and A. E. Müller, playing early in the Gewandhaus Orchestra at Leipzig, from 1806 in that at Oldenburg, in 1808-13 under Reichardt at Kassel, and then, after a sojourn at Vienna, from 1816 was concertmaster in the court-orchestra at Karlsruhe, dying of consumption. Wrote 3 symphonies, 4 overtures, 5 quintets, 20 quartets, 2 operas (1819-23), Psalms, songs, etc. His chamber-music showed his gifts at their best. G.

Fest, Max Georg (Altenburg, 1872). Able Saxon organist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1897 at the Nathanaelkirche, Leipzig, and from 1909 also singing-teacher at the Polytechnic High School. He has high reputation as a concert-player, not only in Germany, but in Austria and Italy.

Festa, Costanzo (?1490-1545). 16th C. G.

Festa, Giuseppe Maria (Trani, 1771-1839, Naples). Able Italian violinist, pupil of Mercieri, long a successful concertist in Italy and from 1802 at Paris, where for a time he was conductor at the Opéra, and from 1805 in the San Carlo orchestra, becoming conductor. His sister Francesca (1778-1836) was a stage-singer in Italy at Paris, Munich and Petrograd.

Festing, Michael Christian (London, ? -1752, do.). English violinist, son of a German flutist, pupil of Richard Jones and Geminiani, known as player from about 1724 and in the royal band from 1735, in 1737 director of the Italian Opera and from 1742 of the music at the Ranelagh Gardens. In 1738 he was the chief founder of the Royal Society of Musicians and its secretary till his death. Wrote many concertos, sonatas, trios and other chamber-pieces, odes and cantatas. G.

Fétis, Édouard Louis François (n. Dinant, 1812-1909, Brussels), son of the following. Belgian writer, in 1833-35 his father's successor as editor of the Revue Musicale in its last days, then at Brussels as contributor to the Indépendant and for more than a half-century librarian of the Brussels Library. Author of Les Musiciens Belges, 2 vols. 1849, and Les Artistes Belges à l'Étranger, 2 vols. 1857-65, besides preparing a catalogue of his father's library (1877) and editing the 5th vol. of his Histoire. He taught aesthetics at the Académie des Beaux-Arts and was a member of the Académie Royale. His brother Adolphe Louis Eugène (1820–1873) was a good pianist and teacher, from 1856 in Paris. G.

Fétis, François Joseph (Mons, 1784–1871, Brussels). Distinguished Belgian composer, theorist and historian, precociously developed as violinist and organist, pupil of his father, at the Paris Conservatory and in Vienna, from 1804 beginning to display the restless historical inquisitiveness, prodigious industry in research and readiness of literary expression that marked his whole life. His attention was early fixed upon Guido's system and the history of notation, upon the Gregorian system of ritual music, and upon problems of musical theory. In 1806 he made a wealthy marriage, but by 1811 lost the property thus acquired. From 1813 he was organist and teacher at Douai, but in 1818 removed to Paris, where in 1821 he became professor of composition at the Conservatory and in 1827 its librarian, as well as editor of his journal La Revue Musicale, with some writing for newspapers. From 1833 he was director of the Brussels Conservatory, which he made one of the leading institutions of the world. With all other occupations ran a constant pursuit of literary and scholarly ambitions. Author of numerous text-books, as in harmony (1824), fugue and counterpoint (1825, '46), solfeggio (1827), score-reading (1829), choral singing (1837), piano-playing (1837), singing (1840), plain-song (1843), and advanced harmony (1844), Les Mérites des Néerlandais dans la Musique, 1828, Curiosités Historiques, 1830, La Musique Mise à la Portée de Tout le Monde, 1830, Biographie Universelle des Musiciens, 8 vols. 1837–44 (2d ed. 1860–65, and 2 added vols., edited by Pougin, 1878–80), Esquisse de l'Histoire de l'Harmonie, 1840, biographies of Paganini (1851) and Stradivari (1856), reports on instruments at the Paris Expositions of 1855 and 1867, and Histoire Générale de la Musique, 5 vols. 1869–76 (extending only to the 15th century), besides innumerable essays and special discussions in his Revue and in the Proceedings of the Brussels Academy. His studies in plain-song remain in manuscript. He was also a fertile and competent composer, writing 2 symphonies and some other orchestral works, a piano-sextet, 3 piano-quintets, a violin-sonata, many piano-works, including several sonatas (some 4-hand), masses, Te Deums, a Requiem and much other good church-music, songs, etc., besides 7 operas (1820–32). His great library (over 7300 vols.) went to the Brussels Royal Library. Memoir by Alvin, 1874. G.

Feurich, Julius (Leipzig, 1821–1900, do.). Saxon piano-maker at Leipzig from 1851, noted for his uprights. His son Hermann (b. 1854) has also a good reputation for concert-grands.

Févin, Antoine and Robert de. 16th C. G.

Février, Henri (Paris, 1876). French composer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory. Has written the operas Le Roi Aveugle, 1906, Monna

Vanna, 1909, and Ghismonda, 1919, and 3 operettas.

Fiala, Joseph (Lobkowitz, 1751–1816, Donaueschingen). Bohemian oboist, in the service of various nobles (in 1778–85 under the Archbishop of Salzburg), then some years in Russia and from 1792 court-director at Donaueschingen. Wrote 2 symphonies, several quartets, wood-wind trios, many concertos, etc. G.

Fibich, Zdenko (n. Czaslau, 1850–1900, Prague). Eminent Bohemian composer, precociously developed (a symphony at 14), studying at Prague, at the Leipzig Conservatory and under V. Lachner, in 1876–81 assistant-director at the Prague Opera and from 1878 choir-master at the Russian Church there. While at Leipzig he was much influenced by Schumann. He produced about 700 works, many of them of such originality as to rank him among the significant composers of the modern Czech circle. Wrote the operas Bukovin, 1874, Blaník, 1881, The Bride of Messina, 1884, The Storm, 1895, Hedy, 1896, Sárka, 1898, The Fall of Ancona, 1900, and Hippodamia, 1891 (melodramatic trilogy), 6 other melodramas, the choral Wedding-Scene and The Wind-Bride, 3 symphonies, the symphonic poems Othello, Zaboj and Slavoj, Toman and the Nymph, Vesna, Vigilia and At Evening, 4 overtures, orchestral variations, a quintet, 2 string-quartets, a piano-quartet and other chamber-works, about 400 piano-pieces of various kinds and a method, choruses and songs. Memoir by C. L. Richter, 1899. G.

Fiby, Heinrich (Vienna, 1834–1917, Znaim). Austrian violinist and conductor, trained at the Vienna Conservatory, from 1853 conductor at the Laibach theater and teacher at the music-school, from 1857 municipal music-director at Znaim, founder and till 1902 director of a music-school and from 1861 choral conductor as well. Wrote orchestral and chamber-works, 3 operettas, many choruses, part-songs and songs.

Fiebach, Otto (Ohlau, 1851). Silesian organist at Königsberg, head of a music-school and music-director at the University. Has written the operas Prinz Dominik, 1885, Loreley, 1886, Bei frommen Hirten, 1891, Der Offizier der Königin, 1900, Robert und Bertram, 1903, and Die Herzogin von Marlborough, the oratorio Die neun Musen, a treatise on Die Physiologie d. Tonkunst, 1891, and a text-book in counterpoint (1921).

Fiedler, August Max (Zittau, 1859). Able Saxon pianist and conductor, pupil of his father, G. Albrecht and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1882 teaching at the Hamburg Conservatory and in 1903 its director, succeeding Bernuth, from 1904 Barth's successor as conductor of the Hamburg Philharmonic, in 1908–12 conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, then lived at Berlin and since 1916 has conducted the Essen orchestra. Has written a symphony (1886), a Lustspiel-Ouverture, 1914, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, etc. A.

Field, John (Dublin, 1782-1837, Moscow). Eminent Irish pianist and composer, pupil of his father and grandfather and later of Clementi (apprenticed till 1804 and used by the latter to exhibit pianos), in 1802 noted at Paris for his playing of Bach and Handel and taken by Clementi in 1804 to Russia, speedily becoming a favorite concertist and teacher. In 1832-33 he made brilliant appearances in London, Paris, Belgium, Switzerland and Italy, but had a long illness at Naples, whence he was taken back to Moscow by Russian admirers. His playing was full of elegant charm and often of romantic feeling. His compositions, though not of great power, were significant and influential, pointing toward the fuller expression of imagination and passion in Chopin, who undoubtedly derived much from their lyric inspiration. They include Concertos—1, E-flat, 2, A-flat, 3, E-flat, 4, E-flat, 5, C, 6, C, (L'Incendie par l'Orage), 7, C min.

Sonatas—1, A, 2, E, 3, C min., 4, B.

2 Nocturnes (only 12 so named originally).

2 Divertissements (with string-quartet).

Piano-quintet; Rondo for piano-quintet.

2 Fantasias; Rondo, Speed the Plough; 2 Airs en Rondeau; 3 other Rondos.

Variations—'Since Then I'm Doomed'; Chanson Russe;

Air Russe (4 hands); 3 English airs.

Romanze and Cavatina, 'Reviens, Reviens'; Air Russe;

4 Romances.

Exercice modulé dans tous les tons majeurs et mineurs.

Memoirs by W. Niemann, 1905, and Dessauer, 1912, and critique of the nocturnes by Liszt, 1882. G.

Fielitz, Alexander von (Leipzig, 1860). Saxon (Polish) teacher, pupil of Schulhoff, Banck and Kretschmer, at first opera-conductor at Zurich, Lübeck and Leipzig, but in 1887-97 laid aside by illness (living at Capri), from 1897 teacher at the Stern Conservatory, Berlin, in 1905-08 at the Chicago Musical College and conductor of a symphony orchestra, and since 1908 again at the Stern Conservatory, becoming director in 1916. Has written chiefly piano-pieces and songs, besides the operas Vendetta, 1891, and Das stille Dorf, 1900. G.

Fierens, Henri (Brussels, 1870). Belgian critic, pupil (and son-in-law) of Gevaert, contributor to various periodicals and author of Essai sur l'Art Contemporain, 1897, and La Tristesse Contemporaine, 1899.

Figulus, Wolfgang (?-1588). 16th C.

Filiasi, Lorenzo (Naples, 1878). Italian composer, pupil of the Naples Conservatory, writing the operas Manuel Menandez, 1904, Fuor di Neve, 1911 (later rewritten), and 3 others, the orchestral suites I Diletti Campestri and Visioni Romantiche, various choral works, including Le Tre Glorie, the dramatic scena La Schiava di Sulinar, church-music, etc.

Filippi, Filippo (Vicenza, 1830-1887, Milan). Italian critic, originally educated as a lawyer (degree in 1853), musically trained at Venice and Vienna, in 1858 editor of the Gazzetta Musicale (Milan) and from 1859 critic for the new Perseveranza. He was a warm partisan of Verdi and of Wagner. Author of a pamphlet on the latter (1876), a biography of Fumagalli and the essays Musica e Musicisti, 1879. Wrote a string-quintet, 9 string-quartets, a piano-trio, etc. G.

Filippi, Giuseppe de' (Milan, 1825-1887, n. Paris). Italian critic (son of a physician who in 1847 wrote on musical æsthetics), from 1846 working in Paris, contributing to Pougin's continuation of Fétis' Biographie, 1878-80, besides books on the drama (1857, '60).

Filke, Max (n. Leobschütz, 1855-1911, Breslau). Silesian composer, pupil of Brosig, Habert and Piutti, from 1881 choirmaster at Straubing, in 1890-91 director of the Cologne Sängerkreis and from 1891 director at the Breslau Cathedral and professor at the Institut für Kirchenmusik, attaining high repute as a composer of Catholic church-music. Wrote 6 grand masses, a Requiem, a Te Deum, many other ritual works, etc., besides many fine secular choruses.

Fillmore, John Comfort (Franklin, Conn. 1843-1898, do.). American theorist, trained at the Oberlin and Leipzig Conservatories, in 1867-68 director at Oberlin, from 1868 professor at Ripon College, in 1878-84 at the Milwaukee College for Women, from 1884 founder and director of the Milwaukee School of Music, and from 1895 director at Pomona College in California. He was one of the early students of the music of the Indians. Author of a History of Pianoforte-Music, 1883, New Lessons in Harmony, 1887, Lessons in Musical History, 1888, On the Value of Certain Modern Theories (Von Oettingen and Riemann), A Study of Omaha Indian Music, 1893 (with Miss Fletcher and La Flesche), translations of Riemann's Natur d. Harmonik and Klavierschule, and numerous articles and addresses. A.

Fillunger, Marie (Vienna, 1850). Austrian soprano, trained at the Vienna Conservatory and the Berlin Hochschule, from about 1877 appearing in Berlin and elsewhere and from 1889 in England. In 1891 she toured in Australia and in 1895 in South Africa, in both cases with Hallé. Since 1904 she has taught at the Royal College in Manchester. G.

Filtsch, Karl (Hermannstadt, 1830-1845, Vienna). Transylvanian boy-pianist, pupil of Mittag, Chopin and Liszt, appearing in London when but thirteen and even then a finished artist. His promise was cut short by consumption. G.

Filtz, Anton (?1730-1760, Mannheim). Famous 'cellist and composer, probably Bohemian, from 1754 in the Mannheim orchestra. He was a pupil of J. Stamitz and belongs with him as a strong exponent of the Mannheim circle. Wrote 41 symphonies, many notable string-trios, triosonatas, piano-trios, concertos for 'cello and for flute, 3 'cello-sonatas, etc., a mass, etc. See Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Bayern, iii. G.

Finck, Heinrich (1445-1527). 15th C. G.

Finck, Henry Theophilus (Bethel, Mo. 1854). Eminent American critic, pupil of J. K. Paine, though educated specially in philosophy and psychology. From 1876 he became more and more known as European correspondent of various American periodicals. Since 1881 he has been on the editorial staff of the New York Evening Post, and since 1890 has lectured on music-history at the National Conservatory. His literary interests extend much outside the field of music, but he has been energetic in promoting knowledge and sympathy in modern musical progress. Author of Chopin and other Musical Essays, 1889, Wagner and his Works, 2 vols. 1893, Paderevski and his Art, 1895, The Pictorial Wagner, 1899, Anton Seidl, 1899, Songs and Song-Writers, 1900, Grieg and his Music, 1909, Success in Music, 1909, Massenet and his Operas, 1910, and Richard Strauss 1917, besides four collections of selected songs (1902-17) and important psychological studies of Romantic Love, 1887, Primitive Love, and Food and Flavor, 1913, records of travel, etc. A.

Finck, Herman (1827-1858). 16th C. G.

Findeisen, Nikolai Fedorovitch (Petrograd, 1868). Able Russian editor and critic, trained at the Petrograd Conservatory, since 1893 founder and editor of the Russische Musikzeitung, the leading periodical in Russia, and in 1909 (with Siloti) founder of the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde, besides contributing to other journals and joining in other enterprises. Author of various works on Russian composers or collections of their letters, as of Verstovsky (1890), Glinka (1896, '98, '99, 1907-08), Nápravnik (1898), Serov (1900), Dargomijsky (1902), A. Rubinstein (1905), Rimsky-Korsakov (1908), Bessel (1909), Smolensky (1910) and Stasov (1912), besides Musical Sketches and Silhouettes, 1891, The Mastersingers, 1897, History of the Russian Lied, 1903, Musical Antiquity, 1903-10, and Hist. of the Petrograd Section of the Russian Musical Society, 1909. He is one of the chief editors of the Russian edition of Riemann's Musik-Lexikon.

Findeisen, Otto (Brünn, 1862). Moravian conductor and composer, from 1890 theater-director at Magdeburg and since about 1905 at the Leipzig Stadttheater. Has written about a dozen operettas (from 1890), several of which have been highly successful.

Finger, Gottfried. 17th C. G.

Fink, Christian (Dettingen, 1831-1911, Esslingen). Württemberger organist, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and of Joh. Schneider, in 1849-53 teacher at Esslingen, in 1856-60 at Leipzig, and from 1860 organist at the Liebfrauenkirche in Esslingen and head-teacher at the Seminary there, gaining the title of professor in 1862. Wrote much able organ-music (sonatas, fugues, trios, etc.) and choir-music (Psalms, motets, etc.) besides 4 piano-sonatas and songs. G.

Fink, Gottfried Wilhelm (Sulza, 1783-1846, Halle). Thuringian editor and writer, at first a clergyman and teacher, but began musical writing in 1818, in 1827-41 editor of the Allgem. Musikalische Zeitung (on lines that evoked sarcasm from Schumann in 1834), and from 1842 music-director at Leipzig University (Ph.D.). Author of Erste Wanderung d. ältesten Tonkunst, 1831, Wesen u. Geschichte d. Oper, 1838, and several text-books (from 1836), besides an unpublished music-history. He collaborated on Schilling's, Ersch and Gruber's and Brockhaus' dictionaries. He also edited a collection of 1000 songs and wrote some pieces for piano and violin, vocal quartets and songs. G.

Fino, Giocondo (Turin, 1867). Italian composer, pupil of Bolzoni, becoming a teacher at Turin. Has written the orchestral suite Nubi di Vita, a string-quartet, masses, the oratorios Il Battista, 1906, and Noëmi e Ruth, 1908, and the operas La Festa del Grano, 1910, Visioni di Dante, Deborah, Parej del '59, 1915, La Bisbetica Domata and Campane a Gloria, 1916.

Fioravanti, Valentino (Rome, 1764-1837, Capua). Italian composer, pupil of the Conservatorio della Pietà, Naples, and of Jannaconi, from about 1781 conductor at Rome, with sojourns at Naples, in 1807 visited Paris, from about 1810 was in Lisbon, and from 1816 was Jannaconi's successor as maestro at St. Peter's, Rome. He was one of the most fertile and effective writers of comic opera (over 75 works in 1784-1824), notably in Le Cantatrici Villane, 1799, and I Virtuosi Ambulanti, 1807. His church-music was less successful. Autobiography in the Gazzetta Musicale, 1905. G.

Fioravanti, Vincenzo (Rome, 1799-1877, Naples), son of the above. Italian composer, pupil of his father and of Jannaconi, from 1833 choirmaster in Naples, from 1839 at Lanciano and in 1867-72 head of the Naples Albergo dei Poveri. Wrote about 40 comic operas (from 1819). G.

Fiore, Stefano Andrea (Milan, ?1675-1739, Turin). Italian composer of over 25 operas (1707-30), mostly for Turin and Milan.

Fiorillo, Federigo (Brunswick, 1753-after 1823), son of the following. Italian-German violinist, pupil of his father, from 1780 in Poland, from 1783 director at Riga, in 1785-88 in Paris, then in London, where he played viola in Salomon's Quartet, from 1794 in Amsterdam and finally in Paris. Wrote a large amount of chamber-music, many violin-works and especially the 36 Caprices pour Violon (editions by Spohr, David, etc.). G.

Fiorillo, Ignazio (Naples, 1715-1787, n. Kassel). Italian composer, pupil of Leo and Durante, producing operas in Italy from 1736, from 1754 court-director at Brunswick and in 1762-30 the same at Kassel. Wrote 14 operas (1736-71), the oratorio Isacco, 3 Te Deums, a Requiem and other masses, some chamber-pieces, cembalo-sonatas, etc.

Fischer, Adolf (Uckermünde, 1827-1893, Breslau). Pomeranian organist, trained at the Berlin Inst. für Kirchenmusik and of Rungenhagen, from 1847 playing at Berlin churches, from 1853 at both the chief churches at Frankfurt-an-der-Oder and conductor of the Singakademie there, and from 1870 at the Elisabethkirche in Breslau, where in 1880 he founded and later directed the Silesian Conservatory. Wrote symphonies, motets, organ-works, songs, etc.

Fischer, Adolf (Brussels, 1847–1891, n. do.) Belgian 'cellist, pupil of his father and of Servais at the Brussels Conservatory, from 1868 living at Paris, whence he made extensive concert-tours. His brilliant career was broken by insanity.

Fischer, Carl, Inc. Important music-publishers and instrument-importers in New York, the business being founded in 1872 by Carl Fischer (1849–1923) and now directed by his son Walter S. Fischer, with branches in Boston and Chicago since 1908–09. Besides issuing many serious works by important European and American composers, i.e. Fritz Kreisler, Sergei Rachmaninoff, Leopold Godowsky, Bainbridge Crist, in a style noted for excellence of editorial and typographical work, the firm has also maintained the monthly periodicals The Metronome (since 1885, for orchestral and band-music) and also The Musical Observer (since 1907).

Fischer, Carlo (Washington, D. C. 1872). American 'cellist, trained in Washington and at the Hoch Conservatory, Frankfurt, playing in leading orchestras in Russia, Finland and Germany, from 1899 at Pittsburgh, from 1903 at Cincinnati, and since 1906 with the Minneapolis Orchestra, of which he has been assistant-manager and program-editor. A.

Fischer, Emil (Brunswick, 1838–1914, Hamburg). Eminent operatic bass, pupil of his father, making his début in 1857 at Gratz and singing at Presburg, Stettin and Brunswick, in 1863–70 directed the Danzig Opera, from 1875 sang at the Opera in Rotterdam, from 1880 at that in Dresden, and in 1885–98 mostly at the Metropolitan, New York. His repertoire included about 100 operas of various schools, but he was most famous in the Wagnerian works, his impersonation of Hans Sachs, for example, being unsurpassed. A.

Fischer, Erich (n. Constance, 1887). Swiss student of folk-music, educated at Berlin University (Ph.D. 1909) from 1907 connected with the Psychological Institute in Berlin, from 1910 on a commission to investigate South-German music, and since 1914 engaged in adapting folk-melodies to popular presentation in plays like singspiele. Has written on Chinese music (1910) and other ethnic music, the song-play Das heilige Kappel, 1913, and many other similar works.

Fischer, Franz von (Munich, 1849–1918, do.). Bavarian 'cellist, pupil of Hippolit Müller, from 1870 soloist at the Pest Opera, then at Munich and Bayreuth, in 1877–79 court-director at Mannheim and in 1879–1912 court-director at Munich.

Fischer, Georg (Hanover, 1836–1921, do.). A leading surgeon at Hanover. Author of Musikgeschichte in Hannover, 1899, Hans von

Bilow in Hannover, 1902, Kleine Blätter, 1908, Marschner-Erinnerungen, 1918, important articles in periodicals and a collection of Billroth's letters (1895, with much relating to Brahms).

Fischer, Gottfried Emil (Berlin, 1791–1841, do.), son of Ernst above, and from 1818 singing-teacher at the Graues Kloster, Berlin (also mathematician). Author of a text-book in singing (1831), and articles in the Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung, as well as of some vocal music.

Fischer, Johann (1650–1721). 17th C. G.

Fischer, Johann Kaspar Ferdinand (1650–1746). 17th C. G.

Fischer, Johann Christian (Freiburg, Baden, 1733–1800, London). Eminent oboist, from 1760 in the Dresden court-orchestra, with concert-trips in Italy and in 1768 to England, and from 1780 court-musician in London, where he was closely associated with J. C. Bach and Abel. Wrote 10 oboe-concertos, quartets for flute and strings, and much other flute-music. G.

Fischer, Karl August (n. Chemnitz, 1829–1892, Dresden). Eminent Saxon organist, pupil of Anacker, in 1852–55 engaged in notable concert-tours and then settled in Dresden, chiefly at the Dreikönigskirche. Wrote 2 organ-symphonies, 3 concertos (for Christmas, Easter and Whitsunday), 2 orchestral suites, 3 festal masses, the opera Loreley and various pieces for violin, 'cello or other instruments with organ.

Fischer, Karl Ludwig (Kaiserslautern, 1816–1877, Hanover). Bavarian violinist, successively theater-director at Treves, Cologne, Aix, Nuremberg, Würzburg, Mayence (from 1847) and Hanover (from 1852), where he succeeded Marschner in 1859. Wrote many choral works, especially men's choruses.

Fischer, Ludwig (Mayence, 1745–1825, Berlin). Distinguished Rhenish operatic bass, early famous at Mayence, Mannheim (and Munich) and Vienna, from 1783 at Paris and in Italy, and in 1788–1815 at the Berlin Opera. For him Mozart wrote the part of Osmin in the Entführung (1782). G.

Fischer, Michael Gotthard (n. Erfurt, 1773–1829, do.). Able Saxon organist and conductor, pupil of Kittel, long organist at Erfurt and teacher in the Seminary there. Wrote much fine organ-music, symphonies, concertos for clarinet and for bassoon, a string-quintet, string-quartets, motets and a Choralbuch.

Fischer, Otto (Altenburg, 1861). Professor of physiology at Leipzig University, developing important studies of muscle-action in piano-playing.

Fischer, Wilhelm (Vienna, 1886). Austrian musicologist, educated at the Vienna University (Ph.D. 1912) and assistant in music-history there. Author of a thesis on the evolution of the Viennese classical style (1915) and editor of Oesterreich for the Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in

Oesterreich.
Fischhof, Joseph (Butschowitz, 1804–1857, Vienna). Moravian pianist, pupil of Halm and Seyfried, from 1833 professor at the Vienna Conservatory. Author of a Gesch. d. Klavierbaus, 1853, and was the custodian and annotator of valuable material on Beethoven's life. Wrote a string-quartet, many piano-pieces, etc.

Fisher, Edward (Jamaica, Vt., 1848-1913, Toronto). American teacher, trained at the New England Conservatory, Boston, and by Loeschhorn and Haupt, from 1875 at a school in Ottawa, in 1879-99 organist at St. Andrew's in Toronto, founding a society that later became the Toronto Choral Society, and in 1887 starting the Toronto Conservatory, which attained conspicuous success under his direction. He was also active in promoting various other enterprises. A.

Fisher, John Abraham (Dunstable, 1744-1806, London). English violinist, pupil of Pinto, from 1770 active in theatrical music in London, about 1783-84 touring in Russia, Germany and Austria, and later worked in Dublin and London. In 1784 for a short time he was husband of Anna Storace. Mus.D. of Oxford Univ. in 1777. Wrote an oratorio, many pantomimes (1771-77), etc. G.

Fisher, William Arms (San Francisco, 1861). American editor, pupil of J. P. Morgan, Shakespeare, H. W. Parker and Dvořák, teaching for a time at the National Conservatory, New York, and since 1897 editor and publishing-manager for the Ditson Company in Boston. Has written nearly 100 effective songs, part-songs, anthems, etc., and valuable Notes on Music in Old Boston, 1918, besides editing a collection of Irish songs. A.

Fissot, Alexis Henri (n. Amiens, 1843-1896, Paris). Able French pianist and organist, trained at the Paris Conservatory (many prizes), where from 1887 he was professor, besides being organist at St.-Vincent-de-Paul. Wrote many striking piano-pieces.

Fitelberg, Georg (Dünaburg, 1879). Fine Livonian violinist, conductor and composer, pupil of the Warsaw Conservatory (Paderewski and Zamoyski prizes), from about 1900 in the Warsaw Orchestra, becoming concertmaster and from 1908 conductor, with absence in 1912-13 to direct the Vienna Opera. Has written 2 symphonies, the symphonic poems Das Lied vom Falken and Protesilas und Laodamia, 2 overtures, a violin-concerto, 2 violin-sonatas, a piano-trio and songs.

Fitzenhagen, Wilhelm Karl Friedrich (Seesen, 1848-1890, Moscow). Brilliant 'cellist, long concertmaster of the Moscow Orchestra and teacher in the Conservatory, with many successful concert-tours. Wrote ably for his instrument.

Fitzner, Rudolf (Ernstbrunn, 1868). Eminent Austrian violinist, pupil of the Vienna Conservatory, in 1894 establishing the Fitzner Quartet, which made extensive tours and introduced many novelties, and from 1911 musician to the King of Bulgaria, though residing in Vienna.

Fladt, Anton (Mannheim, 1775-after 1842, Landshut?). Able Badense oboist, pupil of Ramm, from 1790 in the court-orchestra at Munich, finally becoming royal chamber-musician and retiring in 1842. At various times he made tours throughout Europe with conspicuous success. G.

Flagler, Harry Harkness (Cleveland, O. 1870). New York capitalist, since 1914 the munificent patron of the New York Symphony Society. A.

Flatau, Theodor S. (Lyck, 1860). Eminent Berlin physician, since 1897 specializing in vocal physiology, publishing several valuable monographs (from 1899) and editing the periodical Die Stimme.

Flaxland, Gustave Alexandre (Strasbourg, 1821-1895, Paris). Alsatian teacher, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1847 founding a music-publishing business in Paris that became important through the purchase of Schumann and Wagner copyrights. In 1870 this business was sold to Durand & Schönewerk, the firm turning to piano-making.

Flecha, Matheo (1520-1604). 16th C.

Flégier, Ange (Marseilles, 1846). French composer, trained at the Marseilles and Paris Conservatories, since 1870 working at Marseilles. Has written the short comic opera Fatima, 1875, the cantatas Ossian and Franческа da Rimini, an orchestral suite and other pieces for orchestra or strings, choruses, songs and piano-pieces.

Fleischer, Friedrich Gottlob (Köthen, 1722-1806, Brunswick). Saxon organist, all his life at the Martinskirche in Brunswick and member of the court-orchestra. He was one of the first to enrich melodies with adequate harmony and other accompaniment. Published Oden u. Lieder, 2 parts, 1756-57, Kantaten zum Scherz u. Vergnügen, 1763, a collection of songs (1788) and the singspiel Das Orackel, 1771, besides clavier-pieces.

Fleischer, Oskar (Zörbig, 1856). Eminent Saxon musicologist, educated as a philologist at Halle University, with further study under Spitta, from 1888 custodian and cataloguer of the Royal Collection of Instruments in Berlin and since 1896 professor at the University, succeeding Spitta. In 1892 he was Prussian representative at the Vienna Exposition, issuing a valuable report on its bearing upon music and the drama (1893). In 1899 he was a leading promoter of the Internationale Musik-Gesellschaft, was its president till 1904 and also till 1904 editor (with Joh. Wolf) of its publications. Author of Das Accentuationssystem Notkers in seinem Boetius, 1883, Denis Gaultier, 1886 (in Vierteljahrschrift), Guide to the Royal Collection, 1892, Neumen-Studien, 3 vols. 1895-1904, a life of Mozart (1899), Führer durch d. Bach-Ausstellung, 1901, Vom Kriege gegen d. deutsche Kultur, 1915, and many articles in the periodicals of the I. M. G. G.

Fleischer, Reinhold (n. Herrnsstadt, 1842-1904, Görlitz). Silesian organist, trained at the Inst. für Kirchenmusik, Berlin, from 1870 organist at the leading church at Görlitz and conductor of the Singakademie, gaining the title of royal director in 1885. Wrote organ-pieces, motets, the cantata Holda and songs.

Fleischer-Edel, Katharina (Mülheim-an-der-Ruhr, 1875). Rhenish operatic soprano, pupil of Iffert, from 1894 at the Dresden Opera and since 1898 at the Hamburg Stadttheater. She sang at the Metropolitan, New York, in 1906-07.

Flesch, Karl (Moson, 1873). Eminent Hungarian violinist, pupil of Grün and Marsick, appearing from 1895 at Vienna, in 1897-1902 professor at the Bucharest Conservatory and court-musician, from 1903 at the Amsterdam Conservatory and since 1908 teaching in Berlin. He has toured everywhere in Europe and to America in 1913-14. Besides his own noted Urstudien, 1910, he has edited Études by Kreutzer and Paganini, and violin-works by Mozart, Beethoven and Mendelssohn.

Fletcher, Alice Cunningham (Boston, 1845-1923, Washington). American ethnologist, from 1882 in the Peabody Museum of Archaeology at Cambridge, Mass. Author of A Study of Omaha Music, 1893 (with La Flesche), and Indian Song and Story, 1900, with many articles in scientific periodicals. A.

Fletcher, Percy E. English composer of 4 orchestral suites, the tone-poem Work and Love, many choral works, a string-quartet, a quartet-suite, a suite for piano-quintet, a clarinet-sonata, piano-pieces, etc.

Floederer, Wilhelm (Brünn, 1843). Moravian composer of the operas Fernando, 1887, and Gunther der Minnesänger, 1906, and the cantata Unter der Linde.

Flodin, Karl (Vasa, 1858). Finnish (German) critic and composer, pupil of Faltin and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1886 critic or editor in Helsingfors, but since 1907 living in Buenos Aires. Has written a Cortège for wind-instruments, the scena Helena, incidental music for Hannele, and much chorus-music, and author of a work on Finnish music (in Swedish, 1900), a life of Wegelius and articles on Sibelius (1901) and on the rise of the Finnish national school (1903-04). He is recognized as a significant factor in the Finnish development. In 1900 he married the Finnish soprano Adée Leander (b. 1873). A.

Floedor, Theodor Johann von (d. 1908, n. Berlin). Rumanian composer of the opera Mosul Ciocărlan, 1901, and the operetta Die St. Georgsnacht, 1907.

Flood, William Henry Grattan (n. Waterford, 1857). Able Irish student of local music, mostly self-taught, from 1877 organist in Dublin and Belfast, from 1882 at Thurles and teacher at a Jesuit college, in 1890-94 teacher at a school in Staffordshire (England), and since 1895 organist at Enniscorthy (Ireland). He has done much to gather Irish folk-songs. Author of a History of Irish Music, 1895 (3d. ed. 1913), Story of the Harp, 1905, Story of the Bagpipe, 1911, Memoir of W. V. Wallace, 1912, History of Enniscorthy, and many articles for encyclopedias and periodicals and editor of the Catholic Hymnal for Ireland, Songs and Airs of O'Carolan, etc. Mus.D. of Dublin Univ. in 1907, and recipient of honors from Popes Leo XIII and Pius X.

Florida, Pietro [Barone Napolino] (Modica, 1860). Sicilian composer, trained at the Naples Conservatory, from 1885 touring as pianist, in 1888-92 professor at the Palermo Conservatory (with tours till 1890), from 1892 living at Milan, in 1904 went to America, teaching at the Cincinnati College of Music in 1906-08 and then moving to New York, where since 1913 he has directed the Italian Symphony Orchestra. Has written the operas Carlotta Cleprier, 1882, Maruzza, 1894, La Colonia Libera, 1899, Paoletta, 1910, and The Scarlet Letter, a symphony (prize from the Soc. del Quartetto, Milan, 1889), an overture, piano-pieces and songs, besides editing early Italian songs. A.

Florimo, Francesco (n. Reggio, 1800-1888, Naples). Eminent Italian music-historian, trained at the Naples Conservatory and in 1826-51 its librarian. He was an intimate friend of Bellini, in memory of whom he instituted the Bellini Prize (also in 1876 transferred Bellini's remains from Paris to Catania). Author of Cenno Storico sulla Scuola Musicale di Napoli, 2 vols. 1869-71 (2d. ed., 4 vols. 1880-84), R. Wagner ed i Wagneristi, 1876, Trasporto delle Ceneri di Bellini a Catania, 1876, Bellini, 1882, Album Bellini, 1886, and a singing-method used in the Naples Conservatory. Wrote orchestral pieces, cantatas, church-music and several books of songs (Neapolitan dialect). Memoir by Megali, 1901. G.

Florio, Caryl [William James Robjohn] (Tavistock, 1843-1920, Asheville, N. C.). English organist, brought to New York as a boy (in choir of Trinity Church in 1859-60), in 1862-67 a member of a traveling theatrical troupe and from 1869 in varied musical work, after 1875 including the giving of operas and concerts in Philadelphia and Havana. From 1882 he held positions as teacher or organist in Indianapolis, at Wells College, in Newport, R. I., in Baltimore and for many years at the Vanderbilt estate, Biltmore, N. C. Wrote the operas Gulda, 1879, and Uncle Tom, 1882, the operettas Inferno, 1871, Les Tours de Mercure, 1872, Suzanne, 1876, 3 cantatas, 2 symphonies, 2 overtures, a quintet for piano and saxophones, saxophone-quartets, a piano-concerto, 4 violin-sonatas, 2 piano-sonatas, church-music, madrigals, songs, etc. A.

Flotow, Friedrich, Freiherr von (Teutendorf, 1812-1883, Darmstadt). Noted Mecklenburger composer, pupil of Reicha, from 1835 working mostly at Paris, but in 1856-63 court-director at Schwerin, after 1868 living near Vienna, and toward the end at Darmstadt. His facile melody and clever sense of effect made many of his works decidedly popular, though neither his musicianship nor his dramatic gift was of a high order. Wrote about 30 stage-works (operas, operettas and ballets), including Le Naufrage de la Méduse, 1839 (later called Die Matrosen), Alessandro Stradella, 1844 (in smaller form, 1837), Martha, 1847, Indra, 1853 (later L'Enchanteresse), L'Ombre, 1870, with several posthumous works and some chamber-music and songs. Memoir by his widow, 1892. G.

Flowers, George French (Boston, 1811–1872, London). English organist, pupil of Rinck and Von Wartensee, in 1836–37 at the English Chapel in Paris, then in London churches, at Beverley Minster, etc. From 1851 he had a school for singers in London. Mus.D. of Oxford Univ. in 1865. Wrote organ-fugues and pieces, a mass, a setting of Tennyson's Ode on the Duke of Wellington, etc. besides text-books and articles. G.

Flügel, Ernst Paul (Stettin, 1844–1912, Breslau), son of the following, Pomeranian church-musician, pupil of his father, the Inst. für Kirchenmusik and the Akademie at Berlin, besides other teachers, from 1867 at the Prenzlau Gymnasium and from 1879 cantor at the Bernhardskirche in Breslau, where he started a choral society and was critic for the Schlesische Zeitung, gaining the title of professor in 1901, Wrote Psalm 121, Mahomets Gesang, many fine choruses a cappella, a piano-trio, organ-pieces, etc.

Flügel, Gustav (Nienburg, 1812–1900, Stettin). Saxon organist, pupil of Friedr. Schneider, from 1830 working at various places, from 1840 at Stettin, from 1850 at the Neuwied Seminary, and from 1859 again at Stettin as organist at the Schlosskirche. Wrote good organ-preludes and concert-pieces, an overture, a string-quartet, piano-sonatas and many pieces, part-songs and songs.

Fodor, Joseph (Venloo, 1752–1828, Petrograd). Dutch violinist, pupil of F. Benda, after many tours from 1787 in Paris and from 1794 in Petrograd. Wrote 9 concertos and many pieces. G.

Fodor-Mainvielle, Josephine (Paris, 1793–?), daughter of the above. Noted operatic soprano, appearing from 1810 at Paris, where, after marrying the actor Mainvielle and touring with him in Scandinavia in 1814–16, she was engaged at the Italiens, then at London also, from 1822 at Naples with marked success, but from 1825 lost her voice, though it still aroused enthusiasm in 1831 from Mendelssohn. Memoir by Unger, 1823. G.

Foerster, Adolph Martin (Pittsburgh, 1854). American composer, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1876 working in Pittsburgh. Has written the symphonic poem Sigrid, a Symphonic Ode to Byron, a Prelude to Faust, 2 orchestral suites and 1 for strings, several marches and other festival and lyric pieces for orchestra, a violin-concerto, a string-quartet, 2 piano-quartets, 2 string-trios and a piano-trio, 2 violin-suites and other chamber-works, pieces for piano and for organ, many songs, etc. A.

Foggia, Francesco (1605–1688). 17th C. G.

Fogliano, Giacomo (1473–1548). 16th C.

Fogliano, Ludovico (?–1539?). 16th C.

Foley, Allan James [Signor Foli] (Caher, 1835–1899, Southport, Eng.). Able Irish operatic bass, pupil of Bisaccia, making his début in 1862 at Catania, then in Italy, from 1864 at Paris, from 1865 at London, where he attained speedy recognition in both opera and concert, from 1878 in America and later throughout Europe and in Australia and South Africa. His voice was large and mellow, and his répertoire extensive. G. A.

Folville, Eugénie Émilie Juliette (Liège, 1870). Eminent Belgian violinist, pianist and composer, pupil of her father, Malherbes, Musin and Thomson, from 1879 appearing in concert and soon making a mark as composer. From 1898 she has been professor at the Liège Conservatory. Has written the opera Atala, 1892, the scena Eva, the symphonic poem Océano Nox, 3 orchestral suites (Scènes champêtres, de la mer and d'hiver), the choral Noces au Village and Chant de Noël, an Esquisse Symphonique, concertos for violin, for 'cello and for piano, a piano-quartet, a Suite Poétique for violin and other violin-pieces, a Poème for 'cello, 2 piano-sonatas, 24 large organ-pieces, motets a cappella and several books of songs.

Fontana, Giovanni Battista (?–1630). 17th C.

Fontana, Jules (Warsaw, 1810–1869, Paris). Polish pianist, pupil of Elsner (with Chopin, who remained his intimate friend), from 1830 teaching in London, with many tours (in America with Sivori in 1841–50), and then in Paris, where in 1855 he published Chopin's posthumous works, as well as piano-pieces of his own.

Foote, Arthur William, (Salem, Mass. 1853). Distinguished American pianist and composer, pupil of Emery, Lang and Paine, from 1878 till 1910 organist of the First (Unitarian) Church in Boston and active in every large musical enterprise there and elsewhere. In 1909–12 he was president of the Am. Guild of Organists. Mus.D. of Trinity College (Hartford) in 1919. Has written the overture In the Mountains, 1887, a Prologue to Francesca da Rimini, 1893, 3 orchestral suites (1886, '96, 1910), 2 of them for strings, 4 Character Pieces (after Omar Khayyám), 1912, a 'cello-concerto (1894), a piano-quintet (1898), 3 string-quartets (1885, '94, 1912?), a piano-quartet (1891), 2 piano-trios (1884, 1909), sonatas for violin and for 'cello, many other chamber-pieces (mostly for violin), a piano-suite and many pieces, an organ-suite and other works, the cantatas The Crewell of Hiawatha, 1886, The Wreck of the Hesperus, 1888, The Skeleton in Armor, 1893, etc., notable a cappella and other choruses, many anthems, over 100 striking songs, etc. His writing has marked individuality and strength of construction. Author of Modern Harmony, 1905 (with W. R. Spalding), and Modulation and Related Harmonic Questions, 1920. G, A.

Forchhammer, Theophil (Schiers, 1847). Able Swiss organist, trained at the Stuttgart Conservatory, since 1885 at Magdeburg Cathedral and holding honorary titles from 1888 and 1905. Has written a Führer durch d. Orgellitteratur, 1890 (with Brosig), an organ-concerto, 2 organ-sonatas, the fantasias Wo findet die Seele die Heimat? and Aus tiefer Noth (with men's chorus), many fine chorale-preludes, etc.

Ford, Ernest A. C. (London, 1858). English conductor and composer, pupil of Sullivan and Lalo, from 1888 accompanist and from 1891 conductor at London theaters (led the première of Sullivan's Ivanhoe in 1891), in 1897-1908 conductor of the Royal Amateur Orchestral Society and then professor at the Guildhall School. Has written the operas Daniel O'Rourke, 1884, and Joan, 1890, 3 other stage-works and several ballets, an orchestral Scène Bacchanale, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, the cantata The Eve of the Festa, the motet Domine Deus (250th anniversary of Harvard Univ.), songs, etc., and a Short History of Music in England, 1912. G.

Ford, Thomas (?1580-1648). 17th C. G.

Forkel, Johann Nikolaus (n. Coburg, 1749-1818, Göttingen). Able Saxon music-historian, from about 1775 organist and from 1778 music-director at Göttingen University (Ph.D. 1780). Author of Ueber d. Theorie d. Musik, 1777, Musikalische-kritische Bibliothek, 3 vols. 1778-79, Ueber d. beste Einrichtung öffentlicher Concerte, 1779, Genauere Bestimmung einiger musikal. Begriffe, 1780, Musikal. Almanach für Deutschland, 1782-84, '89, Allgem. Gesch. d. Musik, 2 vols. 1788-1801 (only to about 1550), Allgem. Literatur d. Musik, 1792, and the first critical biography of J. S. Bach, 1803. He was the pioneer in the fields of music-history and bibliography in Germany and exercised a remarkable influence upon later workers. His collected material for the continuation of his Geschichte went to the publisher Schwickert. He also made important rescripts of a long series of 16th-century masses which were engraved and ready for printing, but the plates were seized by the French after the battle of Jena (1806) and melted to make ammunition. Proofs are in the Berlin Library. He also wrote an oratorio, 2 cantatas, symphonies, trios, choruses, etc. Catalogue of his library issued in 1819. G.

Formes, Karl Johann (Mülheim, 1816-1889, San Francisco). Rhenish operatic bass, appearing at Cologne in 1842, from 1843 at Mannheim, in 1848 at Vienna, from 1849 in London, and after 1857 much in the United States, finally teaching in San Francisco. He had a superior voice and a fine stage-presence, but lacked the concentration of the thorough artist. Wrote reminiscences (1888) and a singing-method. G, A.

Formes, Theodor (Mülheim, 1826-1874, n. Bonn), brother of the above. Operatic tenor, appearing from 1846 at Ofen, Vienna, Mannheim and Berlin (1851-66), also touring in America with his brother. G.

Fornari, Vincenzo (Naples, 1848-1900, do.). Italian composer, pupil of Sira and Battista, writing the operas Maria di Torre, 1872, Salammbô e Zuma, 1881, and Un Dramma in Vendemmia, 1896.

Fornia-Labey, Rita, née Newman (San Francisco, 1878). American operatic soprano, pupil of Mme. Niklass-Kempner and J. de Reszké, making her début at Hamburg about 1900, from 1906 was with the Savage English Opera Company in America and since 1908 has sung at the Metropolitan, New York, with visits to Covent Garden, London. In 1910 she married James P. Labey of the Isle of Jersey. A.

Fornici, Jacopo (Verona, 1825-1858, Stockholm). Italian conductor and composer, from 1849 court-conductor at Stockholm. Wrote the operas Margherita, 1847, Cristina di Svezia and I Gladiatori, 1851, overtures and piano-pieces.

Forsell, John (Stockholm, 1868). Noted Swedish operatic baritone, trained at the Stockholm and Paris Conservatories, from 1896 almost constantly engaged at the Stockholm Royal Opera, but with many tours in Germany and France (both opera and concert) and in 1909-10 at the Metropolitan, New York.

Forster, Georg (?1514-1568). 16th C. G.

Forster, Georg (?-1587). 16th C.

Forster, Joseph (Trofaiach, 1845-1917, Vienna). Styrian civil engineer and composer (at Vienna) of the operas Die Wallfahrt der Königin, 1878, Die Rose von Pontevedra, 1893, and Der tod Mon, 1902, and 2 ballets (1881-83).

Forster, William (Brampton, 1739-1808, London). Able English violin-maker, working in London from 1759 and from 1781 adding the publication of many of Haydn's works. His instruments are much prized. His son William (1764-1824) continued the business with notable success. His grandson Simon Andrew (1801-1870) was not so good a workman, but wrote a History of the Violin, 1864 (with W. Sandys). G.

Förster, Alban (Reichenbach, 1849-1916, Neustrelitz). Saxon violinist, pupil of the Dresden Conservatory, after being concert-master at Karlsbad, Breslau and Stettin, from 1871 court-musician at Neustrelitz and conductor of the Singakademie, in 1881-82 teacher at the Dresden Conservatory and leader of the Liedertafel, and in 1882-1908, court-director at Neustrelitz, gaining the title of professor in 1903. Wrote a symphony, 2 string-quartets, 5 piano-trios, 3 violin-sonatas, 4 operas or other stage-works, etc.

Förster, Anton (Osojnitz, 1837), brother of Joseph below. Bohemian organist, trained at the Prague Organ School, at first organist at Zengg, Croatia, and in 1868-1909 cathedral-director at Laibach. Has written the opera

Goremjski Slavik, 1901, masses and text-books in theory.

Förster, Anton (Zengg, 1867–1915, Trieste), son of the proceeding. Croatian pianist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1898 teaching at the Stern Conservatory, Berlin, and in 1904–08 at the Scharwenka Conservatory there, then going for a time to the Chicago Musical College.

Förster, Christoph (n. Laucha, 1693–1745, Rudolstadt). Able Thuringian composer, pupil of Heinichen and G. F. Kauffmann, long court-musician at Merseburg and just before his death director at Rudolstadt. Wrote about 300 works, including over 25 church-cantatas and a mass, a profusion of orchestral and chamber-pieces that are interesting in the history of the overture and the sonata, etc. Monograph by Hartung, 1914.

Förster, Emanuel Aloys (n. Glatz, 1748–1823, Vienna). Austrian (Silesian) composer, long a teacher in Vienna. His style closely resembled that of Beethoven. Wrote over 50 sextets, quintets and quartets, piano-sonatas and variations, a Notturmo Concertante for strings and wind, a Huldigungskantate, piano-concertos, etc., besides an Anleitung zum Generalbass, 1805. Memoirs by Saltcheff, 1914, Weigt (in I. M. G. Sammelbde., 1905), and Ludwig (in I. M. G. Zeitschr. 1910). G.

Förster, Josef [Joseph] (Osojnitz, 1833–1907, Prague), brother of Anton (1) above. Bohemian church-musician, pupil of the Prague Organ School, from 1852 organist in or near Prague and from 1887 cathedral-organist there, besides teaching theory at the Conservatory. He was noted as a specialist in a cappella music. Wrote several masses and considerable organ-music, with a text-book in harmony.

Förster, Josef Bohuslav (Prague, 1859), son of the preceding. Bohemian composer, pupil of the Prague Conservatory, after marrying the opera-singer Bertha Lauterer went with her to Hamburg in 1892, becoming critic for the Nachrichten and from 1901 teacher at the Conservatory, but since 1903, when his wife was engaged at the Vienna Opera, at the New Conservatory there (Ondříček's). Has written the operas Deborah, 1893, Eva, 1899 (prize), Jessica, 1905, Der Ueberwinder, 1918, and Der Unbesiegten, 1919, 2 symphonies (Das Leben, 1896), the symphonic poem Meine Jugend, the orchestral suites Cyrano de Bergerac, In der Bergen and Shakespeare, a dramatic overture, a Slavische Phantasie, a Legende vom Glück, a Stabat Mater, the choral Hymnus der Engelscharen and Weihnachts Nacht, a violin-concerto, a string-quartet, 2 piano-trios, sonatas for violin and for 'cello, piano-pieces and songs. Sketch by Rejedly, 1910.

Förster, Kaspar (1617–1673). 17th C.

Forsyth, Cecil (Greenwich, 1870). English composer, trained at the Royal College, London, playing viola for a time in the Philharmonic and Queen's Hall Orchestras and becoming conductor of comic opera, since 1914 living in New York. Has written the operas Westward Ho! and Cinderella, 2 comic operas (with Scott-Gatty), 4 orchestral studies from Les Misérables, a viola-concerto and a Chant Celtique (viola and orchestra), chamber-music, Keats' Ode to a Nightingale (baritone and orchestra), part-songs and songs. Author of Music and Nationalism, 1911, Orchestration, 1914, a History of Music, 1916 (with Stanford), and Choral Orchestration, 1920, besides the section on 'The English Musical Renaissance' in The Art of Music, iii. A.

Fortlage, Karl (Osnabrück, 1806–1881, Jena). From 1846 professor of philosophy at Jena University, writing Das musikalische System d. Griechen in seiner Urgestalt, 1847, which (with works of Bellermann) helped to arouse historical investigation of Greek music, though itself not since entirely approved.

Förtsch, Johann Philipp (1652–1732). 17th C.

Foster, Muriel (Sunderland, 1877). Gifted English contralto, pupil of Anna Williams, appearing from 1896 in England, from 1901 in Canada, from 1902 in Germany and Holland, in 1903 in Russia and in 1904 in the United States. In 1906 she married Ludwig Goetz and has sung little in public since. As a lieder-singer she is as notable as in oratorio, and with her sister (Mrs. Bramwell) in 1899 made a marked impression in duets by Brahms and Cornelius. G.

Foster, Myles Birket (London, 1851–1922, do.). English organist and composer, pupil of Hamilton Clarke and the Royal Academy, London, in 1880–92 organist at the Foundling Hospital and choirmaster at St. Alban's, Holborn, besides till 1900 being editor for Boosey & Co. From 1888 he was examiner for Trinity College, part of the time in Australia and South Africa. Wrote the symphony Isle of Arran, overtures, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, many children's cantatas, services, anthems, etc., besides Anthems and Anthem-Composers, 1901, and a history of the Philharmonic Society (1922). G.

Foster, Stephen Collins (Pittsburgh, 1826–1864, New York). American song-composer from about 1842 and especially about 1850, when he put forth melodies so spontaneous that they became household words almost like folk-songs (often writing text as well as music). Memoirs by his brother, Morrison Foster, 1896, and H. V. Milligan, 1920, and bibliography of works by Whittlesey and Sonneke, 1915, besides many articles and sketches. G. A.

Fouque, Pierre Octave (Pau, 1844–1883, do.). French critic, pupil of R. Becker, Chauvet and A. Thomas, from 1876 librarian at the Paris Conservatory and critic for the République Française and other papers. Wrote La Musique en Angleterre avant Haendel, Histoire du Théâtre Ventadour, 1881, Les Révolutionnaires de la Musique, 1882, and lives of Lesueur and Glinka (1880).

Fourdrain, Félix (b. 1880). Composer of the stage-works La Grippe, Écho, 1906, La Légende du Point d'Argent, 1907, La Glaneuse, 1909, Vercingétorix, 1912, Madame Roland, 1913, and Les Contes de Perrault, 1913.

Fournier, Émile Eugène (Paris, 1864–1897, n. do.). French composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (2d Prix de Rome, 1891, and Prix Cressent, 1892), living only to produce the operas Stratonice, 1892, and Carloman, with some songs.

Fournier, Pierre Simon (Paris, 1712–1768, do.). French type-founder, about 1750 introducing the modern round-headed notes (description in 1756). Also wrote a history of music-typography (1765). G.

Fox, Charlotte, née Milligan (Omagh, 1860–1916, London). Irish amateur, in 1904 founding the Irish Folk-Song Society and writing Annals of the Irish Harpers, 1911.

Fox, Félix (Breslau, 1876). French-Silesian pianist, brought to Boston as a child, trained there and at Leipzig and by Philipp (as Helbig Scholar), appearing at Leipzig and Paris in 1896–97 and then in America. In 1898, with Carlo Buonamici (d. 1920), he started a successful piano-school in Boston. A.

Frادkin, Fredric (Troy, N. Y. 1892). Russian-American violinist, trained by Schradieck, Bendix, Franko, Lichtenberg, G. Rémy, Lefort, and Ysaÿe, concertmaster at Bordeaux in 1909–10, at Monte Carlo in 1910–11, at Vienna in 1912–13, of the Russian Symphony Orchestra, New York, in 1914–15, of the Diaghilev Ballet there in 1915–17 and of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1918–19. In 1911–14 he twice toured in England. A.

Fraemcke, August (Hamburg, 1870). North German pianist, trained at the Hamburg and Vienna Conservatories (prizes at the latter), from 1876 making wide tours in Scandinavia, Russia, etc., and since 1906 with C. Hein) head of the New York College of Music and the German Conservatory. A.

Fragerolle, George Auguste (Paris, 1855–1920, do.). French composer of many popular patriotic songs and several operettas (from 1886).

Framery, Nicolas Étienne (Rouen, 1745–1810, Paris). French writer, author of biographical and historical sketches (from 1791), a textbook in counterpoint (2 vols. 1786), essays on poetical rhythm in relation to music (1790, 1802), a translation of Azopardi's Musico Pratico (1786), contributions to the Encyclopédie Méthodique, 1791, and a pamphlet against Gluck (1776). Also wrote an opera (1783). G.

Franc, Guillaume (? –1570). 16th C. G.

Francesco da Milano. 16th C.

Franchetti, Alberto, Barone (Turin, 1860). Italian composer, pupil of Coccon, Magi and the Dresden and Munich Conservatories, leading to a career in which technical skill in certain directions has been combined with the advantages of much wealth. Has written the operas Asrael, 1888, Cristoforo Colombo, 1892, Fior d'Alpe, 1894, Signor di Pourceaugnac, 1897, Germania, 1902, La Figlia di Jorio, 1906, Notte di Leggenda, 1914, Giove a Pompei, 1921 (with Giordano), and Glauco, 1922, a symphony and some other orchestral and chamber-music. G.

Franchi-Verney, Giuseppe Ippolito, Conte della Valetta (Turin, 1848–1911, Rome). Italian lawyer and critic, graduated in law at Turin University in 1867, but in 1874 for reasons of health turning to musical studies under Marchisio and Tempia, from 1875 wrote for the Gazzetta del Popolo and other papers, besides joining with others in founding the Società della Quartetto in 1875 and the Accademia di Canto Corale in 1876, both at Turin. His pen-name was 'Ippolito Valetta.' In 1889 he married the violinist Teresa Tua. Wrote the lyric sketch Il Valdese, 1885, and the very successful ballet Il Mulatto, 1896.

Franchomme, Auguste (Lille, 1808–1884, Paris). Remarkable French 'cellist, pupil of Levasseur and Norblin, from 1826 playing in various orchestras, especially from 1828 at the Italiens, and soon joining Alard and Hallé in notable chamber-soirées. After 1831 he was a close friend of Chopin, and was also intimate with Mendelssohn. From 1846 he was professor at the Conservatory. After Duport's death in 1819 he obtained the latter's famous Stradivarius, for which he paid $5000. Wrote a concerto, many adagios, potpourris and variations, besides collaborating with Chopin, Bertini and Osborne in works for 'cello and piano. G.

Franck, César Auguste (Liège, 1822–1890, Paris). Distinguished Belgian organist and composer, trained at the Liège and Paris Conservatories (many prizes at the latter, but did not enter for the Prix de Rome). From 1844 he settled in Paris as a teacher, in 1853 becoming choirmaster at Ste.-Clotilde and in 1857 organist, besides from 1872 being professor at the Conservatory, succeeding Benoist. Here he became the leader of the new school of French instrumental composition, not only forming a long line of famous pupils, but setting an exalted pattern in his own works. His genius presented a notable combination of vigorous and independent intellectuality, instinctive command of all the resources of design and structure, and a highly characteristic quality of mystic imagination and intensity. The tendency of his art was wholly different from the sensuous sensationalism that had marked French music just before his day, yet at the same time the delicacy, precision and symmetry of his style fully corresponded to traits that are essentially French, so that the revolution of interest that he aroused did not break the general continuity of national development.

A summary of his works includes

Orchestral Works

Symphony in D (1889).

Symphonic Poems—Les Éolides (1876), Le Chasseur Maudit (1882), Les Djinns, with piano (1884),

Psyché, with chorus (1888). Also Variations Symphoniques, with piano (1885), and Morceau Symphonique from Rédemption (1885).

Chamber-Works

Piano-quintet in F min. (1879). Also Solo de Piano, with strings.

String-quartet in D (1889).

Piano-trios in F-sharp, B-flat, B min. (1842) and B (1843).

Violin-sonata in A (1886). Also piano-violin duet on themes from Dalayrac's Gulistan, and Andantino Quiescente for violin and piano.

Choral Works

Oratorios—Ruth, 1846, Le Tour de Babel, 1865, Rédemption, 1873 (revised 1874), Les Béatitudes, 1879, Rebecca, 1881.

Church-music—a mass for 3 soli, chorus and orchestra, 3 offertories, Hymne for men's voices, 9 motets, Chants d'Eglise with organ, etc.

National songs—Les Trois Exilés, Le Garde d'Honneur.

Operas

Le Valet de Ferme, 1852; Hulda (1885), 1894; Gisèle (1890, orchestration of acts ii-iv completed by d'Indy, Chausson, Bréville, Rousseau and Coquard), 1896.

Piano-Works

Éplogue (1843), Duet on God Save the King (1843), Caprice, Souvenir d'Air-la-Chapelle, Ballad (1844), 4 Fantasies (1844-45). Duet on Lucile, transcriptions of 4 Schubert songs.

Sonata; Prélude, Choral et Fugue; Prélude, Aria et Finale.

Organ-Works

Fantasia in C; Grande Pièce Symphonique; Prélude, Fugue et Variations; Pastorale; Prière; Finale; 9 Grandes Pièces; transcriptions from old works. Also over 20 songs.

Memoirs by Coquard, 1890 (2d ed. 1904), Destranges, 1896, Dérépas, 1897, Meyer, 1898, Garnier, 1900, Baldensperger, 1901, Canudo, 1905, Van den Borren, 1906, d'Indy, 1906, Séré, 1911, May de Rudder, 1920, etc. G.

Franck, Eduard (Breslau, 1817-1893, Berlin). Silesian pianist, educated at Breslau and in Italy, appearing from 1846 at Berlin and soon becoming teacher at the Cologne Conservatory, from 1859 at the Bern Music-School (gaining the title of music-director and also Ph.D. from the Univ.), and from 1867 at the Stern Conservatory, Berlin, and from 1886 also at Breslauer's Seminary. Wrote a symphony, 2 overtures and an orchestral fantasia, a piano-concerto, 2 string-sextets, a string-quintet, a piano-quintet, 2 string-quartets, 2 piano-trios, 2 violin- and 1 'cello-sonatas, duets for two pianos, 9 piano-sonatas, many other large piano-works, etc.

Franck, Johann Wolfgang (?1641-after 1695). 17th C.

Franck, Joseph (Liège, 1820-1891, Paris), brother of César above. Belgian organist in Paris, writing masses, motets, cantatas, piano-concertos, etc., besides text-books in theory, plain-song and piano-playing.

Franck, Melchior (?1573-1639). 17th C. G.

Franck, Richard (Cologne, 1858). Excellent Rhenish pianist and composer, trained at the Stern Conservatory (Berlin) and the Leipzig Conservatory and University, in 1880-83 and also 1887-90 at the Basel Music School, in 1883-87 at Berlin and Magdeburg, from 1900 for a time choral conductor at Kassel and then living in Heidelberg. Has written 2 overtures, the tone-poem Amor und Psyche, an orchestral suite, a piano-concerto, 2 piano-quartets, 2 piano-trios, sonatas for violin, for 'cello and for piano, many piano-pieces and the choral work Worte der Liebe.

Frankenstein, Clemens, Freiherr von (Wiesentheid, 1875). Bavarian conductor, pupil of Thuille and the Frankfort Conservatory, after a sojourn in America and work in London in 1902-07, from 1907 conductor at the Wiesbaden Opera and soon at the Berlin Opera, and in 1912-18 in charge of the Munich Opera. Has written the operas Griseldis, 1898, Fortunatus, 1909, and Rahab, 1911, several orchestral works and many songs.

Franco of Cologne. 13th C. G.

Franco of Paris. 13th C. G.

Franccœur, François (Paris, 1698-1787, do.). French violinist, playing in the orchestra of the Opéra when but twelve and there soon joined by Rebel, with whom in 1733-44 he shared successive promotions (concertmasters in 1733-44, inspectors in 1752-53, managers in 1757-67 and 1772-75), as well as being chamber-musician to Louis XV and from 1760 court-director. Wrote 2 books of violin-sonatas and (with Rebel) 10 operas (1726-49). G.

Franccœur, Louis Joseph (Paris, 1738-1804, do.), nephew of the above. French violinist, playing in the Opéra orchestra, in 1764 becoming assistant-conductor and in 1767 chief, and in 1792 director of the Opéra just before the Revolution. Wrote several operas (one given in 1766), one of the first text-books on playing wind-instruments (about 1772) and an unpublished essay on the history of early French opera. G.

Frank, Ernst (Munich, 1847-1889, n. Vienna). Able Bavarian conductor, pupil of Mortier de Fontaine and Franz Lachner, from about 1865 court-organist at Munich and rehearsal-leader at the Opera, in 1868 director at Würzburg, from 1869 chorusmaster at the Vienna Opera, besides directing the Singakademie and the Akademischer Gesangverein, from 1872 court-director at Mannheim, from 1877 director at the Frankfort Opera, and in 1879-87 Von Bülow's successor as conductor at the Hanover Opera. At Mannheim he produced Goetz' Der Widerspenstigen Zähmung and Francesca da Rimini (1874, '77), and made German versions of Stanford's Veiled Prophet and Savonarola, as well as of Mackenzie's Colomba. Wrote the operas Adam de la Halle, 1880, Hero, 1884, and Der Sturm, 1887, and numerous songs, duets and part-songs. G.

Frankenberger, Heinrich (n. Sondershausen, 1824-1885, do.). Saxon violinist and harpist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1847 in the Sondershausen court-orchestra, becoming assistant-conductor. Wrote 3 operas (1847-63), many text-books, etc.

Franklin, Benjamin (Boston, 1706-1790, Philadelphia). Famous American publicist, noted for his share in making the harmonica or 'musical glasses' a practical instrument, if he did not absolutely invent it (about 1760). As a printer, he was connected with some of the earliest music-publishing in America (in Philadelphia). He played the guitar well, was much interested in practical music and wrote more or less upon musical aesthetics (1765). G. A.

Franko, Sam (New Orleans, 1857). American violinist and conductor, pupil of Joachim, Vieuxtemps, Léonard and Hollaender, in 1871-80 concertizing in Germany and at Paris, from 1880 played in the Mendelssohn Quintette Club of Boston, from 1884 was in Thomas' Orchestra in New York, becoming concertmaster, besides playing viola in the Philharmonic Society and for many years giving chamber-music concerts. In 1900-09 he gave orchestral programs of 17th-18th century music, which in 1910-14 he continued at Berlin. Since 1915 he has been active again in New York along similar lines, besides teaching many able pupils. Has written many violin-pieces and made valuable transcriptions of rare works. G.

Franz, Karl (Langenbielau, 1738-1802, Munich). Silesian hornist and noted virtuoso on the baryton, in court-service at Olmütz from 1758, at Eisenstadt from 1763 (under Haydn), at Presburg from 1776, and at Munich from 1784. G.

Franz, Robert (Halle, 1815-1892, do.) [name originally Knauth, dropped after 1847]. Eminent Saxon song-composer and musical editor, pupil of Fr. Schneider, but with diligent self-culture, becoming known in 1843 as a genius highly valued by discerning critics. He soon was made organist at the Ulrichskirche in Halle, after a time conductor of the Singakademie and in 1859 music-director at the University (Ph.D. 1861). But even soon after 1840 his hearing became slightly impaired and other symptoms of nervous disorder gradually appeared. By 1864 he was almost totally deaf and was subject to painful hallucinations, so that in 1868 he was forced to retire from all public work. To aid in his support a fund of about $25,000 was raised by admirers in Germany and America. Meanwhile he turned largely from composition to the elaborate revision for modern presentation of numerous great works of Bach and Handel, in which he achieved a second striking reputation. His place as one of the greatest masters of the song was made secure by a series of more than 350 works. The extreme sympathy and fullness of expression of these, with their extraordinary perfection of workmanship, set him at once in the same high rank with Schubert and Schumann. His peculiar gift doubtless was more akin to that of Schumann, but had its own intense individuality. Besides the songs he wrote Psalm 117 (8-part) and a Kyrie (4-part) for chorus a cappella, a choral liturgy for the Evangelical service, 12 part-songs and 6 chorals. His most important arrangements or revised editions were of Bach's St. Matthew Passion, Christmas Oratorio, Magnificat, Funeral Ode and 10 cantatas, and of Handel's Messiah, L' Allegro, Jubilate and about 35 arias or duets from operas. He also published monographs on the Bach Magnificat (1863) and on the principles of such revisions (1871), these being included in his Gesammelte Schriften, 1910, edited by Bethge. Memoirs by Liszt, 1855, Schuster, 1874, La Mara (in Musikal. Studienköpfe, iii), Waldmann, 1894, Procházka, 1894, Golther, 1907 (letters), Bethge, 1908, etc. G.

Fränzl, Ferdinand (Schwetzingen, 1770-1833, Mannheim), son of the following. Able Badense violinist, pupil of his father, Richter, Pleyel and Mattei, from 1782 in the electoral orchestra at Munich, becoming concertmaster in 1789 and Karl Cannabich's successor as director in 1806, but with long tours from 1784 in France, Italy and Russia (1802). He retired on pension in 1827. Wrote a symphony, overtures, 9 violin-concertos, a double concerto for two violins, 6 string-quartets, violin-trios and duets, several operas and operettas, the choral work Das Reich der Töne, etc. G.

Fränzl, Ignaz (Mannheim, 1736-1811, do.). Badense violinist, from 1747 in the Mannheim Orchestra, in 1774 becoming concertmaster, but not continuing when the orchestra was transferred to Munich in 1778. In 1790-1803 he was director of the court-opera at Mannheim. Before this he made wide concert-tours with his son (see above). Wrote a variety of orchestral and chamber-music.

Frauenlob. See Heinrich von Meissen.

Frederick the Great [Friedrich II.], King of Prussia (Berlin, 1712-1786, Potsdam). Musically noted as flutist and patron, pupil of Hayn and Quantz. From 1734 he maintained a band at Reinsburg and from 1740 (as king) set up a more ambitious establishment at Potsdam and in 1742 erected a new opera-house in Berlin. In 1746 he issued an order for regular discipline in singing in all public schools and gymnasia in the kingdom. He acquired most of the earliest Silbermann pianos. Wrote over 100 works, mostly for flute, but including an opera (1747), an overture, marches, etc. Memoirs (musical) by K. F. Müller, 1847, and Thourret, 1895, '98. G.

Frédérix, Gustave (Liège, 1834-1894, Brussels). Well-known Belgian critic of literature, art, the drama and music, from 1859 writing for the Indépendance Belge. Works published in 1900.

Frege, Livia, née Gerhard (Gera, 1818-1891, Leipzig). Gifted Saxon singer, pupil of Pohlenz, first appearing at Leipzig in 1832 (with Clara Wieck) and making her stage-début in 1833, in 1835-36 at the Berlin Opera, but later (after marrying Dr. Woldemar Frege) singing only in concert. She was a valued friend of Mendelssohn and David, and long maintained a select chorus of 50 voices (conducted by H. Langer, band led by David). See dissertation on Leipzig musical society by F. Schmidt, 1912. G.

Freiberg, Otto (Naumburg, 1846). Saxon violinist and conductor, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and V. Lachner, from 1865 in the Karlsruhe court-orchestra, from 1880 director at Marburg University and from 1887 at Göttingen University, retiring in 1920.

Fremstad, Olive Nayan (Stockholm, 1870?). Eminent Swedish operatic soprano, brought to America at twelve and early giving high promise, from 1890 pupil of F. E. Bristol (New York) and later of Lilli Lehmann, making her stage-début in 1895 at Cologne, where she was regularly engaged in 1897–1900 (with many appearances elsewhere), then at the Munich Opera till 1903, when she came to the Metropolitan, New York, continuing there till 1914 and then touring. In 1906–11 she was the wife of Edson Sutphen and since 1916 of Harry L. Brainard. A.

Frere, Walter Howard (Cambridge, 1863). English clergyman, since 1892 of the Community of the Resurrection (Mirfield) and in 1902–13 and since 1916 its Superior. Has published many important studies in English liturgical history, including Bibliotheca Musica Liturgica, 1901, editions of the Sarum service-books (1894–1902), Ravenscroft's Psalter (1888), etc.

Freschi, Giovanni Domenico (1640–1690).

Frescobaldi, Girolamo (1583–1643). G.

Freudenberg, Wilhelm (n. Neuwied, 1838). Prussian conductor and composer, educated in theology and music in Leipzig, from 1861 theater-conductor at various places, from 1865 choral conductor at Wiesbaden, where in 1870 he started a conservatory, in 1886 (with Mengevin) head of a music-school in Berlin, from 1887 opera-conductor at Augsburg and Ratisbon, and since 1895 choirmaster at the Wilhelm-Gedächtniskirche in Berlin. Has written the operas Die Pfahlbauer, 1877, Die Nebenbuhler, 1879, Kleopatra, 1882 (revised 1898), Die Mühle im Wispertale, 1883, Der St. Katherinentag in Palermo, 1889, Marino Faliero, 1889, Die Johannisnacht, 1896, and Das Jahrmarktsfest zu Plundersweilern, 1908, besides 2 not yet produced, the symphonic poem Ein Tag in Sorrent, incidental music to Romeo and Juliet, the overture Durch Dunkel zum Licht, other orchestral pieces, motets, men's choruses, piano- and violin-works, songs, etc., and a Lehre von d. Intervallen.

Freund, John Christian (London, 1848). English editor, since 1871 active in New York, from 1893 establishing The Music Trades, Musical America and other journals, besides in 1917 starting the Musical Alliance of the United States. A.

Frey, Adolph (Landau, 1865). Bavarian pianist, pupil of Mme. Schumann, Faiszt and Brahms, from 1887 musician to Prince Alexander of Hesse and since 1893 professor at Syracuse (N. Y.) University (Mus.D. in 1914). A.

Frey, Emil (Baden, 1889). Swiss pianist, pupil of R. Freund (Zurich), Rehberg, Barblan, Diémer and Widor, from 1910 court-pianist at Berlin and since 1917 at Zurich. In 1910 his piano-trio in F-sharp min. won the Rubinstein prize at Petrograd.

Freylinghausen, Johann Anastasius (Gandersheim, 1670–1739, Halle). From 1695 school-teacher in Halle, publishing two important collections of church-melodies (1704, '14), with many later editions.

Frezzolini, Erminia (Orvieto, 1818–1884, Paris). Italian operatic soprano, trained by the elder Ronconi, Garcia and Tacchinardi, from 1838 popular in Italy, with visits to Vienna (1841), London (from 1842), Petrograd (1848–50), Paris (1853) and America (1857–58), retiring about 1860. The leading rôle in Verdi's I Lombardi (1843) was written for her.

Friberth, Karl (n. Vienna, 1736–1816, do.). Austrian church-musician, pupil of Bonno and Gassmann, from 1759 in Prince Esterhazy's choir at Eisenstadt and from 1776 choirmaster at the Jesuiten- and Minoritenkirchen at Vienna. Wrote 9 masses, a Requiem and much other church-music. G.

Frick [Frike], Philipp Joseph (Würzburg, 1740–1798, London). Bavarian organist and pianist, at first court-organist at Baden-Baden, then for a time touring as a performer on the harmonica, and from 1780 teaching in London. Wrote text-books in modulation (1772) and harmony (1786, '93). G.

Fricke, August Gottfried Ludwig (Brunswick, 1829–1894, Berlin). Operatic bass, pupil of Meinhardt, appearing from 1851 at Brunswick and other German cities and in 1856–86 at the Berlin Opera, where he was greatly admired.

Frickenhaus, Fanny, née Evans (Cheltenham, 1849). Able English pianist, pupil of Mount, Dupont and W. Bohrer, since 1879 active in London as soloist and in numerous chamber-music enterprises, producing many novelties. G.

Fricke, Herbert Austin (Canterbury, 1868). English organist, pupil of Longhurst and J. F. Bridge, from 1884 Longhurst's assistant at Canterbury Cathedral, from 1890 at Folkestone, from 1898 city-organist at Leeds, besides in 1900–17 conducting the Philharmonic Society there and in 1904–13 being chorusmaster for the Festivals, and since 1917 Vogt's successor as leader of the Mendelssohn Choir in Toronto and organist of the Metropolitan Church. Has written an organ-overture, other organ-pieces, a cantata, anthems, choruses and songs. A.

Friderici, Daniel. 17th C. G.

Fried, Oscar (Berlin, 1871). Eminent Prussian conductor, pupil of Humperdinck and Ph. Scharwenka, for a long time hornist in various orchestras, in 1904–10 conductor of the Stern Gesangverein in Berlin, since 1907 also of the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde and from 1910 of important orchestral concerts devoted to novelties. Has written the choral works Das trunkene Lied, Erntelied and Verklärte Nacht, a prelude and double fugue for strings, an Andante and Scherzo for wind, harps and drums, choruses for women's voices and songs. Sketches by Bekker, 1907, and Stefan, 1911.

Friedberg, Karl Rudolf Hermann (Bingen, 1872). Fine Rhenish pianist, trained at the Frankfort Conservatory, making his début in 1892 at Vienna, from 1893 professor at the Frankfort Conservatory, in 1904-14 at the Cologne Conservatory, with many tours in Europe and after 1914 in America, where in 1916-17 he taught at the Inst. of Musical Art, New York. Since 1918 he has lived in Munich. A.

Friedenthal, Albert (Bromberg, 1862-1921, in Java). Prussian pianist, pupil of Agath, Steinbrunn and Th. Kullak, since 1882 concertizing throughout the world with success, then living in Berlin. Has written Stimmen der Völker, 5 parts, Das Weib im Leben der Völker, 2 vols. 1911, Musik, Tanz u. Dichtung bei den Kreolen Amerikas, 1913, and Das flämische Volkslied, 6 parts, 1918.

Friedheim, Arthur (Petrograd, 1859). Eminent German-Russian pianist, pupil of Rubinstein and especially Liszt, becoming a noted exponent of the latter's music. From 1886 he lived in Leipzig, in 1891-95 toured in America, was then (till 1904) professor at the Manchester Royal-College, but in 1900-01 taught in Chicago, lived in London and (1908-10) in Munich, and since 1910 has been mainly in the United States and Canada, with headquarters now in New York. In early life he had much experience as theater-conductor and is recognized as a competent director (in 1898 was named as Seidl's successor in New York, but did not accept). Has written the operas The Last Days of Pompeii (not given) and Die Tänzerin, 1904 (Cologne), besides 2 others unfinished, an overture (1877), a piano-concerto (1880), and arrangements of one or two works of Liszt. He has written often for periodicals and is at work on a commentary on the Liszt biographies. G, A.

Friedländer, Max (Brieg, 1852). Eminent Silesian musicologist, early trained as a singer by Garcia and Stockhausen (appearing in London from 1880), studied music-history under Spitta and graduated from Rostock University (Ph.D. 1887), and since 1894 has been teacher or professor at Berlin University (retired in 1921), in 1903 succeeding Bellermann as academical director and in 1918 becoming emeritus. He received the title of royal professor in 1903. In 1911 he lectured at Harvard University and was made LL.D. by the Univ. of Wisconsin. He has specialized on the life and works of Schubert, writing the dissertation Beiträge zur Biographie Schuberts, 1887, discovering more than 100 of his songs not before known (given in Peters edition), and publishing two trios for piano (4-hands) in the Riemann Festschrift, 1909. With Bolte and Meier he has long been collecting unedited German folk-songs, issuing 100 Deutsche Volkslieder, 1885, and was first a member and from 1912 chairman of the commission publishing the Volksliederbuch für Männerchor, 1906, and another for mixed chorus. He has edited afresh the songs of Schubert, Schumann and Mendelssohn, the Scottish songs of Beethoven and a revised Kommersbuch. Has also written on the musical settings of Goethe's poems (1893), on Das deutsche Lied im 19. Jahrh. 2 vols. 1902, on Mozart's songs (1910), on Das Grossvaterlied u. der Grossvateranzug, 1918, and Zuccalmaglio u. das Volkslied, 1918, etc. G.

Friedmann, Ignaz (n. Cracow, 1832). Able Galician pianist, pupil of Riemann, Adler and Leschetizky, since 1905 becoming widely known throughout Europe and both Americas, especially as an exponent of Chopin. Has written a piano-quintet, a Passacaglia for piano and many other fine piano-works, 'cello-pieces, songs, etc., and has edited the recent Breitkopf & Hartel edition of Chopin's works (12 vols.) and also Neupert's Études. Until the war he lived in Berlin, but then removed to Copenhagen.

Fries, Wulf Christian Julius (Garbeck, 1825-1902, Boston). Able Holstein 'cellist, mostly self-taught, from 1842 employed in theater-orchestras in Bergen and in Ole Bull's concerts there, but in 1847 (with his brother August) coming to Boston, where in 1849-70 he was a leading spirit in the noted Mendelssohn Quintette Club, the Harvard Musical Association and the Musical Fund Society, and from 1873 played in the Beethoven Quartette. A.

Frigel, Per (Kalmar, 1750-1842, Stockholm). Swedish composer, pupil of Naumann and Uttini, from 1778 connected in various capacities with the Musical Academy in Stockholm, retiring in 1830. Wrote the opera Eremiten, 1798, the oratorio Försonaren på Oljoberget, 1815, various cantatas, etc., in the strict classical style.

Friml, Charles Rudolf (Prague, 1881). Bohemian pianist and composer, trained at the Prague Conservatory, in 1901-06 touring with Kubelik and since 1906 living in New York. Has written a piano-concerto (1906), pieces for violin and for 'cello, many effective piano-works, songs and several extremely melodious light operas, especially The Firefly, 1912, High Jinks, 1913, and Katinka, 1915. A.

Frimmel, Theodor von (Amstetten, 1853). Austrian physician and since 1884 director of art-galleries in Vienna. He has specialized on Beethoven, publishing Beethoven und Goethe, 1883, Neue Beethoveniana, 1887 (2d ed. 1890), Josef Danhauser u. Beethoven, 1892, Beethovens Wohnungen in Wien, 1894, Ritratti e Caricature di Beethoven, 1897 (in Rivista Musicale), a short biography in Riemann's Berühmte Musiker (1901, 4th ed. 1912), Beethoven-Studien, 2 parts, 1905-06, and an article on Beethoven's early years in the Munich Allgem. Zeitung, 1898, besides editing in 1908-09 a Beethoven-Jahrbuch, continued since 1911 at intervals as Beethoven-Forschung (8 nos. to 1918).

Frischen, Josef (Garzweiler, 1863). Rhenish conductor and composer, trained at the Cologne Conservatory, from 1888 city-conductor at Lucerne, and since 1892 choral and orchestral director at Hanover and Brunswick. Has written the choral works Athenischer Frühlingsreigen, Vineta and Grenzen der Menschheit, the orchestral Herbstnacht and Rheinisches Scherzo, a string-quartet and part-songs for men's voices.

Frischenschlager, Friedrich Friedwig (Gross-Florian, 1885). Styrian composer, at first a school-teacher, then pupil of the Gratz Music School and the Berlin Hochschule, since 1918 librarian and teacher at the Mozarteum in Salzburg. Has written Symphonische Aphorismen, a patriotic overture, an orchestral Rhapsodie, the suite Bilder aus der Heimat for small orchestra, the choral works Triumph des Lebens, Felsenstimmen and Gebet, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, many songs for children, the song-cycle Lieder der Sehnsucht, trio-canons, etc.

Friskin, James (Glasgow, 1886). Gifted Scottish pianist and composer, trained at the Royal College, London. Has written an orchestral suite (1904), a piano-quintet, a Phantasy for piano and string-quartet, a string-quartet, a violin-sonata, a 'cello-sonata, a Phantasy-Trio, characteristic piano-pieces, motets on old Psalm-tunes, etc. In 1916 he appeared as pianist in New York. G. A.

Fritz, Barthold (n. Brunswick, 1697-1766, do.). Self-taught maker of organs, harpsichords and clavichords at Brunswick, producing about 500 instruments of good quality. Wrote a manual on tuning by fifths and octaves (1756 and later). G.

Fritze, Wilhelm (Bremen, 1842-1881, Stuttgart). North German pianist, pupil of Sobolewski, the Leipzig Conservatory, Von Bülow and Weitzmann, later also of Kiel. After tours in France and Italy and teaching at Glogau, in 1867-77 conductor of the Liegnitz Singakademie and from 1879 in Stuttgart. Wrote the symphony Die Jahreszeiten, the oratorios Fingal and David, concertos for piano and for violin, piano-sonatas and other pieces, part-songs, songs, a Sanctus, Benedictus and Agnus Dei for soli, chorus and orchestra, etc. Memoir by Musiol, 1883.

Fritzsch, Ernst Wilhelm (Lützen, 1840-1902, Leipzig). Saxon publisher, educated at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1862 employed as violinist at Bern, but after 1866 successor to the business of Bromnitz at Leipzig, where he was also long a member of the Gewandhaus Orchestra. He published Wagner's Gesammelte Schriften and many works of the new school generally, from 1870 edited the Musikal. Wochenblatt, in 1875 started the Musikal. Hausblätter, and from 1883 engaged in making adiphones with the inventor, Fischer, as well as pianos.

Fritzsche, Gottfried. 17th C.

Friz [Fritz], Gaspard (Geneva, 1716-1782, do.). Able Swiss violinist and composer, pupil of Somis. Wrote 6 symphonies, 4 quintets, trio-sonatas, 12 violin-sonatas, a clavier-concerto, etc.

Proberger, Johann Jakob (?1605-1667). 17th C. G.

Fröhlich, Anna [Nanette] (Vienna, 1793-1880, do.). Austrian singer, friend of Schubert and Grillparzer and instigator of several of the former's works, in 1819-54 favorite teacher at the Vienna Conservatory. Her sisters were Barbara (1797-1879), alto-singer and painter, wife of the flutist Bogner, Josephine (1803-1878), from 1821 well known as a singer at Vienna, in Scandinavia and Italy, and Katharina (1800-1879), not technically a musician, but the special friend of Grillparzer. G.

Fröhlich, Johannes Frederik (Copenhagen, 1806-1860, do.). Gifted Danish violinist, pupil of Schall, from 1827 chorusmaster at the Copenhagen Opera, from 1836 Schall's successor as concertmaster, but laid aside by ill-health in 1842. Wrote a symphony (1833), 4 string-quartets, sonatas for violin and for flute, music for four of Bournonville's ballets (from 1835), etc.

Fröhlich, Joseph (Würzburg, 1780-1862, do.). Bavarian teacher, educated at the Würzburg University, where in 1804 he started the Institut that in 1820 became the Royal Music School, remaining its head till 1858. He also lectured on æsthetics and pedagogy from 1812. Wrote vocal and instrumental methods, a life of Vogler (1845), various essays for periodicals and for Ersch and Gruber's Encyclopädie (from 1818), the opera Scipio, masses, a Requiem, symphonies, part-songs, etc.

Fromm, Andreas. 17th C.

Fromm, Emil (Spremburg, 1835). Prussian organist, pupil of Grell, A. W. Bach and Schneider, from 1859 cantor at Kottbus and since 1869 organist at Flensburg, where he founded a choral society, gaining the title of director in 1896. Has written an oratorio, 2 cantatas, organ-pieces and men's choruses.

Fromm-Michaelis, Ilse (Hamburg, 1888). Gifted pianist, pupil of the Berlin Hochschule, Kwast, Friedberg, Pfitzner and Steinbach, marrying a naval officer and since 1915 living at Cuxhaven. Has written piano-works of interest.

Frontini, F. Paolo (Catania, 1860). Sicilian composer, pupil of Platania and L. Rossi, becoming head of the Catania Music Institute. Has written the operas Nella, 1881, Malta, 1893, Il Falconiere, 1899, and Aleramo, the oratorio Sansone, 1882, a Requiem, orchestral pieces, over 100 songs, etc., and edited a collection of Sicilian popular songs.

Frost, Charles Joseph (n. Bristol, 1848). English organist, pupil of his father, Cooper, Goss and Steggall, from 1865 holding various appointments, including from 1880 a professorship at the Guildhall School, London, and from 1884 at Brockley (Surrey), where he founded a choral society. Mus.D. of Cambridge Univ. in 1882. Has written the oratorio Nathan's Parable, 1878, 2 cantatas (1876, '80), Psalms 92 and 137, a Festival Te Deum and much other church-music, a symphony, an organ-sonata and other pieces, songs, etc.

Frost, Henry Frederick (London, 1848–1901, do.). English organist, pianist and critic, trained as a choirboy at St. George's, Windsor, in 1865–91 organist at the Chapel Royal (Savoy), in 1880–88 piano-teacher at the Guildhall School, London, and from 1874 writing for various London papers, including the Academy and the Athenæum. Wrote a life of Schubert (1881) and edited Savoy Hymn-Tunes and Chants.

Frotzler, Carl (Stockerau, 1873). Precocious Austrian organist and composer, pupil of his father and the Vienna Conservatory, from 1887 playing at a Stockerau church and pianist to Prince Heinrich Reuss, from 1893 employed by Prince Esterházy, and since 1897 opera-director at Linz. Has written the operas Arnelda, 1894, Der Liebesring and Mathias Corvinus, 1896, a symphony, an orchestral suite and scherzo, masses and other church-music, piano-pieces, etc.

Frugatta, Giuseppe (Bergamo, 1860). Italian pianist, pupil of Bazzini and Andreoli, early becoming professor at the Milan Conservatory and the Girls' College there. Has written a piano-quintet (with clarinet), a string-quartet (St. Cecilia prize, 1898), a piano-trio, sonata and smaller works, with introductory studies for Clementi's Gradus.

Fry, Henry S. (Pottstown, Pa., 1875). American organist, since about 1895 holding various positions in or near Philadelphia, now at St. Clement's there, and much in demand as recitalist. In 1920–21 he was president of the Nat. Association of Organists. Has written a Lenten cantata and other church-music, with some organ-pieces. A.

Fruytiers, Jan. 16th C. G.

Fry, William Henry (Philadelphia, 1813–1864, West Indies). American critic and composer, mostly self-taught, from about 1845 on the staff of the New York Tribune (in 1846–52 as foreign correspondent). Wrote the operas Leonora, 1845 (Philadelphia), and Notre Dame de Paris, 1864 (New York), several symphonic poems and overtures, a Stabat Mater, cantatas and songs. A.

Fryer, Herbert (London, 1877). English pianist, pupil of the Royal Academy and Royal College in London and of Busoni, since 1898 touring with great success throughout Europe and (since 1914) America, early becoming professor at the Royal Academy, as well as in 1905–14 examiner for the Royal College. In 1915–19 he taught at the Inst. of Musical Art, New York, going thence to the Royal College in London. Has written a piano-suite, piano-pieces and songs.

Fryklöf, Harald Leonard (Upsala, 1882). Swedish organist, pupil of the Stockholm Conservatory and of Ph. Scharwenka, from 1908 assistant-organist at the Stockholm Hauptkirche. Has written an overture (1907), organ- and piano-pieces, choral hymns and songs (some with orchestra), besides a text-book in chorale harmonization and (with Palm, Sandberg and Hellerström) a collection of church-music (1915).

Fryklund, Lars Axel Daniel (Vesterås, 1879). Swedish collector of instruments and lecturer on history at Sundsvall. Author of several monographs on instruments of different countries (from 1910).

Frysinger, J. Frank (Hanover, Pa. 1878). American organist, pupil of S. C. Engel, Kelley, Burmeister, Kinder and Wolstenholme, from 1909 organist at York, Pa., and director at Hood College, from 1911 teacher at the University School, Lincoln, Neb., and from 1918 at Augustana College, Rock Island, Ill. He played at the Jamestown and Panama Expositions, as well as often elsewhere. Has written for organ, piano and voice. A.

Fuchs, Albert (Basel, 1858–1910, Dresden). Swiss teacher and composer, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1880–83 director at Treves, then lived near Dresden till 1889, when he succeeded Taubmann as head of the Wiesbaden Conservatory, from 1898 professor at the Dresden Conservatory and from 1901 also conductor of the Schumann choral society. He was made royal professor in 1908. Wrote the opera Nirvana (not given), an Ungarische Suite for orchestra, a violin-concerto, a string-quartet, violin-sonatas, a 'cello-sonata, a piano-sonata, and other pieces, 2 large choral works, many choruses, songs, etc. Memoir by Geissler in Monographien moderner Musiker, 1909.

Fuchs, Aloys (Raase, 1799–1853, Vienna). Austrian employé in the war-department at Vienna, who made a famous collection of autographs and manuscripts, including much relating to musicians, especially Mozart. He was unable to avoid letting his valuable material become widely scattered. G.

Fuchs, Georg Friedrich (Mayence, 1752–1821, Paris). Rhenish clarinetist, pupil of Cannabich, at first bandmaster at Zweibrücken, but in 1784 went to Paris, where from 1795 he was professor in the new Conservatory. Wrote much chamber-music (with clarinet) and for wind-instruments. See Riemann, Mannheimer Kammermusik (in Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Bayern). G.

Fuchs, Johann Nepomuk (Frauenthal, 1842–1899, n. Vienna), brother of Robert below. Styrian conductor, pupil of Sechter, from 1864 opera-director at Presburg, Cologne, Hamburg, Leipzig and (from 1880) Vienna, where from 1893 he was Hellmesberger's successor as head of the Conservatory. Wrote the opera Zingara, 1872, besides arranging Handel's Almira, Gluck's Der betrogene Cadi, Schubert's Alfonso ed Estrella and the Maienköigin (wrongly attributed to Gluck) for modern reproduction. G.

Fuchs, Karl (Offenbach, 1865). Hessian 'cellist, pupil of Riedel, Cossmann and Davidov, since 1887 in the Hallé Orchestra at Manchester, England, and from 1893 also professor at the Royal College there, but with many tours alone or with the Brodsky Quartet, of which he has been a member since 1895. He is court-'cellist at the Duke of Hesse. Has published a large method (1906). G.

Fuchs, Karl Dorius Johannes (Potsdam, 1838–1922, Danzig). Eminent Prussian pianist and critic, educated at Berlin and Greifswald Universities (Ph.D. 1870), pupil in music of Von Bülow, Weitzmann and Kiel, from 1871 living in Berlin, from 1875 in Hirschberg and from 1879 in Danzig, where in 1882–83 he led a choral society, from 1886 served as organist at the Petrikirche and from 1887 was critic for the Zeitung. In 1904 he was entitled royal professor. Wrote Betrachtungen mit u. gegen Schopenhauer (in Neue Berliner Musikzeitung), Ungleiche Verwandte unter den Neudeutschen, 1868, Hellas, 1868 (piano-pieces on modern Greek themes), Virtuos u. Dilettant, 1869 (on piano-teaching), Präliminarien zu einer Kritik d. Tonkunst, 1870, Die Zukunft d. musikal. Vortrags, 2 parts, 1884, Die Freiheit d. musikal. Vortrags, 1885, Praktische Anleitung zum Phrasieren, 1886 (with Riemann), Künstler u. Kritiker, 1898, Takt u. Rhythmus im Choral, 1911, and many articles in the Musikal. Wochenblatt. G.

Fuchs, Robert (Frauenthal, 1847), brother of Johann Nepomuk above. Styrian composer, trained at the Vienna Conservatory and in 1875–1912 theory-professor there. Has written 3 symphonies, the overture Des Meeres und der Liebe Wellen, an orchestral Andante and Capriccio, 5 notable serenades for small orchestra, a string-quartet, a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, 2 terzets for strings, 3 violin-sonatas, a piano-sonata and many other pieces, a mass (1897), Elfen und Zwerge and Gestillte Sehnsucht, both for women's chorus and orchestra, and the operas Die Königsbraut, 1889, and Die Teufels-glocke, 1893. G.

Füchs, Ferdinand Karl (Vienna, 1811–1848, do.). Austrian composer of popular songs and 3 operas (from 1842). G.

Fuenllana, Miguel de. 16th C.

Fuentes, Pasquale (?–1768, Valencia). Spanish composer, from 1757 director at the Valencia Cathedral, writing many masses, Te Deums, motets, etc. G.

Fugger Family, The. 16th C.

Führer, Robert (Prague, 1807–1861, Vienna). Bohemian organist, pupil of Vitásek, whom in 1839–43 he succeeded as cathedral-organist at Prague. From 1830 he taught in the Organ School there, and after 1843 filled various posts in Bavaria and finally in Vienna, ending his career in dishonor and much poverty. Wrote about 100 masses and much other church-music, including many organ-works, besides essays on Greek scales and on rhythm (1847). Some of his works are published by J. E. Habert. G.

Führich, Karl (Vienna, 1865). Austrian choral conductor, especially of men's societies, since 1898 also choirmaster at Maria Treu. Has written a mass, motets, many choruses and 2 operas.

Fuhrmann, Martin Heinrich (Templin, 1669–after 1740, Berlin). Able Prussian theorist and critic, from 1704 cantor at the Werder Gymnasium in Berlin. Wrote various treatises, mostly polemic (1706–30). He was a partisan of Mattheson.

Fuller-Maitland, John Alexander (London, 1856). Eminent English critic and author, educated at Cambridge University, from 1882 writing for the Pall Mall Gazette, from 1884 for the Guardian and in 1889–1911 for the Times, succeeding Hueffer, besides sometimes appearing as pianist and harpsichordist. He was a large contributor to the first edition of Grove's Dictionary (from vol. ii, 1880) and edited the Appendix to it (1889), and was editor-in-chief of the second edition (1904–10). With Clara Bell he translated Spitta's Buch (1884–85), besides editing English Carols of the 15th Century, 1887, English Country Songs, 1893 (with L. E. Broadwood), The Fitzwilliam Virginal Book, 1899 (with W. Barclay Squire), several works of Purcell for the Purcell Society and the catalogue of the music in the Fitzwilliam Museum (1893). Also author of Schumann, 1884, Masters of German Music, 1894, The Musician's Pilgrimage, 1899, The Age of Bach and Handel, 1902, (Oxford History of Music, vol. iv), English Music in the 19th Century, 1902, Joachim, 1908, Brahms, 1911, and The Consort of Music, 1915, besides many articles in periodicals.

Füllsack, Zacharias. 17th C.

Fumagalli, Adolfo (n. Milan, 1828–1856, Florence). Italian pianist, pupil of Medaglia and the Milan Conservatory, from 1847 touring with great success in Italy, France and Belgium, but dying suddenly in the midst of his popularity. Wrote many brilliant piano-pieces. Memoir by Filippi, 1830. His brothers Disma (1826–1893), from 1857 professor at the Milan Conservatory, Polibio (1830–1891), noted for his organ-sonatas, and Luca (1837–1908), who wrote the opera Luigi XI, 1875, were all gifted as performers and composers, mostly of salon-music. G.

Fumi, Vincenslao (Montepulciano, 1823–1880, Florence). Italian conductor, pupil of Giorgetti, soon gaining a fine reputation as opera-conductor in Italy, Constantinople, South America and finally at the Pagliano in Florence. Wrote the opera Atala, 1862 (Buenos Aires), a symphony, several other orchestral works, and left incomplete a large collection of folk-songs.

Funck, Frederik Christian (1783–1866). The first Danish 'cellist to secure international renown. His brother Peter (1789–1859) was a fine violinist, long concertmaster in the court-orchestra at Copenhagen.

Furchheim, Johann Wilhelm (?1635–1682). 17th C.

Furlanetto, Bonaventura [called 'Musin'] (Venice, 1738–1817, do.). Italian church-musician, pupil of Formenti and Rolla, early a teacher in a girls' school in Venice, from 1794 deputy or second director at St. Mark's and from 1810 Bertoni's successor as maestro, besides from 1811 teaching theory at the Istituto Filarmonico. Wrote masses, oratorios and cantatas. Memoir by Caffi, 1820.

Furnhjelm, Erik Gustav (Helsingfors, 1883). Able Finnish composer, pupil of Sitt, Sibelius, Wegelius and Fuchs, since 1909 professor at the Helsingfors Conservatory. Has written a symphony, an overture, a Concertstück for violin and orchestra and a piano-quintet.

Furno, Giovanni (Capua, 1748-1837, Naples). Italian theorist, pupil of Cotumacci, teaching at the Conservatorio di S. Onofrio, Naples, and other institutions (pupils included Bellini, Mercadante and many other famous composers). Wrote 2 operas (1778-83).

Fursch-Madi, Emmy (Bayonne, 1847-1894, n. Somerville, N. J.). Eminent French operatic soprano, trained at the Paris Conservatory, from about 1870 noted for fine performances at Paris and Brussels, soon becoming a favorite in London and New York (from 1874), retiring in 1894. A.

Fürstenau, Anton Bernhard (Münster, 1792-1852, Dresden), son of the following. Noted Westphalian flutist, pupil of his father, first appearing when but seven and from 1809 touring with his father, from 1820 in court-service at Dresden. In 1826 he went with Weber on his last trip to London. Wrote much for his instrument, including methods. G.

Fürstenau, Kaspar (Münster, 1772-1819, Oldenburg). Westphalian flutist, in 1784-1811 in the court-orchestra at Oldenburg. Wrote flute-concertos and many other pieces. G.

Fürstenau, Moritz (Dresden, 1824-1889, do.), son of Anton above. Saxon flutist, from 1842 in the court-orchestra at Dresden, from 1852 librarian of the music-section of the Royal Library and from 1858 teacher at the Conservatory. Wrote Beiträge zur Gesch. d. königlich sächsischen musikal. Capelle, 1849, Zur Gesch. d.

Musik u. d. Theaters am Hof zu Dresden, 2 vols, 1861-62 (augmented by Von Brescius, 1898). Die Fabrikation musikal. Instrumente im sächs. Vogtland, 1876 (with Berthold), and various articles in periodicals and other publications. G.

Fürstner, Adolph (Berlin, 1833-1908, Bad Nauheim). From 1868 music-publisher in Berlin, in 1872 acquiring also the business of Meser at Dresden. He published the operas of Richard Strauss and other notable dramatic works.

Furtwängler, Wilhelm (Berlin, 1886). Noted Prussian conductor, pupil of Beer-Walbrunn, Rheinberger and Schillings, from about 1905 theater-conductor at Zurich, Strasburg, Lübeck and elsewhere, from 1915 Bodansky's successor as opera-director at Mannheim, in 1919 conductor of the Tonkünstler-Orchester at Vienna, in 1920-22 conductor of symphony-concerts at the Berlin Opera (following Strauss), as well as at the Museum Concerts at Frankfort for a time, in 1921-22 director for the Musikfreunde in Berlin and since 1922 conductor of the Leipzig Gewandhaus Orchestra and the Berlin Philharmonic. Has written a Te Deum for soli, chorus, orchestra and organ.

Fux, Johann Joseph (Hirtenfeld, 1660-1741, Vienna). Eminent Styrian theorist and composer, in 1696-1702 organist at the Schottenkirche in Vienna, from 1698 court-composer, from 1704 director at St. Stephen's, from 1713 Ziani's assistant as court-director and in 1715 his successor. Wrote in all over 400 works, including 18 operas, 10 oratorios, 50 masses, 3 Requiems, much other church-music, etc., with a famous Gradus ad Parnassum, 1725, which is one of the landmarks in the history of counterpoint. Memoirs by Von Köchel, 1872 (with catalogue of works) and Schnabel, 1895. Many works are included in the Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Oesterreich. G.

Gabler, Johann (?-1784, Ravensburg). An organ-maker of Ulm who built the celebrated organ at the abbey of Weingarten in Baden which Bedos de Celles described in his L'Art du Facteur d'Orgues, 1766-78. See also Cäcilien-Kalender, 1878. G.

Gabler, Joseph (?-1902, Waidhofen). Author of Die Tonkunst in d. Kirche, 6 parts, 1883, and editor of collections of church-songs.

Gabriel, Mary Ann Virginia (Banstead, 1825-1877, London). English (Irish) composer, pupil of Pixis, Döhler, Thalberg and Molique. Wrote the cantatas Evangeline, Dreamland and Graziella and 5 operettas, besides popular songs and piano-pieces. In 1874 she married George E. March, author of texts for her works. G.

Gabriel, Max (Elbing, 1861). Prussian director, pupil of Reinecke and Jadassohn, from 1890 at the Residenz-Theater in Hanover, then in America and later at the Rembrandt-Theater in Amsterdam. Has written several effective operettas (from 1889).

Gabrieli, Andrea (?1510-1586) and Giovanni (1557-1612). 16th C. G.

Gabrieli, Domenico (?1640-1690). 17th C. G.

Gabrielli, Catterina (Rome, 1730-1796, do.). Brilliant Italian operatic soprano, trained by Garcia, Porpora and Guadagni, making her début at Lucca in 1747, singing then in various Italian cities, in 1751-65 engaged at Vienna, then in Sicily and at Parma, from 1768 at Petrograd, in 1775-76 visited England, was then at Venice and Milan and after 1781 lived in Rome. Her gifts in coloratura and her daring caprices gave her renown and much wealth. G.

Gabrielli, Francesca (Ferrara, 1755-1795, Venice). Italian operatic soprano, pupil of Sacchini, from 1774 noted in opera buffa at Venice, Florence, Naples, London (from 1786) and Turin.

Gabrielli, Nicolò (Naples, 1814-1891, Paris). Italian composer, trained at the Naples Conservatory, working first in Italy and after 1854 living in Paris. Wrote 22 operas (from 1835) and 60 ballets, none of great force or originality.

Gabrielski, Johann Wilhelm (Berlin, 1791-1846, do.). Prussian (Polish) flutist, pupil of Schröck, from 1814 in the Stettin theater-orchestra and from 1816 in the court-band at Berlin, besides making extended tours as virtuoso. Wrote concertos, ensemble-music and many solos for his instrument, with some songs. His brother Julius (1806-1878) was also a fine flutist, in the court-band at Berlin from 1825.

Gabrilovitch, Ossip Salomonovitch (Petrograd, 1878). Distinguished Russian pianist and conductor, pupil of the Petrograd Conservatory (Rubinstein Scholar) and of Leschetizky, appearing first in 1896 at Berlin and then touring Europe and America (from 1900). In 1904-14 he lived mostly in Munich, where in 1910-14 he directed the concerts of the Konzertverein.

From 1907 he led series of orchestral concerts in New York. In 1912-13 he gave a set of six recitals in many European cities designed to illustrate the growth of the piano-concerto from Bach to Rachmaninov, repeating these in America in 1914-15, besides in 1915-16 adding another set of six recitals exhibiting the development of other piano-forms. Since 1918 he has been conductor of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, bringing it to much efficiency. Has written an Overture-Rhapsodie for orchestra, an Elegy for 'cello, piano-pieces and a few songs. In 1909 he married Clara Clemens, the daughter of 'Mark Twain'. A.

Gabussi, Giulio Cesare. 16th C. G.

Gabussi, Vincenzo (Bologna, 1800-1846, London). Italian singing-teacher, pupil of Mattei, from about 1825 working in London and after 1840 living in Bologna. Wrote 3 operas (1825-41), some chamber-music and many effective duets and songs, the latter leading some to compare him with Schubert. G.

Gade, Axel Willi (Copenhagen, 1860-1921, do.), son of the following. Eminent Danish violinist, pupil of Tofte and Joachim, early becoming concertmaster of the court-orchestra at Copenhagen and teacher in the Conservatory, of which from 1915 he was one of the directors. Wrote the opera Venezianische Nacht, 1918, a violin-concerto, chamber-music, etc.

Gade, Niels Wilhelm (Copenhagen, 1817-1890, do.). Distinguished Danish composer and conductor, trained by Wexschall, Weyse and Berggreen and through association with Mendelssohn (from 1843). His first work was as violinist, appearing from 1833 and joining the court-band at Copenhagen, but from about 1840 his gift for composition became apparent. In 1843 he visited Leipzig and Italy, from 1844 was often Mendelssohn's deputy as conductor at the Gewandhaus, for a short time in 1847-48 succeeding him, but after the outbreak of the political difficulties of 1848 made his home in Copenhagen, where he was conductor of the Musical Union, organist in one of the leading churches and from 1861 court-director, besides from 1867 sharing in the direction of the new Conservatory. He received the title of royal professor, in 1879 was made Ph.D. by the University and from 1886 was Commander in the Order of Daneborg. In 1876 he conducted works at the Birmingham Festival in England. His wife was the daughter of J. P. E. Hartmann.

His technical facility was finely developed, especially in orchestration, and he had a notable delicacy and grace of conception, with a strong romantic tendency. His early works are akin to those of Mendelssohn and the later ones show some influence from Schumann, but he was much more than an imitator. Though his influence did much to hasten the growth of the Scandinavian school, his own writing was not marked by any great use of characteristically Scandinavian traits, so that it was even scorned as 'German' by Grieg and his followers. Yet it has a charm and value of its own. The list of works is as follows (opus-numbers in brackets):

Orchestral Works

Symphonies—1, in C min. [5], 2, in E [10], 3, in A min. [15], 4, in B-flat [20], 5, in D min. (with piano) [25], 6, in G min. [32], 7, in F [45], 8, in B min. [47].

Overtures—Nachklänge aus Ossian (1840) [1], Im Hochland [7], in C [14], Hamlet [37], Michel Angelo [39], besides Mellem Fjeldene and for the opera Mariotta.

Suites—Eén Sommerdag auf dem Lande [55], Holbergiana [61].

Marches—for funeral of Fredrik VII (1863), Ulysses (1884), for Jubilee of Christian IX (1888). Also Festmusik for the Copenhagen Exposition of 1872.

4 Novelletten for strings [53].

Violin-concerto [56].

Chamber-Music

String-octet in F [17]; string-sextet [44]; string-quintet in E min. [8]; piano-trio in F [42]; Novelletten in A min. as piano-trio [29].

Violin-sonatas in A [6], D min. [21], B-flat [59], B-flat, Volkstänze im nordischen Charakter [62].

Phantasiestücke for clarinet (or violin) and piano [43].

Piano-Works

Sonata in E min. [28].

3 Frühlingsblumen [2]; Nordiske Tonebilleder (4 hands) [4]; 3 pieces in march-form (4 hands) [18]; Aquarellen (2 sets) [19, 57]; Arabeske [27]; Volkstänze [31]; Idyllen [34]; Der Kinder Christabend [36]; 4 Fantasiestücke [41]; Bilder des Orients.

Also 3 Tonstücke for organ [22].

Vocal Works

Opera—Mariotta (1850).

Cantatas—Comala [12]; Frühlingsfantasie [23]; Elverskud (The Erl-King's Daughter) [30]; Frühlingsbotschaft [35]; Die heilige Nacht [40]; Ved Solnedgang [46]; Kalanus [48]; Zion [49]; Die Kreuzfahrer [50]; Den Bjaergstagne [52]; Geføn [54]; Psyche [60]; Der Strom (from Goethe's Mahomed) [64]; Baldurs Drøm (1858, but not published till 1897).

Sange af Agnete og Havemanden (piano-songs with chorus) [3].

Part-Songs—5 for mixed voices [13]; about 20 for men's voices [11, 26, 33, 38]; 4 Bilder des Jahres, for women's voices [51]; 9 Lieder in Volkston, for 2 sopranos [9].

Memoirs by W. Neumann, 1857, his daughter Dagmar (largely autobiographic), 1894 (2d ed. 1912), Ch. Kjerulf, 1917, and Behrend, 1917. See also Spitta, Zur Musik, 1892. G.

Gadsby, Henry Robert (London, 1842-1907, do.). English composer, mostly self-taught, except as a choirboy at St. Paul's in 1849-58, until 1884 organist at Brockley (Surrey), from 1880 professor at the Guildhall School, London, and from 1884 also at Queen's College, succeeding Hullah. Wrote 3 symphonies, the overtures Andromeda, The Golden Legend and The Witches' Frolic, an orchestral Intermezzo and Scherzo (1875), the orchestral scene The Forest of Arden, 1886, an organ-concerto, a string-quartet (1875), an Andante and Rondo for flute (1875), incidental music for Alcestis (1876) and for Tasso's Aminta (1898), Psalm 130, 1862, the cantatas Alice Brand, 1870, The Lord of the Isles, 1879, Columbus, 1881, and The Cyclops, various services, anthems, part-songs and songs, besides a text-book in harmony (1884) and exercises for singers. G.

Gadski, Johanna Emilia Agnes (Anclam, 1872). Pomeranian operatic soprano, pupil of Mme. Schroeder-Chaloupka, from 1889 appearing in Germany and Holland, in 1895 coming to the United States, where from 1898 she was prominent as a Wagnerian singer at the Metropolitan, New York, and also as a song-singer. In 1917 she was said to be engaged in political intrigues and then withdrew to Berlin, but returned in 1921. In 1892 she married Hans Tauscher. A.

Gafari, Franchino (1451-1522). 15th C. G.

Gagliano Giovanni Battista da (?1585-1650?) and Marco [di Zanobi] da (?1575-1642). 17th C. G.

Gagliano. A family of violin-makers at Naples, following the Stradivari traditions. It was founded by Alessandro, who worked between 1695 and 1725, followed by his sons Nicolò and Gennaro and his grandsons Ferdinando and Giuseppe. Later members of the family gained renown as makers of fine violin-strings. G.

Gährich, Wenzel (Zerchowitz, 1794-1864, Berlin). Bohemian violinist, at first in a theater-orchestra and from 1825 in the court-band at Berlin. After making a hit with several ballets, in 1845-60 he was ballet-master at the Opera there. Wrote 2 operas, 2 symphonies, a piano-quartet, a concertino for viola, many dances, some songs, etc.

Gail, Edmée Sophie, née Garre (Paris, 1775-1819, do.). French song-singer, pupil of Mengozzi, Fétis, Perne and Neukomm, early known in France and Spain, from 1816 in London and in 1818 in Germany and at Vienna. Wrote 5 short operas (1813-18) and various songs. In 1793 she married the well-known Hellenist J. B. Gail.

Gailhard, Pierre (Toulouse, 1848). Noted French operatic bass and director, trained at the Paris Conservatory (several prizes), making his début in 1867 and becoming a favorite, first at the Opéra-Comique and from 1871 at the Opéra. In 1879-83 he sang much in London as well. He sang at the premières of Offenbach's Vert-Vert (1869), Auber's Rêve d'Amour (1869), Mémbree's L'Esclave (1874), Joncière's Reine Berthe (1878), Thomas' Françoise de Rimini (1882), etc. From 1884 till 1907 he was director of the Opéra, at first with Ritt (till 1892) and in 1893-99 with Bertrand. His administration was remarkably brilliant, especially in the establishment of many Wagnerian works (from 1893) and in the introduction of fresh works by French composers and of fine new singers. In 1886 he became a member of the Légion d'Honneur.

Gaisser, Ugo Atanasio [Josef Anton] (n. Leutkirch, 1853-1920, n. Oberammergau). Württemberg Benedictine, from 1878 teacher at Namur and from 1898 professor at the Collegio S. Atanasio in Rome. Author of a large number of essays and monographs on Byzantine and Gregorian music, including Le Système Musical de L'Eglise Grecque, 1901, Les 'Heirmoi' de Pâques dans L'Office Grec, 1905, etc.

Gal, Hans (n. Vienna, 1890). Able Austrian theorist and composer, trained by Mandyczewski and at Vienna University (Ph.D. 1913), in 1915 taking the Staatspreis for composition and since 1918 lecturing at the University on theory. Has written the comic operas Der Fächer and Der Arzt der Soheide, 1919, music for Lewetzow's Ruth (1920), a symphony, the overture Weh dem der lügt, an orchestral Phantasie and Serenade, various chamber-pieces, the choral works Von ewiger Freude, Phantasien on poems by Tagore, Abendgesang, etc., songs and piano-pieces.

Gale, Clement Rowland (Kew, 1862). English organist, graduate of Oxford in 1884, teaching first at Reading School and in 1885-89 being assistant-organist at St. Mary's Cathedral, Edinburgh. Since 1890 he has worked in New York, first at Calvary Church, from 1900 at All Angels' and since 1910 at Christ Church, besides teaching since 1901 at the General Theological Seminary and since 1902 at the Guilman Organ School. Has written an overture, Psalm 130, a mass, services, anthems and other church-music, organ- and piano-pieces, songs, etc. A.

Gale, Walter C. (Cambridge, Mass. 1871). American organist, pupil of Bassford, Sauret, F. Damrosch and S. P. Warren, from 1890 at the Brick (Presbyterian) Church, New York, in 1893-98 at Holy Trinity, from 1900 at All Souls' and since 1905 at the Broadway Tabernacle (Congregational), besides from 1901 being private organist for Andrew Carnegie. Has written an organ-sonata, choir-music, etc. A.

Galeazzi, Francesco (Turin, 1758-1819, Rome). Italian violinist, for fifteen years conductor at the Teatro Valle in Rome and then teaching at Ascoli. Author of an early violin-method (2 parts, 1791-96). G.

Galeotti, Cesare (Pietrasanta, 1872). Italian composer of the operas Anton, 1900, and La Dorise, 1910, with some orchestral pieces.

Gales, Weston (Elizabeth, N. J. 1877). American organist, trained at the Yale School of Music, from 1899 playing at Irvington-on-Hudson, from 1902 at Christ Church, New York, and in 1908-13 at Emmanuel Church, Boston. In 1913 he conducted orchestral concerts in Munich, Hamburg and Nuremberg, and in 1914-18 was founder and conductor of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. A.

Galilei, Vincenzo (?1533-1591). 16th C. G.

Galin, Pierre (Samatan, 1786-1821, Bordeaux). French teacher of mathematics at Bordeaux, from 1817, advocating the 'méthode simplifiée' method of simplifying elementary music-teaching that was further developed by Paris and Chev . One of its salient features was the use of a numeral-notation. Author of an Exposition of his system (1818, with later eds.). G (under Chev ).

Galitzin, Nicolas Borissovitch (1794-1866, n. Kursk). Russian prince, a skillful 'cellist, in 1820 founder of the Philharmonic Society at Petrograd and in 1828 of the Music-Lovers' Society. To him Beethoven dedicated the overture Die Weihe des Hauses, op. 124, and the three quartets, opp. 127, 130, 132, and concerning these latter there is considerable correspondence extant. G.

Galitzin, Yourij Nicolaievitch (Petrograd, 1823-1872, do.), son of the above. Russian prince, in military service during the Crimean War. Musically he was a pupil of Lomakin, Reichel and Hauptmann. In 1842 he formed a large boy-choir at Moscow and later an orchestra, touring with the latter in Germany, France, England (1860) and America (1872) with a view to introducing Russian music. Wrote 2 orchestral fantasias, 2 masses, choruses, songs, etc. He was also a critic and essayist. G.

Galkin, Nicolas Vladimirovitch (Petrograd, 1856-1906, do.). Russian violinist, pupil of the Petrograd Conservatory, Joachim, Sauret and Wieniawski, from 1875 for a time concertmaster of the Bilse orchestra in Berlin and then touring throughout Europe as soloist. From 1877 he was in the orchestra at the Petrograd Opera, from 1880 taught at the Conservatory, from 1892 directed symphony-concerts at Pavlovsk and from 1895 was also conductor at the Alexander Theatre at Petrograd. Wrote somewhat for his instrument.

Gall, Jan (Warsaw, 1856-1912, Lemberg). Polish choral conductor, pupil of Krenn, Rheinberger and Lamperti, from 1880 in charge of the Galician Musikverein at Lemberg, from 1886 professor in the Cracow Conservatory and from 1892 conductor of the Echo (choral society) in Lemberg. Wrote about 400 vocal works.

Gallay, Jacques Fran ois (Perpignan, 1795-1864, Paris). Noted French hornist, trained at the Paris Conservatory (prize), from 1825 in the court-band and at both the Italiens and the Od on, from 1832 musician to Louis Philippe and from 1842 professor at the Conservatory, succeeding his teacher Dauprat. Wrote concertos, quartets, trios, duets, solos and  tudes for his instrument.

Gallay, Jules (St. Quentin, 1822-1897, Paris). French amateur 'cellist who specialized in the history of lute-music. Author of Les Instruments   Archet   l'Exposition, 1867, Les Luthiers Italiens aux XVII<sup>e</sup> et XVIII<sup>e</sup> Si cles, 1869, a reprint of Manoir's Mariage de la Musique avec la Danse, with introduction and notes (1870), and Les Instruments des  coles Italiennes, 1872, besides editing a report on instruments at the Vienna Exposition of 1873 (1875).

Gallenberg, Wenzel Robert, Count von (Vienna, 1783-1839, Rome). An Austrian amateur, pupil of Albrechtsberger, from 1803 married to the Countess Guicciardi (to whom Beethoven dedicated his sonata, op. 27, no. 2), in 1821-23 Barbaja's partner in managing the Vienna court-opera, lost his fortune in 1829 as sole director and then joined Barbaja at Naples. Wrote about 50 ballets (from about 1810) and easy piano-music. See Thayer, Beethoven. G.

Galletti-Gianoli, Isabella (Bologna, 1835-1901, Milan). Italian operatic soprano, pupil of Gamberini, appearing extensively in Italy from 1860. In later years her voice changed to a contralto. On retiring she taught in Milan.

Galli, Amintore (n. Rimini, 1845-1919, do.). Italian editor and critic, trained at the Milan Conservatory, from 1867 taught at Amelia and Finale Emilia, finally going to Milan as critic for the Secolo and editor (later manager) for the publisher Sonzogno, lecturer at the Conservatory and later editor of Il Teatro Illustrato and Musica Popolare. Wrote the operas Il Corno d'Oro, 1876, and David, 1904, the oratorios Espiazione, 1877 (based on Moore's Lalla Rookh) and Cristo al Golgota, a setting of Goethe's Totentanz for baritone and orchestra, a string-quintet, etc., besides Etnografia Musicale, 1898, Estetica della Musica, 1900 (mostly history), Storia e Teoria del Sistema Musicale, 1901, etc.

Galli, Filippo (Rome, 1783-1853, Paris). Italian operatic singer, at first tenor (from 1804), but from 1812 bass, heard in Paris from 1821 and in London from 1827. In 1828 he was in Spain and in 1832-36 in Mexico, then drifting back to Spain, Italy and (1842) Paris. He sang at the premières of Rossini's L'Inganno Felice (1812), La Gazza Ladra (1817), and Maometto (1820). G.

Galli-Curci, Amelita (Milan, 1889). Eminent Italian operatic soprano, pupil of the Milan Conservatory, though in singing mostly self-taught, appearing from 1909 with great success throughout Italy, in 1910, '12 and '15 in South America, in 1914 in Spain, and since 1916 with the Chicago Opera Company in Chicago and New York. In 1910-20 she was the wife of the painter Luis Curci and since 1921 of Homer Samuels. A.

Galli-Marié, Célestine, née Marié del' Isle (Paris, 1840-1905, n. Nice). French operatic mezzo-soprano, pupil of her father, making her début at Strasburg in 1859, in 1862-1885 almost continuously engaged at the Opéra-Comique in Paris, besides visits elsewhere. In 1890 she sang with Melba, Jean de Reszké and Lassalle in a performance of Carmen to raise funds for a monument to Bizet. She had great power as an actress. Among the numerous premières at which she assisted were Thomas' Mignon (1866), Massenet's Don César (1872) and Bizet's Carmen (1875). G.

Galliard, Johann Ernst (Celle, 1687-1749, London). Hanoverian oboist (French descent), pupil of Farinelli and Steffani, from 1706 in court-service at London. Wrote much stage-music, settings of Milton's Morning Hymn of Adam and Eve, Lee's Edipus and Hughes' Calypso and Telemachus (1712), church-music, pieces for flute and for 'cello, etc., besides translating Tosi's Opinioni (1742) and perhaps other works. G.

Gallico, Paolo (Trieste, 1868). Austrian pianist, pupil of the Vienna Conservatory (prize and medal), from 1886 concertizing throughout Europe and since 1892 well known in New York as soloist and teacher. Has written the dramatic oratorio The Apocalypse, 1921, the operettas Johannstraum and Harlekin, piano-pieces and songs. A.

Gallicius. 16th C. G.

Gallignani, Giuseppe (Faenza, 1851). Italian church-musician, trained at the Milan Conservatory, long maestro at the Milan Cathedral, editor of La Musica Sacra and since 1882 director of the Conservatory. Has written the operas Il Grillo del Focolare, 1873, Atala, 1876, Nestorio, 1888, Quare?, 1903, and In Alto, 1921, much fine sacred music, organ-works, etc.

Gallus, Jacobus (1550-1591). 16th C. G.

Gallus, Johannes. 16th C. G.

Galpin, Francis William (Dorchester, 1858). English clergyman and archæologist, from 1891 vicar of Hatfield Regis and since 1915 of Witham. Musically a pupil of W. S. Bennett and Garrett, since about 1900 specializing in the history of instruments. Author of Catalogue of European Instruments in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, 1902, The Musical Instruments of the American Indians of the Northwest Coast, 1903, Notes on a Roman Hydraulus, 1904, The Evolution of the Sackbut, 1907, and Old English Instruments of Music, 1910, besides a revision of Stainer's Music of the Bible (1913).

Galston, Gottfried (Vienna, 1879). Austrian pianist (Polish-Hungarian descent), trained by Leschetizky and at the Leipzig Conservatory, since 1900 making many tours in Europe, as well as in 1902 in Australia and in 1912-13 in the United States. In 1903-07 he taught at the Stern Conservatory in Berlin and since 1908 has held the nominal title of professor at the Petrograd Conservatory. Since 1910 his home has been at Planegg near Munich. Author of a Studienbuch, 1909 (analytical notes on five historical programs of music from Bach to Brahms, 2d ed. 1921). In 1910-18 he was husband of the Russian pianist Sandra Droucker.

Galuppi, Baldassare (Burano, 1706-1785, Venice). Eminent Italian composer, pupil of Lotti, bringing out his first opera in 1722 and many more from 1728, after about 1749 establishing himself as one of the most successful writers of comic opera. In 1741-43 he conducted Italian opera in London and then in Petrograd (returning there in 1765-68). From 1748 he was assistant-maestro at St. Mark's, becoming chief in 1762, as well as director of the Conservatorio degl' Incurabili (both offices intermitted in 1765-68, when he was director for Catherine II). Wrote in all over 110 operas, 3 dramatic cantatas, numerous church-works, more than 20 oratorios and 12 clavier-sonatas. Of his serious operas Scipione in Cartagine, Enrico and Sirbace, 1742-43 (all London), Didone Abbandonata, 1764 (Naples) and Ifigenia in Tauride, 1768 (Petrograd), may be named as illustrations, while the most popular of the comedies was Il Filosofo di Campagna, 1754 (with Goldoni). Memoirs by Wotquenne, 1902, and Piovano (in Rivista Musicale, 1906-08). G.

Gambale, Emmanuele. A teacher in Milan who advocated a semitonic scale, with a new notation, publishing La Riforma Musicale, 1840, and some further examples of his system (1846), besides translating Fétis' text-book in harmony.

Gambini, Carlo Andrea (Genoa, 1819-1865, do.). Italian pianist, writing 4 operas, an oratorio, the symphonic ode Cristoforo Colombo, a choral La Passione (text by Manzoni), much church- and piano-music.

Gamucci, Baldassare (Florence, 1822-1892, do.). In 1849 founder and long director of the Società Corale del Carmine in Florence, later adopted by the Istituto as its Scuola Corale. Wrote church-music, piano-works, a life of Cherubini (1869) and many essays in reviews.

Ganassi, Silvestro. 16th C.

Gandini, Alessandro (Modena, 1807-1871, do.). From 1842 his father's successor as court-director at Modena, writing 5 operas (from 1828) and an extensive history of the Modena stage (3 vols. 1873, with a 4th added by Valdrighi and Ferrari-Moreni, 1883).

Gandolfi, Riccardo Cristoforo Daniele Diomede (Voghera, 1839-1920, Florence). Eminent Italian author and composer, pupil of Conti and Mabellini, from 1869 inspector at the Florence Istituto and in 1889-1912 librarian there. Wrote the operas Aldina, 1863, Il Paggio, 1865, Il Conte di Monreale, 1872, and Caterina di Guisa, 1872, a symphony, overtures, chamber-works, 2 masses, a Requiem (1866), other church-music, a sacred cantata and a Psalm, etc. Author of many critical and historical studies, as on the relation between poetry and music in the drama (1868), various annotations about Landino (1888), Mozart (1891), Malvezzi and Cavalieri (1893), Rossini (1902), etc., Illustrazioni di Alcuni Cimelli concernanti l'Arte Musicale in Firenze, 1892, on the Società Filarmonica (in Ricordi Musicali Fiorentini, 1908-09), on the Tuscan court-music in 1539-59 (Rivista Musicale, 1909), on some unedited letters of Verdi (do. 1913), etc.

Ganne, Louis Gaston (n. Moulins, 1862-1923, Paris). French composer of popular ballets and light operas (from 1882). He was conductor at Monte Carlo.

Gänsbacher, Johann Baptist (Sterzing, 1778-1844, Vienna). Tyrolese composer, pupil of Vogler and Albrechtsberger, from about 1805 teaching in Prague, Dresden, Leipzig, Darmstadt, on the Rhine, etc., from 1810 being intimate with Weber. In 1813 he was in military service, and from 1823 succeeded Preindl as director at St. Stephen's in Vienna. Wrote over 200 works, mostly for the church, but including a symphony, serenades, chamber-pieces, music for Kotzebue's Kreuzfahrer, piano-pieces, songs, etc. He was one of the pall-bearers at Beethoven's funeral in 1827. G.

Ganz, Adolf (Mayence, 1796-1870, London). Rhenish violinist, from 1819 conductor at Mayence, from 1825 court-director at Darmstadt and from 1840 in London, where in 1840-42 he conducted opera in German. His son Eduard (1827-1869) became a teacher in Berlin. G.

Ganz, Leopold (Mayence, 1810-1869, Berlin) and Moritz (1806-1868), brothers of Adolf above. Respectively violinist and 'cellist who, after touring widely together, became members of the court-orchestra at Berlin in 1827, Leopold being concertmaster from 1840. Both were skillful players and composed in good style for their instruments. G.

Ganz, Rudolph (Zurich, 1877). Eminent Swiss pianist, pupil of Eschmann, Blumer, Busoni and Urban, making his début at Berlin in 1899 and in 1900-05 teaching at the Chicago Musical College, then appearing as recitalist both in America and in Europe. In 1921 he was appointed conductor of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, succeeding Max Zach. Has written a symphony, a Konzertstück for piano and orchestra, piano-variations on a theme from Brahms and about 40 other piano-pieces, many choruses for men's voices and about 200 songs. In 1900 he married the singer Mary Forrest. A.

Ganz, Wilhelm (Mayence, 1833-1914, London), son of Adolf above. Rhenish pianist, pupil of Eckert and Anschütz in London, where he lived from 1850. From 1856 he was much in request as accompanist for conspicuous singers, notably for Jenny Lind, besides being organist at the German Lutheran Church and playing in Wylde's New Philharmonic Orchestra. From 1874 he assisted the latter as conductor and in 1879-83 succeeded him, bringing out many important works and artists. He was also organist for various Masonic bodies and for many years teacher at the Guildhall School. Author of Memoires of a Musician, 1913. G.

Garat, Pierre Jean (n. Bayonne, 1764-1823, Paris). Noted French baritone (also tenor), pupil of Franz Beck, at first trained for the law, but from about 1785, partly as protégé of Count d'Artois and Marie Antoinette, turned to the concert-stage. In 1792 he went with Rode to Hamburg, returning in 1794, speedily gaining great renown at the Concerts Feydeau and becoming professor in the new Conservatory from 1799 (many famous pupils). G.

Garaudé, Alexis de (Nancy, 1779-1852, Paris). French singing-teacher, trained by Cambini, Crescentini, Reicha and Garat, in 1808-30 in the court-choir and in 1816-41 professor at the Conservatory. Wrote text-books in singing, piano and harmony, solfeggi and songs, besides 3 string-quartets, other chamber-pieces, piano-sonatas, etc.

Garbrecht, Fr. F. W. Music-engravers and printers in Leipzig, established in 1862, from 1874 (at the death of the founder) managed by Gustav Garbrecht and later by Otto Säuberlich.

the latter continuing from 1880 with Oskar Brandstetter (d. 1915). From 1887 book-publishing was added. In 1918 the business of Moeser was acquired. The present firm consists of various relatives of Brandstetter.

Garcia, Francisco Saverio (Nalda, 1731-1809, Saragossa). Spanish church-musician, at first a noted singing-teacher in Rome and from 1756 maestro at Saragossa Cathedral. Wrote 4 operas (1754-56), the oratorio Tobia, 1773, masses and motets (often 8-part). Catterina Gabrielli was one of his pupils. G.

Garcia, Gustave (Milan, 1837), son of Manuel Patricio below. After study with his father, in 1862-80 sang in opera in Italy and England, then settling in London as singing-teacher, at first at the Royal Academy and later at the Royal College and the Guildhall School, retiring in 1911.

Garcia, Manuel del Popolo Vicente (Seville, 1775-1832, Paris). Eminent Spanish operatic tenor and composer, pupil of Ripa and Almarcha, from 1792 noted in Spain, going thence in 1806 to Paris, in 1811-16 to Italy and in 1817 to London, everywhere with much success. In 1819-24 he was the leading artist at the Italiens in Paris and then, after a sojourn in London, in 1825-26 took a troupe to New York and later to Mexico (where he was plundered near Vera Cruz by bandits). His last years were spent in Paris. Wrote nearly 50 operas in Italian, Spanish and French (from 1803) and many ballets. His most noted pupils were his two daughters, Marie (Malibran) and Pauline (Viardot-Garcia), his son Manuel, Nourrit, Géraudy, etc. G. A.

Garcia, Manuel Patricio Rodriguez (Madrid, 1805-1906, London), son of the above. Famous singing-teacher, though trained as a stage-bass by his father, whom he accompanied to America in 1825-27. From 1829 he worked in Paris, in 1847 becoming professor at the Conservatory. In 1850-95 he was professor at the Royal Academy, London. On Mar. 17, 1905, his 100th birthday was duly celebrated and he lived more than a year longer. As early as 1840 he published an essay on the voice that marked an epoch in its modern science and in 1855 invented the laryngoscope as an instrument of investigation (hence named Ph.D. by Königsberg Univ.). Author of a Traité Complet de l'Art du Chant, 1847 (often reprinted and translated). Among his numerous great pupils were his wife Eugénie, née Mayer (1818-1880), Jenny Lind, Henriette Nissen and Stockhausen. Memoirs by Mackinlay, 1908, and in Musical Times, 1905. G.

Garcia Roblez, José (Olot, 1839-1910, Barcelona). Spanish composer, from 1875 at Barcelona. Wrote the operas Julio Cesar and Garraf, the choral work Catalonia, 5 folias and choruses.

Garcin, Jules Auguste Salomon (Bourges, 1830-1896, Paris). French violinist, trained at the Paris Conservatory, from 1856 in the orchestra at the Opéra (third conductor after 1871) and from 1882 assistant-conductor of the Conservatory Concerts, becoming chief in 1885-

92, besides in 1890 succeeding Massart as professor at the Conservatory. Wrote a Suite Symphonique, a viola-concertino, a violin-concerto and other violin-pieces. In 1878 he was one of the conductors at the Exposition. G.

Gardano, Antonio. 16th C. G.

Garden, Mary (Aberdeen, 1877). Gifted Scottish operatic soprano, in early childhood brought to the United States, beginning music when but six. After training mainly by Trabadello and Fugère, she made her début in Paris in 1900 on a day's notice, resulting in an immediate engagement at the Opéra-Comique, with later work in London. From 1907 she was at the Manhattan, New York, and since 1910 has been with the Chicago Opera Company, becoming manager in 1921. She sang at the premières of Pierné's La Fille du Tabarin (1901), Debussy's Pelléas et Mélisande (1902) and Leroux' La Reine Fiammette (1903), as well as at many in America. Her dramatic gifts are of a high order. A.

Gardiner, H. Balfour (London, 1877). English composer, pupil of Knorr, living in London. In 1912-13 he promoted an important concert-series largely devoted to recent English works, orchestral and choral. Has written a symphony, a string-quintet, a string-quartet, several orchestral pieces (Phantasy, English Dance, Shepherd Fennel's Dance), the choral work News from Whydah and choruses. G. A.

Gardiner, William (Leicester, 1770-1853, do.). English manufacturer, author of The Music of Nature, 1832, Music and Friends, 3 vols. 1838-53, and Sights in Italy, 1847, besides editing Sacred Melodies, 6 vols. G.

Gardoni, Italo (Parma, 1821-1882, Paris). Italian operatic tenor, pupil of Cesari, appearing from 1840 in Italy, Berlin (with Rubini), Vienna, Paris (from 1844), London (from 1847), and soon all other European capitals, continuing active till 1874. In 1847 he married a daughter of Tamburini. G.

Gariel, Edoardo (Monterey, 1860-1923, Tacubaya). Mexican teacher, pupil of Daunic and Marmontel, from 1887 teaching at the State School at Saltillo and from 1900 active in Mexico City, till 1908 as supervisor of school-music, then at the Girls' Normal School and from 1915 at the Conservatory, becoming director in 1917. Author of a work on Chopin's music (1895), a Nuevo Sistema de Armonía, 1916 (also in English), and various text-books in singing (from 1905). A.

Garlandia, Johannes de. 13th C. G.

Garnier, François Joseph (Lauris, 1759-1825, do.). French oboist, pupil of Sallantin, from 1778 in the orchestra of the Opéra at Paris. Wrote 3 oboe-concertos, Symphonies Concertantes for 2 oboes and for flute, oboe and bassoon, duets for oboe and violin, and a method.

Garrett, George Mursell (Winchester, 1834-1897, Cambridge). Able English organist, pupil of Elvey and Wesley, from 1851 assisting the latter at Winchester Cathedral, from 1854 at Madras Cathedral (India) and from 1857 at St. John's College, Cambridge, becoming also university-organist in 1873 (Mus.D. 1867). He was also examiner for the University and lecturer on harmony and counterpoint, besides leading the St. John's Musical Society. Wrote the oratorio The Shunammite, 1882, 5 cantatas, several fine services, many anthems, part-songs and songs, with some organ-works. G.

Garsó, Siga (Tisza Vesceny, 1831-1915, Vienna). Able Hungarian singing-teacher, pupil of Gentiluomo, appearing for a short time from 1854 on the operatic stage and then settling as teacher in Bremen. Author of essays on singing (1884, '89) and a voice-building method (1911). See article by Rasch in Allgem. musikal. Zeitung, 1913.

Gasco, Alberto (Naples, 1879). Italian composer and critic, pupil of Terziani and d'Indy, living in Rome, and writing for the Tribuna. Has written the operas La Leggenda della Setti Torri, 1913, and Astrea (not given), the symphonic poem Presso le Fonti del Clitumno, the overture Buffalmacco, a Scherzo Orgiastico, several works inspired by pictures (as Venere Dormiente for string-quartet, La Visione di S. Orsola for violin, Primavera Fiorentina and Le Danzatrice di Jodhpur for piano), etc.

Gascue, Francisco (San Sebastian, 1848). Spanish engineer, specialist on Basque folk-music. Author of La Música Popular Vascongada, 1906, La Ópera Vascongada, 1906, Ensayos de Crítica Musical, 1909-10 (on Basque operas), Historia de la Sonata, 1910, and Origen de la Música Popular Vascongada, 1913, besides various articles in reviews.

Gaspar van Werbecke (?1440-?). 15th C.

Gaspari, Gaetano (Bologna, 1807-1881, do.). Able Italian church-musician and historian, trained at the Bologna Liceo, from 1827 maestro at Cento, for a short time from 1836 at Imola, then returning to the Liceo as assistant to Donelli, at whose death (1839) he became teacher of solfeggio and from 1855 librarian, besides from 1857 being maestro at S. Petronio. From 1866 he was a member of the historical commission on music, assigned to research as to Bolognese musicians. Author of studies on music in Bologna (1867, '68, '71), on music at S. Petronio (1869), Musiciisti Bolognesi del XVI<sup>e</sup> Secolo, 1875, and numerous articles in periodicals, besides a catalogue of his private library (1862). Wrote considerable excellent church-music. Memoir by Parisini, 1882.

Gasparini, Francesco (n. Lucca, 1668-1727, Rome). Italian composer, pupil of Corelli and Pasquini, at first teaching in Rome, from about 1700 head of the Conservatorio della Pietà in Venice and from 1725 maestro at the Lateran in Rome. Wrote 54 operas (1694-1724), about half of them for Venice, 7 oratorios, many masses, motets, cantatas, etc., and a famous text-book in harmony 1708 (7th ed. 1802). Among his pupils was Marcello. G.

Gasparini, Michelangelo (Lucca, 1685-1732, Venice). Italian stage-singer and teacher, pupil of Lotti, founder of a noted singing-school at Venice (Faustina Bordoni-Hasse one of his pupils). Wrote several operas.

Gasparo da Salo (?1542-1609). 16th C. G (Salo).

Gasperini, Guido (Florence, 1865). Italian musicologist, pupil of Tacchinardi and Sbolci, lecturing in 1899-1903 at Florence, Rome and Parma on music-history, and since 1902 librarian of the Parma Conservatory. In 1908 he founded the Associazione dei Musicologi Italiani, chiefly to make complete catalogues of musical material in Italian libraries, which in 1909 became the Italian section of the Internationale Musik-Gesellschaft and began a series of quarterly bulletins (thus far covering the libraries of Parma, Bologna, Milan and Florence). Has written Storia della Musica, 1889 (10 lectures), Dell'Arte d'Interpretare la Scrittura della Musica Vocale del Cinquecento, 1902, Storia della Semiografia Musicale, 1905, Il Real Conservatorio di Musica in Parma, 1913, and I Caratteri Peculiari del Melodramma Italiano, 1913.

Gassier, L. Édouard (1822-1871, Havana). French operatic baritone, trained at the Paris Conservatory, in 1845 appearing at the Opéra-Comique, but soon entering the field of Italian opera in Italy, at Vienna, in Spain (1849-52), from 1854 at the Italiens in Paris and from 1855 in London. In 1848 he married Spanish soprano Josefa Fernandez (1821-1866) and they appeared together for about fifteen years. G.

Gassmann, Florian Leopold (Brix, 1723-1774, Vienna). Bohemian composer, pupil of Martini, from about 1742 musician to Count Leonardo Veneri at Venice, from 1764 ballet-composer at the Vienna Opera and from 1771 court-director there, succeeding Reutter. In 1771 he founded the Tonkünstler-Societät (to provide for the widows and orphans of musicians), which since 1862 has been known as the Haydn-Societät. Wrote over 20 operas (from 1763), an oratorio and much church-music. See articles by Steinhard, 1908 (in Deutsche Arbeit) and Donath, 1914 (in Studien zur Musikwissenschaft). His chief pupil was Salieri, who trained his two daughters as operatic singers of note. G.

Gassner, Ferdinand Simon (Vienna, 1798-1851, Karlsruhe). Austrian violinist, from 1816 at the Mayence Nationaltheater, from 1818 director at Giessen University (Ph.D. 1819) and lecturer, from 1826 in the court-band at Karlsruhe and later singing-teacher and chorus-master there. In 1822-35 he edited the Musikalischer Hausfreund at Mayence and in 1841-45 the Zeitschrift für Deutschlands Musikvereine und Dilettanten. Wrote Partiturkenntniss, 1838, and Dirigent u. Ripienist, 1846, besides contributing to the Supplement to Schilling's Lexikon (1842) and drafting a condensation of the latter work (1849). He also composed 2 operas, ballets, songs, etc.

Gast, Karl (n. Sangerhausen, 1860). Saxon teacher, since 1883 engaged in the school-system of Berlin and from 1913 member of the commission to improve school-music throughout Prussia. In 1906 founder (with Flatau and Gusinde) and then editor of the periodical Stimme. Author (with Löbmann) of a manual of music-history (1913), besides song-books.

Gast, Peter [pen-name of Heinrich Köselitz] (Annaberg, 1854-1918, do.). Saxon composer, pupil of E. F. Richter and long associated with Nietzsche at Basel, in 1900-08 working at the Nietzsche Archive at Weimar. Wrote the operas Willram, 1879, König Wenzel, 1888, Orpheus und Dionysos and Die heimliche Ehe, 1891, the singspiel Scherz, List und Rache, 1881, the festspiel Walpurgis, 1903, the symphony Helle Nächte, an overture, a string-quartet, choruses and songs. He edited two or three sets of Nietzsche's letters (1900, '05, '08). Memoir by Mendt in preparation.

Gastaldon, Stanislas (Turin, 1861). Italian composer, known from 1878 through piano-pieces and then about 300 popular songs. Has also written the operas Mala Pasqua!, 1890, Il Pater, 1894, Stellina, 1905, and Il Reuccio di Capriana, 1913.

Gastinel, Léon Gustave Cyprien (n. Auxonne, 1823-1906, Fresnes-les-Rungis). French composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1846). Wrote 9 light operas (from 1853) with considerable success, 4 oratorios, orchestral and chamber-music, 3 masses, choruses, etc.

Gastoldi, Giovanni Giacomo (?1556-1622). 16th C. G.

Gastoué, Amédée (Paris, 1873). French musicologist and church-musician, pupil of Deslandres, Lavignac, Guilmant and Magnard, since 1896 professor of Gregorian music at the Schola Cantorum and the Catholic University, besides lecturing at the École des Hautes Études Sociales. In 1896-1905 he edited the Revue du Chant Grégorien and since 1909 the Tribune de St.-Gervais (contributor from 1897), besides being critic for La Semaine Littéraire from 1905. For years he was also director at St.-Jean in Belleville. At the 1914 Congress of the Internationale Musik-Gesellschaft he directed a recital of French works of the 11th-14th centuries. Author of Histoire du Chant Liturgique à Paris, 1905 (vol. i only), Les Origines du Chant Romain, 1907 (prize from the Académie), Catalogue des Manuscrits de Musique Byzantine. des Bibliothèques Publiques de France, 1907, Les Messes Royales du Henri Dumont, 1912, Le Graduel et l'Antiphonaire Romains, 1913, Les Primitifs de la Musique Française, 1922, and Le Cantique Français, with several manuals of plain-chant (1904-11) and many articles.

Gayates, Guillaume Pierre Antoine (Paris, 1774-1846, do.). Noted French guitarist, with many works for his instrument. His sons Joseph Léon (1805-1877) and Félix (1809-?) were good musicians, the former a harpist and critic, the latter a pianist in Europe, America and Australia, writing some good orchestral and military music.

Gathy, August (Liège, 1800-1858, Paris). Belgian editor and from 1841 teacher at Paris, pupil of Fr. Schneider. In 1830-41 he edited the Musikal. Conversationsblatt at Hamburg and later wrote for the Neue Zeitschrift. Edited a Musikal. Conversationslexikon, 1835 (3d ed. by Reissmann, 1873), and a revision of Andrade's singing-method (1838), besides translating Berlioz' Voyage Musical (1844).

Gatti, Guido M. (Chieti, 1893). Italian critic, in 1913-15 editor of the Turin Riforma Musicale and contributor to many other journals. Author of Figure di Musicisti Francesi, 1915, and Musicisti Moderni d'Italia, 1920.

Gatti-Casazza, Giulio (Udine, 1869). Distinguished Italian impresario, graduated as an engineer at Genoa in 1890, from 1893 theater-manager at Ferrara, from 1898 director of La Scala in Milan and since 1908 director of the Metropolitan in New York. His success in both these important posts has been continuous and even phenomenal. A.

Gatty, Alfred Scott. See Scott-Gatty.

Gatty, Nicholas Comyn (n. Sheffield, 1874). English critic and composer, pupil of Stanford, in 1907-14 writing for the Pall Mall Gazette and sometimes conducting at Covent Garden. Has written the short operas Greysteel, 1906, Duke or Devil, 1909, and The Tempest, a choral setting of Milton's Ode on Time, 1905, a piano-concerto, a string-quartet, orchestral variations, choruses, etc. G.

Gaubert, Philippe (Cahors, 1879). Gifted French flutist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory (2d Prix de Rome, 1905), in 1919 following Messager as conductor of the Conservatory concerts. Has written a ballet, 3 symphonic poems, an orchestral rhapsody on folk-tunes, flute-pieces, etc.

Gaucquier [Dunoyer], Alard de. 16th C.

Gaudenzi, Giuseppe (Bologna, 1880). Italian operatic tenor, originally a practicing lawyer, but from 1906 highly successful on Italian stages, in 1909-13 with the Boston Opera Company and later in South America and again in Italy.

Gaudio Mell. 16th C.

Gaul, Alfred Robert (Norwich, 1837-1913, Birmingham). English composer, pupil of Z. Buck, long organist in Birmingham and teacher at various institutions. Wrote the oratorio Hezekiah, 1861, the cantatas Ruth, 1881, The Holy City, 1882, Joan of Arc, 1887, The Ten Virgins, 1890, Israel in the Wilderness, 1892, and Una, 1893, Psalms 1, 96 and 150, a Passion service, the choral ode A Song of Life, glees, part-songs and songs. G.

Gaul, Harvey Bartlett (New York, 1881). American organist, pupil of Le Jeune, Arms and A. R. Gaul, and of the Schola Cantorum, in 1900-08 at Emmanuel Church, Cleveland, and since 1910 at Calvary Church, Pittsburgh. He has also been active as music-critic. Has written cantatas, church-music, organ-pieces, choruses and songs. A.

Gaultier, Denis and Jacques. 17th C. G.

Gauntlett, Henry John (Wellington, 1805-1876, London). English organist, until after 1840 a practicing lawyer, in 1827-46 at St. Olave's (Southwark), then at Union Chapel (Islington) till 1854 and other London churches. From about 1836 he was a vigorous advocate of extending the keyboard-compass to C and from 1844 urged attention to Gregorian music in Anglican churches. He was organist at the production of Elijah at Birmingham in 1846. In 1837-42 he lectured at the London Institution and wrote copiously for various papers. Edited a large number of collections of anthems, canticles, tunes, etc. (from 1839), with many original contributions. Mus.D. at Lambeth in 1842. G.

Gauss, Otto (in Württemberg, 1877). Roman Catholic priest, educated at Tübingen, where from 1903 he taught at the Wilhelmsstift, going in 1910 as prebendary at Rottenburg Cathedral. Has published valuable collections of organ-music and of songs and written (with Möhler) a manual on church-music (1909), besides original masses and choruses.

Gauthier, Gabriel (1808-?). French organist (blind), from 1827 teacher at the Paris Blind Institute and after 1840 organist at St.-Étienne-du-Mont. Author of Répertoire des Maîtres de Chapelle, 5 vols. 1842-45, besides manuals on plain-chant and composition (1843, '45).

Gauthiers-Villars, Henri [called Willy] (n. Paris, 1859). Able French critic for the Revue des Revues, Écho de Paris, Revue Internationale de Musique, etc. Several volumes of his essays have been published and a life of Bizet (1912). He wrote introductions to two volumes of the Pleyel-Wolff Collection of Chamber Music.

Gautier, Jean François Eugène (Paris, 1822-1878, do.). French composer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1848 second conductor at the Lyrique and from 1864 chorusmaster at the Italiens, besides teaching at the Conservatory and acting as music-critic. Wrote 14 light operas, the oratorio La Mort de Jésus, the cantata Le 15<sup>e</sup> Août, etc.

Gautier, Théophile (Tarbes, 1811-1872, Paris) The eminent poet, critic and novelist, in whose various books is much about music, especially in the Histoire du Romantisme, 1873, Portraits Contemporains, 1874, Souvenirs du Théâtre, 1883, as well as in the Histoire de l'Art Dramatique, 6 vols. 1859.

Gaveaux, Pierre (Béziers, 1761-1825, Paris). French operatic tenor, pupil of Franz Beck, from 1789 at the Opéra-Comique, Paris. Wrote over 30 operas, mostly light, included one on the same theme as that of Beethoven's Fidelio (1798). His vogue ceased after about 1812. G.

Gaviniés, Pierre (Bordeaux, 1726-1800, Paris). Eminent French violinist, mostly self-taught, appearing from 1741 at the Concerts Spirituels and then taking a leading place in the development of French violin-playing. In 1773-77 he was director of the Concerts Spirituels. In 1795 he was one of the first professors in the new Conservatory. Wrote 6 violin-concertos, 9 sonatas, 24 études (Matinées), etc., and the comic opera Le Prétendu, 1760. Among his many pupils were Capron, Robineau and S. Leduc. G.

Gawronski, Woitech (n. Vilna, 1868-1913?). Russian (Polish) composer, trained at the Warsaw Institute and at Berlin and Vienna, long settled in Warsaw. Wrote the operas Marja and Pojata, a symphony, 3 string-quartets (one gaining the Paderewski prize, 1898), piano-pieces, songs, etc.

Gay, Maria (Barcelona, 1879). Brilliant Spanish operatic contralto, self-taught at first, then pupil of Mme. Adiny, appearing in 1902 at Brussels and soon becoming well known throughout Europe, from 1906 in London and since 1908 in America (Metropolitan, Boston and Chicago Opera Companies). In 1913 she married the tenor Zenatello. A.

Gayarré, Julian (Roncal?, 1844-1890, Madrid). Spanish operatic tenor, pupil of the Madrid Conservatory, from about 1865 singing in Spain, from 1873 in Italy, in 1877-81 at Covent Garden, London, and also in Vienna, Petrograd and South America. He founded a charity singing-school in Madrid. G.

Gaynor, Jessie Lovel, née Smith (St. Louis, 1863-1921, n. do.). American specialist in children's music, pupil of Maas, Cady, A. J. Goodrich and Weidig, long active in St. Louis. Wrote many elementary text-books, songs and piano-pieces. A.

Gaztambide y Garbayo, Joaquim (Tudela, 1822-1870, Madrid). Spanish composer, pupil of the Madrid Conservatory, where he became director of concerts and also founder of the Concert Society. Wrote 44 effective zarzuelas (12 with other composers), beginning with La Mensajera, 1849, and including El Estreno de una Artista, Los Magjares and El Juramento. In 1868 he took a troupe to Havana and Mexico.

Gazzaniga, Giuseppe (Verona, 1743-1818, Crema). Italian composer, pupil of Porpora and Piccini, from 1768 active at Vienna (aided by Sacchini), and from 1791 maestro at Crema Cathedral. Wrote over 50 operas (1768-1801), including one on the same subject as Mozart's Don Giovanni (1787), 4 oratorios and finally considerable church-music. G.

Gear, George Frederick (London, 1857). English pianist, trained at the Royal Academy, London, where he is now professor. In 1876-92 he was conductor for the German Reed Company. Has written a string-quartet, 2 piano-sonatas, 2 operettas, songs, etc.

Gebauer, Étienne François (Versailles, 1777-1823, Paris), brother of François and Michel below. French flutist, pupil of his brother Michel and of Hugot, from 1801 in the orchestra of the Opéra-Comique, Paris. Wrote much flute-music.

Gebauer, François René (Versailles, 1773-1844, Paris), brother of Étienne above and Michel below. Bassoonist, pupil of his brother Michel and of Devienne, in 1801-26 in the orchestra of the Opéra and in 1796-1802 and again from 1825 professor at the Conservatory. Wrote much ensemble-music for wind-instruments and a bassoon-method.

Gebauer, Franz Xavier (n. Glatz, 1784-1822, Vienna). From 1816 director at the Augustinerkirche in Vienna and from 1819 conductor of the Concerts Spirituels, which he founded (they continued till 1848). He was intimate with Beethoven. G.

Gebauer, Michel Joseph (La Fère, 1763-1812, on the retreat from Moscow), brother of Étienne and François above. French oboist, from 1777 in the Swiss Guard and from 1791 in the Garde National, becoming in 1795-1802 professor in the new Conservatory. From 1802 he was bandmaster in the army. Wrote over 200 military marches and much ensemble-music, largely for wind-instruments.

Gebel, Franz Xavier (n. Breslau, 1787-1843, Moscow). Silesian composer, pupil of Albrechtsberger and Vogler, from 1810 director in theaters in Vienna, Pest and Lemberg, and from 1817 teacher in Moscow. Wrote several operas, 4 symphonies, overtures, string-quintets and quartets, a mass, piano-works, etc.

Gebel, Georg (Brieg, 1709-1753, Rudolstadt), son of the following. Pupil of his father, whom he early assisted, from 1729 second organist at a Breslau church and from 1730 one of the accompanists at the theater, in 1733-35 director for the Duke of Oels, from 1735 cembalist for the Dresden court-band (at the same time becoming expert on Hebenstreit's pantaleon), and from 1747 court-director at Rudolstadt. Wrote an enormous amount of vocal and instrumental music, including 12 operas, 2 Passions, 2 cantatas for Christmas and sets for the entire church year, over 100 concerted works for instruments, etc. His wife was a painter and he, too, took up her art. G.

Gebel, Johann Georg (Breslau, 1685-1750, do.). Silesian organist, pupil of Winkler and Stölzel, from 1709 at Brieg and from 1713 at Breslau. He experimented upon a clavier with the semitones divided and also one with a pedal-keyboard added. Wrote much church-music, including a Passion, intricate canons (one with 30 parts), organ- and clavier-pieces, etc. G.

Gebhard, Heinrich (Sobornheim, 1878). Rhenish pianist, brought up in Boston, pupil of Clayton Johns and Leschetizky, since 1905 a leading soloist and ensemble-player in Boston. Has written a string-quartet, a violin-sonata, orchestral waltzes and some piano-pieces. A.

Gebhardi, Ludwig Ernst (Nottleben, 1787-1862, Erfurt). Thuringian organist, long teacher at the Erfurt Seminary. Author of an organ-method and a text-book in harmony (4 vols. 1828-35), collections of organ-pieces, chorales and songs.

Gédalge, André (Paris, 1856). French composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (2d Prix de Rome, 1885) and soon professor there. Has written the lyric drama Hélène, 1895 (Prix Cressent), the opéra bouffe Pris au Piège, 1895, music for the pantomime Le Petit Savoyard, 1891, the choral work Vaux de Vire, 1895, 2 symphonies, orchestral suites, a string-quartet, piano-pieces, etc., and also Les Gloires Musicales du Monde, 1898, and an extended Traité de la Fugue, 1901 (part 1 only).

Gehring, Franz (1838-1884, n. Vienna). Tutor in mathematics at Vienna University, but also a good musical student. Author of a life of Mozart (1883) and various articles in Grove's Dictionary (from 1880). Catalogues of his musical library appeared in 1880 and '84.

Gehrkens, Karl Wilson (Kelley's Island, O. 1882). American specialist on school-music, trained at Oberlin College and since 1907 professor there. Author of Music-Notation and Terminology, 1916, Essentials in Conducting, 1919, and Introduction to School Music-Teaching, 1919. Since 1919 he has edited the Proceedings of the Music Teachers' National Association. A.

Gehrmann, Hermann (Wernigerode, 1861-1916, Kassel). Saxon critic and historian, trained at the Leipzig and Stern Conservatories, besides graduating at Berlin University (Ph.D. 1892), from 1897 critic at Königsberg for the Allgem. Zeitung and in 1901-11 for the Frankfurter Zeitung, then removing to Berlin and finally to Kassel. He gained the title of professor in 1908. Wrote Gottfried Walther als Theoretiker, 1892, a life of Weber (1899), and a sketch of Werkmeister for the Allgem. deutsche Biographie, edited works of Hasler for the Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst and contributed to the standard edition of Sweelinck's works. Also composed a string-quartet and some songs.

Geibel, Adam (in Baden, 1855). Blind organist, brought to Philadelphia in childhood, pupil of Wood, since 1885 active in the Stetson Mission and since 1897 engaged also in music-publishing. Mus.D. of Temple Univ. in 1911. Has written several cantatas, etc. A.

Geijer, Erik Gustaf (n. Karlstad, 1783-1847, Stockholm). Professor of history in Upsala University. Besides other important works, musical editor of Afzelius' Swenska Folkvisor, 3 vols. 1814-16 (new eds. 1846, 1880), and (with Lindblad) of a collection of more recent songs (1824). Wrote also a piano-quintet, 2 piano-quartets, piano-sonatas (some for 4 hands) choruses and songs.

Geijer, Gösta [Johan Gustav] (Millesvik, 1857). Swedish composer, pupil of Norman, Lindegren, Hallén and Svendsen, at first working at Gothenburg and since 1896 teacher and choral conductor at Malmö. Has written an opera, an overture, an orchestral ballade, a suite for strings, a violin-romanza and many songs, with a study of the life and musical work of Prince Gustaf (1912).

Geisler, Paul (Stolp, 1856-1919, Posen). Able Pomeranian composer, pupil of his grandfather and K. Decker, from 1881 chorusmaster at Leipzig theaters, in 1883-85 associated with Seidl as director at Bremen, then again at Leipzig, Berlin and finally Posen, where he conducted symphony-concerts and founded a music-school, in 1899-1903 also directing provincial festivals. He was named royal director in 1902. Wrote the operas Ingeborg, 1884, Die Marianer, 1891, Palm, 1893, Warum?, Wir Siegen, 1899, and Prinzessin Ilse, 1903, music for Schiffbrüchig and Unser täglich Brod giebt uns heute (both 1890), numerous symphonic poems, including Der Rattenfänger von Hameln, 1880, and Till Eulenspiegel, the choral 'cycles' Sansara and Golgotha, 4 Sinfonische Fresken (symphonies), piano-works and songs.

Geistinger, Maria Charlotte Cäcilie (Graz, 1836-1903, Rastendorf). Brilliant Styrian soprano, especially noted in operettas at Vienna, but also in Germany and New York (1897).

Gelbke, Hans (Davos, 1875). Swiss organist and conductor, trained at the Cologne Conservatory, from 1896 organist at Aix-la-Chapelle and from 1898 at the Evangelical Church in Gladbach, director of the orchestra and choral society and in 1904 founder of a conservatory there. He received the title of royal director in 1911.

Gelinek, Hermann Anton (Horzeniowec, 1709-1779, Milan). Bohemian monk who twice deserted his monastery (Seclau) to live as violinist, adopted the name Cervetti at Naples and wrote concertos and sonatas, besides church-music.

Gelinek, Joseph (Selcz, 1758-1825, Vienna). Bohemian priest (abbé), pupil of Albrechtsberger, a protégé of Prince Kinsky and from 1795 employed in the Esterhazy household, besides being a fashionable teacher among the nobility of Vienna. Wrote a large number of showy variations, etc., for the piano and much chamber-music. Mozart gave him help about 1785 and he later had some connection with Beethoven. G.

Geminiani, Francesco (Lucca, 1674-1762, Dublin). Eminent Italian violinist, pupil of Lunati, Corelli and Scarlatti, from 1706 in the Lucca orchestra, from 1711 concertmaster at Naples and from 1714 settled in London, though with many sojourns at Dublin (especially in 1736-41) and visits to Paris. His public appearances were comparatively rare, though his ability was unquestioned. Through him the Corelli traditions were transmitted to England, but with modifications due to Geminiani's impulsive temperament. Wrote 18 concertos, 24 sonatas, 6 cello-sonatas, various trios, etc., and some piano-pieces, besides the earliest violin-method (1740) and several other methods, a Treatise on Good Taste in the Art of Musick, 1747, etc. See article by Flood in I. M. G. Sammelbde. 11. G.

Gemünder, August Martin Ludwig (in Württemberg, 1814-1895, New York) and Georg

(1816-1899), brothers. Violin-makers, trained by their father, in America from before 1850, establishing a business in New York that acquired international fame and is continued by descendants. A.

Genast, Eduard Franz (Weimar, 1797-1866, Wiesbaden). Saxon operatic baritone, appearing from 1814 at Weimar, where from 1829 he was steadily engaged, chiefly, however, as actor. Wrote the operas Die Sonnenmänner, 1828, and Die Verräther auf den Alpen, 1833, songs and Aus dem Tagebuch eines alten Schauspielers, 4 vols. 1862-66. His daughter Doris (1826-1912) was an actress, in 1859 married to Raff, and her sister Emilie (1833-1905) was a good concert-singer, highly regarded by Liszt.

Genée, Franz Friedrich Richard (Danzig, 1823-1895, n. Vienna). Prussian composer, pupil of Stahlknecht, from 1848 director in succession at theaters in Reval, Riga, Cologne, Aix, Düsseldorf, Danzig, Mayence, Schwerin, Amsterdam and Prague, in 1866-78 at the Theater an der Wien in Vienna and then retired. Wrote about 15 operettas (from 1857), including Die Generalprobe, 1862, Der Seekadett, 1876, Nisida, 1880, Die Piraten, 1886, and Die Dreizehn, 1887, men's choruses and piano-pieces. He wrote many of his own librettos, as also for Strauss, Suppé and Millöcker. G.

Genée, Rudolf (Berlin, 1824-1914, do.), brother of the above. Eminent Shakespeare scholar at Dresden and Berlin, founder of the Mozartgemeinde at Berlin and in 1895-1912 editor of its reports. Author of Hans Sachs u. seine Zeit, 1894 (2d ed. 1902), Der Tod eines Unsterblichen [Mozart], 1895 (3d ed. 1912), Zeiten u. Menschen, 1899, and Pro Memoria, 1913.

Generali, Pietro [name properly Mercandetti] (Rome, 1782-1832, Novara). Italian composer, pupil of Massi, from 1802 active in Italy as a fertile composer of opera buffa, though overshadowed by the growing power of Rossini, in 1817-21 director in Barcelona and later for a time maestro at Novara Cathedral. Wrote over 50 operas, including especially I Bacchanali di Roma, 1815, an oratorio and considerable church-music. Elogy by Piccoli, 1833. G.

Genet, Eleazar. See Carpentras.

Genss, Hermann (Tilsit, 1856). Prussian teacher and composer, pupil of L. Köhler, Hahn and the Berlin Hochschule, from 1877 active in Lübeck, from 1880 in Hamburg, from 1890 in the Sondershausen Conservatory, from 1891 head of the Schumacher Conservatory at Mayence, from 1893 one of the directors of the Scharwenka-Klindworth Conservatory in Berlin, and since 1899 connected with the Irving Institute in San Francisco (director from 1905). Has written the opera Hunold der Spielmann, orchestral, chamber- and choral works. Sketch by Zabel, 1896. A.

Georges, Alexandre (Arras, 1850). French composer, trained at the Niedermeyer School, Paris, and long a theory-teacher there. Has written the operas Le Printemps, 1890, Poèmes d'Amour, 1892, Charlotte Corday, 1901, Miarka, 1905, Myrrha, 1909, and Sangre y Sol, 1912, incidental music to Le Nouveau Monde, 1883, Alceste, 1891, and Arel, 1894, and songs, besides the symphonic poems Leila, La Naissance de Vénus, Le Paradis Perdu, etc. G.

Gérard, Henri Philippe (Liège, 1763-1848, Versailles). Belgian singing-teacher, pupil of Ballabene, from 1788 located in Paris, where from 1795 he was long professor in the new Conservatory. Wrote a method (1819) and a harmony on the basis of Rameau (1833).

Gérardy, Jean (Spa, 1878). Distinguished Belgian 'cellist, pupil of his father, Bellmann and Massau, beginning a triumphant career as virtuoso at ten, immediately becoming famous for the maturity and purity of his style. He played first in London in 1890 and in America in 1899. From the start he has constantly been heard in ensemble with the finest artists. His instrument is a Stradivari of 1710. G.

Gerber, Ernst Ludwig (Sondershausen, 1746-1819, do.), son of the following. Eminent Saxon lexicographer, pupil of his father, whom from 1769 he assisted as organist and in 1775 succeeded, besides engaging as 'cellist in ensemble-playing. Edited a Historisch-Biographisches Lexikon d. Tonkünstler, 2 vols. 1790-92 (a continuation of Walther's Lexikon of 1732), which was later much expanded (4 vols. 1812-14). This became the basis of all subsequent dictionaries. His extensive library was purchased by the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde in Vienna (catalogue published in 1804). For list of his fugitive writings see Eitner. G.

Gerber, Heinrich Nikolaus (n. Sondershausen, 1702-1775, do.). Saxon organist, pupil of J. S. Bach, from 1728 at Heringen and from 1731 court-organist at Sondershausen and also from 1749 court-secretary. Wrote much for organ, clavier and harp, and also busied himself with improvements in organ-making, besides inventing a 4-octave xylophone. G.

Gerbert von Hornau, Martin (Horb, 1720-1793, St. Blaise). Würtemberger priest, from 1764 abbot of the monastery of St. Blaise (between Basel and Schaffhausen). From 1760 he made extensive journeys through Germany, France and Italy in search of medieval manuscripts (account published in 1765, 2d ed. 1773). The fruit of these were the monumental works De Cantu et Musica Sacra, 2 vols. 1774, Vetus Liturgia Alemannica, 2 vols. 1776, Monumenta Veteris Liturgie Alemannica, 2 vols. 1777, and Scriptores Ecclesiastici de Musica Sacra, 3 vols. 1784 (reprinted 1908). The last is of special importance as a source-book for medieval treatises. Monographs by Bader, 1875, and Lamy, 1898. G.

Gerhardt, Elena (Leipzig, 1883). Gifted Saxon contralto, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, making her début in concert in 1903 (accompanied by Nikisch). She was at once engaged at the Opera, but soon decided to devote herself to the concert-stage, becoming recognized as a foremost lieder- and oratorio-singer. She first came to America in 1912.

Gerhardt, Paul (Leipzig, 1867). Saxon organist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory and University, from 1893 at a suburb of Leipzig and since 1893 at the Marienkirche in Zwickau, where he gives annual recitals. Has written organ-fantasias, a Christmas cantata, sacred songs, etc.

Gericke, Wilhelm (Gratz, 1845). Eminent Styrian conductor, pupil of Dessoff, from 1865 director at Linz, from 1874 Richter's assistant at the Vienna Opera and also from 1880 Herbeck's successor as conductor of the concerts of the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde and of the Singverein. In 1884-89 he directed the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in 1890-95 resumed his place with the Vienna Gesellschaft, in 1895-96 lived in Dresden, in 1898-1906 was once more conductor in Boston, then retiring to Vienna. Has written an overture, a septet, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, 2 sonatas for violin and 2 for piano, the operetta Schön Hännchen, 1865, a Requiem, choruses and many songs. G. A.

Gerlach, Dietrich. 16th C.

Gerlach, Theodor (Dresden, 1861). Saxon composer, pupil of Wüllner, becoming court-director in 1885-86 at Sondershausen, from 1891 at Coburg, and from 1894 at Kassel, then living at Dresden, from 1903 in Berlin and since 1904 in charge of a music-school at Karlsruhe. Has written the opera Matteo Falcone, 1898, (original text), a choral setting of Luther's Lob der Musica, 1883, music for Carmen Sylva's Manole and for Rückert's Columbus, a serenade for strings, several men's choruses and various experiments with 'spoken opera' and 'spoken songs' (speech with instruments). Examples of the former are Liebeswogen, 1904, and Das Seegespenst, 1914.

Gerle, Hans (? -1570). 16th C. G.

German, J. Edward [properly German Edward Jones (Whitechurch, Shropshire, 1862). Eminent English composer, pupil of the Royal Academy, London, in 1888-89 conductor at the Globe Theatre under Mansfield, his success in providing superior music for Shakespearian and other plays speedily making him famous. His works include Symphonies in E min. (1890) and A min. (1893, Norwich).

Symphonic poem Hamlet (1897, Birmingham).

Symphonic suites—Gypsy (1892), in D min. (1895) and The Seasons (1898, Norwich).

Overture on German airs (1889).

Funeral March in D min. (1891); Commemoration Fantasia (1897); Rhapsody on March-Themes (1902); Welsh Rhapsody (1904, Cardiff); Coronation March and Hymn (1911).

Serenades for wind (1892) and for tenor, piano, oboe, clarinet, bassoon and horn (1894); Suite for flute (1892); Bolero for violin and orchestra; Scotch Sketch for 2 violins and piano; 3 Sketches for cello and piano; Pastorale and Bourrée for oboe and piano; pieces for clarinet and piano, for flute, for violin, etc., and for American organ.

Operas—The Emerald Isle, 1901 (with Sullivan), Merrie England, 1902, A Princess of Kensington, 1903, Tom

Jones, 1907, and Moon-Fairies, 1909 (text by Gilbert). The operetta The Rival Poets, 1901 (given with 2 pianos, 1886).

Incidental music to Richard III (1889), Henry VIII (1892), The Tempter (1893), Romeo and Juliet (1895), As You Like It (1896), Much Ado about Nothing (1898), Nell Gwyn (1900), The Conqueror (1905) and Antigone (not given).

Te Deum in F; the patriotic hymn Canada; the intercessory hymn Father Omnipotent.

3 albums of Lyrics (with Boulton); The Just So Book (with Kipling); other songs.

See Musical Times, 1904. G.

Germer, Heinrich (Sommersdorf, 1837–1913, Dresden). Saxon piano teacher, trained at the Berlin Akademie, about 1860 teaching two years at Posen and then settling in Dresden, where he was highly honored. Wrote a number of pedagogical manuals (from 1877) and edited collections of sonatas and études.

Gernsheim, Friedrich (Worms, 1839–1916, Berlin). Eminent Hessian composer, trained by Rosenhain and Hauff, at the Leipzig Conservatory and at Paris, from 1861 director at Saarbrücken, from 1865 teacher at the Cologne Conservatory, from 1874 director of the Rotterdam Conservatory and also conductor of the Symphony Concerts, in 1890–97 teacher at the Stern Conservatory in Berlin (till 1904 also conducting the Stern Gesangverein), from 1897 director of the Eruditio Musica at Rotterdam and from 1901 head of a school for advanced study in Berlin. Wrote symphonies in G min., E-flat, C min. (Mirjam) and B-flat, the overtures Waldmeisters Brautfahrt and Zu einem Drama, a piano-concerto, 2 violin-concertos, a 'cello-concerto, a string- and 2 piano-quintets, 4 string- and 3 piano-quartets, 2 trios, 3 violin- and 2 'cello-sonatas, and the fine choral works Nordische Sommernacht, Hafis, Preislied (Biblical text), Der Nornen Wiegentied, Phoebus Apollo, Agrippina, Salamis, Wächterlied aus der Neujahrnacht 1200, Odins Meerestritt and Das Grab im Busento (the last four for men's voices). Author of an introduction to Bossi's Canticum Canticorum (1901). G.

Gero, Jhan. 16th C. G.

Gerster, Etelka (Kaschau, 1857–1920, Berlin). Eminent Hungarian operatic soprano, pupil of Mme. Marchesi, making her début in 1876 at Venice (under the management of Carlo Gardini, whom she married in 1877), followed by highly successful appearances in Italy, Germany, Austria, France, England (from 1877) and America (from 1878), continuing in much favor till her retirement in 1890. From 1896 she conducted a singing-school in Berlin. Her voice was high and extremely pure and flexible, and she was also a gifted actress. G.

Gervaise, Claude. 16th C.

Gervasoni, Carlo (Milan, 1762–1819, do.). A church-musician at Borgotaro who wrote works on theory (1800, '12), with a Carteggio (1804) concerning the former that contains his autobiography.

Gerville-Réache, Jeanne (Orthez, 1882–1915, New York). French operatic contralto, pupil of Laborde, Mme. Viardot-Garcia and Criticos, from 1900 appearing at the Opéra-Comique, Paris, and from 1902 in Brussels, in 1907–10 at the Manhattan, New York, in 1911–12 with the Chicago Opera Company and in 1913–14 with the Grand Opera Company of Canada. In 1908 she married Dr. G. G. Rambaud, director of the Pasteur Institute in New York. A.

Gervinus, Georg Gottfried (Darmstadt, 1805–1871, Heidelberg). Eminent professor of history and literature, first at Göttingen, but from 1844 at Heidelberg. Author of Händel u. Shakespeare: zur Aesthetik d. Tonkunst, 1868, embodying his admiration for Handel's genius. He also founded a Händel-Verein at Leipzig. In 1872 his widow issued a selection of arias from Handel's oratorios and operas (7 vols. 390 pieces), and also translations by her husband of his oratorio-texts (1873). The former anthology was assailed by Julius Schäffer (1880).

Geselschap, Marie (Batavia, 1874). Dutch (Javanese) pianist, pupil of Ehlert, X. Scharwenka and Busoni, from 1894 appearing in America, from 1895 in London and later in Germany, where she has made a mark in ensemble. She lives in Munich.

Gesius, Bartholomäus (?–1613). 16th C. G.

Gessner, Adolf (Bingen, 1864–1919, Oppenau). Hessian organist, trained by Georg Weiss and at the Ratisbon Music School and the Munich Academy, from 1886 teaching in the Strasburg Conservatory and from 1899 also organist at the Garrison Church. He specialized in organ-making and from 1902 served as organ-examiner. In 1905 he gained the title of professor. Author of Die elsässisch-neudeutsche Orgelreform, 1912 (opposing Schweitzer's 'simplification'), besides in 1901 advocating flue-stops to replace the weaker reed-stops. Wrote some organ-pieces and considerable choir-music.

Gesualdo, Carlo (?1560–1614). 16th C.

Gevaert, François Auguste (n. Oudenarde, 1828–1908, Brussels). Distinguished Belgian composer and scholar, trained at the Ghent Conservatory (Prix de Rome), in 1843–49 organist at the Jesuit Church there, in 1849–52 visited France, Spain and Germany, was then active as opera-composer at Ghent, in 1867–70 was chorusmaster at the Paris Opéra (work terminated by the Franco-Prussian War), and from 1871 was Fétis' successor as director of the Brussels Conservatory. He received the Order of Leopold in 1857, from 1873 was a member of the French Académie and in 1907 became a baron under Belgian appointment. Though fertile and able as a composer, he is best known as historiographer. His works include the operas Hugues de Somerghem, 1848, La Comédie à la Ville, 1848, Georgette, 1852 (comic), Le Billet de Marguerite, 1854, Les Lavandières de Santarem, 1855, Quentin Durward, 1858 (comic), Le Diable au Moulin, 1859, Château-Trompette, 1860, La Poularde de Caux, 1861 (with others), Les Deux Amours, 1861, Le Capitaine Henriot, 1864, and Pertinax, 1884, the cantatas De Nationale Verjaerdag, 1856, Le Retour de l'Armée, 1859, Jacques van Arvelde and Le Départ, other choral works, including a Requiem and Psalm 137, several ballads, such as Philipp van Arvelde, many songs, the overture Flandre au Lion, a Fantasia sobre Motives Españoles, 1850, etc. His literary writings include Rapport sur la Situation de la Musique en Espagne, 1851, a text-book in plain-chant (1856), a notable Traité d'Instrumentation, 1863 (enlarged 1885), Histoire et Théorie de la Musique de l'Antiquité, 2 vols. 1875–81, Les Origines du Chant Liturgique de l'Église Latine, 1890, Cours Méthodique d'Orchestration, 2 vols. 1890, La Mélodie Antique dans l'Église Latine, 1895, Les Problèmes Musicaux d'Aristote, 3 vols. 1899–1902, and Traité d'Harmonie Théorique et Pratique, 2 vols. 1905–07, besides the collections Les Gloires de l'Italie, Recueil de Chansons du XV<sup>e</sup> Siècle and Vademecum de l'Organiste. Memoir by Dufour, 1909. See also Fierens.

Geyer, Flodoard (Berlin, 1811–1872, do.). Prussian teacher, pupil of Marx, in 1851–66 at the Stern Conservatory, Berlin, and critic for the Spener'sche Zeitung, the Neue Berliner Musikzeitung and the Reichsanzeiger. In 1842 he started an Akademischer Männergesangsverein, becoming its conductor, and later joined in the founding of the Tonkünstlerverein. From 1856 he held the title of professor. Wrote several operas, the melodrama Marie Stuart, symphonies, chamber-music, church-works, songs, etc., a manual on composition (1862, part 1) and an essay on the use of silent keyboards in study (1847).

Geyer, Ludwig Heinrich Christian (Eisleben, 1770–1832, Dresden). The actor and painter who in 1814 married Wagner's mother, so that Wagner went to school as Richard Geyer. See Sonneck, Swum Cuigue, 1916.

Gheluwe, Lodewyk van (n. Oudenarde, 1837–1914, Ghent). Belgian teacher, trained at the Ghent Conservatory, long inspector of the national schools and from 1870 director of the Bruges Conservatory. Wrote 2 cantatas.

Gherardello. 14th C.

Gheyn, Matthias van den (Tirlemont, 1721–1785, Louvain). Belgian organist and famous carillonneur, from 1741 at St.-Pierre in Louvain. Wrote church-music, carillon-pieces, clavier-sonatas, etc. Memoir by Eleweyck, 1862.

Ghibellini, Eliseo. 16th C.

Ghiselin, Jean. 16th C.

Ghislanzoni, Antonio (Lecco, 1824–1893, n. Bergamo). Italian editor and librettist, from 1846 for a time a stage-singer (baritone), from about 1854 manager of Italia Musicale and then editor of the Gazzetta Musicale in Milan. Author of more than 60 opera-librettos (notably that of Aida), and Reminiscenze Artistiche. He also wrote novels and from 1857 edited a humorous journal.

Ghizzolo, Giovanni. 17th C.

Ghro, Johann. 17th C. G.

Ghys, Joseph (Ghent, 1801–1848, Petrograd). Belgian violinist, pupil of Lafont, after teaching at Amiens and Namur from 1832 made wide tours in France, Belgium, Germany, Austria, Scandinavia and Russia. Wrote a violin-concerto and many concert-pieces.

Giacobi, Girolamo (1567–1630). 17th C.

Giacomelli, Geminiano (Parma, 1686–1743, Naples). Italian composer, pupil of Capelli and Scarlatti.

Gialdini, Gialdino (Pescia, 1843). Italian composer and conductor, pupil of Mabellini, producing a few operas at Florence till 1874 and then (till 1892) devoting himself mostly to conducting. Has written the operas Rosmunda, 1868 (prize-work), La Secchia Rapida, 1872, L'Idolo Cinese, 1874, I Due Soci, 1892, La Pupilla, 1896, and La Bufera, 1910, some orchestral pieces and issued a collection of Lombard folk-songs.

Gianelli, Pietro (Friuli, ?1770–1822?, Venice). The first Italian musical lexicographer, author of a Dizionario, 3 vols. 1801 (2d ed. 8 vols. 1820), and a Biografia, 1822 (1 part only), besides a work on theory (1801).

Gianettini [Zanettini], Antonio (1649–1721). 17th C.

Giannetti, Giovanni (Naples, 1869). Composer of the operas L'Erebo, 1891, Padron Maurizio, 1896, Milena, 1897, Il Violinajo di Cremona, 1898, Don Marzio, 1903, Lezione d'Amore, 1910, and Cuore e Baulte, 1918, and the sacred works Il Cristo alla Festa di Purim, 1904 (Rio di Janeiro), and Il Nazareno, 1911 (Buenos Aires).

Gianotti, Pietro (Lucca, ?–1765, Paris). Italian double-bassist at the Paris Opéra. Wrote violin- and 'cello-sonatas, trios, duets, etc., and a work on harmony (1759), based on Rameau.

Giarda, Luigi Stefano (n. Alessandria, 1868). Italian 'cellist, trained at the Milan Conservatory, from 1893 teacher at the Padua Istituto and since 1897 at the Naples Conservatory. Has written the operas Rejetto, 1898, and Giorgio Byron, a string-quartet, a 'cello-sonata, a Konzertstück for 'cello and orchestra, an adagio for 4 'celli, a violin-suite, duets for violin and 'cello, études, etc.

Giardini, Felice de' (Turin, 1716–1796, Moscow). Eminent Italian violinist, pupil of Paladini and Somis, from 1728 playing in theater-orchestras in Rome and Naples, becoming concertmaster and conductor, in 1748 set out by way of Germany and Paris for London, where he first appeared in 1751, making a profound impression and from 1752 becoming leader at the Italian Opera. For a time from 1756 and in 1763–65 he was manager of the latter (with heavy losses), then busied himself with teaching and acting as leader (in 1770–76 at the Three Choirs' Festivals, in 1774–80 at the Pantheon Concerts, in 1782–83 again at the Opera) and in 1784 retired to Italy, but in 1789–91 returned to introduce comic opera in London and then took his troupe to Russia. In early life his liking for foolish decorations in playing was sharply rebuked by Jommelli (by a box on the ear) and as a mature artist he was not able fully to compete with players like Cramer and Salomon. Yet his fine tone and vivacious expression had real distinction. Wrote 12 violin-concertos, 6 piano-quintets, 12 string-quartets, several trios and duets, 6 sonatas and many solos, all of excellent quality, besides 5 operas (1756-64), an oratorio (1752), songs and catches. See Pohl, Mozart u. Haydn in London. G.

Gibbons, Christopher (1615-1676). 17th C. G.

Gibbons, Orlando (1583-1625). 17th C. G.

Gibbs, Armstrong (n. Chelmsford, 1889). English composer, trained at Cambridge University and the Royal College, London, becoming teacher at the latter. Has written music for De la Mare's Crossings, Webster's White Devil, Maeterlinck's Verlobnis (1921) and Aeschylus' Orestes (1921), the choral work Before Dawn, the symphonic poem The Vision of Night, 6 string-quartets, a Dance-Phantasy for piano-sextet, a violin-sonata, a piano-suite, many songs, etc.

Gibert [Gisbert], Francisco Xavier (Granadilla, ?-1848, Madrid). Spanish priest, from 1800 maestro at Tarazona and from 1804 at a Madrid convent. Wrote good church-music.

Gibert, Paul César (Versailles, 1717-1787, Paris). French composer, trained at Naples, producing several operas at the Comédie-Italienne in Paris (from 1738), with one at the Opéra (1770?).

Gibson, George Alfred (Nottingham, 1849). English violinist and violist, pupil of H. Farmer, beginning public playing at eleven, from 1867 in London orchestras (in 1870-71 at Drury Lane and in 1871-83 at Covent Garden), becoming also violinist in O. Svendsen's Octet and from 1893 leader of the Queen's Private Band, succeeding Ludwig Straus (this position still held). He has long taught at the Royal Academy and the Guildhall School. G.

Gibsone, Guillaume Ignace (London, ?1826-?). English (Scottish?) pianist, pupil of Moschles, in 1845-50 touring in Belgium and Germany, then returning to London as teacher. Wrote an opera, 3 cantatas, 2 symphonies, a violin-sonata and many popular piano-pieces and songs.

Gide, Casimir (Paris, 1804-1868, do.). French book-dealer, composer of 6 operas (1828-58) and 7 ballets.

Gieburowski, Waclaw. Polish historical student, trained at Berlin University (Ph.D. 1913), from about 1916 choirmaster at the Posen Cathedral and in 1919-22 lecturing at the University there. Author of monographs on Polish music in the 15-17th centuries (1915-22).

Gietmann, Gerhard (n. Xanten, 1845-1912, Exaeten, Holland). Rhenish Jesuit, author of De Re Metrica Hebraeorum, 1880, Klassische

Dichter u. Dichtungen, 3 vols. 1885-89, Grundriss d. Stilistik, Poetik u. Aesthetik, 1897, Kunstlehre, 5 vols. (3d vol. on Musikästhetik), 1899-1903 (with Sörensen) and Die Wahrheit in d. Gregorianischen Frage, 1904, besides contributions to the Kirchenmusikal. Jahrbuch and other periodicals. See Musica Sacra, 1913.

Gigout, Eugène (Nancy, 1844). Eminent French organist, pupil of the Niedermeyer School, Paris, and of Saint-Saëns, since 1863 at St.-Augustin and elsewhere widely known through concert-tours. In 1863-85 and also 1900-05 he taught at the Niedermeyer School, in 1885 established a notable Organ School of his own (with government-subsidy), and since 1911 has been professor in the Conservatory. He is specially famous as an improvisator. Since 1885 he has been Officier de l'Instruction Publique, from 1895 member of the Légion d'Honneur and is also Commander in the Order of Isabella the Catholic. Has written 100 Pièces Brèves and Album Grégorien, 2 vols. with about 225 pieces (both these works in the Gregorian modes), a large number of concert-pieces, including a Prelude and Fugue, a Toccata, a Scherzo, a Marche de Fête, Poèmes Mystiques, Rhapsodies on the Noël, on Catalan themes and on Canadian airs, etc., a piano-sonata and other pieces (some for 4 hands), choir-music and songs. G.

Gil, Francisco Assis (Cadiz, 1829-?). Spanish theorist, pupil of Fétis, long professor at the Madrid Conservatory. Author of a text-book in harmony (1856), a translation of Fétis' book on harmony (1850) and articles in the Gaceta Musical (1855-56). Wrote several operas.

Gil y Llagostera, Caytan (Barcelona, 1807-?). Spanish flutist at the Barcelona Cathedral and theater. Wrote symphonies, orchestral dances, flute-pieces and church-music.

Gilbert, Alfred (Salisbury, 1828-1902, London). English pianist, pupil of the Royal Academy, London, organist in London churches and active in various leading organizations. From 1884 member of the Accademia S. Cecilia in Rome. Wrote a quintet, a string-suite, 3 piano-trios, 3 operettas and a piano-method. His son Alfred (b. 1854) is well known as a sculptor.

Gilbert, Ernest Thomas (Salisbury, 1833-1885, London), brother of the above. English organist, pupil of the Royal Academy, London, and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1853 engaged at various provincial churches and from 1864 in London, where he was also active as singing-teacher. Wrote 2 overtures, 2 string-quartets, a piano-trio, the cantata Ramiro, 1879, 2 operettas, piano-pieces, part-songs and songs.

Gilbert, Henry Franklin Belknap (Somerville, Mass. 1868). Eminent American composer, pupil of E. Mollenhauer, the New England Conservatory, Boston, and MacDowell. In 1894 he was active in giving concerts in Boston to illustrate Slavic tendencies in modern music and from 1901 was prominent in the movement represented by the Wa-Wan Press to emphasize Indian and Negro material. In 1917-18 he lectured at Harvard and Columbia Universities on 'Humor in Music' and has written ably for periodicals. His works include (for orchestra) Americanesque, 1903, Comedy-Overture on Negro Themes, 1911, 3 American Dances, 1911, Negro Rhapsody, 1913 (Norfolk), 2 Episodes, the symphonic prologue Riders to the Sea, 1915 (based on Celtic themes), Salammbo's Invocation to Tanith (with soprano), 6 Indian Sketches, the symphonic ballet The Dance in Place Congo, 1918 (Metropolitan Opera House), and a hymn To America, besides some piano-pieces and many songs. He has also edited a collection of folk-songs. See Musical Quarterly, 1918. A.

Gilbert, Walter Bond (Exeter, 1829-1910, Oxford). English organist, pupil of Angel, Wesley and Bishop, from about 1845 engaged at various English churches (including Maidstone, London and Boston) and in 1869-99 highly regarded as organist at Trinity Chapel in New York, then returning to England. Mus.D. of Toronto Univ. in 1886 and of Oxford Univ. in 1888. Wrote the oratorios St. John, 1857, and The Restoration of Israel, 1859, 3 services, many anthems, organ-pieces and tunes, edited collections of church-music (1854-82) and also published historical researches about Maidstone (1864-65). A.

Gilchrist, William Wallace (Jersey City, N. J. 1846-1916, Easton, Pa.). Eminent American conductor and composer, pupil of H. A. Clarke, from 1874 founder and conductor of the Mendelssohn Club in Philadelphia, later conductor of the orchestra from which the present Symphony Orchestra was developed in 1900, from 1892 president of the new Manuscript Music Society and the Musical Art Club, always a leading vocal teacher, from 1882 teaching in the Musical Academy, and long the choirmaster at the Swedenborgian Church. From 1882 he repeatedly won prizes in composition. Mus.D. of the Univ. of Pennsylvania in 1882. Wrote symphonies in C and D, a nonet for piano, strings and wind, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, Psalms 46 and 90, a Christmas oratorio, a choral Song of Thanksgiving, the cantata The Rose, 1887, an Easter Idyl, many anthems and other church-music, songs, etc. His style was marked by a union of technical dexterity and fine imagination. A.

Giles, Nathaniel (17550-1633). 16th C. G.

Gilbert, Charles (Paris, 1866-1910, New York). Able French operatic baritone, trained at the Paris Conservatory, from about 1888 engaged at the Monnaie in Brussels, in 1900-03 at the Metropolitan, New York, and in 1906-10 at the Manhattan. His return to the Metropolitan was prevented by sudden death. He was noted as a song-singer, especially of old French songs. A.

Gille, Karl (n. Hanover, 1861-1917, do.). Hanoverian conductor, pupil of Fischer, Bott and Metzdorff, from about 1885 theater-director at Elbing, Reval, Dorpat, Berlin, Coblenz and Düsseldorf, from 1891 court-director at Schwerin, from 1897 Mahler's successor at the Hamburg Opera, from 1906 at the Vienna Volksoper (in 1908-09 also at the New Opera, Berlin, in the summer) and from 1910 at the Hanover Opera.

Gillingham, George. A superior English violinist who from 1794 for about thirty years was influential in Philadelphia. See Sonneck, Early Concert-Life in America, 1907. A.

Gillmeister, Karl (n. Magdeburg, 1856). Saxon operatic bass, trained at the Berlin Hochschule, from about 1880 well known on German stages and in 1887-1907 at the Hanover Opera.

Gilman, Benjamin Ives (New York, 1852). Since 1893 secretary of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. Author of reports upon researches in Indian music (1891, 1908). A.

Gilman, Lawrence (Flushing, N. Y. 1878). Eminent American critic and author, self-trained in music, from 1901 engaged upon Harper's Weekly, from 1913 on the staff of the North American Review, and in 1923 Krehbiel's successor on the Tribune. Author of Phases of Modern Music, 1904, a life of MacDowell, 1905 (enlarged 1909), The Music of To-Morrow, 1906, Stories of Symphonic Music, 1907, Aspects of Modern Music, 1908, Nature in Music, 1914, and Guides to Strauss' Salome and Debussy's Pelléas et Mélisande (both 1907). Has written two recitations with music. A.

Gilmore, Patrick Sarsfield (n. Dublin, 1829-1892, St. Louis). Irish bandmaster, from 1849 active in the United States, at first in Boston, during the Civil War in the army, giving large festivals at Boston in 1869 and '72, and then in charge of a fine band that toured the entire country for years and also visited Europe. G. A.

Gilse, Jan van (Rotterdam, 1881). Able Dutch composer, pupil of Wüllner and Humperdinck, from 1905 conductor of the Bremen Opera, in 1908-09 of the Dutch Opera at Amsterdam and in 1917-22 town-director at Utrecht. Has written 4 symphonies (prizes for 1st and 3d), an overture, 2 orchestral intermezzi and variations on a Dutch song, the opera Frau Helga von Stavern (original text), a choral setting of Dehmel's Eine Lebensmesse, and songs (some with orchestra).

Gilson, Paul (Brussels, 1865). Eminent Belgian composer, largely self-taught, but until 1889 also studying at the Brussels Conservatory (Prix de Rome) and since 1899 professor there, besides from 1904 also teaching at the Antwerp Conservatory. Since 1906 he has further been critic for Le Soir. Has written the symphony La Mer, 1892, the symphonic poems Halia and La Destinée, several overtures, an orchestral fantasia on Canadian themes, Scottish Dances and Rhapsody, a Suite Pastorale, a Norwegian Suite for wind, a septet, 2 Humoresken, a choral work for the opening of the Exposition of 1897, also David and Les Supplantes, the dramatic cantata Francesca da Rimini, 1895, the operas Alvar, 1895, Gens de Mer (or Seevolk), 1902, Prinses Zonnenschijn, 1903, incidental music to Liefdebloem, Alva and Rooversliede, and the ballet La Captive, 1902. Author of Le Tutti Orchestral, 1913, a manual of instrumentation (for bands), harmony-exercises and an edition of Dupont's exercises. G. A.

Giner, Salvador (Valencia, 1832-1911, do.). Spanish composer, head of the Valencia Conservatory. Wrote 10 operas, including L'Indovina, Sagunto, 1891, and El Soñador, 1901, the oratorio Judit, the cantata Las Cuatro Estaciones, a symphony and other orchestral works.

Ginguené, Pierre Louis (Rennes, 1748-1816, Paris). Eminent French historian of literature, whose chief work, Histoire Littéraire d'Italie, 14 vols. 1811-35, contains much on musical subjects, especially in the mediæval period. He was active in the Gluck-Piccinni discussion, taking sides for the latter (articles collected 1783), and wrote a life of Piccinni (1800). He was one of the chief contributors (with Framery) to the first part (1791) of the musical division of the Encyclopédie Méthodique, writing also on the interpretation of Greek musical notation (1815).

Giordani, Giuseppe (Naples, 1744-1798, Fermo), brother of the following. Italian composer, trained at the Conservatorio di Loreto, Naples, in 1772-82 teaching in London and from 1791 maestro at Fermo Cathedral. Wrote about 35 operas (1771-93), including Il Bacio, 1774, 2 oratorios, much chamber-music, piano-sonatas, 5 books of canzonets, much other vocal music, etc. G.

Giordani, Tommaso (Naples, ?1740-after 1816, Dublin). Italian teacher, for a time from 1762 a buffo-singer in London, in 1779 making an unsuccessful venture as manager of Italian opera in Dublin and remaining there as teacher. Wrote the opera Perseverance, 1789, the oratorio Isaac, trios and duets for flute or 'cello with piano, etc. Probably many works attributed to his brother (see above) were jointly composed. G.

Giordano, Umberto (Foggia, 1867). Notable Italian operatic composer, trained at the Naples Conservatory, appearing in 1889 (with Mascagni) as a competitor for the Sonzogno prize and then soon securing attention through works in the veristic vein, often with melodious passages or thrilling intensity, but seldom well-wrought throughout. Has written Miranda (offered in 1889 to Sonzogno, but beaten by Mascagni's Cavalleria), Mala Vita (or Il Voto), 1892, Regina Diaz, 1894, Andrea Chenier, 1896 (his strongest work), Fedora, 1898, Siberia, 1903, Marcella, 1907, Mese Mariano, 1910, Madame Sans-Gêne, 1915 (New York), and Giove a Pompei, 1921 (with Franchetti). The vigor of his genius has led to his being made Commander in the Order of the Crown and member of the Légion d'Honneur. (He is an advocate of scoring orchestral parts 'a suoni reali', i.e., without transposing). G.

Giorgetti, Ferdinando (Florence, 1796-1837, do.). Gifted Italian violinist, in 1839 forced to give up a concert-career by a nervous affection and then professor at the Florence Liceo. Wrote a Concerto Drammatica, 2 sextets, a string-quintet, 3 quartets, trios, etc., with notable ability, besides church-music.

Giorni, Aurelio (Perugia, 1895). Able Italian pianist, pupil of Sgambati and Humperdinck, from 1912 making successful tours in Italy, Germany, Switzerland, Holland and Scandinavia, and since 1915 also in the United States. A.

Giorza, Paolo (Milan, 1838-1914, Seattle, Wash.). Popular Italian composer of dance-music, working in many different places, including New York, San Francisco and (from 1906) Seattle. Wrote over 40 ballets (from 1853), the opera Corrado, 1860, many marches, dances, etc. A.

Giosa, Nicola de (Bari, 1820-1885, do.). Italian composer, pupil of the Naples Conservatory, becoming opera-director successively at San Carlo in Naples, the Fenice in Venice, in Buenos Aires, Cairo, etc. Wrote 24 operas (from 1842), including the effective Don Checco, 1850, a large number of graceful songs and some church-music.

Giovacchini, Giovacchino (Florence, 1825-1906, do.). Fine Italian violinist, pupil of Giorgetti, for a time court-violinist at Florence, leader of the Florentine Quartet and professor in the Istituto, forming many excellent pupils.

Giovannelli, Ruggiero (?1560-1625). 16th C. G.

Giovanni da Cascia. 14th C.

Giovannini. A violinist who lived mainly in Berlin in 1740-82 and in 1745 produced (under the pseudonym 'Graf von St. Germain') the pasticcio L'Incostanza Delusa at London. Songs by him are given in Gräfe's Odensammlung, 1741-43), among them one also known in a copy contained in Anna Bach's Clavier-Büchlein (1725), over which some discussion has arisen. G.

Giraldoni, Leone (Paris, 1824-1897, Moscow). Able Italian-French operatic baritone, appearing in Italy in 1847 (from 1850 at La Scala, Milan) and retiring in 1885. Later he taught at the Moscow Conservatory. Author of 2 vocal methods (1864, 2d ed. 1884, and 1889).

Girard, Narcisse (Nantes, 1797-1860, Paris). French violinist and conductor, pupil of Baillet, in 1830-32 director at the Italiens, in 1837-46 at the Opéra-Comique, from 1846 Habeneck's successor as conductor at the Opéra and from 1856 general director there. From 1847 he was also professor at the Conservatory and conductor of its concerts. Wrote 2 short operas (1841-42). He died from apoplexy while directing a performance of Les Huguenots.

Giraudet, Alfred Auguste (Étampes, 1845). Noted French operatic bass, pupil of Delsarte, making his formal début at Paris in 1868, later singing at Bordeaux and in Italy, from 1874 again at Paris (Opéra-Comique, 1875, Opéra, 1880), retiring in 1883 to become a favorite teacher (in 1888-90 at the Conservatory). He sang at the première of Thomas' Françoise de Rimini (1882). Author of Mimique-Physiologie et Gestes, 1895.

Gittelson, Frank (Philadelphia, 1896). American violinist, pupil of Visanska, Auer and Flesch, making his début at Berlin in 1913 under Gabilovitch and then touring in Germany, Austria, Holland and England. Since 1914 he has been in America, from 1919 professor at the Peabody Conservatory, Baltimore. He has introduced the concertos of d'Ambrosio. A.

Giuliani, Mauro (Bologna, ?1780-1830?, Vienna). Italian guitarist, from 1807 active in Vienna. Wrote about 200 works for the guitar alone or with other instruments.

Gizzi, Domenico (Arpino, 1684-1745, do.). Famous singing-teacher at Naples, pupil of A. Scarlatti and for many years (till 1740) teacher at the Conservatorio S. Onofrio (Feo and G. Conti among his pupils). Wrote some church-music.

Gizziello. See Conti, Gioacchino (so-called from his teacher Gizzi).

Gladstone, Francis Edward (n. Oxford, 1845). Able English organist, pupil of S. S. Wesley, from 1864 at Weston-super-Mare, from 1866 at Llandaff Cathedral, from 1870 at Chichester Cathedral, from 1873 in Brighton and London, from 1877 at Norwich Cathedral and in 1881-86 again in London, retiring because of ill-health, though teaching at the Royal College and in 1887-94 being choirmaster at St. Mary's (Bayswater). Has written the cantatas Nicodemus, 1880, Philippi, 1883, and Constance of Calais, 1885, 2 masses, much other church-music (mostly Anglican), an overture, a piano-trio (1876) and other chamber-music, organ-pieces, part-songs and songs, with text-books in organ-playing and counterpoint (1906). G.

Glareanus, Henricus [Heinrich Loris] (1488-1563). 16th C. G.

Glasenapp, Karl Friedrich (Riga, 1847-1915, do.). German-Russian teacher of the German language and literature at the Riga Polytechnic School (from 1875), a lifelong specialist on Wagner. Author of Wagners Leben u. Wirken, 2 vols. 1876-77 (rewritten and completed as Das Leben Wagners, 6 vols. 1894-1911), which became the starting-point for Ellis' large work (1900-08), Wagner-Lexikon, 1883 (with Von Stein). Wagner-Encyklopädie, 2 vols. 1891, Siegfried Wagner, 1906, and S. Wagner u. seine Kunst, 1911 (2d ed. 1913), with two sets of Wagner's letters (1907) and many articles in the Bayreuther Blätter. G.

Gläser, Franz (n. Komotau, 1798-1861, Copenhagen). Bohemian conductor and composer, pupil of Pixis and Heydenreich, from 1817 director at a Vienna theater, from 1830 at Berlin and from 1842 court-conductor at Copenhagen. Wrote 19 operas (from 1824), including Des Adlers Horst, 1833, 8 pantomimes and about 100 other popular stage-works, an overture, a funeral cantata, etc. Memoir by Pfeil, 1870. G.

Glass, Louis Christian August (Copenhagen, 1864), son of Christian Hendrik Glass (1821-1893) the organist. Danish composer, as well as pianist and 'cellist, pupil of his father and the Brussels Conservatory, long active at Copenhagen. Has written 4 symphonies, the overtures Der Volksfeind and Dänemark, 2 orchestral suites, a fantasia for piano and orchestra, an oboe-concerto, a string-sextet, a piano-quintet, 4 string-quartets, a piano-trio, 2 violin-sonatas, 3 piano-sonatas and other piano-works. He conducts the music-school founded by his father, the Danish Concert Union and a Teachers' Union.

Glazunov, Alexander Constantinovitch (Petrograd, 1865). Distinguished Russian composer, pupil of Jelenowski and Rimsky-Korsakov, becoming known from 1881, in 1884 visiting Weimar, in 1889 Paris and in 1897 London. Since 1899 he has been professor of orchestration at the Petrograd Conservatory, in 1909-12 and again recently turning aside to be its director, and has also been an official in the Imperial Musical Society. Though much associated with the New-Russian circle and sharing largely in their aims, he is also a strong admirer of Brahms and intent upon preserving the structural values of a more classical style. His command of orchestration is unquestioned. His works include the following (opus-numbers in brackets):

Orchestral Works

Symphonies—1, E [5] (1882), 2, F-sharp min. [16] (1886), 3, D [33] (1890), 4, E-flat [48] (1894), 5, B-flat [55] (1896), 6, C min. [58] (1897), 7, F [77] (1901), 8, E-flat [83].
Symphonic poem, Stenka Razin [13]; Poème Lyrique [12]; symphonic sketch, Une Fête Slave [26]; symphonic picture, The Kremlin [30]; symphonic prologue, À Gogol [87] (1909).
Overtures—on Greek themes [3, 6]; Carnaval [45]; Solennelle [73]; Dramatic, Le Chant du Destin [84].
Suites—Characteristic [9]; Chopiniana [46]; Scènes de Ballet [52]; from the ballet Raymonda [57a]; Aus dem Mittelalter [79]; Kalevala (Esquisses Finnoises) [89] (1909); also music to the ballet Fern von Dänemark.
Concertos—for violin, in A min. [82] (1909); for piano, in F min. [92].
Ballets—The Seasons [67]; Raymonda [57] (1898); Ruses d'Amour [61] (1900).
Incidental music to Wilde's Salome (Introduction and Danse) [90] and to Grand Duke Constantine's King of Judea (1914).
Fantasias—The Forest [19]; The Sea [28]; Through Night to Light [53]; Finnnoise [88] (1910).
2 Serenades [7, 11] (the second for small orchestra); Elegy, To a Hero's Memory [8]; Idylle and Réverie Orientale [14]; Slavic Festival (from quartet in G [26]); Oriental Rhapsody [29]; Spring [34]; Intermezzo Romantico [69]; Ballade [78].
Marches—Wedding [21]; Triumphant (chorus ad lib.) [40] (1895, Chicago Exposition); on a Russian theme [76].
Cortèges Solennels [50, 91].
Mazurka [18]; Valses de Concert [47, 51]; Pas de Caractère [68]; Scène Dansante [81].

Chamber-Music

String-quintet [39]; string-quartets in D [1], F [10], G [26], A [64], D [70]; Suite for string-quartet [35]; 5 Novellettes do. [15]. In modo religioso, for 4 brass instruments [38].
Méditation, violin and piano [32]; Élégie, viola and piano [44]; Pensée à Liszt [17]; 2 pieces [20], Chani du Ménestrel [71], all 'cello and piano (or orchestra); Réverie, horn and piano [24].

Piano-Works

Sonatas in E-flat [74] and E [75].

Suite on s-a-c-h-a [2].

Prelude and Fugue [62]; Theme and Variations [72];

2 Impromptus [54]; 2 Preludes [85]; Barcarolle and Novellette [22]; Nocturne [37]; 3 Miniatures [42];

3 Morceaux [49]; 3 Etudes [31].

Grand Valse de Concert [41]; Valse de Salon [43]; Waltzes

on s-a-b-e-la [23]; Petite Valses [36]; Prelude and 2

Mazurkas [25].

Also Prelude and Fugue for organ [93].

Vocal Works

Cantatas—Memorial, for soli, chorus and orchestra

[65] (1901, Leeds Festival); Coronation, for women's voices [63].

Hymn to Pushkin, for women's voices [66].

About 20 songs [27, 59, 60, 66] and a duet [80].

With Rimsky-Korsakov he completed and orchestrated

Borodin's Prince Igor, 1891. He also reproduced from memory the overture.

He has long been a partner in the publishing-firm of Belaiev—in whose honor he joined in with Rimsky-Korsakov, Borodin and Liadov in writing a quartet on b-la-f. Biography by Ossowsky, 1907. G, A.

Gleason, Frederic Grant (Middletown, Conn. 1848–1903, Chicago). American composer, pupil of Dudley Buck, the Leipzig Conservatory, Loeschhorn, Weitzmann, Haupt and Beringer, from 1875 organist in Hartford and New Britain, Conn., from 1877 teacher at the Hershey School, Chicago, and from 1900 head of the Auditorium Conservatory there. In 1884–89 he was critic for the Chicago Tribune, and from 1896 president of the Manuscript Society. Wrote the operas Otho Visconti, (1892) 1907, and Montezuma, both to original texts, the symphonic poem Edris, 1896, a piano-concerto in G min., orchestral Sketches, piano-trios in C min., A and D min., an organ-sonata in C-sharp min., an Overture Triumphale for organ, a Theme and Variations and other organ-pieces, the cantatas God our Deliverer, The Culprit Fay, Praise-Song to Harmony and Auditorium Festival Ode, 1889, Psalm 67, 2 services, anthems, part-songs and songs, with some piano-pieces. G, A.

Gleich, Ferdinand (Erfurt, 1816–1898, n. Dresden). Thuringian critic, from about 1850 writing for the Leipzig Tageblatt and from 1866 for the Dresden Anzeiger. Wrote several popular handbooks of operas (1857), instrumentation (1860), forms (1862), etc., a symphony, piano-pieces, songs, etc.

Geissner, Franz (n. Weiden, 1760–after 1815, Munich). Bavarian composer, from about 1800 in the Munich court-band, but best known as the introducer of music-lithography, establishing a business at Offenbach in 1799. Wrote chamber- and piano-music, an opera (1814), several ballets, an oratorio, masses, etc.

Glantz, Karl (n. Kassel, 1862–1920, Torgau). Hessian composer, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, the Munich Akademie and at Berlin, long living at Hamburg and also conductor of a chorus at Lübeck. Wrote the symphonic poems Fata Morgana, 1898, Alberichs Drohung, Ahasver, Venus und Bellona, Joss Fritz and Pietà, the fantasy Irrlichter for piano and orchestra, and a violin-sonata, besides the polemic Künstlers Erdenwallen, 2 vols. 1896–97.

Glen, John (Edinburgh, 1833–1904, do.), son of the following, and in 1866 his successor. Noted authority on Scottish music, publishing The Glen Collection, 2 vols. 1891–95 (about 290 popular dances) and Early Scottish Melodies, 1900. His brother Robert (b. 1835) made a valuable collection of old Scottish instruments. G.

Glen, Thomas Macbean (n. Dunfermline, 1804–1873, Edinburgh). From 1827 instrument-maker in Edinburgh, becoming famous for his bagpipes. G.

Glière, Reinhold Moritzovitch (Kiev, 1875). Able Russian composer, trained at the Moscow Conservatory, graduating in 1900. Since 1913 he has been director of the Kiev Conservatory and conductor of the Kiev Orchestra. Has written symphonies in E-flat (1902) and C, the symphonic poems Les Sirènes and Ilia Murometz (called a 'symphony'), an orchestral suite, a string-octet, 3 string-sextets, 2 string-quartets, a Ballade for 'cello, many piano-pieces (some for 2 pianos), and songs, besides the opera Awakened (not yet given). G.

Glinka, Michail Ivanovitch (n. Smolensk, 1804–1857, Berlin). Eminent Russian composer, the first to bring the national spirit to important artistic expression. His father was a retired army officer of noble rank and he had a good general education, including musical study with Böhm, Carl Meyer, Field and (in 1834) Dehn, the latter at length giving him the theoretical basis for large composition. He early became a facile pianist, was diligent in studying works by German masters and had at one time intense enthusiasm over Italian opera. But his technical development was hindered by physical weaknesses that sent him in 1823 to the Caucasus and in 1830–34 to Italy and finally Berlin. Prior to the Italian trip he had been from 1824 a clerk in one of the government offices in Petrograd. On his return he set forward to create a national opera, the result being two epoch-making works in 1836 and 1842. In 1844–54 he lived abroad, visiting France, Spain, Italy and Poland. In Paris he gave orchestral concerts. In 1856 he was again in Berlin. His only musical office was that of choirmaster in the Imperial Chapel in 1836–39, in connection with which he made a trip to Little Russia that added to his stock of national material. His relatively few works include the operas A Life for the Czar, 1836, and Russian and Ludmilla, 1842, the Spanish overtures La Jota Aragonesa and Souvenir d'une Nuit d'Été à Madrid, the fantasia Kamarinskaja, a Valse-Fantaisie, 1839 (revised 1856), 2 orchestral polonaises and a tarantelle, incidental music to Kukulnik's Prince Cholmsky, a piano-sextet, a string-quartet (1830), a minuet for string-quartet, a trio for piano, clarinet and bassoon, about 40 piano-pieces, a cantata (for the Coronation of Nicholas I in 1826) and other choral works, some ritual music and about 85 songs. Many early works have never been published, but a catalogue was made by Findeisen (1898). He was author of an essay on instrumentation and some vocalises, and also began an autobiography (published by his sister, with letters and reminiscences, 1887). Memoirs by Laroche, 1868, Fouque, 1880, Findeisen, 1896 (2d ed. 1904) and '98, Calvo-coressi, 1910, '13, and in many works on Russian music (including Riesemann's Monographien, 1922). Letters have been published by Findeisen (1907-08) and a thematic catalogue of vocal works by Albrecht (1891). G.

Glöggel, Franz (Linz, 1797-1872, Vienna), son of the following. In 1850-62 publisher of the Neue Wiener Musikzeitung, and for years archivist of the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde. In 1843 he started a business that was absorbed by Bösendorfer, and in 1849-53 and again later established music-schools.

Glöggel, Franz Xaver (Linz, 1764-1839, do.). Austrian church-musician, from 1782 director at the Linz theater, but from 1790 choirmaster at the Cathedral and town-director. Author of a text-book in harmony (1810), a fragmentary musical dictionary (1822) and Der musikal. Gottesdienst, 1822. He made a collection of instruments, with drawings and descriptions, which in 1824 he sold to the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde in Vienna.

Glover, John William, (Dublin, 1815-1900, do.). Irish composer and choral leader, from 1830 violinist in a Dublin theater, from 1848 Haydn Corri's successor as choirmaster at the Pro-Cathedral and also teacher at the Normal Training School and in 1851 founder of the Choral Institute, which stimulated interest in choral music throughout the country. Wrote 3 operas, including The Deserted Village, 1880, the cantatas or odes St. Patrick at Tara, 1870, Erin's Matin Song, Patria, 1873, and One Hundred Years Ago, 1879, masses and other church-music, concertos for violin and for organ, organ- and piano-pieces, and many songs. Edited Moore's Irish Melodies (1859). G.

Glover, Sarah Ann (Norwich, 1785-1867, Malvern). English teacher in Norwich, who about 1840 grouped the points in elementary pedagogical practice that were later developed by John Curwen into the Tonic Sol-Fa system. She published two manuals (1845, '50). G.

Glover, Stephen Ralph (London, 1812-1870, do.). English composer of hundreds of popular songs which from about 1840 had an extraordinary vogue. G.

Glöcker, William Howard (London, 1819-1875, New York). English violinist, from about 1840 touring on the Continent and then managing a school in London. In 1868 he migrated to New York, where for a time he led the orchestra at Niblo's Theatre. Wrote the opera Ruy Blas, 1861, several operettas, the cantata Tam O' Shanter, 1855, 2 overtures, etc. For some time he was critic for the London Morning Post. G. A.

Gluck, Alma [Reba Fierston] (Bucharest, 1884). Gifted Rumanian operatic soprano, brought up in New York, pupil of Buzzi-Peccia, in 1909-12 engaged at the Metropolitan. Since 1912 she has confined herself to concert-work. In 1914 she married the violinist Zimbalist. A.

Gluck, Christoph Willibald, Ritter von (n. Neumarkt, [July 2] 1714-1787 [Nov. 15], Vienna), son of a forester on one of Prince Lobkowitz' estates. Distinguished Bavarian composer, becoming at length the leader in the reform in the opera that was the foundation of modern styles. His general education was at the Jesuit school at Komotau, where he was trained as a choirboy and in playing the violin, harpsichord and organ. From 1732 he was at Prague, supporting himself through various musical activities and finally having lessons from Czernohorsky, becoming a good cellist. In 1736, at Vienna, he came under the patronage of Count Melzi, who took him to Milan, giving him a four years' course under Sammartini. He then entered upon his career as opera-composer, speedily gaining reputation in Italy as an expert in the established Italian style. In 1745-46 he was invited to London and also visited Paris, acquiring fruitful suggestion at the former from his unsuccessful competition with Handel and at the latter from the study of Rameau's works. From 1748 he was settled at Vienna, but with activity (in connection with the impresario Pietro Mingotti) at Dresden in 1747, in 1747-48 at Prague and in 1749 at Copenhagen, besides going to Italy in 1750. In 1754 he became director of the Court Opera at Vienna. Up to 1762 he continued to produce works along conventional lines, though with some modifications due to the impact upon his mind of the style of the new French comic opera. In 1750 he married Marianne Pergin, a rich and cultivated woman. With her he moved widely in the best society of Vienna, having many contacts with literary and scholarly people. Various influences tended to induce reflection upon the stiff and artificial form of the ordinary opera. The result was that from 1762 he began to shape his style on new lines. In this he was assisted by the littérateur Calzabigi (1714-1795), who was his librettist for three works in 1762-69 that evinced both dramatic and musical originality of a high order, though he did not yet abandon other writing in conventional forms. In hopes of securing a more sympathetic hearing, in 1772 he went to Paris, where he used various means (newspaper articles, the patronage of Marie Antoinette, etc.) to induce both public and critics to regard his innovations with intelligence, if not enthusiasm. The immediate result was the outbreak of a violent contest of partisans, his opponents importing the Italian Piccini to compete with him. The famous struggle culminated in 1779, when, both composers having undertaken the same libretto, Gluck's setting was triumphantly produced. This work, Iphigénie en Tauride, marked the culmination of his power and also the practical end of his activity. He retired to Vienna and gradually failed in health, suffering a stroke in 1784 and dying from a second attack.

PERCY GOETSCHIOUS

Gluck's reaction was primarily against the mechanicalness of the typical Neapolitan or 'concert' opera, with its arbitrary structure and its exaggerated emphasis on vocal display. He sought to return to the dramatic sincerity of the original dramma per musica. But at the same time the forms of expression must be far more elaborate than those originally applied. His problem was therefore both dramatic and musical. He did away with the current rules about the sequence and style of arias, making the entire procedure flexible to the demands of the plot, increased the use of concerted numbers, recognized the importance of the chorus and lifted the orchestra into vital action. Only an artist of great experience, of decided originality and of moral determination could have achieved as suddenly as he did the rectification of a system that was entrenched in the usage of the entire operatic world. It is true that the old system was not wholly overthrown. But after 1780 its hold was so shaken that its stark formality was steadily replaced by various more natural and more expressive types.

The total number of Gluck's stage-works, including many of slight importance, appears to be over 100. Of those belonging to his strongly Italian period (up to 1762) the following are the most significant:

Artaserse, 1741 (Milan), Demetrio (Cleonice), 1742 (Venice), Demofoonte, 1742 (Milan), Ipermestra, 1742 (Venice), Artamene, 1743 (Cremona), Siface, 1743 (Milan), Fedra, 1744 (Milan), Alessandro nell'Indie (Il Rè Poro), 1745 (Turin), La Caduta de' Giganti, 1746 (London), La Semiramide Riconosciuta, 1748 (Vienna), Telemacco, 1750 (Rome), La Clemenza di Tito, 1751 (Naples), Le Cinesi, 1754 (Schönbrunn), Il Trionfo di Camillo, 1754 (Rome), Antigono, 1754 (Rome), L'Innocenza Giustificata, 1756 (Vienna), Il Rè Pastore, 1756 (Vienna), Tetide, 1760 (Vienna), Il Trionfo di Clelia, 1762 (Bologna), Ezio, 1763 (Vienna).

Those which exhibit the gradual development of his reconstructive dramatic policy include

Orfeo ed Euridice, 1762 (Vienna, 1774, Paris), Alceste, 1767 (Vienna, 1776, Paris), Paride ed Elena, 1769 (Vienna), Iphigénie en Aulide, 1774 (Paris), Armide, 1777 (Paris), Iphigénie en Tauride, 1779 (Paris), Écho et Narcisse, 1779 (Paris).

In addition to his operas he also wrote about 10 sinfonie (overtures), 6 trio-sonatas and a quartet, choral settings of Psalms 8 (a cappella) and 137, 7 odes by Klopstock (voice and orchestra) and a few songs.

Memoirs and monographs include (besides innumerable articles and special critiques) those by Riedel, 1775, Leblond et al. 1781, Miel, 1840, Gregor, 1848, Schmid, 1854, Hedouin, 1859, Wurzbach, 1859 (in Biograph. Lexikon), Marx, 2 vols. 1863, Rudhart, 1864, Nohl, 1870, Desnois-terres, 1872, Jullien, 1878, Thoinan, 1878, Barbedette, 1882, Reissmann, 1882, Bitter, 1884, Welti, 1888, Heil, 1889, Newman, 1895, d'Udine, 1906, '13, Tiersot, 1910, La Mara, 1912, Kurth, 1913 (in Adler's Studien), Arend, 1914, '21, and see also Wortsman, Die deutsche Gluck-Littera-

tur, 1914. A notable edition of the greater operas was published by Breitkopf & Härtel in 1873-96, and single works have been reproduced in piano- or vocal score at different times. A thematic catalogue was drafted by Wotquenne in 1904 and a supplement thereto by Liebeskind in 1911. At the instigation of Max Arend a Gluck-Gesellschaft was organized at Leipzig in 1914, publishing a Gluck-Jahrbuch, edited by Abert. G.

Gluth, Viktor (Pilsen, 1852-1917, Munich). Bohemian composer, professor at the Munich Akademie. Wrote the operas Der Trentajäger, 1885 (revised 1911), Horand und Hilde, 1914, and Et Resurrexit.

Gmelch, Joseph (Mühlhausen, Oberpfalz, 1881). Bavarian priest, trained at Eichstätt and Fribourg (Ph.D. 1911), becoming cathedral-chaplain at Eichstätt. Author of a dissertation on quarter-tones in the Montpellier Antiphonale (1911), Neue Aktenstücke zur Gesch. d. Regensburger Medicea, 1912, Die Kompositionen d. heil. Hildegard, 1913, and a history of music at Eichstätt (1915).

Gnecchi, Vittorio (Milan, 1876). Italian composer, trained at the Milan Conservatory, living at Turin. Has written the operas Virtù d'Amore, 1896, Cassandra, 1905, Rosiera and Judith, an overture (for piano, 4 hands) and songs. See articles by Tebaldini in Rivista Musicale, 1909, on the identity of some fifty themes in Cassandra and Strauss' Elektra (1908).

Gnecco, Francesco (Genoa, 1769-1810, Milan). Composer of about 25 operas for various stages in Italy, including the comic La Prova d'una Opera Seria, 1805.

Gobatti, Stefano (Bergantino, 1852-1913, Bologna). Italian composer, pupil of Busi and Rossi. Has written the operas I Goti, 1873, Luce, 1875, and Cordelia, 1881.

Gobbaerts, Jean Louis (Antwerp, 1835-1886, Brussels). Belgian pianist, pupil of the Brussels Conservatory. Wrote a multitude of popular piano-pieces (often under the pen-name 'Streabog').

Göbel, Karl Heinrich Eduard (Berlin, 1815-1879, Bromberg). Prussian pianist, at first theater-director in Danzig, from 1840 conductor of the Bromberg Gesangverein. Wrote the singspiel Die Alpenhütte, 1835, the operas Chrysalide, 1840, and Frithjof, 1860, chamber- and choral works, songs and a piano-method (1873).

Gockel, August (n. Paderborn, 1831-1861, do.). Westphalian pianist, pupil of Mendelssohn and Plaidy, from 1845 touring in Europe and America (1853-55). Wrote a good piano-concerto and many salon-pieces.

Godard, Benjamin Louis Paul (Paris, 1849-1895, Cannes). Eminent French composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (at first as a violinist), early making two visits to Germany with Viextemps and from 1865 becoming noted for able works for violin or chamber-ensemble. In 1878 he entered the field of opera and soon that of orchestral works. Though gifted with much graceful inspiration and with a fine instinct for orchestral color, he was often hasty and superficial in workmanship. Wrote the operas Les Bijoux de Jeannette, 1878, Pedro de Zalamea, 1884, Jocelyn, 1888, Le Dante, 1890, La Vivandière, 1895 (his most successful work), Les Guelphes, 1902, and Ruy Blas (not yet given), incidental music for Much Ado about Nothing (1887), the symphonies in B min. (1880), Gothique, 1883, Orientale, 1884, Légitimiste, 1886 (with soli and chorus), and Le Tasse, 1878 (also with soli and chorus, winning City of Paris prize), an Ouverture Dramatique, the orchestral suites Scènes Poétiques and La Lanterne Magique, the lyric scene Diane et Actéon, 1880, a Symphonie-Ballet, 1882, a piano-concerto, a Concerto Romantique for violin, 2 string-quartets, 2 piano-trios, 4 violin-sonatas, various other chamber-works (winning the Prix Chartier), many piano-pieces and études, and over 100 songs. Memoir by Clerjot, 1902. G.

Goddard, Arabella (St.-Servan, Brittany, 1836-1922, in France). Able English pianist, precociously developed (playing in public at four and publishing waltzes at eight), pupil of Kalkbrenner, Thalberg and J. W. Davison (whom in 1859 she married), from 1853 touring in England, Germany (at the Gewandhaus in 1855) and Italy, and from 1856 introducing in England many works almost or wholly unknown. In 1873-76 she made a tour across the United States and to Australia and India, and in 1878 retired from active concert-giving and settled at Tunbridge Wells. G.

Godefroid, Dieudonné Joseph Guillaume Félix (Namur, 1818-1897, Villers-sur-Mer). Noted Belgian harpist, trained at the Paris Conservatory, from about 1840 active at Paris and later at Brussels. Wrote effective harp- and piano-pieces, besides 2 operas and an oratorio. His brother Jules Joseph (1811-1840) was also a good harpist. G.

Godfrey, Charles (Kingston, 1790-1863, London). English military bandmaster from 1825. His three sons, all pupils of the Royal Academy, followed in the same service, the eldest, Daniel (1831-1903), organizing a band of his own, which in 1872 visited America, while the youngest, Charles (1839-?), also taught at the Royal College and the Guildhall School. Daniel Evers Godfrey (b. 1868), the son of Daniel, also at first a band-leader, in 1891-92 was conductor of an opera-troupe touring in South Africa, and then became director of the orchestra at Bourne-mouth, including symphony-concerts (since 1894). Still others of the third generation have been similarly active. G.

Godowsky, Leopold (Vilna, 1870). Distinguished Polish pianist, early a pupil of Rudorff, making his first tour in Poland and Russia when but nine and coming to America to appear with Misses Kellogg and Thursby and also with Musin in 1884-86. After studying three years with Saint-Saëns, in 1890 he came to America again, from 1895 teaching at the Chicago Conservatory. In 1900-09 he lived in Berlin, teaching and also concertizing, and in 1909-12 directed a school for advanced players at Vienna. Since 1912 he has lived mostly in the United States again, with constant appearances in concert and latterly with several circles of experienced pupils. Since 1912 he has been editor-in-chief of The Progressive Series, published by the Art Publication Society, St. Louis. He ranks as one of the foremost players of the present time. Has written a sonata in E min., a toccata in G-flat, a capriccio, concert-studies in C and E-flat, a large number of arrangements and paraphrases of works by Chopin, Weber, Strauss, etc., and many other pieces, with Impressions for violin and for 'cello. In all these he has shown himself a true master of composition for his instrument. G. A.

Goepfert, Karl Eduard (Weimar, 1859). Saxon pianist, pupil of his father (who in 1873-90 was a conductor in Baltimore), the Weimar Conservatory and Liszt, from 1876 conductor successively at Weimar, Magdeburg, Mannheim, Baden-Baden (from 1891), Remscheid (from 1897) and Berlin. Has written the opera Der Müller von Sans Souci, 1907, and 5 others not yet given, the choral works Der Fall Roms and Am Chiemeesee, various choruses, considerable orchestral and chamber-music, etc. His brother Otto Ernst (1864-1911) was from 1888 town-cantor at Weimar.

Goepp, Philip Henry (New York, 1864). American lawyer (till 1891), teacher and critic, pupil of Paine, Wood and Clarke. Since 1892 he has been active in the Manuscript Music Society of Philadelphia. Since 1900 he has edited the program-books of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra. He is organist of the First Unitarian Church and teacher at the Temple University. (Mus.D. 1919). Has written Symphonies and their Meaning, 3 vols. 1898, 1902, '13 and many magazine articles, besides editing Madeira's Annals of Music in Philadelphia, 1896. Has also written a violin-sonata, pieces for violin, organ or piano, the fairy-opera The Lost Prince, several orchestral marches, a Christmas cantata, anthems, madrigals and songs. A.

Goering, Theodor (Frankfort, 1844-1907, Munich). From about 1870 critic for the Augsburg Abendzeitung, in 1880-83 in Paris, and then living in Munich as reporter for the Cologne Zeitung. Author of Der Messias von Bayreuth, 1881.

Goës, Damião de (1500-1572). 16th C.

Goethe, Walther Wolfgang von (Weimar, 1818-1885, Leipzig), grandson of the following. Court-chamberlain at Weimar and composer of 3 operettas, piano-pieces and many songs.

Goethe, Wolfgang von (Frankfort, 1749-1832, Weimar). Distinguished poet, essayist and dramatist. He had intimate relations with musicians and often strong opinions about their art. His works contain many musical allusions and even discussions, and of his poems numerous musical settings have been made. See his correspondence with Zelter (published 1833-34 and new editions by Geiger and Hecker, 1913-) and various works by Burckhardt, 1879, Wasielewski, 1880, Ferd. Hiller, 1883, Blaze de Bury, 1892, Chantavoine, 1905, Segnitz, 1908, Wulckow, 1912, Bode, 1912, Eberwein and Lobe, 1912, and Holle, 1914, besides many articles.

Goetschius, Percy (Paterson, N. J. 1853). Eminent American theorist, trained at the Stuttgart Conservatory, where from 1876 he became a teacher, from 1885 with the title of royal professor. In 1890-92 he taught at Syracuse University (Mus.D. 1892), in 1892-96 at the New England Conservatory, Boston, and then was privately active in Boston. Since 1905 he has been professor at the Institute of Musical Art in New York. Author of the notable manuals The Material Used in Musical Composition, 1882 (revised 1889, 1913), The Theory and Practice of Tone-Relations, 1892 (revised 1900, '16), Models of the Principal Music-Forms, 1894, The Homophonic Forms of Musical Composition, 1898, Exercises in Melody-Writing, 1900 (revised 1918), Applied Counterpoint, 1902, Lessons in Music-Form, 1904, Elementary Counterpoint, 1910, The Larger Forms of Musical Composition, 1915, and (with Thos. Tapper) Essentials in Music History, 1914. His compositions include a symphony, 2 overtures, an orchestral suite, a piano-sonata, several concert-fugues, many piano-pieces, etc. He edited Mendelssohn's piano-works for the Cotta Edition, also other editions of the same composer. A.

Goetz, Hermann (Königsberg, 1840-1876, n. Zurich). Gifted Prussian composer, trained by Köhler and at the Stern Conservatory, from 1863 organist at Winterthur (Switzerland), succeeding Kirchner, and from 1867 active also at Zurich. Overwork forced his retirement in 1870, followed by his premature death. In spite of the brevity of his career, his production was extensive and highly significant. Wrote the operas Der Widerspenstigen Zähmung, 1874, and Francesca von Rimini, 1877 (scoring completed by E. Frank), a remarkable symphony in F, a Frühlingsouvertüre, concertos for piano and for violin, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, a piano-sonata (4 hands) and various piano-pieces, the cantata Nänie (text by Schiller), Psalm 137, the choral work Es liegt so abendstille der See (men's voices), choruses and many fine songs. Memoirs by Steiner, 1907, and Kreuzhage, 1916, and see article by Istel in I. M. G. Zeitschr. 1902. G.

Goetzl, Arselm (Prague, 1878-1923, Barcelona). Bohemian composer, trained by Winkler, Fibich, Dvořák, Schalk and Adler (Ph.D. of Vienna Univ. 1899), long engaged at Prague in commercial undertakings, irregularities in which led to his migration in 1913 to New York, where for a time he conducted light opera for Dippel. Has written a clarinet-quintet, 2 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, 4 operettas, including The Lilac Domino, 1913, and Ritterspiele, 1914, and songs, besides a dissertation on the instrumentation of Beethoven's symphonies (1899).

Gogavinus, Anton Hermann. 16th C.

Gogorza, Emilio Edoardo de (Brooklyn, 1874). Able Spanish-American baritone, educated in Europe and pupil in New York of Moderati and Agramonte, in 1897 establishing a fine reputation in concerts with Mme. Sembrich. In 1911 he married the soprano Emma Eames. A.

Göhler, Karl Albert (Zwickau, 1879-1914, killed in battle), brother of the following. Educated at Leipzig University (Ph.D. 1901), offering a thesis on Die Messkataloge im Dienste d. musikal. Geschichtsforschung and adding notes on the musical references in Frankfurt and Leipzig Messkataloge in 1564-1758 (I. M. G. Sammelbde. 1901-02). In 1904 he prepared the Festschrift of the Riedelverein in Leipzig. He was employed at the Bach Museum at Eisenach.

Göhler, Karl Georg (Zwickau, 1874). Able Saxon conductor, pupil of Vollhardt and the Leipzig Conservatory (also Ph.D. of Leipzig Univ. 1896), in 1898-1906 and 1909-13 conductor of the Riedelverein in Leipzig, in 1907-09 court-director at Karlsruhe, from 1913 director of the New Opera at Hamburg, in 1915-18 leader of symphony-concerts at Lübeck and since 1922 opera-conductor at Altenburg. Has written 2 symphonies, an orchestral suite, many men's choruses and songs, besides a dissertation on Cornelius Freundt (1896), an edition of the latter's Weihnachtsbuch, the musical section in Hinneberg's Kultur d. Gegenwart, 1907, Ueber musikal. Kultur, 1908, editions of ten orchestral pieces of Hasse (1904), of various works by Mozart, Schubert and Haydn, of sacred music produced by the Riedelverein, and of Spiel- u. Tanzlieder, 1913 (1 vol.), and many keen critiques in Kunstwart, Zukunft, etc.

Goldbeck, Robert (Potsdam, 1839-1908, St. Louis). Prussian composer, pupil of Köhler (his uncle) and Litolf, from 1857 teacher in New York, in 1867 assisted Tourjée in founding the New England Conservatory at Boston, from 1868 in Chicago and from 1873 in St. Louis, in both cities starting music-schools, and from 1880 lived at various places, partly in Europe. Wrote 3 light operas, a cantata, a symphony, 2 piano-concertos, a string-sextet, a piano-quintet, etc., besides an Encyclopædia of Musical Education, 3 vols. 1903, and several text-books. A.

Goldberg, Johann Gottlieb [Theophilus] (Königsberg, ?1720-1760?, Dresden?). Gifted Prussian organist, pupil of J. S. Bach and his son Friedemann, originally the protégé of Baron von Kaiserling and finally chamber-musician to Count Brühl. Though dying in early manhood, he was already noted as improvisator and as composer. Bach drafted his 'Goldberg' variations for him in 1741. Wrote 2 clavier-concertos, 24 polonaises and other clavier-works, 6 trios (flute, violin and bass), 2 cantatas and some other church-music. G.

Goldberg, Joseph Pasquale (Vienna, 1825-1890, do.). Austrian singing-teacher, trained first (as violinist) by Mayseder and Seyfried and then by Rubini, Bordogni and Lamperti, from 1843 for a time a stage-singer in Italy, then at Paris and from 1861 teaching at the Royal Academy, London. In 1871 he was asked to make a report upon Italian conservatories for the Ministry of Public Instruction at Rome, and his suggestions became the basis for useful reforms and improvements (made Knight of the Crown in recognition). G.

Goldenweiser, Alexander Borissovitch (Moscow, 1875). Able Russian pianist, trained at the Moscow Conservatory, in 1904-06 teaching at the Philharmonic Music School and then at the Conservatory. His reminiscences of 25 years of intimacy with Tolstoy came out in 1922.

Goldmark, Karl (Keszthely, 1830-1915, Vienna). Distinguished Hungarian pianist and composer, son of the cantor in a Jewish synagogue, pupil in 1844-48 of Jansa and the Vienna Conservatory and then self-taught. In 1848 he played violin in a theater-orchestra at Raab, where he came near being shot in the suppression of the revolution. From 1850 he made his home in Vienna (except for 1857-59 in Pest), engrossed in composition, but supporting himself by piano-teaching and some work as critic. To each of his larger works he devoted long periods of intensive effort and had the reward in practically every case of having their worth promptly acknowledged. In his dramatic undertakings he was frankly indebted to the influence of Wagner, but he was much more than a slavish imitator. His instinct for both form and color had been diligently cultivated by thorough study in many fields, and the warmth of his imagination was racial. His works include Operas—Die Königin von Saba, 1875, Mertin, 1886, Das Heimchen am Herd, 1896, Die Kriegsgefangene (or Briseis), 1899, Götze von Berlichingen, 1902 (revised 1910), Ein Wintermärchen, 1908, Der Fremdling (not given).

Symphonies—Die ländliche Hochzeit (really a suite); in E-flat.

Overtures—Sakuntala; Penthesilea; Im Frühling; Der gefesselte Prometheus; Sappho; In Italien.

Symphonic poem, Zrinyi, 1903.

Scherzos for orchestra in E min. and A.

2 violin-concertos.

String-quintet in A min.; piano-quintet in B-flat.

String-quartet in B-flat. Also an early piano-quartet, unpublished.

2 piano-trios.

2 suites for violin and piano (in E and E-flat).

Violin-sonata in D. 'Cello-sonata.

Regenlied (chorus); Frühlingshymne (alto, chorus and orchestra); Psalm 113; Frühlingsnetz and Meeresstille und glückliche Fahrt (men's voices and horns); 6 other choruses for men's voices; Im Fuscherthal (6 choral songs); 2 4-part songs. About 35 solo songs.

Piano-pieces—Sturm und Drang; 2 Novellettes, prelude and fugue; Georginen; Aus Jugendtagen; several pieces for 4 hands.

Biography by Keller, 1901, and his own Erinnerungen, 1922. Also see essay by Fuller-Maitland, Masters of German Music, 1894. G.

Goldmark, Rubin (New York, 1872), nephew of the above. American composer, trained at the Vienna and National (N.Y.) Conservatories, in 1891-93 also teaching at the latter. In 1894

he went to Colorado Springs for his health and till 1901 was head of the music-school of Colorado College, then returning to New York to teach and give numerous lecture-recitals there and elsewhere. Has written the overture Hiawatha, 1900, the orchestral tone-poems Samson, 1914, and Requiem, 1919 (suggested by Lincoln's Gettysburg address) an orchestral Theme and Variations (1895), a piano-quartet in A, a piano-trio in D min., a violin-sonata in B min., pieces for violin and for 'cello, several piano-pieces, choruses and songs. A.

Goldner, Wilhelm (Hamburg, 1839-1907, Paris). A pupil of Moscheles, from 1859 active at Paris as pianist and teacher, writing effective salon-pieces and many 4-hand suites, besides songs.

Goldoni, Carlo (Venice, 1707-1793, Paris). The noted Italian dramatist. Among his 200 stage-works were many that were used as operalibrettos. See works by Musatti, 1900, Wotquenne, 1905, and Chatfield, 1913.

Goldschmidt, Adalbert von (Vienna, 1848-1906, do.). Gifted Austrian amateur composer, trained at the Vienna Conservatory. Wrote the operas Helianthus, 1884, Gaea (trilogy), 1889, and Die fromme Helene, 1897, a symphonic poem, the cantata Die sieben Todsünden, 1875, and about 100 songs. He was an enthusiastic follower of Wagner. See Friedegg, Briefe an einen Komponisten, 1909. G.

Goldschmidt, Hugo (Breslau, 1859-1920, Wiesbaden). Able Silesian musicologist, originally trained as a lawyer (degree in 1884), pupil of Hirschberg, Schäffer and Stockhausen, in 1893-1905 one of the directors of the Scharwenka-Klindworth Conservatory, Berlin, and then living at Nice and Wiesbaden. Author of Die italien. Gesangsmethode des 17. Jahrh. 1890, Der Vokalismus d. neuhochdeutschen Kunstgesangs u. d. Bühnensprache, 1892, Handbuch d. deutschen Gesangspädagogik, 1896, Studien zur Gesch. d. italien. Oper im 17. Jahrh. 2 vols. 1901-04, Die Lehre von d. vokalen Ornamentik, vol. i (to time of Gluck), 1907, Wilhelm Heinse als Musikästhetiker, 1909 (in Riemann Festschrift), Gesch. d. Musikästhetik im 18. Jahrh. 1915, and many articles in periodicals, besides editing works by Traetta (1914-17).

Goldschmidt, Otto (Hamburg, 1829-1907, London). Noted pianist, pupil of Mendelssohn and Chopin, appearing at London in 1849 and soon becoming associated with Jenny Lind, for whom he was accompanist and conductor on her American tour in 1851-52, marrying her in Boston in 1852. After spending three years in Dresden, from 1858 they lived in London, where in 1875-85 he founded and conducted the Bach Choir, besides directing festivals at Düsseldorf and Hamburg in 1863, '66. From 1863 he was vice-principal of the Royal Academy. He was active in a variety of enterprises in London and received numerous honors there and also from the King of Sweden. Wrote the oratorio Ruth, 1867, the cantata Musik (women's voices), 1898, a piano-concerto, a piano-trio, additional accompaniments to Handel's L'Allegro, 12 piano-études and part-songs, besides editing (with W. S. Bennett) The Chorale-Book for England, 1862, and supplement, 1864 (texts translated by Catherine Winkworth). See Musical Herald, 1896, and Musical Times, 1907. G.

Goldschmidt, Sigismund (Prague, 1815-1877, Vienna). Bohemian pianist, pupil of Tomaschek, in 1845-49 a successful player at Paris and later a banker and music-patron.

Goldwin, John (?1670-1719, Windsor?). English organist, pupil of Child and in 1697 his successor as organist at St. George's Chapel in Windsor. Wrote a service and anthems. G.

Golinelli, Stefano (Bologna, 1818-1891, do.). Italian pianist, pupil of Donelli and Vaccai, in 1840-70 professor at the Bologna Liceo, but also making some tours (at London in 1851). Wrote about 200 piano-works, including 5 sonatas, 3 toccatas, many preludes, etc. G.

Goller, Vincenz (n. Brixen, 1873). Tyrolese church-musician, pupil of Skop, Pembaur and the Ratisbon Music School, long engaged as a school-teacher, but from 1903 choirmaster at Deggendorf (Bavaria) and from 1910 active at Vienna, where in 1913 he organized the Schola Austriaca for the cultivation of church-music. Has written over 70 sacred works, including masses, Requiems, etc., and edited a collection of Austrian Meisterwerke d. Tonkunst.

Göllerich, August (Linz, 1859-1923, do.). Austrian teacher and writer, pupil of Bruckner and Liszt, from 1890 head of the Nuremberg music-school founded by Lina Ramann, setting up branches in Erlangen, Firth and Ansbach, and from 1896 director of the Linz Conservatory and conductor of the Musikverein there, leaving the conduct of the other schools to his wife (also a Liszt pupil). Author of biographies of Reissmann (1884), Liszt (1887, an extension of Nohl), Beethoven. (1904, 3d ed. 1907), Liszt (1908, with list of works), and also Bruckner (not yet ready), besides Führer to Wagner's Ring (1890), Liszt's Graner Mass (1897), etc. His wife, née Gisela Voigt von Leitersberg (Vienna, 1858), a pupil of the Pest Academy and Liszt, first appeared as pianist in 1877 and from 1886 toured in Austria and Germany, marrying Göllerich in 1893 and joining in his work as teacher. In 1878-86 she was the wife of Pászthory.

Gollmick, Adolf (Frankfort, 1825-1883, London), son of the following. Hessian pianist, pupil of his father, Riefstahl, Wolff and Kessler, from 1844 active in London. Wrote 3 operas (from 1860), 2 dramatic cantatas (1877), a symphony, an overture, a piano-quartet and trio, piano-pieces and songs. G.

Gollmick, Karl (Dessau, 1796-1866, Frankfort). Pupil of Spindler, from 1817 teacher of French at Frankfort, where he was also employed at the Stadttheater as timpanist and chorumaster. Wrote various piano-pieces, text-books, a Kritische Terminologie, 1833, Musikal. Novellen u. Silhouetten, 1842, Hand- lexikon d. Tonkunst, 1858, lives of Guhr (1848) and Fétis (1858), and an autobiography (1866).

Goltermann, Georg Eduard (Hanover, 1824-1898, Frankfort). Noted 'cellist, pupil of Prell, Menter and Lachner, in 1850-52 touring extensively, in 1852-53 director at Würzburg and from 1853 assistant and from 1874 chief director at the Frankfort Stadttheater. Wrote 6 'cello-concertos, sonatas, etc., a symphony, 2 overtures and songs. G.

Goltermann, Johann August Julius (Hamburg, 1825-1876, Stuttgart). Another good 'cellist (apparently not related to the above), from 1850 teacher at the Prague Conservatory and in 1862-70 in the Stuttgart court-band. G.

Golther, Wolfgang (Stuttgart, 1863). Since 1895 professor of German philology at Rostock University. Author (among other works) of important studies in the literary sources of Wagner's dramas and his poetical treatment of them (from 1887), also editing some of Wagner's letters (1905, '07) and some of Franz' (1907).

Gombert, Nicolas. 16th C. G.

Gomes, Antonio Carlos (Campinas, 1839-1896, Pará). Brazilian composer, pupil of his father, the Rio de Janeiro Conservatory and L. Rossi at Milan, from 1861 writing various stage-works, including the operas Il Guarany, 1870, Fosca, 1873, Salvator Rosa, 1874, Maria Tudor, 1877, Lo Schiava, 1889, and Condor, 1891 (all but the last two in Italy, the others at Rio). Wrote also the hymn Il Saluto del Brasile, 1876 (for the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia) and the cantata Colombo, 1892 (for the Columbus celebration), choruses, songs and piano-pieces. G. A.

Gomes de Aranjó, João (n. São Paulo, 1849). Brazilian composer, from 1887 producing the opera Carmosina and others at Milan, and since 1905 teaching at the São Paulo Conservatory. Has also written orchestral works. A.

Gómez, Julio [Domingo Julio Gómez y García] (Madrid, 1886). Spanish librarian and critic, pupil of the Madrid Conservatory and University (Ph.D.), from 1911 director of the Archaeological Museum in Toledo, then head of the music-division of the National Library in Madrid and now librarian at the Conservatory there, besides writing for the Jornada and the Liberal, editing two popular musical papers and writing some historical studies. Has also written the comic opera Himno al Amor, an orchestral suite, etc.

Gomiz, José Melchior (Onteniente, 1791-1836, Paris). A Spanish bandmaster who from about 1820 undertook stage-works at Madrid and, after teaching in London, from 1829 produced a series of comic operas at Paris (Le Diable à Seville, Le Revenant, Le Portefaix, Mock le Barbou), leaving 6 others in manuscript. Wrote also the choral work L'Inverno (London) and patriotic songs. Berlioz spoke highly of his genius.

Gompertz, Richard (Cologne, 1859). Rhenish violinist, pupil of KönigsLöw and Joachim, from 1878 appearing at Cologne and on tour, from 1880 associated with Stanford at Cambridge, in 1883-99 professor at the new Royal College in London, where he organized a notable Quartet, and then removing to Dresden. Has written a violin-concerto, sonatas, études, songs, etc. G.

Goodrich, Alfred John (Chilo, O. 1847-1920, Paris). American teacher, from about 1870 at the Grand Conservatory, New York, from 1876 at Fort Wayne, Ind., Abingdon, Va., Chicago and St. Louis, and from 1909 lived in Paris. Author of Music as a Language, 1880, The Art of Song, 1888, Complete Musical Analysis, 1889, Analytical Harmony, 1894, The Theory of Interpretation, 1898, Guide to Memorizing, 1904 (revised 1906), and Synthetic Counterpoint (unpublished). Wrote an overture and other orchestral pieces, chamber-music, a cantata, piano-pieces and songs. A.

Goodrich, Frederick William (London, 1867). English organist, pupil of Hoyte, Pearce and Armes, from about 1890 engaged at various churches in or near London and from 1904 prominent at Portland, Ore., since 1907 at St. Mary's Cathedral (R.C.). Has written church-music, analytical notes for the Portland Symphony Orchestra and articles on Catholic music, besides editing the Oregon Catholic Hymnal, 1912, and a List of Approved Church Music, 1912. A.

Goodrich, John Wallace (Newton, Mass. 1871). American organist and conductor, pupil of Petersilea, Dunham, Chadwick, Rheinberger, Abel and Widor, beginning public work in 1886 and in 1890-94 playing at the Eliot Church, Newton. In 1896-97 he was coach at the Leipzig Stadttheater. Since 1897 he has been connected with the New England Conservatory, Boston, in 1907 becoming its dean, besides serving in 1897-1909 as organist for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in 1900-02 at the Church of the Messiah and in 1902-09 at Trinity. In 1902 he organized the Choral Art Society and was its director till 1908, in 1902-07 was chorus-conductor at the Worcester Festivals, in 1907-10 led the Cecilia Society, in 1907 directed orchestral concerts in Jordan Hall and in 1909-12 was one of the regular conductors of the Boston Opera Company. Has written a choral Ave Maria, a Requiem, Communion Service, a book on The Organ in France, 1917, and articles on organ-building and Gregorian music, besides translating Pirro's Bach (1902) and Niedermeyer and d'Ortigue's Gregorian Accompaniment (1905). A.

Goodson, Katharine (Watford, 1872). Eminent English pianist, trained at the Royal Academy, London, and by Leschetizky, making her début in London in 1897 with immediate success, leading to extensive tours in England, on the Continent and in America (from 1907). In 1903 she married the composer Arthur Hinton. G (Hinton).

Goodwin, Amina Beatrice (Manchester, 1867). Able English pianist, pupil of her father, the Leipzig Conservatory, Delaborde, Liszt and Mme. Schumann, appearing widely in concert from about 1890 in England, Germany and Holland. In 1905 she founded a piano-school in London and later the London Trio (with Pecskaï and Whitehouse). Author of Practical Hints on Technique and Touch, 1892. She is the wife of W. Ingram-Adams (an American).

Goossens, Eugène (London, 1893). English composer, trained at the Bruges Conservatory, the Liverpool College and the Royal College, London, in 1911-15 playing violin in the Queen's Hall Orchestra, then becoming (till 1920) one of Beecham's assistant-conductors, and from 1922 at Covent Garden. Has written the symphonic poem Perseus, 1914, a Prelude to a Poem of Ossian (1915), an overture and incidental music for Verhaeren's Philip II (1918), orchestral Variations on a Chinese Theme, 1911, the scherzo Tam O'Shanter, 1916, a Miniature Phantasy for strings, an octet for strings, flute, clarinet, horn and harp (1911), a piano-quintet in one movement (1919), a string-quartet in C (1916), a Fantasy for string-quartet (1916), 2 Sketches do. (1916), a suite for violin, flute and harp (1913), 5 Impressions of a Holiday for violin, 'cello and piano (1914), a violin-sonata (1918), a Chinese Folk-Song for violin (1912), a Rhapsody for 'cello (1916), a Serenade for flute, a concert-étude for piano (1915), Kaleidoscope (12 piano-pieces, 1917-18), 4 Concerts for piano (1918), and about 10 songs (1914-17). See Musical Times, 1919. A.

Goovaerts, Alphonse Jean Marie André (Antwerp, 1847). Eminent Belgian church-musician and music-historian, mostly self-taught, from 1866 assistant-librarian in the Antwerp Library and from 1887 royal archivist at Brussels. From 1868 his sacred music began to attract attention and in 1874, becoming secretary of Antwerp Cathedral, he organized an amateur choir, for which he transcribed nearly 100 specimens of the old polyphony, initiating a reform-movement that met with much opposition. Soon after he visited Germany and Holland to inspect work in Gregorian music, and in 1881 joined heartily in the new Gregorian Association of Belgium. In 1877 he became a member of the Belgian Académie and has received many other honors. Has written masses, motets, etc., and many historical monographs, including La Musique d'Église, 1876 (a plea for Gregorian and polyphonic music) and Histoire et Bibliographie de la Typographie Musicale dans les Pays-Bas, 1880. G.

Göpfert, Karl Andreas (n. Würzburg, 1768-1818, Meiningen). Bavarian clarinetist, pupil of Meissner, from 1788 in the Meiningen court-band. Wrote 4 clarinet-concertos, 5 quartets for clarinet and strings, octets and quintets for wind, a horn-concerto, a Symphonie Concertante for clarinet and bassoon and much other chamber-music, besides the opera Der Stern des Nordens.

Göpfert, Karl Gottlieb (n. Dresden, 1733-1798, Weimar). Saxon violinist, from 1770 in the Weimar court-band. He was the teacher of Cranz.

Gordigiani, Giovanni Battista (Mantua, 1795-1871, Prague). Italian singing-teacher, trained at the Milan Conservatory, after some activity as stage-singer in Italy teaching at Ratisbon and from 1822 in the Prague Conservatory. Wrote 3 operas (1845-50), church-music, songs and some military marches.

Gordigiani, Luigi (Modena, 1806-1860, Florence), brother of the above. Noted Italian song-composer, self-taught. From 1836 he wrote over 300 Canti Popolari Toscani, some based directly on Tuscan folk-poems and songs, some original, but in the same vein. These gave him an international renown. Also wrote about 10 operas and other stage-works, (from 1830), including Un'Eredità in Corsica, 1847, an oratorio and 3 cantatas. Memoir by Gandolfi, 1909 (in Ricordi Musicali Fiorentini). G.

Goria, Alexandre Édouard (Paris, 1823-1860, do.). French pianist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1840 a favorite teacher and composer of effective salon-pieces. G.

Goritz, Otto (Berlin, 1873). Noted Prussian operatic baritone, trained by his mother, making his début at Neustrelitz in 1895 and singing there for three years, from 1898 at Breslau, from 1900 at Hamburg and from 1903 at the Metropolitan, New York, until forced to leave in 1917 because of his anti-American political intrigues. He has a fine reputation as a Wagnerian interpreter. A.

Gorlier, Simon. 16th C.

Görner, Johann Gottlieb (Penig, 1697-1778, Leipzig). Saxon organist, educated at the Thomasschule and Leipzig University, from 1716 at the Paulinerkirche there, from 1721 at the Nikolaikirche, from 1723 again at the Paulinerkirche (as director) and from 1730 organist at the Thomaskirche, following Gräbner. In 1723 he organized a Collegium Musicum. He had many relations with Bach, often in footless rivalry. His brother Johann Valentin (b. 1702), from about 1732 in Hamburg, where from 1752 he was cathedral-director, was one of the pioneers in lyric composition (Oden u. Lieder, 1742-52).

Gorno, Albino. Italian pianist (born near Cremona), pupil of the Milan Conservatory, coming to America in 1881-82 as accompanist for Mme. Patti and since then professor at the Cincinnati College of Music. Has written an operetta, 2 patriotic cantatas, many piano-pieces and an able treatise on the use of the pedals in piano-playing (1894-1900). A.

Göroltdt, Johann Heinrich (n. Stolberg, 1773-after 1835, Quedlinburg). From 1803 director at Quedlinburg, writing text-books in harmony (2 vols. 1815-16), sight-singing (2d ed. 1832) and organ-playing (1835), a horn-method (1830) and Ueber Kirchenmusik, 1830, besides church-music.

Gorter, Albert (Nuremberg, 1862). Bavarian conductor and composer, trained at the Munich Conservatory, from about 1885 embarked upon the career of kapellmeister, in succession at Ratisbon, Treves, Elberfeld, Breslau, Stuttgart (assistant to Zumpe), in 1894-99 Karlsruhe (assistant to Mottl), from 1899 the Leipzig Stadttheater (succeeding Panzner), from 1903 Strasburg and since 1910 Mayence (general director from 1920). Has written the operas Harold, Der Schatz des Rhampsinit, 1894, Das süsse Gift, 1906, and Paria, 1908, 2 symphonic poems, works for chorus, many songs, etc.

Goss, John (Fareham, 1800-1880, London). Eminent English organist, choirboy under J. S. Smith in the Chapel Royal and later pupil of Attwood, from 1821 playing in London churches and in 1838-72 at St. Paul's, succeeding Attwood. In 1856-72 he was composer to the Chapel Royal, following Knyvett. Mus.D. of Cambridge Univ. in 1876 and knighted in 1872. Wrote 2 services, 4 Te Deums, about 30 anthems and other church-music, about 15 glees and madrigals, 2 overtures and some other instrumental works, and edited 2 hymnals (1827, '62), a collection of chants (1841, with Mercer), organ-voluntaries (4 vols.) and a text-book in harmony (1833). See Musical Times, 1901. G.

Gossec, François Joseph (n. Beaumont, 1734-1829, Passy). Eminent Belgian composer and conductor, originally a choirboy at Antwerp Cathedral, otherwise self-taught. From 1751 (through Rameau's favor) he was conductor of the private band of La Poupinière (Rameau's patron) and from 1762 of that of Prince Conti at Chantilly. In 1770 he founded and directed the Concerts des Amateurs, in 1773-77 conducted the reorganized Concerts Spirituels (at first with Gaviniés and Leduc), and in 1780-82 was assistant-conductor at the Opéra. In 1784 he started the École Royale de Chant and managed it till in 1795 it became the Conservatory, in which (with Grétry, Méhul, Cherubini and Lesueur) he was long an inspector, as well as professor of composition. In 1799-1804 and 1809-15 he was one of the examiners for the Opéra. During the Revolution he was an ardent republican, writing many patriotic plays, hymns, songs and marches, these leading to his being made official composer to the Republic. From 1795 he was a member of the new Académie and from 1802 of the Légion d'Honneur. In 1815 he retired from all activities. Although in both dramatic and orchestral composition he was outstripped by certain contemporaries, in both fields he achieved solid and influential success. Through his instrumental works the traditions of the Mannheim school received a notable exposition in France, and his Requiem and certain of his operas long continued in favor. As conductor he greatly improved methods of orchestral technique.

His works include

Operas—Le Tonnelier, 1761, Le Faux Lord, 1765, Les Pêcheurs, 1766, Toinon et Toinette, 1767, Le Double Déguisement, 1767, Sabinus, 1773, Alexis et Daphné, 1775, Berthe, 1775 (Brussels), Hylas et Sylvie, 1776, La Fête du Village, 1778, Thésée, 1782, Les Visitationes (with Trial), Rosine, 1786, La Reprise de Toulon, 1796, Les Sabots et le Cerisier, 1803, Le Périgourdin and Nivôris (not given). Also the ballets Philémon et Baucis, 1775, Les Scythes Enchaînés, 1779 (for Gluck's Iphigénie en Tauride), Mirsa, 1779, and Callisto (not given).

Choral works—Messe des Morts, 1760; Messe des Vivants, 1813; the oratorios Saül, La Nativité and L'Arche d'Alliance; 2 Te Deums; choruses for Racine's Athalie and Rochefort's Électre; various motets.

About 20 symphonies [number variously estimated]; several overtures and serenades; many fine quartets, trios, duets for strings or with one wind-instrument.

Memoirs by Hédouin, 1852, Gregoir, 1878, and Hellouin, 1903. G.

Gosswin, Anton (?1540–1594). 16th C.

Gotthard, Johann Peter [Pázdirek] (Drahanowitz, 1839). Moravian composer of the opera Iduna, 1889, and 4 others, an orchestral suite, a piano-quintet, 6 string-quartets, part-songs and songs. With his brother he has issued a large Universalhandbuch d. Musikliteratur, 34 vols. 1904–10.

Gotthelf, Felix (n. Munich, 1857). Bavarian composer, educated as a physician, but also pupil of J. Lange, Kwast, G. Jensen, Tiersch, Scheidemann and Draeseke, in 1892 chorus-master at Cologne and conductor at Kolberg, in 1893–94 living at Bonn, from 1894 at Munich, in 1898–1920 at Vienna and then at Dresden. Has written the 'mystery' Mahadeva (after a Hindu saga), 1908, the symphonic fantasy Frühlingfest, 1894, a string-quartet (1891), a Hymnus for violin, 'cello, harp and organ, the ballade Der Zauberspiegel for soprano and many songs (some with orchestra). Author of Der Mythos in d. Meistersingern, 1911 (in Bayreuther Blätter) and a work on the Indian Renaissance (vol. i. 1911).

Gottschalk, Alexander Wilhelm (n. Weimar, 1827–1908, do.). Saxon organist and editor, pupil of Töpfer and Wettig (with some help from Liszt), from 1847 teacher at Tiefurt (suburb of Weimar), in 1870–81 Töpfer's successor at the Weimar Teachers' Seminary and court-organist, in 1874–1903 also teacher of music-history at the Conservatory and editor of Urania (from 1865) and Chorgesang (from 1885), besides from 1872 writing for Dittes' Jahresbericht. Author of a small music-dictionary (1867), a life of Töpfer and Liszt u. sein legendarischer Kantor [himself], 1908, besides editing organ-works of Litzau, Töpfer and Hasse, a Repertorium für d. Orgel (with Liszt), a historical Musik-Album and a Choralbuch. His autobiography was published by René in 1910.

Gottschalk, Louis Moreau (New Orleans, 1829–1869, Rio de Janeiro). Gifted American pianist, pupil of Hallé, Stamaty and Maleden, making his début at Paris in 1844, securing high praise from Chopin and later from Berlioz, and then touring through France, Switzerland and Spain (1852) and in 1853–56 having a triumph in the United States. After spending 1856–62 in the West Indies, he made a second grand tour, including Canada, setting out in 1865, by way of California, for Central and South America, where he died (after a brief illness) from overwork. His temperamental gifts were considerable and he had notable powers of moving audiences. Without large capacity as a general interpreter, he was yet remarkable in his own style of emotional expression. Wrote the operas Charles IX and Isura de Salerno (neither performed), the symphonies La Nuit des Tropiques and Montevideo, a Gran Marcha Solemne (for the Emperor of Brazil), the orchestral Escenas Campestres Cubanas and Gran Tarentella, nearly 100 characteristic piano-pieces and a few songs. Memoirs by Hensel, 1870, Fors, 1880, and Petersen, 1881. See also his own Souvenirs de Voyage, 1863 (in L'Art Musical). His brother Louis Gaston (1847–1912) was from about 1870 a well-known singer in Europe and America, from 1886 teaching in Chicago. G, A.

Gottsched, Johann Christoph (n. Königsberg, 1700–1766, Leipzig). Eminent literary historian and critic, from 1730 professor of philosophy and poetry in Leipzig University. Among his writings is a catalogue of German plays [from 1450] (1758, '65), including those with music. Bach recommended Krebs to him as music-master for his wife. G.

Gottwald, Joseph (n. Glatz, 1754–1833, Breslau). Silesian organist, choirboy at the Breslau Cathedral, from 1783 at the Kreuzkirche there and from 1819 cathedral-organist. Wrote good church-music.

Götze, Augusta (Weimar, 1840–1908, Leipzig), daughter of Franz below. Saxon singing-teacher, from 1870 at the Dresden Conservatory, from 1875 head of her own school there and from 1889 in Leipzig, where in 1891–95 she taught at the Conservatory. Author of Ueber d. Verfall d. Gesangkunst, 1884. See La Mara, Studienköpfe, 1902.

Götze, Emil (Leipzig, 1856–1901, Charlottenburg). Noted Saxon operatic tenor, pupil of Scharfe, in 1878–81 engaged at the Dresden Opera, then at Cologne and elsewhere until temporarily laid aside in 1885 by a throat-disorder, but reappearing later at Berlin.

Götze, Franz (Neustadt-an-der-Orla, 1814–1888, Leipzig). Saxon operatic tenor, at first a violinist (pupil of Spohr and from 1831 for a time in the Weimar court-band), in 1836–52 engaged at the Weimar Court Theater and in 1853–67 teacher at the Leipzig Conservatory, then continuing privately.

Götze, Franz, son of Karl below. Composer of the operas Utopia, 1892, and Die Rose von Thiessow, 1895. He lives at Charlottenburg.

Götze, Heinrich (Wartha, 1836–1906, Breslau). Silesian teacher, pupil of Mosewius, Baumgart, the Leipzig Conservatory and F. Götze (above), at first active in Russia and at Breslau, from 1871 at Liebenenthal, from 1885 at Ziegenhals and from 1896 at Breslau again. He gained the title of royal director in 1889. Wrote serenades and sketches for string-orchestra, a mass, piano-pieces, songs, and three teaching-manuals (from 1879), including the earliest German text-book in musical dictation.

Götze, Johann Nikolaus Konrad (Weimar, 1791–1861, do.). Saxon violinist, pupil of Spohr, Aug. Müller and Kreutzer, from 1814 at Weimar, becoming in 1826–48 court-director and chorusmaster at the Opera. Wrote 4 operas, other stage-works, some chamber-music, etc.

Götze, Karl (Weimar, 1836–1887, Magdeburg). Saxon conductor and composer, pupil of Töpfer, Gebhardi and Liszt, from 1855 chorusmaster at the Weimar Opera, then conductor at theaters in Magdeburg, Berlin, Breslau and Chemnitz (from 1875). Wrote the operas Eine Abschiedsrolle, Die Korsen, 1866, Gustav Wasa, 1868, and Judith, 1887, the symphonic poem Eine Sommernacht, other orchestral pieces, piano-works and songs.

Götze, Marie (Berlin, 1865–1922, London). Prussian operatic mezzo-soprano, pupil of Jenny Mayer, after early engagements at the Kroll Opera, Berlin, at Hamburg, New York and Vienna, was in 1892–1920 on the staff of the Berlin Opera.

Götze, Otto, director at Essen, has written the opera Riscatto, 1896.

Goudimel, Claude (?1505–1572). 16th C. G.

Gounod, Charles François (Paris, 1818–1893, do.). Distinguished French composer, pupil of his mother and of the Paris Conservatory (2d Prix de Rome, 1837, and 1st, 1839), at first absorbed in church-music of the Palestrina school, beginning serious composition while at Rome. From 1842, after visiting Vienna, he was organist of the Missions Étrangères and for a time pursued theological studies. At this period he gave special study to the works of Berlioz and Schumann. From 1850 he was gradually drawn into operatic composition, in 1859 establishing his renown by producing Faust. In 1852–60 he was director of the Orphéon (union of choral societies) and wrote much for its concerts. In 1870–75 he lived in London, acquiring a notable place in English admiration. After 1881 he returned almost entirely to sacred composition, including two oratorios. All his work is marked by poetic sentiment, nobility of conception and great dexterity in instrumentation and knowledge of vocal resources. Except in a few works, however, his powers of invention and of elaborate construction seem limited and unequal, so that many of his works had small success. But the richness of the best of them gave him a place of great influence and fame. From 1866 he was a member of the Académie and from 1880 Commandeur in the Légion d'Honneur. His works include Operas—Sapho, 1851, La Nonne Sanglante, 1854, Le Médecin malgré lui, 1858, Faust, 1859, Phlémon et Baucis, 1860, La Reine de Saba, 1862, Mireille, 1864, La Colombe, 1866, Roméo et Juliette, 1867, Cinq Mars, 1877, Polyeucte, 1878, and Le Tribut de Zamora, 1881. Also incidental music to Ponsard's Ulysse (1852), Legouvé's Les deux Reines (1872) and Barbier's Jeanne d'Arc (1873).

Oratorios—La Rédemption, 1882 (Birmingham), Mors et Vita, 1885 (Birmingham) [original text for the former and arrangement of Latin text for the latter].

Cantatas—Marie Stuart, 1837, Fernand, 1839, Tobie, 1850?, Les Sept Paroles du Christ, Psalm 137, Jésus de Nazareth, Jésus sur le Lac de Tibériade, 1876, À la Frontière, 1870, Gallia, 1871.

Church-music—Mass a tre, 1841, Messe Solennele, 1849, Messe du Sacré-Cœur de Jésus, 1876, Mass Angeli Custodes, Messe Solennele à Ste.-Cécile, 1882, Messe à Jeanne d'Arc, 1887; 3 other masses; 3 Requiems; Te Deum; Stabat Mater; Pater Noster; Magnificat; O Salutaris; Vexilla Regis; and other motets.

Chœurs Orphéoniques; Dans une Étable; Les Gaulois; En avant; Chants Lyriques de Saül; choruses for the Albert Hall Choral Society; several other choral works.

Instrumental works—symphonies in D, in E-flat and La Reine des Apôtres; Marche Romaine, for orchestra; Marche Pontificale, for piano; Méditation sur le 1er Prélude de Bach, for soprano, violin, piano and organ (also orchestrated); Le Calme, for violin with orchestra; Convoi Funèbre d'une Marionette, for piano; Dodelnette, for piano, 4 hands; Romances and Morceaux for piano.

6 collections of songs, and many detached songs to French, English and Italian words.

A method for the cor-à-pistons.

He prepared a partial autobiography (1875), Memoires d'un Artiste, 1896 [both only to 1859], and a study of Mozart's Don Giovanni (1890), besides editing Berlioz' Lettres Intimes (1882). Memoirs by Rovet, 1890, Pagnerre, 1890, Voss, 1895, Dubois, 1895, Imbert, 1897, Tolhurst, 1903, Hillemaier, 1905 (2d ed. 1914), Bellaigue, 1910, Prod'homme and Dandelot, 2 vols. 1911, Soubies and Curzon, 1912. G.

Gouvy, Louis Théodore (n. Saarbrück, 1819–1898, Leipzig). Rhenish composer, pupil mainly of Elwart, living at Paris in 1846–95 and then at Oberhomburg. From 1895 he was a member of the Berlin Academy and from 1896 of the Légion d'Honneur. Wrote the opera Der Cid (1863), the Passion cantata Golgotha, a mass, a Requiem, a Stabat Mater, the dramatic cantatas or scenas Frühlingserwachen, Edipe à Colone, Iphigénie en Tauride, Electra, 1888, Polyxena, 1896, and Asléga, 6 symphonies, a sinfonietta, 2 overtures, a nonet and octet for wind, a sextet for flute and strings, a string-quintet, a piano-quintet, a serenade for string-quintet, 5 string-quartets, 3 piano-trios, violin- and 'cello-pieces, piano-sonatas, serenades, characteristic pieces and études, many songs, etc. Memoir by Klauwell, 1902. G.

Gow, George Coleman (Ayer Junction, Mass. 1860). American teacher, educated for the ministry, but also pupil of Blodgett, Story and Bussler, in 1889–92 teaching at Smith College and since 1895 professor at Vassar College. Mus.D. of Brown Univ. in 1903. Has written The Structure of Music, 1895, and many articles, besides part-songs and songs. In 1912 he was president of the Music Teachers' National Association and has been prominent in other organizations. A.

Gow, Niel (n. Dunkeld, 1727–1807, do.). Noted Scottish violinist, famous as a player of reels and strathspeys, publishing 6 collections (1784–1822). His son Nathaniel (1763–1831) and his grandson Niel (1795–1823) continued his reputation. From 1796 various members of the family engaged in music-selling or publishing in Edinburgh. G.

Graben-Hoffmann [properly Hoffmann], Gustav (n. Posen, 1820–1900, Potsdam). Composer of many songs that were long popular, besides several handbooks of singing (1865–74). He was a teacher at Dresden from 1858 and at Berlin from 1869.

Grabner, Hermann (Graz, 1886). Styrian violist and theorist, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory (Nikisch prize, 1912), in 1913–14 teaching at the Strasburg Conservatory and since 1918 at the Mannheim Hochschule and the Heidelberg Akademie (during the war serving in the Austrian army). Besides concertizing somewhat he has written an orchestral Vorspiel, variations and fugue for orchestra (on a theme by Bach), concertos for three violins and for violin and viola, a prelude and fugue for string-quartet, a string-trio, a sonata for piano-trio, violin-pieces, an organ-fugue, a funeral cantata and a large choral setting of Psalm 103.

Grädener, Hermann Theodor Otto (Kiel, 1844), son of the following. Holstein composer, pupil of his father and the Vienna Conservatory, from 1862 organist near Vienna, from 1864 violinist in the court-orchestra, from 1873 teacher of harmony at the Horák School and the Conservatory, and since 1899 Bruckner's successor as lecturer at the University, besides conducting the Singakademie and the Orchesterverein. Has written an orchestral Capriccio and Sinfonietta, a Lustspiel-Ouvertüre, variations for organ, strings and trumpet (1898), concertos for violin, for 'cello and for piano, a string-octet, a string-quartet, 2 piano-quintets, 2 string-quartets, 2 string-trios, a piano-trio, impromptus for piano and strings, intermezzi for violin and piano, a 2-piano sonata, the choral works Der Spielmann, 1905, Die heilige Zita, 1918, etc. G.

Grädener, Karl Georg Peter (Rostock, 1812–1883, Hamburg). Mecklenburger conductor and composer, educated at Halle and Göttingen, for a time a leading 'cellist at Helsingfors, from 1841 conductor of a choral society at Kiel and director at the University, in 1851–61 head of a vocal academy at Hamburg, also directing many large concerts, from 1862 teacher at the Vienna Conservatory and from 1865 at the Hamburg Conservatory, where he was also president of the Musicians' Union. Wrote 2 symphonies, the overture Fiesco, a piano-concerto, a string-octet, 2 piano-quintets, 3 string-quartets, a string-trio, 2 piano-trios, 3 violin-sonatas, a 'cello-sonata, a piano-sonata, a violin-romanza with orchestra, piano-variations, numerous piano-pieces (some of them counted among the best short works since those of Schumann), the oratorio Johannes der Täufer, several other strong choral works, and the operas König Harald and Der Müllerin Hochzeit (both unperformed). Author of a criticism of the Hamburg Bach-Gesellschaft (1856), which was answered by G. Armbrust, Gesammelte Aufsätze über Kunst, vorzugweise Musik, 1872, and a textbook in harmony (1877, extended by Zoder, 1881), besides articles in periodicals. G.

Graf, Friedrich Hartmann (Rudolstadt, 1727–1795, Augsburg). Saxon flutist, from 1759 active at Hamburg, from 1764 on tour and from 1772 director at Augsburg, with visits to Vienna and England. Wrote various symphonies, concertos, quartets and cantatas that were once valued.

Graf, Max (Vienna, 1873). Austrian critic, educated as a lawyer, since 1900 on the staff of the Neue Wiener Journal. Author of Deutsche Musik im 19. Jahrh. 1898, Wagner-Probleme u. andere Studien, 1900, Die Musik im Zeitalter d. Renaissance, 1905, Wagner im Fliegenden Holländer, 1910, and translations of Rolland's Paris Musical (1905) and Bruneau's Musiciens Français and La Musique de Russie (1904).

Gräfe, Johann Friedrich (Brunswick, 1711–1787, do.). Next to Sperontes the first to gather the early 'odes' that were the precursors of the more mature lieder. Collections in 1737–43, 1744, 1760 and 1762. See Friedländer's Das deutsche Lied im 18. Jahrh. 1902.

Graffigna, Achille (S. Martino dall'Argine, 1816–1896, Padua). Italian composer, pupil of the Milan Conservatory, from 1834 conductor at various Italian theaters, from 1845 opera-conductor at Odessa, in 1872 head of a troupe in Paris and later singing-teacher at Padua. Wrote 18 operas (1838–88) without much success except for his notoriety in using the librettos of Rossini's Barbiere (1879), Cimarosa's Matrimonio Segreto (1883) and Piccini's Buona Figliuola (1886).

Gräßlinger, Franz (Linz, 1876). Author of two biographies of Bruckner (1911, '21), Kirchenmusikal. Streiflichter and numerous articles upon points in the musical history of Linz.

Graham, George Farquhar (Edinburgh, 1789–1867, do.). Author of an account of the first music-festival at Edinburgh (1816), the article 'Music' in the Encyclop. Britannica, 7th ed. (reprinted 1838), the article 'Organ' in the same, 8th ed., and notes included in The Songs of Scotland, 1848–49. G.

Grainger, Percy Aldridge (Melbourne, 1882). Gifted Australian pianist and composer, pupil of his mother, Pabst, Kwast and Busoni, appearing at twelve in Australia and more formally in 1900 at London, then starting on a triumphant tour in England, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa. In 1906–07 he was intimate with Grieg, becoming one of his best interpreters, and in 1909 made a Scandinavian tour, later visiting many other parts of Europe. Since 1915 he has been mostly in the United States, where in 1917 he enlisted as bandsman in the army and was naturalized. In his compositions (from about 1912) he has made extensive and original use of folk-song material, besides experimenting with various deviations in structure and treatment from established practice. His published works include

For orchestra or ensemble—In a Nutshell (suite); Molly on the Shore; Shepherd's Hey; Colonial Song; Mock Morris; Irish Tune from County Derry (strings or chorus); Handel in the Strand (piano and strings); My Robin is to the Greenwood Gone (octet); Walking-Tune (wind-quintet); La Scandinavie (cello or violin).

For piano—The Warriors; The Sussex Mimmers' Christmas Carol; Knight and Shepherd's Daughter; Children's March; One More Day, my John; Lullaby from Tribute to Foster; arrangements of Stanford's Irish Dances and of the Flower-Waltz in Tchaikovsky's Nutcracker Suite.

For chorus—The Bride's Tragedy; Father and Daughter; Sir Eglamore; 2 Welsh war-songs (The Camp, March of the Men of Harlech); The Hunter in his Career; Marching-Song of Democracy, 1916; The Merry Wedding; 'We have fed our seas for a thousand years'; Marching-Tune; 'I'm seventeen come Sunday'; Brigg Fair; At Twilight; Morning-Song in the Jungle and The Innuît (Kipling); A Song of Vermeland; Tiger, Tiger (Kipling); 'There was a pig went out to dig'.

Songs—Willow, willow; Died for Love; Dedication (Kipling); A Reiver's Neck-Verse (Swinburne); 'Six ducks went a-fishing'.

See article by Cyril Scott in Musical Quarterly, 1916, and sketch by Parker, 1918. G. A.

Gram, Peder (Copenhagen, 1881). Danish composer, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory (Nikisch prize), in 1908–13 conducting his own symphony-concerts at Copenhagen, in 1914 continuing them at Berlin. In 1912 he held the Ancker Scholarship. Has written a symphony, a symphonic fantasy, a Poème Lyrique for orchestra, Festmusik do., a string-quartet, an Introduction and Fugue for piano, Variations, etc.

Grammann, Karl (Lübeck, 1844–1897, Dresden). Dramatic composer, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1871 living at Vienna and from 1885 at Dresden. Wrote the operas Die Schatzgräber, Die Eisjungfrau (both youthful works), Melusine, 1875, Thusnelda und der Triumphzug des Germanicus, 1881, Das Andreasfest, 1882, Ingrid, 1894, Das Irrlicht, 1894, and Auf neutralem Boden, 1901, the dramatic scena Die Hexe, a Trauerkantate, 2 symphonies, an orchestral Romanza and Scherzo, a violin-concerto, string-quartets and trios, violin-sonatas, piano-pieces and songs. Memoir by Pfohl, 1910.

Granados y Campina, Enrique (Lérida, 1867–1916, at sea). Impressionistic Spanish composer, pupil of Pujol and Pedrell, with some study with De Bériot. His death occurred in connection with the destruction of the 'Sussex' by a German submarine. Wrote the operas (or zarzuelas) Miel de la Alcarria, 1893, Maria del Carmen, 1898, Folletto, 1903, and Goyescas, 1916 (New York) [the latter originally drafted in 1899 and later rewritten to a new libretto], incidental music to Mestres' Liliàno, the symphonic poems La Nit del Mort and Dante, a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, many characteristic piano-pieces, including a suite derived from the first version of Goyescas, Elisenda (voice and small orchestra), many songs, etc. See articles by Jean-Aubry and Newman in Musical Times, 1916, '17. A.

Grandaur, Franz (n. Würzburg, 1822–1896, Munich). Manager of the Munich Opera and author of a history of its undertakings (1878), besides a revision of the libretto of Mozart's Don Giovanni (1871).

Grandi, Alessandro de'. 17th C. G.

Grandjean, Axel Karl William (Copenhagen, 1847). Danish composer, trained at the Copenhagen Conservatory, long director of choral societies and from 1899 chorusmaster at the Opera. Has written the operas De to Armringe, 1876, Colomba, 1882, I Möllen, 1885, and Oluf, 1894, the choral Trokkfuglen, etc., and for the Holberg celebration in 1884 made a collection of the incidental music that has been written for Holberg's plays.

Grandval, Vicomtesse de (n. Le Mans, 1830–1907, Paris). French composer, pupil of Flotow and Saint-Saëns. Wrote the operas Le Sou de Lise, 1860, Les Fiancés de Rosa, 1863, La Comtesse Eva, 1864, La Pénitente, 1868, Piccolino, 1869, Atala, 1888, and Mazeppa, 1892, the oratorio St. Agnes, 1876, the dramatic scenas La Forêt, 1875, La Fille de Jaire, 1879 (Prix Rossini), and Jeanne d'Arc, Esquisses Symphoniques and songs. Her operas were given under various pen-names.

Gräner, Paul (Berlin, 1873). Prussian conductor and composer, educated at Berlin University, after being theater-director at Bremerhaven, Königsberg and Berlin, in 1896 had charge of the Haymarket, London, and from 1897 taught at the Royal Academy there, in 1902–09 joining the New Conservatory in Vienna and in 1910–13 managing the Mozarteum at Salzburg and then removing to Munich, where since 1920 he has taught at the conservatory (following Reger). Has written the operas Das Narrengericht, 1913, Don Juans letztes Abenteuer, 1914, Theophano, 1918 (revised as Byzanz, 1922) and Schirin und Gertraude, 1920, a symphony, a sinfonietta, the suite Aus dem Reiche des Pan and Musik am Abend for orchestra, the piano-quintet Sehnsucht an das Meer, a string-quartet, the piano-trio Der Hungerpastor (after Raabe), piano-pieces, choruses and songs. In his chamber-music he often uses 'program' methods.

Granjon, Robert. 16th C. G.

Graphäus Hieronymus (?–1556). 16th C.

Gras. See Dorus-Gras.

Grasse, Edwin (New York, 1884). Gifted American violinist (blind), pupil of Hauser and Thomson (prizes at the Brussels Conservatory), appearing at Berlin in 1902 and in New York in 1903, with later tours in Europe and America. Has written a symphony, an orchestral suite, a violin-concerto, a string-quartet, 2 piano-trios, 5 violin-sonatas (one with organ), many other violin-pieces, a Sonata-Fantaisie for organ, several organ-transcriptions, etc. A.

Grasset, Jean Jacques (Paris, ?1769–1839, do.). French violinist, pupil of Berthoume, from 1800 professor at the Paris Conservatory and in 1801–29 concertmaster at the Italiens.

Wrote 3 violin-concertos, a violin-sonata and many duos. G.

Grassini, Josephina (Varese, 1773-1850, Milan). Italian operatic contralto, from 1794 appearing throughout Italy, from 1800 in Paris and in 1804-06 in London. After the fall of Napoleon in 1815 she returned to Italy and soon retired from the stage. G.

Graet, Franz (Geneva, 1803-1871, do.). Swiss theory-teacher, self-taught, from 1838 directing a choral society at Geneva, in 1850-60 and again from 1869 professor in the Geneva Conservatory. In 1860-69 he was in Paris, where he published text-books in harmony and instrumentation. Wrote choruses and songs.

Grau, Maurice (Brünn, 1849-1907, Paris). Moravian impresario, educated in New York, in 1872 manager of the tours of Rubinstein and Wieniawski, and from 1874 those of Emma Soldene, Mme. Aimée, Miss Kellogg, Sarah Bernhardt, Salvini, Offenbach, etc. In 1883-84 and 1891-1903 he was manager (with others) of the Metropolitan Opera House, New York. A.

Graun, Johann Gottlieb (n. Torgau, 1698-1771, Berlin), brother of the following. Saxon violinist, pupil of Pisendel and Tartini, from 1726 concertmaster at Merseburg (where Friedemann Bach was his pupil), in 1731 court-director for Prince Waldeck at Arolsen and from 1732 concertmaster for the Crown Prince at Rheinsberg, continuing with him (as Frederick the Great) from 1740 at Berlin. Wrote 40 symphonies, 20 violin-concertos, a large quantity of chamber-music, etc., in the rather heavy traditional style, besides a Passion and some church-cantatas. G.

Graun, Karl Heinrich (n. Torgau, 1701-1759, Berlin), brother of the above. Famous Saxon composer, pupil of Grundig, Petzold and J. C. Schmidt, beginning activity in 1725 as a stage-tenor at Brunswick, but in 1726 engaged there as assistant-director. In 1735 the Crown Prince Frederick made a place for him at Rheinsberg (where his brother already was) and in 1740 as king made him opera-director at Berlin. In this position he enjoyed renown almost unrivalled, his only strong competitor being Hasse. Wrote in all 36 operas (from 1726), including 30 at Berlin, such as Rodelinda, 1741, Artaserse, 1743, Calone in Utica, 1744, Alessandro nell'Indie, 1744, Adriano in Siria, 1745, Demofoonte, 1746, Mitridate, 1750, Semiramide, 1754, Ezio, 1755, and Merope, 1756, besides a large number of brief dramatic cantatas. His most famous sacred works are the oratorio Der Tod Jesu, 1755 (given annually at Berlin) and the festival Te Deum, 1763 (written after the battle of Prague in 1757), but he also wrote 4 other Passions, an Easter cantata and about 25 other cantatas for the Lutheran year, many Latin motets and funeral-music for two of the royal family (1731, '40). His purely instrumental works (concertos for flute, for clavier and strings, trios, organ-fugues, etc.) are less important,

His name is associated with the system of solmization known as damenization (da, me, ni, po, tu, la, be). Memoirs by Stierlin, 1850, and Mennicke, 1906, and see article by Mayer-Reinach in I. M. G. Sammelbde. i. G.

Graupner, Christoph (n. Kirchberg, 1687-1760, Darmstadt). Able Saxon composer, pupil of Schelle and Kuhnau, in 1706-09 accompanist at the Hamburg Opera (under Keiser), then from 1710 court-director at Darmstadt, following Brielg. In 1723 he was one of those considered for the post of cantor at the Thomasschule in Leipzig, but his patron held him at Darmstadt. During his last ten years he was blind, owing to continuous overwork (including the engraving of many compositions). Wrote 9 operas (1707-19), over 1300 pieces of church-music, about 115 symphonies, 80 overtures, about 50 concertos of different kinds, many clavier-works, including those published as Monatliche Clavier-Früchte, 1722, Die vier Jahreszeiten, 1733 (suites), etc. Autobiography in Mattheson's Ehrenpforte, 1740. Memoirs by Nagel, 1912, and Noack, 1916. G.

Graupner, Johann Christian Gottlieb (Verden, 1767-1836, Boston). Hanoverian oboist, at first in military service, from 1788 in London (where in 1791-92 he played under Haydn), from about 1793 removing to Prince Edward's Island, thence in 1795 to Charleston, S. C., and from 1797 settled in Boston, where he was active as player, teacher and leader of ensemble-groups, besides from 1800 conducting a music-store. His wife was an effective singer. A.

Gray, Alan (York, 1855). English organist, educated at Cambridge University (degrees in law in 1877 and '83), pupil in music of E. G. Monk, from 1883 music-master at Wellington College and since 1892 Stanford's successor as organist of Trinity College, Cambridge, besides conducting the University Musical Society. Has written the cantatas The Widow of Zarephath, 1888, Arethusa, 1892, The Legend of the Rock Buoy Bell, 1893, The Vision of Belshazzar, 1896, A Song of Redemption, 1898, and Odysseus among the Phœacians, an Easter ode, 1892, a festival Te Deum, 1895, 4 organ-sonatas (1889), a toccata, a fantasia and other organ-pieces, an orchestral Coronation March, a string-quartet, a piano-quartet, an Andante and Allegro for piano-trio, a violin-sonata, various part-songs and some songs. Mus.D. of Cambridge Univ. in 1889. G.

Gray, Herbert Willard (Brighton, 1868). English publisher, since 1894 the American representative of Novello & Co. and since 1906 head of the H. W. Gray Co. in New York and editor of The New Music Review. A.

Gray & Davison. An organ-making firm in London, originally established in 1774 by Robert Gray, followed by William Gray (d. 1820) and then by John Gray (d. 1849), with whom Frederick Davison was associated from 1838. In 1876 the firm purchased the business of Robson and started a factory in Liverpool. Among their noted instruments are those in the Crystal Palace, Magdalen College (Oxford) and the Town Halls of Leeds, Bolton and Glasgow. G.

Graziani, Bonifacio (1605–1664). 17th C.

Graziani, Francesco (1829–1901) and Lodovico (1823–1885), brothers, born at Fermo. Italian operatic singers (baritone and tenor), from about 1850 appearing in Italy, France, England and elsewhere with fine success for a few years. Lodovico sang at the première of Verdi's La Traviata (1853). G.

Graziani, Tommaso. 16th C.

Grazioli, Giovanni Battista (n. Salò, ?1750, 1820?, Venice). Second organist at St. Mark's, Venice, from 1782 and first from 1789. Wrote nearly 20 good clavier-sonatas.

Grazzini, Reginaldo (Florence, 1848–1906, Venice). Gifted Italian composer, pupil of Mabellini, from about 1870 theater-conductor in Florence, in 1881–82 director of the Conservatory at Reggio d'Emilia and opera-conductor there, and in 1882–95 head of the Liceo Benedetto Marcello in Venice. Wrote an opera, a Cantata Biblica, 1875, a mass with orchestra (1882), a Marcia Solenne, 1887, symphonies and piano-music.

Greatheed, Samuel Stephenson (n. Weston-super-Mare, 1813–1887, Corringham). English clergyman, from 1840 curate at West Drayton and from 1862 rector of Corringham (Essex). Wrote the cantata Enoch's Prophecy, 1856, various canticles and anthems, some organ-pieces and some historical and theoretical articles. G.

Greatorex, Thomas (n. Chesterfield, 1758–1831, Hampton). English organist, pupil of Cooke, in 1781–84 organist at Carlisle Cathedral, in 1786–88 travelling in Italy, then teacher in London, from 1793 conductor of the Antient Concerts (following Bates), in 1801 one of those interested in reviving the Vocal Concerts, and from 1819 organist at Westminster Abbey. At various times he served as conductor for festivals at Birmingham, York, etc. Wrote a few glees, edited collections of tunes, etc., and made many arrangements of accompaniments for the concerts above-named. G.

Greco, Gaetano (Naples, ?1680–? do.). Italian teacher, pupil of A. Scarlatti, from 1717 his successor at the Conservatorio de' Poveri in Naples and later at that of S. Onofrio (Pergolesi, Durante and Vinci among his pupils). Wrote church-music, organ-pieces and some works for harpsichord. See I. M. G. Sammelbde. i, and Zeitschr. i. G.

Green, Samuel (1740–1796, Isleworth). Famous English organ-maker, from about 1775 the most noted in England. He built the organs in Canterbury, Wells, Lichfield, Salisbury and other cathedrals, at many London churches and in the provinces, and even one in Petrograd and one in Jamaica. G.

Greene, Harry Plunket (n. Dublin, 1865). Eminent Irish bass, pupil of the Stuttgart Conservatory, Vannucini, J. B. Welch and A.

Blume, from 1888 appearing in concert and from 1890 in opera with signal success. He soon withdrew from the stage and has devoted himself to concert and oratorio. He has toured in Europe and America (from 1893), everywhere admired for the beauty of his voice and the finish of his interpretation. He has sung at the premières of many works by Parry, beginning with the oratorio Job (1892). He has long taught at the Royal Academy and the Royal College, London. G, A.

Greene, Maurice (London, 1695–1755, do.). English organist and composer, a choirboy at St. Paul's under King and later pupil of Brind, in 1716–18 serving London churches and from 1718 Brind's successor at St. Paul's. From 1727 he was also Croft's successor as organist and composer for the Chapel Royal and from 1730 Tudway's successor as professor at Cambridge University (Mus.D.), besides in 1735 following Eccles as master of the King's Band. In his later years he gathered the materials for an extensive collection of cathedral-music, which he left to Boyce to edit and publish (1760–78). He was one of the strongest of the older English church-musicians. Wrote 40 Select Anthems, 2 vols. 1743, and many other anthems, a service (1737), a Te Deum, the oratorios Jephthah, 1737, and The Force of Truth, 1744, the pastoral Florimel, 1737, the masque The Judgment of Hercules, 1740, the opera Phoebe, 1748, several odes, settings of Spenser's Amoretti for voice, violin and clavier, pieces for organ and for harpsichord, canons, catches, part-songs and songs. He was one of the founders of the Society of Musicians. See articles in Musical Times, 1888 and 1903, and in the Musical Antiquary, 1910. G.

Greff. See Bacfar.

Grefinger, Johann Wolfgang. 16th C.

Gregh, Louis (Paris, 1843–1915, Dourdan). French composer of 4 light operas (1881–95), 2 pantomime-ballets (1892–94) and some piano-pieces. His first success was with Un Lycée de Jeunes Filles, 1881.

Gregoir, Édouard Georges Jacques (Turnhout, 1822–1890, n. Antwerp). Eminent Belgian composer and historian, pupil of his brother (see below) and Rummel, from 1841 touring as pianist (in 1842 with the sisters Milanollo) and from 1850 living in Antwerp as composer and writer. His library went to the Music School there. Wrote the operas Marquërite d'Autriche, 1850, Willem Beukels, 1856, Willem de Zwyger, 1856, and La Belle Bourbonnaise (about 1860), the dramatic cantatas De Belgen in 1848, 1851, La Dernière Nuit du Comte d'Égmont, 1851, and Leicester, 1854, the oratorios La Vie, 1848, and Le Déluge, 1849, the historical symphony Les Croisades, 1846, overtures in C and Hommage à Henri Conscience, organ- and piano-pieces, also pieces for violin and many for harmonium, over 100 choruses for men's voices and songs. Author of a Histoire d'Orgue, 1865, Notice sur l'Origine de Beethoven, 1863, biographies of Willaert, Gossec (1878) and Grétry (1883), Les Gloires de l'Opéra et la Musique à Paris, 4 vols. 1880-83, Souvenirs Artistiques, 3 vols. 1888-89, and a long series of monographs upon Belgian music and musicians (1861-79). All these are of substantial value, though not always minutely exact. G.

Gregoir, Jacques Matthieu Joseph (Antwerp, 1817-1876, Brussels), brother of the above. Excellent Belgian pianist, pupil of Herz and Chr. Rummel, from 1837 teaching in Antwerp and from 1848 at Brussels. Wrote the opera Le Gondolier de Venise, 1847, 2 choral works, a piano-concerto, many piano-pieces and études, besides fantasias and duets for violin and piano (with Viextemps, Léonard and Servais). He made several concert-tours on the Continent. G.

Gregori, Giovanni Lorenzo, in 1688-1742 violinist in the town-band at Lucca, seems to have been the first to use the term 'concerto grosso' for what was later called the typical 'concerto' (work for a solo instrument with ensemble accompaniment). Wrote several such concerti, cantate da camera and arie (from 1698). The concerto-form had already been used by Corelli and Torelli before 1698.

Gregorovitch, Charles (Petrograd, 1867). Polish-Russian violinist, pupil of Wieniawski, Dont and Joachim, from 1886 gaining much notice in Berlin, in 1896-97 in America, and again, after a long retirement, from 1909 in Berlin.

Greiner, Albert (Augsburg, 1867). Bavarian school-teacher (for almost 30 years from 1886). but also choral conductor and singer at the Augsburg Cathedral. In 1905 he became director of the new city singing-school. Author of many vocal text-books and manuals.

Greiter, Matthias (? -1550). 16th C. G.

Greith, Karl (Aarau, 1828-1887, Munich). Swiss church-musician, trained by Ett, Herzog and Drobisch, from 1849 vocal teacher at St. Gall, in 1851-56 at Frankfurt, from 1857 professor of æsthetics at the Schwyz Gymnasium and conductor of a choral society, from 1861 organist at the St. Gall Cathedral and teacher in the Seminary there, and from 1871 in Munich, becoming cathedral-director in 1877. Wrote 14 masses, a Requiem, much other church-music (largely in the strict style), the oratorio St. Gallus, 1849, a Christmas cantata, 3 singspiele, a symphony, organ-pieces and various songs.

Grelinger, Charles. Dutch composer of the 17th C. Sombrevuil, 1800. Les Pharaons, 1899, Nidus, 1900. L'Arbre de Noël, 1903, Die Hoffnung auf Segen, 1907, and Goldhandel, 1913, and the operetta La Pantalon Rouge, 1904.

Grell, Eduard August (Berlin, 1800-1886, Steglitz). Eminent Prussian organist and composer, trained by his father, J. C. Kaufmann, Ritschl and Zelter, from 1817 organist at the Nikolaikirche in Berlin and from 1839 at the court-cathedral. In 1817 he became a member of the Singakademie, from 1832 assistant-conductor and in 1851-76 chief conductor. From 1841 he was a member of the Akademie and from 1851 Rungenhagen's successor as professor of composition. He gained the titles of director in 1838 and of professor in 1858, and in 1838 Berlin University made him Ph.D. His learning was unquestioned and his influence strong on behalf of choral music (which he regarded as the central type of composition). Wrote a famous Missa Solemnis (16 parts a cappella), Psalms, cantatas, motets, a Te Deum, the oratorio Die Israeliten in der Wüste, hymns, sacred part-songs, duets and songs, besides an overture and some organ-pieces. His Aufsätze u. Gutachten were edited by his pupil H. Beller-mann in 1887, who also wrote a memoir (1899). G.

Grenié, Gabriel Joseph (Bordeaux, 1756-1837, Paris). A civil official in Paris who engaged in acoustical studies and in 1810 invented the 'orgue expressif' (organ with free reeds), from which was developed the later harmonium.

Grenville, Lillian (New York, 1888). Able American operatic soprano, pupil of Algier, Aramis, Rossi and Sebastiani, appearing first at Nice in 1906 and remaining in Italy till 1909. In 1910-11 she was with the Chicago Opera Company. She sang at the premières of Pons' Laura (1906), Messenger's Fortunio (1907), Giordano's Marcella (1907), Nogués' Quo Vadis (1909) and L'Auberge Rouge (1910), and Herbert's Natoma (1911).

Gresnich, Antoine Frédéric (Liège, 1755-1799, Paris). Belgian composer, pupil of Sala, from 1779 active in Italy, in 1784-91 in London (securing in 1786 a place from the Prince of Wales [George IV]), in 1793-95 concertmaster at Lyons and then in Paris. Wrote over 20 operas (from 1779), including L'Amour à Cythère, 1793 (Lyons), which made his French reputation, and Léonidas, 1799 (Paris), the failure of which led to his early death.

Grethaninov, Alexander Tichonovitch (Moscow, 1864). Important Russian composer, trained at the Moscow and Petrograd Conservatories, from 1893 noted for many works of fine quality, especially those for the voice. Has written the operas Dobrynya Nikititch, 1903, and Sœur Béatrice, 1912 (soon withdrawn because of objection to the stage-representation of the Virgin), incidental music to Ostrovsky's Snow-Maiden and Tchaikovsky's Tsar Feodor and Ivan the Terrible, a choral Laudate Deum, many a cappella choir-pieces, At the Cross-liturgies, many orchestra, 2 complete symphonic Elegies, 3 songs, 2 symphonies, an orch. G. A. string-quartets, violin-pieces, etc (Liège, [Feb. 8] 1741-1813 [Sept. 24], Montmédy for a time of distinguished Belgian composer, pupil developed by several local teachers, but largely compositions observation and instinct. Early (68-59) produced 6 small symphonies and a mass, 178.

cured him the patronage of Canon du Harlez, with the chance for study in Rome in 1759-67, partly under Casali and Martini. While here the impress of one of Monsigny's works led him to fix his ambition on French opéra comique and to go to Paris, spending some time on the way at Geneva (hoping to secure a libretto from Voltaire). At Paris, after gaining the support of Count Creutz, the Swedish ambassador, he was finally launched in 1768 as a fertile and witty writer of comedy-opera, rising rapidly into favor and soon attempting to gain entrance to serious opera as well. None of his larger undertakings was really successful, owing to his limited knowledge of construction and orchestration. But his lighter works were often masterpieces of their kind, marked by vivacious melody and clever use of dramatic situations. He became one of the best representatives of the French type of declamation through music, but his instinct for stage-effect saved him from becoming extreme. In 1795 he was made a member of the Académie, in 1795-96 was an inspector at the new Conservatory and in 1802 was one of the first members of the Légion d'Honneur, also then receiving a pension from Napoleon to offset his losses at the time of the Revolution. Out of his large profits he bought Rousseau's estate, 'L'Érmitage,' at Montmorency, where he died. He was intimate with literary people and moved freely in high society, acquiring a somewhat exaggerated sense of his importance and the value of his ideas. But his sheer genius cannot be gainsaid or his significance in the history of the French opéra comique.

His works include the operas

La Vendémiaire, 1765 (intermezzo, Rome), Isabelle et Gertrude, 1767 (Geneva, libretto taken from Favart), Les Mariages Samnites, 1768 (rehearsed only, revised in 1776), Le Huron, 1768, Lucile, 1769, Le Tableau Parlant, 1769 (his first great success), Sylvain, 1770, Les Deux Avides, 1770, L'Amitié à l'Épreuve, 1770, Zémire et Azor, 1771 (rewritten by Adam in 1846), L'Ami de la Maison, 1771, Le Magnifique, 1773, La Rosière de Salency, 1773, Céphale et Procris, 1775, La Fausse Magie, 1775, Matroco, 1777, Les Événements Imprévus, 1777, Le Jugement de Midas, 1778, L'Amant Jaloux, 1778, Aucassin et Nicolette, 1779, Andromaque, 1780, Émilie, 1781 (appended to the ballet La Fête de Mirza under the title La Belle Esclave), La Double Épreuve or Colinette à la Cour, 1782, L'Embaras des Richesses, 1782, Théodore et Pauline or L'Épreuve Villageoise, 1784, Richard Cœur de Lion, 1784, La Caravane du Caire, 1784 (a decided success), Panurge dans l'île des Lanternes, 1785, Les Méprises par Ressemblance, 1786, Le Comte d'Albert, 1786, La Suite du Comte d'Albert, 1786, Le Prisonnier Anglais or Clair et Belton, 1787, Amphitryon, 1788, Le Rival Confident, 1788, Raoul Barbe-Bleu, 1789, Aspasie, 1789, Pierre le Grand, 1790, Guillaume Tell, 1791 (revised by Berton in 1828), Basile, 1792, Les Deux Couvents or Cécile et Dermance, 1792, La Rosière Républicaine, 1793, Joseph Barra, Callias, Dénys le Tyran, La Fête de la Raison (4 Revolution-pieces), 1794, Lisbeth, 1797, Le Barbier de Village, 1797, Anacréon chez Polystrate, 1797, Elisca, 1799, La Casque et les Colombes, 1801, Delphis et Mopsa, 1803, and Le Ménage, 1803. Also Alcindor et Zaïde, Ziméo, Zelmor, Électre, Diogène et Alexandre and Les Maures en Espagne, left unperformed. 58 works in all.

Other works include, a Requiem, Psalm 130, motets and an early mass; 6 short symphonies; incidental music for plays; 6 string-quartets, 2 piano-quartets with flute; 6 piano-sonatas.

He wrote Essais sur la Musique, 1789 (2d ed. 3 vols. 1797), a small harmony-manual (1802), a grandiloquent treatise De la Vérité, 1803 (partly political, partly æsthetic), and extensive Réflexions d'un Solitaire, 6 vols., of which the manuscript was long lost, but discovered by Mahlherbe in 1908 (2 vols. 1919-20, edited by Closson and Solvay). His daughter Lucille (1770-1792) wrote 2 successful operas (from 1783).

Memoirs by his nephew, A. J. Grétry, 1815, Gerlache, 1821, Lardin, 1842, Van Hulst, 1842, De Sagher, 1869, Gregoir, 1883, Brenet, 1884, Gheude, 1906, Curzon, 1907, and Closson, 1920. A standard edition of his works, under the patronage of the Belgian government and edited by Gevaert and others, was begun in 1883 and now extends to 42 vols., published by Breitkopf & Hartel. G.

Greulich, Adolf (Schmiedeberg, 1836-1890, Breslau). Silesian church-musician, pupil of Brosig, Mosewius, Baumgart and I. P. Lüstner, from 1857 bass soloist in the Breslau cathedral-choir, from 1870 organist and from 1884 Brosig's successor as director. Wrote much church-music.

Grieg, Edvard Hagerup (Bergen, [June 15] 1843-1907 [Sept. 4], do.). Distinguished Norwegian pianist and composer, the most gifted representative of the Scandinavian group. His father was British consul in Bergen (of Scottish descent [name originally Greigl]) and one of his mother's early ancestors was born in Sweden. She was a cultivated amateur and was his first teacher. At Ole Bull's suggestion, in 1858-62 he studied at the Leipzig Conservatory under Plaidy, Wenzel, Moscheles, Richter and Papperitz. In 1863-66 he lived at Copenhagen in much contact with Gade and Emil Hartmann, besides close intimacy (1864-66) with Nordraak (just one year his senior), with whom he directed the Euterpe, designed to foster Scandinavian music. The winter of 1865-66 he spent in Rome. His formal training brought him under the traditions of Mendelssohn and somewhat of his Schumann, but Ole Bull's influence and his own instinct led to the constant assertion of his Norwegian individuality. In 1866-74 he lived at Christiania, where he became conductor of the Philharmonic Concerts and in 1871, with Svendsen, started also the Musical Union. In 1870 he visited Liszt in Rome. In 1867 he married his cousin, Nina Hagerup (b. 1845 at Bergen, but brought up in Copenhagen), whose gifts as a singer had much to do with his own development and with his public fame. In 1874 the Norwegian government awarded to him (and also Svendsen) an annual stipend which was the nucleus of his later pecuniary independence. He had long been intimate with the poet Björnson. In 1874 Ibsen asked him to write incidental music for a dramatized version of Peer Gynt. From this (first given in 1876) Grieg later arranged two orchestral suites, which, with some of his piano-pieces and songs, established his international reputation. From about 1875 he made his home in or near Bergen, but made many trips abroad as pianist or conductor (often to Leipzig, from 1888 five times to England, from 1889 to Paris, to Vienna in 1896, etc.). Though hampered as an executant by an early accident to one of his hands and permanently enfeebled by several severe illnesses (one of which, in 1860, lost him the use of one lung), he was extremely effective as player and also as conductor. The fascination of his personality, with the intense brilliance of his artistic endowment, brought him a wealth of appreciation from all lands. Formal honors were numerous, including membership in various Academies (Stockholm, 1872, Leyden, 1883, Paris, 1890, etc.), and in 1894 both Cambridge and Oxford made him Mus.D. The novelty of his methods as composer exposed him for a time to considerable hostile criticism, or at least neglect, in conservative quarters, but the acknowledgment of his genius gradually became widespread. His style includes strong and abundant national features, especially in the predilection for folk-music themes and forms. But more fundamental is the expression of his own rich and passionate personality through luscious melody and harmony, cast in rhythmic patterns of novel piquancy or rugged strength. He usually chose comparatively small forms, though not without the power of sustained and cumulative expression, but these he executed with remarkable finish and depth of suggestion. His workmanship is uniformly exquisite along the lines adopted and his grasp of both vocal and instrumental resources is sure and masterly.

A summary of his works is as follows (opus-numbers in brackets):

Orchestral Works

An early symphony (about 1864), from which two movements were later arranged for piano, 4 hands [14].

Overture, Im Herbst (1865) [11] (also piano, 4 hands).
Incidental music for Ibsen's Peer Gynt, from which Suite I—'Morning Mood,' 'Aase's Death,' 'Anitra's Dance,' 'In the Hall of the Mountain King' [46], and Suite II—'Abduction of the Bride,' 'Ingrid's Lament,' 'Arabian Dance,' 'Peer Gynt's Home-Coming,' 'Solveig's Song' [55].

Incidental music to Björnson's Sigurd Jorsalfar, including the overture 'In the King's Hall,' the intermezzo 'Borghild's Dream' and the Triumphal March [56].

Lyrische Stücke [68]. Also arrangement of the piano Romance and Variations [51].

Piano-concerto in A min. [16].

For strings—arrangements of the Holberg Suite [40] and of 6 songs or melodies [34, 53, 63].

Orchestral accompaniment for declamation of Björnson's Bergliot [42].

Chamber-Works

String-quartet in G min. [27].

Sonatas for violin—in F [8], G [13] and A min. [45].
Sonata for 'cello in A min. [36].

Piano-Works

Funeral March, in memory of Nordraak (1866).

Sonata in E min. [7].

Suite, Aus Holbergs Zeit—Prelude, Sarabande, Gavotte,

Air, Rigaudon [40].

Ballade in G min. [24].

About 70 Lyrische Stücke, in 10 books [12, 38, 43, 47, 54, 57, 62, 65, 68, 71]; 3 Poetische Tonbilder [3]; 6 Humoresken [6, 19] (the latter being Bilder aus dem Volksleben); 25 Norwegische Volkslieder und Tänze [17]; 2 Improvisata on folk-tunes [29]; 19 Popular Folk-Tunes [66]; Norwegische Bauerntänze [72]; 4 Stücke [1]; 4 Albumblätter [28]; 7 Stimmungen [73]; 12 transcriptions of songs [41, 52].

For 4 hands—arrangement of overture Im Herbst [11]; 2 Symphonische Stücke (from unpublished symphony) [14]; 4 Norwegische Tänze [35]; 2 Walzer-Capricen [37]; Symphonische Tänze [64].

For 2 pianos—Romanze with variations [51]. Also 2d piano-part to 4 Mozart sonatas.

Vocal Works

For chorus—Vor der Klosterpforte, for soli and women's voices [20]; 2 songs for Sigurd Jorsalfar, for solo and men's voices [22]; Landerkennung, for baritone and men's voices (organ ad lib.) [31]; Olaf Trygvason, for soli and chorus [50]; Album, for men's voices [30]; 4 Psalms, for mixed chorus a cappella (freely drawn from old Norwegian church-tunes) [74].

For solo voice with orchestra—Der Einsame or Der Bergentrückte, for baritone, strings and 2 horns [32]; 6 songs for concert-use ('Solveig's Song,' 'Solveig's Cradle-Song,' 'From Monte Pincio,' 'A Swan,' 'Spring,' 'Henrik Wergeland').

For solo voice with piano—3 songs from Peer Gynt [23]; 4 songs, Aus Fjeld og Fjord [44]; song-cycle from Garborg's Haugtussa (8 songs) [67]; 7 Children's Songs [61]; over 100 other songs [2, 4, 5, 9, 10, 15, 18, 21, 25, 26, 33, 39, 48, 49, 58, 59, 60, 69, 70, and a few without number].

Memoirs by Closson, 1892, D. G. Mason, 1902, Schjelderup, 1903, Finck, 1905 (enlarged ed. 1909, with important personal data), Lee, 1908, Schjelderup and Niemann, 1908, La Mara, Studienköpfe, 1911, and R. H. Stein, 1921, besides numerous articles. G. A.

Griepenkerl, Friedrich Konrad (Peine, 1782–1849, Brunswick). From 1816 professor at the Collegium Carolinum in Brunswick. Author of a Lehrbuch d. Aesthetik, 1827, and editor (with Roitzsch) of the first general edition of J. S. Bach's instrumental works (from 1837). G.

Griepenkerl, Wolfgang Robert (n. Bern, 1810–1869, Brunswick), son of the above. Teacher at Brunswick in 1839–47 and author of various articles in the Neue Zeitschrift, Das Musikfest, 1838 (a novel), Berlioz in Braunschweig, 1843, and Die Oper d. Gegenwart, 1847. G.

Griesbach, John Henry (Windsor, 1798–1875, London). English pianist, pupil of Kalkbrenner, as a youth (1810–18) 'cellist in the Queen's band and later in diversified occupations, including composition. Wrote the stage-pieces James I, The Goldsmith of West Cheap, Raby Ruins and Eblis (not finished), incidental music to The Tempest, the oratorio Daniel, 1854 (1838), overtures, cantatas, anthems and songs, besides some text-books and slight acoustical studies. G.

Griesbacher, Peter (n. Passau, 1864). Bavarian priest, from 1894 (with intervals of parochial work) teacher at the Ratisbon Music School. Has written nearly 200 works, mostly for the church, ranging from the severest to the most modern style. Author of a text-book in counterpoint (1910) and Kirchenmusikal. Stilistik u. Formenlehre, 2 parts, 1912, besides analyses of Bruckner's Te Deum (1919).

Griesinger, Georg August (? –1828, Leipzig). Saxon diplomatic secretary at Vienna and author of the first memoir of Haydn (1810), whom he knew for about ten years. G.

Griffes, Charles Tomlinson (Elmira, N. Y. 1884-1920, New York). Gifted American pianist and composer, pupil of Jedliczka, Galston, Klatte, Loewengard, Rüfer and Humperdinck, appearing in 1904 in Berlin and teaching there, from 1907 teacher in a boys' school at Tarrytown, N. Y., and in New York, with increasing work as composer. Wrote the symphonic poem The Pleasure-Dome of Kubla Khan, a Poem for flute and orchestra, the dance-drama The Kairn of Koridwen, 1916 (for wind, harp, celesta and piano), the Japanese mime-play Schojo, 1917 (for wind, strings, harp and drums), 2 pieces for string-quartet (1918, Flonzaley Quartet), a piano-sonata (1921), many pieces, including 3 Tone-Pictures, 1910-12 (2 also arranged for wind and harp, 1916), 3 Fantasy-Pieces, 1912-14, 4 Roman Sketches, 1915-16, and, for voice, 6 German songs (1909-10), 3 Tone-Images, 1912, 2 Rondels, 1913, 5 Chinese and Japanese songs, 1916-17 (on pentatonic or hexatonic scales), 3 poems of Fiona MacLeod (1918) with orchestra or piano, 3 other songs (1916), and These Things Shall Be for unison chorus. In spite of the brevity of his career, he made a decided impression by the individuality of his genius. A.

Griffin, George Eugene (London, 1781-1863, do.). English composer from before 1800, writing 2 piano-concertos, 3 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, 4 sonatas and several other piano-pieces that were for a time esteemed. G.

Griffith, Frederick (Swansea, 1867). Welsh flutist, trained at the Royal Academy, London, and by Taffanel, from 1895 playing in the Covent Garden orchestra and later becoming professor at the Royal Academy. Author of Notable Welsh Musicians, 1896. G.

Grigny, Nicolas de (1671-1703). 17th C.

Grillet, Laurent (n. Bourges, 1851-1901, Paris). French violinist, pupil of Aug. Martin, Mangin and Ratez, from about 1870 concert-master in various theater-orchestras in Paris. Wrote the opera Graciosa, 1892, ballets, pantomimes, etc., and Les Ancêtres du Violon et du Violoncelle, 2 vols. 1901. He was active in chamber-music societies.

Grillo, Giovanni Battista. 17th C.

Grillparzer, Franz (Vienna, 1791-1871, do.). Eminent Austrian dramatist. He had personal relations with Beethoven and Schubert, besides many other contacts with musical life in Vienna. See works by Hanslick, Kalischer, 1891, Batka, 1894, Puttmann, 1910, and Lux, 1912.

Grimm, Carl William (Dayton, O. 1863). American teacher, pupil of Jul. Fuchs and Homeyer, since 1893 active in Cincinnati. Author of text-books in piano-playing and harmony that have had wide use. A.

Grimm, Friedrich Melchior, Baron von (Ratisbon, 1723-1807, Gotha). Bavarian literary critic and diplomat, in secretarial service at Paris in 1747-92 becoming one of the editors of great Encyclopédie, mingling actively on the side of the 'buffonists' and much interested in the opera generally. See his Lettre sur Omphale, 1752, Le Petit Prophète de Boehmisch-Broda, 1753 (on Joh. Stamitz), and variously in his elaborate Correspondance, 1812-14 (complete ed. 16 vols. 1877-82, edited by Tournoux). See works by Carlez, 1872, Jullien, 1873, Schérer, 1887, Hirschberg, 1903, and Kretzschmar, 1903.

Grimm, Heinrich (?1593-1637). 17th C.

Grimm, Julius Otto (Pernau, 1827-1903, Münster). Livonian pianist and composer, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from about 1850 active at Göttingen, where he started a choral society, from 1860 conductor of the Münster Cäcilienverein, and from 1878 lecturer on music at the Akademie there, gaining the title of royal professor in 1895 and that of Ph.D. from Breslau Univ. in 1897. He was a close friend of Brahms. Wrote a symphony, 2 famous suites for strings (in canon-form), a third suite (1894), a violin-sonata, the choral work An der Musik, piano-pieces and many songs (some to Low-German verses). G.

Grimm, Karl (Hildburghausen, 1819-1888, Freiburg, Silesia). Saxon 'cellist, for about fifty years in the Wiesbaden opera-orchestra. Wrote many good 'cello-pieces.

Grimm, Karl Konstantin Ludwig (Berlin, 1820-1882, do.). Able Prussian harpist, long in the court-orchestra at Berlin.

Grimmer, Christian Friedrich (n. Freiberg, 1798-1850, n. Pirna). Saxon composer of songs and ballads (from 1832), of which Franz issued a new edition in 1877. He was intimate with Fechner and Volkmann.

Grisar, Albert (Antwerp, 1808-1869, n. Paris). Able Belgian composer, pupil for a short time of Reicha (hindered by the Revolution of 1830), but, after his first opera was produced at Brussels in 1833, given a government stipend for additional study in Paris, and in 1840-48 at Naples under Mercadante. Wrote over 30 comic operas (from 1833), of which 20 were produced, including Sarah, 1836, L'An Mille, 1837, L'Opéra à la Cour, 1840 (with Boieldieu), Gilles Ravisseur, 1848, Les Porcherons, 1850, Le Carillonneur de Bruges, 1852, Le Chien du Jardinier, 1855, La Chatte Merveilleuse, 1862, etc., and about 50 songs. Memoir by Pougin, 1870. G.

Grisart, Charles Jean Baptiste (Paris, ?1840-1904, Compiègne). French composer of light operas, including La Quenouille de Ver, 1875, Les Trois Margots, 1877, Le Pont d'Avignon, 1878, Les Poupées de l'Enfante, 1881, Le Bossu, 1888, Le Petit Bois, 1893, and Voilà le Roi, 1894.

Grisi, Giuditta (Milan, 1805-1840, n. Cremona). Able Italian operatic mezzo-soprano or contralto, trained at the Milan Conservatory, making her début in 1823 at Vienna, singing then throughout Italy and at Paris and London (1832), and retiring after marrying Count Barni in 1834. Bellini wrote the parts of Romeo and Julia in I Capuletti (1830) for her and her sister (see below).

Grisi, Giulia (Milan, 1811–1869, Berlin), sister of the foregoing. Famous Italian operatic soprano, pupil of her sister, Fil. Celli, Mme. Boccabadati and the younger Guglielmi, appearing at Bologna in 1828 and from 1829 at Milan, where she secured the favor of Rossini and Bellini. From 1832 she was the leading artist at the Italiens in Paris and from 1834 also in London, continuing supreme at the former till 1849 and at the latter till 1861, with some trips elsewhere. For her Bellini wrote the chief rôles in several operas, as did Donizetti in Don Pasquale (1843). For a time from 1836 she was the wife of Count Meley. In 1844 she married the tenor Mario, with whom she toured in the United States in 1854. G.

Griswold, Putnam (Minneapolis, 1875–1914, New York). American operatic bass, pupil of Randegger, Bouhy, Stockhausen and Emerich, appearing in 1901 at London and Berlin and in 1904 in America. From 1906 he sang at the Berlin Opera and from 1911 at the Metropolitan in New York. A.

Gritzer, Leo (Bojen, 1856–1910, n. Amstetten). Austrian operatic tenor, pupil of Röss and Fuchs, from about 1880 a favorite at Vienna and many German cities.

Grodzki, Boleslas (Petrograd, 1865). Russian composer of graceful pieces for violin, 'cello and piano, as well as songs and choruses. He was a pupil of Sokolov.

Groh, Johann. 17th C.

Groningen, S. van (Deventer, 1851). Dutch pianist, trained at the Berlin Hochschule, from about 1875 active at Zwolle, then at The Hague and later at Leyden, with wide concert-tours. Has written a piano-quartet, a suite for 2 pianos, etc.

Grönvold, Hans Aimar Mow (n. Larvik, 1846). Government official at Christiania and author of a life of Chopin (1878) and a group of sketches of Kjerulf, Svendsen, Ole Bull and Grieg (1883).

Grosheim, Georg Christoph (Kassel, 1764–1847, do.). Hessian critic and composer, early a 'cellist in the court-band at Kassel and later in poverty there. Wrote 2 operas, 2 vocal works with orchestra, organ- and piano-pieces, a Choralbuch (for Reformed churches), several text-books, a life of the soprano Mara (1823) and articles for periodicals and Schilling's Lexikon.

Grosjean, Jean Romary (n. Épinal, 1815–1888, St.-Dié). French organist, from 1839 at St.-Dié Cathedral. Published a good collection of organ-works (2 vols.) and also one of the Noëls of Lorraine.

Gross, Johann Benjamin (Elbing, 1809–1848, Petrograd). Able Prussian 'cellist, from 1833 in the court-quartet at Dorpat and from 1835 in the orchestra of the Petrograd Opera. Wrote 4 string-quartets, 2 'cello-sonatas, a concertino, duets and many solos.

Grossmann, Burckhard. 17th C.

Grossmann, Ludwig (Turek, 1835). German-Polish composer, pupil of Rungenhagen and Freier, from 1857 a dealer in instruments at Warsaw and active in many musical enterprises. Wrote the operas Rybak y Palermo, 1867, and Duch Wojewody, 1873, a symphonic poem, overtures, ballet-suites, etc.

Grossmann, Max (Jastrow, 1856). Prussian physician in Berlin, author of various special studies on the making of violins (from 1898). He is associated with Otto Siefert in the Neu-Cremona violin-making establishment in Berlin.

Grosz, Wilhelm (Vienna, 1894). Austrian composer, trained at the Vienna University (Ph.D. 1920) and by Schreker, writing orchestral variations and 2 fantastic pieces (Serenade and Tanz), a suite for small orchestra, music for Werfel's Spiegelmensch and Bocksgesang, a string-quartet, sonatas for violin and for piano, variations on a theme by Grieg and a number of songs (some based on Oriental Jewish folk-songs).

Grove, George (Clapham, 1820–1900, London). Distinguished English critic and editor, originally a civil engineer (actively employed till after 1850), in 1851 concerned in the erection of the Crystal Palace and in 1852–73 its secretary. From 1855 he was much engaged upon Smith's Dictionary of the Bible, 1860–63, and visited Palestine in 1858 and '61. From 1856 for more than forty years he prepared analytical programs for the Crystal Palace concerts, producing a monumental series of critiques. During this period he formed innumerable connections with musicians, not only in England, but on the Continent. In 1867 he and Sullivan made a trip to Vienna that brought to light some lost works of Schubert. In 1868–83 he was editor of Macmillan's Magazine and also contributor on music and various other subjects to the Times and the Spectator. His versatility was shown by his writing a primer of geography in 1876. In 1878 paid a short visit to America. From 1873 he was engaged upon the preparation of his great Dictionary of Music and Musicians, 4 vols. 1879–89, for which he wrote many extended articles that involved special research of the highest order. In 1882 he became director of the new Royal College of Music, of which he had been the chief promoter, continuing till 1894. He was the recipient of numerous honors, including the degrees of D. C. L. from Durham Univ. in 1875 and of LL.D. from Glasgow Univ., in 1885, and he was knighted in 1883. Besides the works already noted, he wrote prefaces, etc., for various musical biographies or their English editions, Beethoven's Nine Symphonies, 1884 (enlarged ed. 1896) [extended from his Crystal Palace programs], etc. His monographs upon Beethoven, Mendelssohn and Schubert in the Dictionary had the magnitude and weight of separate publications. Although he chose to call himself an 'amateur,' his culture, acumen and sympathy, with his power of literary arrangement and expression, gave him unique authority and abiding influence. Memoir by Graves, 1903. G.

Grovlez, Gabriel (Lille, 1879). French pianist and violinist, trained at the Paris Conservatory, in 1899 making a tour throughout Europe with the violinist Marteau and then teaching at the Schola Cantorum in Paris. Later he was concertmaster at the opera, conductor at the Opéra-Comique and at the São Carlos in Lisbon, concertmaster at the Théâtre des Arts in Paris and from 1922 with the Chicago Opera Co. Has written 2 symphonic poems, 2 ballets (1920-21), incidental music for plays, impressionistic piano-pieces and about 50 songs.

Grua, Paul (Mannheim, 1754-1833, Munich). Badenese composer, pupil of Holzbauer, Martini and Traetta (sent to Italy at the Elector's expense), from 1779 court-director at Munich. Wrote the opera Telemaco, 1780, over 30 masses and a large amount of other sacred music, various instrumental concertos, etc. G.

Gruber, Johann Sigismund (Nuremberg, 1759-1805, do.). Bavarian lawyer, author of Literatur d. Musik, 1783, with Beiträge, 1785, and Biographien einiger Tonkünstler, 1786.

Gruber, Josef (n. Krems, 1855). Austrian church-musician, pupil of Bruckner, since 1878 organist at the great monastery of St. Florian near Linz. Has written about 40 masses, 12 Requiems, much other strong church-music, besides a Handbuch für Organisten, 3 parts, a vocal method and an operetta.

Gruenberg, Eugene (Lemberg, 1854). Galician violinist, trained at the Vienna Conservatory, from 1882 in the Gewandhaus Orchestra at Leipzig, in 1891-98 in the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in 1893-96 also teaching at the Boston Conservatory (succeeding Eichberg) and since 1899 professor at the New England Conservatory. Has written a symphony, a ballet, a violin-sonata, a violin-suite Im antiken Styl, a cadenza for Brahms' concerto, 2 Scènes de Ballet, etc., and songs, besides text-books in violin-playing (1897, 1901). A.

Grün, Friederike (Mannheim, 1836-1917). Badenese operatic soprano, from about 1860 known at Frankfurt, from 1863 at Kassel and from 1866 at Berlin. In 1869 she married a Russian, Baron von Sadler, and made further studies under Lamperti, continuing with good success in Italy and elsewhere for some years.

Grün, Jakob M. (Pest, 1837-1916, n. Vienna). Hungarian violinist, pupil of J. Böhm and Hauptmann, from 1858 in the Weimar court-band and in 1861-65 in that at Hanover, then, after tours, from 1868 concertmaster at the Vienna Opera and in 1877-1909 professor at the Conservatory there.

Grünbaum, Johann Christoph (Haslau, 1787-1870, Berlin). Bohemian operatic tenor, pupil of Steckel, engaged from 1804 at Ratisbon, from 1807 at Prague, from 1818 (with his wife, née Therese Müller) at Vienna and from 1832 at Berlin. He made translations of Berlioz'-Instrumentation, Vaccai's vocal method, etc.

Grünberg, Paul Emil Max (Berlin, 1852). Fine Prussian violinist, from about 1870 in the Meiningen court-band, then concertmaster at Sondershausen and at the Prague Landestheater, from 1899 teaching in Berlin, since 1905 at the Stern Conservatory and conductor of the orchestra of the Musikfreunde. Author of a guide to violin-literature (1913).

Grünberger, Ludwig (Prague, 1839-1896, do.). Bohemian pianist and composer, pupil of Skroup, Kisch, Reichel and Rietz. Wrote the short opera Die Heimkehr, 1894, incidental music to Th. Löwe's Königstraum, a Nordische Suite for orchestra, 2 string-quartets, a suite for violin and 'cello, characteristic piano-pieces and many songs.

Grund, Friedrich Wilhelm (Hamburg, 1791-1874, do.). In 1819 the founder and till 1862 director of the Singakademie at Hamburg and in 1828-62 conductor of the Philharmonic Concerts there. Wrote symphonies, overtures, an octet and a quintet for piano and wind, a piano-quartet, sonatas for violin, for 'cello and for piano, a 4-hand piano-sonata, sonatinas, études and songs, besides a sacred cantata, an capella mass (8-part) and 2 operas (not given). G.

Grundt, Svend. Editor of a collection of Danish folk-songs (3 vols. 1856-62).

Grunewald, Gottfried (1673-1739, Darmstadt). From 1703 a singer at the Hamburg Opera and from 1712 Graupner's assistant in the direction of the Darmstadt court-band. Wrote the opera Germanicus, 1704, 6 clavier-partitas and a sonata. Memoir by Nagel, 1900 (I. M. G. Sammelbde.)

Grunewald, Gottfried (n. Eisleben, 1859). Composer of the short operas Astrella, 1894, Die Brautehe, 1904, and Der fromme König, 1905, and Des Sängers Fluch for men's chorus.

Grünfeld, Alfred (Prague, 1852). Bohemian pianist, pupil of Höger, Krejčí and the Kullak Academy, from 1873 living at Vienna, whence he has made extensive concert-tours, as to Russia (1883), France, the United States, etc. In 1913 he gained the title of professor from the German government. Has written the opera Die Schönen von Fogaras, 1907, an operetta, various piano-pieces and studies. His brother Heinrich (Prague, 1855) is an able 'cellist, in 1876-84 teaching at the Kullak Academy, Berlin, and giving many concerts with X. Scharwenka and G. Holländer.

Grunicke, Anton Franz (n. Zeitz, 1841-1913, Berlin). Saxon organist, pupil of his father, Marx, Grell and Taubert, from 1871 teaching at the Kullak Academy, from 1883 organist for the Reformed Jewish congregation, and later teacher at the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory. He won the title of professor in 1908.

Grunsky, Karl (n. Schorndorf, 1871). Württemberger journalist, self-taught in music, in 1895-1908 critic for the Schwäbischer Merkur and other periodicals, living at Stuttgart. Author of Musikgesch. d. 19. Jahrh. 1902 (2d ed. 2 vols. 1908), Musikgesch. d. 17. u. 18. Jahrh. 1905 (2d ed. 3 vols. 1914), Musikästhetik, 1907, Die Technik d. Klavierauszugs, 1911, Bachs Bearbeitungen u. Umarbeitungen fremder Werke, 1912 (in Bach-Jahrbuch), Das Christus-Ideal in d.

Tonkunst, 1920, a life of Bruckner (1922), program-notes for various concert-series (from 1905) and guides to Bruckner's 1st, 6th and 9th symphonies. He has also prepared a new edition of Reiser's piano-method.

Gruppe, Paulo Mesdag (Rochester, N. Y. 1891). American 'cellist, pupil of The Hague Conservatory, Salmon and Casals, from 1907 touring in France, Holland, Germany and England and since 1909 in the United States.

Grüters, August (Uerdingen, 1841-1911, Frankfurt). Rhenish conductor, pupil of the Cologne Conservatory and of A. Thomas, from 1861 director of the Troyes Philharmonic, from 1868 of the Krefeld Liedertafel and later also of the Concert Society, and in 1892-1908 Müller's successor as conductor of the Cäcilienverein at Frankfurt. He gained the title of professor in 1897. His brother Hugo (Uerdingen, 1851) has also been conductor at Zierikzee (Holland), Hamm, Zweibrücken, Saarbrücken (from 1878), Duisburg (from 1884) and Bonn (town-director since 1898), where in 1900 he conducted a Handel Festival and in 1906 (with Joachim) a Schumann Festival.

Grützmacher, Friedrich (Meiningen, 1866-1919, Cologne), son of Leopold below. Saxon 'cellist, pupil of his father and uncle, after playing for some years in the Sondershausen court-band, from 1888 in the opera-orchestra at Pest, in 1892-94 also teaching at the Conservatory, and from 1894 professor at the Cologne Conservatory and soloist in the Gürzenich Orchestra.

Grützmacher, Friedrich Wilhelm Ludwig (Dessau, 1832-1903, Dresden). Eminent Saxon 'cellist, pupil of his father, Drechsler and Fr. Schneider, from 1849 leading player in the Gewandhaus Orchestra at Leipzig and teacher at the Conservatory, and from 1860 in court-service at Dresden, with many tours throughout Europe. As both virtuoso and teacher he ranked among the finest masters of his instrument. Wrote a concert-overture, a 'cello-concerto, variations for 'cello and orchestra, chamber-music, many pieces and études for 'cello, piano-pieces and songs, with an advanced 'cello-method. G.

Grützmacher, Leopold (Dessau, 1835-1900, Weimar), brother of the above. Also a fine 'cellist, pupil of Drechsler, Schneider and his brother, at first playing at the Gewandhaus and elsewhere in Leipzig, then successively at Schwerin, at the Prague Opera, in the Meiningen court-band and (from 1876) chamber-musician at Weimar. Wrote much for his instrument. G.

Gaudagni, Gaetano (Lodi or Vicenza, ?1725-1797?, Padua). Famous artificial operatic contralto, appearing at Parma in 1747, in 1748-53 a great favorite in London, then in Paris and Lisbon, where he learned much from Gizziello. Until 1777 he was heard all over Europe, making a great impression by his finished acting as well as by his vocal style. In 1777 he settled at Padua, where he sang much at S. Antonio. His considerable wealth he used largely in charity. G.

Guadagnini. A family of Italian violin-makers, probably from Piacenza, but working mainly at Milan. The strongest representatives were Giovanni Battista and Lorenzo, working from about 1695 to 1740. They claimed to be pupils of Stradivari. G.

Guami, Francesco. 16th C.

Guami, Joffeo (?1540-1611). 16th C.

Guarducci, Tommaso (Montefiascone, ?1720-?). Able Italian stage-singer, pupil of Bernacchi, appearing in 1845-70 throughout Italy and in 1766 visiting London. His vocal style is said to have been highly finished. G.

Guarneri, Andrea (?1626-1698), Pietro Giovanni (1655-?) and Giuseppe Giovanni Battista (1666-1739?). 17th C. G.

Guarneri, Giuseppe Antonio (Cremona, 1687-1745?, do.), commonly called 'del Gesù' from his use of 'I. H. S.' on his labels. The most celebrated of the noted family of violin-makers at Cremona, remarkable for the boldness of his modeling and the richness of his tone. He is thus more related to da Salò than to the Amatis and Stradivari. Until the time of Paganini his instruments were not specially appreciated. Memoir by Petherick, 1906. G.

Gudehus, Heinrich (n. Celle, 1845-1909, Dresden). Eminent Hanoverian operatic tenor, pupil of Frau Schnorr von Karolsfeld, G. Engel and Luise Röss, in 1871-72 appearing at the Berlin Opera, from 1875 at various places in North Germany, from 1880 at the Dresden Opera, in 1890-91 at the Metropolitan, New York, and in 1891-1900 again at Berlin. He made repeated successes at Bayreuth and was always noted in Wagnerian rôles. G.

Guéron, Pierre. 17th C. G.

Guénin, Marie Alexandre (Mauvergne, 1744-1819, Paris). French violinist, pupil of Capron and Gossec, from 1778 in the court-band at Paris and in 1780-1800 in the orchestra at the Opéra. Wrote profusely in the Mannheim style, producing 14 symphonies, a viola-concerto, 6 string-quartets, etc., of no special value.

Guéranger, Prosper Louis Pascal (Sablé, 1805-1875, Solesmes). From 1837 abbot of the Benedictine abbey at Solesmes and the pioneer scholar in the modern treatment of Gregorian music. Author of Institutions Liturgiques, 3 vols. 1840-53 (2d ed. 4 vols. 1878-85), L'Année Liturgique, 15 parts, 1840-1901 (completed by Fromage), and Ste.-Cécile et la Société Romaine, 1873 (8th ed. 1898). He was also engaged somewhat in theological controversies. In his liturgical research he was assisted by Jausions. Memoirs by Guépin, 1876, and Chamard, 1901, and see the Solesmes Bibliographie, 1889.

Guercia, Alfonso (Naples, 1831-1890, do.). Italian vocal teacher, pupil of Mercadante, from 1859 at the Collegio S. Pietro at Naples. Wrote the opera Rita, 1875, and many popular songs.

Guerrero, Francisco (1527-1599). 16th C. G.

Guerrini, Guido (Faenza, 1890). Gifted Italian composer, pupil of the Bologna Liceo, writing the operas Zalebi (not yet given) and Nemici, 1921, the symphonic poem La Cetra d' Achille, the orchestral pictures Visioni dell' Antico Egitto, and the fable La Befana, a 'cello-concerto, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, the 'lyric triptych' Le Fiamme sul' Altare for voice, double string-quintet and two harps, etc.

Gueymard, Louis (n. Lyons, 1822-1880, n. Paris). Good French operatic tenor, trained at the Paris Conservatory and in 1848-68 singing at the Opéra.

Guglielmi, Filippo. Composer of the short operas Pater, 1899 (Rome), Pergolese, 1905 (Berlin), and Le Eumenidi, 1905 (Treviso), several symphonic poems, a dramatic cantata, etc.

Guglielmi, Pietro (Massa, 1727-1804, Rome). Eminent Italian composer, pupil of his father and Durante, said to have produced his first opera when but twelve (1739, Naples), followed by others that established him in favor in Italy and led to his being invited to Dresden and Brunswick (about 1762). In 1768-77 he was popular at London, then returning to Naples. Confronted by the rising fame of Cimarosa and Paisiello, he then put forth a fresh series of works that demonstrated his ability to rank with them. In 1793 he became maestro at St. Peter's in Rome and devoted himself wholly to sacred works. His extraordinary versatility and productiveness were coupled with reckless and even dissolute habits. Wrote certainly over 100 operas (many more attributed to him uncertainly), including I Viaggiatori Ridicoli, 1772, La Frascatana, 1773, La Serva Innamorata, 1778, La Bella Pescatrice, 1779, I Fratelli Papamosca, 1793, La Didone, 1785, Enea e Lavinia, 1785, and I Due Gemelli, 1787 [not all of these dates, however, are certain], the oratorios La Morte d' Abele, Betulia Liberata, La Distruzione di Gerusalemme, Debora e Sisara, 1788, and Le Lagrime di S. Pietro, some masses, motets and other church-music, besides 6 clavier-quartets, other chamber-music and a few clavier-pieces. Of his sacred works Zingarelli regarded Debora e Sisera the best. Memoir by Bustico, 1899, and chronological list of works by Piovano, 1905 (in Rivista Musicale). G.

Guglielmi, Pietro Carlo (Naples, 1763-1827, Massa), son of the foregoing, trained at the Conservatorio S. Maria di Loreto in Naples and active as stage-composer from 1783. In 1810 he visited London and later became court-musician at Massa. Wrote at least 20 operas (till 1816), perhaps many more, in imitation of his father's facile style, an oratorio and some choir-pieces.

Gui, Vittorio (Rome, 1885). Eminent Italian conductor, trained at the Accademia S. Cecilia in Rome, first appearing at the Teatro Adriano and then serving in succession at Parma, Turin, Naples (three years at San Carlo), Bergamo, Rome (orchestral concerts at the Augusteo), Milan (La Scala) and Lisbon, as well as at the Turin Exposition in 1921. Has written the striking symphonic poems Giulietta e Romeo, 1902 (with voices), Il Tempo che Fu, 1910

(from Shelley), Fantasia Bianca, 1919 (with chorus and picture-projection) and Giornata di Festa, 1921, a Scherzo Fantastico and many songs and song-cycles. His articles on music are collected as La Forza e i Suoni.

Guidetti, Giovanni (1530-1592). 16th C. G.
Guido d'Arezzo (?995-1050). 11th C. G.

Guignon, Jean Pierre (Turin, 1702-1774, Versailles). French-Italian composer of some violin and trio-sonatas. In 1741-50 he held the obsolete title of 'Roi des ménestriers' from Louis XV, revived as a monopoly. G.

Guillemain, Gabriel (Paris, 1705-1770, do.). French violinist, writing many violin-sonatas, trios, quartets and other chamber-music, a ballet (1749), etc. Memoir by Laurencie, 1906 (Courier Musical).

Guilmant, Félix Alexandre (Boulogne, 1837-1911, Meudon). Distinguished French organist, pupil of his father (for about fifty years organist at Boulogne), Carulli and Lemmens, holding his first appointment from 1853 at St.-Nicolas, Boulogne, with choral teaching and leadership. His playing, especially at the dedication of new organs, soon became famous, leading to his going to Ste.-Trinité, Paris, in 1871 (resigned 1901). Here and through numerous concert-tours in Europe and America (from 1893) he established himself not only as a virtuoso of the first rank, but as the head of the modern French school of organ-composers. He also was constantly active in reviving and interpreting organ-works of every period. His regular concerts at the Trocadéro, at the Expositions, etc., were especially notable. He excelled in masterly improvisation. In 1894 he was a leading promoter of the Schola Cantorum and became one of its directors. From 1896 he was also professor at the Conservatory. In 1910 Manchester Univ. made him Mus.D. Wrote sonatas in D min. [op. 42] (and also for organ and orchestra), D [50], C min. [56], D min. [61], C min. [80], B min. [86], F [89] (Suite), and A [91], for organ and orchestra 3 marches [41, 44, 74] a Méditation on the Stabat Mater [63], an Allegro [81], a Finale alla Schumann [83] and an Adoration, for organ and piano a Marche Triomphale [34], Pastorale [26], Scherzo [36], Finale [40] and Élégie-Fugue [44], the collections Pièces d'Orgue, 18 books, L'Organiste Pratique, 12 books (also The Practical Organist, 12 books, not entirely identical with the foregoing), L'Organiste Liturgiste, 10 books, 18 Pièces Nouvelles, etc., and several works for violin, 'cello, flute or trombone with piano. Equally significant are the great collections which he edited, especially Archives des Maîtres de l'Orgue (works by Titelouze, Raison, Roberday, du Mage, Marchand, Clérambault, Daquin and Gigault) and École Classique d'Orgue, 25 books (including chiefly German and Italian masters), with the Répertoire des Concerts du Trocadéro, 4 books (from historical concerts in 1902-06), and very numerous transcriptions and arrangements. Memoir by Tombelle and others, 1911. G. A.

Guiraud, Ernest (New Orleans, 1837–1892, Paris). French-American composer, precociously developed under his father and later at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome in 1859), where from 1876 he was professor. In 1878 he entered the Légion d'Honneur and in 1891 the Académie. Wrote the operas Sylvie, 1846, En Prison, 1869, Le Kobold, 1870, Madam Turlupin, 1872, Piccolino, 1876, La Galante Aventure, 1882, and Brunhilde (completed by Saint-Saëns as Frédégonde, 1895), the ballet Gretna Green, 1873, besides the early Le Roi David, 1852 (New Orleans), the cantata Bajazet, 1859, an orchestral suite (1872), an overture, a mass, etc., and a treatise on instrumentation (1895). G, A.

Gulbins, Max (Kammetschen, 1862). Prussian organist, trained at the Berlin Hochschule, from 1896 choral conductor and from 1898 organist at Insterburg, from 1900 organist at Elbing and since 1908 at the Elisabethkirche in Breslau. Has written the choral works (for men's voices) Sturmlied, An das Vaterland and Burggraf Friedrich von Nürnberg, men's choruses a cappella, 4 organ-sonatas, chorale-preludes, etc., and songs.

Gulbranson, Ellen, née Norgren (Stockholm, 1863). Eminent Swedish operatic soprano, pupil of the Stockholm Conservatory and Mme. Marchesi, appearing at Stockholm in concert in 1886 and in opera in 1889, soon securing fame at Bayreuth, especially in the Brünnhilde rôles and for years engaged at the Berlin Opera. In 1890 she married the Norwegian officer Hans Gulbranson and lives in Christiania.

Gulli, Luigi (Scilla, 1859). Italian (Calabrian) pianist, pupil of his father and the Naples Conservatory, from 1879 teaching in Rome, where in 1896 he founded a Società del Quintetto that soon acquired international reputation. Since 1916 he has lived in Chicago. He has received the Order of the Crown and is a member of the Accademia S. Cecilia. Has written some piano-pieces. G, A.

Gumbert, Ferdinand (Berlin, 1818–1896, do.). Prussian singer, song-writer and critic, pupil of K. Kreutzer, in early years on the stage at Sondershausen and Cologne, but from about 1845 teaching and writing critiques at Berlin. Wrote many operettas (from 1844), about 500 effective popular songs and Musik, Gelesenes u. Gesammeltes, 1860, besides translating many French and Italian opera-librettos. Sketch by Neumann, 1856.

Gumpeltzhaimer, Adam (1559–1625). 16th C. G.

Gumpert, Friedrich Adolf (Lichtenau, 1841–1906, Leipzig). Thuringian hornist, pupil of Hammann, from 1864 in the Gewandhaus Orchestra, Leipzig. Wrote horn-quartets (2 books) a Solobuch (passages from symphonies, operas, etc.), many studies and a method.

Gumprecht, Armand J. (Boston, 1866). American organist, pupil of Eichler, Singenberger and S. B. Whitney, since 1890 engaged at various Catholic churches in Washington, since 1891 organist at Georgetown University and since 1912 conductor of the Sängerbund. Has written masses, piano-pieces and songs.

Gumprecht, Otto (Erfurt, 1823–1900, Meran). Thuringian critic, originally trained as a lawyer, from 1849 writing for the Nationalzeitung at Berlin. He early became blind and in 1889 suffered a paralytic stroke, then retiring to Meran. Wrote biographical essays under the titles Charakterbilde (1869, '76) and Meister (4 vols. 1883–85) and a work on Wagner and the Ring (1873), besides editing Meisterwerke, 5 vols. (with biographies).

Gungl, Johann (Zsámbék, 1828–1883, Pecs), nephew of the following. Hungarian violinist and composer of effective dance-music in 1843–62, especially at Berlin and Petrograd. G.

Gungl, Joseph (Zsámbék, 1810–1889, Weimar). Noted Hungarian bandmaster, at first in the Austrian army (originally an oboist), but from 1843, after touring with his regimental band, head of his own orchestra in Berlin. With this he visited the United States in 1849. In 1858–64 he was again in the Austrian service, from 1864 lived in Munich and then moved to Frankfurt. Wrote over 300 marches and dances that had great popularity. G.

Gunke, Joseph (Josephstadt, 1801–1883, Petrograd). Bohemian violinist, pupil of Limmers, from 1834 playing at the Petrograd Opera, from 1864 teaching at the Royal Vocal School and from 1872 librarian at the Conservatory. Wrote the oratorio Die Sintflut, a mass, a Requiem, chamber-music and songs, Briefe über Musik, 1863, a text-book in harmony (1852) and a treatise on composition (3 vols.).

Gunn, Glenn Dillard (Topeka, Kan. 1874). American pianist and critic, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1896 touring in Germany and acting as assistant to Teichmüller, from 1900 in the American Conservatory, Chicago, and in 1901–06 in the Chicago Musical College. In 1901–14 he was critic for the Journal, Inter-Ocean and Tribune in succession. In 1915 he founded and for a time led the American Symphony Orchestra, designed to present American works with American soloists. Author of History and Esthetics of Music, 1913, and one of the editors of The Progressive Series, 1912–15. A.

Gunn, John (Edinburgh, ?1765–1824?, do.). Scottish 'cellist, from 1790 teaching in London and from 1795 in Edinburgh. Besides preparing methods for 'cello, flute and piano, a harmony (1801) and a collection of 40 Scottish melodies (arranged for violin, flute and 'cello), he wrote a useful history of Highland harp-playing (1807). G.

Günther, Julius (Gothenburg, 1818–?). Able Swedish operatic baritone, in 1838–46 appearing in Stockholm, Copenhagen and Hamburg, then, after study with Garcia, till 1856 prominent at the Stockholm Opera, besides acting as coach there in 1850–62 and becoming professor at the Conservatory in 1864. In 1860–78 he was conductor of the Nya Harmoniska Sällskapet.

Günther, Otto (Leipzig, 1822-1897, do.). A Leipzig lawyer and town-councillor, in 1881-97 president of the Conservatory, succeeding Schleinitz, and active in the erection of its new building in 1887 and otherwise improving its facilities. For a time he was also president of the Gewandhaus.

Günther-Bachmann, Karoline (Düsseldorf, 1816-1874, Leipzig). Rhenish actress and stage-singer, from 1834 for forty years engaged at the Leipzig Theater, mostly in comic rôles.

Gunz, Gustav (n. Vienna, 1831-1894, Frankfurt). Austrian operatic tenor, originally educated as a physician, pupil in music of Hullub, from 1859 appearing at the Vienna Opera and in 1861-88 engaged at Hanover, besides guest-appearances elsewhere (with Patti at Frankfurt in 1863 and with Jenny Lind in London in 1865). He was well known generally as a gifted oratorio-singer.

Gura, Eugen (n. Saatz, 1842-1906, n. Starnberg). Eminent Bohemian operatic baritone, trained at the Munich Conservatory, making his début at Munich in 1865, from 1867 engaged at Breslau, from 1870 extremely popular at Leipzig, from 1876 at Hamburg and in 1883-95 at Munich. His last appearance was in 1901 there in his famous impersonation of Hans Sachs. In 1876 he had the rôles of Donner and Gunther in the Ring at Bayreuth. In 1882 he paid his first visit to England. He was also a fine lieder-singer, excelling in Loewe's ballads. In 1905 he published Erinnerungen. G.

Gura, Hermann (Breslau, 1870), son of the foregoing. Also an operatic baritone, pupil of the Munich Conservatory, from 1890 known on many German stages (including Berlin and Munich), from 1896 singer and manager at Schwerin, in 1911 director of the Komische Oper at Berlin and then vocal teacher there, but in 1920 becoming opera-director at Helsingfors. In 1906-07 he directed summer opera-series at Berlin.

Gurlitt, Cornelius (Altona, 1820-1901, do.). North German composer, pupil of J. P. Reinecke and Weyse. At first he was engaged in military music and served in the Schleswig-Holstein war of 1848-50. From 1851 he lived at Altona, in 1864 becoming organist of the Hauptkirche and later professor at the Hamburg Conservatory. Wrote nearly 250 works, including the opera Scheik Hassan (not given), 2 operettas, an overture, a sinfonietta, a string-quartet and trio, 3 violin-sonatas, a 'cello-sonata, 2 'cello-sonatinas, piano-sonatas (2- and 4-hands), many fine piano-studies and instructive pieces (especially many for children), vocal duets and songs. G.

Gurlitt, Wilibald (Dresden, 1889), son of the architect Cornelius Gurlitt. Saxon student of music-history, pupil and assistant of Riemann, contributing to the 8th ed. of the latter's Lexikon (1915). In 1914 he was wounded in the Marne campaign and till 1919 was a prisoner in France. Since then he has been lecturer at Freiburg University (professor from 1920). He is at work upon a monograph on Michael Praetorius.

Gurney, Ivor (Gloucester, 1890). English composer, pupil of A. H. Brewer and the Royal College, London, writing the orchestral rhapsody Gloucestershire, a piano-quintet, 2 string-quartets, 2 violin-sonatas, the songs with orchestra By a Bier-side and In Flanders, the song-cycle A Shropshire Lad and over 50 other songs. He is also a writer of fine lyric poems.

Gurowitsch, Sara (New York, 1892). Precocious American 'cellist, pupil of Kronold, Leo Schulz and Hausmann (Mendelssohn prize at Berlin in 1906), making her début at Berlin in 1908 and in New York in 1910.

Gürlich, Joseph Augustin (Münsterberg, 1761-1817, Berlin). Silesian organist and conductor, from 1781 playing at the Hedwigskirche in Berlin, from 1790 in the court-orchestra there (double-bass), in 1811 becoming assistant-conductor, and in 1816-17 court-director. Wrote 4 operas, 13 ballets, incidental music to plays, an oratorio, canatas, etc.

Gusikov, Michael Joseph (Shklof, ?1809-1837, Aix-la-Chapelle). A Russian Jew, originally a flutist, who improved some form of dulcimer or xylophone (which he called a 'cembalo') and became remarkably expert upon it. From 1832 he made an extended tour in Russia and western Europe, attracting attention from Lipinski, Mendelssohn, Fétis and others, but exhausted himself by his efforts. G.

Gussago, Cesario. 17th C.

Gutheil-Schoder, Marie (Weimar, 1874). Able Saxon operatic mezzo-soprano, pupil of Virginia Gungl, from 1891 singing at the Weimar Opera and since 1909 at Vienna. Her husband (d. 1914) was director at Weimar from 1897 and in 1900-10 at Vienna (Popular Concerts). In 1920 she married Franz Setzer of Vienna.

Gutzmann, Hermann (Bütow, 1865). Pomeranian physician at Berlin who has specialized in disorders of the vocal organs. Author of valuable works on vocal physiology and hygiene (1906, '09).

Güttler, Hermann (Königsberg, 1887). Prussian musicologist and composer, educated at Königsberg University in philosophy, art-history and Oriental languages, musically a pupil of Konstanz Berneker and Schwalm, with considerable foreign travel, including southern Russia and the Caucasus. For the Internationale Musik-Gesellschaft he prepared studies of Mozart's pantomimes (1912) and Die älteste asiatische Tonsystematik (1914). Has written the opera Sakuntala (1917), the orchestral suite Aus dem Kaukasus (1914), a Vorspruch zu einer ostpreussischen Feierlichkeit (1920), 3 preludes for Mirjam (1921), the tone-picture Sonntagmorgen (1905), the piano-pieces Ein-same Stunden and sundry song-cycles. His compositions reflect impressions of the Orient and of the Amber Coast on the Baltic.

Guyot, Jean (1512-1588). 16th C.

Guzewski, Adolf (Dyrwianz, 1876-1920, do.). Polish (Lithuanian) composer of the Polish opera The Ice-Maiden, 1907, a symphony and orchestral variations, besides a text-book in instrumentation (1909). From 1910 he was professor at the Warsaw Conservatory.

Gye, Frederick (London, 1809-1878, n. do.). Manager of Covent Garden, London, in 1849-77, then succeeded by his son Ernest Gye (husband of the singer Albani). G.

Gyrowetz, Adalbert (Budweis, 1763-1850, Vienna). Bohemian lawyer, diplomat and composer, pupil of Sala (1786-88), becoming recognized at Vienna and in Italy as protégé of Count Fünfkirchen, and visiting Paris in 1788 and London in 1789-92, already known as a composer of ability. In 1804-31 he was court director and opera-manager at Vienna. Wrote 30 operas and singspiele (from 1804), including especially Der Augenarzt, 1811, 40 ballets, 60 symphonies, 12 serenades, 3 quintets, over 60 quartets, 24 trios, 40 piano-sonatas, 19 masses, cantatas, choruses, songs, etc. His autobiography (1848) has been reëdited by Einstein (1915). It is interesting to remember that when he first appeared at Vienna Mozart superintended the performance of one of his symphonies and that when he went to Paris he found that some of his works had there been circulated as by Haydn. At London Salomon engaged him for his concerts at the same time with Haydn. G.

Haack, Friedrich (Potsdam, ?1760-?). Precocious violinist, early in Prince Friedrich William's band, from 1779 organist at Stargard (Pomerania) and from 1793 director at Stettin. His symphonies and large vocal works were highly regarded.

Haack, Karl (Potsdam, 1751-1819, do.). Prussian violinist, pupil of Benda, also (like the preceding) in Friedrich William's band, becoming concertmaster and so continuing after his accession (1786) until pensioned in 1811. Wrote concertos and sonatas. Maurer and Möser were his pupils.

Haarklou, Johannes (n. Bergen, 1847). Norwegian organist and composer, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, Haupt, Kiel and Bungert, since 1880 at the Akers church in Christiania and in 1885-88 also conductor of popular symphony-concerts. Has written 5 operas, the oratorio Skapelsen, 1891, 2 symphonies, the orchestral Olafs Legende, a violin-sonata, an organ-sonata and other pieces, works for piano and songs.

Haas, Alma, née Hollaender (Ratibor, 1847), sister of Alexis H. Silesian pianist, pupil of Wandelt and Th. Kullak, from 1868 noted in Germany and from 1872 in London, where she married the Orientalist Ernest Haas and till 1882 left the concert-stage. From 1876 she taught at Bedford College and since 1886 at King's College. G.

Haas, Joseph (Maihingen, 1879). Bavarian composer, pupil of Reger and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1911 professor at the Stuttgart Conservatory and from 1921 at the Munich Conservatory. Has written an orchestral serenade, sonatas for violin and for horn, a violin-suite and 2 sonatinas, a string-trio, a piano-trio, a divertimento for string-quartet, an organ-sonata, 2 suites, fugues and preludes, piano-pieces, choruses and songs, besides the suite Tag und Nacht for orchestra and chorus.

Haas, Robert Maria (Prague, 1886). Bohemian musicologist and composer, trained at Prague (Ph.D. 1908), Berlin and Vienna (for a time Adler's assistant), after experience as conductor at Münster, Erfurt, Constance and Dresden, became secretary of the editorial board of the Corpus Scriptorum and Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Oesterreich at Vienna, contributing extensively to the latter, to the I. M. G. Sammelbde., etc., and from 1920 head of the music-division of the State Library. Has written piano-quintets, string-quartets, a suite for trio, sonatas for violin, 'cello and piano, etc.

Hába, Alois (Wisowitz, 1893). Moravian composer, trained at the Prague and Vienna Conservatories, developing a penchant for writing on a scale with quarter-tones, as in a symphony, a piano-concerto, a string-quartet and a Fantasia for violin solo, besides some other works. In 1921 he removed from Vienna to Berlin.

Habeneck, François Antoine (Mézières, 1781-1849, Paris). Eminent French conductor, trained as violinist by Baillet (Conservatory prize in 1804), playing at the Opéra-Comique and soon at the Opéra, where from 1815 he was concertmaster under Kreutzer. In 1806-15 he led most of the Conservatory concerts and resumed the conductorship in 1828-48 (when they were reorganized), making them famous for excellence. In 1821-24 he was director of the Opéra and in 1826-46 succeeded Kreutzer as conductor. He was the first to produce Beethoven's symphonies in Paris, at the outset against much opposition. He was chief inspector at the Conservatory for many years, but without much activity (in deference to Cherubini). From 1822 he was a member of the Légion d'Honneur. Among his pupils were Alard and Léonard. Wrote orchestral variations, 2 violin-concertos, 3 violin-duos, concertantes, variations for string-quartet, various other violin-pieces, etc. Anecdotes of him are found in Berlioz' Mémoires. G.

Haberbier, Ernst (Königsberg, 1813-1869, Bergen). Brilliant Prussian pianist, pupil of his father, from 1832 settled at Petrograd as concertist and teacher, becoming court-pianist in 1847. From 1850 he was much engaged upon wide tours, appearing in London and Paris (1852), in Scandinavia, northern Germany and Russia. From 1866 he lived in Bergen as teacher. He made a sensation by executing rapid passages divided between the hands. Wrote showy concert-pieces. G.

Haberl, Franz Xaver (Oberellenbach, 1840-1910, Ratisbon). Distinguished Bavarian authority on Catholic church-music, trained for the priesthood, from 1862 director at Passau Cathedral and at the Seminary there, in 1867-70 organist in Rome, in 1871-82 choirmaster at Ratisbon Cathedral and from 1874 directing a noted school for church-musicians. From 1872 he followed Schrems as editor of Musica Divina, in 1876 started the Cäcilienkalendar (from 1885 called Kirchenmusikal. Jahrbuch), continuing in charge till 1907, and in 1879 founded a Palestrina Society and became editor (from vol. x) of the great Palestrina edition published by Breitkopf & Härtel (completed in 33 vols. in 1894). In 1871-81 he superintended the reissue of the Editio Medicea of Gregorian melodies (prepared under Papal sanction). [This last undertaking, with some publications connected with it, was soon invalidated by researches that showed that the original collection was not as authoritative as it had been supposed to be, and the Papal sanction was then transferred to the fresh Editio Vaticana of 1904, prepared under the lead of the Solesmes circle of scholars.] From 1899 he was president of the Allgem. Cäcilienverein and editor of its official organ. In 1879 the Pope made him honorary canon of Palestrina Cathedral, in 1889 Würzburg Univ. granted him the degree of Dr. Theol., and in 1908 he became Monsignore. His writings, besides those above-noted, include Praktische Anweisung zum Harmon., Kirchengesang, 1864, Magister Choralis, 1865 (12th ed. 1899), Officium Hebdomadae Sanctae, 1887, Psalterium Vespertinum, 1888 [all these being involved in the Plain-Song controversy], Bertalotti Solfeggien, 1880, Wilhelm Dufay, 1885, Die Römische Schola Cantorum u. d. päpstlichen Kapellsänger bis zur Mitte d. 16. Jahrh. 1887, and Bibliograph. u. themat. Musikatalog d. päpstlichen Kapellarchivs, 1888. G. A.

Habermann, Franz Johann (Königswarth, 1706–1783, Eger). Bohemian director for Prince de Condé in Paris from 1731 and later at the court of Florence. At Maria Theresa's coronation in 1740 he brought out an opera at Vienna and then became choirmaster at two churches in Prague, in 1773 removing to St. Niclas in Eger. Wrote symphonies, oratorios, 12 masses, litanies, sonatas, etc.

Habert, Johannes Evangelista (Oberplan, 1833–1896, Gmunden). Bohemian church-musician, from 1852 teacher at Naaren and Waizenkirchen, and from 1861 organist at Gmunden. Wrote a large amount of church-music, organ- and piano-pieces, etc. (full edition by Breitkopf & Härtel) and Beiträge zur Lehre von d. musikal. Komposition, 4 vols. 1899. Memoir by Hartl, 1900.

Hackett, Karleton Spalding (Brookline, Mass. 1867). American vocal teacher and critic, educated at Harvard University and in Italy, from 1893 concert-singer and teacher in Chicago, in 1896–1911 at Northwestern University (Evanston) and since 1896 also at the American Conservatory (Chicago). Since 1906 he has written for the Evening Post, besides articles in other publications and a History of Opera in Chicago in the Fifties. A.

Hackh, Otto Christoph (Stuttgart, 1852). Württemberger pianist, pupil of the Stuttgart Conservatory and of de Kotski, from 1877 concertizing in southern Germany, the Tyrol, Switzerland and England, in 1880–89 teacher at the Grand Conservatory, New York, in 1891–94 in Europe for his health and since 1895 teaching in New York and Brooklyn. Has written over 200 brilliant piano-pieces and études (some with orchestra) and many effective songs. G.

Hacquet, Carolus (?1649–1730?). 17th C.

Haddock, George (n. Leeds, 1824–1907, do.). English violin-teacher, pupil of Bywater, Vieuxtemps and Molique, from about 1850 established at Leeds, where about 1890 his sons Edgar A. (b. 1859) and George Percy (b. 1860) founded a College of Music and also in 1898 a symphony-orchestra. His brother Thomas (1812–1893) was a good 'cellist, long in the Liverpool Philharmonic. G.

Hadley, Henry Kimball (Somerville, Mass. 1871). Eminent American composer and conductor, trained at the New England Conservatory, Boston, and under Mandyczewski, in 1895–1902 director at St. Paul's School, Garden City, N. Y., from 1904 conducting and composing abroad, in 1909–11 conductor of the Seattle Orchestra, in 1911–15 of the San Francisco Orchestra and since 1920 (associate with Strinsky) of the New York Philharmonic.

Orchestral Works

Symphonies—1, Youth and Life (1897), 2, The Four Seasons (1901, Paderewski and New England Conservatory prizes), 3, in B min. (1906), 4, North, East, South, West, in D min. (1911, Norfolk). Overtures—Hector and Andromache (1894), In Bohemia (1902), Herod (for Philip's tragedy), Othello (1919). Tone-poems—Salome (1907), Lucifer (1914). Symphonic Fantasia (1905); Oriental Suite (1903); Rhapsody, The Culpit Fay (1909, Nat. Federation of Musical Clubs' prize); 3 ballet-suites. Concert-Piece for 'cello and orchestra.

Chamber-Works

Piano-quintet; string-quartet.
Violin-sonata.

Vocal Works

Operas—Nancy Brown, 1904 (comic), Safie, 1909 (Mayence), Azora, Daughter of Montezuma, 1917 (Chicago), Bianca, 1918 (Hinshaw prize, New York). The Garden of Allah, 1918 (New York), Cleopatra's Night, 1920 (New York), The Atonement of Pan, 1912. Choral Work—The New Earth, 1919, Resurgam, 1923. A.

Hadow, William Henry (n. Gloucester, 1859). Eminent English music-historian, educated at Oxford University, from 1885 fellow and in 1888–1909 dean of Worcester College there and examiner for the University in various subjects, since 1909 principal of Armstrong College at Newcastle-on-Tyne and also since 1916 vice-chancellor of Durham University. Musically he was trained at Darmstadt and under C. H. Lloyd (Mus.B. 1880 from Oxford, Mus.D. 1909 from Oxford and 1910 from Durham). In 1890–92 he lectured at Oxford on musical form, and he has also thrice given courses of lectures at the Royal Institution, London. Author of Studies in Modern Music, 2 series, 1892, '94, Sonata-Form, 1896, A Croatian Composer [Haydn], 1897, and The Viennese Period, 1904 (vol. v. of the Oxford Hist.), editor of the Oxford History of Music, 6 vols. 1901–05, and Songs of the British Isles, 1903, with numerous contributions to periodicals (some on non-musical topics). Has also written a string-quartet, piano-trios, 2 violin-sonatas, a viola-sonata, 2 piano-sonatas, the cantata The Soul's Pilgrimage, 1886, incidental music to Bridges' Demeter, etc. G.

Haesche, William Edwin (New Haven, Conn. 1867). American violinist and composer, pupil of B. Listemann, Perabo and Hor. Parker, since 1902 leader of the New Haven Choral Union, in 1907 one of the founders of the Symphony Orchestra there (playing first violin) and since 1903 teacher at the Yale School of Music. Has written a symphony, a sinfonietta, the tone-poem The South, the overtures Fridjof and Ingeborg and Spring-Time, an orchestral Forest-

Idylle, 2 violin-suites (Eyes of the Night and Characteristic), several piano-trios, 2 piano-suites, viola-pieces, the cantata The Haunted Oak, 1902, the choral Young Lovel's Bride (women's voices), 'songs, etc. A.

Haffner, Johann Ulrich (d. 1767). Lutenist and music-publisher at Nuremberg, from 1758 issuing three important collections of clavier-sonatas (Œuvres Mèlées, Raccolta Musicale, Collection Récréative).

Häffner, Johann Christian Friedrich (n. Suhl, 1759–1833, Upsala). Saxon organist, pupil of Vierling, about 1776 proof-reader for Breitkopf at Leipzig, from 1780 organist of the German church at Stockholm and also from 1787 court-director, from 1808 organist at Upsala Cathedral and from 1820 director at the University there. Wrote the operas Elektra, Alkides and Rinaldo in the style of Gluck (1780–87) and edited important collections of Swedish folk-songs (from about 1815), including a revision of the Geijer-Afzelius anthology.

Hagel, Karl (Voigtstedt, 1847). Thuringian violinist and conductor, pupil of Kellner, Billig and Weissenborn, from 1869 soloist at Hildesheim, from 1872 town-director at Nordhausen, in 1874–77 bandmaster in the army and in 1878–1905 head of the Bamberg Music School and town-director. Has written 4 symphonies, overtures, a string-quintet, 5 string-quartets, trios, a sextet for wood-wind, etc.

Hagel, Richard (Erfurt, 1872), son of the above. Able Thuringian conductor, pupil of his father, from 1889 playing in orchestras at Åbo (Finland), Koburg, Meiningen and Sondershausen in succession, in 1895 town-director at Barmen (founding orchestral concerts), from 1896 teacher at Lübeck, in 1898–1900 studying at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1900 a conductor at the Opera there, in 1902–10 being chief, besides directing the Riedel-Verein in 1906–09 and starting a choral society in 1909 (director till 1914), in 1911–14 court-director at Brunswick and director of the Euterpe, in 1915–18 opera-conductor at Rostock, The Hague, Brussels, Ghent, Bruges and Antwerp, and since 1919 Hildebrand's successor as conductor of the Berlin Philharmonic.

Hagemann, François Willem (Zutphen, 1827–?). Dutch organist, from 1846 at Appeldoorn, in 1848–52 conductor at Nijkerk and in 1859 at Leeuwarden, from 1860 town-director at Leyden and later organist at Batavia (Java).

Hagemann, Maurits Leonard (Zutphen, 1829–?), brother of the above. Dutch violinist and pianist, pupil of the Brussels Conservatory, at first a violinist at the Brussels Opera, from 1853 director at Groningen, from 1865 head of the Batavia (Java) Conservatory and conductor of the Philharmonic Society, and from 1875 founder and director of the Leeuwarden Conservatory. Wrote the oratorio Daniel, several choral works, piano-pieces and songs.

Hagemann, Richard (Leeuwarden, 1882), son of the foregoing. Able Dutch conductor, pupil of his father and the Brussels and Amsterdam Conservatories, from 1898 connected with the Amsterdam Opera, becoming chief conductor in 1901–03, in 1904–07 accompanist in succession for Mme. Marchesi, Yvette Guilbert (coming with her to America) and Macmillen, from 1907 assistant-conductor at the Metropolitan, New York, and since 1912 one of the chiefs, besides since 1916 leading summer opera at Ravinia Park, Chicago, and in 1918 opéra comique for the Society of American Singers in New York. A.

Hagen, Adolf (Bremen, 1851–1917, Dresden). North German conductor, from 1866 violinist in the opera-orchestra at Wiesbaden, from 1871 director at Danzig and Bremen, from 1877 at Freiburg (Baden), from 1879 associate of Sucher at the Hamburg Opera, in 1883–1913 court-director at Dresden and in 1884–90 also director of the Conservatory there, succeeding Wüllner. Wrote the opera Zwei Komponisten, 1882, and an operetta.

Hagen, Friedrich Heinrich von der (Schmiedeburg, 1780–1856, Berlin). Eminent Prussian scholar, from 1810 professor of German literature at Berlin University. Author of Minnesinger, 5 vols. 1838–56, besides a collection of melodies for German, Flemish and French folk-songs (1807, with Büsching).

Hagen, Johann Baptist (Mayence, 1818–1870, Wiesbaden). Hessian conductor, from 1836 at Detmold, from 1841 at Bremen and from 1856 at Wiesbaden (except 1865–67, at Riga).

Hager, Johannes [pseudonym of Joh. Hasslinger von Hassingen] (Vienna, 1822–1898, do.). Austrian official in the Foreign Office at Vienna, writing the operas Iolantha, 1849, and Marfa, 1886, the oratorio Johannes der Täufer, much good chamber-music, etc. He studied with Mendelssohn and Hauptmann.

Hägg, Gustaf (Wisby, 1867). Able Swedish organist, trained at the Stockholm Conservatory and in Germany and France, since 1893 organist at the Klarakyrka in Stockholm and since 1908 also professor at the Conservatory. Has written a symphony, a string-sextet, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, orchestral Miniatures, organ- and piano-pieces.

Hägg, Jacob Adolf (Estergrarn, 1850). Swedish composer, pupil of Van Boom, Gade and Kiel. Has written a Northern Symphony, 2 piano-sonatas, 'cello-, organ- and piano-pieces, etc. Sketch by Hetsch, 1903.

Hahn, Albert (Thorn, 1828–1880, n. Leipzig). Prussian teacher, from 1856 active in Berlin, in 1867–70 director at Bielefeld and from 1875 again in Berlin, where in 1876 he started Die Tonkunst to advocate the chromatic scale-system. Author of a work on Mozart's Requiem (1867), Zur Organisation d. Musik im ganzen Lande, 1879, etc.

Hahn, Carl (Indianapolis, Ind. 1874). American conductor, pupil of the Cincinnati College of Music, at first a 'cellist in the Cincinnati Orchestra, in 1900–11 conductor of choral and orchestral enterprises at San Antonio and Galveston, Tex., and in 1913-18 conductor of the New York Arion and also of the Brooklyn Arion. A.

Hahn, Jacob H. (Philadelphia, 1847-1902, Detroit). In 1874 founder and then successful director of the Detroit Conservatory. A.

Hahn, Reynaldo (Caracas, 1874). Gifted Venezuelan composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory. Has written the operas La Carmélite, 1902, and Nausicaa, 1919, the 'idylle poly-nésienne' L'Île du Rêve, 1898, incidental music to Daudet's L'Obstacle (1890), Croisset's Deux Courtisanes (1902), Mendès' Scarron (1905), Racine's Esther (1905), Hugo's Angelo and Lucrèce Borgia (1905, '11) and Magre's Médusa (1911), the ballets Béatrice d'Este, 1909, La Fête chez Thérèse, 1910, and Le Dieu Bleu, 1912, the symphonic poems Nuit d'Amour Bergamasque, 1897, and Prométhée Triomphant, 1911, the 'mystery' La Pastorale de Noël, 1908, choruses, many songs and characteristic piano-pieces. G, A.

Haile, Eugen (Ulm, 1873). Württemberger composer, pupil of the Stuttgart Conservatory, since 1903 active in New York as composer of the opera Viola d'Amore, music to accompany the drama The Happy Ending (1916) and about 100 fine songs. A.

Haines Brothers. A New York piano-making firm, founded in 1851 by Napoleon J. Haines and his brother. The firm is now part of the American Piano Co. A.

Hainl, Georges François (Issoire, 1807-1873, Paris). French 'cellist, and conductor, pupil of Norblon, touring from 1830 as virtuoso, from 1840 conductor of opera at Lyons and from 1863 at the Paris Opéra, besides for some years leading the Conservatory Concerts and also music at the court. Author of a sketch of music in Lyons (1852).

Haizinger, Anton (n. Vienna, 1796-1869, do.). Austrian operatic tenor, pupil of Salieri, from 1821 singing at the Theater an der Wien, Vienna, soon touring in Germany, France (1831) and England (1832) and then permanently engaged at Karlsruhe until his retirement to Vienna in 1850. G.

Hale, Philip (Norwich, Vt. 1854). Distinguished American critic, educated as a lawyer and practicing till 1882 in Albany, musically trained at Berlin, Stuttgart and under Guilman, in 1887-89 organist and choral conductor in Troy and Albany. Since 1889 he has worked in Boston, from 1891 on the staff of the Journal and since 1903 of the Herald, besides in 1898-1901 editing the Musical Herald and writing for many other journals. In 1889-1905 he was organist at the First (Unitarian) Church in Roxbury. Since 1901 he has prepared the program-books of the Boston Symphony Orchestra with extraordinary brilliance and power. Editor of Modern French Songs, 2 vols. and contributor to L. C. Elson's Great Composers and their Works, 1900. A.

Halévy, Jacques François Fromental Élie (Paris, 1799-1862, Nice), surname properly Lévi. Eminent French (Jewish) composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1819, with second prizes in 1816 and '17). From 1827 he was accompanist at the Italiens and in 1830-45 chorusmaster at the Opéra. From 1827 he was also professor at the Conservatory. Although composing industriously from his youth, he did not secure public attention till about 1830, but soon reached his highest success with La Juive and L'Éclair in 1835. He was made a member of the Légion d'Honneur and of the Académie, becoming in 1854 secretary of the Fine Arts section and thus official eulogist. His style was full of power on many sides, especially in emotional contrast, richness of dramatic color, strong characterization of personages, scholarly treatment, etc., but tended to overelaboration, was sometimes unduly somber and not seldom was applied to texts of mediocre value. He was unduly influenced by Meyerbeer, whose vogue hampered his popularity.

His works include

Operas—Les Bohémiennes (before 1819), Pygmalion, Les Deux Pavillons (both about 1821), L'Artisan, 1827, Le Roi et le Bâtelier, 1828 (with Rifaut), Clari, 1828, Le Dilettante d'Avignon, 1829, La Langue Musicale, 1831, La Tentation, 1832 (ballet-opera, with Gide), Les Souvenirs de Lafleur, 1833, Ludovic, 1833 (completion of a work begun by Hérold), La Juive, 1835, L'Éclair, 1835, Guido et Ginevra, 1838, Les Treize, 1839, Le Shérif, 1839, Le Drapier, 1840, Le Guitarro, 1841, La Reine de Chypre, 1841, Charles VI, 1843, Le Lazzarone, 1844, Les Mousquetaires de la Reine, 1846, Les Premiers Pas, 1847 (with Adam, Auber and Carafa, for the opening of the Théâtre National), Le Val d'Andorre, 1848, La Fée aux Roses, 1849, La Tempesta, 1850, La Dame de Pique, 1850, Le Juif Errant, 1852, Le Nabab, 1853, Jaguarria l'Indienne, 1855, L'Inconsolable, 1855, Valentine d'Avignon, 1856, La Magicienne, 1858, with Vanina d'Ornano (completed by Bizet) and Noë or Le Déluge (ditto).

Ballets—Yelva (1830), Manon Lescaut, 1830.

Incidental music for Prométhée Enchaîné (translated from Æschylus by Léon Halévy), 1849.

Cantatas—Les Derniers Moments du Tasse, 1816, La Mort d'Adonis, 1817, Hermine, 1819, Italie, 1849, Les Plages de Nil, 1859.

Psalm 130, 1820 (for funeral of Duc de Berry). Several men's choruses.

Piano-sonata (4 hands) and some pieces.

Many songs and duets.

He also wrote Souvenirs et Portraits, 1861, with its continuation Derniers Souvenirs et Portraits, 1863 (both largely made up of eulogies of Academicians), and prepared the text of Cherubini's treatise on counterpoint and fugue, besides a school text-book on singing. Memoirs by Neumann, 1855, Léon Halévy, 1862, Lorbac, 1862, Monnais, 1863, Catelin, 1863, and Pougin, 1865. G.

Halir, Karl (Hohenelbe, 1859-1909, Berlin). Eminent Bohemian violinist, pupil of Bennewitz and Joachim, from 1876 in Bilsle's orchestra at Berlin and at Königsberg and Mannheim, from 1884 concertmaster of the court-band at Weimar and in 1893-1907 court-concertmaster at Berlin, following De Ahna. In 1897-1907 he played second in the famous Joachim Quartet and then formed his own Quartet (with Exner, Müller and Dechert), which was almost equally noted. In 1896-97 he toured in America. In 1888 he married Theresa Zerbst, an accomplished singer.

Hall, Henry (?1655-1707). 17th C. G.

Hall, Marie [Mary Paulina] (Newcastle, 1884). Gifted English violinist, pupil of her father, Hildegard Werner, Kruse and Sevcik, developing precociously as a little child. Since 1902 she has toured in all parts of the world with remarkable success. G.

Hall, Walter Henry (London, 1862). English organist and conductor, trained at the Royal Academy, London, since 1883 in America, from 1884 in Germantown, Pa., from 1890 at St. Peter's in Albany and in 1896-1913 at St. James' in New York. In 1893 he founded and has since conducted the Brooklyn Oratorio Society, besides several other choral societies. Since 1913 he has also been professor of Choral and Church Music at Columbia University, with the leadership of the chapel-choir and a large chorus. The combined forces of his Brooklyn and New York choruses give festival performances annually. Has written church-music and Essentials of Choir-Boy Training, 1907, with many articles. A.

Hall, William John (London, 1867). English singer and organist, trained in London, Leipzig and Milan, since about 1890 in America, singing at first in light opera, then teaching and playing at Rock Island, Ill., Cedar Rapids, Ia., St. Paul, Davenport, Ia., and latterly at St. Louis. Has written operettas, tone-poems, songs, etc. G.

Hallé, Charles [Karl Halle] (Hagen, 1819-1895, Manchester). Distinguished Westphalian pianist and conductor, precociously developed (appearing in public when but four), pupil of his father, Rinck and G. Weber, besides from 1835 being intimate with a large musical circle in Paris and making some trips elsewhere (as to England in 1843). In 1848 the Revolution forced his moving to England, where he settled at Manchester, soon making a reputation as conductor of the Gentlemen's Concerts, of a new choral society (1852) and of opera, besides in 1857 starting the noted Manchester Orchestra. He also made his mark as pianist and from about 1852 was a pioneer in giving series of historical and instructive recitals (notably at London in 1861-63, with program-notes by J. W. Davison). From about 1860 he was constantly in request as conductor for opera-seasons, choral societies, orchestras and festivals (from 1868 the Reid Concerts at Edinburgh, in 1873-93 the Bristol Festivals, in 1882-85 the London Sacred Harmonic Society and from 1883 the Liverpool Philharmonic, etc.). In 1888 he married Wilma Neruda (Mme. Norman), the violinist, and with her made tours in Australia in 1890-91, as well as in South Africa in 1895. In 1893 he promoted the founding of the Royal College of Music at Manchester and became its first principal. He was instrumental in introducing many of Berlioz' works to the English public. In 1884 Edinburgh University made him Mus.D. and in 1888 he was knighted. Wrote some piano-works and a method. Memoir by his son and daughter (autobiographical), 1896, and see L. Engel, From Handel to Hallé, 1890. G.

Hallén, Anders (Gothenburg, 1846). Eminent Swedish conductor and composer, pupil of Reinecke, Rheinberger and Rietz, in 1872-78 and 1883-84 conductor of the Musical Union at Gothenburg (at Berlin in 1878-83), from 1884 of the Philharmonic Concerts in Stockholm, in 1892-97 of the Royal Opera there, in 1901-07 of the Malmö Philharmonic and since 1908 professor at the Stockholm Conservatory and critic for the Nya Dagligt Allehanda. He is a member of the Swedish Academy and of several Scandinavian Orders. Has written the operas Harald Viking, 1881, Häxfällan, 1896, (re-written as Walborgsmässa, 1902), and Walde-marsskatten, 1897, with Geminianus and Nyårsop-era (not yet given), a Jul-Oratorium, the choral works The Page and the Princess, The Dream-King and his Love, Goblin's Fate, Christmas-Eve, Sweden, Peace, Dionysos, etc., the symphonic poems Sten Sture (melodrama), A Summer Tale, From the Waldemar Story, The Wasa Story, The Island of the Dead (Toteninsel or Sphärenklänge), 4 orchestral suites, 2 rhapsodies, the overture Frithjof och Ingeborg, a Romance for violin and orchestra, a piano-quartet, German and Swedish songs, etc. Author of Musikaliske Kåserier, 1897.

Haller, Michael (Neusaat, 1840-1915, Ratisbon). Bavarian priest and church-musician, pupil of Schrems, from 1866 teacher at the Real-schule in Ratisbon and at the Church Music School. Wrote 14 masses, motets, Psalms and much other church-music, string-quartets, melodramas, etc., and completed parts of some Palestrina works, besides a singing-method (1876, 12th ed. 1910), a Kompositionslehre für d. polyphonen Kirchengesang, 1891, Modulation in d. Kirchentönenarten, Exempla Polyphonie Ec-clesiasticæ (in modern notation, with notes) and articles for the Kirchenmusikal. Jahrbuch.

Hallström, Ivar (Stockholm, 1826-1901, do.). Swedish composer, at first a lawyer and also librarian to the Crown Prince, but from 1861 head of the Lindblad music-school. His style as composer was strongly national. Wrote the operas Hertig Magnus, 1867, The Mountain-King, 1874, The Gnome's Bride, 1875, The Vikings' Voyage, 1877, Nyaga, 1885, Per Swinaherde, 1887, Gran-ada's Daughter, 1892, and Liten Karin, 1897, the operettas The Enchanted Cat, 1869, Mjölmar-var-gen, 1871, Silverringen, 1880, Aristotle, 1886, and Hin ondes Snaror, 1900, the ballets In London, 1871, The Adventure in Scotland, 1875, and Melusina, 1882, incidental music for Hedberg's Stolts Elisif (1870), several cantatas, including The Flowers, 1860 (prize from Stockholm Musical Union), piano-pieces and songs.

Hallwachs, Karl (Darmstadt, 1870). Hessian conductor and song-composer, pupil of the Munich Conservatory, from 1895 choral and orchestral conductor at Darmstadt, from 1897 chorusmaster at the Wiesbaden Opera, from 1899 opera-director at Aix, from 1900 at Saarbrück and since 1902 director of the Oratorio Society and the Liedertafel at Kassel. Has written the opera Ramaka, various choruses, several sets of notable songs, piano-pieces, etc.

Halm, Anton (Wies, 1789–1872, Vienna). Able Styrian teacher and composer, trained at Gratz, in army-service in 1809–11, then teacher at Gratz and for the Baroness von Ghica (whom he married in 1815), and from 1815 noted as a leading teacher in Vienna (Heller, Henselt, Fischhof, Dachs, Epstein, Beliczay, etc., were his pupils). Wrote much chamber-music (sextet, string-quartets, piano-trios, 'cello-sonatas), piano-sonatas, rondos, fantasias, variations and excellent études, a mass, songs, etc. He was a trusted friend of Beethoven (made a piano-arrangement of his quartet-fugue, op. 133, which was finally replaced by one by Beethoven himself).

Halm, August (Grossaltdorf, 1869). Württemberg teacher, at first studying theology at Tübingen, then pupil of the Munich Conservatory, from 1903 teacher in schools at Haubinda and Wickersdorf, in 1910–11 leader of the Ulm Liedertafel and since 1913 teacher in the Stuttgart Hochschule. Has written a symphony, a piano-concerto, a string-quartet, piano-pieces, a manual of harmony, Von zwei Kulturen d. Musik, 1913, Die Symphonie Bruckners, 1914, Von Grenzen u. Ländern d. Musik, 1916, and ueber J. S. Bachs Konzertform, 1919 (in Bach-Jahrbuch).

Hals, Bröderne. A leading Norwegian firm of piano-makers, founded in 1847 by Karl and Peter Hals and continued by their descendants.

Halvorsen, Johan (Drammen, 1864). Norwegian violinist, trained at the Stockholm Conservatory and by Brodsky, Becker and Thomson, from 1887 concertmaster at Bergen and at Aberdeen, besides touring, and teaching three years at the Helsingfors Conservatory, from 1893 conductor of the Bergen Harmonie and since 1899 of the Christiania Opera. Has written a violin-concerto, 3 violin-suites, music for several plays, a cantata for the coronation of King Haakon (1906), various piano-pieces, choruses and songs.

Ham, Albert (Bath, 1858). English organist, pupil of Hewitt and Pyne, from 1880 playing at Ilminster and from 1893 at Taunton, with some choral conducting, and since 1897 organist at St. James' Cathedral in Toronto, conductor of the National Chorus and examiner for the University. In 1909 he became president of the new Canadian Guild of Organists. Mus.D. of Dublin Univ. in 1894 and of Toronto Univ. in 1906. Has written 2 church-cantatas, services, anthems and other church-music, part-songs, military marches and several text-books for Novello. A.

Hamal, Jan Noël (Liège, 1709–1778, do.). Belgian composer, from 1745 choirmaster at Liège Cathedral (St. Lambert). Wrote symphonies that antedate Haydn, 3 oratorios, Psalm 114 (with double orchestra), 5 operettas in the Walloon dialect, arias, etc.

Hambourg, Boris (Voronezh, 1884), brother of the two following. Eminent Russian 'cellist, pupil of his father, Walenn and the Hoch Conservatory, Frankfort, appearing from 1903 at Pyrmont, then on tour with his brother Mark in Australia and New Zealand, from 1904 in England, from 1906 in Germany and from 1910 in America, besides a tour in South Africa in 1908. In 1911–16 he joined his father and his brother Jan in conducting a notable music-school in Toronto, and has since lived in New York. His historical recitals of 'cello-music in England and Germany made a deep impression. Has written 'cello-pieces and edited examples of 18th-century works. A.

Hambourg, Jan (Voronezh, 1882), brother of Boris above and Mark below. Eminent Russian violinist, pupil of Sauret, Wilhelmj, Heermann, Sevěik and Ysaÿe, since 1905 known throughout Europe and America as both soloist and ensemble-player. In 1911–16, with his father and brother Boris, he conducted a school in Toronto, and has since lived in New York. A.

Hambourg, Mark (Voronezh, 1879), brother of the two preceding. Famous Russian pianist, pupil of his father and Leschetizky, first appearing when but nine (in Moscow), and since 1895 increasingly notable in all parts of the world, excelling in technique, memory and temperamental interpretation (somewhat recalling Rubinstein). He has made four tours in America (1899, 1902, '07, '15), five in Australia (from 1895) and two in South Africa. He is a British subject and lives in London. Has written several piano-pieces. A.

Hambourg, Michael (Yaroslav, 1856–1916, Toronto), father of the three preceding. Russian pianist, trained at the Petrograd and Moscow Conservatories, from 1880 professor at the latter, from 1891 teacher in London and from 1911 director, with his sons Jan and Boris, of a school in Toronto. A.

Hamel, Marie Pierre (n. Beauvais, 1786–after 1870, do.). French expert on organ-making and civil official at Beauvais. He was long a member of the Commission on Arts and Monuments and prepared reports upon organs throughout France. He was also one of the founders of the Beauvais orchestra, which did pioneer work in introducing the Beethoven symphonies. Though not engaged in organ-making, he rebuilt some organs, including that in Beauvais Cathedral. Author of Nouveau Manuel Complet du Facteur d'Orgues, 3 vols. 1849 (revised ed. by Guédon, 1903), in its extended form of great value.

Hamerik [Hammerich], Asger (Copenhagen, 1843–1923, do.). Fine Danish composer, pupil of Gade, Matthison-Hansen, Haberbiær and Von Bülw, after sojourns in Vienna (with Berlioz), Paris and Italy, in 1871-1898 director of the Peabody Conservatory, Baltimore, and conductor of the Symphony Concerts there, and from 1898 living in Copenhagen. In 1890 he was knighted by the King of Denmark. Has written the operas Tovellie, Hjalmar and Ingeborg (both 1868), La Vendetta, 1870 (Milan), and Der Wanderer, 1872, an Opera ohne Wort, 1883, the choral works Hymne de la Paix, 1868, Trilogie Judaïque, 1869, Christliche Trilogie, 1882, a cantata celebrating the new Swedish Constitution (1866), a Requiem (6-part), etc., 7 symphonies (Poétique in F, Tragique in C min., Lyrique in E, Majestueuse in C, Sérieuse in G min., Spirituelle, for strings, and Chorale), 5 Nordische Suiten for orchestra, a 'cello-romance with orchestra, a piano-quartet, a 'cello-piano fantasia, etc. G. A.

Hamilton, Clarence Grant (Providence, R. I. 1865). American teacher and organist, pupil of Foote, Dannreuther, Matthay, Macdougall and Chadwick, from 1889 in Providence and since 1904 teaching at Wellesley College and organist at the Congregational Church there. Since 1913 he has directed a summer-school at Boothbay, Me. Author of Outlines of Music-History, 1908 (revised, 1913), Piano-Teaching, 1910, Sound and its Relation to Music, 1912, Music-Appreciation, 1920, with parts of Baltzell's History of Music, 1905. Editor of Ditson's School-Credit Piano-Course, 1918. Has also written choruses for two Greek plays (1912, '14) for women's voices. A.

Hamilton, James Alexander (London, 1785-1845, do.). Self-trained author of many elementary text-books or catechisms in harmony and composition, a dictionary of terms and translations of theoretical works by Cherubini, Baillot, Fröhlich and Vierling. G.

Hamlin, George John (Elgin, Ill. 1868-1923, New York). American tenor, since 1895 favorably known in concert and since 1911 also in opera (Chicago Opera). In 1898 he introduced programs wholly made up of Strauss' songs. A.

Hammer, Heinrich Albert Edward (Erfurt, 1862). Thuringian conductor, pupil of Pott, H. Ritter, Viardot-Garcia and Marsick, from 1890 leader of the Amsterdam Quartet, in 1894-96 director of the Hague Euterpe, from 1897 orchestral conductor at Bochum, from 1901 founder and leader of an orchestra in Lausanne and in 1905-07 of one in Gothenburg (Sweden). In 1903 he led a Berlioz Festival in Geneva and in 1904-05 Beethoven, Brahms and Berlioz Festivals in Berlin. Since 1908 he has directed an orchestra in Washington and a women's chorus. Has written the oratorio Der heilige Georg, a symphony, the ode Columbia Triumphant in Peace, 1915, a symphony, 3 (American) Indian Rhapsodies for orchestra, violin-pieces, church-music, choruses and songs. A.

Hammerich, Angul (Copenhagen, 1848), brother of Hamerik above. Danish author and teacher, at first in the civil service, but from 1880 music-critic for the Nationaltidende and from 1892 lecturer or professor at Copenhagen University, where in 1898 he organized a Historical Musical Museum. Author of Studies in Old Icelandic Music, 1890, The Copenhagen Conservatory, 1892, Music at the Court of Christian IV, 1892, Catalogue of the Historical Musical Museum, 1909-11, Musical Relics of Denmark, 1912, biographical essays on Hartmann (1916) and a history of Danish music before 1700 (1921).

Hammerschmidt, Andreas (1612-1675). 17th C. G.

Hammerstein, Oscar (Berlin, 1847-1919, New York). Prussian impresario, from 1863 a cigar-maker in New York, from 1870 lessee or owner of a series of theatrical enterprises, and in 1906-10 the director of the Manhattan Opera House, which he made a strong rival of the Metropolitan. In 1908 he built the Philadelphia Opera House, in 1911-12 the London Opera House and in 1913 the American Opera House in New York, his use of which was, however, prevented. A.

Hammond, William Churchill (Rockville, Conn. 1860). American organist, pupil of N. H. Allen and S. P. Warren, since 1885 at the Second Congregational Church, Holyoke, Mass., with many recitals elsewhere, besides from 1890 teaching at Smith College and in 1900 becoming professor at Mt. Holyoke College. A.

Hanboys [Hamboys], John. 15th C. G.

Hanchett, Henry Granger (Syracuse, N. Y. 1853-1913, Siasconset, Mass.). American physician and pianist, pupil of Held, A. J. Goodrich, Sherwood, Th. Kullak, A. K. Virgil and Wm. Mason, in 1884-87 organist of the Church of the Ascension, New York, from 1889 at the Marble Collegiate Church and in 1893-98 at the Central Congregational Church, Brooklyn, besides in 1890-93 teaching at the Metropolitan College of Music. From about 1890 he made a specialty of lecture-recitals, especially in New York and Brooklyn. In 1907-10 he taught near Washington and from 1913 was music-director at Brenau College in Georgia. In 1873 he invented the 'sostenuto' pedal for pianos. Wrote some church-music, Teaching as a Science, 1882, The Art of the Musician, 1905, and An Introduction to the Theory of Music, 1916, besides some medical books. A.

Hand, Ferdinand Gotthelf (Plauen, 1786-1851, Jena). From 1817 professor of Greek at Jena University. Author of Aesthetik d. Tonkunst, 2 vols. 1837-41 (2d ed. 1846).

Händel, Georg Friedrich (Halle, [Feb. 23] 1685-1759 [Apr. 14], London), name anglicized as Hendel or Handel from soon after 1710. Distinguished Saxon composer, contemporary with J. S. Bach and more immediately influential than he upon the progress of dramatic music, especially in England. His father was a surgeon, his mother (second wife, much younger than her husband) the daughter of a Lutheran pastor

The boy's early interest in music was at first checked, but, after it had been noted by the Duke of Saxe-Weissenfels in 1692, developed by lessons from Zachau, organist at the Liebfrauenkirche. Before he was ten he had become expert on harpsichord, organ and oboe, as well as in polyphonic composition. In 1696 he was taken to Berlin as a musical prodigy, and the Elector offered to send him to Italy as a protégé. Instead, he continued his general education at Halle, in 1702 taking one year at the University, becoming also organist at the Moritzkirche (Reformed). In 1703, seeking wider musical experience, he joined Keiser's orchestra at Hamburg, at first as violinist, later as cembalist or vice-director. Here he began opera-writing in the Italian style, besides continuing work as organist. In 1706-09 he was in Italy, visiting all the larger cities, becoming familiar with a large circle of eminent musicians and adding to his reputation as player and composer in several forms. He was then appointed court-director at Hanover, succeeding Steffani, but in 1710 and 1712-14 made visits to London with notable success as producer of opera. In 1714, when he had been too long absent from Hanover, at the death of Queen Anne, his patron, the Elector, succeeded her as George I. The awkward position of Handel was relieved after a time and he was made court-musician, a post retained for the rest of his life. In 1716-18, however, he was again at Hanover. In 1718-20 he served as musician to the wealthy Duke of Chandos at Cannons, writing some striking church-music and the first of his English oratorios.

From 1720 to 1737 he was absorbed in operatic enterprises, until 1728 as composer and conductor for the aristocratic stock-company known as the Royal Academy of Music, for which he wrote nearly 20 operas. Political and personal strife having caused this to fail, from 1729 he continued with a company of his own, which, however, was ruined in competition with rivals in 1737, Handel losing all his savings and suffering a slight stroke of paralysis. For this venture he had written about 15 more operas.

From 1739 he turned almost wholly to producing oratorios, in which he used musical methods like those of his operas, but applied to works adapted to concert-performance and utilizing choral forces. A series of about 15 works followed which proved to have permanent vitality and influence, making him, at least till the time of Mendelssohn, the most potent force in moulding English musical taste. In 1753 he became almost totally blind, but continued active till near his death.

His location in England kept his works from having immediate recognition on the Continent, though his ability was well known. (It later became clear that he was one of the strongest exponents of the prevalent Neapolitan type of opera, excelling in the freedom with which he handled its artificial plan, in the variety and force of his dramatic characterization and in his command of instrumental and vocal expression. At the same time he gradually developed a power of creation in sacred and serious composition that brought him into a certain comparison with Bach. His genius, however, though abundantly facile in the polyphonic methods of the time, lay in directions different from those chosen by Bach, especially in the emphasis upon melodic and harmonic effects having a more direct popular appeal. Though most striking as a vocal composer, his command of instrumentation and his strictly instrumental works set him with Bach and Domenico Scarlatti as one of the most able prior to the rise about 1750 of the monophonic and symphonic styles of Mannheim and of the Viennese masters. None of his operas continued in vogue entire, owing to the poverty of their librettos and the stiffness of their dramatic structures, but numerous arias from them are still admired. Of his oratorios, The Messiah promptly achieved fame and has continued enormously popular, partly because of its subject (and the masterly plan of its text-material) and partly for the power of many of its passages. Yet as illustrating Handel as melodist and choral writer several other works stand out as equally important, notably Saul, Israel in Egypt (for pictorial choruses), Samson, Judas Macabæus and Joshua.

Personally, Handel was hearty, frank, rather choleric and imperious, a born manager and a shrewd observer of popular taste. But he was also high-minded, earnest and devout, as his more serious writing testifies. He was never married. At his death, unlike Bach, he left a considerable property.

After the fashion of the time, he did not hesitate often to remodel or readapt his own works to new purposes, as well as to some extent to borrow from others. The list of his several works is as follows:

Secular Vocal Works

Operas—Almira, Nero, 1705 (Hamburg), Daphne, Florinda, 1706 (do.), Rodrigo, 1707 (Florence), Agrippina, 1708 (Venice), Rinaldo, 1711 (London, and all below), Il Pastor Fido, 1712, Teseo, 1713, Silla, 1714?, Amadigi di Gaula, 1715, Radamisto, 1720, Muzio Scevola, Floridante, 1721, Ottone, Flavio, 1723, Giulio Cesare, Tamerlano, 1724, Rodelinda, 1725, Scipione, Alessandro, 1726, Ammeto, Riccardo Primo, 1727, Siroe, Tolomeo, 1728, Lotario, 1729, Partenope, 1730, Porco, 1731, Ezio, Sosarme, Orlando, 1732, Arianna, 1734, Ariodante, Alcina, 1735, Atalanta, 1736, Armínio, Giustino, Berenice, 1737, Faramondo, Serse, 1738, Jupiter in Argos (1739), Imeneo, 1740, Deidamia, 1741, with Tito, Alfonso Primo, Flavio Olibrio and Honorius, fragments, mostly of uncertain date.

Pasticcios—Ormisda, 1730 (London, and all below), Lucio Papirio, Il Catone, 1732, Semiramide, Cajo Fabricio, 1733: Arbace, Orestes, 1734, Alessandro Severo, 1738, Rozana, 1743, Lucio Vero, 1747, Ernelinda (?).

Serenatas, Odes, etc.—Act, Galatea e Polifemo, 1708 (Naples), Birthday Ode, 1713 (for Queen Anne), Acis and Galatea, 1720 (Cannons), Parnasso in Festa, 1734 (London), Alexander's Feast, 1736, Ode for St. Cecilia's Day, 1739, L'Allegro, il Penseroso ed il Moderato, 1740.

Miscellaneous stage-pieces—The Alchymist, 1732, Terpsicore, 1734, Semele, 1744, Hercules, 1745, Alceste (1750), The Choice of Hercules, 1751.

Various Italian cantatas, trios and duets; some French and German songs.

15
9
135

Sacred Vocal Works

Oratorios—1st Passion, 1704 (Hamburg), La Resurrezione, Il Trionfo del Tempo, 1708 (Rome), 2d Passion, 1717 (Hamburg), Esther, 1720 (Cannons) Deborah, Athaliah, 1733 (London, and all but one below), Saul, Israel in Egypt, 1739, The Messiah, 1742 (Dublin), Samson, 1743, Joseph, 1744, Belshazzar, 1745, Occasional Oratorio, 1746, Judas Maccabæus, 1747, Alexander Balus, Joshua, 1748, Solomon, Susanna, 1749, Theodora, 1750, Jephtha, 1752, The Triumph of Time, 1757 (see 1708 above).

English anthems, etc.—Utrecht Te Deum and Jubilate, 1713 (London), 12 Chandos Anthems and 3 Te Deums, 1718–20 (Cannons), 4 Coronation Anthems, 1727 (London, for George II), 2 Wedding Anthems, 1734/36 (for Princess Royal and for Prince of Wales), Funeral Anthem, 1737 (at death of Queen Caroline), Dettingen Te Deum and Anthem, 1743, Foundling Anthem, 1749 (for the Foundling Hospital). Also 3 tunes for English hymns.

Latin motets—Laudate Pueri in F and D, Dixit Dominus, Nisi Dominus, Silete venti; Kyrie, Gloria and Magnificat of disputed authorship.

Instrumental Works

Water-Musick, 1715; Firework-Musick, 1749; Forest-Musick (1742?, Dublin).

3 Suites de Pièces for harpsichord; 6 fugues; 12 sonatas or solos.

6 sonatas or trios; 7 trios; 6 hautboy-concertos; 15 concertos; concertone; 3 sets of organ-concertos; many other fragments.

[The long list of overtures to operas and oratorios really belong here, since they are more or less independent compositions.]

The comprehensive edition of his works that was ordered by George III and prepared by Samuel Arnold (36 vols. from 1786) has been superseded by the great edition of the Händelgesellschaft under the care of Chrysander (100 vols. 1856–94). Memoirs by Mattheson, 1740 (in his Ehrenpforte), Mainwaring, 1760, Coxe, 1799, Clark, 1836, Förstemann, 1844, Schœlcher, 1857, Stothard, 1857, Chrysander, 1858–67 (3 vols. only, to be completed by Seiffert), Chorley, 2 vols. 1859, Van Kempen, 1868, Marshall, 1881, Rockstro, 1883, Opel, 1885, Volbach, 1898 (enlarged 1906), Williams, 1901, Cummings, 1905, Hadden, 1905, Robinson, 1908, Streatfeild, 1909, Rolland, 1910, Davey, 1912, Turovius, 1912, Brenet, 1913, H. Abert, 1921, and many other monographs and articles. G.

Händl. See Gallus.

Handlo, Robert de. 14th C. G.

Handrock, Julius (Naumburg, 1830–1894, Halle). Saxon piano-teacher, writing many valuable études and pedagogical pieces. He was intimate with Franz and Liszt.

Hänel von Cronenthal, Julia (Graz, 1839), wife of Marquis d'Héricourt de Valincourt. Gifted Styrian composer of 4 symphonies, orchestral arrangements of Chinese melodies, a string-quartet, 22 piano-sonatas and many other pieces.

Hanff, Johann Nicolaus (1630–1706). 17th C.

Hanfstängel, Marie, née Schröder (Breslau, 1848–1917, Munich). Brilliant Silesian operatic soprano, pupil of Mme. Viardot-Garcia, and Vannucini, first appearing in Paris in 1866–70, in 1871–78 active at Stuttgart, from 1882 at Frankfurt and in 1895–97 teaching at the Hoch Conservatory there and then living in Munich.

In 1884–86 she sang at the Metropolitan, New York. Author of Meine Lehrweise d. Gesangskunst, 1902.

Hanisch, Joseph (Ratisbon, 1812–1892, do.). Bavarian organist, pupil of his father and Proske, in 1834–36 the latter's assistant in Italy, from 1839 organist at Ratisbon Cathedral and of a parish-church near by, as well as from 1875 teacher in the Church Music School. Wrote masses, motets, Psalms, organ-pieces, etc., and prepared (with Haberl) accompaniments for the Graduale and Vesperale Romanum.

Hanke, Karl (Rosswalde, 1754–1835, Hamburg). In 1775–79 musician to Count Hoditz-Rosswalde, from 1786 court-director at Schleswig, from 1791 cantor at Flensburg and later city-director at Hamburg. His first wife was the singer Stormkin (d. 1789) and his second the singer Berwald. Wrote 5 operas (from 1781), ballets, many cantatas, symphonies, concertos, much chamber-music, church-music, etc.

Hanon, Charles Louis (n. Verdun, 1820–1900, Boulogne). French organist and piano-teacher, writing valuable études for piano and a method, besides editing a set of progressive study-pieces, etc.

Hänsel, Peter (Leipa, 1770–1831, Vienna). Silesian violinist, from 1787 employed by Count Potemkin at Petrograd and from 1792 by Countess Lubomirski in Vienna (studying also with Haydn). In 1802–03 he visited Paris. Wrote an enormous amount of chamber-music of no great value.

Hansen, Emil Robert (Copenhagen, 1860). Able Danish 'cellist, pupil of his father, Neruda and Grützmacher, in 1877–89 in the court-orchestra at Copenhagen, then in London, from 1891 in the Gewandhaus Orchestra at Leipzig and teacher at the Conservatory. Has written the opera Frauentist, 1911, the operetta Die wilde Komtesse, 1913, a symphony, an orchestral suite (strings and horns), the overture Phädra, concertos for 'cello and for piano, a piano-quintet, a violin-sonata, etc.

Hansing, Siegfried (Bückeburg, 1842–1913, in Switzerland). Expert piano-maker, in 1884–98 working in America. Author of Das Piano-forte in seinen akustischen Anlegen, 1888 (2d ed. 1909) and articles in the Zeitschr. für Instrumentenbau.

Hanslick, Eduard (Prague, 1825–1904, n. Vienna). Eminent Bohemian critic, educated for the law at Prague and Vienna (degree in 1849), but also musically trained by Tomaschek. In 1848–49 he wrote for the Wiener Zeitung, from 1855 for the Presse and from 1864 for the Neue Freie Presse. In 1861–95 he was lecturer or professor at the University on music-history and æsthetics. He was one of the jury of award at the Paris Expositions of 1867 and '78, as at that of Vienna in 1873. From the outset of his literary career he employed his fine technical equipment and his vigorous style to uphold the view that beauty in music inheres wholly in the content of the tone-fabric itself. He carried his advocacy of 'pure' or 'absolute' music so far that he became the chief opponent not only of Wagner, but of every modern tendency to exalt 'program' and even 'pictorial' effects. He was an enthusiastic partisan of Brahms. Author of Vom Musikalisch-Schönen, 1854 (12th ed. 1918), Gesch. d. Concertwesens in Wien, 2 vols, 1869-70, Aus d. Konzertsaal, 1870 (2d ed. 1897), Die moderne Oper, 9 vols. 1875-1900, Suite (collected critiques), 1885, Konzerte, Komponisten u. Virtuosen [1870-85], 1886, and Aus meinem Leben, 2 vols. 1894 (4th ed. 1911), besides the literary part of the Galerie deutscher Tondichter, 1873, and Galerie französ. u. italien. Tondichter, 1874. He also edited Billroth's Wer ist musikalisch?, 1895 (4th ed. 1911). G.

Hansmann, Viktor (Warasdin, 1871-1909, Berlin). Croatian composer of the operas Enoch Arden, 1897, Die Nazarener, 1906, and Unter der Reichsfahne, 1906, and songs with orchestra. His father, Richard Hansmann (1845-1913), wrote upon the Jankó keyboard (1892).

Hanssens, Charles Louis (Ghent, 1802-1871, Brussels). Able Belgian 'cellist and composer, self-taught, by 1812 playing in the opera-orchestra at Amsterdam and in 1822 assistant-conductor, from 1824 in similar posts at Brussels until driven to Holland by the Revolution of 1830. In 1834 he was similarly active at the Théâtre Ventadour, Paris, followed by the direction of French opera at The Hague and Ghent. In 1848-69 he was conductor at the Monnaie, Brussels, and professor at the Conservatory, in 1851-54 being also manager of the Opera. As a composer he ranked high among the Belgians of his time. Wrote 8 operas, about 15 ballets, music for Vaëz' Agneessens (1849), the oratorio Le Sabbat, 1870, 4 cantatas, 2 masses, a Requiem, several symphonies, overtures, concertos for 'cello, violin, clarinet and piano, string-quartets, etc. His father, Charles Louis Joseph Hanssens (1777-1852), was also a prominent conductor from about 1800, at Brussels at intervals in 1825-40.

Harburger, Walter (Munich, 1888). Bavarian composer of a symphony, 3 string-quartets, a piano-trio, a 'cello-sonata, 3 sonatas and 2 suites for piano, a clavichord-suite, various other piano-works, 2 extensive organ-fugues, a mass, an a cappella Stabat Mater and music for 2 pantomimes. Author of books on harmony as deduced from mathematical and logical principles (1912-20).

Harcourt, Eugène d' (Paris, 1855-1918, do.). French composer and critic, trained at the Paris Conservatory and by Schulze and Bargeil. In 1892-95 he conducted Concerts Éclectiques Populaires in Paris (building for them the Salle d'Harcourt) and in 1900 sought to continue them as Grands Oratorios à l'Église St.-Eustache. In 1906-09 he was deputed by the government to examine musical conditions in Italy, Germany, Austria and Scandinavia, and in 1915 (with Saint-Saëns) was commissioner at the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco. In 1917 he again visited America, conducting concerts of French works. Wrote the opera Tasso, 1903, 2 ballets, 3 symphonies (one, Néo-classique, to show that old and new methods are not antagonistic), 2 string-quartets, a mass (1876), cantatas and motets. Author of Quelques Remarques sur l'Exécution de Tannhäuser à l'Opéra, 1895, an analysis of the Beethoven symphonies (1898), and reports on music in Italy (1907), Germany and Austria (1908) and Scandinavia (1910), besides translations of Weber's Der Freischütz and Schumann's Genoveva. A.

Hardelot, Guy d' [pen-name of Helen Rhodes, née Guy]. Gifted French song-composer, born near Boulogne, pupil of the Paris Conservatory and encouraged by Gounod and Maurel to begin publication. In 1896 she visited America with Calvé and has since lived in London. Besides many and varied songs of much beauty she has written the operetta Elle et Lui.

Harnish, Otto Siegfried (? -1630). 16th C.

Harper, Thomas (Worcester, 1787-1853, London). English trumpeter, pupil of Eley (bandmaster in the East India Brigade) and till 1814 under him as leader. From about 1806 he played in opera- and theater-orchestras, at concerts and at provincial festivals. The eldest of his sons, Thomas John (1816-1898), until 1885 followed in all these posts, and two other sons were well-known hornists. G.

Harraden, Samuel (Cambridge, ?1821-1897, London). English organist, pupil of Walmisley, in 1841-46 playing in Manchester and then for many years at the Old Mission Church in Calcutta, where he also taught in schools, organized a glee-club and made researches in Hindu music. Mus. D. of the Bengal Academy of Music.

Harrer, Gottlob (1703-1755, Leipzig). From 1750 cantor of the Thomasschule, Leipzig, following J. S. Bach. Wrote much ensemble-music, including about 50 sinfonie and partien, oboe-trios, etc., with several oratorios and Passions, Psalms, etc.

Harriers-Wippert, Luise (Hildesheim, 1837-1878, in Silesia). Gifted Hanoverian operatic soprano, in 1857-68 prominent at Berlin and London. G (Wippert).

Harris, Augustus Henry Glossop (Paris, 1852-1896, Folkestone). Famous English-French impresario (originally an actor), from 1879 manager of Drury Lane, London, and from 1887 of various enterprises in Italian opera at Her Majesty's, Covent Garden, the Olympia, etc. From 1883 he was the leading opera-manager in England, introducing a long list of important works and singers. Knighted in 1891. G.

Harris, Clement Hugh Gilbert (Wimbledon, 1871-1897, in the Greek-Turkish war). Gifted English pianist, pupil of Mme. Schumann. Wrote the symphonic poem Paradise Lost, a Festival March for orchestra, romances for violin or clarinet and 'cello with piano, concert-études, etc., for piano, several songs. G.

Harris, Renatus (?1640-1715). 17th C. G.

Harrison, Beatrice (in India, 1892), sister of May below. English 'cellist, pupil of the Royal College, London, and the Berlin Hochschule (Mendelssohn prize), appearing in 1907 at London and in 1910 at Berlin, followed by tours in Europe and America (1913-15), usually with her sister.

Harrison, Julius Allen Greenway (Stourport, 1885). English composer and conductor, pupil of Bantock, often directing for the British National Opera Company and the Scottish Orchestra. Has written the tone-poem Rapunzel, a Worcestershire Suite, orchestral variations, a quintet for harp and strings, a string-quartet, a Requiem of Archangels, the cantata Cleopatra, the choral work Rosalys, many songs, etc.

Harrison, May (in India, 1891), sister of Beatrice above. English violinist, pupil of the Royal College, London, and of Auer, appearing from 1904 in London and throughout Europe and America, usually with her sister. In 1907 she was in Madrid, and in 1909 in Helsingfors (substitute for Kreisler).

Harrison, Samuel (Belper, 1760-1812, London). English concert-tenor, active in 1784-1812, especially at the Antient Concerts and from 1791 at the Vocal Concerts (which he and Knvyett inaugurated). G.

Harrison, William (London, 1813-1868, do.). English operatic tenor, trained at the Royal Academy, London, making his début in concert in 1837 and in opera in 1839. He was much identified with the development of English opera, in 1856 forming a special company with Louisa Pyne and then bringing out many works by Balfe, Wallace, etc. G.

Harriss, Charles Albert Edwin (London, 1862). English organist, pupil of his father (organist at Wrexham) and Ouseley Scholar at Tenbury, in 1880-82 playing in England, in 1882-83 at Ottawa and since 1883 at Montreal, where he has been noted as organist at St. James', founder of a madrigal society, conductor of the Philharmonic Society and in 1905 promoter of a series of choral festivals in Canadian cities. In 1906 and '19 he managed choral concerts in London. Has written the opera Torquil, 1896, the cantata David before the King, 1890, the choral idyl Pan, 1906, anthems, part-songs and songs, with some organ-pieces. A.

Hart, George (London, 1839-1891, Newhaven). Noted English violin-expert, pupil as a player at the Royal Academy, London, from 1874 successor to the violin-making business in London founded in 1825 by his father, John Thomas Hart (1805-1874) and, like him, much employed in gathering and classifying collections of fine instruments. Author of The Violin, 1875, and The Violin and its Music, 1881. His son George (b. 1860) continued the business. G.

Härtel, Gottfried Christoph (Schneeberg, 1763-1827, n. Leipzig). From 1795 the efficient manager of the music-publishing business of Breitkopf & Härtel at Leipzig and ancestor of the line of successors still in control.

Härtel, Gustav Adolf (Leipzig, 1836-1876, Homburg). Saxon violinist, from 1857 director at Bremen, from 1863 at Rostock and from 1873 at Homburg. Wrote the opera Die Carabiniers, 1866, 3 operettas, a Trio Burlesque for 3 violins and piano, violin-variations, etc.

Härtinger, Martin (Ingolstadt, 1815-1896, Munich). Bavarian operatic tenor, pupil of A. Bayer, appearing in 1841 at Mannheim, in 1842-58 engaged at the Munich Opera and in 1867-83 teacher at the Conservatory there.

Hartmann, Arthur Martinus (Maté Szalka, 1881). Eminent Hungarian violinist, brought up in Philadelphia, mostly self-taught, appearing first as a child of six and since 1893 in constant request throughout the United States and in many European countries. Has written the choral work At the Mid-Hour of Night, many transcriptions and pieces for violin, various piano-pieces (including about 50 Hungarian melodies), about 20 songs, 2 melodramas, etc. A.

Hartmann, Karl Robert Eduard von (Berlin, 1842-1906, n. do.). The noted philosophical writer. Among his works are Deutsche Aesthetik seit Kant, 1886, and Philosophie d. Schönen, 1887 (special division on Musikästhetik). Also wrote an opera (1862-63), songs, etc.

Hartmann, Emil (Copenhagen, 1836-1898, do.), son of the following. Able Danish composer, pupil of his father and Gade, in 1861-73 organist at Copenhagen (from 1871 at the court) until laid aside by ill-health. Wrote the operas Elverpigen, 1867, The Corsicans, 1873, Bagahjøl, 1893?, and Runenzauber, 1896, the ballet Fjeldstuen, the choral work Winter and Spring, 3 symphonies (no. 2, Aus der Ritterzeit), the orchestral suites Skandinaviske Volksmusik and Nordische Volkstänze, the overture Eine nordische Heerfahrt, Lieder und Weisen im nordischen Volkston for orchestra, a serenade for small orchestra, concertos for violin and for 'cello, a piano-trio, a serenade for piano, 'cello and clarinet, etc. G.

Hartmann, Johan Peder Emilus (Copenhagen, 1805-1900, do.), son of the organist at the Garrison Church and grandson of the court-director in 1768-93. Eminent Danish organist and composer, pupil of his father and Weyse, but also trained for the civil service (held office in the City Guard in 1827-69). From 1824 he followed his father at the Garrison Church and from 1843 was Weyse's successor at the Frauenkirche. In 1836 he visited various German cities, Vienna and Paris, meeting many leading musicians. From 1839 he followed Siboni as head of the Conservatory and from 1867 was one of the directors of the new Conservatory (with Gade and Paulli). He was active in the Musical Union and similar societies. In 1874 the University made him Ph.D. Gade married his eldest daughter in 1852. His versatility was shown in a variety of works, often of much original power, and his instinctive use in many of them of Danish subjects and forms made him a leader in the growth of the national school. Among his works were the operas Ranen, 1832, Die Corsaren, 1835, and Liden Kirsten, 1846, the concert-drama Die Hochzeit der Dryade, the melodramas Die goldenen Hörner, 1832, Juragebirge, Der Taucher, etc., incidental music for many other plays, the ballets Die Walküre, 1861, Thrymskviden, 1868, and others, many choral works, including Die Weissagung der Wala, Vor der Klosterpforte, etc., symphonies in G min. and E, various overtures, such as Hakon Jarl, 1844, Axel und Valborg and Correggio, a piano-quartet, a violin-suite, 2 violin-sonatas, a flute-sonata, an organ-sonata, several piano-sonatas, many fine piano-pieces, much dignified church-music, several song-cycles, besides many choral works for occasions (especially those connected with the court), etc. Memoirs by Behrend, 1895, and A. Hammerich, 1900 (I. M. G. Sammelbde. ii), and see Thrane's Dänische Komponisten, 1875, and Fra Hofvioloniers Tid, 1908. G.

Hartmann, Ludwig (Neuss, 1836–1910, Dresden). Rhenish critic, pupil of his father, the Leipzig Conservatory and Liszt, author of articles and books in advocacy of Wagner. Wrote an opera, piano-pieces and songs. He lived at Dresden.

Hartmann, Ludwig Lorenz Eduard (Selb, 1860). Bavarian composer, trained at the Munich Conservatory, since 1895 teacher at the Bayreuth Teachers' Seminary and conductor of the Musikverein. Has written an orchestral fantasia, the choral work Der Postillon, men's choruses with orchestra, 2 organ-fantasias, a treatise on the organ and periodical articles.

Hartmann, Pater [Paul von An der Lan-Hochbrunn] (n. Bozen, 1863–1914, Munich). Tyrolese Franciscan and church-musician, pupil of Pembaur, in 1893–95 organist in Jerusalem, in 1895–1906 in Rome as organist at S. Maria in Araceli and head of a music-school, and then at the Anna-Kloster in Munich. In 1906–07 he spent a year in New York, where he produced some of his works. Wrote the oratorios Petrus, 1900, Franziskus, 1902, Das letzte Abendmahl, 1904, and Der Tod des Herrn, 1905, a Seven Words, 1908, a Te Deum, 1913, masses, organ-pieces, etc., besides a life of Peter Singer (1910). In 1905 Würzburg Univ. made him S. T. D.

Hartog, Édouard de (Amsterdam, 1829–1909, The Hague). Dutch composer, pupil chiefly of Bertelmann, Litoff, Heinze and Damecke, from 1852 teaching in Paris and finally at The Hague. In 1878–80 he contributed to Pougins' Supplement to Fétis' Biographie. In Holland he was decorated with two orders and was a member of the Musical Society. Wrote 4 operas, including Le Mariage de Don Lope, (1853) 1865, and L'Amour Mouillé, 1868 (revised 1873), the symphonic preludes Macbeth, Pompée and Die Jungfrau von Orléans, Psalm 43, 2 string-quartets, a quartet-suite, etc.

Hartog, Jacques (Bommel, 1837–1917, Amsterdam). Dutch critic and author, pupil of K. Wilhelm and Ferd. Hiller, in 1881–85 conductor at Bussum, in 1886–1913 teacher of music-history at the Amsterdam Conservatory and from 1903 also lecturer at the University. He was president of the Sweelinck committee of the Dutch Musical Society. Author of lives of Beethoven (1904, 2d ed. 1912), Mozart (1904), Jos. and Mich. Haydn (1905), Mendelssohn (1909), Schumann (1910), Bach (1911) and Wagner (1913), translations of Langhans' Musikgeschichte (4th ed. 1913) and of technical works by Lebert and Stark, Breslaur, Richter, Jadassohn, Plaids and Reinecke, and many articles in periodicals. Wrote an operetta, an overture, a violin-concerto, a mass, etc.

Hartvigson, Albert (Copenhagen, 1851). Danish chemist and musical amateur, pupil of Rybner and Lambcke, writing the opera Bryllup i Klosteret, 1891, the operetta Sylvana, the choral work Erik Emuns Død, 1885, some orchestral pieces and songs.

Hartvigson, Fritz (Grenaa, 1841–1919, Copenhagen). Danish pianist, pupil of Gade, Gebauer, Rée and Von Bülow, in 1864–1911 living in London (except 1873–75 in Petrograd), from 1875 teacher at the Norwood Blind College, from 1878 at the Crystal Palace, from 1888 at the Royal Academy and from 1905 at the Royal College. In 1879–88 he was debarred from concert-work by a nervous affection. In 1911 he retired to Copenhagen.

Harty, Hamilton (Hillsborough, 1879). Irish composer, pupil of his father, from 1891 serving as organist in various churches in Ireland and from 1900 becoming noted in London, especially as a skillful accompanist. In 1914–18 he was lieutenant in the Naval Reserve. He is now conductor of orchestras in London, Manchester and Leeds. Has written an Irish Symphony, a Comedy Overture, the symphonic poems A Tinker's Wedding and With the Wild Geese (1910), a concerto in D min. (1909) and Variations on an Irish Theme, 1913, both for violin and orchestra, a piano-quintet, 'cello-pieces, the cantata The Mystic Trumpeter, 1913, Keats' Ode to the Nightingale, 1907, for soprano and orchestra, and many songs. G. A.

Harwood, Basil (Olveston, 1859). English organist, pupil of Roeckel, Riseley and Corfe, with some study at Leipzig, from 1883 at St. Barnabas (Pimlico) in London, from 1887 at Ely Cathedral and in 1892–1909 at Christ Church Cathedral, Oxford, where in 1892–93 he was precentor at Keble College, in 1892–98 conductor of the Orchestral Association, in 1896–1900 conductor of the new Bach Choir and in 1900–09 choragus of the University. He was made Mus.D. there in 1896. At various times he has served as examiner for degrees. Has written an organ-concerto (1910), 2 organ-sonatas, a Dithyramb, a Pæan, a Capriccio and various organ-preludes, the cantata A Song on May Morning, 1913, Psalms 86 and 137, services in A-flat, D and E min., the motet Jesus, Thy boundless love to me, 1909, several anthems and songs. G. A.

Harzen-Müller, A. Nikolaus (Itzehoe, 1863). Holsteiner vocal teacher in Berlin, specialist in Low-German lieder, publishing a comprehensive Verzeichnis d. plattdeutschen Kunstlieder, 1907.

Hase, Hermann von (Leipzig, 1880), son of the following. A member of the firm of Breitkopf & Härtel since 1904 and making special studies in their records. Author of abstracts from these relating to Haydn (1909) and K. P. E. Bach (1911).

Hase, Oskar von (Jena, 1846-1921, Leipzig), son of the eminent theologian K. A. Hase and grandson of G. A. Härtel. From 1875 a leading partner in the firm of Breitkopf & Härtel at Leipzig. He was prominent in various publishers' associations and in the direction of the Internationale Musik-Gesellschaft. Author of a history of the firm (4th ed. 2 vols. 1917-19) and of various books on book-publishing in general.

Hasel, Johann Emmerich (Pest, 1828-1900, Vienna). Hungarian composer, from 1873 teacher at the Theresianum in Vienna. Wrote various stage-works, orchestral and violin-pieces, etc., and Die Grundsätze d. Harmonie-systems, 1892 (2d ed. 1895).

Häser, August Ferdinand (Leipzig, 1779-1844, Weimar). Saxon composer, trained at the Thomasschule, Leipzig, and at the University (theology), in 1800-06 cantor at Lemgo, then in Italy till 1813 and from 1817 in court-service at Weimar, especially as chorusmaster at the Opera, director at the Hofkirche (from 1829) and finally at the Opera, and also teacher at the Training School. Wrote 3 operas, the oratorio Der Triumph des Glaubens, 1828, overtures and other orchestral pieces, much church-music, etc., with 2 vocal text-books (1820, '31). His sister Charlotte Henriette (1784-1871) was a noted stage-singer at Dresden and Vienna and in Italy. His brother Heinrich (1811-1885), professor of medicine at Jena, Greifswald and Breslau, was author of a treatise on the voice (1839). G.

Hasler [Hassler], Hans Leo von (1564-1612). 16th C. G.

Hasler [Hassler], Jakob (1566-1611?). 16th C. G.

Haslinger. A noted music-publishing firm in Vienna, developed in 1826 out of the previous business of Steiner by Tobias Haslinger (1787-1842), continued by his son Karl (1816-1868) and then merged with Schlesinger (Berlin). Tobias H. was intimate with Beethoven and had prepared a notable draft of the latter's works (now in the Musikfreunde library at Vienna). G.

Hassard, John Rose Green (New York, 1836-1888, do.). American journalist, in 1866-84 music-critic for the New York Tribune and a strong advocate of Wagner's music. A.

Hasse, Faustina, née Bordoni (Venice, 1700-1781, do.), wife of the following. Famous Italian operatic soprano, pupil of Gasparini and Marcello, making her début with great brilliance in 1716 at Venice, followed by triumphs throughout Italy. In 1724-25 she sang at Munich and Vienna, in 1726-28 under Handel at London (where she successfully competed with Cuzzoni) and then again in Italy. In 1730 she married the composer Hasse and from 1731 worked with him at the Dresden Opera or on tour, going with him in 1763 to Vienna and later to Venice. She had marvelous facility, purity and charm of voice, combined with high intelligence as an actress and a singularly gracious personality. Memoirs by Niggli, 1880, and Urbani de Gheltof, 1890, with Polko's romantic novel, 2 vols. 1860 (4th ed. 1895). G.

Hasse, Johann Adolph (n. Hamburg, 1699-1783, Venice). Distinguished North German composer, pupil of his father, Porpora and A. Scarlatti. He was at first a tenor under Keiser at Hamburg (1717-21) and then at Brunswick (1721-22), but, after study at Naples, turned to writing Italian operas (from 1726), speedily becoming a favorite composer. From 1731 he was court-director at Dresden, where with his wife (see above) he ultimately gained a commanding position, though at first in competition with Porpora. There he was often visited by Bach from Leipzig. Besides his regular duties he had leave for many absences, which included trips to London in 1735, to Munich in 1746, to Paris in 1750 and to Berlin in 1753, with more or less constant visits to Italy. In 1760, when Dresden was bombarded by the Prussians, Hasse suffered severe losses, including the complete collection of his works, prepared for publication at the instance of the King of Poland. The Seven Years' War so exhausted the Saxon court that in 1763 Hasse was dismissed without pension and the stipend that his wife had received since her retirement from activity in 1751 came to an end. Early in 1764 they removed to Vienna and in 1773 to Venice. At Vienna Hasse was in competition with Gluck and added several new works to his already long list. His extraordinary popularity continued for a full half-century (from 1726). It was due not so much to force of genius as a happy readiness to adopt the prevailing style of the day and to handle it with fluent and graceful technical skill. Although a German, he was content to express himself wholly in the idiom of the Neapolitan school. His fertility is shown by the fact that his operas number over 80 (perhaps over 100, there being some confusion of titles and references), besides 14 oratorios, 5 Te Deums with orchestra, many masses, a Requiem (for Elector Augustus the Strong, 1733), Psalms, cantatas, a large amount of other sacred music, various trios and other pieces of chamber-music, concert-pieces for flute and for harpsichord, etc. Among his operas may be noted Sesostrate, 1726 (Naples), Artaserse, 1730 (Venice), Alessandro nell'Indie, 1731, Artaserse, 1740 (a second setting), Didone Abbandonata, 1743, Antigono, 1744, Semiramide, 1747, Attilio Regolo, 1750, Il Rè Pastore, 1755, Zenobia, 1763 (Vienna) and Il Ruggiero, 1771 (Milan). He set all of Metastasio's librettos, some of them more than once. Memoirs by Kandler, 1820, Riehl, 1853 (in his Charakterköpfe, vol. i), and Mennicke, 1904 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.), with special studies by Mennicke, 1906 (ensemble-works), W. Müller, 1900 (church-music), Kamienski, 1911 (oratorios), Zeller, 1912 (opera-recitatives), etc. G.

Hasse, Karl (Dohna, 1883). Saxon organist and conductor, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory and University and at Munich, in 1906-08 Wolfrum's assistant at Heidelberg and director of the University singing-society and string-orchestra, then touring as organ-virtuoso and ensemble-player, in 1909-10 organist and director at the Johanniskirche in Chemnitz, from 1910 conductor at Osnabrück and since 1919 director at Tübingen University. Has written the overture Aus Kurland, an orchestral suite, a serenade for strings, a piano-trio, an organ-suite, 3 fantasias and fugues, chorale-preludes and many other organ-pieces, piano-works, a Missa brevis (8-part a cappella), a Hymnus for solo, women's chorus and orchestra, sacred songs for quartet, solo songs, etc. Author of a monograph on Reger (1921).

Hasse, Max (n. Weimar, 1860). Saxon critic, since 1894 writing for the Magdeburg Zeitung. Author of P. Cornelius u. sein Barbier von Bagdad, 1904 (opposing Mottl and Levi's modernized version), and editor of the comprehensive edition of Cornelius' works (5 vols. 1905-06).

Hasse, Nikolaus. 17th C.

Hasselt-Barth, Anna Maria Wilhelmine (Amsterdam, 1813-1881, Mannheim). Dutch operatic soprano, pupil of Jos. Fischer and Romani, first appearing in 1831 at Trieste and elsewhere in Italy, in 1833-38 at Munich and then for many years at the Kärnthnerthor in Vienna.

Hassler, Karl Adolf (n. Leipzig, 1825-1896, Halle). Able Saxon 'cellist and conductor, pupil of Dotzauer and Joh. Schneider, with practice in the Dresden court-band, in 1844-46 musician to Count Hahn at Basedow, then touring as virtuoso and from 1846 settled in Halle as cantor at the Marienkirche, besides for some years directing opera and the concerts of the Orchestral Union (till 1858), from 1855 leading the City Chorus and in 1866-83 the concerts of the new Hassler Chorus, and teaching at two of the high-schools. In 1885 he retired with the title of music-director to the Francke Foundation.

Hässler, Johann Wilhelm (Erfurt, 1747-1822, Moscow). Saxon pianist and composer, pupil of Kittel (his uncle), from 1761 organist at the Barfüsserkirche in Erfurt, besides following the trade of cap-making and touring as concertist. In 1780 he opened a music-shop at Erfurt and started a concert-enterprise, assisted by his wife as singer. In 1790 he visited England and thence went to Petrograd, where in 1792 he became court-director, but in 1794 moved to Moscow as a popular teacher. Wrote piano-sonatas, concertos, fantasias and variations, organ-pieces and songs. He is best known by a remarkable gigue in D min. His style is related to that of the Mannheim circle and many works are full of vigor and humor. G.

Hastings, Thomas (Litchfield, Conn. 1787-1872, New York). American popular singing-teacher from 1816, at first working at Utica, N. Y., but after 1832 in New York. His influence combined with that of Lowell Mason to improve the psalmody of the time. Published many collections of tunes (1816-59) and wrote about 60 hymns. Also author of a Dissertation on Musical Taste, 1822, History of Forty Choirs, 1854, and Sacred Praise, 1856. A.

Hastreiter, Helene (Louisville, Ky. 1858). Fine American operatic contralto, appearing as a child of nine at Milwaukee, at twelve singing in a Chicago choir and at sixteen taking part in opera there. Later she studied with the Lampertis and made her formal début about 1883 at Milan, with further engagements in Italy. After a short sojourn in Chicago, in 1886 she sang in the American Opera Company under Thomas and later in England in Mapleson's troupe. In 1887 she was a leading artist in the National Opera Company in America and then sang almost exclusively in Italy, with some visits to Paris. She married a Dr. Burgunzio and has since lived in Genoa. G, A.

Hatherly, Stephen Georgeson (Bristol, 1827-1905). English organist from 1844, in 1857-63 choirmaster at the Greek Church in Liverpool and then organist at Tettenhall (till 1868). In 1871 he became priest in the Greek Church and archpriest in 1875, and was appointed to work among Greek sailors visiting West England ports. Wrote considerable church-music and A Treatise on Byzantine Music, 1892, besides extensions of Havergal's Old Church Psalmody (1864, '76) and a musical edition of Neale's Hymns of the Eastern Church (1882). His transcriptions of liturgical melodies are based on recent usage rather than the older tradition.

Hatto [Marguerite Jeanne Frère] (Lyons, 1879). French operatic soprano, trained at the Paris Conservatory, first appearing in 1899 and singing at the premières of Leroux' Astarte (1901) and Saint-Saëns' Les Barbares (1901), continuing on the staff of the Opéra.

Hatton, John Liptrot (Liverpool, 1809-1886, Margate). English composer, self-taught, from 1832 variously employed in London, chiefly in connection with Drury Lane and the Princess Theatre (1853-58). In 1844 he visited Vienna and in 1848 America. Wrote the stage-works The Queen of the Thames, 1844, Pascal Bruno, 1844 (Vienna), and Rose, 1864, incidental music for various plays (1853-58), including six of Shakespeare's, the cantata Robin Hood, 1856 (Bradford), the sacred drama Hezekiah, 1877 (Crystal Palace), 2 services, a mass, 8 anthems, many fluent part-songs and about 150 songs that had much popularity. G.

Hattstaedt, John James (Monroe, Mich. 1851). American teacher, from 1870 active in Detroit and St. Louis, from 1875 in the Chicago College of Music and since 1886 founder and head of the American Conservatory there, developing it into great efficiency. Has written a Manual of Musical History. A.

Hatzfeld, J. (Benolpe, 1882). Westphalian priest, since 1909 teaching at the Paderborn Lyceum. Musically highly trained by Sandberger, Kroyer and Krug-Waldsee, he has written much in periodicals on folk-song, church-music and musical æsthetics, besides editing the folk-song collection Tandaradei, 1917, and the church-works of Eberlin for the Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Oesterreich.

Hauer, Karl Heinrich Ernst (Halberstadt, 1828–1892, Berlin). Saxon church-musician, pupil of Marx and the Berlin Akademie, from 1856 teacher at the Andreas Gymnasium there and from 1866 organist at the Marcuskirche. Wrote an Ave Maria (6-part a cappella), a Pater Noster for soli and chorus, a Luther-Hymnus, motets, sacred and secular part-songs and songs.

Hauff, Johann Christian (Frankfort, 1811–1891, do.). In 1860 one of the founders of the Frankfort Music School and author of a Theorie d. Tonsetzkunst, 5 vols. 1863–74.

Haug, Gustav (Strasbourg, 1871). Alsatian organist and conductor, pupil of the Strasbourg Conservatory, from 1895 teaching at Rorschach and Gais (Switzerland) and since 1904 organist at St. Gall (St. Leonhard) and leader of choral and orchestral societies there. Has written fine works for chorus, soloists and orchestra.

Hauk, Minnie (New York, 1852). Famous American operatic soprano, pupil of Errani and Moritz Strakosch, in 1866 appearing in Brooklyn and New York, in 1868 at Covent Garden, London, in 1869–70 at Paris, Moscow, Petrograd, Vienna (1870–73) and Berlin (1874–77), establishing herself as an artist of great charm and ability, especially in works of the opéra comique order. In England and America she sang at the local premières of many famous operas, notably Carmen (1878, London), Manon (1885, New York), etc. Her répertoire included about 100 rôles. In 1882 she married the Austrian traveler Ernst von Hesse-Wartegg and with him made three trips round the world. In 1896 she retired to live at Lucerne. G. A.

Hautin, Pierre (?–1580). 16th C.

Haupt, Karl August (n. Sagan, 1810–1891, Berlin). Eminent Silesian organist, pupil of A. W. Bach, Klein and Dehn, from 1830 engaged at various churches in Berlin (after 1849 at the Parochialkirche, succeeding Thiele), acquiring an international renown as virtuoso and especially as improvisator in the strict style. In 1869 he succeeded Bach as director of the Institut für Kirchenmusik, as well as head of the music-section of the Akademie, with the title of professor. He was a remarkable teacher. Wrote an Orgelschule, a Choralbuch, 1869, and songs.

Memoir by Volbach, 1891 (Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung). G.

Hauptmann, Moritz (Dresden, 1792–1868, Leipzig). Distinguished Saxon theorist, originally trained as violinist by Scholz and Spohr, with other studies under Grosse and Morlacchi, in 1812 playing in the Dresden court-band and from 1813 at the Theater an der Wien in Vienna, in 1815–20 employed by Prince Repnin in Russia, from 1820 again in Dresden, from 1822 under Spohr in the Kassel court-orchestra, also becoming noted as a theory-teacher, and from 1842 cantor at the Thomasschule, Leipzig (succeeding Weinlig) and also from 1843 one of the leading professors at the new Conservatory. His pupils included a long list of eminent artists. His style as composer was singularly finished and noble, especially in choral forms. Wrote the opera Mathilde, 1826, 2 masses, Psalms, many famous motets, choruses, canons, part-songs, songs, string-quartets, violin-duets and sonatas, etc. Author of the noted treatise Die Natur d. Harmonik u. Metrik, 1853 (2d ed. 1873), Erläuterungen zu J. S. Bachs Kunst d. Fuge, 1841 (2d ed. 1861), various essays collected as Opuscula, 1874 (edited by his son), and Die Lehre von d. Harmonik, 1868 (edited by O. Paul). His letters to F. Hauser, to Spohr and others are also published (1871, '76). His system of harmonic dualism lies at the root of many later types of theory, notably those of Von Oettingen and Riemann. Memoirs by Paul, 1862, and Krehl, 1918. G.

Hauptner, Theodor (Berlin, ?1822–1889, do.). Prussian singing-teacher, trained at the Berlin Akademie, from 1850 theater-director there, in 1854–58 studying teaching-methods at the Paris Conservatory, from 1858 again in Berlin, from 1867 at the Basel Conservatory and later head of the Potsdam Singakademie. Wrote a method (1861) and various light stage-works.

Hauschka, Vincenz (Mies, 1766–1840, Vienna). Bohemian 'cellist (and baryton-player), pupil of his father, Zöger and Christ, from 1782 musician to Count von Thun at Prague (with many concert-tours) and after 1812 one of the early conductors of the concerts of the Musikfreunde in Vienna, besides holding a governmental post. Wrote 9 'cello-sonatas, vocal canons, etc.

Hause, Wenzel. Bohemian double-bassist, long professor at the Prague Conservatory. Author of an able method (1828) and many studies.

Hausegger, Friedrich von (St. Andrä, 1837–1899, Gratz). Carinthian lawyer at Gratz and from 1872 lecturer on music-history and theory at the University there. Author of the valuable Musik als Ausdruck, 1885 (2d ed. 1887). Wagner u. Schopenhauer, 1890 (2d ed. 1892), Vom Jenseits d. Künstlers, 1893, Die künstlerischen Persönlichkeit, 1897, Die Anfänge d. Harmonie, Unsere deutschen Meister [Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, Wagner], 1901 (edited by R. Louis) and Gedanken eines Schauenden, 1903 (edited by his son).

Hausegger, Sigmund von (Graz, 1872), son of the above. Eminent Styrian conductor and composer, pupil of his father, Degner and Pohligh, in 1895-96 director at the Graz Opera, in 1897 conductor of summer-concerts at Bayreuth, in 1899-1902 conductor of the Kaim Orchestra at Munich, in 1903-06 of the Museum Concerts at Frankfurt, from 1910 of both the Philharmonic at Hamburg and the Blüthner Orchestra at Berlin, and since 1920 head of the Munich Conservatory and of the Konzertverein. Has written the operas Helrid, 1890, and Zinnober, 1898, a Dionysische Phantasie for orchestra, 1899, the symphonic poems Barbarossa, 1900, and Wieland der Schmied, 1904, a Natursymphonie, 1911 (with chorus), the symphonic variations Aufklänge, 1919, many notable men's choruses and songs with orchestra, a revised version of Schubert's Gesang der Geister über den Wassern, etc. His first wife was Hertha Ritter (d. 1913), daughter of Alexander Ritter, of whom he published a memoir in 1907.

Hauser, Franz (n. Prague, 1794-1870, Freiburg, Baden). Bohemian operatic bass-baritone, pupil of Tomaschek, in 1817-37 well known at Prague, Vienna (1828) and London (1832), as well as in Germany, then, after travel in Italy, teacher at Vienna and in 1846-64 at the Munich Conservatory. He was an enthusiastic Bach-student and made a noted collection of his works. He also corresponded with Hauptmann (see above) and Mendelssohn. His Gesanglehre, 1866, contains much about his experiences as teacher. G.

Hauser, Miska [Michael] (Presburg, 1822-1887, Vienna). Able Hungarian violinist, pupil of Matalay, Kreutzer and the Vienna Conservatory, in 1840-61 constantly on tour with conspicuous success throughout Europe, in the Americas and in Turkey, Egypt, India and Australia. He retired in 1874. Wrote an operetta and various violin-pieces, besides Aus d. Wanderbuch eines österreich. Virtuosen, 2 vols. 1858-59 (reprint of letters to the Ostdeutsche Post concerning his American tour). G.

Häuser, Johann Ernst (n. Quedlinburg, 1803-?). Teacher at the Quendlinburg Gymnasium and author of several elementary textbooks and manuals, including a dictionary of terms (1828) and a history of church-music (1834). G.

Hausmann, Robert (in the Hartz, 1852-1909, Vienna). Eminent Saxon 'cellist, pupil of Th. Müller, Piatti and the Berlin Hochschule, in 1872-76 in the Hochberg Quartet at Dresden and then teacher at the Berlin Hochschule, in 1879-1907 also playing in the Joachim Quartet.

Hausmann, Valentin (five names). 16th and 17th Cs. G.

Havemann, Gustav (Güstrow, 1882). Able Mecklenburger violinist, pupil of his father, Ahner and the Berlin Hochschule, from 1905 concertmaster of the Darmstadt court-orchestra, from 1911 teacher in the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1915 concertmaster for the Dresden orchestra, from 1911 teacher in the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1915 concertmaster for the Dresden orchestra and now in Berlin as leader of a Quartet (with Kniestädt, Mahlke and Steiner) and teacher at the Hochschule.

Havergal, William Henry (High Wycombe, 1793-1870, Leamington). English clergyman, from 1845 at Worcester and from 1860 near Wolverhampton. From about 1835 he gave much attention to music, especially to the improvement of psalmody and church-music generally, publishing services, anthems, tunes and the notable treatises The Old Church Psalmody, 1849, and History of the Old Hundredth Tune, 1854, besides a collection of 100 original tunes (1859). His daughter Frances Ridley (1836-1879) was a popular poet and hymnist. G.

Hawes, William (London, 1785-1846, do.). English singer and concert-manager, in boyhood in the Chapel Royal and again from 1805, becoming choirmaster in 1817. In 1814-17 he was also a singer at St. Paul's and in 1817-20 at Westminster Abbey. In 1824-36 he was director of concerts and English opera at the Lyceum, where he produced versions of Weber's Freischütz (1824), Salieri's Tarare (1825), Winter's Unterbrochene Opferfest (1826), Paër's Fuorusciti (1827), Mozart's Così fan tutte (1828), Ries' Räuberbraut (1829) and Marschner's Vampyr (1829), besides compiling many slighter works. From 1809 he was conductor of the Madrigal Society, and for many years organist of the Lutheran Church in the Savoy. He edited several collections of madrigals, glees, chants, etc., and wrote a few glees (prize from Glee Club in 1836). G.

Hawkins, James (Cambridge, ?1660-1729, Ely). Organist of Ely Cathedral from 1682, composing 17 services and about 75 anthems. His son James (d. 1759) was organist at Peterborough Cathedral from 1714. G.

Hawkins, John (London, 1719-1789, do.). Eminent English lawyer and littérateur, from about 1740 interested in practical music and later in its history. Besides some early cantata-texts, he wrote (anonymously) a history of the Academy of Ancient Music (1770), of which he had been a member since 1740, and an important General History of the Science and Practice of Music, 5 vols. 1776, which came at once into competition with the first volume of Burney's History and was for a time overshadowed by the latter. It has been reprinted in 2 vols. (1853) and is now esteemed for its painstaking research. The two works together made an epoch as pioneer efforts in the field of music-history in English. Hawkins also published an edition of Walton's Compleat Angler (1760), an edition of Johnson's works (1787) and a life of Johnson, who designated him as his literary executor. Most of his musical library was given to the British Museum. He was knighted in 1772. G.

Haydn, Franz Joseph (Rohrau, [Apr. 1] 1732-1809 [May 31], Vienna). Distinguished Austrian composer, born in a village close to the Hungarian border of a humble, artisan family that was apparently of Croatian derivation, so that racially he was probably more Slavic than Teutonic. His musical aptitude was evident from early childhood and at five he was placed with a relative at Hainburg named Frankh for elementary education and training on the violin and in singing. His voice there attracted the notice of Reutter, the choirmaster of St. Stephen's in Vienna, leading to his being a chorister there from his eighth year, with further instruction and experience. During these youthful years he made diligent attempts to gain command of composition, though almost without technical guidance.

Late in 1749, his boy-voice having failed, he was abruptly turned adrift in Vienna. With the aid of one or two humble friends he managed to rent a harpsichord, buy some of K. P. E. Bach's sonatas and gradually to maintain himself by casual engagements as player and teacher. The poet Metastasio, who boarded near him, helped him somewhat and in 1752 he wrote a comic opera. Soon after he attached himself to Porpora, the composer and singing-teacher, gaining from him some instruction and also a small stipend from the Venetian ambassador. Through him he met musicians like Wagenseil, Dittersdorf and Gluck. In 1755 he was for a time in the service of Baron von Fürnberg and in 1756 had Countess Thun for a pupil. In 1759-60 he was in charge of the band of Count Morzin near Pilsen in Bohemia. In 1760 he married a wig-maker's daughter in Vienna, whose ill-temper, selfishness and lack of sympathy were sources of much later unhappiness.

From 1761 for nearly thirty years he was employed by the famous Esterházy family at Eisenstadt in Hungary. Prince Nicholas (commonly called 'the Magnificent') succeeded in 1762. He was an ardent lover of music, maintained an establishment of perhaps fifty players and singers for daily entertainments and services, himself played the baryton and demanded the preparation of much fresh music constantly. At first Haydn was assistant-conductor under Werner, but in 1766 became his successor. Soon after this the Prince built a new palace at Esterház (near the Neusiedlersee) which became famous as 'a second Versailles', attracting a stream of important visitors. In 1769 and 1777 the orchestra visited Vienna and was often taken to Presburg. After 1780 Haydn's contacts with the outside world gradually increased, leading to some connections with the young Mozart and other musicians in Vienna, to business relations with publishers there and in London, and to commissions from a distance (notably that from Cadiz Cathedral in 1785). His fame as composer had become international long before he himself began to travel. In 1790 the Prince died, leaving Haydn a stipend if he continued as director, but the musical establishment was presently broken up. Haydn then accepted a liberal offer from the violinist Salomon to visit England, where he arrived early in 1791 and stayed till the summer of 1792. In 1794-95 he made a second visit, again of about eighteen months. Both trips were of extreme importance artistically, since they demanded the production of series of fresh symphonies with the Philharmonic Orchestra. Besides meeting many musicians and hearing some new forms of music (like Handel's oratorios), he was elaborately fêted and otherwise honored (Mus.D. from Oxford in 1791).

From 1790 he made his home in Vienna. There from 1792 he gave lessons to the young Beethoven (whom he had seen at Bonn on his first English trip). After 1795 he wrote comparatively little except the 'Emperor's Hymn' (1797) and the oratorios The Creation (1798) and The Seasons (1801), remarkable for their freshness in spite of his almost seventy years. His last appearance as conductor was at the end of 1803. With increasing infirmity he was much distressed by the occupation of the city by the French in 1805 and '09. His death was followed by memorial services and similar tributes throughout Europe. In 1820 his remains were transferred to the parish church at Eisenstadt.

Personally, he was simple-hearted, genial and full of humor, industrious, painstaking and precise, a devout Catholic and holding his musical powers as a direct gift from God. He won universal admiration and esteem by his unaffected transparency and kindness.

In music-history he is usually counted as the founder, or at least the establisher, of the objective, monophonic style that is often called 'classical' (as contrasted with the later 'romantic'). The reaction toward this style had begun before his advent and he based his practice directly upon types set up by K. P. E. Bach. Furthermore, the emphasis upon perfection of ensemble exposition, to which he early devoted himself with great success, was already being laid with power by the Mannheim circle. Of this latter he could hardly have been aware till his own style was formed. But, as till he was almost sixty he never but once (1759-60) stepped outside of a small triangle to the east and south east of Vienna, where Austrian, Hungarian and Croatian influences were intermingled, he brought an impulse from the domain of folk-music quite distinct from anything in the north and west. This impulse to naive, sturdy and jocund expression, when passed through the medium of his own artistic nature, with its love of clarity, symmetry and social appeal, gave rise to an idiom of construction and form that became a model for a long period. Upon his definition of the sonata and symphony, with his practice in handling instruments in ensemble, were based the more brilliant or profound achievements of Mozart and Beethoven. Thus with his older contemporary Gluck in the field of opera, he opened the way for the remarkable Viennese school of composition.

He wrote in all about 1000 works, which may be briefly classified as follows:

Orchestral Works

Symphonies—about 125 (or, by another enumeration, over 150), including 16 overtures for stage-works. The earliest, in B-flat and D, were written respectively for Fürnberg at Weinzierl (1755) and Morzin at Lukavec (1759). The latest and ablest are the two sets of 12 each written respectively for the Concerts Spirituels in Paris (1784–90) and the Philharmonic in London (1791–95). Many are known by special names, as Le Midi, in C (1761), Le Soir, in G (1761?), The Philosopher, in E-flat (1764), Le Matin, in D (1767), The Farewell, in F-sharp min. (1772), Mercury, in E-flat (1772), Lamentations, in D min. (1772), Maria Theresa, in C (1773), La Passione, in F min. (1773), The Schoolmaster, in E-flat (1774), La Chasse, in D (1781), L'Ours, in C, La Poule, in G min., La Reine de France, in B-flat, and Oxford, in G (all from the Paris series), the Kindersymphonie, in C (1788), The Surprise, in G, With the Drum-Roll, in E-flat, The Clock, in D min. and The Military, in G (all from the London series). The earlier examples are set for strings with oboes and horns (or little more), whereas the London series are set for flutes, oboes, clarinets, bassoons, horns, trumpets and drums—the full 'classical' equipment. The Kindersymphonie is set for 2 violins, bass and 7 toy-instruments. There are usually four movements, the third being a minuet.

Concertos—9 for violin; 6 for 'cello; 16 for other solo-instruments (lira da braccio, baryton, double-bass, flute or horn); 20 for clavier (including divertimenti).

About 65 cassations, divertimenti, sextets, etc.
Die Sieben Worte am Kreuze (1785), written for a Good Friday service at Cadiz Cathedral, originally for orchestra alone, but soon arranged also for quartet and for clavier, and later fitted with words as a cantata (first sung in 1797).

Chamber-Works

Quartets—77 for strings (the first 18 dating from 1755). It was in this form that he early found freedom of expression.

Trios—20 for violins and bass; 10 for other combinations (3 are for 3 flutes); 35 for clavier, violin and 'cello; 3 for clavier, flute and 'cello.

12 violin-sonatas; 175 pieces for baryton; 6 duets for violin and viola; 7 nocturnes for lira da braccio.

Keyboard-Works

53 sonatas, divertimenti, etc.; several marches, dances, etc.

Vocal Works

Oratorios—Il Ritorno di Tobia, 1775, Die Schöpfung, 1798, Die Jahreszeiten, 1801 (text from Thomson's Seasons).

Masses—1, in F (1751?), 2, in D min., and 3, in G (both lost), 4, in E-flat, B. V. Maria or Grosse Orgelmesse (1766), 5, in G, St. Nicholas (1772), 6, in B-flat, St. John, with organ obbligato (1778), 7, in C, St. Cecilia (1781), 8, in C, Cellensis or Mariaszeller (1782), 9, in C, In Tempore belli (1790), 10, in B-flat, Heiligmesse (1796), 11, in D, Nelson or Imperial (1793), 12, in B-flat, Theresa (1799), 13, in B-flat, Schöpfungsmesse (1801), 14, Harmoniemesse (1801).

2 Te Deums; 13 Offertoriums; Stabat Mater (1777); several Salve Reginas, Ave Marias, etc.; about 35 motets; several sacred solos or cantatas.

Die Sieben Worte am Kreuze (see above).

Operas and operettas—Der neue Krumme Teufel, 1752, Acide, 1762, La Canterina, 1767, Lo Speciale, 1768 (revived in 1895 as Der Apotheker), Le Pescatrici, 1770, L'Infedeltà Delusa, 1773, L'Incontro Improvviso, 1775, Il Mondo della Luna, 1777, La Vera Costanza, 1779 (as Laurette, Paris, 1791), L'Isola Disabitata, 1779, La Fedeltà Premiata (Die belohnte Treue), 1780, Oriando Paladino, 1782, Armida, 1784. Orfeo, written in London, was left incomplete. 5 marionette-plays. Many detached arias.

Several solo-cantatas, including Ah, come il core, 1782, Deutschlands Klage auf den Tod Friedrichs des Grossen, 1786, and Arianna a Naxos, 1789.

Choruses—Die Zehn Gebote der Kunst (originally Die heiligen Zehn Gebote in canon-form); Gott erhalte Franz den Kaiser (1797), originally a solo-song and later incorporated into his last quartet. Various trios, duets, etc.

About 50 solo-songs, mostly to German words.

A standard edition was begun in 1908 by Breitkopf & Härtel, with Mandyczewski as editor-in-chief, but only 6 vols. (symphonies and sonatas) have appeared. The fullest list of the works is in Wotquenne's catalogue of the Brussels Library (1902), but ample data are also in Pohl's biography (1875–82), though only down to 1790. Memoirs by Mayr, 1809, Dies, 1810, Griesinger, 1810, Carpani, 1812 (2d ed. 1823), Bürkli, 1830–31, Karajan, 1861, Wurzbach, 1862, Pohl, 1867, Kuhač, 1880, Seeburg, 1882 (4th ed. 1911), Hadow, 1897, Schmidt, 1898 (2d ed. 1907), La Mara, 1900, Hadden, 1902, Harrach, 1906, Runciman, 1908, Brenet, 1909. The most comprehensive work is by Pohl, 2 vols. 1875–82, but this extends only to the year 1790; a continuation, projected by Mandyczewski, is now promised by Botstiber. G.

Haydn, Johann Michael (Rohrau, 1737–1806, Salzburg), brother of the above. Eminent Austrian organist and composer, trained as a choirboy at St. Stephen's, Vienna (where he followed his brother, outstripping him as a singer). From 1755 he continued study under Reutter and was his assistant-organist, from 1757 director at Grosswardein (Hungary), from 1762 director for the Archbishop of Salzburg and from 1777 also organist there at Trinity and St. Peter's. In 1768 he married Maria Lipp (daughter of the court-organist), a superior soprano. He was highly valued in Salzburg and was somewhat intimate with the Mozarts. When the French occupied the city in 1800 he suffered great losses, which, however, were made up by his brother and other friends and through the favor of the Empress Maria Theresa. He was an able teacher, among his pupils being Weber, Neukomm, Woelfl and Reicha. As a composer he was strongest in church-music, but comparatively few of his works were published. Wrote over 350 church-works, including 28 masses (4 in German), 2 Requiems, 114 graduals, 67 offertories, 8 litanies, 11 vespers, etc., a large number of oratorios and cantatas, several operas and operettas, including Andromeda e Perseo, 1776, some part-songs and songs, besides 30 symphonies, a sextet, 3 quintets, a violin-concerto, and some other concerted pieces. He also prepared exercises in scoring. Memoirs by Schinn and Otter, 1808, Engl, 1906, Schmid, 1906, Klob, 1911, and Klafsky, 1915 (in Adler's Studien). G.

Hayes, Philip (Oxford, 1738–1797, London), son of the following. English organist, pupil of his father, from 1767 a singer in the Chapel Royal, from 1776 organist at New College, Oxford, from 1777 at Magdalen College and from 1790 at St. John's College, besides succeeding his father in 1777 as professor in the University (also then made Mus.D.). Wrote the oratorio

Prophecy, 1781, the masque Telemachus, some music for plays, several odes, about 70 anthems, some glees, 6 concertos for organ or harpsichord (1769), etc., and edited Harmonia Wiccamica, 1780, (music sung at Wykehamist meetings in London), besides anthems by Boyce (1790) and by his father (1795). G.

Hayes, William (Hanbury, 1706–1777, Oxford). English organist, pupil of Hine, from 1729 organist at Shrewsbury, from 1731 at Worcester Cathedral, and from 1734 at Magdalen College, Oxford, where from 1741 he succeeded Goodson as professor in the University (Mus.D. in 1749). He conducted the Worcester festival in 1734 and that at Gloucester in 1757, '60 and '63. Wrote services and 45 anthems (edited by his son, 1795), odes, glees (prizes from Catch Club, 1763), music for the masque Circe, etc. Author of Remarks on Avison's Essay on Musical Expression, 1753, and Anecdotes of the Five Music Meetings, 1768. G.

Haym, Gilles (?–1650). 17th C.

Haym [Aimo], Niccolò Francesco (Rome, ?1679–1729, London). German-Italian dilettante, in London from 1704. For some years he was active in the project of introducing Italian opera (with Clayton and Dieupart), playing the 'cello in the orchestra, adapting several works, supplying libretti and himself writing Camilla, 1706, and Etearco, 1711. Later he wrote librettos for Ariosti, Bononcini and Handel (8 works, 1713–28). Published 2 books of trio-sonatas. He was also an expert on medals, wrote two tragedies, issued an edition of Tasso, etc. G.

Haynes, Walter Battison (n. Worcester, 1859–1900, London). English organist, pupil of F. Taylor, Prout and the Leipzig Conservatory (Mozart scholarship), from 1884 at St. Philip's (Sydenham) and from 1891 at the Chapel Royal (Savoy), besides from 1890 teaching at the Royal Academy. Wrote a symphony, an overture, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, an organ-sonata, an Idyll for violin and orchestra, a Prelude and Fugue for two pianos, 12 Sketches for violin, 2 cantatas for women's voices, church-music, songs, etc. G.

Hays, William Shakespeare (Louisville, Ky. 1837–1907, do.). American writer of sentimental songs from 1853, many attaining enormous popularity. A.

Hayter, Aaron Upjohn (n. Salisbury, 1799–1873, Boston). English organist, pupil of A. T. Corfe, from 1818 at Hereford Cathedral, from 1820 at Brecon, from 1835 in New York and from 1838 at Trinity Church, Boston, where he also played for the Handel and Haydn Society in 1838–49. A.

Heap, Charles Swinnerton (Birmingham, 1847–1900, do.). English pianist and conductor, pupil of E. G. Monk, the Leipzig Conservatory (Mendelssohn scholar) and Best, from 1868 active at Birmingham, becoming conductor of the Philharmonic Union in 1870–86, of the festival-choruses at Wolverhampton in 1883 and '86, at Hanley (North Stafford) in 1888–99 and at Birmingham from 1895. Mus.D. of Cambridge Univ. in 1872 and examiner there from 1884. Wrote the oratorio The Captivity, 3 cantatas (1882–90), 2 overtures, a quintet for piano and wind (1882), a piano-trio, sonatas for violin, for clarinet, for piano and for organ, church-music, part-songs and songs. G.

Hebenstreit, Pantaleon (Eisleben, 1669–1750, Dresden). Saxon violinist and dancing-master, about 1697 the inventor of an improved form of dulcimer and soon famous for performances upon it (Louis XIV in 1705 suggested calling it 'pantaleon' after his name). From 1706 he was in court-service at Eisenach and from 1714 at Dresden, where from 1734 he became one of the choirmasters, his successor as pantaleonist being the court-organist Richter. His instrument, which had 185 strings, was said by C. G. Schröter to have led to the invention of the piano by the latter about 1717 (a claim not well supported). G.

Hecht, Eduard (Dürkheim, 1832–1887, n. Manchester). Rhenish pianist and choral conductor, pupil of his father and Rosenhain, from 1851 in Paris and from 1854 in Manchester, England, where soon after 1857 he became sub-conductor of the Hallé concerts, besides directing several choral societies. From 1875 he lectured at Owens College. Wrote a symphony (1877), a piano-concerto, 2 string-quartets, the cantata Eric the Dane, 1882, notable choral settings of The Charge of the Light Brigade (1879) and 'O may I join the choir invisible,' many part-songs, trios for women's voices and various piano-pieces. G.

Hecht, Gustav (Quedlinburg, 1851). Saxon teacher, trained at the Berlin Institut für Kirchenmusik and by Kiel and Siebers, from 1874 teaching at Cammin (Rügen) and since 1902 at Köslin. Has written the choral works Schön Elisabeth, Tidian and Dithyrambus der Kybele-Priesterin, choruses, songs, violin-pieces and text-books in harmony, besides editing the Pomeranian Choralbuch (5th ed. 1913).

Heckel, Emil (Mannheim, 1831–1908, do.). A prominent Badenese music-dealer who was one of the earliest supporters of Wagner's Bayreuth projects, founder in 1871 of the first Wagner Society and later head of the Wagner-Verein. About 1900 he was also a champion of Hugo Wolf. Letters to him from Wagner were edited in 1899 by his son Karl, who also published several Wagner studies (1883–1905).

Heckel, Johann Adam (?–1877, Biebrich). In 1824–35 he joined Almenröder in making improvements in clarinets and bassoons which his son Wilhelm perfected, leading to the production of the baritone-oboe (heckelphon) in 1905, the heckelphon-clarinet, a new contra-bassoon and a contrabass-clarinet in 1909.

Heckel, Wolf. 16th C.

Heckmann, Georg Julius Robert (Mannheim, 1848–1891, Glasgow). Able Badenese violinist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1867-70 concertmaster for the Leipzig Euterpe and in 1872-75 and in '81 for the Gürzenich Orchestra in Cologne. In 1881 he formed a Quartet (with Forberg, Allekotte and Bellmann) which continued in high repute (in England from 1885) till his death. He was also noted as soloist. G.

Heckscher, Céleste de Longpré, née Massey (Philadelphia, 1860). American composer of the orchestral pantomime Dances of the Pyrenees, 1911, the violin-suite To the Forest, a 'cello-pastorale and romance, piano-pieces and effective songs, besides an opera, The Rose of Destiny, in manuscript. A.

Hedden, Warren Rosetrans (New York, 1861). American organist, pupil of Messiter, Archer, Buck, Rich, Hoffman and C. C. Müller. In 1908-09 he was warden of the Guild of Organists and has been active in extending its influence. Has written church-music. A.

Hedenblad, Ivar (in Dalarne, 1851-1909, Ronneby). Swedish organist and choral director, highly educated at Upsala University and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1875 leading a noted student-chorus and from 1881 following Josephson as University director and directing the Philharmonic Society, besides from 1904 being cathedral-organist. Wrote an overture, a string-quartet, a festival cantata, the choral works Nökken and På Knä, many striking quartets for men's voices, etc., besides editing a collection of student-songs (4 vols.).

Hédouin, Pierre (Boulogne, 1789-1868, Paris). French lawyer and littérateur, until 1842 practicing law in Boulogne and then in the Ministry of Public Works at Paris. He was a friend of Monsigny, contributed to periodicals, prepared opera-libretti and wrote an elogy for Monsigny (1821), a life of Gossec (1852) and various anecdotal collections of relations with Grétry, Lesueur, Meyerbeer, Paganini, Dessauer, etc.

Heermann, Hugo (Heilbronn, 1844). Eminent Württemberger violinist, pupil of the Brussels Conservatory and Joachim, making his début at Brussels in 1860. After successful tours, from 1865 he was concertmaster of the Museum Concerts at Frankfurt, where from 1878 he taught in the new Hoch Conservatory and organized a famous Quartet (with Bassermann, Naret-Koning and Hugo Becker). In 1906-09 he taught at the Chicago Musical College, but in 1910 was at the Stern Conservatory in Berlin, going in 1911 to the Geneva Conservatory. His many tours as virtuoso have extended throughout Europe, the United States and Australia. Has edited an edition of De Bériot's École Transcendentale (1896). His son Emil is also a gifted violinist. G.

Hegar, Friedrich (Basel, 1841). Eminent Swiss conductor and composer, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, after short experiences at Warsaw, Baden-Baden, Paris and Gebweiler (Alsace), since 1863 working at Zurich, where from 1865 he conducted the Subscription Concerts and the Choral Society (till 1901), in 1868-1906 also the Tonhalle Orchestra, and in 1876 opened a music-school, continuing as its director till 1914. In 1889 Zurich Univ. made him Ph.D. and in 1917 he became a member of the Berlin Academy. Has written the oratorio Manasse, the choral works Hymne an die Musik and Ahasvers Erwachen, 1904, the remarkable men's choruses Morgen im Walde, Das Abendmahl, Die beiden Söhne, In den Alpen, Waldlied, Rudolph von Werdenberg, Todtenvolk, Hymne an den Gesang, Weihe des Liedes, Die Trompete von Gravelotte, Die Blütenfee, Kaiser Karl, Walpurga, Schlafwandel, Königin Bertha, Das Märchen vom Mummelsee, Das Herz von Douglas, Frühlingslied, Des Geigers Heimkehr, Heldenzeit, 1813 (prize-work), etc., an overture, a violin-concerto, a 'cello-concerto, etc. Sketches by Glück, 1888, Steiner, 1905, and Trapp, 1907. His brother Emil (1843-1921) from 1866 was 'cellist in the Gewandhaus Orchestra at Leipzig and teacher in the Conservatory till forced by nervous troubles to turn to vocal teaching, going at length to the Basel Music School. Another brother, Julius (1848-1917), was long chief 'cellist in the Zurich Tonhalle Orchestra.

Hegedüs, Ferencz (Fünfkirchen, 1881). Gifted Hungarian violinist, pupil of his father and the Fünfkirchen and Pest Conservatories, since 1901 appearing in England, France, Germany, the Low Countries and America (1906-07) with great success. His fiery temperament is combined with extreme artistic finish. In 1909-11 he gave up public work to recover from overstrain. His instrument is the Gillott Guarnerius.

Heger, Robert (Strasburg, 1886). Alsatian conductor and composer, trained at the Strasburg, Zurich and Munich Conservatories, from 1907 directing opera successively at Strasburg, Ulm, Barmen, the Vienna Volksoper (1911-13), Nuremberg (1913-21), where he also led the Philharmonic, and Munich (since 1921). Has written the opera Ein Fest zu Haderslev, 1919, the melodrama Die Jüdin von Worms, the choral work Ein Friedenslied, the symphonic poem or 'drama' Hero und Leander, a symphony and a violin-concerto.

Héglon, Meyriane (Brussels, 1867). Danish-Belgian operatic contralto, pupil of d'Obin, Barbov and Rosina Laborde, making her début at the Paris Opéra in 1890 and remaining there till 1905, then going to the Opéra-Comique. She has also sung repeatedly in London. She sang in the premières of Massenet's Thaïs (1894), Lefebvre's Djelma (1894), Guiraud's Frédégonde (1895), Vidal's La Burgonde (1898), Leroux' Astorté (1900), Saint-Saëns' Les Barbares (1901), Hillemacher's Orsola (1903), Georges' Miarka (1905), etc.

Hegner, Anton (Copenhagen, 1861-1915, New York), brother of the following. Able Danish 'cellist, trained at the Copenhagen Conservatory, appearing there in 1875 and after 1890 in Germany and America (1894). From 1899 he taught in New York. Wrote an Ameri- can Festival Overture, 2 'cello-concertos, 4 string-quartets, a piano-trio, pieces for 'cello and for violin, and about 60 songs.

Hegner, Ludwig (Copenhagen, 1851). Danish double-bassist, pupil of the Copenhagen Conservatory, becoming a leading player in the court-orchestra and teacher at the Conservatory, as well as organist. Has written a large method, many solos and transcriptions for his instrument, besides Psalms and songs.

Hegner, Otto (Basel, 1876-1907, Hamburg). Swiss pianist, precociously developed, pupil of Fricker, Huber, Glaus and d'Albert, appearing from 1888 in England and America and from 1890 at Leipzig. In 1898-1904 he taught at the Stern Conservatory, Berlin, and from 1905 at the Hamburg Conservatory. Wrote a suite, a toccata and other piano-pieces. His sister Anna (b. 1881) is a good violinist, since 1905 head of a Quartet at Basel.

Hegyesi [Spitzer], Louis (Arpad, 1853-1894, Cologne). German-Hungarian 'cellist, pupil of Denis, Schlesinger and Franchomme, from 1870 playing in the opera-orchestra at Vienna, in 1875-80 replacing Hilpert in the Florentine Quartet, then on tour in Germany and Austria and from 1887 professor at the Cologne Conservatory. Wrote 'cello-pieces and useful études.

Heidingsfeld, Ludwig (Jauer, 1854). Prussian conductor and teacher, trained at the Stern Conservatory, Berlin, from 1878 director at Glogau, from 1884 at Liegnitz, then teacher at the Stern Conservatory and since 1896 in Danzig as conductor of orchestral and choral societies (including the Singakademie from 1899), and founder and director of a music-school. Has written the symphony König Lear, 1887, the symphonic poem Der Totentanz, 4 Zigeunertänze for large or small orchestra, the operettas Der neue Dirigent, 1907, and Alte Burschenherrlichkeit, 1911, attractive songs and piano-pieces. He gained the title of professor in 1914.

Heidrich, Maximilian (Deutsch-Paulsdorf, 1864-1909, Dresden). Saxon composer, originally an organ-pupil of Merkel, but from 1885, after a sojourn with Liszt and much study of Brahms' works, wholly absorbed in composition until cut off by malignant disease. He left a large number of works of all sorts, operas, various choral works, chamber-music, organ- and piano-pieces, including a trio for clarinet, viola and 'cello, a suite for two pianos, a Phantasiesonate for piano, several sets of songs, etc.

Heifetz, Jascha (Vilna, 1901). Gifted Lithuanian violinist, playing in public while a little child and appearing at Petrograd when but nine, meanwhile studying with Auer. At eleven he was heard in Berlin and the next year played with the leading orchestras in Berlin, Leipzig and Vienna, soon after touring in Scandinavia. In 1917 the Heifetz family emigrated to the United States, where his success has been phenomenal. He already ranks with the greatest masters of his instrument. A.

Hein, Karl (Rendsburg, 1864). North German 'cellist and conductor, trained at the Hamburg Conservatory, from 1885 playing in the Philharmonic Orchestra there, but in 1890 moving to New York as director of various German singing-societies and teacher at the German Conservatory, of which since 1900 he has been director (with Fraemcke). A.

Heinemann, Adolf Karl Wilhelm (Hagen, 1882). Westphalian organist, trained at the Coblenz and Leipzig Conservatories, from 1905 teacher and concert-player at Coblenz, from 1907 at the Essen Conservatory, from 1912 at that at Mülheim (on the Ruhr) and since 1914 at the Christuskirche in Coblenz, succeeding J. F. Richter.

Heinemeyer, Christian (Celle, 1796-1872, Hanover). Famous Hanoverian flutist, widely known through many tours and in 1820-59 a member of the Hanoverian court-band. His son Ernst Wilhelm (1827-1869) was also a fine flutist, from 1845 with his father at Hanover, but in 1847-59 in the court-band at Petrograd. From 1866 he lived in Vienna. Wrote flute-concertos and pieces of some importance.

Heinichen, Johann David (n. Weissenfels, 1683-1729, Dresden). Saxon lawyer and composer, educated at the Thomasschule and Leipzig University, beginning law-practice at Weissenfels, but soon returning to Leipzig to write operas and lead the Collegium Musicum. In 1710 he had a court-position at Zeitz, but in 1711-16 was absent on leave to visit Italy with Councillor Buchta and later with Prince Leopold of Köthen, producing two operas at Venice. From 1717 he was court-director at Dresden, at first including charge of the opera, but later of only the chamber- and church-music, his chief associates being Lotti, J. C. Schmidt and Zelenka. Wrote a well-known text-book on harmony (1711, 2d ed. 1728), several operas, including Calpurnia, 1713, nearly 60 Italian solo-cantatas, several serenatas, 2 oratorios, masses and other church-music, many instrumental pieces, including concertos, overtures (suites), trios, etc. Memoirs by Geibel, 1913, and Tanner, 1916. G.

Heinrich von Meissen [Frauenlob] (?-1318). 13th C.

Heinrich XXIV, Prince of Reuss-Köstritz (Trebschen, 1855-1910, n. Vienna). Gifted Prussian composer, pupil of his father [Heinrich IV, 1821-1893], Witting, Herzogenberg and Rust. Wrote 6 symphonies, an octet (with wood-wind), a string-sextet, 2 string-quintets, 2 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, a string-trio, a violin-sonata, a mass (1892), etc. Sketch by Keller, 1907 (in Monographien moderner Musiker).

Heinrich, Anton Philipp (Schönbüchel, 1781-1861, New York). A Bohemian emigrant to America, at first engaged in business, but from 1818 essaying composition (at Bardstown, Ky.) and soon after coming to Philadelphia and New York. In 1827-34 he was in London, playing violin in an orchestra and gaining some further training. In 1834 he made a trip to Germany and Austria, producing some works and competing for a prize at Vienna with a symphony (prize won by F. Lachner). Settling then in New York, he produced a large quantity of works of all kinds, many extremely pretentious, acquiring such repute that festival performances of them took place in New York, Philadelphia and Boston. For a list, see Baker, Dict. of Musicians, 1918, p. 1087. Also see sketch by Mussik, 1843. A.

Heinrich, Johann Georg (n. Hainau, 1807-1882, Sorau). Silesian organist, at first at Schwiebus and from 1846 at Sorau, gaining the title of royal director in 1872. Wrote an able organ-method (1861) and works on the chorale and on organ-making.

Heinrich, Max (Chemnitz, 1853-1916, New York). Eminent Saxon baritone, pupil of Klitzsch and the Dresden Conservatory, emigrating to America in 1873 and till 1882 teaching in Philadelphia and Marion, Ala. From 1882 he had great success in oratorio, concert and song-recital with New York as a center, from 1888 taught at the Royal Academy, London, from 1894 in Chicago, from 1903 in Boston and from 1910 in New York. Wrote some songs and melodramatic settings of Poe's Raven and Waller's Magdalena, a book on singing-methods and translations of song-texts, besides editing German lieder. A.

Heinroth, Charles (New York, 1874). Eminent American organist, pupil of Friedheim, Spicker, John White, Herbert, Hieber and Rheinberger, from 1893 at St. Paul's, Brooklyn, from 1897 at the Ascension and Temple Beth-El, New York, and since 1907 at the Carnegie Institute, Pittsburgh, and also at the Third Presbyterian Church, besides numerous recitals elsewhere. He is a virtuoso of the first rank. A.

Heinroth, Johann August Günther (Nordhausen, 1780-1846, Göttingen). Son of a Saxon organist and well educated at Leipzig and Halle (theology), from about 1805 teacher at the Jacobson Institut at Seesen, where he became a leading reformer of synagogue-music and also advocated simplified methods in elementary singing (using a numeral-notation). From 1818 he was music-director at Göttingen University, succeeding Forkel, and began giving academic concerts. Wrote a method for school-singing (1821), a work on simplified notation (1828), an introduction to piano-playing (1828) and a Musikal. Hilfsbuch für Prediger, Cantoren u. Organisten, 1833, articles for Weber's Cäcilia, Schilling's Lexikon, etc., besides 4-part chorales (1829) and some other vocal pieces. Ph.D. of Helmstedt Univ. (before 1810).

Heintz, Albert (Eberswalde, 1822-1911, Berlin). Prussian organist, long at the Petrikirche in Berlin. Wrote analyses of Wagner's Parsifal (1882), Meistersinger (1885), Tannhäuser (1898), etc., and piano-paraphrases of Wagnerian themes (some for 4 hands).

Heintze, Georg Wilhelm (Jönköping, 1846-1895, Lund). Able Swedish organist, trained at the Stockholm Conservatory, teaching then at Kalmar and Jönköping, from 1881 organist at the Jakobskirche in Stockholm and from 1889 at Lund Cathedral. Wrote remarkable organ-pieces, including a sonata, preludes, etc., a dedication-cantata, choruses and military marches.

Heinze, Gustav Adolf (Leipzig, 1820-1904, n. Amsterdam). Saxon clarinetist and composer, pupil of his father, Haake and Kotte, from 1835 playing in the Gewandhaus Orchestra and touring, from 1844 second opera-director at Breslau and from 1850 for a time director of German opera at Amsterdam, where he later conducted various choral societies. Wrote the operas Lorelei, 1846, and Die Ruinen von Tharandt, 1847 (both Dresden, libretti by his wife), the oratorios Auferstehung, 1863, Sancta Cäcilia, 1870, Der Feenschleier and Vincentius von Paula, 3 masses, many cantatas, choruses, songs and 3 overtures. G.

Heinze, Sarah, née Magnus (Stockholm, 1836-1901, Dresden). Able Swedish pianist, pupil of Kullak, A. Dreyschock and Liszt, in 1865 married to a Leipzig book-dealer and living long at Dresden, then for a time at Hamburg and from 1890 again at Dresden.

Heise, Peter Arnold (Copenhagen, 1830-1879, Stokkerup). Danish composer, pupil of Lund, Gade, Berggreen and the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1857-69 teaching at the Sorø Academy and then living at Copenhagen. Wrote the operas The Pasha's Daughter, 1869, and King and Marshal, 1878 (almost the only opera on Danish national history), the ballet Kort Adelar, the ballad Dornsröschen, many notable songs, a piano-trio, and a work on medieval songs (1893). Memoir by Behrend, 1909 (in the Riemann Festschrift).

Heiser, Wilhelm (Berlin, 1816-1897, n. do.). Prussian composer of many extremely popular songs (over 500). In 1853-66 he was band-master in the army and later vocal teacher at Berlin.

Hekking, Anton (The Hague, 1856). Eminent Dutch 'cellist, pupil of Giese and the Paris Conservatory, in 1872-74 in the Utrecht orchestra, about 1876 on tour with Essipov and then in the Bilsé Orchestra in Berlin, and in 1882, '84-88 and '98-1902 in the Philharmonic there. In 1882-84 he toured with Ysaÿe in Europe, in 1888 visited America and in 1889-91 played in the Boston Symphony Orchestra and in 1895-98 in the New York Symphony Society. In 1902 he formed a Trio with Schnabel as pianist and A. Wittenberg as violinist, giving annual series of concerts.

Helder, Bartholomäus (? -1635). 17th C.

Helene Pavlovna, Princess of Württemberg (Stuttgart, ?1800-1873, Petrograd). Married in 1824 to the Grand Duke Michael of Russia, she became a famous patron of music in Petrograd. In 1858 classes were started in her palace that led to the founding of the Conservatory in 1862, and in 1859 she was one of the promoters of the Imperial Musical Society. She was the friend of numerous musicians, especially Rubinstein, who wrote his 5th Symphony, op. 107, in her memory.

Helfert, Vladimir (Plánice, 1886). Bohemian historical student, trained by Hostinsky and at Berlin University (Ph.D. 1908), writing on Benda and Rousseau (1908) and Smetana, Zur Gesch. d. Melodrams, 1908, and on music at certain Bohemian courts in the 17-18th centuries. Since 1921 he has lectured at Brünn on musical science and led the Bohemian Orchestral Union.

Heller, Stephen (Pest, 1813-1888, Paris). Eminent Hungarian pianist, pupil mainly of Halm, beginning his career as concertist when but fourteen (he first appeared at nine) and in 1829-30 making a tour through Austria and Germany as far as Hamburg. Falling sick at Augsburg, he was virtually adopted by a wealthy patron and remained there in study till 1838, when he went to Paris, becoming a member of the circle of Chopin, Liszt, Berlioz and others. In 1850 and '62 he visited England. As virtuoso he had much refinement and charm, though nervousness kept him from many appearances. Wrote a large number of graceful salon-pieces, études, preludes, etc. (comprised under about 150 opus-numbers), many of them bearing titles descriptive of the fancy that called them forth. His style was eminently pianistic and from a technical point of view original, though his artistic invention lacked virility and variety. Memoirs by Hartmann, 1859 (in Westermann's Monatshefte), Barbedette, 1876, and especially Schütz, 1911. G.

Hellinck, Johannes Lupus. 16th C. G.

Hellmesberger, Ferdinand (Vienna, 1863), son of Joseph, Sr. below. Austrian 'cellist, from 1879 in the Vienna court-orchestra, in 1883-87 Schlesinger's successor in his father's Quartet, from 1885 teacher at the Conservatory and from 1886 soloist at the Opera. In 1913 he became conductor of the popular concerts of the Konzertverein.

Hellmesberger, Georg (Vienna, 1800-1873, n. do.). Famous Austrian violinist and teacher, trained at the Vienna Conservatory, where he began to teach in 1821 and became professor in 1833, besides some concert-tours. From 1829 he was Schuppanzigh's successor as conductor of the Opera and in 1830-67 a member of the court-band. Among his many great pupils were his own sons, Ernst, Hauser, Joachim and Auer. Wrote 2 violin-concertos, a string-quartet and many violin-pieces. G.

Hellmesberger, Georg [Jr.] (Vienna, 1830-1852, Hanover), son of the foregoing. In spite of his short life, he was known as violinist in Germany and England and wrote 3 operas, including Die beiden Königinnen, 1851, besides orchestral works. G.

Hellmesberger, Joseph (Vienna, 1828-1893, do.), son of Georg, Sr. above. Distinguished Austrian violinist, pupil of his father, from 1851 director of the reorganized Conservatory (also teaching violin until 1877), in 1851-59 conductor of the Musikfreunde concerts, from 1860 concertmaster at the Opera, from 1863 soloist in the court-band and from 1877 court-director. In 1849 he formed his famous Quartet (with Durst, Heissler and Schlesinger), continuing to lead it till 1887. At the Paris Exposition of 1855 he was chairman of the jury on instruments and was admitted to the Légion d'Honneur. Memoir by Barthelmé, 1908. G.

Hellmesberger, Joseph [Jr.] (Vienna, 1855-1907, do.), son of the foregoing. Eminent Austrian violinist, conductor and composer, pupil of his father, from 1875 Durst's successor in his father's Quartet and in 1887 the latter's successor as leader, from 1878 also soloist at the court and the Opera, as well as professor at the Conservatory. He also served as director at the Komische Oper, at the Karltheater and from 1886 at the Opera (having been previously concertmaster and ballet-conductor). In 1900-02 he was court-director, and in 1904-05 held a similar post at Stuttgart: Wrote 10 operettas, including Das Orakel, 1889, Das Veilchenmädchen, 1904, and Der Triumph des Weibes, 1906, and a number of ballets and other stage-pieces. G.

Hellouin, Frédéric (Paris, 1864). Since 1902 lecturer at the École des Hautes Études Sociales in Paris and author of Feuillets d'Histoire Musicale Française, 1902, Gossec et la Musique Française à la fin du XVIII<sup>e</sup> Siècle, 1903, Essai de Critique Musicale, 1905, and Le Noël Musical Française, 1906.

Hellwig, Karl Friedrich Ludwig (n. Wrietzien, 1773-1838, Berlin). Prussian organist and composer, pupil of Gürlick, G. A. Schneider and Zelter, joining the Singakademie in 1793 and becoming second conductor in 1803. From 1813 he was cathedral-organist, besides teaching in several schools. Wrote the operas Die Bergknappen, 1818, and Don Sylvio, 1822, a large amount of church-music, many choruses for men's voices and songs. He prepared piano-scores of Hasse's Miserere [of 1728] and of (Glück's) Iphigénie en Tauride (1812).

Helm, Theodor Otto (Vienna, 1843-1920, do.). Eminent Austrian critic, from 1874 teacher of music-history at the Horák Music School in Vienna, holding the title of professor from 1900. He was on the staff of the Musikalisches Wochenblatt from 1870, of the Pester Lloyd from 1868 and of Die Deutsche Zeitung from 1885, besides contributing to Tonhalle and the Fremdenblatt and from 1876 editing the Musik-, Theater- und Literatur-Journal. In 1876-1901 he also had charge of Fromme's Kalendar für d. Musikal. Welt. Author of special studies on the Beethoven quartets (1868, '73, the latter in 2d ed. 1910), 50 Jahre Wiener Musikleben [1866-1916], 1917 (in the Merker), on sonata-form in Beethoven's works, on Mozart's concertos, many articles on Bruckner, etc.

Helmholtz, Hermann Ludwig Ferdinand von (Potsdam, 1821–1894, Berlin). Distinguished Prussian physicist, originally trained as a surgeon and physiologist, beginning practice in 1842 and in 1849–71 serving as professor at Königsberg, Bonn and Heidelberg in succession, but from 1871 professor of physics at Berlin University, becoming famous for researches in acoustics and the physiology of hearing, as well as of vocalization. His studies led to profound investigations in ethnic music, in the development of scales, in musical structure, in the making of instruments, etc. Besides many other works, he is musically best known through his Lehre von d. Tonempfindungen als physiol. Grundlage für d. Theorie d. Musik. 1863 (6th ed. 1913, English translation, with extensive additions, by Ellis, 1875, '85). Among his most brilliant and suggestive demonstrations were of the rôle of 'harmonies' in determining quality or timbre, that of 'summational' or 'combinational' tones in influencing harmonic practice and that of the 'rods of Corti' in the act of hearing. His studies also had important bearing on the doctrine of the minor mode. Popularizations of his theories have been published by Mach, 1866, Broadhouse, 1890, L. Riemann, 1896, Waetzmann, 1907, etc., with the treatise on his acoustics in general by Könitz and Runge, 1888. Memoirs by Epstein, 1897, and Königsberger, 3 vols. 1903 (popular ed. 1911). Criticisms of his views have been made by Von Oettingen, Lotze, Riemann, Von Schafhäutl, Stumpf and others. G.

Helmore, Thomas (Kidderminster, 1811–1890, London). English clergyman, from 1842 precentor at St. Mark's College (Chelsea) and from 1846 choirmaster of the Chapel Royal, succeeding W. Hawes. He was a specialist on Gregorian music, issuing editions of the Psalter, the Canticles and the Hymnal, besides manuals of plain-song. He also wrote melodies for some of Neale's translations of hymns from the Orient, and edited collections of Christmas and Easter carols. G.

Helsted, Gustav (Copenhagen, 1857), son of the following. Danish composer, pupil of Gebauer, Hartmann, Gade and Matthiisson-Hansen, since 1894 professor at the Copenhagen Conservatory and since 1915 also organist at the Frauenkirche, following Malling. From 1901 he was president of the Konzertverein. Has written 2 symphonies, a decimet for strings and wood-wind, a string-sextet, 2 string-quartets, a piano-trio, 2 violin-sonatas, violin-romanzas, organ-fantasias, piano-pieces, the choral works Gurresänge, 1903, and Vort Land, 1909, etc.

Helsted, Karl Adolph (Copenhagen, 1818–1904, do.). Danish flutist and violinist, in 1869–85 concertmaster at the Copenhagen Opera and teacher at the Conservatory. Wrote 2 symphonies, a piano-quartet, the choral work Liden Kirsten (women's voices), etc. His brother Eduard (1816–1900) from 1838 was a violinist in the court-band, in 1863–69 becoming concertmaster, and then taught at the Conservatory. Wrote several ballets and other stage-works.

Hempel, Adolf (Giessen, 1868). Hessian organist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1890 court-organist at Eisenach, since 1896 concert-player at the Tonhalle or Kaim-Saal at Munich and in 1897–1913 also organist at the Marcuskirche, with many tours as virtuoso. Has written organ-pieces, choruses and songs with organ-accompaniment.

Hempel, Frieda (Leipzig, 1885). Eminent Saxon operatic soprano, pupil of the Leipzig and Stern Conservatories, making her début in 1905 in Berlin, singing then at Schwerin and in 1907–12 at the Berlin Opera. Since 1912 she has been engaged at the Metropolitan, New York, but with many appearances in leading European cities. In 1911 she sang at the première of Strauss' Rosenkavalier at Berlin. In 1918 she married William B. Kahn of New York. A.

Hempson, Denis (n. Garvagh, 1695–1807, Magilligan). One of the last of the old Irish harpers, from about 1715 well known throughout Ireland and Scotland. Besides his familiarity with old music generally, his technical facility was remarkable. See Bunting, Ancient Music of Ireland, 1840. G.

Henderson, William James (Newark, N. J. 1855). Eminent American critic, largely self-taught, from 1883 on the staff of the New York Times and since 1902 of the Sun. In 1889–95 he taught music-history at the College of Music and since 1904 has lectured at the Institute of Musical Art on the development of vocal art. Author of The Story of Music, 1889 (12th ed. 1912), Preludes and Studies, 1891, What is Good Music?, 1898, How Music Developed, 1898, The Orchestra and Orchestral Music, 1899, Wagner, his Life and Dramas, 1901, Modern Musical Drift, 1904, The Art of the Singer, 1906, Some Forerunners of Italian Opera, 1911, and The Early History of Singing, 1921 (the last three embodying original research of importance), the libretti of various light operas and of Darnowsky's Cyrano de Bergerac (1913), a novel, The Soul of a Tenor, 1912, and a book of poems, Pipes and Timbrels, 1905. He is an expert on yachting and navigation (Elements of Navigation, 1895, and many later editions). He is also known as a story-writer and essayist. A.

Henkel, Heinrich (Fulda, 1822–1899, Frankfurt), son of the following. Hessian pianist, pupil of his father, Aloys Schmitt, Kessler and A. André, from 1849 at Frankfurt, where he was one of the founders of the Music School, holding the title of royal director from 1883. Wrote pieces and studies for both piano and violin, choruses and songs, a piano-method, an abridgment of André's Tonsetzkunst (1875), a life of Aloys Schmitt (1873) and Mittheilungen aus d. musikal. Vergangenheit Fuldas, 1882. His brother Georg Andreas (1805–1871) from 1830 was organist at Coburg and from 1837 teacher at the Fulda Seminary, writing considerable orchestral, church-, piano- and organ-music.

Henkel, Michael (Fulda, 1780–1851, do.). Hessian church-musician, pupil of Vierling, long court-musician at Fulda, town-cantor and teacher at the Gymnasium, writing much church-music as well as instrumental works.

Henneberg, Johann Baptist (Vienna, 1768–1822, do.). Austrian organist and composer, for a time organist at the Benedictine monastery (Schottenhof) in Vienna, in 1790–1803 director (with Schikaneder) of the Theater auf der Wieden, from 1805 organist for Prince Esterházy and from 1811 his opera-conductor, and from 1818 court-organist. Wrote several singe-spiele, including Die Waldmänner, 1787, and Liebe macht kurzen Process, 1799, and church-music.

Henneberg, Richard (Berlin, 1853). Able Prussian conductor, in youth singing in choirs and opera-choruses, pupil of Rust and Countess Goschin, from 1870 accompanist for various artists, with some service as chorusmaster for the Italian Opera in London, from 1873 conductor of the Bergen Harmonie, from 1875 director at theaters in Stockholm and from 1885 at the Opera, in 1894–1907 court-director, besides conducting other orchestral concerts. Since 1912 he has conducted popular symphony-concerts in Malmö. In all these posts he has been active in promoting interest in Wagner's music. Has written the opera Drothingens Vollfahrt, 1882, music for Ibsen's Brand, several Shakespeare plays and other plays, ballets, an orchestral arrangement of Söderman's Kung Heimer och Aslög, chamber-music, choruses, songs, etc.

Hennig, Karl (Berlin, 1819–1872, do.). Prussian organist in Berlin, from 1847 at St. Paul's and from 1851 at the Sophienkirche, besides conducting the men's chorus Lyra. Wrote several cantatas, Psalms, many men's choruses, songs, etc. From 1863 he had the title of royal director.

Hennig, Karl Rafael (Berlin, 1845–1914, Posen), son of the above. Prussian teacher, pupil of Richter and Kiel, in 1869–75 organist at St. Paul's in Posen, in 1873 starting a successful choral society, and in 1877–90 teacher at the Women's Normal School. From 1888 he led the Lehrergesangverein and in 1890 founded the Philharmonic Orchestra. From 1892 he held the title of professor. Wrote several text-books for teacher-training (singing, piano, theory), Asthetik d. Tonkunst, 1896, Einführung in d. Wesen d. Musik, 1906, analyses of Beethoven's 9th Symphony and Missa Solemnis, a setting of Psalm 130 and some other church-music, women's choruses, a piano-sonata, etc.

Henning, Karl Wilhelm (Oels, 1784–1867, Berlin). Silesian violinist, pupil of his father, Seidler, Rode and Gürlich, from about 1805 playing in the orchestra of the Opera in Berlin, in 1822 being concertmaster and in 1836–48 conductor or director (but in 1823–26 in charge of the Königstädter Theater). Wrote the opera Die Rosenmädchen, incidental music to about 30 plays, ballets, cantatas, chamber-works, etc.

Henrichsen, Roger (Copenhagen, 1876). Eminent Danish pianist, pupil of Glass, Tofte, Leschetizky and others (as holder of the Ancker Scholarship), since 1905 active at Copenhagen as teacher at the Horneman music-school, critic for the Danebroog and since 1912 for the Riget, a leading official at the Conservatory, in the Musicians' Union and other organizations and director of the Students' Choral Union. Has written a piano-sonata, chamber-music, choral works and songs of importance.

Henrici, Christian Friedrich (Stolpen, 1700–1764, Leipzig). A civil official at Leipzig who from 1725 (under the pseudonym 'Picander') supplied the texts for a great number of Bach's cantatas and for the Passions according to St. Matthew and St. Mark.

Henrion, Paul (Paris, 1819–1901, do.). French composer of more than 1000 effective popular songs and of 3 operettas (1854–77).

Henriques, Fini Valdemar (Copenhagen, 1867). Danish composer, pupil of Tofte, Svendsen and Joachim, in 1892–96 violinist in the court-orchestra at Copenhagen. Has written 2 symphonies, an orchestral suite, a Sinfonische Legende, a suite for oboe and strings, a Romanza for violin and strings, a string-quartet, a string-trio, a violin-sonata, piano-pieces, songs, incidental music to Drachmann's Wieland der Schmied (1898) and the ballet Die kleine Seejungfrau, 1910.

Henriques, Robert (Copenhagen, 1858). Danish 'cellist, pupil of Neruda, Grützmacher, Popper and Kretschmer (holding the Ancker Scholarship in 1887). In 1886 he founded the society G dur at Copenhagen and in 1889 the Symphonica, continuing conductor of the latter till 1893. In 1892–96 he was critic for the Danebroog and later for other papers. In 1902–03 he directed a students' orchestra. Has written the overture Olaf Trygvason, an oboe-suite, 'cello-pieces and songs.

Henry, Harold (Neodesha, Kan. 1884). Gifted American pianist, trained by Preyer, Godowsky, Jedliczka and Moszkowski, appearing at Berlin from 1904 and in Chicago from 1906, then touring widely and playing with leading orchestras. He has been active in promoting the knowledge of MacDowell's works. A.

Henry, Hugh Thomas (Philadelphia, 1862). American Roman Catholic priest, from 1889 professor at Overbrook Seminary, Philadelphia, and also from 1902 head of the R. C. High School there. Since 1919 he has been professor of homiletics at the Catholic University, Washington. Besides many contributions on other subjects, in 1905–09 he edited the journal Church Music and has written ably for The Musical Quarterly. In 1915 he was given the title Monsignor by the Pope. A.

Henschel, Isidor Georg (Breslau, 1850). Distinguished Polish-Silesian baritone, conductor and composer, pupil of Wandelt, Schaeffer, the Leipzig Conservatory, Kiel and A. Schulze, making his début as singer at Leipzig in 1868, and after 1870 making extensive tours on the Continent. From 1877 he lived in London, becoming famous in oratorio and as song-interpreter, from 1879 often with the American soprano Lillian June Bailey (1860-1901), whom he married in 1881. In 1881-84 he was the first conductor of the new Boston Symphony Orchestra, and then returned to London, where in 1885-96 he conducted the London Symphony Concerts, besides in 1886-88 being professor at the Royal College. In 1893-95 he was the first conductor of the new Scottish Symphony Orchestra at Glasgow. As conductor he made a fine reputation for the breadth and quality of his programs as well as for his direct leadership. At intervals he was heard in striking performances as singer, as, for example, at the premières of Stanford's Eden and Parry's Saul at the Birmingham Festivals of 1891 and '94. In concerts and recitals he was constantly joined by his wife. After her death in 1901 he withdrew from public work until 1909, but in 1905-08 taught at the Institute of Musical Art in New York. In 1914, when he ceased outside activities, he was knighted. Throughout his career he has been a champion of Brahms. Has written the operas Friedrich der Schöne (early, not given) and Nubia, 1899 (Dresden), the operetta A Sea-Change, incidental music to Hamlet (1892), a Te Deum, a Stabat Mater, a Requiem (1903, in memory of his wife), Ps. 130, an a cappella mass (1916), an orchestral Festival March, a serenade for strings, a canon-suite for strings, a string-quartet, a violin-ballade (with orchestra), several ballades, romances, etc., for solo and orchestra, many choruses, quartets and duets, about 130 songs (German or English words), an anthem, vocal studies, piano-pieces, etc. He has not appeared in opera except at one performance of his Nubia, when he substituted for Perron. Author of Personal Recollections of Brahms, 1907, and Musings and Memories of a Musician, 1919. G, A.

Hensel, Fanny Cäcilia, née Mendelssohn (Hamburg, 1805-1847, Berlin). Eldest sister of the composer Mendelssohn, always his close companion and confidante. She was a brilliant pianist and wrote many songs and piano-pieces, besides a piano-trio. In 1829 she married the painter Wilhelm Hensel of Berlin. Her sudden death probably hastened that of her brother. G.

Hensel, Heinrich (Neustadt, 1875). Brilliant Rhenish operatic tenor, pupil of Walter and Emerich, first appearing at Freiberg in 1897, from 1900 engaged at Frankfurt, from 1906 at Wiesbaden and since 1910 in London, New York and various Continental cities. In 1910 he sang in Parsifal at Bayreuth and also at the première of Siegfried Wagner's Banadietrich.

Hensel, Octavia [Mrs. G. A. Fonda] (1837-1897, n. Louisville, Ky.). American writer, author of a life of Gottschalk (1870) and some other musical books. A.

Henselt, Adolf von (Schwabach, 1814-1889, Warmbrunn). Eminent Bavarian pianist, pupil of Hummel and Sechter, making a brilliant début in 1836 and going to Russia in 1838, where he was at once made court-pianist, instructor in the imperial household and inspector of music-teaching in girls' schools. He occasionally visited other countries, as in England in 1852 and '67, but made no further tours as virtuoso. He was peculiar in his emphasis upon stretching the span of the hands and increasing their muscularity by strenuous exercises of his own invention. He achieved results in the way of sonority and massiveness that were regarded as extraordinary. Wrote a piano-concerto, a piano-trio, a considerable number of elegant piano-pieces, valuable études, several Paraphrases de Concert, a second-piano part for some of Cramer's Études, etc., besides a remarkable edition of most of Weber's piano-works (with some variant passages). See Lenz, Die grossen Pianoforte-virtuosen, 1872, Stasov's Erinnerungen, etc., and memoir by La Mara, 1909 (in Studienköpfe). G.

Hentschel, Theodor (n. Zittau, 1830-1892, Hamburg). Saxon composer, pupil of Reissiger, Ciccarelli and the Prague Conservatory, for a time pianist and theater-director in Leipzig, from 1860 director at Bremen and from 1890 at Hamburg. Wrote the operas Matrose und Sänger, 1857, Der Königspage, 1874, Die Braut von Lusignan or Melusine, 1875, Lancelot, 1878, and Des Königs Schwert, 1890, a mass for double chorus, overtures and marches for orchestra, etc.

Hepworth, George (n. Huddersfield, 1825-?). English organist, brought up in Hamburg, pupil of Katterfeldt (a pupil of Kittel), from about 1845 concertizing at Plön (at the same time with Reinecke), from 1847 organist at Güstrow and from 1864 cathedral-organist and court-conductor at Schwerin. Author of Das B-A-C-H in Bachs Kunst der Fuge, 1887.

Hepworth, William (Hamburg, 1846-1916, Chemnitz), son of the above. English-German organist, pupil of his father and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1873 organist at the Jacobikirche in Chemnitz, after 1908 holding the title of director of church-music. Wrote an orchestral suite, a string-quartet, an andante for 'cello and orchestra, orchestral arrangements of Bach's Prelude and Fugue in A min. and of Tartini's 'Devil's Sonata' (for violin and strings), organ-fugues, etc. Author of a manual on stringed instruments (1895).

Herbart, Johann Friedrich (Oldenburg, 1776-1841, Göttingen). Eminent philosopher, from 1809 professor at Königsberg and from 1833 at Göttingen. He was an excellent pianist and published a piano-sonata. In his writings musical psychology is touched in various ways, especially in his Psycholog. Bemerkungen zur Tonlehre, 1811, and in his discussion of the normal unit of rhythm or tempo. Musical aesthetics are treated in his Encyclopädie, 1831.

See monographs by Zimmermann, 1873, Hostinsky, 1890, and Bagier, 1912.

Herbeck, Johann Franz von (Vienna, 1831-1877, do.). Eminent Austrian conductor and composer, mostly self-trained, in 1852-54 choir-master at the Piaristenkirche in Vienna, from 1856 leader of the Männergesangverein (producing forgotten works of Schubert), from 1858 teacher at the Conservatory and also chorus-master for the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde and after 1859 conductor of its concerts, bringing them to a high standard of excellence. From 1863 he was under-director at the court and from 1866 full director, but in 1869 was transferred first to the direction and then to the conductorship of the Opera, from which, however, he withdrew in 1875 because of intrigues and similar difficulties. The Musikfreunde leadership he relinquished during 1869-75. The impress of his intelligent and industrious zeal upon musical progress in Vienna was deep and permanent. Wrote especially admirable part-songs and choruses, considerable church-music (including 2 masses), 4 symphonies, Symphonische Variationen, Tanzmoment and Künstlerfahrt for orchestra, string-quartets, etc. Memoir by his son, 1885, and see notices by Hanslick. G.

Herbert, Victor (Dublin, 1859). Eminent Irish 'cellist, conductor and composer, pupil of Cossmann and Seifritz, from 1878 concertizing on the Continent, in 1882 in the Strauss Orchestra in Vienna, and in 1883-86 in the court-band at Stuttgart. In 1886 he married the soprano Therese Förster at Vienna and removed to New York, playing in all the leading orchestras and gaining notice as conductor and composer. In 1889-91 he assisted at the Worcester Festivals, from 1893 succeeded Gilmore as band-master (22d Regt. N. Y. N. G.), in 1898-1904 was conductor of the Pittsburgh Orchestra and later served as guest-conductor on various occasions elsewhere. From 1894 dates his remarkable success as writer of light or comic opera, leading on gradually to works of elaborate workmanship and large magnitude. His works include Operas—Natoma, 1911 (Philadelphia), Madeleine, 1913 (New York).

Operettas, etc.—Prince Ananias, 1894, The Wizard of the Mill, 1895, The Gold Bug, 1896, The Serenade, 1897, The Idol's Eye, 1897, The Fortune-Teller, 1898, Cyrano de Bergerac, 1899, The Singing-Girl, 1899, The Amerer, 1899, The Viceroy, 1900, Babes in Toyland, 1903, Bobbette, 1903, It happened in Nordland, 1904, Miss Dolly Dollars, 1905, Wonderland, 1905, Mlle. Modiste, 1905, Sylvia, 1906, The Red Mill, 1906, Dream-City, 1906, The Magic Knight, 1906, The Tattooed Man, 1907, The Rose of Algeria, 1908, Miss Camille, 1908, The Song-Birds, 1908, Victoria, 1908, Little Nemo, 1908, The Prima Donna, 1908, Old Dutch, 1909, Naughty Marietta, 1910, When Sweet Sixteen, 1910, Mlle. Rosita, 1911, The Enchantress, 1911, The Lady of the Slippers, 1912, The Madcap Duchess, 1913, Sweethearts, 1913, The D butante, 1914, The Only Girl, 1914, Princess Pal, 1915, Eileen, 1917, Her Regiment, 1917. Also notable incidental music to the photo-play The Fall of a Nation (1916).

Dramatic cantata, The Captive, 1891 (Worcester). For orchestra—symphonic poem, Hero and Leander; the suites Romantique, Woodland Fancies and Columbus; Irish Rhapsody; Serenade for strings (1888); shorter pieces.

'Cello-concertos in D (1887) and E min. (1894); 'cello-suite (1887); other pieces.
Choruses for men's voices; many songs.

G. A.

Herbing, August Bernhard Valentin (?-1766, Magdeburg). About 1758 assistant-organist at Magdeburg Cathedral. Wrote many songs (issued as Musikal. Belustigungen, 2 parts, 1758, '67, and Musikal. Versuche an Fabeln u. Erz hlungen d. Gellerts, 1759) that are important in the early development of the German artistic lied. Many examples in Denkm ler deutscher Tonkunst, xli. G.

Herbst, Johann Andreas (1588-1666). 17th C. G.

Herder, Johann Gottfried von (Mohrungen, 1744-1803, Weimar). The distinguished Prussian poet and essayist, musically important both for the influence of his poems upon the development of German song-writing and for his discussions of aesthetics (see Lotze, Gesch. d. Aesthetik, 1868). Texts by him were used by Handel (Adrastea as monodrama), J. C. F. Bach (3 oratorios), M thel and E. W. Wolf (cantatas), etc. He also wrote an opera-libretto for Gluck (Brutus, not used). See monographs by Keferstein, 1845, and G nther, 1903.

Hering, John Norris (Baltimore, 1886). American organist and critic, trained at the Peabody Conservatory, Baltimore, where he has taught at intervals, since 1901 organist in Baltimore (except 1909-10, in New Orleans), from 1911 at Christ Church, besides giving many recitals elsewhere (always from memory). From 1910 he was critic for the Baltimore Star and since 1920 for the American. Has written a piano-trio, an organ-sonata and other pieces, Jewish and Episcopal church-music, etc. A.

Hering, Karl Eduard (Oschatz, 1807-1879, Bautzen), son of Karl Gottlieb below. Saxon organist, pupil of his father, Weinig and Pohlens, from 1839 organist at Bautzen and teacher at the Seminary there, also conducting a choral society. Wrote 2 operas, the oratorios Der Erl ser, 1834, Die heilige Nacht, David, Salomo, Christi Leid und Herrlichkeit, a Passion, a mass (1835), other choral works, part-songs, chorales, etc., and a text-book in harmony (1861), besides continuing his father's works in school-music.

Hering, Karl Friedrich August (Berlin, 1819-1889, Magdeburg). Prussian violinist, pupil of H. Ries, Rungenhagen, Lipinski and Tomaschek, from about 1845 making concert-tours and then settling in Berlin, where in 1848 he started a 'Sonataverrein' and in 1851 a music-school (continued till 1867). Wrote orchestral and chamber-works, masses, songs, violin- tudes and a method, etc.

Hering, Karl Gottlieb (Schandau, 1765-1853, Zittau). Saxon teacher, pupil of Schicht, at first master in the Latin School at Oschatz and from 1811 head-master at the Zittau Stadtschule, becoming noted as an authority on school-music and publishing many pedagogical works (from 1796). In 1830 he started the Musikal. Jugend-

blatt, from 1853 continued by his son Karl Eduard (above).

Hering, Kurt (Leipzig, 1870). Saxon violinist, pupil of Schütze and Pritt, from 1895 concert-master at Danzig, from 1901 member of the Gewandhaus Orchestra in Leipzig and since 1906 its concertmaster.

Herman, Reinhold Ludwig (Prenzlau, 1849). Prussian conductor and composer, trained at the Stern Conservatory, Berlin, removing in 1871 to America, teaching in New York, from 1884 leading the Liederkranz there, in 1887-1898 being professor at the Union Theological Seminary and in 1898-1900 conductor of the Handel and Haydn Society in Boston (but spending 1878-81 as temporary substitute as director of the Stern Conservatory in Berlin). Since 1900 he has lived in Berlin, where he has been conductor of the Meyer Symphony Concerts. Has written the operas Vineta, 1872, Lancelot, Spilmannsglück, 1894, Wulfrin, 1896, and Sunddri, 1911, various cantatas, the orchestral works Die Seufzerbrücke and Der Geiger von Gmünd, overtures, a piano-concerto, piano-suites and sonatas, many part-songs and songs. A.

Hermann, E. Hans G. (Leipzig, 1870). Saxon double-bassist and composer, pupil of Rust, Kretschmer and Herzogenberg, in 1888-93 playing in various orchestras and in 1901-07 teaching at the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory in Berlin. Has written a symphony, 2 string-quartets, a violin-suite, violin-, 'cello- and clarinet-pieces, the singspiele Das Urteil des Midas and Devote Pimpernell, a setting of the Sayings of Omar Khayyâm and many extremely effective songs and ballads.

Hermann, Friedrich (Frankfurt, 1828-1907, Leipzig). Eminent Hessian violinist, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1846-78 a member of the Gewandhaus Orchestra and from 1847 teacher at the Conservatory. In 1883 he received the title of royal professor. Wrote a symphony, a wind-quartet, a violin-terzet, a duo for violin and 'cello, violin-pieces, a violin-method, études, etc., and edited editions of classical violin-works for Peters and Augener. He was noted as a teacher.

Hermann, Johann David (in Germany, ?1760-1846, Paris). Able pianist, settled in Paris from 1785, for a time as teacher for Marie Antoinette. Wrote 6 piano-concertos, 15 sonatas, etc.

Hermann, Johann Gottfried Jakob (Leipzig, 1772-1848, do.). Celebrated classical philologist, from 1798 professor at Leipzig University. Wrote a series of important works on metrics (1796-1817).

Hermann, Matthias. See Werrekoren.

Hermann, Robert (Bern, 1869-1912, Ambach, Bavaria). Able Swiss composer, pupil of the Frankfurt Conservatory and of Humperdinck, but also self-taught (developing a forceful originality). Since 1895 he has lived at Leipzig. Has written symphonies in C and B min., an overture, a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, a Berceuse for 'cello and strings, a violin-sonata, other violin-pieces, 2 piano-suites, many songs, etc. Author of Berliner Musik-Kritiker-Spiegel. See Niemann in Monographien moderner Musiker, 1909.

Hermannus Contractus. 11th C.

Hermesdorff, Michael (Treves, 1833-1885, do.). Rhenish specialist on Gregorian music, for many years organist at Treves Cathedral. Edited an important edition of the Roman Graduale (1876-82, incomplete), made translations into German of Guido's Micrologus, issued versions of church-music for the Treves diocese and also 3 original masses.

Hermstedt, Johann Simon (Langensalza, 1778-1846, Sondershausen). Noted Saxon clarinetist, pupil of Knoblauch and Baer, in 1800-44 court-director at Sondershausen. He made improvements in his instrument and established the renown of the wood-wind in the Sondershausen band. For him Spohr composed three out of his four clarinet-concertos. Wrote clarinet-concertos and variations, besides military music.

Hernandez, Pablo (Saragossa, 1834). Spanish composer, trained at the Madrid Conservatory and from 1863 teacher there. Has written a symphony, an overture, organ-fugues, an organ-method, much church-music and some zarzuelas.

Hernando, Rafael José Maria (Madrid, 1822-?). Spanish composer, trained at the Madrid Conservatory and at Paris, where from 1843 he sought to gain a hearing in opera as he did with sacred works. From 1848, having returned to Madrid, he had success with a series of zarzuelas, resulting in the erection of a special theater, of which he became director. From 1852 he was secretary of the Conservatory and later professor of harmony. Wrote also a mass (1867), sacred cantatas, etc.

Herner, Karl (Rendsburg, 1836-1906, Hanover). North German violinist, pupil of the Prague Conservatory and of Joachim, after experience in orchestras in Hamburg, Kiel, Copenhagen and Brussels, from 1858 in the opera-orchestra at Hanover, becoming repetitor in 1865, conductor in 1877 and director in 1887, and retiring in 1900. Wrote the overtures Schön Rottraut and Jussuff und Suleika, a ballet, choruses and songs.

Hérod, Louis Joseph Ferdinand (Paris, [Jan. 28] 1791-1833 [Jan. 19], n. do.). Distinguished French composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1812), but with early study under his father, Louis Adam and Fétis. While in Italy he was pianist to Queen Caroline of Naples and wrote several fine orchestral works, besides his first opera. In 1815 he spent some months in Vienna. On returning to Paris in 1816 he was fortunately asked by Boieldieu to collaborate with him on the opera Charles de France, the success of which opened the way for several works written in rapid succession with a steady display of musical capacity, but without great effectiveness because of the poverty of the librettos. From 1820 he served as accompanist at the Théâtre des Italiens and from 1827 was chorusmaster at the Opéra, in that capacity taking up the writing of ballets with a vim that left its mark upon the whole later development of that branch of French dramatic art. During these years he also published over fifty pieces for the piano. Of his operas, Le Muletier in 1823 and Marie in 1826 scored success, while Emmeline in 1829 was a complete failure. But in 1831 he attained permanent renown with the brilliant Zampa, which was followed in 1832 by Le Pré aux Clercs (adjudged by French critics his best). But he had long shown consumptive tendencies and these now cut short his career. He had, however, written enough to exhibit musicianship of a refined and scholarly order, a firm grasp of the genius of the opéra comique and versatile ability both in handling scenes of genial humor and in expressing genuine pathos. The total list of his works is as follows:

Operas—La Gioventù di Enrico Quinto, 1815 (Naples), Charles de France, 1816 (with Boieldieu), Les Rosières, 1817, La Clochette, 1817, Le Premier Venu, 1818, Les Troqueurs, 1819, L'Amour Platonique, 1819 (rehearsed only), L'Auteur Mort et Vivant, 1820, Le Muletier, 1823, L'Asthénie, 1823, Vendôme en Espagne, 1823 (with Auber), Le Roi René, 1824, Le Lapin Blanc, 1825, Marie, 1826, L'Illusion, 1829, Emmeline, 1829, L'Auberge d'Aurey, 1830 (with Carafa), Zampa, 1831, La Marquise de Brinvilliers, 1831 (with Auber, Berton, Boieldieu and others), La Médecine sans Médecin, 1832, Le Pré aux Clercs, 1832, Ludovic, 1833 (completed by Halévy).

Ballets—Asolphe et Jocande, 1827, La Somnambule, 1827, Lydie, 1828, La Belle au Bois Dormant, 1828, La Fille mal Gardée, 1828. Incidental music for Misso-longhi at the Odéon.

Cantata—Mlle. de la Vallière, 1812.
Hymn sur la Transfiguration for 4 voices and orchestra (1813).

Symphonies in C and D (both 1813).
String-quartets in D, C and G min. (all 1814).
Piano-works—3 sonatas; 7 caprices (2 with quartet); 17 rondos and divertissements (1 for 4 hands); 7 fantasias; 3 variations; potpouris, etc.

In 1827 he married Adèle Élise Rollet. Of their three children, the eldest became an able lawyer and later senator, and the youngest, Eugénie, gave great musical promise, but died of consumption at twenty. Memoirs by Jouvin, 1868, and Pougin, 1906. G.

Hérolde, Max (Rehweiler, 1840–1921, Neuen-dettelsau). Bavarian church-musician, from 1875 pastor at Schwabach, in 1896 becoming dean and head of the preparatory school and from 1903 dean at Neustadt (a. d. Aisch). In 1876 he joined the staff of Siona, in 1881 becoming sole editor (now succeeded by his son Wilhelm). From 1883 he was founder and president of the Bavarian branch of the Evangel. Kirchen-Gesangverein. Erlangen Univ. made him Theol. D. in 1897. Author of Passah, liturg. Gottesdienste für d. Charwoche u. d. Osterfest, 1874, Vesperale, Alt-Nürnberg in seinen Gottesdiensten, 1890, Kultusbilder aus vier Jahrhunderten, 1896, and the article 'Brevier' in the Herzog Realencyklopädie.

Heron-Allen, Edward (London, 1861). English biologist, author of Violin-Making, 1882, and a Bibliography of the Violin, 12 parts, 1890–96.

Herrmann, Eduard (Oberrottwil, 1850). Württemberger violinist, trained at the Stuttgart Conservatory and the Berlin Hochschule, from 1871 concertmaster at Schwerin and from 1875 at the Hamburg Opera, in 1877 touring through Germany, Holland and Switzerland, and from 1878 concertmaster at the Petrograd Opera. In 1881 he came to New York, where (with Hauser, Lilienthal and Schenck) he organized a Quartet and later (with C. Herrmann and Schenck) a Trio, both of importance for some years. Has written a violin-concerto, a sextet (with oboe and clarinet), a string-quintet, a string-quartet, violin-pieces and études, a method, etc., besides works on theosophy. A.

Herrmann, Georg (Brunswick, 1871). Specialist in vocal science, pupil of Ifert, Mary Davis and Törsleff, since 1904 working in Berlin. Author of a series of monographs on voice-building (1900–12) and Die Lieder von Emil Wetz, 1911. He has used the pseudonym 'George Armin'.

Herrmann, Gottfried (Sondershausen, 1808–1878, Lubeck). Saxon violinist, pupil of Spohr, Hauptmann and Aloys Schmitt, at first playing at Hanover and Frankfurt, from 1831 organist at the Marienkirche in Lubeck, from 1844 court-director at Sondershausen and from 1852 again at Lubeck as city-director, including leadership of the opera-orchestra, and also conductor of the Bach-Verein at Hamburg. Wrote orchestral and chamber-music, besides some operas. At Frankfurt he organized a Quartet (with his brother Karl as 'cellist [d. 1894]).

Herrmann, Gebrüder. See Zeugheer.

Herschel, Frederick William (Friedrich Wilhelm) (Hanover, 1738–1822, Slough). Distinguished astronomer, originally (from 1752) oboist in a Hanoverian regiment which in 1755 was stationed at Durham in England. In 1756–57 he saw service in the Seven Years' War, but withdrew for reasons of health and again came to England, teaching in northern towns and becoming organist at Halifax. From 1766 he was organist at the Octagon Chapel in Bath, where he quickly gained prestige as teacher and musical leader, continuing till about 1780 to support himself by music while, with the help of his sister, gradually becoming an astronomer of the highest order. In 1782 he was made Astronomer Royal and removed to Slough, near Windsor. Wrote a symphony and 2 concertos for wind (1768). G.

Hertel, Johann Christian (Oettingen, 1699–1754, Strelitz). Famous Swabian gambist, pupil of Kaufmann and Hess, long violinist in the Eisenach court-band and in 1742–53 concertmaster at Strelitz. Wrote much concerted music, including violin-concertos and sonatas.

Hertel, Johann Wilhelm (Eisenach, 1727–1789, Schwerin), son of the above. Saxon violinist and composer, pupil of his father and Benda, from 1754 concertmaster in the Schwerin court-band and later director. From 1770 he was in the service of Princess Ulrike and active as pianist. Wrote a large amount of sacred music, including masses, numerous cantatas, Psalms, etc., settings of Lōwen's Oden u. Lieder, sinfonie, partitas, sonatas, etc., and compiled a Sammlung musikal. Schriften, 1757-58. His autobiography exists in manuscript.

Hertel, Peter Ludwig (Berlin, 1817-1899, do.). Prussian composer, pupil of Greulich, Rietz, J. Schneider and Marx, from 1858 court-composer at Berlin and from 1860 ballet-conductor at the Opera. Wrote much instrumental music (symphonies, overtures, quartets, etc.), but from 1852 was specially noted for a long series of ballets (mostly on scenarios by Paul Taglioni). He retired in 1893.

Hertz, Alfred (Frankfort, 1872). Eminent Hessian conductor, trained at the Hoch Conservatory, Frankfort, in 1891-92 opera-conductor at Halle, from 1892 at Altenburg, from 1895 at Elberfeld-Barmen and in 1899-1902 at Breslau. In 1899 he directed concerts in London. In 1902-15 he gained much renown as conductor of German opera at the Metropolitan, New York, having charge of many premières. Since 1915 he has been conductor of the San Francisco Orchestra. In 1914 he married the soprano Lilly Dorn of Vienna. A.

Hertz, Michael (Warsaw, 1844). Polish composer, trained at the Leipzig and Stern (Berlin) Conservatories, since 1878 teaching in Warsaw. Has written the operas Gwarkowie, 1880, and Bogna, much other stage-music, orchestral and piano-pieces, choruses and songs.

Hertzberg, Rudolf von (Berlin, 1818-1893, do.). Prussian church-musician, pupil of Berger and Dehn, from 1847 voice-trainer for the Berlin Domchor and in 1861-89 its director, succeeding Neithardt. From 1887 he continued Commer's collection Musica Sacra. Held the title of professor from 1861.

Hervé [Florimond Ronger] (n. Arras, 1825-1892, Paris). Talented French composer of operettas, trained as choirboy at St.-Roch, Paris, and early serving as organist at various churches. In 1848 he sang at the Opéra National in his own stage-work Don Quichotte et Sancho Panza. From 1851 he led the orchestra at the Palais Royal, and in 1854-56 manager of a small theater (Folies Concertantes), beginning to produce the light works that presently gained him a name. Until 1870 he appeared as singer and actor in various Paris theaters, as well as in Marseilles, Montpellier and even in Cairo, and in 1867-70 produced his most successful works. From 1870 he was employed mostly in London (Covent Garden summer-concerts, Empire Theatre, etc.). From 1868 he wrote most of his own librettos. In his later years he often wrote effective songs for insertion in plays. His more than 60 works established the vogue of the operetta, which Offenbach on the whole turned to better account. The most successful were Le Compositeur Toqué, 1855, L'Œil Crevé, 1867, Le Roi Chilpéric, 1868, Le Petit Faust, 1869, Les Turcs, 1869, and Aladdin the Second, 1870. Of several ballets, Les Bagatelles, 1890, may be mentioned. In 1874 he brought out the 'heroic symphony' The Ashantee War, for soli and orchestra. G.

Hervey, Arthur (Paris, 1855-1922). Irish-French critic and composer, pupil of Tours and Marlois, from 1889 writing for Vanity Fair and in 1892-1908 for the London Morning Post. Composed the operas The Fairy's Post-Box, 1885, and Ilona, 1914, the overtures Love and Fate, 1890, and Youth, 1902, the orchestral prelude Ione, 1907, the tone-poems In the East, 1904, and Summer, 1907, the tone-pictures On the Heights and On the March, 1902, the symphonic variations Life-Moods, 1910, an orchestral suite, a Romance for violin and orchestra, the baritone scena The Gates of Night, 1901, many pieces for piano, violin or 'cello, and numerous fine songs. His larger works were mainly brought out at various festivals. Author of Masters of French Music, 1894, French Music in the XIXth Century, 1903, lives of Bruneau (1907), Liszt (1911), Meyerbeer (1913), Rubinstein (1913) and Saint-Saëns (1921), articles in the Supplement to the Encyclopædia Britannica, etc. G.

Herz, Heinrich [Henri] (Vienna, 1806*-1888, do.). Showy Austrian (Jewish) pianist, mainly educated at the Paris Conservatory (and becoming virtually a Frenchman), from about 1825 a fashionable teacher and composer of salon-pieces in Paris, in 1842 becoming professor at the Conservatory. In 1831 he made a tour in Germany with the violinist Lafont, in 1833 and '43 visited England, and in 1845-51 was in the United States and the West Indies. From 1851 he turned to piano-making with such success that in 1855 his instruments won the highest award at the Paris Exposition. In 1874 he gave up his place at the Conservatory. His playing was marked by extreme dexterity and ad captandum ability, but, like his compositions, was artistically empty. Wrote more than 200 works, including 8 concertos, 14 rondos, a Fantaisie Chevaleresque (with orchestra), duos for 2 pianos or for piano and violin, many variations and lesser pieces. His piano-method and études are all that are now valued. Author of Mes Voyages en Amérique, 1866. G.

Herz, Jacques Simon (Frankfort, 1794-1880, Nice), brother of the above, and, like him, educated at the Paris Conservatory, becoming a noted pianist and teacher in Paris and London. In 1857-64 he was his brother's deputy as teacher at the Conservatory. They were associated in the piano-making business. Wrote a piano-quintet, a violin-sonata, a horn-sonata and many piano-works.

Herzfeld, Victor von (Presburg, 1856). Hungarian violinist, pupil of the Presburg Conservatory and of Grell, winner of the Beethoven prize in 1884 and since 1886 professor at the Pest National Academy and member of the famous Hubay Quartet. Has written orchestral, chamber- and piano-works.

* Riemann gives his birth-date as 1803.

Herzog, Benedict. See Ducis.

Herzog, Emilie (Diessenhofen, 1786). Gifted Swiss operatic soprano, trained at the Zurich and Munich Conservatories, appearing in 1880 at Munich and soon gaining favor in coloratura and soubrette rôles, from 1889 engaged at the Berlin Opera, where she was noted in works by Mozart. Through many tours she also became famous as concert-singer. In 1903-10 she taught at the Berlin Hochschule. In 1890 she married the writer Welti, and now lives at Aarburg (Switzerland).

Herzog, Johann Georg (n. Kronach, 1822-1909, Munich). Bavarian organist, pupil of Bodenschatz, from 1842 organist at the Protestant Church in Munich and from 1850 professor at the Conservatory, but after 1854 at Erlangen University, at first as music-director, later as professor, retiring in 1888. Wrote many fine organ-works, an Orgelschule, chorales and motets, and edited collections of choir-music. G.

Herzogenberg, Heinrich von (Graz, 1843-1900, Wiesbaden). Eminent Styrian conductor and composer, trained at the Vienna Conservatory, from 1864 teaching at Graz, from 1872 at Leipzig, where in 1874 he was one of the founders of the Bach-Verein, in 1875 succeeding Volkmann as its conductor, from 1885 professor at the Berlin Hochschule, following Kiel, and in 1889-92 and 1897-1900 director of the Meisterschule für Komposition. As composer he was somewhat related to Brahms. Wrote 2 symphonies (1885, '90), the symphonic poem Odysseus, a string-quintet, 5 string-quartets, 2 piano-quartets, a quartet for piano, horn, clarinet and bassoon, 2 string- and 2 piano-trios, a trio for piano, oboe and horn, 3 violin- and 3 cello-sonatas, 2 organ-fantasias, many piano-variations (some for 4 hands), and notable choral works, including Deutsches Liederspiel (orchestrated by Heubner), Der Stern des Liedes, Die Weihe der Nacht, Nannas Klage, Psalms 94 and 116, Königspsaln, Requiem, Totenfeier, a mass, the church-oratorios Die Geburt Christi, Die Passion and Erntefeier, Columbus (men's chorus), a cantata, 2 Biblische Scenen, Begräbniss-Gesang (tenor and men's chorus a cappella), 8 a cappella motets, many other choruses and both sacred and secular songs. Catalogue of works issued by Rieter-Biedermann, 1900. Memoirs by Spengel, 1893, Altmann, 1903, and Kalbeck, 1906 (correspondence with Brahms). His wife, née Elisabeth von Stockhausen (1847-1892), was a fine pianist. G.

Hesdin, Pierre 16th C. G.

Heselint, James (?-1763, Durham). English organist, pupil of Blow, for a time at St. Katherine's Hospital, London, and from 1711 at Durham Cathedral. The larger part of his anthems he petulantly destroyed in a dispute with the cathedral authorities. Only eight remain. G.

Hess, Joachim. In 1766-1810 organist and carillonneur at the Groote Kerk in Gouda (Holland) and author of several works on organ-playing and organ-making (1766-1810). A brother was a good organ-maker at Gouda.

Hess, Karl (Basel, 1859-1912, Bern). Swiss organist, pupil of Bagge, Glaus, Bargheer and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1882 organist at Bern Cathedral and professor at the University. Wrote the choral works Nähe des Toten and Psalm 90, Der Weihnachtsstern (for quartet, viola and organ), a cappella motets, men's and women's choruses, a piano-quintet, an organ-sonata and other organ-pieces.

Hess, Ludwig (Marburg, 1877). Able Hessian tenor and composer, trained at the Berlin Hochschule and by Vidal, becoming from 1901 a noted interpreter of Bach's oratorios and cantatas and of modern song-composers. In 1907-10 he conducted choral concerts at Munich, in 1910-12 taught at Frankfurt, in 1911-13 toured in the United States, Canada and Mexico, then settling in Berlin, but in 1917-20 was director of the Königsberg Academy and of choral and orchestral concerts there. Has written 2 symphonies (the 1st, on Hans Memling's Himmelskönig, with organ), a piano-sextet, the operetta Abu und Nu, 1919, the choral works Ariadne and Von unsterblicher Liebe, various choruses and songs with orchestra, etc.

Hess, Otto (Munich, 1871). Bavarian conductor, at first engaged in business, but, after study at Milan, from 1901 theater-conductor at Teplitz, Linz, Mulhouse, Bremen, Aix (from 1911) and since 1913 Franz Fischer's successor at the Munich Opera.

Hess, Willy (Mannheim, 1859). Able Hessian violinist, pupil of Joachim, beginning concert-tours at nine in the United States (with Thomas) and in 1872-76 in the Low Countries, France and Germany, from 1878 concertmaster at Frankfurt, from 1886 at Rotterdam, from 1888 in the Hallé Orchestra at Manchester (England), from 1895 at the Gürzenich Concerts in Cologne, as well as professor in the Conservatory there and leader of the Gürzenich Quartet, in 1900-03 professor at the Royal Academy, London, in 1904-10 concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and leader of his own Quartet (with Theodorowicz, Ferir and Schröder), and since 1910 professor at the Berlin Hochschule, leader of the Halir Quartet (with Stössel, Heber and Baldner) and member of the Schumann Trio. G, A.

Hesse, Adolf Friedrich (Breslau, 1808-1863, do.). Eminent Silesian organist, pupil of Berner and Köhler, with some later help from Hummel, Rinck and Spohr. His early promise was such that he received a stipend from the Breslau authorities to enable him to visit various German cities to complete his training. From 1827 he was assistant at the Elisabethkirche in Breslau and from 1831 organist at the Bernhardikirche. In 1844 he aroused astonishment by his playing in Paris (opening of the organ at St.-Eustache), in 1846 visited Italy and in 1851 was in London (at the Crystal Palace). He was almost equally celebrated in early and middle life as a pianist. For many years he conducted the concerts of the Breslau orchestra. Wrote over 80 works, including especially a variety of organ-pieces, an Orgelschule, the oratorio Tobias, over 20 cantatas, motets, 6 symphonies, 4 overtures, a piano-concerto, a string-quintet, 2 string-quartets and many piano-pieces. He was also a remarkable teacher, attracting pupils from far and near. G.

Hesse, Ernst Christian (Grossgoltern, 1676–1762, Darmstadt). Hanoverian (or Thuringian?) gambist, early employed at the Darmstadt court and sent to Paris in 1698 for study with Marais and Forqueray. He made tours to Holland, England, Italy and Austria, but the exact details of his career are confused. In later years he was an official in the Darmstadt War Office. Wrote gamba-pieces, much church-music, etc.

Hesse, Max (Sondershausen, 1858–1907, Leipzig). Founder in 1880 of a music-publishing business in Leipzig which in 1915 was transferred to Berlin (present owner J. Krill). The house has published important works, including many of those of Riemann.

Hesse, Alexander Friedrich, Landgrave of (Copenhagen, 1863), succeeding to the title in 1888. Gifted blind composer, trained at Copenhagen, Frankfurt, Berlin, Dresden and Paris. Has written a string-quartet, a trio for piano, clarinet and horn, a mass, the scena Fatima (for baritone and orchestra), a piano-intermezzo and songs. See Hiller, Der Liederzyklus von A. F. v. H., 1910.

Hetsch, Karl Friedrich Ludwig [Louis] (Stuttgart, 1806–1872, Mannheim). Württemberger pianist and violinist, pupil of Abeille and Weiss (as royal protégé), from 1835 academic director at Heidelberg and from 1846 director at Mannheim. Ph.D. of Tübingen Univ. in 1867. Wrote the opera Ryno, 1833, various choral works, including a prize setting of Psalm 130, orchestral and chamber-music, and songs.

Heuberger, Richard Franz Joseph (Graz, 1850–1914, Vienna). Eminent Styrian critic and composer, at first educated as an engineer, from 1876 trainer of the academical choral society in Vienna, from 1878 conductor of the Singakademie and in 1902–09 of the Männergesangverein, besides becoming in 1902 professor at the Conservatory. From 1881 he was critic for the Tageblatt, in 1896–1901 for the Neue Freie Presse and from 1904 editor of the Neue Musikalische Presse, besides in 1904–06 editing the Musikbuch aus Oesterreich. Wrote the operas Abenteuer einer Neujahrsnacht, 1886, Manuel Venegas, 1889 (revised as Mirjam, 1894), and Barfüssle, 1905, the ballets Die Lautenschlägerin, 1896, and Struwwelpeter, 1897, the cantata Geh es dir wohl, so denk' an mich (for soli, men's chorus and orchestra), 6 operettas (1898–1910), a symphony, the overture Cain (Byron), 2 orchestral suites, orchestral serenades and variations, numerous fine men's choruses and songs. Author of Musikal. Skizzen, 1901, Im Foyer, 1901 (both selections from his critiques), a life of Schubert (1902, 2d ed. 1908), analyses for the Musikführer and a revision of Jensen's edition of Cherubini's Contrepoint. G.

Heubner, Konrad (Dresden, 1860–1905, Coblenz). Able Saxon conductor and composer, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory and under Riemann, Nottebohm, Wüllner, Nicodé and Blassmann, from 1882 conductor of the Liegnitz Singakademie, from 1884 second conductor of the Berlin Singakademie and from 1890 Moszkowski's successor as co-director (with Ebert) of the Coblenz Conservatory, from 1898 holding the title of royal professor. Wrote a symphony (1892), the overtures Der gefesselte Prometheus and Waldmeisters Brautfahrt, the choral work Das Geheimnis der Sehnsucht, a violin-concerto, a piano-quintet, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, songs, etc., and an orchestral version of Herzogenberg's Deutsches Liederspiel.

Heugel et Compagnie. An important music-publishing business in Paris, founded in 1834 by Jacques Léopold Heugel (1815–1883) and continued by his son Henri Heugel and (from 1891) also the latter's nephew, Paul Chevalier Heugel. Besides works by many famous composers, they have published the long series of methods adopted by the Conservatory and also the periodical Le Menestrel. G.

Heuser, Ernst (Elberfeld, 1863). Able Rhenish pianist and composer, pupil of the Cologne and Dresden Conservatories, and of Liszt, since 1887 professor at the Cologne Conservatory, besides conducting the Wagner-Verein and promoting other societies. Has written the opera Aus grosser Zeit, the choral works Der Blumen Rache (women's voices), Um Mitternacht and Wolken am Meer, orchestral and piano-pieces (including études).

Heuss, Alfred Valentin (Chur, 1877). Eminent Swiss critic and musicologist, trained at the Stuttgart and Munich Conservatories, as well as the Munich and Leipzig Universities, (Ph.D. 1903), from 1902 on the staff of the Leipzig Signale, from 1905 of the Volkszeitung and in 1912–18 of the Zeitung. In 1904–15 he was the able editor of the Zeitschrift of the Internationale Musik-Gesellschaft, with many valuable articles. In 1904, '07, '08 and '14 he prepared excellent program-books for the Bach Festivals at Leipzig, and edited Krieger's Arien for the Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst, xix. Author also of Die Instrumentalstücke des Orfeo u. d. venezian. Opersinfonien, 1903 (dissertation), Die Dynamik d. Mannheimer Schule, 1909 (in the Riemann Festschrift), and Bachs Matthäuspassion, 1909, besides analyses for Breitkopf & Härtel's Kleine Konzertführer of works by Bach, Handel, Pergolesi, Beethoven, Liszt and Bruckner, with a study of Beethoven (1921). He was active in the founding of the Union of German Music-Critics and was its first president. Since 1915 he has written a number of vocal works (choruses, songs and ballades).

Hewitt, James (1770-1827, New York). English violinist, from 1792 active in New York in concerts and theater-orchestras and as music-dealer. Wrote the ballet-opera Tammany, 1794, music for several plays, a melodrama on Collins' Passions (1795) and 2 descriptive overtures (Battle, 1792, and Storm, 1795). See works by Sonneck. A.

Hey, Julius (Irmelshausen, 1832-1909, Munich). Bavarian singing-teacher, pupil of F. Lachner and F. Schmitt, from 1867 engaged in association with Wagner and Von Bülow at the new Munich Conservatory, hoping to establish an extensive national reform in singing on Wagner's idealistic lines, but resigned when Wagner died in 1883. After 1887 he worked in Berlin. His great work was the large Deutscher Gesangunterricht, 4 parts, 1886. Also wrote Wagner als Vortragsmeister, 1911 (edited by his son). Many of his pupils became leading opera-singers.

Heyde, Erhard (Leipzig, 1883). Saxon violinist, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1904 concertmaster of the Kaim Orchestra at Munich and since 1914 in a similar post at Dresden.

Heyden, Sebald (1498-1561). 16th C.

Heydrich, Richard Bruno (n. Lommatsch, 1863). Saxon operatic tenor, pupil of Scharfe, Hey and Von Milde (originally, however, a double-bassist, trained at the Dresden Conservatory and in 1880-85 playing at Meiningen and Dresden). His stage-début was in 1887 at Sondershausen, followed by engagements at Weimar, Stettin, Magdeburg and Aix, from 1892 at Cologne and in 1896-1912 at Brunswick. Since 1912 he has directed a music-school at Halle, conducted the Liedertafel and been critic for the Allgem. Zeitung. Has written over 80 works, including the operas Amen, 1895, Frieden, 1907, Der Zufall, 1914, and Das Leiermädchen ('volksoper', not yet given), a symphony, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, a clarinet-sonata, several choral works, partsongs and songs.

Heyer, Wilhelm (Cologne, 1849-1913, do.). Prominent paper-manufacturer at Cologne and enthusiastic music-patron, for years connected with the governing board of the Conservatory and of various organizations. In 1906 he established a Musikhistorisches Museum which speedily became notable. It contains over 2500 instruments (including collections by De Wit, Kraus and Ibach), 3500 portraits, a remarkable library of books about music and about 20,000 autographs. The curator since 1909 has been Georg Kinsky, who is issuing an exhaustive catalogue (parts 1, 2 and 4, 1910-16, part 3 still in preparation). In 1912-19 A. Eber worked upon an edition of the autograph letters. Since 1913 the Museum has been open to the public.

Heyman, Henry (Oakland, Cal. 1855). American violinist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1872-77 playing in the Gewandhaus Orchestra there. On returning to San Francisco he began giving concerts with orchestra or ensemble (for the latter organizing a Quartet), producing many works for the first time on the Pacific Coast. In 1880 he made a tour of the Coast cities and in 1884 went to the Hawaiian Islands, where he received honors from King Kalakaua. In the San Francisco fire of 1906 his library and collection of souvenirs were destroyed, with all his works in manuscript. A.

Heyman, Katherine Ruth Willoughby. American pianist, born at Sacramento, Cal., and educated in both America and Europe, making her début at Boston in 1899 and since occupied with concert-tours (in 1905-15 in Europe). She has been active in making known American works abroad and unfamiliar European works (especially Russian) in America. Has written some songs. A.

Heymann, Karl (Filehne, 1854). Prussian pianist, pupil of the Cologne Conservatory and of Kiel. His career as a virtuoso, begun about 1870, has been mostly prevented by ill-health, though in 1872 he toured with Wilhelmj and after 1880 was again heard for a time. From 1872 he was director at Bingen, then pianist to the Landgrave of Hesse and in 1877-80 taught at the Hoch Conservatory, Frankfurt. Has written an able piano-concerto and various brilliant pieces.

Heymann [-Rheineck], Karl August (Rheineck, 1852). Rhenish pianist, pupil of the Cologne Conservatory and the Berlin Hochschule, since 1875 teaching at the latter and having the title of professor since 1894. Has written piano-pieces and songs.

Heyne van Ghizeghem. 15th C.

Hiebsch, Josef (Tyssa, 1854-1897, Karlsbad). Bohemian violinist, pupil of Dont, long teacher at the Teachers' Training School in Vienna. Author of a series of methods and text-books in singing, violin-playing, harmony and general theory (1880-93).

Hientzsch, Johann Gottfried (n. Torgau, 1787-1856, Berlin). Saxon singing-teacher, pupil of the Thomasschule, Leipzig, with later study of the Pestalozzi method in Switzerland, from 1817 teacher at the Seminary at Neuzelle (n. Frankfurt-an-der-Oder), from 1822 at the Breslau Seminary, from 1833 at Potsdam and in 1852-54 head of the Berlin Blind Institution. In 1828-37 he edited the school-music periodical Eutonia and in 1856 barely started another. Author of several books on teaching-methods and a plea for an annual Silesian music-festival (1825).

Higginson, Henry Lee (New York, 1834-1919, Boston). American banker, from 1868 prominent in Boston, where in 1881 he established the Boston Symphony Orchestra, supplying a large endowment and until 1918 personally supervising its activities. In the Civil War he attained the rank of major. A.

Hignard, Jean Louis Aristide (Nantes, 1822-1898, n. Tours). French composer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory (2d Prix de Rome, 1850). Wrote 11 short comic operas (1851-61, with 2 not given), the tragédie lyrique Hamlet, 1888 (written in 1868 with the purpose of illustrating some novel ideas), choruses and songs, besides Valses Concertantes and Valses Romantiques for piano (4 hands)

Hildach, Anna, née Schubert (n. Königsberg, 1852). East Prussian soprano, from 1878 the wife of the baritone Eugen Hildach (b. 1849), both teaching from 1880 at the Dresden Conservatory, from 1886 touring in joint-recitals and since 1904 together conducting a music-school at Frankfurt. In 1909 he gained the title of professor.

Hildebrand, Camillo (Prague, 1876). Eminent Bohemian conductor, pupil of the Prague Conservatory, from about 1900 teacher at the Hoch Conservatory in Frankfurt, then opera-conductor at Heidelberg, Mayence, Aix and Mannheim in turn, from 1912 in charge of the Berlin Philharmonic, in 1919-20 at Freiburg (Baden) as leader at the Opera, of the symphony-concerts and of the Chorverein and since 1921 conductor of the Blüthner Orchestra at Berlin. Has written the opera Verheissung, 1909, the fairy-play Firlefanz, 1919, orchestral works, etc.

Hiles, Henry (Shrewsbury, 1826-1904, Worthington). English organist and theorist, pupil of his brother (see below), whom for a time he assisted at Shrewsbury, then at Bury, in 1847-52 at Sunderland, from 1852 on a world-tour because of ill-health, and from 1859 in Manchester, where in 1863-67 he was organist at St. Paul's, from 1876 lecturer at Owens College (later Victoria University) and from 1893 professor at the Royal College of Music, besides conducting several choral societies in Lancashire and Yorkshire and in 1885-88 editing the Quarterly Musical Review. In 1882 he was one of the early promoters of the Nat. Society of Professional Musicians (later the Incorporated Society). Mus.D. of Oxford Univ. in 1867. Wrote the oratorios David, 1860, and The Patriarchs, 1872, the cantatas Fayre Pastorel, The Crusaders, 1874, and Watchfulness (women's voices), the operetta War in the Household, Psalms 46 and 96, an Installation Ode, 1892 (Victoria Univ.), several services, anthems, part-songs, glees (prize in 1878) and songs, the overture Harold (1893, with more or less of the opera), an organ-overture, an organ-sonata, 2 preludes and fugues, other organ-pieces and some piano-music. Author of several text-books in harmony and counterpoint (1879-1894). Sketch in Musical Times, 1900. His brother John (1810-1882) was organist at Shrewsbury, Portsmouth, Brighton and London, and author of four text-books and a dictionary of terms (1871). G.

Hilf, Arno (Bad Elster, 1858-1909, do.). Able Saxon violinist, trained by his father and at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1878 in the orchestra of the Moscow Musical Society, besides teaching at the Conservatory, in 1888 in similar positions at Sondershausen, in 1889-91 concert-master of the Gewandhaus Orchestra in Leipzig and from 1892 professor at the Conservatory (succeeding Brodsky). He was also leader of a Quartet.

Hill, Edward Burlingame (Cambridge, Mass. 1872). Eminent American composer, trained at Harvard University and under Breitner, Widor, Chadwick, Arthur Whiting and others, from about 1900 teacher and critic in Boston, and since 1908 instructor or assistant-professor (1918) in the music-division at Harvard University, where he has developed analysis-courses of importance. Has written the symphonic poem The Parting of Lancelot and Guinevere, 1915, the symphonic pantomimes Jack Frost in Midsummer, 1908, and Pan and the Star, 1914, Stevensoniana (4 orchestral pieces based on the Garden of Verses), 1918, a Poem for violin and orchestra, the choral work Nuns of the Perpetual Adoration, 1909 (women's voices), the anthem 'The Wilderness shall rejoice', 1915 (centenary of Allegheny College), several characteristic piano-pieces and songs. In 1916 he was an associate-editor of The Art of Music and has written many articles for various periodicals. A.

Hill, Henry (London, 1808-1856, do.). Able English violist, self-taught, from about 1840 prominent in London and in request at provincial festivals. He was in the opera-orchestra, the Queen's private band, Ella's Musical Union and similar ensembles. Alsager employed him for his Select Society and in the Beethoven Quartet (1845-46). Berlioz commended his playing and his instrument (English make) in connection with the first London performance of Harold en Italie. G.

Hill, Junius Welch (Hingham, Mass. 1840). American organist, trained by J. C. D. Parker and at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1864 engaged at several churches in Boston or near by, in 1884-97 music-director at Wellesley College, then for some years teacher in Boston and now retired at Los Angeles. Has written many choruses for women's voices and edited collections of pedagogical piano-music. A.

Hill, Karl (Idstein, 1831-1893, Sachsenberg). Hessian baritone, till 1868 in the postal service and then (till 1890) engaged at the Schwerin court-theater, besides singing at the Gewandhaus in Leipzig, at the Gürzenich Concerts in Cologne and in 1876 at Bayreuth (as Alberich).

Hill, Thomas Henry Weist- (London, 1828-1891, do.). Able English violinist and conductor, pupil of Sinton and King's Scholar at the Royal Academy, first appearing in 1847, then touring in the United States and on the Continent, from 1849 in orchestras under Costa at the Italian Opera, the Philharmonic and later Drury Lane and Her Majesty's. In 1873, '75 and '76 he was conductor at the Alexandra Palace, in '77 and '78 at Her Majesty's (English opera), in '78 and '79 at Mme. Viard-Louis' orchestral concerts and in '80 of concerts at Covent Garden, in all cases with much artistic enterprise. From 1880 he was principal of the new Guildhall School of Music, which he rapidly raised to a commanding position. Wrote some pieces for violin or 'cello. G (Weist-Hill).

Hill, Wilhelm (Fulda, 1838–1902, Homburg). Hessian pianist and composer, pupil of Henkel and Hauff, from 1854 settled at Frankfort. Wrote the opera Alona (2d prize in competition), a piano-quartet, 2 piano-trios, 2 violin-sonatas, a piano-fugue, piano-pieces and many effective songs. Memoir by Schmidt, 1910.

Hill, W., & Son. Celebrated firm of organ-makers in London, founded in 1755 by John Snetzler, followed in 1780 by his foreman Ohrmann and later by Nutt and Elliott. From 1825 William Hill (1800–1870) became partner, adopting the present firm-name in 1838). He was one of the first in England to use the long pedal-compass (to low C). The firm has built a notable list of fine instruments, including those in Ely, Worcester and Manchester Cathedrals. Its recent head was Arthur G. Hill (1857–1923), author of The Organ-Cases and Organs of the Middle Ages and Renaissance, 2 vols. 1883–91, and of many works on archæology. G.

Hill, W. E., & Sons. Noted London firm of violin-makers and dealers, founded about 1760 by Joseph Hill (1715–1784), who had five sons, all able players as well as craftsmen, the eldest, William Ebsworth Hill (1817–1895), first using the firm-name as now. The business is at present in the hands of his four sons, who have collaborated in preparing lives of Maggini (1892) and especially Stradivari (1909). G.

Hille, Eduard (Wahlhausen, 1822–1891, Göttingen). Hanoverian choral conductor, pupil of Heinroth, at first teaching at Hanover, where he led two societies (founder of the Neue Singakademie), then visiting Berlin, Leipzig, Prague, Vienna, etc. (having close relations with Marschner and Hauptmann), and from 1855 music-director at Göttingen, where he started a Singakademie and revived the academical concerts. Wrote the opera Der neue Oberst, 1849, choruses and songs, besides editing the Hanoverian Choralbuch, 1886.

Hille, Gustav (Jerichow, 1851). Prussian violinist, trained at the Kullak Academy and the Berlin Hochschule, from 1874 active in Berlin, in 1879 a member of the Mendelssohn Quintette Club in Boston, in 1880–99 taught at the Philadelphia Musical Academy, then (with Leeftson) started a new music-school there, but in 1910 returned to Germany. Has written 5 violin-concertos, a double concerto, 3 violin-suites, 2 sonatas, etc. A.

Hillemacher, Paul Joseph William (Paris, 1852), and Lucien Joseph Édouard (Paris, 1860–1909, do.), brothers. Notable French composers, regularly working in close collaboration. Both studied at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1876 and 1880 respectively). Have written the operas St-Mégrin, 1886, Le Drac, 1896 (as Der Fluthgeist), Orsola, 1902, and Circé, 1907, the short operas Une Aventure d'Arlequin, 1888, and Le Régiment qui Passe, 1894, incidental music to Harancourt's Héro et Léandre (1893) and George Sand's Claudie (1900), the pantomime One for Two, 1894 (London), the cantatas Judith, 1876 (by Paul) and Fingal, 1880 (by Lucien), the symphonic légendes Loreley, 1882 (City of Paris prize), and Ste.-Geneviève, the orchestral suites La Cinquantaine and Les Solitudes, a Passion Mystery (1887), piano-pieces and many songs. Authors of a life of Gounod (1905). They have used the pen-name 'P. L. Hillemacher'. G.

Hiller, Ferdinand von (Frankfort, [Oct. 24] 1811–1885 [May 12], Cologne). Distinguished Badense (Jewish) pianist, conductor and composer, pupil of Aloys Schmidt, Vollweiler and Hummel (visiting Vienna with the latter in 1827). In 1828–35 he lived in Paris, mixing with all the leading musicians of the day, making a name as an interpreter of Bach and Beethoven and teaching somewhat at Choron's Institute. In 1836–37, having returned to Frankfort, he took Schelble's place temporarily as conductor of the Cäcilien-Verein and entered upon composition on a large scale. In 1838–39 he was at Milan, with Rossini's help bringing out his first opera, in 1839–40 at Leipzig, where Mendelssohn took up his first oratorio with enthusiasm, and in 1841 studied church-music with Bainsi at Rome. In 1843–44 he conducted the Gewandhaus concerts at Leipzig during Mendelssohn's absence in Berlin. From 1847 he was town-musician at Düsseldorf and from 1850 in a similar position at Cologne. Here he became the foremost figure in the musical life of the Rhine Valley till his retirement in 1884. He was leader of the Gürzenich Orchestra and of the Lower Rhine Festivals as far as held at Cologne. In 1850 he founded the Cologne Conservatory (on the basis of an earlier school started by Dorn) and was then its efficient director. In 1852–53 he was invited to conduct Italian opera in Paris. From 1852 he repeatedly visited England as guest-conductor, and also made similar trips to Vienna, Petrograd (notably in 1870) and elsewhere. In 1849 he became a member of the Berlin Academy and in 1868 Bonn Univ. made him Ph.D. As a composer he belonged to the post-classical group with Spohr and Mendelssohn. His workmanship was uniformly elegant and often ingenious, with a prevailing gentility and often considerable charm, but he had no great individuality or capacity for expanded or weighty utterance. He was at his best in pieces of small dimension. Yet the impress of his choral and chamber-works, with his decided ability as conductor and teacher, exerted a widespread and useful influence for a time. His principal works are as follows (opus-numbers in brackets):

Vocal Works

Operas—Romilda, 1839 (Milan), Ein Traum in der Christnacht, 1845, Konradin, 1847 (both Dresden), Der Advocat, 1854 (Cologne), Die Katakomben, 1862

(Wiesbaden), Der Deserteur, 1865 (Cologne). Also incidental music to Görner's Prinz Papagei [183].

Oratorios—Die Zerstörung Jerusalems, 1840 [40] (Leipzig), Saul, 1858 [80] (Cologne). Also additional accompaniments to Handel's Deborah (1834).

Cantatas and choral works—for soli and orchestra: Die Lorelei [70], Ver Sacrum [75], Christnacht [79] (orchestrated by Petzold), Die Nacht [99], Palmen-sonntagmorgen [102], Nala und Damayanti [150] (1870, Birmingham), Prometheus [175] (1883), Rebekka [182]; for solo and orchestra: Hebrew Song (from Byron), with soprano [49], Gesang Heloise's, with alto and small orch. [62], Israels Siegesgesang, with soprano [151], Richard Löwenherz, with tenor [200]; for soli without chorus: Frühlingsnacht [139]; for chorus without soli: Gesang der Geister über den Wassern (from Goethe) [36], Pfingsten [119], Es fürchte die Götter (from Goethe) [193]; for men's chorus: Psalm 125 and 93 [60, 112], Das Ständchen [65], An der Vaterland [91], Aus der Edda (2 songs) [107], Ostermorgen [134], Es muss doch Frühling werden [136], Bundestied [174], Sanctus Dominus [192]. Also Die lustigen Musikanten [48], Pater Noster [61], etc., for chorus with piano or organ; many motets, quartets, part-songs, etc.

Over 100 songs.

Orchestral Works

Symphonies—1, (1830, Paris), 2, (1831, Paris), 3, Spring, in E min. [67] (1877).

Overtures—in D min. [32], A [101], Phèdre, Faust (1833), Fernando (1847), Prometheus (1849), Demetrius [145].

Suite, Scenen aus dem Soldatenleben [146]; Dramatische Fantasie [166].

Concertos—for piano: in A-flat [5], F-sharp min. [69], and C [113]; for violin, in A [152]. Also Fantasiestück for violin in A [152b].

Chamber-Works

String-quintet in G [156].

String-quartets in G [12] and B min. [13]. Piano-quartets in ? [1], F min. [3] and A min. [133].

Piano-trios in B-flat [6], F-sharp min. [7], E [8] and ? [9]. Also trio-serenades [64, 186].

Violin-sonata in A min. [172]. Also Suite in canon [86], Serenade [109], 2 Duos Concertantes (violin and piano) [2, 28] and Toccata [87].

'Cello-serenade in D min. [149]; Concertstück [104].

Piano-Works

Sonatas in C [47], ? [59] and G min. [78].

Suites—set of six [15], Moderne [144], Sérieuse [168].

Operette ohne Text (4 hands); several other 4-hand pieces. Also works for two pianos.

About 30 pieces of various sorts.

Rhythmatische Studien [54, 56]. Études, etc.

He was a frequent writer for the Kölnische Zeitung. Some essays were collected as Die Musik u. d. Publikum, 1864, Aus dem Tonleben unsrer Zeit, 2 vols. 1868, with a 2d series, 1871, and Musikalisches u. Persönliches, 1876. Also author of a sketch of Beethoven (1871), reminiscences of Mendelssohn, with letters (1874), Briefe an eine Ungenannten, 1877, Künstlerleben, 1880, Wie hören wir Musik?, 1881, Goethes musikal. Leben, 1883, and Erinnerungsblätter, 1884, besides a text-book in harmony and counterpoint (2d ed. 1860). He furthermore edited the letters of Hauptmann to Spohr and others (1876). G.

Hiller, Friedrich Adam (Leipzig, 1768–1812, Königsberg), son of the following. Saxon violinist and tenor, from 1790 theater-director at Schwerin, from 1796 at Altona and from 1803 at Königsberg. Wrote 4 light operas, 6 string-quartets, a piano-sonata, etc.

Hiller [Hüller], Johann Adam (n. Görlitz, 1728–1804, Leipzig). Important Silesian composer and author, educated at the Dresden orchestra of and Leipzig University, from about 1752 teaching in Leipzig, at first very humbly. In 1754–58 he was tutor in the household of Count von Brühl at Dresden, but then returned to Leipzig, where he gradually became prominent in the revival of musical life after the Seven Years' War. In 1763–78 he directed annual 'Liebhaber-Concerte', in 1771 started a singing-school, from 1775 undertook the giving of oratorios and in 1776 established 'Concerts Spirituels' (like those in Paris). In 1781 these enterprises were located in the new Gewandhaus, where he remained as conductor till 1785. Meanwhile since about 1760 he had been indefatigable as composer, especially of choral music, singspiele and songs. From 1789 he was cantor at the Thomasschule, at first nominally as Doles' assistant, continuing till 1801. His incessant practical activity is the more remarkable because he was subject to attacks of mental depression. He exerted a large influence by his interest in the song as an art-form and in the dramatic type of the singspiel or song-opera. Wrote the singspiele Der Teufel ist los, 1766, Lisuart und Dariolette, 1766, Lotchen am Hofe, 1767, Die Liebe auf dem Lande, 1768, Die Jagd, 1770, Der Dorfbarbier, 1771, Der Aerndtekrantz, 1771, Die Musen, 1772, Der Krieg, 1772, Das Jubelfest, 1773, Poltis, 1773, Das Grab des Mufti, 1779, and Der neue Gutsherr, 1781, a Passion cantata, Psalm 100, funeral-music in honor of Hasse (1783), a Choralbuch, 1793 (additions, 1794, '97), several collections of odes, part-songs and songs (from 1761), a symphony, partitas, etc., besides editions or arrangements of Pergolesi's and Haydn's Stabat Mater, Handel's Jubilate, Graun's Der Tod Jesu and Hasse's Pilgrime auf Golgatha (often with doubtful freedom), and of Weisse's Lieder für Kinder (1769). In 1766–70 he issued weekly Nachrichten und Anmerkungen, which was the first musical paper. He was also author of an Abhandlung von d. Nachahmung d. Natur in d. Musik, 1753, the first part of a dictionary of musicians (1784) [contains his own autobiography], a sketch of Metastasio (1786), an account of the giving of The Messiah at the Berlin Cathedral (1786), several Anweisungen or instruction-books (singing, violin-playing, etc.), an edition of Adlung's Musikal. Gelahrtheit (1783), etc. His influence as teacher was pervasive and lasting. Memoirs by Stierlin, 1848, and Peiser, 1894, and see various works on the development of the singspiel and lied. His autobiography has been reprinted by Einstein (in Lebensläufe deutscher Musiker, 1914). G.

Hiller, Paul (Paris, 1858), son of Ferdinand above. Author of Der Liedercyklus von A. F. von Hessen, 1910, Old English Tunes, 1911, a translation of Saint-Saëns' Déjanire and popular editions of three of Verdi's operas.

Hillmer, Christian Frederik (Copenhagen, 1845). Able Danish violinist, pupil of Schjöring, Lauterbach and Joachim, since 1872 in the court-orchestra at Copenhagen and also leader of a Quartet.

Hilpert, W. Kasimir Friedrich (Nuremberg, 1841-1896). Excellent Bavarian 'cellist, pupil of F. Grützmacher and the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1867-75 one of the founders of the Florentine Quartet (with Becker), from 1875 soloist successively at the Opera in Vienna and in Meiningen, and since 1884 professor at the Munich Conservatory and soloist in the court-orchestra.

Hilton, John (1599-1657). 17th C. G.

Himmel, Friedrich Heinrich (Treuenbrietzen, 1765-1814, Berlin). Prussian composer, pupil of Naumann (as protégé of Friedrich Wilhelm II), with study in Italy, from 1792 court-composer at Berlin and in 1795 court-director, but with visits to Sweden and Russia in 1798-99 and to Denmark, France, England and Austria in 1801-02. After 1806 he retired to Pyrmont and then to Kassel. In 1796 he had contact with Beethoven at Berlin. Wrote the operas Il Primo Navigatore, 1794 (Venice), Semiramide, 1795 (Naples), Alessandro, 1799 (Petrograd), and Vasco di Gama, 1801 (Berlin), the singspiele or operettas Frohsinn und Schwärmerci, 1801, Fanchon das Leiermädchen, 1804 (specially successful), Die Sylphen, 1806, and Der Kobold, 1811 (Vienna), the oratorio Isacco, 1791, a mass, Psalms and other sacred music, including a Trauer-Cantate for Friedrich Wilhelm II (1797), a symphony, a piano-concerto, a piano-sextet, piano-quartets, piano-sonatas and pieces, besides many songs that were long popular. Memoirs by Arnold, 1810, and Odendahl, 1917. G.

Hinckley, Allen Carter (Gloucester, Mass. 1877). Eminent American dramatic bass, pupil of Schachner and Saenger, appearing in concert and light opera from about 1900 in America and in 1903-08 engaged at the Hamburg Opera, with guest-appearances in Germany and England (at Bayreuth in 1905-07), and in 1908-11 prominent at the Metropolitan, New York, and Covent Garden, London, and later with the Chicago Opera Company, besides much concert-work. He has had notable success in the Wagnerian operas and has assisted at many premières. In 1917, after a two years' tour in South Africa and Australia, he became teacher in the Kansas City Conservatory.

Hindemith, Paul (Hanau, 1895). Gifted Hessian violinist and composer, pupil of the Hoch Conservatory, Frankfurt, since 1915 concertmaster at the Frankfurt Opera. Has written a piano-quintet, 3 string-quartets, 2 violin-sonatas, 1 each for viola and for 'cello, 3 1-act operas (given at Stuttgart, 1921), the song-cycles Melancholie (with string-quartet) and Die junge Magd, etc. His brother Rudolf (b. 1900) is well known as a 'cellist, from 1919 soloist for the Munich Konzertverein and since 1921 at the Vienna Opera.

Hinrichs, Gustav (Ludwigslust, 1850). Mecklenburger conductor, pupil of his father, Reissland and Marxsen, early playing violin in Hamburg orchestras, from 1870 active in San Francisco, in 1885-86 Thomas' assistant in the American Opera Company, in 1886-96 manager and conductor of his own opera-troupe (American premières of Cavalleria Rusticana, Pagliacci and Manon Lescaut), in 1899-1906 musical director at Columbia University, New York, and also in 1903-08 conductor at the Metropolitan. Has written the operas Der vierjährige Posten, 1877, and Onti-Ora, 1891, an orchestral suite, choruses and songs. A.

Hinshaw, William Wade (Union, Ia. 1867). Able American operatic baritone, pupil of Heritage, L. G. Gottschalk, Phelps, and Mareschalchi, appearing in concert in 1893 and in opera in 1899, in 1895-99 music-director at Valparaiso University (Ind.), in 1903-07 head of an operatic school in Chicago, in 1908-10 on concert-tours and managing the International opera-troupe, in 1910-13 engaged at the Metropolitan, New York and from 1917 president of the Society of American Singers, New York. In 1912 and '14 he sang at Wagner festivals in Gratz and Berlin. He assisted at the premières of Parker's Mona (1912), Damrosch's Cyano (1913) and Parker's Fairyland (1915). A.

Hinton, Arthur (Beckenham, 1869). Important English composer, trained at the Royal Academy, London, and under Rheinberger. He lived for some time in Vienna and Rome, and has twice visited Australia, Tasmania, Ceylon, Jamaica and America as examiner for both the Royal Academy and the Royal College. Has written the opera Tamara (not given), 2 children's operettas, the dramatic scenes Epipsy-chidion and Semele, symphonies in B-flat and C min., the orchestral suite Endymion, the fantasia The Triumph of Cæsar, the romance Porphyria's Lover, a piano-concerto in D min., a piano-quintet, a string-trio, a violin-sonata and suite, besides shorter pieces, a Chant des Vagues for 'cello, many striking piano-works, including a Rhapsody in B-flat min. and a Romance in A-flat, and about 50 songs. In 1903 he married the brilliant pianist Katharine Goodson. G, A.

Hinze-Reinhold, Bruno (Danzig, 1877). Prussian pianist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1901 teaching at the Stern and Eichelberg Conservatories in Berlin and in 1916 becoming director of the Weimar Conservatory.

Hipkins, Alfred James (London, 1826-1903, do.). Eminent English specialist on musical instruments, from boyhood (1840) in the employ of Broadwood & Sons, the London piano-makers, and throughout his mature life one of their ablest officials. He became not only an authority upon the history of the piano, but also a foremost exponent of the forgotten art of playing the harpsichord and clavichord, an original investigator of problems of scale, pitch and related topics in acoustics, a successful lecturer on instruments and a collector of them. He was intimate with an enormous number of musicians, especially pianists, and was himself a finished player. He was repeatedly engaged in connection with the large Expositions as examiner or judge (from 1851). He was on the governing board of the Royal College and curator of its museum, and also a fellow of the Society of Antiquaries. Author of valuable articles in the first edition of Grove's Dictionary, with annotations to the second (as far as 'Harpisichord'), and in the Encyclopædia Britannica in several editions, also of a Guide to the Loan Collection at Albert Hall, 1885, Musical Instruments, Historic, Rare and Unique, 1888, A Description and History of the Pianoforte, 1896, The Standard of Musical Pitch, 1896, and Dorian and Phrygian, 1902, besides numerous papers in the proceedings of learned societies. His rich collection of instruments went to the Royal College. G.

Hippeau, Édouard. Author of Berlioz, l'Homme et l'Artiste, 3 vols. 1883-85, Berlioz et son Temps, 1892, and a study of Saint-Saëns' Henri VIII (1893, in Renaissance Française).

Hirn, Gustav Adolf (n. Colmar, 1815-1890, do.). Able Alsatian physicist, author of La Musique et l'Acoustique, 1878 (against the idea that artistic beauty can be physically explained).

Hirsch, Karl (n. Nordlingen, 1858-1918, near Füssen). Bavarian choral conductor and composer, from 1876 school-teacher in Mittenwald, Tegernsee and Ending, from 1882 church-musician at Sigmaringen, St. Jumièr (Switzerland) and Munich, from 1887 leader of the Mannheim Liedertafel, in 1892-93 of the Cologne Liederkranz, from 1893 of both choral and orchestral societies in Elberfeld, from 1906 of choruses at Heilbronn and also director of the Music School, from 1909 of two choruses at Baden-Baden, from 1912 the same at Nuremberg and in 1915-16 of an cappella choir at Munich. Wrote an immense number of choral works, largely for men's voices, that have had widespread popularity, including cantatas like Die Krone im Rhein, Landsknechtsleben, Der Trompeter von Säckingen, Reiterleben, Der Rattenfänger von Hameln, Werinker, Bilder aus der alten Reichstadt, Vagantensang, etc., many choruses and part-songs, especially some, like Weihnacht and Ostern, for a cappella mixed chorus, and many songs.

Hirsch, Paul Adolf (Frankfort, 1881). Owner of a remarkable musical library at Frankfort and author of a Katalog einer Mozart-Bibliothek, 1906.

Hirsch, Rudolf (n. Preprau, 1816-1872, Vienna). Moravian critic, from 1843 a governmental official, after 1850 at Vienna. Author of Galerie d. lebenden Tondichter, 1836 (oddly callow) and Mozarts Schauspieldirektor, 1859. He wrote much for the Neuer Berliner Musikzeitung and the Wiener Zeitung.

Hirschbach, Hermann (Berlin, 1812-1888, n. Leipzig). Prussian composer, pupil of Birnbach, from 1842 in Leipzig, where his criticisms (in his Repertorium, 1843-46) made him many enemies, so that he gave up public professional work, though contributing to various periodicals. His abundant compositions were original and purposeful. They include 14 symphonies (Lebenskämpfe, Erinnerungen an der Alpen, Fausts Spaziergang, etc.), several overtures (Götz von Berlichingen, Julius Cæsar, Hamlet, etc.), an octet, a septet, 4 quintets (2 for strings), 13 string-quartets, etc., besides the operas Das Leben ein Traum and Othello.

Hirschberg, Leopold (in Posen, 1867). Prussian music-historian (also trained as a physician), since 1900 lecturer at the Humboldt Academy in Berlin. Besides issuing editions of many works of Loewe (songs, 3 vols., church-music, etc.), Marschner's ballades (4 vols.), Wagner's religious tone-poems, etc., he has written Loewe als Instrumentalkomponist, 1919, articles for the Zeitschr. für Musikwissenschaft (on Pöcchi, 1918, German military music, 1919), etc.

Hirschfeld, Robert (1858-1914, Salzburg). Moravian student of music-history, trained at the Vienna Conservatory and University (Ph.D. 1884), from 1882 lecturing on æsthetics at the Conservatory and from 1913 director of the Mozarteum in Salzburg. He championed a cappella music (as against Hanslick) in Das kritische Verfahren Hanslicks, 1885, and established 'Renaissance-Abende' to revive interest in it. Author also of a thesis on Johannes de Muris (1884), an address at the Mozart Centenary (1891) and a sketch of Cimarosa (1901), besides arrangements for the Vienna Opera of Haydn's Apotheker, Mozart's Zaide and Schubert's Vierjährige Posten.

Hirschmann, Henri (Ste.-Maude, 1872), using the pen-name 'V. H. Herblay'. Composer of the operas L'Amour à la Bastille, 1897, Lovelace, 1898, Rolande, 1905, Hernani, 1909, La Danseuse de Tanagra, 1911, and Le Petit Nanon, 1913, several opérettas (from 1904), ballets and pantomimes.

Hissem-DeMoss, Mary (California, Ky. 1871). Talented American concert-soprano, trained in Cincinnati and New York, first appearing in 1899 and since 1900 prominent in New York in recital and oratorio. In 1894 she married Lacy M. DeMoss. A.

Hitzelberger, Sabina (Randersacker, 1755-after 1807). Able Bavarian coloratura-soprano, wife of a flutist in the Würzburg court-band and engaged as singer there, with a season at the Paris Concerts Spirituels in 1776 and one at the Frankfort winter-concerts in 1783. Three daughters were also able singers.

Hlawatsch, Woizech Ivanovitch (Leditsch, 1849-1911, Petrograd). Bohemian conductor, trained at the Paris Organists' School, from 1865 variously employed in Bohemia and from 1888 at Petrograd as leader of two orchestras and a chorus, besides from 1900 being organist for the court-orchestra. Wrote the comic opera Oblava, many orchestral arrangements and dances, a Chopin-Suite for piano and orchestra, an orchestral suite, various characteristic piano-pieces, choruses and songs.

Hobrecht. See Obrecht.

Hochberg, Count von [Hans Heinrich Bolko, pen-name 'J. H. Franz'] (Schloss Fürstenstein, 1843). Silesian music-patron and composer, from about 1870 maintaining a fine Quartet at Dresden and in 1876 instituting music-festivals in Silesia. In 1886-1903 he was theater-intendant at Berlin, and in 1913 received the title of professor. Since 1903 he has lived at Schloss Rohnstock. Has written the opera Die Falkensteiner, 1876 (revised as Der Wärfwolf, 1881), the singspiel Claudine von Villabella, 1864, 3 symphonies, a piano-concerto, 3 string-quartets, 2 piano-trios and various choruses.

Hodges, Edward (Bristol, 1796-1867, Clifton). English organist, from about 1815 engaged at churches in Clifton and Bristol (from 1821 at St. Nicholas). In 1838 he went to Toronto, in 1839 became organist at St. John's Chapel in New York and in 1846-63 at Trinity Church, then returning to England. The Trinity organ, when the church was rebuilt in 1846, was made on his specifications. Wrote 7 services, 25 anthems, Psalms 91 and 122, and an Essay on the Cultivation of Church Music, 1841, besides early articles in English periodicals. G, A.

Hodges, John Sebastian Bach (Bristol, 1830-1915, Baltimore). English clergyman and organist, educated (from 1845) in New York, from 1854 minister in Pittsburgh, in 1856-59 teacher at Nashotah House (Wisconsin), from 1860 at Grace Church, Newark, and from 1870 at St. Paul's, Baltimore. Wrote excellent services, anthems, etc., edited The Book of Common Praise, 1868, and assisted in preparing successive editions of the Episcopal Hymnal. In Baltimore he instituted the first choir-school in the United States. His sister Faustina Hasse (d. 1896) was organist in Brooklyn and Philadelphia, and wrote a memoir of her father (1896). G, A.

Hoeberg, Georg (Copenhagen, 1872). Danish violinist, pupil of the Copenhagen Conservatory and of Halir (as Ancker Scholar), playing in the court-orchestra in 1897-1901, since 1900 teaching at the Conservatory and also since 1910 directing the Concert Union. In 1904-05 he concertized at Hamburg and Stockholm. Has written the opera Die Hochzeit in den Katakomben, 1909, a ballet, a violin-sonata, a Romanze for violin and orchestra, choruses and songs.

Hoeckh, Karl (n. Vienna, 1707-1772, Zerbst). Austrian violinist, pupil of F. Benda, from 1733 concertmaster under Fasch at Zerbst. Wrote 10 sinfonie, 18 violin-concertos, 7 duo-partien, 12 Capriccietti (with Benda), etc. See Sketch in Marburg's Beyträge, iii.

Hoehn, Alfred (n. Eisenach, 1887). Able Thuringian pianist, pupil of the Hoch Conservatory, Frankfurt, in 1910 gaining the title of court-pianist at Meiningen and taking the Rubinstein prize. Has written a string-quartet, a Psalm for baritone and orchestra, songs, etc.

Hoerter, Philippe (Strasburg, 1795-1863, do.). Alsatian composer, self-taught, from 1815 managing a music-shop in Strasburg and later playing double-bass in a theater-orchestra, but from 1829 teaching singing at the Protestant Gymnasium. Most of his about 100 works were destroyed by fire in 1860, but the cantata

Jehova and two in honor of Gutenberg, an overture, a string-sextet and some songs are extant. Anonymous memoir in 1864.

Hoesick, Ferdinand (Warsaw, 1867). Polish littérateur, educated at Heidelberg, Cracow and Paris, since 1905 living at Cracow. Author of a sketch of Chopin (1898), extracts from Elsner's reminiscences (1901), a comprehensive life of Chopin (3 vols. 1911) and one vol. of Chopiniana (1912), all in Polish.

Hoesslin, Franz von (Munich, 1885). Bavarian conductor, pupil of Reger and Mottl, in 1907-11 directing opera at Danzig and St. Gall, in 1912-14 concert-conductor at Riga and in 1919-20 at Lübeck, from 1920 in charge of the Mannheim Opera and since 1922 of the Berlin Volksoper, besides appearing elsewhere as guest-conductor. Has written various orchestral pieces, a clarinet-quintet, women's choruses and songs.

Höfer, Franz (Griesbach, 1880). Bavarian organist and composer, trained at the Munich Conservatory (till 1901), since 1909 organist at St. Emmerans Kirche in Ratisbon, from 1911 also teaching theory at the Music School and from 1919 leading the Liederkrantz. Has written the operas Sarema, 1904, Dornröschen, 1918 (fairy-tale), and Die Sünde (not finished), various masses, organ-pieces and songs, besides text-books in modulation (1916) and instrumentation (1913) and a new edition of Czerny's Schule der Geläufigkeit (1916).

Hoffman, Richard [father's name originally Andrews] (Manchester, 1831-1909, Mt. Kisco, N. Y.). Eminent English pianist, pupil of his father, De Meyer, Pleyel, Moscheles, Rubinstein, Döhler and Liszt, from 1847 increasingly prominent in New York as virtuoso and teacher, appearing most frequently with the Philharmonic Society. In 1862 he played two-piano pieces with Gottschalk and in 1875 with Von Bülow. Wrote about 100 effective salon-pieces, about as many songs, some part-songs and anthems, and Some Musical Recollections of Fifty Years (with memoir by his wife), 1910. G, A.

Hoffmann, Ernst Theodor [Amadeus] Wilhelm (Königsberg, 1776-1822, Berlin). Eminent East Prussian literary critic and romanticist, originally in civil service at Posen, Plozk and Warsaw (till 1806) and from 1816 in a legal post at Berlin. In music he had lessons from Podbielski, began teaching in 1806, from 1808 was theater-conductor at Bamberg, and in 1813-14 was conductor for Seconda's troupe at Leipzig and Dresden. In 1810 he wrote remarkably keen and witty articles for the Allgem. musikal. Zeitung (reprinted as Phantasiestücke in Callots Manier, 2 vols. 1814). He was admired by Beethoven, Weber and Schumann, and his numerous and varied romantic writings have exercised a wide influence. From him Schumann derived some of his imaginative impulse. Composer of the operas Scherz, List und Rache, 1801, Der Renegat, 1803, Faustine, 1804, Die ungeladenen Gäste, 1805, Lustige Musikanten, 1805, Liebe aus Eifersucht, 1807, Der Trank der Unsterblichkeit, 1808, Das Gespenst, 1809, Aurora, 1811, and especially Undine, 1816, besides the unfinished Julius Sabinus, a ballet and other stage-music, some sacred music, a symphony, an overture, a quintet for harp and strings, piano-sonatas, etc. Complete literary works, edited by Griesbach, 15 vols. 1889 (2d ed. 1905) and by others since. Musical writings, edited by H. von Ende, 1896. Memoirs or critiques by Hitzig, 1823, Rochlitz, 1826 (in Für Freunde d. Tonkunst), Funk, 1836, Ellinger, 1894, Istel, 1903 (in Neue Zeitschrift), Klinken, 1903, H. von Müller, 1901, '03, '12, Schaukal, 1904, Wolzogen, 1906, Sakheim, 1908, Kroll, 1909. G.

Hoffmann, Heinrich August (Fallersleben, 1798-1874, n. Höxter). Eminent scholar and poet, in 1823-42 librarian or professor at Breslau University and from 1860 librarian to the Duke of Ratibor. Wrote or edited several important works on German song-texts (Kirchenlied, 1832, Schles. Volkslieder u. Melodien, 1842, Gesellschaftslieder [16-17th C.], 1844), besides his original Kinderlieder (with melodies), 1843. G.

Hoffmann, Joseph (Ziegenhals, 1865). Silician teacher, long connected with the Berlin schools and active (with Gast) in perfecting the system of music-instruction in the Prussian schools. In 1913 he conducted a chorus of 7800 children at the celebration of Wilhelm II's 25th anniversary as emperor. Has edited various school text-books.

Hoffmann, Karl (Prague, 1872). Bohemian violinist, pupil of the Prague Conservatory, from 1892 founder and leader of the notable Bohemian Quartet (with Suk, Nedbal and Wihan, the last two now replaced by G. Herold and L. Zelenka). G (under Bohemian Quartet).

Hoffmann, Leopold (Vienna, ?1730-1792, do.). Able Austrian church-musician, from 1772 director at St. Stephen's, Vienna (where in 1789 Mozart secured the promise of the succession, but himself died first). Wrote abundantly and apparently with much ability, especially for orchestra and chamber-ensemble, his works being so popular as somewhat to interfere with the appreciation of those of Haydn. He was an early exponent in Austria of the Mannheim style. Some church-music, symphonies, concertos and trios are extant.

Hoffmann, Rudolf Stephan (Vienna, 1878). Austrian surgeon and musician, pupil of Zemlinsky, lately conductor of the Vienna Singakademie and the Philharmonic Chorus, writing a monograph on Schreker (1921), numerous articles, etc.

Hoffmeister, Franz Anton (Rottenburg, 1754-1812, Vienna). Württemberger church-musician and music-dealer, from 1784 in business at Vienna, from 1800 with Kühnel at Leipzig (Bureau de Musique, later bought by C. F. Peters), and after 1805 living again at Vienna. Wrote an enormous number of instrumental works, including 44 symphonies, 42 string-quartets, 18 string-trios, 12 piano-sonatas, concertos, etc., much church-music, and 9 singspiele, all marked by a pleasing facility. In 1800-03 he had close relations with Beethoven, as earlier with Mozart. See Riehl, Musikal. Charakterköpfe, 1853. G.

Hofhaimer, Paul von (1459-1537). 15th C. G.

Hofmann, Hans Ernst Johannes (n. Leipzig, 1867). Saxon church-musician, trained at the Thomasschule (Leipzig) and under Kretzschmar and Riemann, from about 1890 professor in the Oberrealschule in Leipzig and since 1906 cantor at the University Church, there establishing a noted choir, as well as in 1912 a student's orchestra. Author of text-books in church-history and hymnology.

Hofmann, Heinrich Karl Johann (Berlin, 1842-1902, Gross-Tabarz). Eminent Prussian pianist and composer, trained at Kullak's Academy, Berlin, teaching in Berlin until after 1870 and then absorbed in composition. In 1882 he became a member of the Berlin Akademie and in 1898 of the Senate. His works include the following:

Operas—Cartouche, 1869, Der Matador, 1872, Armin, 1872, Aennchen von Tharau, 1878, Wilhelm von Oranien, 1882, Donna Diana, 1886, Lully, 1889 (comic).

Cantatas—Nornengesang, Märchen von der schönen Melusine, Aschenbrödel, Selig sind die Todten, Festgesang, Haralds Brautfahrt, Editha, Johanna von Orleans, Waldräulein, and the secular oratorio Prometheus (1896).

Other choral works—Champagnerlied (men's voices); many part-songs for mixed or men's chorus.

Lieder Raouls le Preux an Iolanthe von Navarre (baritone and orch.); Die Verlassene (soprano and orch.). Also many songs.

For orchestra—symphony, Frühjoh; suites, Hongroise, Im Schlosshof; Schauspielouvertüre; 2 Serenades for strings (1 with flute); scherzo, Irrlichter und Kobolde; Huldigungsmarsch; Trauermarsch; Bilder aus Norden; 3 Charakterstücke. Also 'cello-concerto; Konzertstück for flute.

Chamber-works—octet for strings and wind; string-sextet; piano-quartet; piano-trio.

For piano (4 hands)—Fughette, Menuet und Festmarsch; Walzer und Kosakenmarsch; Italienische Liebesnovelle; Steppenbilder; Aus meinem Tagebuche; Der Trompeter von Säckingen; Ekkehard; Waldmärchen; 3 sonatas; Kirmes; Zum Wiegenfeste; Romantische Suite; Idyllen; ballet-suite, Atalante. Also many pieces for piano solo.

G.

Hofmann, Josef Casimir (n. Cracow, 1876). Distinguished Galician pianist, son of a professor in the Warsaw Conservatory. Under his father's early instruction he developed with extraordinary precocity, appearing in public at six, making a wide Continental tour at nine and visiting America at twelve (over 50 concerts). On the last tour the strain was so great that his health gave way and he then retired for six years, studying under Urban and Moszkowski in Berlin and part of the time with Rubinstein at Dresden. In 1894 he resumed concert-tours throughout Europe and America, displaying a notable poise, maturity and breadth of conception. He now stands out as one of the greatest artists of the time. Since 1898 he has lived much in America, and in 1905 married Marie

C. Eustis, daughter of a former ambassador to France. Has written a symphony in E, 5 piano-concertos (from 1898), 2 sonatas, variations, a fugue and many other pieces. Some early works were put forth under the pseudonym 'Dvorsky'. Author of books on piano-playing (1898, 1900, '14). G, A.

Hofmann, Richard (Delitzsch, 1844-1918, Leipzig). Saxon violinist, pupil of Dreyschock, Ellsigg and Jadassohn, from 1863 playing in Berlin orchestras and from 1866 in Leipzig. In 1880-83 he directed the Singakademie there and from 1904 taught at the Conservatory, gaining the title of professor at the same time. Besides being an effective teacher he prepared a series of text-books and methods for many individual instruments, a valuable general Instrumentationslehre 1893 (3d ed. 1907) and a guide to violin- and viola-works (1909).

Hofmeister, Friedrich (Strehlen, 1782-1864, n. Leipzig). Silesian music-publisher at Leipzig (from 1807). Since 1830 the house has issued a Musikalisch-literarischer Monatsbericht of importance, which since 1852 has been supplemented by a similar Jahresbericht. Furthermore, his son Adolf (d. 1870) prepared a 3d, augmented edition of Whistling's Handbuch d. musikal. Litteratur in 1845 and began issuing supplementary volumes from time to time. The policy of supplying this valuable bibliographical information has been continued by the later proprietors, Albert Röthing (1845-1907) and Karl Günther (since 1905).

Hogarth, George (n. Oxtou, 1783-1870, London), son-in-law of the publisher George Thomson. Scottish critic, originally a lawyer in Edinburgh, but from 1830 in literary work at London, where from 1836 he was much associated with Dickens (his son-in-law). An amateur musician from his youth, in 1815 he helped to promote the Edinburgh Festival, from 1830 wrote for the Harmonicon, from 1834 for the Morning Chronicle, in 1846-66 for the Daily News (edited by Dickens) and at times for several other papers. Author of Musical History, Biography and Criticism, 1835 (2d ed. 1838), Memoirs of the Musical Drama, 1838, How's Book of British Song, 2 vols. 1845, The Philharmonic Society of London, 1813-62, 1862, and a life of Beethoven. G.

Hohenemser, Richard Heinrich (Frankfort, 1870). Hessian musicologist, trained at Berlin and Munich Universities (Ph.D. 1899), from 1905 living at Berlin and from 1919 at Frankfurt. Author of the thesis Welche Einflüsse hatte d. Wiederbelebung d. älteren Tonkunst im 19. Jahrh. auf d. deutschen Komponisten?, 1900, and a notable life of Cherubini (1913), with numerous articles in the I. M. G. Sammelbde. and Musik (on Brahms, the Schumanns and Beethoven, especially in their relation to folk-music).

Hohlfeld, Otto (Zeulenroda, 1854-1895, Darmstadt). Saxon violinist, pupil of the Dresden Conservatory, at first playing in the court-orchestra there and from 1877 concertmaster at the Darmstadt Opera, with several tours as virtuoso. Wrote a string-quartet, Elegien for violin and for trombone and organ, Phantasie-stücke for horn, Zigeunerklänge for piano, songs, etc.

Hohnstock, Carl (Brunswick, 1828-1889, do.). Violinist and pianist, appearing in Germany from 1846, in 1848-60 active in Philadelphia and then settling in Blankenburg. Wrote symphonies, overtures, concertos for violin and for piano, etc. His sister Adelaide (d. 1856), a good pianist, came with him to Philadelphia. A.

Hol, Richard (Amsterdam, 1825-1904, Utrecht). Eminent Dutch pianist, organist and composer, pupil of Martens and Bertelman, with some study in Germany, from about 1850 teacher at Amsterdam, where from 1856 he led the Mannenkoor and chorus of the Music-Promotion Society. In 1862 he followed Kufferaath as town-musician at Utrecht, in 1869 becoming cathedral-organist and in 1875 director of the Conservatory, besides conducting the Hague Diligentia and the Amsterdam Classical Concerts. He was the recipient of numerous honors in Holland and abroad. Wrote the operas Floris V, 1892, and Uit de Branding, 1894, the oratorio David, 4 symphonies, several overtures and other orchestral pieces, chamber-music, choral ballads (as De vliegende Hollander), excellent choruses, masses and a cappella motets, piano-works and songs. Author of a life of Sweelinck (1860) and of articles in the Dutch Cicilia, and in 1886-1900 editor of Het Orgel. Memoir by Nolthenius, 1904.

Holborne, Antony and William. 17th C. G.

Holbrooke, Josef (Croydon, 1878). English composer, trained at the Royal Academy, London, in 1898 touring in Scotland with A. Lloyd and in 1899-1900 conducting theater-orchestras, since then absorbed in composition, usually of a strikingly independent and even radical kind. Has written the operas Pierrot and Pierrette, 1909, the trilogy The Children of Don, 1912, Dylan, 1914, and Bronwen, Daughter of Ilyr, and the comic The Snob, the ballets The Moth and the Flame, Masque of the Red Death, 1913, Coromante, The Wizard and The Enchanted Garden, 1915, the symphonies Les Hommages, 1906, Apollo and the Seamen, and Dramatic Choral, 1908 (in memory of Poe), the tone-poems The Raven 1901 (revised, 1912), The Viking, 1901, Ode to Victory, 1902, Ualume, 1904, Queen Mab, 1904, Byron, 1904, The Bells (with chorus), and The Skeleton in Armor, a Poem for piano and orchestra, a Dreamland Suite, the overture The New Renaissance, the fantasy The Haunted Palace, orchestral variations on 'Three Blind Mice', 'The Girl I left behind Me' and 'Auld Lang Syne', a violin-concerto, a piano-sextet-suite, the string-quartets Impressions, Belgium-Russia and Pickwick Club, the fantasie-concerto Gwyn-ap-Nudd, 1911, for piano, Mezzotints for clarinet, the piano-fantasies Java, Burma, Sumatra, Siam, Annam,

China (collectively The Orient), many other characteristic piano-pieces, the scena Marino Faliero, 1905, about 100 songs (many with orchestra), etc. G. A.

Holden, Smollet. Irish music-publisher in Dublin, issuing collections of Irish, Welsh and Masonic Songs, etc. (from about 1805). G.

Holder, William (1616–1697). 17th C. G.

Hole, William and Robert. 17th C. G.

Hollaender, Alexis (Ratibor, 1840). Silesian singing-teacher, pupil of the Berlin Akademie and of Böhmer, from 1861 teacher at the Kullak Academy, from 1864 also director of a choral society and from 1870 of the Cäcilienverein, from 1877 teacher at the Viktoriaschule and since 1903 at the Humboldt Academy. He gained the title of professor in 1888. Has written a piano-quintet, a violin-suite, various piano-pieces, many choruses and songs, besides a striking method for chorus-singing, and a teaching-edition of Schumann's piano-works. Alma Haas, the pianist, is his sister.

Hollaender, Gustav (Leobschütz, 1855–1915, Berlin). Eminent Silesian violinist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory and the Berlin Hochschule, from 1874 teaching at the Kullak Academy, Berlin (in that year touring in Austria with Carlotta Patti) and in 1878–81 giving trio-concerts with X. Scharwenka and H. Grünfeld. From 1881 he was concertmaster of the Gürzenich Orchestra in Cologne and teacher at the Conservatory, from 1884 also leader at the Stadttheater, besides playing in the Professoren-Quartett and becoming in 1892 its leader (following Japha). From 1895 he was the efficient director of the Stern Conservatory in Berlin. He made many concert-tours in Germany and the Low Countries. Wrote 4 violin-concertos, pieces for string-orchestra, a violin-suite and sonata, an Andante for flute, and many fine violin-pieces. G.

Hollaender, Viktor (Leobschütz, 1866), brother of the foregoing. Silesian composer, pupil of Kullak, for a short time theater-conductor in Berlin and since living there. Has written the operas San Lin and Tribly, the comedy Carmosinella, 1888, and 3 operettas.

Hollander, Benno (Amsterdam, 1853). Dutch violinist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, after tours from 1873 in France, Germany and Scandinavia, in 1876 settling in London, where in 1882 and '84 he was concertmaster at the German Opera (under Richter), from 1887 taught at the Guildhall School and since 1903 has conducted his own orchestra in symphony concert-series at Kensington (borough). Has written the symphony Roland, the orchestral pieces Drame and Comédie, 2 violin-concertos, a piano-septet (with horns), 2 string-quartets, a string-trio, a piano-trio, 2 violin-sonatas and other pieces, a piano-sonata, etc., and the opera Die letzten Tage von Pompeii (not given). G.

Hollander, Christian Janzone and Jans. 16th C. G.

Holle, Hugo (Mehlis, 1890). Thuringian writer, educated at Munich and Bonn Universities (Ph.D. 1913), with study under Berger, Istel, Haas and Reger, in 1913–14 the latter's substitute as leader of the Meiningen Singverein, in 1919–21 head of the conservatory at Heilbronn and then critic for the Stuttgart Neue Musikzeitung. Author of a study of the musical use of Goethe's lyrics (1914) and Die Chorwerke Regers, 1922.

Hollins, Alfred (Hull, 1865). English pianist and organist (blind), pupil of Hartvigson, E. J. Hopkins and Von Bülow, appearing with the Manns orchestra when but thirteen and in 1884 becoming organist at Redhill (n. London). In 1886 and '88 he visited America, the first time in a party of blind players under Dr. F. J. Campbell and on the second tour appearing with many leading orchestras. From 1888 he was organist at the People's Palace (East London) and also at a church in Upper Norwood, besides teaching at the Normal College for the Blind at the latter suburb. From 1897 he was organist at St. George's in Edinburgh (the organ being then first introduced into the church). In 1907, '09 and '16 he made tours to South Africa and Australia. Has written 2 organ-overtures, a rondo, 2 Grand Chœurs, marches, wedding-music, preludes and other organ-pieces, etc. Sketch in Musical Times, 1901. G. A.

Hollmann, Joseph (Maestricht, 1852). Able Dutch 'cellist, pupil of the Brussels and Paris Conservatories, since 1875 becoming widely known throughout Europe and America and settling finally in Paris. He is a member of the Légion d'Honneur and has received many honors. For him Saint-Saëns wrote his 2d Concerto. Has written 2 'cello-concertos and many pieces.

Holly, Franz Andreas (Luba, 1747–1783, Breslau). Bohemian composer, theater-conductor at Prague, Berlin and Breslau. Wrote 15 popular singspiele (from 1772).

Holm, Ludwig (Copenhagen, 1858). Danish violinist, pupil of his father, Svendsen and the Copenhagen Conservatory, with study-trips to Germany, from 1880 playing in the court-orchestra and in 1898 becoming its concertmaster (till 1917). Since 1906 he has been director of the Horneman music-school. Has written a violin-concerto, chamber-music, piano-pieces and songs.

Holmes, Alfred (London, 1837–1876, Paris). Talented English violinist, pupil of his father, precociously developed, playing in public at ten (with his brother Henry). In 1855 the two toured in Belgium, in 1856 in Germany from the Rhine to Leipzig (attracting special notice from Spohr at Kassel), and in 1857 successively at Vienna, in Sweden (two years), at Copenhagen and at Amsterdam. In 1864 they both went to Paris, where Alfred remained, but with a further tour in 1867 in Belgium, Holland, Germany and Russia. Wrote the opera Inez de Castro (accepted at the Opéra, but not given), the symphonies Jeanne d'Arc, 1867, The Youth of Shakespeare, 1875, Robin Hood, The Siege of Paris, Charles XII and Romeo and Juliet, and the overtures The Cid and The Muses, 1874. G.

Holmès, Augusta Mary Anne (Paris, 1849–1903, do.) Able Irish-French composer, largely self-taught, but with study under H. Lambert and Franck, from 1877 steadily making her way in Paris as a serious and enterprising composer. Wrote the operas La Montagne Noire, 1895, Astarte and Lancelot du Lac (last two not given), the dramatic stage-work Héro et Léandre, 1874, the cantatas La Vision de la Reine, Ode Triomphale, 1889, Hymne à la Paix, 1889, and Lutin, Psalm 114, 1873, the symphonic works Roland, 1877, Lutèce, 1878 (2d City of Paris prize), Les Argonautes, 1880, Irlande, 1882, Pologne, 1883, and Au Pays Bleu, 1891 (suite), and over 100 songs (including Les Sept Ivresses). Memoir by Barillon-Bauché, 1913. Some early works appeared under the name 'Hermann Zenta'. G.

Holmes, Edward (n. London, 1797–1859, in U. S.). English organist and critic, pupil and protégé of V. Novello, early associated with Keats, Lamb, Hazlitt and other writers, becoming a piano-teacher and organist in London, besides from about 1820 writing for the Atlas, Spectator, Fraser's Magazine and Musical Times. In 1827 and again later he visited Germany and Austria in quest of musical information, especially regarding Mozart. In 1857 he married the daughter of S. Webbe, Jr. From 1849 he was engaged in literary work in New York. Author of A Ramble among the Musicians of Germany, 1828 (3d ed. 1838), a remarkable Life of Mozart, 1845 (2d ed. 1878), a life of Purcell (in Novello's Sacred Music), an Analytical and Thematic Index of Mozart's Piano-Works, and important articles for the Musical Times (from 1846). G. (see also iii. 681), A.

Holmes, George (?1660–1721). English organist, from 1705 at Lincoln Cathedral, having previously been at Durham. Wrote anthems and an Ode for St. Cecilia's Day. G.

Holmes, Henry (London, 1839–1905, San Francisco), brother of Alfred above. English violinist, associated with his brother till 1865, then visiting Copenhagen and Stockholm and settling in London, where from 1868 he gave chamber-concerts and in 1883–94 was professor at the Royal College, and then migrating to America. Wrote 5 symphonies, an overture, a violin-concerto (1875), 2 string-quintets, violin-pieces, 2 sacred cantatas and songs. G., A.

Holmes, John (?–1638). 16th C. G.

Holmes, William Henry (Sudbury, 1812–1885, London). English pianist, pupil of the Royal Academy, London, and from 1826 professor there (W. S. Bennett, the Macfarrens, etc., among his pupils). Wrote symphonies, a piano-concerto (The Jubilee), a violin-sonata, many piano-pieces and songs, besides the opera The Elfyn of the Lake. G.

Holmsen, Borghild (Christiania, 1865). Swedish pianist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory and in Berlin, making her début in 1889 and touring often in Scandinavia and Germany. Has written a violin-sonata, 2 violin-romances, piano-pieces and songs. She lives in Christiania.

Holst, Gustav [von] (Cheltenham, 1874). English composer, trained at the Royal College, London, for a time trombonist with the Carl Rosa troupe and in the Scottish Orchestra, becoming music-master in various London institutions (since 1907 at Morley College). Has written the operas The Rake (1895), The Youth's Choice (1902), Sita (1906), Savitri, 1916, and The Perfect Fool, 1923, incidental music for the masque Dame Christian, 1909, and the Stepney Pageant, (1909), the symphony Cotswolds, 1900, the overture Walt Whitman, 1899, the symphonic poem Indra, 1903, the orchestral suites Beni Mora, 1910, Phantastes, 1911, in C, 1913 (for strings), The Planets, 1915, and Japanese, 1916, the orchestral pieces Song of the Night, 1905 (with violin), Invocation, 1911 (with 'cello). A Somerset Rhapsody, 1907, Songs without Words and Songs of the West, 2 suites for military band (1911), a ballet for The Perfect Fool (1918), a ballet-suite (1900), 2 quintets for wind (one with piano), Fantasiestücke for oboe and strings, 1896, the scenes Ornulf's Drapa, 1898 (baritone), and The Mystic Trumpeter, 1904 (soprano), the choral works Clear and Cool, 1897, King Estmere, 1903, Choral Hymns from the Rig-Veda, 1908–12, The Cloud-Messenger, 1910, Christmas-Day, Hecuba's Lament, Hymn to Dionysus, The Hymn of Jesus, 1917, Ode to Death, 1919, etc., a large number of choruses and part-songs, especially for women's voices, and numerous songs. See Musical Times, 1919. G., A.

Holstein, Franz Friedrich von (Brunswick, 1826–1878, Leipzig). North German composer, until 1853 in military service, then pupil of Hauptmann, traveling extensively and from 1859 settling in Leipzig. Wrote the operas Der Haideschacht, 1868, Der Erbe von Morley, 1872, Die Hochländer, 1876, and Marino Falieri (unfinished), an operetta (1845), the overtures Lorelei, 1855, and Frau Aventure, the scena Beatrice, a piano-trio and other chamber-music, a piano-sonata and pieces, part-songs and songs. He wrote the librettos for his operas, and other poems (published 1877, with biography). His will established a fund for the aid of struggling music-students. G.

Holten, Karl von (Hamburg, 1836–1912, Altona). North German pianist, pupil of J. Schmitt, Lallemand, Grädener and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1855 teacher at Altona and from 1874 at the Hamburg Conservatory, gaining the title of professor in 1899. Wrote a piano-concerto, a trio, a violin-sonata, a Kinder-sinfonie, piano-pieces and songs.

Holter, Iver Paul Fredrik (Gausdal, 1850). Able Norwegian conductor and composer, trained by Svendsen, at the Leipzig Conservatory and in Berlin (on scholarship), from 1882

Grieg's successor as director of the Harmonie in Bergen, in 1886-1911 conductor of the Musical Union in Christiania, in 1890-1905 also of the Artisans' Choral Union, and since 1897 of his own Choral Union, besides having charge of several Scandinavian festivals and in 1900 of the 'Northern Concerts' in Paris (with Svendsen). He has also taught at the Conservatory. Has written a symphony (1884), the idyl St. Hans Kveld (for strings), incidental music for Götz von Berlichingen (also as suite), romances for violin and orchestra, 2 string-quartets, the cantata Til Fædrelandet and 2 cantatas for men's voices, some piano-pieces and several songs.

Holy, Alfred (Oporto, 1866). Famous Portuguese harpist, son of the director of the Oporto Conservatory, but mostly trained at the Prague Conservatory, in 1885-96 playing in the opera-orchestra there, from 1896 at the Berlin Opera, from 1903 at the Vienna Opera and Philharmonic and since 1913 with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Has written about 35 harp-solos, chamber-music with harp and arrangements or studies for harp with orchestra, besides the comedy-opera Das Märchen von Glück, 1909. A.

Holzbauer, Ignaz (Vienna, 1711-1783, Mannheim). Able Austrian composer, self-taught, from about 1734 director for Count Rottal in Moravia, from 1745 director of the Vienna court-theater (his wife also engaged as singer), from 1751 court-director at Stuttgart and from 1753 the same at Mannheim. In 1747, '56, '58, and '59 he made professional trips to Italy. His very numerous works were highly esteemed at the time and commended by Mozart. Wrote 11 Italian operas (1753-82), including Nitteti, 1757 (Turin) and Alessandro nell' Indie, 1759 (Milan), besides Günther von Schwarzburg, 1776 (Mannheim) [see Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst, viii-ix], 5 oratorios, over 25 masses with orchestra, many motets and other church-music, a great quantity of concerted music for instruments (symphonies, quartets, trios, sonatas, etc.) [a string-quartet in Denk.d.Tonkunst in Bayern, xv]. He came to Mannheim when its instrumental development was at its height and joined Stamitz in giving it commanding influence. When the electoral establishment was removed to Munich in 1778 he remained at Mannheim. In his later years he became totally deaf. Autobiography in Cramer's Magazin, 1783, and Vossler's Realzeitung, 1790. Thematic list of 65 symphonies in Denkm.d.Tonkunst in Bayern, iii, 1. G.

Holzer, Ernst (Stuttgart, 1856-1910, Ulm). From 1887 professor at the Ulm Gymnasium. Author of Schubartstudien, 1902, and Schubart als Musiker, 1905, discussions of the musical writings of Varro (1890) and Philodemos (1907, in Philologus) and articles on the music-history of Württemberg, besides an unfinished work on that of Ulm.

Hölzl, Franz Seraph (Malaczka, 1808-1884, Fünfkirchen). Hungarian church-musician, pupil of Kessler and Seyfried, from 1827 teacher in Vienna, from 1841 choral conductor at Innsbruck and from 1843 director at Fünfkirchen Cathedral. Wrote the opera Die Colonna, 1847, the oratorio Noah, 1844, over 30 masses, 6 Requiems, much other church-music, a symphony, 2 overtures, quintets, quartets, violin-sonatas, etc.

Homer, Louise Dilworth, née Beatty (Pittsburgh, ?1872). Eminent American operatic contralto, pupil of W. L. Whitney, Sidney Homer, Fidéle Koenig and Lhérie, making her début at Vichy, followed by many appearances at Covent Garden, London, and the Monnaie, Brussels. From 1900 till 1919 she sang regularly at the Metropolitan, New York, with some trips abroad, besides a large amount of concert-work. One of her most signal successes was in Gluck's Orfeo at Paris in 1909-10. In 1895 she married the song-composer Sidney Homer. A.

Homer, Sidney (Boston, 1864). Gifted American song-composer, pupil of Chadwick and the Leipzig and Munich Conservatories, in 1888-95 teaching and lecturing in Boston, then going to Paris with his wife (see above) and since 1900 living in New York. Has written over 100 songs that are deservedly popular. A.

Homeyer, Paul Joseph Maria (Osterode, 1853-1908, Leipzig). Phenomenal Hanoverian organist, pupil of his father and uncle, with study at the Leipzig Conservatory and University. His recitals at Leipzig while yet a student made a great impression. After brilliant tours in Germany, Austria and Italy, from about 1880 he was organist at the Gewandhaus, Leipzig, and teacher at the Conservatory. Author (with R. Schwalm) of an excellent organ-method and editor of various organ-works of Bach, Mendelssohn and Schumann.

Homilius, Friedrich (1813-?). Noted Saxon hornist, pupil of Moschke and Kummer, from 1830 in the Dresden Military Band, and after 1838 in Petrograd, where till 1876 he played in the opera-orchestra, in 1873-99 taught at the Conservatory and for twenty-five years led the Philharmonic Society.

Homilius, Gottfried August (Rosenthal, 1714-1785, Dresden). Eminent Saxon church-musician, pupil of J. S. Bach, from 1742 organist at the Frauenkirche in Dresden and from 1755 cantor at the Kreuzschule and music-director for the three leading city-churches. In his day he was highly honored as church-composer, though he departed widely from the style of his great master. Wrote a Christmas oratorio (1777), 2 Passions, a cycle of church-cantatas, many motets, figured chorales, 3 Choralbücher, some organ-pieces and a method in figured bass. See Hasche, Magazin für sächsische Gesch. 1785, Held, Das Kreuzkantorat, 1894 (Vierteljahrsschr., with register of works), and Steglich, K. P. E. Bach u. Homilius, 1915. G.

Homilius, Louis (Petrograd, 1845-1908, do.), son of Friedrich above. German-Russian organist, 'cellist and pianist, trained at the Petrograd Conservatory, from 1870 organist at the Cathed-dral of Sts. Peter and Paul, besides in 1868-72 playing 'cello at the Opera, and from 1874 professor at the Conservatory. Published choruses, piano-pieces, songs and a Choralbuch.

Honegger, Arthur (Havre, 1892). French composer (of German extraction), pupil of R. C. Martin and L. Capet, since 1913 active in Paris as head of the ultra-modern group known as 'The Six' (the others being Auric, Durey, Milhaud, Poulenc and Taillefer). Has written the opera Mort de Sainte Alméenne, music for Méral's Dit des Jeux du Monde and Morax' König David (1921), the ballet Verite? Mensonge?, the 'mimic symphony' Horace Victorieux, the symphonic poem Pastorale d'Été, a Hymne for ten stringed instruments and other works for orchestra, a string-quartet, a Rhapsodie for piano, flutes and clarinet, sonatas for two violins, for viola and for 'cello, etc.

Hood, Helen (Chelsea, Mass. 1863). American composer, pupil of Lang, Chadwick and Moszkowski. Has written a string-quartet, a piano-trio, other trio-pieces, violin- and piano-pieces, part-songs and many effective songs. A.

Hook, James (Norwich, 1746-1827, Boulogne). English organist and popular composer, pupil of Garland, in 1769-73 organist and composer at the Marylebone Gardens, London, and in 1774-1820 in the same capacity at the Vauxhall Gardens, besides being for many years organist at St. John's, (Horselydown). Wrote the oratorio The Ascension, 1776, music for about 25 stage-pieces (1771-1809), hundreds of songs, catches, part-songs, etc., many of which had great vogue, organ-concertos, piano-sonatas and pieces, and a piano-method (1796). G.

Hook, E. & G. G. American organ-making firm, founded in 1827 at Salem, Mass., by Elias Hook (1805-1881) and his brother George G. Hook (1807-1880), and transferred in 1832 to Boston, where it acquired a fine reputation. In 1865, when Frank H. Hastings became a partner, the firm-name was changed to Hook & Hastings. A.

Hope-Jones, Robert (n. Chester, 1859-1914, Rochester, N. Y.). Gifted English organ-expert, originally trained as an electrical engineer, from 1889 absorbed in problems of organ-improvement. In 1903 he came to America, working first in Hartford, Conn., from 1905 in Boston, from 1907 at Elmira, N. Y., and from 1910 at North Tonawanda, N. Y. He invented and advocated many devices, some of which attracted much attention, and was the builder of several fine instruments. G (iii, 551-2), A.

Hopekirk, Helen (Edinburgh, 1856). Eminent Scottish pianist, pupil of Lichtenstein, Mackenzie, the Leipzig Conservatory, Leschetizky, Navrátil and Mandl, first appearing at Leipzig in 1879 and then with many leading orchestras in Europe. In 1883-1919 she lived in America, from 1897 as a favorite teacher in Boston, introducing many modern French works. Has written a piano-concerto, a Concertstück for piano and orchestra, 2 violin-sonatas and other pieces, 2 piano-suites and about 100 effective songs. A.

Hopfe, Karl (Barmen, 1872-1910, do.). Rhenish choral conductor, trained at the Berlin Hochschule and by Bruch, from 1895 leading societies in Remscheid and from 1897 two or more in Barmen. Wrote an opera, an orchestral suite, men's choruses, etc.

Hopffer, Ludwig Bernhard (Berlin, 1840-1877, n. Rüdesheim). Prussian composer, pupil of Kullak's Academy, Berlin. Wrote the operas Fritjof, 1871, and Sakuntala, the festival-play Barbarossa, 1871, the comedy Der Student von Prague, the choral works Pharao, Darthulas Grabgesang and Psalm 23, besides symphonies, overtures, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, songs, etc.

Hopkins, Edward Jerome (Burlington, Vt. 1836-1898, Athenia, N. J.). American promoter of popular music, self-taught, from the age of ten playing organs in various places (1856-69 in New York), in 1856 starting in New York the American Music Association (to promote interest in American works), in 1865 the Orpheon Free Schools, which during thirty years enrolled over 30,000 pupils, and in 1868 the Philharmonic Journal, which he conducted till 1885. He also gave many lecture-concerts throughout the country. Wrote several hundred works, including the operas Samuel, 1877, and Dumb Love, the symphony Life, a Child's Symphony (for strings), a piano-concerto, a piano-trio, 2 preludes and fugued fantasias for organ, Easter Festival Vespers for three choirs, two organs, orchestra, harp and cantor, a fantasia for five pianos, 3 church-music collections, an Orpheon Class-Book, etc. A.

Hopkins, Edward John (London, 1818-1901, do.). Eminent English organist, pupil of Hawes and Walmisley, but in organ self-taught. In 1826-33 he was a choirboy in the Chapel Royal and at fourteen held his first post as organist (in the suburb of Mitcham), passing in 1838 to St. Peter's (Islington) and in 1841 to St. Luke's (Soho). From 1843 he was organist at the Temple Church, where he remained much honored till 1898. Besides being associated with numerous societies and holding various posts of dignity, in 1882 he was made Mus.D. by the Archbishop of Canterbury and also in 1886 by Toronto Univ. Wrote several services, about 25 anthems (prizes in 1838, '40, '87), hymn-tunes and other church-music. Author of a notable treatise on The Organ, its History and Construction (with Rimbault), 1855 (5th ed. 1887), and editor of madrigals by Bennet and Weelkes and of the music in The Temple Church Choral Service. He also contributed many articles to the 1st edition of Grove's Dictionary. It is striking that he sang at the coronation of William IV in 1831 and also joined in Queen Victoria's Jubilee in 1897. G.

Hopkins, Harry Patterson (Baltimore, 1873). American composer, trained at the Peabody Conservatory, Baltimore, and by Dvořák, since 1899 teacher in Washington and organist at the Franklin Street Presbyterian Church, Baltimore. Has written 2 overtures, the orchestral fantasy The Dreamer, 2 suites de ballet, a piano-quintet, the choral work A Tragedy, piano-pieces and many songs. A.

Hopkins, John (London, 1822–1900, Rochester), brother of Edward above. English organist, trained as a choirboy at St. Paul's, London, in 1838 beginning a long series of appointments as organist (mostly in London) and from 1856 organist of Rochester Cathedral (following his cousin J. L. Hopkins). Wrote some church-music. G.

Hopkins, John Larkin (London, 1819–1873, Ventnor), cousin of Edward and John above. English organist, trained as choirboy at Westminster Abbey under Turler, from 1841 organist at Rochester Cathedral and from 1856 at Trinity College, Cambridge, and also to the University (Mus.D. in 1867). Wrote several services and nearly 30 anthems. G.

Hopkinson, Francis (Philadelphia, 1737–1791, do.). Distinguished American lawyer and publicist, educated at the University of Pennsylvania, from 1761 actively engaged as lawyer, and soon in politics, in 1776 one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence (representing New Jersey), in 1787 one of the convention that framed the United States Constitution and from 1790 U. S. District Judge. He was well known as poet, essayist and political satirist. From about 1754 his special interest in music is traceable and from 1759 he began to produce songs (7 published in 1788), thus making him the earliest composer in America. See monograph by Sonneck, 1905, and in I. M. G. Sammelbde. 1903. A.

Hopkinson, J. & J. London piano-making firm, founded in 1835 by John Hopkinson and his brother James, at first at Leeds, but from 1846 in London. The former retired in 1869. Their instruments won high commendation at the Exhibitions of 1862 and '78. In 1886–95 they also engaged in music-publishing. G.

Hoppe, Adolf (Kissingen, 1867). Bavarian organist, pupil of the Karlsruhe and Leipzig Conservatories, from about 1890 settled at Freiburg (Baden), where since 1892 he has been lecturer at the University, organist at the Luther- and Pauluskirchen and the Synagogue, and conductor of the academical singing-society and a chamber-music society.

Hoppe, Karl (n. Kattowitz, 1883). Silesian church-musician, pupil of Josef Stein and V. Kotalla. Has written masses and other church-music, an Orgelbuch zum Breslauer Diözesan-Andachtsbuche, Orgelbegleitung zu d. Einheitsliedern, etc., and an edition of Brosig's organ-works (1915), besides articles on church-music.

Horák, Eduard (Holitz, 1839–1892, Riva), and Adolf (Janković, 1850), brothers. Bohemian pianists, founders of the famous Horák Piano School in Vienna, Eduard directing it till 1892. They have published several works on piano-study, including Der Klavierunterricht in neue, natürliche Bahne gelenkt, 2 vols. 1892.

Horák, Wenzel Emanuel (Mšcheno-Lobes, 1800–1871, Prague). Able Bohemian organist, pupil of Josef Schubert and self-taught, from 1833 at various churches in Prague, chiefly the Teynkirche. Wrote several masses, a Requiem, motets, etc., that were highly regarded, besides Die Mehrdeutigkeit d. Harmonien, 1846.

Horn, August (Frieberg, 1825–1893, Leipzig). Saxon pianist, from 1862 in Dresden and from 1868 in Leipzig. Wrote a comic opera (1875), an overture, piano-pieces, men's part-songs and songs, besides many piano-arrangements of symphonies, operas, etc.

Horn, Camillo (Reichenberg, 1860). Bohemian critic, writing for the Deutsches Volksblatt in Vienna and teacher at the Conservatory since 1918. Has written a symphony, an orchestral scherzo, the scenas Thurselda and Wallada, 2 choral works and various choruses, a piano-sonata and pieces, songs, etc. He has conducted a choral society which was formed partly to produce his works.

Horn, Charles Edward (London, 1786–1849, Boston), son of Karl below. English singer and composer, pupil of his father and Thomas Welsh, from 1809 actor-singer and composer of operettas in London and Dublin. In 1832 he went to New York, where he produced ballad-operas (with some reduced and rearranged versions of others) at the Park Theatre and later taught and essayed music-publishing. After being in England in 1843–47, in 1848–49 he was conductor of the Handel and Haydn Society in Boston. Wrote over 25 operettas and similar stage-works, the oratorios The Remission of Sin (later given as Satan) and Daniel's Prediction, the cantata Christmas Bells, glees and many songs. G, A.

Horn, Johann Kaspar. 17th C.

Horn, Karl Friedrich (Nordhausen, 1762–1830, Windsor). Saxon teacher, pupil of Schröter, from 1782 in England as a fashionable teacher (from 1811 employed by Queen Charlotte), in 1823 becoming organist at St. George's, Windsor. With S. Wesley he prepared an edition of Bach's Wohltemperiertes Clavier (1810). G.

Horn, Michael (b. 1859). Benedictine church-musician, pupil of Abbot Sauter, from 1883 organist and teacher at Maredsous Abbey and since 1896 at the monastery of Beuron (Bavaria). Since 1902 he has edited the Gregorianische Rundschau, besides writing for many other periodicals. Has written much church-music and edited a collection of service-pieces for organ (3 parts).

Hornbostel, Erich M. von (Vienna, 1877). Austrian physiological psychologist, educated at Vienna, Heidelberg and Berlin (Ph.D., Vienna, in 1900). In 1905–06 he was Stumpf's assistant at Berlin. In 1908 he visited America to make researches among the Pawnee Indians, and has since devoted himself to problems of ethnic music. Since 1917 he has held the title of professor. Among his publications are numerous articles (many of them with Otto Abraham) on musical phenomena in Japan, Turkey, Tunis and the Bismarck Archipelago, as well as among the North American Indians, with several upon ethnic music in general. (Many of these are in the I. M. G. Sammelbde. or Zeitschr. 1903-09). In 1922 he began issuing (with Stumpf) a series of Sammelbde. für vergleichende Musikwissenschaft.

Horneman, Emil Christian (Copenhagen, 1841-1906, do.). Danish teacher, pupil of his father and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1860 active in Copenhagen, where he founded a Konzertverein and in 1880 also a music-school. Wrote the opera Aladdin, 1888, and other stage-works, the overture Heldenleben, ballads, songs and piano-pieces. Memoir by Hetsch (in Neue Musikzeitung, xxiii).

Horner, Ralph Joseph (Newport, Monmouth, 1848). English conductor, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1868 teaching in London, and in 1888-1905 at Nottingham as conductor of various societies and lecturer at University College. In 1879-90 he was much occupied as conductor of various opera-troupes. In 1906-09 he was similarly employed in the United States and has since worked at Winnipeg (Manitoba) as director of the Academy of Music and Arts, leader of choral societies, etc. Mus.D. of Durham Univ. in 1898. Has written the opera Amy Robsart, 2 comic operas, 6 operettas, 6 choral works, a symphony, an orchestral suite and other pieces, a string-quartet, a violin-sonata, piano-pieces and about 100 songs. A.

Hornstein, Robert von (Donaueschingen, 1833-1890, Munich). Badenese composer, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1873 professor at the Munich Conservatory. He was intimate with Wagner and Schopenhauer. Wrote the operas Adam und Eva, 1870, and Der Dorfadvocat, the ballet Der Blumen Rache, incidental music to Shakespeare's As You Like It and Mosenthal's Deborah, many duets and songs, etc. Memoir by his son Ferdinand, who also put together pieces by his father as incidental music for his own drama Buddha.

Hornung & Möller. A leading piano-making firm in Copenhagen, founded in 1842 by Conrad Christian Hornung (1801-1873) and from 1851 in the hands of H. P. Möller, who had been his assistant. Hornung's autobiography was published by F. Krebs in 1873.

Horsley, Charles Edward (London, 1822-1876, New York), son of the following. English organist, pupil of his father, Moscheles, Hauptmann and Mendelssohn, from about 1845 organist at St. John's (Notting Hill), from 1862 in Australia, where he was organist in the suburbs of Melbourne, and after 1870 in New York, whence he wrote articles on music in America for the London Musical Standard. Wrote the oratorios David, Joseph (both given at Liverpool) and Gideon, 1860 (Glasgow), the choral ode Euterpe, 1870 (Melbourne), music for Milton's

Comus, an overture (1845, Kassel), a piano-trio, etc., and a Text-Book of Harmony, 1876. G. A.

Horsley, William (London, 1774-1858, do.). Noted English glee-composer, mostly self-taught, from 1794 holding various appointments as organist in London, including the Girls' Orphan Asylum (from 1798, till 1802 as assistant to Callcott) and Charterhouse School (from 1838). In 1798 he was concerned in the founding of the Concentores Sodales, which continued till 1847, and from 1801 he was active in the revived Vocal Concerts, for which he wrote extensively. In 1813 he was a founder of the Philharmonic Society. Wrote 3 symphonies and other instrumental pieces, but was best known for his many glees (5 collections, 1801-07), a set of 40 canons, hymn-tunes (1820, '28) and songs, besides elementary text-books (1825, '47). He edited Callcott's glees (2 vols. 1824, with biography) and Bk. I of Byrd's Cantiones Sacrae (for the Musical Antiquarian Soc.). From 1829 he was intimate with Mendelssohn (see English translations of Carl Mendelssohn's Goethe und Mendelssohn). Horsley's son (see above) made a collection of his father's glees in 1873. G.

Horvath, Cecile, née Ayres (Boston, 1889). Gifted American pianist, pupil of her father, Safonov and Gabrilowitch, since 1910 appearing in Europe and America. She is the wife of the Philadelphia pianist Zoltan de Horvath. A.

Horwitz, Benno (Berlin, 1855-1904, do.). Prussian violinist, pupil of the Berlin Hochschule, Kiel and A. Becker. Wrote the symphonic poem Dionysos, chamber-pieces, large choral works, etc.

Horwitz, Karl (Vienna, 1884). Austrian student of music-history, trained at Vienna University (Ph.D. 1906) and by Schönberg, from 1908 theater-director at various places, and in 1911-14 at the Landestheater in Prague. With Riedel and Adler he edited the two volumes of the Denkmaler d. Tonkunst in Oesterreich (xv. 2, xix, 2) in which the effort is made to show that G. M. Monn rather than Joh. Stamitz was the founder of the revolution in instrumental style about 1750.

Höscheler, Arnulf (Wasserburg, Lake Constance, 1880-1917 in France). Gifted Würtemberger church-musician, pupil of Wilh. Weber and Heermann, writing 2 notable masses, an Easter Te Deum, an Ave Maria, a Vater Unser, etc., besides the pamphlet Reform d. kathol. Kirchenmusik, 1910.

Hösel, Kurt (Dresden, 1862). Saxon choral conductor, pupil of the Dresden Conservatory and Schulz-Beuthen, after short engagements at Münster, Freiburg and Breslau, from 1892 assistant-conductor at Bayreuth, and since 1895 director of Wagner concerts at Dresden, founder of the Philharmonic Chorus, leader of the Dreyssig Choral Union and in 1897-99 teacher at the Conservatory. Since 1907 he has held the title of professor. Has written the opera Wieland der Schmied, 1913, fine choruses and piano-pieces.

Hosmer, Lucius (South Acton, Mass. 1870). American composer, pupil of Chadwick. Has written 2 comic operas, 3 overtures, 2 orchestral suites, a Southern Rhapsody for orchestra, and songs.

Hostinsky, Ottokar (Martinoves, 1847–1910, Prague). Able Bohemian music-æsthetician, educated at Munich and Prague Universities (Ph.D. 1869), after living at Salzburg and Munich and in 1876 visiting Italy, from 1877 was teacher at Prague University, after 1892 full professor. Author of a short life of Wagner (1871), Das Musikalisch-Schöne, 1877, Die Lehre von d. musikal. Klängen, 1879, Ueber d. Entwicklung u. d. jetzigen Stand d. tschechischen Oper, 1880, Ueber d. Bedeutung d. praktischen Ideen Herbarts, 1883, Herbarts Aesthetik in ihren grundlegenden Teilen, 1890, Musik in Böhmen, 1894, and Volkslied u. Volkstanz d. Slaven, 1895, besides many essays on Bohemian music in periodicals.

Hothby, Johannes (?–1487). 15th C. G.

Hotteterre, Louis. Chamber-musician to Louis XIV and XV at Paris, but known as 'Le Romain' because of a sojourn in Rome. He was considered the best flutist of the early 18th century. Wrote sonatas, partite, trios, duets and dances for his instrument, besides several instruction-books (1699–1738). His brother Nicholas (d. 1695) was famous as oboist and bassoonist. Monographs by Carlez, 1877, Thoinan, 1894, and Mauger, 1912.

Houdard, Georges Louis (Neuilly, 1860–1913, Paris). French investigator of the neume-notation, writing a series of able monographs (1897–1912), in which he supported the view that every neume has a unit-value, so that groups represent rapid figuration. He was a pupil of L. Hillemaier and Massenet and also wrote considerable church-music.

Houghton, Evangeline Florence (Cambridge, Mass. 1873). American soprano, pupil of Edna Hall, Henschel, Randegger and Mrs. R. Lehmann, appearing in Boston in 1891 and in London in 1892 (as Miss E. Florence), becoming a favorite artist in concert and at festivals. In 1895 she toured in Australia and in 1898 on the Continent and in 1899 in America. Her voice has a phenomenally high range (to C in altissimo). In 1894 she married Alexander Crerar of Boston. G (under Florence).

Houseley, Henry (Sutton-in-Ashfield, 1851). English organist, playing at first at St. Luke's, Derby, and St. James', Nottingham, since 1888 organist at Denver Cathedral in America, where he is also choral and orchestral conductor. Has written 5 short operas, the cantata Omar Khayyám, 5 sacred cantatas, 6 orchestral pieces, a string-quartet, organ-pieces and songs. A.

Howard, Kathleen. Able Canadian operatic contralto, pupil of Saenger and J. de Reszké, from 1907 singing at Metz, in 1909–12 at Darmstadt, then touring through Europe, in 1913–15 with the Century Opera Company, New York, and since 1916 at the Metropolitan. In 1915 she assisted at the première of Parker's Fairyland. In 1916 she married Edward K. Baird of New York. Author of Confessions of an Opera-Singer. A.

Howard, Samuel (London, 1710–1782, do.). English organist, pupil of Croft (as choirboy) and Pepusch, playing at St. Bride's and St. Clement Danes' in London. Mus.D. of Cambridge Univ. in 1769. Wrote an operetta (1744), cantatas, anthems, songs and some piano-pieces. He assisted in preparing Boyce's Cathedral Music. G.

Howell, James (Plymouth, 1811–1879, London). English double-bassist, trained at the Royal Academy, London, and by Anfossi, from about 1830 teaching at the Academy, playing in leading orchestras and in 1846 succeeding Dragonetti at the Opera. G.

Howells, Herbert (Sydney, N. S. W. 1892). Australian composer of an orchestral suite, pieces for small orchestra, a piano-concerto, a clarinet-quintet, 3 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, 2 violin-sonatas, an organ-sonata, the choral work Sir Patrick Spens, songs, etc.

Hoya, Amadeo von der (New York, 1874–1922, Linz). American violinist, trained by Kotek, Kruse, Joachim, Sauret, Halir, Kogel and Taubert, appearing from about 1892 as concertist and for a time concertmaster in the New York Symphony Society, in 1894–96 Halir's successor as concertmaster at the Weimar Opera, and from 1901 concertmaster for the Linz Musical Union. Author of significant works on violin-technique.

Hoyer, Karl (Weissenfels, 1891). Able Saxon organist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1911–12 at the Reval Cathedral and then at the Jacobikirche in Chemnitz. Among his works are an Introduktion und Chaconne for organ and orchestra, a concertino for organ and strings, an organ-sonata, and Introduktion und Doppelfuge for two pianos, etc.

Hrimaly, Adalbert (Pilsen, 1842–1908, Vienna). Bohemian violinist, conductor and composer, pupil of the Prague Conservatory, from 1861 conductor at Gothenburg (Sweden), from 1868 at the Prague Opera and from 1874 at Czernowitz (Bukowina), where he led the Musical Union and directed the Conservatory. Wrote the operas Der verzauberte Prinz, 1871, and Scanda Dudák, 1896.

Hrimaly, Johann (Pilsen, 1844–1915, Moscow), brother of the above. Also a violinist and trained at the Prague Conservatory, in 1862–63 concertmaster at Amsterdam and from 1869 at Moscow, where he taught in the Conservatory, conducted its orchestra and led his own Quartet. He was widely valued as teacher. Wrote violin-studies and edited Mazas' Violinschule.

Hrimaly, Ottokar (Czernowitz, 1883), nephew of the above. Austrian composer of 2 symphonies, the symphonic poems Ganymed, Der goldene Topf and others, a piano-quintet, 2 string-quartets, sonatas for violin, for 'cello and for piano, etc. In 1908 he went from the Vienna Conservatory to Moscow.

Hubay, Jenő [Eugen Huber] (Pest, 1858), son of the following. Eminent Hungarian violinist, pupil of his brother and Joachim, from 1876 known as a virtuoso of high rank, from 1882 professor at the Brussels Conservatory and in 1886 succeeding his father as professor at the Pest Conservatory. Both at Brussels and at Pest he formed noted quartets, lately including Von Herzberg, Waldburn and Popper. Ph.D. of Klausenburg Univ. in 1913. In 1894 he married the Countess Rosa Cebraïn. Has written the operas Alienor, 1891, Der Geigenmacher von Cremona, 1893, A Falu Rossza, 1896, Moosröschen, 1903, Lavothas Liebe, 1906, and Anna Karenina, 1920, 2 symphonies (the 2d entitled 1814-15), 4 violin-concertos (1st, Dramatique, 4th, All' Antica), a Sonate Romantique, 8 Szenen aus der Czárda, Les Fileuses and many other notable violin-works. G.

Hubay [Huber], Karl (Varjas 1828-1885, Pest). Hungarian violinist and composer, professor at the Pest Conservatory and conductor of the Opera. Wrote the operas Szekler Mädchen, 1858, Lustige Kumpane, Des Königs Kuss, 1875, and Der Hofball, 1889.

Huber, Felix (?-1810, Bern). Noted Swiss composer of very popular songs under the titles Schweizer Lieder, Lieder für eidgenössische Krieger, Lieder für Schweizer Jünglinge, etc.

Huber, Ferdinand Fürchtegott (1791-1863, St. Gall). Another Swiss song-composer, whose work was commended by Mendelssohn. Memoir by Nef, 1898.

Huber, Hans (n. Olten, 1852-1921, Locarno). Distinguished Swiss composer, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, but developing with decided individuality. From 1874 he taught at Wesserling (Alsace), from 1876 at Thann and from about 1885 at the Basel Music School, where in 1896 he succeeded Bagge as director, retiring in 1918. His poetically nervous style linked him with both Schumann and Brahms, while he had some kinship as well with Wagner and Liszt. His works include the following:

Orchestral Works

Symphonies—Eine Tellysphonie, Böcklin, in E min. Heroische, in C, Akademische (originally for strings only), Romantische (or Der Geiger von Gmund), in A, Schweizerische, in D min.
Eine Lustspielouverture; the serenades Sommernächte and Winternächte; Römischer Karneval.
Concertos—for violin, in G min.; for piano in C min., C, D and B-flat.

Chamber-Works

Piano-quintets in G min. and G (Divertimento).
Piano-quartets in B-flat and E.
Piano-trios in E-flat, E, F and B-flat (Bergnovelle).
Also 8 trio-fantasias.
Violin-sonatas in C min., B-flat, D, G, E, D min. (Appassionata), G (Graziosa), A (Lirica), and one other.
Also Suite in G; Fantasie in G min.; 9 Romantische Stücke.
'Cello-sonatas in D, A (Pastorale), C min. and B-flat.
Also Suite in D min.; 3 Romanzen.

Piano-Works

For two pianos, 4 hands—3 sonatas; Improvisationen.
For 4 hands—Ländler vom Luzerner See; Romanzen; Zyklus; Ballet-music for Goethe's Walpurgisnacht; Aus Goethes West-östlichem Divan; Suite; Italienisches Album; Florestan; Variations on a waltz of Brahms; Ländliche Suite; Ballfest; Im Winter; Gita Govinda; Preludes and Fugues in all keys; Kindergarten; Aus den Alpen; etc.
For 2 hands—sonata (zu Maler Nolten); Serenade; Ländler; 8 Elegien; Studies on an original theme; 2 sets of études; many shorter pieces.

Vocal Works

Operas—Weltfrühling, 1894, Gudrun, 1896, Der Simplicius, 1912, Die schöne Belinde, 1916, Frutta di Mare, 1918.
Oratorio—Weissagung und Erfüllung, 1913.
Cantatas, etc.—Weihgesang (from Psalm 8); Aussöhnung (men's voices); Pandora; Meerfahrt (men's voices); Caenis (do.); 3 festival-cantatas; Hebräische Melodien (a cappella); 9 Serbische u. rumänische Volkslieder (do.); and many lesser works.
Many part-songs, duets and songs.

Sketches by Refardt, 1906 (in Monographien moderner Musiker, 1922. G. A.

Huber, Joseph (Sigmaringen, 1837-1886, Stuttgart). Württemberger violinist, trained at the Stern Conservatory, Berlin, and by E. Singer and Cornelius, from about 1860 in the court-orchestra at Löwenberg, in 1846-65 concertmaster of the Leipzig Euterpe, and from 1865 in the Stuttgart court-orchestra. As composer he was much influenced by Liszt and also by the poet Lohmann. Wrote the operas Die Rose von Libanon and Irene (neither given, but published), 4 short symphonies (one movement), etc. He sought to replace the older, 'architectonic' forms by those more plastic to the idea or impulse, that is, 'psychological'. In his scores he used no key-signatures.

Huber, Kurt (Coire, 1893). Swiss musicologist, trained at Munich University (Ph.D. 1917), author of a thesis on Ivo de Vento (1918) and Die Doppelmeister d. 16. Jahrh. 1918 (in the Sandberger Festschrift). Since 1920 he has lectured at Munich University.

Huberdeau, Gustave (Paris, ?1878). Eminent French operatic bass, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, making his début in 1898 and at once engaged at the Opéra-Comique, from 1908 at the Manhattan, New York, and since 1910 with the Chicago Opera Company. His repertoire covers most of the French and Italian works of the day. A.

Hubermann, Bronislaw (n. Warsaw, 1882). Brilliant Polish violinist, pupil of Michalowicz, Lotto and Joachim, in 1893 making a sensation at Amsterdam, Brussels and Paris, in 1894 at London, in 1895 at Vienna (with Patti) and in 1896-97 in America, then settling at Vienna, but making repeated tours with constant success, and now in Berlin. Author of Aus d. Werkstatt d. Virtuosen, 1912. G.

Hubert, Nicolai Albertovitch (Petrograd, 1840-1888, Moscow). Russian teacher and critic, pupil of his father and the Moscow Conservatory, in 1869-70 director of the classes of the Imperial Musical Society in Kiev, from 1870 teacher at the Moscow Conservatory, in 1881-83 becoming director. He has since written on historical topics and been music-critic for the Moscow Nachrichten.

Huberti, Gustave Léon (Brussels, 1843-1910, do.). Eminent Belgian composer, trained at the Brussels Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1865), in 1874-78 director of the Mons Conservatory, from 1880 teacher and inspector in the Antwerp schools, from 1889 professor at the Brussels Conservatory and head of a suburban music-school. From 1891 he was a member of the Belgian Academy and from 1893 of the Légion d'Honneur. Wrote the large choral works De laatste Zonnestral, 1874, Bloemardinne, Verlichting, 1884, Willem van Oranjes Dood, Kinderlust en Leed (symphonic poem with chorus) and others, a Symphonie Funèbre, a Suite Romantique and the orchestral pieces In der Gaarde and Triomfest (with organ), festival marches, etc., a piano-concerto, vocal scenas, an Andante and Intermezzo for 4 flutes and orchestra, various piano-pieces, the chorus Van Maerlantszang (men's voices a cappella), etc.

Hübner, Jean (Warsaw, 1696-?). Prussian-Polish violinist, pupil of J. A. Rosetter, from about 1715 employed by Count Kinsky, with whom he went to Moscow. There he was later chamber-musician to the Duke of Holstein and finally in the court-band of the Empress Anna Ivanovna (d. 1740). He is said to have been the organizer of orchestral and chamber-music at the court (German players only).

Hucbald (?840-930). 9-10th C. G.

Hüe, Georges Adolphe (Versailles, 1858). Eminent French composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1879). He at once demonstrated his command of expression by winning the Cressent prize in 1881 and that of the City of Paris in 1885, besides being early admitted into the Légion d'Honneur. Has written the operas Les Pantins, 1881, Le Roi de Paris, 1901, Titania, 1903, Le Miracle, 1910, and Dans l'Ombre de la Cathédral, 1921, the ballet Siang-Sin, 1922, a symphony, the overture Reverie, the symphonic poems Rubezahl, 1886, La Belle au Bois Dormant, 1894, and Résurrection, 1892, a Sérénade for small orchestra, a Romance for violin and orchestra, a Fantaisie for violin, the orchestral ballade Le Berger, the pantomime Cœur Brisé, 1890, various choral works and many effective songs. G.

Hueffer, Francis (Münster, 1843-1889, London). Eminent Westphalian author and critic, educated in literary history and music in Berlin, Leipzig, Göttingen (Ph.D. 1869), Paris and London, settling in the latter in 1870, contributing to the North British Review, the Fortnightly (till 1882) and the Academy (assistant-editor), and from 1878 serving as critic for the Times. Author of a critical edition of the works of the Troubadour Guillem de Cabestanh (1869), Wagner and the Music of the Future, 1874, The Troubadours, 1878, Musical Studies, 1880 (reprints of critiques), a life of Wagner (1881), Italian and other Studies, 1883, Half a Century of Music in England, 1889 (2d ed. 1898), and the librettos for Mackenzie's Colomba and The Troubadour, Cowen's The Sleeping Beauty and an English version of Verdi's Otello. From 1881 he was editor-in-chief of the 'Great Musicians' series (Novello), and he also translated the correspondence between Wagner and Liszt (1888, 2d ed. 1897). His early interest in Provençal literature led to his election to the French society Les Félibres, and in 1880 he lectured at the Royal Institution on the Troubadours. On the other hand, he was foremost in championing Wagner and in promoting the interest of the younger English composers. G.

Hug, Die Gebrüder. Important firm of music-dealers in Zurich, founded in 1807, but especially developed from 1863 by Jacob Emil Hug (d. 1909). They have branches throughout Switzerland and at Strasburg and Leipzig. They have emphasized the publication of choral works.

Hughes, Edwin (Washington, D. C. 1884). Gifted American pianist, pupil of Joseffy and Leschetizky, serving as the latter's assistant in 1909. In 1910-12 he concertized in America, then lived in Munich, playing often with leading orchestras and in recital, and since 1916 has worked in New York, in 1918-23 teaching at the Institute of Musical Art, as well as editing for Schirmer. Has written some songs and many articles for periodicals. A.

Hughes, Rupert (Lancaster, Mo. 1872). Versatile American critic and writer, educated at Cleveland, with some musical study under W. G. Smith, Kelley and C. W. Pearce. In 1898-90 he was critic for the New York Criterion and has since been active in several literary lines in New York. He has been connected with military life since 1897, in active service in 1916-18, attaining the rank of major. Author of the important Contemporary American Composers, 1900 (enlarged by A. Elson, 1915), The Love-Affairs of Great Musicians, 2 vols. 1903, and The Musical Guide, 2 vols. 1903 (later recast for The Music-Lover's Cyclopaedia, 1914), and editor of Songs by Thirty Americans, 1904 (made up of fresh works). Since 1892 he has published many songs and has written various piano-pieces, including a Funeral March for the American Dead in France. His novel Zal (1905) is a study of the psychology of the concert-pianist. A.

Hugo von Reutlingen. (?1285-1359). 14th C.

Hugo, John Adam (Bridgeport, Conn. 1873). American pianist, trained at the Stuttgart Conservatory, from 1897 touring in Europe, in 1899-1900 teacher at the Peabody Conservatory, Baltimore, in 1901-06 head of the European Conservatory there and teacher at the Woman's College. Has written a symphony, piano-concertos in F min. and C, a piano-trio, violin, 'cello- and piano-pieces, and songs, besides the operas The Hero of Byzanz and The Temple-Dancer, 1919. A.

Hugot, A. (Paris, 1761–1803, do.). French flutist, playing first at the Italiens and later in the Garde Nationale, and from 1795 teaching at the new Conservatory. Wrote many pieces for his instrument and a well-known method.

Hugueta y Tagell, Rogelio (Barcelona, 1882). Spanish 'cellist, appearing often throughout Spain and at Paris, Casal's successor as soloist in the Philharmonic concerts at Barcelona. Has written the overture Nérine, the orchestral suite Andalusian Scenes, 2 operas, a 'cello-sonata and pieces.

Huhn, Bruno Siegfried (London, 1871). English pianist, pupil of S. B. Mills, L. Alberti, C. C. Müller and Anna Lankow, appearing throughout England in 1881–89 and then touring in Spain, Italy, Egypt, India and Australia. Since 1891 he has been in New York, giving recitals from 1896 and becoming organist at different churches (now at Plymouth Church, Brooklyn), besides conducting choral societies. Has written church-music, choruses, part-songs and piano-pieces.

Huhn, Charlotte (Lüneburg, 1865). Hanoverian operatic contralto, pupil of the Cologne Conservatory and of Hey, making her début in 1889 at Berlin, followed by engagements from 1890 in New York, from 1892 at Cologne, from 1895 at Dresden and in 1902–06 at Munich, then retiring to teach in Dresden.

Hull, Arthur Eaglefield (Market Harborough, 1876). Able English organist and theorist, pupil of J. H. Wood, Matthay and C. W. Pearce, since 1904 organist at Huddersfield, principal of a music-school there and editor of The Monthly Musical Record. He is active in the British Music Society. Mus.D. of Oxford Univ. Author of Organ-Playing, its Technique and Expression, 1911, Modern Harmony, 1914, Harmony for Students, 1918, The Sonata in Music, and volumes on Bach, Scriabin, Three English Composers, Cyril Scott, etc., in The Music-Lover's Library, of which he is editor. Has also written the oratorio The Resurrection-Morning, a cantata, several organ- and piano-pieces, and edited the organ-works of Bach and Mendelssohn. A.

Hullah, John Pyke (Worcester, 1812–1884, London). Eminent English promoter of popular music-education, pupil of Horsley and Crivelli, in 1837–38 organist at Croydon, but soon absorbed in studying the elementary class-work of Wilhem in Paris, which from 1840 he paralleled in London at the Battersea Training School and Exeter Hall. His system attracted wide attention, with some opposition, and was steadily extended, so that St. Martin's Hall was built in 1850 for its demonstration (burnt in 1860) and the number of pupils in 1840–60 was 25,000. In 1844–74 he taught at King's College, also at Queen's and Bedford Colleges. From 1841 he had classes at Charterhouse School and in 1858 succeeded Horsley as organist there. In 1870–73 he conducted the concerts of the Royal Academy, and also for many years the annual school-children's festival at the Crystal Palace. From 1872 he was inspector of training-schools for the United Kingdom. LL.D. of Edinburgh Univ. in 1876 and member of the Florence and St. Cecilia Academies. Wrote the operas The Village Coquettes, 1836 (libretto by Dickens), The Barbers of Bassora, 1837, and The Outpost, 1838, motets, anthems, choruses, part-songs and songs, many of the latter very popular, and editor of many collections of choral music, including psalm- and hymn-books (1843–68). Author of text-books in singing, harmony and counterpoint, The History of Modern Music, 1862, The Third or Transition Period of Musical History, 1865 (lectures at the Royal Institution), The Cultivation of the Speaking Voice, 1870, and Music in the House, 1877, besides many articles in periodicals. Memoir by his (second) wife, 1886. G.

Hüllmandel, Nicholas Joseph (Strasbourg, 1751–1823, London). Noted Alsatian pianist, trained as a boy at Strasbourg Cathedral and later by K. P. E. Bach, after a year in Milan, from 1776 a prominent teacher in Paris, where he introduced German music and methods. In 1787 he married an heiress and retired, but lost his property in the Revolution and went to teach in London. Part of his loss was made up under Napoleon's régime. Wrote 12 piano-trios, 14 violin-sonatas, 6 piano-sonatas, etc.

Hüllweck, Ferdinand (Dessau, 1824–1887, n. Dresden). Fine Saxon violinist, pupil of F. Schneider, from 1844 assistant-concertmaster of the Dresden court-orchestra and also teacher in the Conservatory.

Hüllweck, Karl (Dresden, 1852), son of the above. Saxon 'cellist, pupil of Grützmacher, Reichel, Merkel and Schmale, from 1877 in the Dresden court-orchestra and teacher at the Conservatory. Wrote various works for his instrument.

Humbert, Georges (St. Croix, 1870). Swiss organist, editor and writer, trained at the Brussels and Leipzig Conservatories and the Berlin Hochschule, from 1892 professor of music-history at the Geneva Conservatory, and also in 1892–96 organist at Notre-Dame and from 1898 at the Temple at Morges, retiring in 1912. In 1893–1901 he conducted the Lausanne Orchestra and in 1894–96 edited the Gazette Musicale de la Suisse Romande, as also since 1908 La Vie Musicale. Author of Notes pour servir à l'Étude de l'Histoire de la Musique, vol. i. 1904 (two more in preparation), and translator of Riemann's Lexikon (1899, 2d ed. 1913), Harmonielehre (1899) and Asthetik (1906).

Humfrey, Pelham (1647–1674). 17th C. G.

Humiston, William Henry (Marietta, O. 1869). American organist, conductor and composer, pupil of Mathews, Eddy, Woodman and MacDowell, in 1889–91 and '93–94 organist at Lake Forest, Ill., in 1891–93 in Chicago, from 1896 at East Orange, N. J., and in 1906–09 at Rye, N. Y. In 1909–12 he was conductor for various traveling opera-troupes, and since 1912 has edited the program-notes of the New York Philharmonic Society, of which since 1916 he has been sub-conductor. In 1914 he directed for the MacDowell Club Mozart's Bastien und Bastienne (first time in America), in 1916 a program illustrating 'the lighter side of Bach' and in 1918 another Bach program, including the triple concerto in D min. Has written the overture Twelfth-Night, 1916, an orchestral suite in F-sharp min. (1911), a Southern Fantasia for orchestra, 1906, the scena Iphigenia, 1913, and many songs. He has specialized in the music of Bach, Wagner and MacDowell, collecting a notable library. A.

Hummel, Ferdinand (Berlin, 1855). Able and versatile Prussian composer, so early developed by his father that he was an expert harpist at seven and secured a royal grant for further study. In 1864-67 he made a concert-tour throughout Europe with his father and then (1868-75) had thorough courses at Kullak's Academy, the Hochschule and the Akademie, fitting himself for the career of composer and opera-conductor. In 1897 he received the title of royal director. Has written the operas Mara, 1893, Ein treuer Schelm, 1894, Angla, 1894, Assarpai, 1898, Sophie von Brabant, 1899, Die Beichte, 1900, and Die Gefilde der Seligen, 1917, incidental music for Die schöne Toledanerin, Wildenbruch's Willehalm and Das heiligen Lachen (1892), Sakuntala (1903) and the fairy-play Eine Reise ins Märchenland, the large choral works Columbus, Jung Olaf, Der neue Herr Olaf, Germanenzug and Das Geisterheer, the choruses Morgenvanderung (men's voices) and Frühlingslust (women's), a notable series of Märchendichtungen for soli and 3-part women's chorus (somewhat resembling those by Reincke), a symphony, the overture Columbus, a piano-concerto and Konzertstück, a piano-quintet, a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, a horn-sonata, 4 'cello-sonatas, 2 Phantasiestücken for 'cello, a Notturno for 'cello, harp and harmonium, a series of Phantasiestücken for harp, a piano-suite (4 hands), 2 concert-poloanaises, many other piano-works, etc.

Hummel, Johann Nepomuk (Presburg, 1778-1837, Weimar). Distinguished Hungarian pianist, son of a teacher who in 1786 became director of Schikaneder's small theater in the suburbs of Vienna. The boy was brought to Mozart's notice and for two years lived in the latter's house as pupil and protégé, rapidly developing into a striking performer, so that in 1787 he made his début at Dresden under Mozart's care. In 1788-93 his father took him on a concert-tour through Germany to Holland, Denmark and England (about a year in London, where he had lessons from Clementi), and on returning to Vienna he studied with Albrechtsberger and Salieri, besides having contact with Haydn and the young Beethoven. After a concert-trip to Russia, in 1804-11 he was in charge of Prince Esterházy's music, and then taught in Vienna. From 1816 he was court-director at Stuttgart and from 1819 at Weimar, whence till 1833 he often made tours (to Russia in 1822, to Paris in 1825 and '29, to the Low Countries in 1826, to Vienna in 1827, to Warsaw in 1828 and to England in 1830 and '33). His style as player was that of the Vienna school, neat, finished and unimpassioned, but he had dignity and force, with a gift for extemporization that was said to have rivaled that of Beethoven. His compositions number about 125 and are marked by solidity of structure and considerable wealth of ornamentation. They include the operas Le Vicende d'Amore, 1804, and Mathilde von Guise, 1810, 8 operettas or ballets, 2 cantatas, masses in B-flat, E-flat and D, some other church-music, an overture, a double concerto for piano and violin, piano-concertos in C, G, A min., B min., E and A-flat, several rondos, variations, etc., for piano and orchestra, septets in D min. (often called his best work) and C (Military), a piano-quintet and 2 quintet-serenades, 3 string-quartets, 7 piano-trios, 8 violin-sonatas, 8 piano-sonatas (3 for 4 hands), many rondos, caprices, fantasias, variations, etc., for piano, and an elaborate and thoughtful piano-method (1828). See memoir by Montag, 1837, article by K. Richter, 1883 (both in Neue Zeitschrift), and article by Kahlert, 1860 (in Deutsche Musikzeitung). G.

Hummel, Joseph Friedrich (Innsbruck, 1841-1919, Salzburg). Tyrolese theater-director, pupil of the Munich Conservatory, from 1861 engaged in turn at Glarus, Aix, Innsbruck, Troppau, Linz, Brünn and Vienna, and in 1880-1907 director of the Mozarteum at Salzburg, besides teaching at the Seminary there and leading the Liedertafel.

Humperdinck, Engelbert, (Siegburg, 1854-1921, Neustrelitz). Distinguished Rhenish composer, trained at the Cologne Conservatory and (as Mozart Scholar) by F. Lachner and at the Munich Conservatory. In 1879 he took the Mendelssohn prize and in 1881 the Meyerbeer prize, between these dates working in Italy, where he assisted Wagner (at Naples) in preparing Parsifal for publication. In 1885-87 he taught at the Barcelona Conservatory and, after short sojourns at Cologne and Mayence, in 1890-96 at the Hoch Conservatory, Frankfurt (Siegfried Wagner among his pupils) and wrote for the Zeitung there. It was at that time (in 1893) that he first disclosed his power as a dramatic composer. From 1896 he lived quietly at Boppard and in 1900 became head of the Akademische Meisterschule in Berlin, member of the senate of the Akademie and from 1913 its acting-president. Wrote the operas Hänsel und Gretel, 1893, Die sieben Geislein, 1897 (fairy-play for children, with piano-accompaniment), Dornröschen, 1902, Die Heirat wider Willen, 1905, Die Königskinder, 1908 (first given in 1898 as incidental music to the spoken play), Die Marketenderin, 1914, and Gaudeamus, 1919 incidental music to Der Richter von Zalamea (1896), Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice (1905), Winter's Tale (1906), Tempest (1906) and As You Like It (1907), Aristophanes' Lysistrata (1908), Maeterlinck's L'Oiseau Bleu (1910) and Vollmöller's Mirakel (1911), the choral ballades Die Wallfahrt nach Kevlaar, 1879, and Das Glück von Edenhall, 1884, besides many choruses, a symphony in C, the orchestral Humoreske, 1879, and Maurische Rhapsodie, 1898, and various songs. His significance lies in his revival of interest in folk-song forms and his command of orchestral technique. Biographies by Münzer, 1906 (in Monographien moderner Musiker), and Besch, 1915. G.

Huneke, James Gibbons (Philadelphia, 1860–1921, New York). Eminent and versatile American littérateur and critic, originally educated as a lawyer, but musically trained by Cross, Mathias, L. Damrosch and Joseffy, in 1881–91 becoming the latter's assistant at the National Conservatory in New York. From 1891 he was critic for the New York Recorder, in 1895–97 for the Advertiser, and in 1900–12 for the Sun, in later years also contributing to the Philadelphia Press and the New York Times. Author of Mezzotints in Modern Music, 1899, Chopin, the Man and his Music, 1900, Melomaniacs, 1902, Overtures [in] Music and Literature, 1904, Iconoclasts, a Book of Dramatists, 1905, Visionaries, 1905, Egoists, a Book of Supermen, 1909, Promenades of an Impressionist, 1910, Franz Liszt, 1911, The Pathos of Distance, 1912, Old Foggy, 1913, New Cosmopolis, 1915, Ivory Apes and Peacocks, 1915, Unicorns, 1917, The N. Y. Philharmonic Society, 1918, Charles Beaudelaire, 1919, Steeplejack, 1919, Bedouins, 1920, and Mary Garden, 1920. These works, uniting knowledge in music, the drama and general literature with a brilliant and witty style, gave him a unique place among recent American essayists. A.

Hunke, Joseph (Josefstadt, 1801–1883, Petrograd). Bohemian church-musician, long choir-master of the court-chapel in Petrograd, writing much choir-music and text-books in harmony and composition.

Hunnis, William (?–1597). 16th C. G.

Hüntén, Franz (Coblentz, 1793–1878, do.). Rhenish pianist, pupil of his father, Herz and the Paris Conservatory, in 1821–37 a fashionable teacher in Paris and then at Coblentz. Wrote a piano-trio, 2 violin-sonatas, duets for violin and piano, many facile salon-pieces for piano and a method. G.

Hurel de Lamare, Jacques Michel (Paris, 1772–1823, Caen). French 'cellist, pupil of J. L. Duport, from 1794 playing at the Théâtre Feydeau in Paris, in 1801–09 touring in Germany and Russia, and retiring in 1815. Concertos attributed to him were by Auber.

Hurka, Friedrich Franz (Merklin, 1762–1805, Berlin). Bohemian tenor, from 1784 on the stage at Leipzig, in 1788–89 engaged at Stockholm and Dresden, and in 1789–1802 active at Berlin in connection with the Singakademie.

Wrote sentimental songs that were for a time popular.

Hurlbusch, Konrad Friedrich (Brunswick, 1696–1765, Amsterdam). North German organist, pupil of his father, after short terms at Hamburg, Vienna, in Italy, Munich, Stockholm (court-director, 1722–25) and Bayreuth, from 1727 teacher at Hamburg and from 1737 organist at the Oude Kerk in Amsterdam. Wrote several operas, cantatas, a Choralbuch, many odes, overtures, quartet-sonatas, various clavier-works, etc.

Hurlstone, William Yeates (London, 1876–1906, do.). Gifted English pianist and composer, trained at the Royal College, London, from 1896 recognized as a fine performer, though prevented by ill-health from making a career thus. Wrote the orchestral fairy-suite The Magic Mirror, orchestral variations on a Swedish and a Hungarian air, a piano-concerto in D (1896), a quintet for piano and wood-wind, a string-quartet (1899), a piano-quartet (1904), a piano-trio, 2 violin-sonatas, 4 English Sketches for violin and other pieces, 3 'cello-sonatas, sonatas for clarinet and for bassoon, 4 Characteristic Pieces for viola or clarinet, a clarinet-suite, a piano-capriccio in B min., 5 Miniatures and other pieces, the choral ballad Alfred the Great, part-songs and songs. G. A.

Hurstinen, Sulo (Helsingfors, 1881). Eminent Finnish violinist, pupil of Seväik and Halir, from about 1900 known as virtuoso in Germany and Scandinavia, and for a time teaching at the Helsingfors Conservatory. Has written an orchestral suite, violin-pieces and arrangements, and a method.

Husk, William Henry (London, 1814–1887, do.). English bibliographer, from 1853 librarian of the Sacred Harmonic Society (till its dissolution in 1882). Author of catalogues of the Society's remarkable library, 1853, '62, and '72, An Account of the Musical Celebrations on St. Cecilia's Day, 1857, a collection of Songs of the Nativity 1864, and many articles in the 1st edition of Grove's Dictionary. G.

Huss, Henry Holden (Newark, N. J. 1862). Able American pianist and composer, pupil of his father, Boise and the Munich Conservatory, from 1885 active in New York as concert-player and teacher, with many appearances elsewhere. In 1904 he married the soprano Hildegard Hoffman, and they have often given joint recitals. Has written a piano-concerto in B, a Rhapsodie for piano and orchestra (1885), a violin-concerto in C min. (dedicated to Maud Powell), a Romanza and Polonaise for violin and orchestra, a Wald-Idylle for small orchestra (1884), string-quartets in G min. and E min. (the 2d dedicated to Ysaÿe), a piano-trio in D min., a violin-sonata in G min. (dedicated to Kneisel), a 'cello-sonata (dedicated to A. Schroeder), a Berceuse Slave for violin (dedicated to Zimbalist), a Romanza in E for violin (dedicated to Maud Powell), a Ballade in F for piano, 4 Préludes en forme d'Études, about 30 other piano-pieces, an Ave Maria for soli, women's chorus, strings, organ and harp (1888), a Festival Sanctus (with orchestra and organ), 2 6-part choruses a cappella, several other choruses, The Seven Ages of Man, for baritone and orchestra, and about 30 songs. A.

Hussla, Viktor (Petrograd, 1857-1899, Lisbon). German-Russian violinist, brought up at Neuchâtel, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and of Thomson, from 1887 director of the Real Academia de Amadores de Musica in Lisbon. Wrote much for orchestra and for violin, including a Portuguese suite, 3 Portuguese rhapsodies, etc.

Hutcheson, Ernest (Melbourne, 1871). Eminent Australian pianist, precociously developed by Vogrich and Torrance (tour in Australia when but five), later trained at the Leipzig Conservatory and by Stavenhagen. In 1890 he again toured in Australia and from 1898 was highly successful in Germany, England and Russia. In 1900-12 he taught at the Peabody Conservatory, Baltimore (often giving two-piano recitals with Randolph), in 1912-14 was again in Europe and has since lived in New York, with many brilliant triumphs as concertist. Since 1911 he has taught at the Chautauqua summer-institute. Has written a symphony, a symphonic poem, an orchestral suite, a piano-concerto, a two-piano-concerto, a violin-concerto, piano-pieces and a text-book on technique, besides a Guide to Strauss' Elektra. A.

Hutschenruijter, Wouter (Rotterdam, 1796-1878, do.). Noted Dutch hornist, pupil of Hummel, Romberg and Dahmen, from about 1820 bandmaster of two organizations in Rotterdam, from 1826 founder and conductor of the Eruditio Musica and later of various other choral and orchestral societies, besides teaching in the Music School, serving as organist at S. Dominicus and becoming town-musician at Schiedam. He received various decorations and honors. Wrote an opera, 4 symphonies, 3 overtures (one for wind-instruments), a 'cello-sonata, over 150 pieces for wind-band (including a Konzertstück for 8 tympani with orchestra), masses, cantatas and songs. G.

Hutschenruijter, Wouter (Rotterdam, 1859), grandson (?) of the above. Eminent Dutch conductor, from about 1880 teacher at the Rotterdam Music School and conductor of a choral society, from 1890 assistant-conductor of the Concertgebouw-Orkest in Amsterdam and history-teacher at the Orkest-School, in 1894-1914 conductor of the Stedelyk Orkest at Utrecht, which he made famous and from 1917 director of the Rotterdam Conservatory. Has written much orchestral and chamber-music, piano-pieces and songs, besides lives of Richard Strauss (1898) and Weingartner (1906), and Orkest en Orkestspel na 1600, 1903.

Hüttenbreuner, Anselm (Graz, 1794-1868, n. do.). Styrian composer, pupil of Gell and Salieri (Schubert a fellow-pupil), in 1816-20 appearing as concert-pianist and from 1825 conductor of the Graz Musikverein. He was intimate with Beethoven and was present at his death. Wrote 4 operas (1819-37), 5 symphonies, 10 overtures, a quintet, 2 quartets, piano-sonatas and pieces, 9 masses, 3 Requiems, a vast quantity of choruses and part-songs for men's voices, over 200 songs, etc. His works were highly valued by Schubert. Memoir by Von Leitner, 1868.

Hüttner, Georg (Schwarzenbach, 1861-1919, Dortmund). Bavarian conductor, pupil of Schaarschmidt, from 1887 conductor of the Philharmonic Orchestra at Dortmund and later founder of the Conservatory there. He gained the title of professor in 1912 in token of his striking success with both.

Huyghens, Constantijn (1596-1687). 17th C. G.

Hyllested, August (Stockholm, 1858). Talented Swedish pianist, pupil of the Copenhagen Conservatory and of Kullak and Kiel, touring in Scandinavia in 1869 and '75, in 1876-79 cathedral-organist at Copenhagen and director of a choral society. In 1883-84 he was heard in England and in 1885-86 in America. From 1886 he was assistant-director of the Chicago Musical College and in 1891-94 taught at the Gottschalk Lyric School. In 1894-97 he again toured in Europe, then returning to Chicago. Has written the symphonic poem Elisabeth, 1897 (with double chorus), incidental music to Die Rhein-nize, an orchestral Marche Triomphale, 2 piano-trios, a piano-sonata, 2 suites and various pieces, transcriptions and songs. A.

Ibach. A piano-making business in Barmen, founded in 1794 by Joh. Adolf Ibach (1766–1848) and developed under slightly varying names by his descendants, including Rudolf Ibach (d. 1892). Originally organ-making was carried on, but this is now conducted by a separate branch of the family. See Das Haus Ibach, 1895.

Ibert, Jacques (Paris, 1890). French composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1919), writing the symphonic poems Noël en Picardie, 1914, La Ballade de la Gêlle de Reading, 1921, and Persée et Andromache, 1922, the lyric scena La Poëte et la Fée, 1919, a wind-quartet, a violin-sonata, organ-pieces, etc.

Ide, Chester Edward (Springfield, Ill. 1878). American composer, pupil of the Royal Academy, London, from about 1900 teacher in Springfield, Ill., and since 1916 at the Music School Settlement in New York. Has written the symphonic poem Pan's Dream of Syrinx, the orchestral suites Idyllic Dances and Winter, incidental music to Mackaye's masque Caliban, piano-pieces and songs (a few with orchestra), besides editing folk-songs for primary teaching. A.

Idelsohn, A. Z. (n. Libau, 1882). Russian (Jewish) student of Oriental music, trained at the Stern and Leipzig Conservatories, from 1905 living at Johannesburg (South Africa) and since 1907 at Jerusalem. Has edited 4 collections of Jewish songs (from 1908) and written Leitfaden d. europäischen u. orientalischen Musik, 1910, Die Maqamen d. arab. Musik, 1913 (I. M. G. Sammelbde.), Reste althebräischer Musik, 1913 (Ost u. West), and Der synagogale Gesang im Lichte d. oriental Musik, 1913 (Monatsblatt d. deutschen Kantoren-Verbandes).

Iffert, August (Brunswick, 1859). Noted singing-teacher, from 1884 in Leipzig, from 1891 at the Cologne Conservatory, from 1893 at the Dresden Conservatory, from 1904 at the Vienna Conservatory and since 1912 again at Dresden. Has published a method (1894, 4th ed. 1903) and a Sprechschule für Schauspieler u. Redner, 1910 (2d ed. 1916).

Iiffe, Frederick (n. Leicester, 1847). English organist, from about 1865 at Kibworth, from 1879 at St. Barnabas, Oxford, and since 1883 at St. John's College there and later also to the University, besides conducting the Queen's College Musical Society in 1883–1904. Since 1908 he has been examiner for the University. Mus.D. there in 1879. Has written the oratorio The Visions of St. John the Divine, 1879, the cantata Lara, 1885 (men's chorus), the choral works Sweet Echo, 1893, Morning, 1896, Evening, 1899, The Power of Song, 1901, and Via Crucis, 1905, a service for men's voices, various anthems (including 2 vols. of short pieces for parish-choirs), a symphony, 2 overtures, an orchestral Prelude and Fugue, a Serenade for strings, organ-and piano-pieces, many part-songs. Author of Critical Analysis of Bach's Well-Tempered Clavichord, 4 parts, 1896.

Ilinski, Jan Stanislaw (Romanovo, 1795–1860). Polish diplomat and poet, pupil of Salieri, Kauer and Beethoven, beginning composition in 1826 at Vienna. From 1853 he held high office at the Russian court. Wrote 3 masses, 2 Requiems and much other church-music (with orchestra), a symphony, various overtures, 2 piano-concertos, 8 string-quartets, etc.

Ilyinsky, Alexander Alexandrovitch (Tsarkoe Selo, 1859). Russian composer, pupil of the Berlin Akademie, since 1885 professor at the Conservatory of the Philharmonic Society at Moscow. Has written a symphony, an overture to Tolstoi's Tsar Feodor, 3 orchestral suites, a symphonic scherzo, Croatian dances for orchestra, incidental music to Sophocles' Edipus Rex and Philoctetes, the symphonic sketch Psyche, a string-quartet, the operetta The Fountain of Bakhiserai, the cantatas Strekosi and The Roussalka (women's voices), violin- and piano-pieces and songs. G.

Imbart de la Tour, Georges Jean Baptiste (Paris, 1865). French operatic tenor, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, first appearing in 1891 at Geneva, then at the Opéra-Comique, Paris, and latterly at the Monnaie, Brussels. In 1901 he toured in the United States with Grau's troupe. He sang at the premières of Lacombe's Winkelried (1892, Geneva), d'Indy's Fervaal (1897, Brussels) and Blockx' Tijl Uylenspiegel (1900, do.). His répertoire includes all the Wagner operas.

Imbert, Hugues (Moulins-Engilbert, 1842–1905, Paris). Eminent French littérateur and critic, from about 1860 associated with the progressive circle of musicians in Paris, from 1875 editor of the French section of Kufferath's Guide Musical (in 1900 his successor as general editor) and a prolific contributor to numerous other periodicals. Author of Profil des Musiciens, 3 series, 1888, '92, '97 (sketches of nearly 20 composers, mostly French), Symphonie, 1891 (critical essays), Portraits et Études, 1894 (letters of Bizet and additional biographies), Rembrandt et Wagner, 1897, La Symphonie après Beethoven, 1900 (in reply to Weingartner), Médailles Contemporains, 1902, and lives of Gounod (1897), Bizet (1899) and Brahms (1906, edited by Schuré). He contributed to the revival of interest in Berlioz and to French appreciation of Schumann and Brahms. G.

Immys, John (?1700–1764, London). English lawyer, early connected with the Academy of Ancient Music, in 1741 the founder of the Madrigal Society and from 1752 lutenist in the Chapel Royal, besides acting as clerk for Pepusch. He was a diligent collector of old madrigal-music. G.

Incledon, Charles Benjamin (n. Falmouth, 1763-1826, Worcester). English stage-tenor, in boyhood a choirboy at Exeter Cathedral, in 1779-83 in the navy, and from 1784 appearing in ballad-operas, first at Southampton and from 1786 in London, becoming popular both on the stage and in oratorio and concert. In 1817-18 he made a tour in the United States. He was specially successful in ballad-singing. G.

India, Sigismondo d'. 17th C.

Indy, Paul Marie Théodore Vincent d' (Paris, 1851). Distinguished French composer and teacher, pupil of Diémer, Marmontel, Lavignac and Franck, with much private study. In 1870-71 he saw active service (see his Histoire du 105<sup>e</sup> Bataillon, 1872). In 1872-76 he was organist at the town of St. Leu and in 1873-78 also chorus-trainer for the Colonne Concerts (also playing tympani in the orchestra). In 1871 he was one of the ardent spirits to found the Société Nationale de Musique, serving as secretary till 1890 and then as president. In 1894 he joined Bordes and Guilmant in projecting the Schola Cantorum, originally meant to promote Gregorian and a cappella church-music, but soon broadened into a full conservatory. In this he was at first co-director, but since 1911 sole director. In 1892 he was a member of the committee to revise the curriculum of the Paris Conservatory and was asked to become professor, but declined. Since 1912, however, he has led the orchestra-class there. At intervals he has acted as guest-conductor, notably in Spain in 1897, in Russia in 1903 and '07, and in the United States in 1905 and '21. He has long been a member of the Légion d'Honneur and officer in it since 1912. He is also an honorary member of numerous associations elsewhere. Since 1899 he has been inspector of musical instruction for the city of Paris. As composer he has obvious kinship with Franck in fundamental principles, but presents further interesting analogies with Brahms and, to a less degree, with Bach. His utilization of the resources of the orchestra rests upon profound study, as well, of Berlioz, Wagner and the French impressionists. Thoughtfulness, depth and dignity mark his writing generally.

His works include the following:

Orchestral Works

Symphonies—1, in G, Cévenole, with piano (1886), 2, in B-flat (1904), 3, De Bello Gallico (1918). Also the early Jean Hunyadi (1875).

Overture, Antoine et Cléopâtre.

Symphonic poems—Le Forêt Enchantée (1878); the trilogy Wallenstein (Le Camp de W., Max et Thécia, La Mort de W.—the 2d movement being the early overture Piccolomini [1874] (1888); Saugefleurie (légende); Souvenirs.

Suites—Tableaux de Voyage; Jour d'Été à la Montagne (Aurore, Jour, Soir).

Symphonic variations, Istar.

Lied, 'cello and orchestra; Fantaisie on folk-songs, oboe and do.; Choral Varié, saxophone and do.

Chamber-Works

String-quartets in D and E; piano-quartet in A min. Trio for piano, clarinet and 'cello.

Suite in D for trumpet, 2 flutes and string-quartet. Chansons et Danses for 9 wind-instruments.

Violin-sonata in C.

Piano-Works

Sonate, op. 63; Petite Sonate, op. 9. Poème des Montagnes (Le Chant des Bruyères, Danses Rythmiques, Plein-Air).

Nocturne; Promenade; 3 Romances sans Paroles; 4 Pièces, Schumanniana (3 pieces); Tableaux de Voyage (13 pieces); Helvetia (3 waltzes); Menuet sur le nom de Haydn.

For 4 hands—Marche du 76<sup>e</sup> Régiment; Petite Chanson Gregorienne.

[The Sérénade from the 4 Pièces and one of the waltzes from Helvetia are also arranged for small orchestra.]

Organ-Works

Prélude et Petit Canon; Vêpres du Commun d'un Martyr; Pièce in B-flat.

Vocal Works

Operas—Attendez-moi sous l'Orme, 1882 (Paris), Fervaal, 1897 (Brussels), L'Etranger, 1903 (Brussels). Libretti of the last two by the composer.

Incidental music to Alexandre's Karadéc (1890) and Mendes's Médée (1898).

Oratorio, Le Mystère de St.-Christophe, 1917.

Dramatic legend, Le Chant de la Cloche (City of Paris prize, 1884), for soli, double chorus and orchestra.

Cantatas—Pour l'Inauguration d'une Statue, for baritone, chorus and orchestra; Ste-Marie Magdalène, for soprano, women's chorus and piano.

Scena, La Chevauchée de Cid, for baritone, chorus and orchestra.

Other choral works—Cantate Domino for 3 voices; the motets Deus Israel (a cappella) and Sancta Maria; Les Noces d'Or du Sacerdote; Sur la Mer (women's voices); L'Art et le Peuple (men's do.); Ode à Valence (with soprano solo).

About 10 songs. Also Chansons Populaires du Vivarais (collection).

He has also made piano-arrangements of orchestral works by C. Benoit, Castillon, Chausson, Duparc and Lassen, edited Monteverde's Orfeo and Incoronazione di Poppea and revised Rambeau's Hippolyte et Aricie, Dardanus and Zaïs (for the standard edition of his works). Author of monographs on Franck (1906, 2d ed. 1907) and Beethoven (1911), besides a notable Cours de Composition Musicale, 2 vols. 1903-09. He has also written much and ably for various periodicals. See monographs by Deniau, 1903, Starczewski, 1905 (on the Schola Cantorum), Borgex, 1913, and Sériex, 1914, and in Hervey's Masters of French Music, 1903, Séré's Musiciens Français, 1911, Rolland's Musiciens d'Aujourd'hui, 1908, etc. G. A.

Infantas, Fernando de las. 16th C.

Ingegneri, Marco Antonio (?1545-1592). 16th C. G.

Ingram, Frances (Liverpool, 1888). English operatic contralto, educated in New York, pupil of Maurel, since 1911 singing with the Chicago Opera Company, except in 1913 (with the Montreuil Opera Company) and 1914-15 (touring). She is an accomplished concert-singer as well. In 1913 she married the theatrical manager K. G. MacVitty of Chicago. A.

Insanguine, Giacomo [often called Monopoli] (Monopoli, 1744-1795, Naples). Italian composer, pupil of the Conservatorio di S. Onofrio, Naples, and for a time teacher there. Wrote over 20 operas for Naples (?1756-82), Psalm 71 (1775), masses and other church-music. G.

Inten, Ferdinand von (Leipzig, 1848-1918, New York). Saxon pianist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory (Helbig prize, 1864), appearing from 1866 throughout Germany and from 1868 in New York, where he made special success with chamber-concerts (often with Thomas and L. Damrosch), and as teacher. In 1876-77 he was heard in Germany. A.

VINCENT D'INDY

Inzenga, José (Madrid, 1828-1891, do.). Spanish composer and teacher, pupil of his father and the Madrid and Paris Conservatories, from 1860 professor at the former. Wrote many popular zarzuelas (from 1851), a manual on accompaniment, and Impresiones of Italian travel, and (on a governmental commission) collected Spanish folk-songs, published as Ecos de España, 3 vols. 1874-78.

Ippolitov-Ivanov, Michail Michailovitch (Gatchina, 1859). Eminent Russian composer, pupil of the Petrograd Conservatory, from 1882 head of the Tiflis Music School, conductor of symphony-concerts and from 1884 opera-director there, from 1893 professor at the Moscow Conservatory (from 1899 also director of the Private Opera) and since 1906 director of the Conservatory, succeeding Safonov. While at Tiflis he published a notable collection of Georgian folk-songs. Has written the operas Ruth, 1887, Assya, 1900, Treachery, 1911, and Ole from Nordland, 1917, a Sinfonietta (remodeled from a violin-sonata), a symphony in E min., the overtures Yar Chmel, Spring and Medea, the symphonic poem Iveria, an Armenian Rhapsody, the orchestral suite Caucasian Sketches and another, a symphonic Scherzo, a string-quartet in A min., a piano-quartet, cantatas for the coronation of Nicholas II (1894) and in memory of Pushkin, Gogol and Shukovsky, 5 choral Charakterbilde, The Legend of the White Swan at Novgorod, Psalms 132 and 133, several other choruses, some duets and several songs. Author of a treatise on the Formation and Resolution of Chords, 1897. G, A.

Ireland, John (Bowdon, 1879). Able English composer, pupil of Stanford. Has written the overtures Midsummer and Pelléas et Mélisande, the preludes The Forgotten Rite and Tritons, a symphonic poem in A min., a sextet (strings, clarinet and horn), string-quartets in D min. and C min., 3 piano-trios (one with clarinet), a trio-Phantasie, violin-sonatas in D min., A min., C min. and G min. (one movement), a piano-sonata in C min., 2 Rhapsodies, Decorations (3 pieces), Preludes (4 do.), London Pieces (2 do.), A Sea-Idyll (3 do.), other piano-works, a Mass in the Dorian mode, a Vexilla Regis, Psalm 42, a set of services, some organ-pieces, and many characteristic songs. See Musical Times, 1919. A.

Iriarte, Tomas de (Teneriffe, 1750-1791, n. Cadiz). Spanish poet and archivist, author of the long poem La Musica (1779) and composer of various orchestral, chamber and vocal works.

Irmeler, J. G. Piano-making firm in Leipzig, founded in 1818 by J. C. G. Irmeler (1790-1857) and continued with much success by his descendants.

Irrgang, Heinrich Bernhard (n. Krotoschin, 1869-1916, Berlin). Eminent Prussian organist, trained at the Berlin Institut für Kirchenmusik and Blumner's Meisterschule, from 1890 organist at the Spandau Garrison Church, from 1894 in Berlin, from 1895 at the Marienkirche and after 1910 at the Cathedral, besides from 1905 teaching at the Stern Conservatory and from 1912 at the Hochschule. He made a fine reputation as virtuoso and wrote some organ-sonatas and songs.

Isaac, Heinrich (?1450-1517). 15th C. G.

Isleries, Julius (Kishinev, 1888). Noted Russian pianist, trained at the Kiev and Moscow Conservatories, in 1907-09 touring in France and America and since 1913 professor at the Philharmonic Conservatory in Moscow, besides wide tours in Russia. Has written much for his instrument, including 2 symphonic poems with orchestra.

Isardon, Jacques (b. 1860). French opera-singer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from about 1885 engaged at the Opéra-Comique, then at Brussels, London, Milan and from 1894 again at Paris. He is now teacher at the Conservatory. Author of Le Théâtre de la Monnaie, 1890.

Isori, Ida (Florence, 1875). Italian soprano and singing-teacher, pupil of Barbieri-Nini, Meliani and Ceccherini, appearing in opera in 1892 at Pisa and elsewhere in Italy, but from 1896 turning mainly to concert-work, with extensive tours throughout Europe. In 1900 she married the pianist Litta and later they established at Florence a music-society and in 1910 a Scuola del Bel Canto. Has edited an Isori-Album (24 historic arias). See Batka, Die italien. Opernarie, 1912.

Isouard, Niccolò (Malta, 1775-1818, Paris). Eminent French composer, originally brought up for business life, pupil of Amendola (Palermo), Sala and Guglielmi, in 1794-95 undertaking opera at Florence and Leghorn, and in 1795-98 serving as organist at the cathedral in Valetta (Malta). From 1799 he worked assiduously in Paris, producing operas at the rate of about two per year, after 1811 in competition with Boieldieu. He had no large gift of originality, but his taste was excellent and his workmanship careful and often impressive. While at Malta he wrote many cantatas and much church-music. His operas include

L'Avviso ai Maritati, 1794 (Florence), Artaserse, 1795 (Leghorn), Il Barbiere di Siviglia, 1796 (Malta), Rinaldo d'Asti, 1796, Le Tonnelier, 1797, L'Improvisata in Campagna, 1797 (the last two, with rewritten libretti, also in Paris, 1800-01), Ginevra di Scozia, 1798, Le Petit Page, 1800 (with Kreutzer, Paris), Flaminio à Corinthe, 1801 (do.), La Statue, 1802, Michel Ange, 1802, Les Confidences, 1803, Le Baiser et la Quittance, 1803 (with Méhul, Kreutzer and Boieldieu), Le Médecin Turc, 1803, L'Intrigue aux Fenêtres, 1805, Le Déjeuner de Gargons, 1805, La Ruse Inutile, 1805, Léonce, 1805, La Prise de Passau, 1806, Idala, 1806, Les Rendez-vous Bourgeois, 1807, Les Créanciers, 1807, Un Jour à Paris, 1808, Camarosa, 1808, L'Intrigue au Sérail, 1809, Cendrillon, 1810, La Victime des Arts, 1811 (with Solié and Berton), La Fête du Village, 1811, Le Billet de Loterie, 1811, Le Magicien sans Magie, 1811, Lulli et Quinault, 1812, Le Prince de Catane, 1813, Le Français à Venise, 1813, Bayard à Mézières, 1814 (with Cheru-bini, Catel and Boieldieu), Joconde, 1814, Jeannot et Colin, 1814, Les Deux Maris, 1816, L'Une pour l'Autre, 1816, and Aladin (finished by Benincori), 1822. Of these, Cendrillon, Joconde and Jeannot et Colin are the most notable.

His death followed a year of wild excess that was occasioned by his resentment that in 1817 Méhul's place in the Académie was filled by Boieldieu rather than himself. Memoir by Wahl, 1911. G.

Israel, Karl (Heiligenrode, 1841–1881, Frankfort). Hessian critic, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, from about 1865 in Frankfort. Author of valuable bibliographical books and articles (in the Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung) on libraries in Frankfort and Kassel (1872, '81) and a Frankfurter Concertchronik von 1713–80, 1876.

Istel, Edgar (Mayence, 1880). Eminent Rhenish musicologist and composer, educated at Munich University (Ph.D. 1900), with musical study under Volbach and Thuille, from 1900 teacher and writer in Munich, from 1913 lecturer on æsthetics at the Humboldt Academy in Berlin and since 1919 at the Lessing High School. Has written the operas Der fahrende Schüler, 1906, Des Tribunals Gebot, 1914, Maienzauber, Verbotene Liebe, 1919, Endlich allein, 1920 (burlesque), and Wenn Frauen träumen, 1920 (comic), incidental music to Küssner's Zauberkessel (1908) and Goethe's Satyros (1910), a Singspielsouvertüre, a Hymnus an Zeus and 3 Gesänge von Goethe for chorus and orchestra, other choruses and many songs, besides preparing an edition of Rousseau's Pygmalion (1904). Author of Das deutsche Weihnachtsspiel u. seine Wiedergeburt aus d. Geiste d. Musik, 1900, Rich. Wagner im Lichte eines zeitgenöss. Briefwechsels, 1902, Peter Cornelius, 1906, Die Entstehung d. deutschen Melodramas, 1906, Die komische Oper, 1906, Die Blütezeit d. musikal. Romanistik, 1909, Das Kunstwerk R. Wagners, 1910, Das Libretto, 1914, Die moderne Oper seit R. Wagner, 1916, Paganini, 1919, Revolution u. Oper, 1919, Das Buch d. Oper, 1919, and articles in periodicals, besides Guides to Cornelius' Barbier, Thuille's Lobetanz, Humperdinck's Heirat wider Willen, and Mahler's 8th Symphony. Editor of Cornelius' essays (1905), E. T. A. Hoffmann's musical writings (1907, '10, '13) and Dittersdorf's autobiography (1909).

Ivanov, Michail Michailovitch (Moscow, 1849). Russian composer and critic, pupil of Tchaikovsky, Dubuc and Sgambati, since 1876 critic for the Novoye Vremya and many other journals. Has written the operas Potemkin's Feast, 1888, Sabava Putyatishna, 1899, The Proud Woman, and Woe to the Wise, the ballet The Vestal, incidental music to Medea, the symphony A Night in May, the symphonic prologue Savonarola, a symphonic poem, a Suite Champêtre, overtures, a Requiem, piano-works and songs. Author of Pushkin in Music, 1900, and translations of Hanslick's Vom Musikalisch-Schönen and Nohl's Entwicklung d. Kammermusik.

Ivanov, Nikolai Kusmitsh (n. Poltava, 1810–1887, Bologna). Able Russian operatic tenor, originally a choirboy in the Imperial Chapel and sent to Italy for further study with Bianchi and Nozzari, appearing there from about 1830. His acceptance of an engagement at Constantinople broke his relation with the Russian court, so that his chief successes were at Milan, Paris and London (1834–37). He became wealthy and retired in 1845. He was a special admirer and friend of Rossini. G.

Ivanov-Boretzky, Michail Vladimirovitch (Moscow, 1874). Russian composer of 3 operas, including The Witch, 1918, a quintet, 2 string-quartets, piano-pieces and songs, besides studies on the history of the mass, program-music and the work of E. T. A. Hoffmann. He studied with Klenovsky, Rimsky-Korsakov and Falconi, and is now secretary of the Institute for Musical Science at Moscow.

Ivry, Richard, Marquis d' (Beaune, 1829–1903, Hyères). French composer (amateur), from 1854 living in Paris. Wrote (1864) Les Amants de Vérone [under the pseudonym 'Richard Yrvid'], produced in 1878 through the personal interest of Capoul, but eclipsed by the prior success of Gounod's Roméo et Juliette (1867), besides the later Perseverance d'Amour (not given) and four early works, an overture, songs, etc. G.

Jacchia, Agide (Lugo, 1875). Italian conductor, trained at the conservatories of Parma and Pesaro (a favorite pupil of Mascagni), from 1898 engaged at Brescia, Ferrara and Venice (La Fenice), in 1902 visited America with Mascagni, in 1903-06 held posts at Milan, Leghorn and Siena, in 1907-09 was in charge of the Milan Opera Company on tour in Canada, the western United States and Central America, in 1909-10 led a season at the Academy of Music, New York, in 1910-14 director of the Montreal and National Opera Companies in Canada, in 1914-15 chief conductor for the Century Opera Company in New York and in 1915-16 for the Boston National Opera Company, then becoming director of the Popular Concerts at Symphony Hall, Boston (till 1923). Has written a Hymn to Rossini, a prize-cantata (1898), a Central American National Hymn (1908), etc. A.

Jachet de Buus. See Buus.

Jachet de Mantua. 16th C. G.

Jachimecki, Zdislaw (Lemberg, 1882). Able Galician musicologist, trained at Vienna University (Ph.D. 1906) and also under Grädener, since 1911 lecturer or professor at Cracow University, besides serving on the commission in charge of the Polish Denkmäler and for a time teaching at the Conservatory. Author of various essays on the early history of music in Poland (1906-15), a Gesch. d. polnischen Musik im Umriß, 2d ed. 1921, and monographs on Wagner (1906), H. Wolf (1908) and Moniuszko (1921).

Jackson, Leonora (Boston, 1879). American violinist, pupil of the Berlin Hochschule, after a successful tour in Germany and Scandinavia from 1900 widely heard in the United States. A.

Jackson, Samuel P. (Manchester, 1818-1885, Brooklyn). English organist, brought up in New York (from 1825), where he at first followed his father's trade as organ-maker, but from 1830 was also organist at St. Clement's, from 1842 at St. Bartholomew's and after 1861 at other leading churches. He was an excellent teacher, wrote organ- and choir-music, edited useful organ-collections and for almost thirty years was reader for Schirmer. G.

Jackson, William (Exeter, 1730-1803, do.). English organist and composer, pupil of Sylvester and Travers, from about 1750 teacher and composer at Exeter and from 1777 organist at the Cathedral. Wrote the ballad-operas The Lord of the Manor, 1780, and Metamorphoses, 1783, several odes, about 20 anthems, various songs, canzonets, etc., that were very popular, 14 harpsichord-sonatas, etc., besides Observations on the Present State of Music in London, 1791, and sundry Letters (1782) and Essays (1798), partly on music. He was also interested in landscape-painting. G.

Jackson, William (Masham, 1815-1866, Bradford). English organist and choral conductor, self-taught, holding church-positions from 1832 at Masham and after 1852 at Bradford, where he also had a music-shop and was conductor or choromaster of various societies, including the festivals of 1853, '56 and '59 and the Festival Choral Society (from 1856). Wrote the oratorios The Deliverance of Israel from Babylon, 1845, and Isaiah, the cantatas The Year, 1859, and The Praise of Music, Psalm 103 (twice, 1841 and 1856), a mass, a service, about 20 anthems, glees, part-songs, songs and a Manual of Singing, besides assisting in the Bradford Tune Book and Congregational Psalmody, 1863. G.

Jacob, Benjamin (London, 1778-1829, do.). Eminent English organist, pupil of Schrubsole, Matthew Cooke and Arnold, from his tenth year engaged at various London churches, chiefly at Surrey Chapel (1794-1823), besides in 1800 and '18 conducting choral concerts and in 1808-14 (with S. Wesley and Crotch) giving significant organ-recitals. To him Wesley addressed his noted letters about the works of Bach (1808-09). After leaving Surrey Chapel he had a strenuous controversy with Rowland Hill which broke his health. Edited National Psalmody, 1819, besides assisting Hill in several publications (from about 1800), and wrote some glees and songs, music for Macbeth, etc. G.

Jacobs, Édouard (Hal, 1851). Able Belgian 'cellist, pupil of Servais and, after some years in the Weimar court-orchestra, in 1885 his successor as professor in the Brussels Conservatory. He has also appeared in historic concerts as player on the viola da gamba.

Jacobs, Karl Eduard (Crefeld, 1833). Rhenish librarian and archivist, educated at Halle and Berlin Universities, since 1866 connected with the Wernigerode Library. Author of articles on Sinn (1889), Lampadius (1890), Baryphonus (1890), Eckelt (1893) and Mager (1894), on music in Wernigerode (1891, 1903), etc., besides editing Lampadius' letters (1890) and contributing to the Allgem. Deutsche Biographie.

Jacobsohn, Simon E. (Mitau, 1839-1902, Chicago). Fine Russian violinist, pupil of Weller and David, from 1860 concertmaster at Bremen, in 1872-78 concertmaster in the Thomas Orchestra in New York and then teacher successively at the Cincinnati College of Music and the Chicago Musical College. A.

Jacobsson, John (n. Stockholm, 1835-1909, do.). Swedish organist and composer, pupil of Mankell, Norman and Berwald, with further study in Germany, from 1870 organist at the Stockholm synagogue. Wrote the overture Sommarminnen, a string-quartet, a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, a cantata for King Oscar's silver wedding (1882), a mass and an Agnus Dei with orchestra, the operetta Ungmors Kusun, 1868, piano-pieces, part-songs and songs.

Jacobsthal, Gustav (Pyritz, 1845–1912, Berlin). Pomeranian musicologist, trained at Strasburg University and from 1872 lecturer and professor on musical science there, retiring in 1905 to Berlin. Wrote Die Mensuralnotenschrift d. 12. u. 13. Jahrh. 1871, and Die chromatische Alteration im liturg. Gesange d. abendländ. Kirche, 1897, besides articles on early medieval polyphony (1873), the education of the meistersinger (1876) the Montpellier manuscript (1879–80), etc. He also composed a cappella motets. Memoir by Ludwig, 1912 (I. M. G. Zeitschr.).

Jacoby, Georges (Berlin, 1840–1906, London). French-German violinist, pupil of E. and L. Ganz, de Bériot and the Paris Conservatory, from 1861 in the orchestras of the Opéra and the Opéra-Comique, besides organizing a string-orchestra that was decidedly successful, in 1869–70 conductor at the Bouffes Parisiens, in 1872–98 conductor at The Alhambra in London, for which he wrote over 100 ballets, divertissements and 7 comedy-operas, including The Black Crook, 1872 (with Clay), besides 2 violin-concertos, a viola-concertino, etc. From 1896 he was professor at the Royal College, besides being Officier in the French Académie, member of the Order of Isabella the Catholic, etc. G (Jacobi).

Jacotin [Jacques Godebrye] (?1445–1529). 15th C. G.

Jacquard, Léon Jean (Paris, 1826–1886, do.). Excellent French 'cellist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory and in 1877 Chevillard's successor as professor there. In 1876 he married the pianist Laure Bedel. His chamber-music recitals were highly regarded. Wrote some fantasias, etc. G.

Jadassohn, Salomon, (Breslau, 1831–1902, Leipzig). Celebrated Silesian theorist and composer, pupil of Hesse, Lüstner, Brosig, Liszt and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1852 teaching in Leipzig, after 1871 in the Conservatory, besides from 1866 conducting the Psalterion choral society and in 1867–69 the Euterpe. In 1887 he was made Ph.D. by Leipzig Univ., in 1893 gained the title of royal professor and was also a member of various academies. As a teacher of all branches of composition he was famous, being counted as a progressive conservative. Author of Harmonielehre, 1883 (7th ed. 1903), with Erläuterungen thereto, 1886, Kontrapunkt, 1884 (5th ed. 1909), with Erläuterungen thereto, 1887, Kanon u. Fuge, 1884 (3d ed. 1913), Die Formen in d. Werken d. Tonkunst, 1889 (4th ed. 1910), Lehrbuch d. Instrumentation, 1889 (2d ed. 1907), Die Kunst zu modulieren u. präjudizieren, 1890, Allgem. Musiklehre, 1892, Elementar-Harmonielehre, 1895, Methodik d. musktheoretischen Unterrichts, 1898, Das Wesen d. Melodie in d. Tonkunst, 1899, Das Tonbewusstsein, 1899, Erläuterungen d. in Bachs Kunst d. Fuge enthaltenen Fugen u. Kanons, 1899, Einführung in Bachs Passionsmusik nach Matthäus, 1899, and Der Generalbass, 1901. Composer of 4 symphonies, 5 orchestral serenades, 2 overtures, a piano-concerto, 3 piano-quintets, 2 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, a serenade for string-orchestra and flute, a cavatina for 'cello and orchestra, a piano-serenade (in canon), ballet-music for piano, 4 hands (do.), preludes and fugues for piano, many other piano-pieces, the choral works Vergebung, Verheissung, Trostlied, An der Sturmwind (men's voices), Gott ist gross (do.), Johannistag (women's voices), and Psalms 43 and 100 (both for double chorus), many motets, choruses and songs. His frequent and masterly use of canon-form (both for instruments and for voices) led to his being humorously called 'the musical Krupp.' His larger theoretical works have been translated into various languages. G.

Jadin, Hyacinthe (Versailles, 1769–1800, Paris), brother of the following. French pianist, pupil of his father and Hüllmandel, from 1795 professor at the Paris Conservatory. Wrote 4 piano-concertos, an overture for wind, 14 string-quartets, 6 string-trios, many violin- and piano-sonatas, much salon-music for piano, etc. G.

Jadin, Louis Emmanuel (Versailles, 1768–1853, Paris), brother of the above. French pianist and composer, pupil of his father and brother, from 1789 accompanist at the new Théâtre de Monsieur, from 1792 much engaged in supplying music for the Garde Nationale, from 1800 followed his brother as professor at the Conservatory, from 1806 was conductor at the Théâtre Molière and in 1814–30 was master of the music-pages at the court, then retiring. From 1824 he was a member of the Légion d'Honneur. Wrote nearly 40 operettas and operas (1790–1822), many patriotic choruses, many duets and songs, besides symphonies, overtures, piano-concertos, chamber-music in several forms, including a wind-sextet, string-quintets, quartets and trios, facile salon-music for the piano, etc. He was one of the first to write for two pianos, and was noted as accompanist. G.

Jadowker, Hermann (Riga, 1879). Able Russian operatic tenor, trained at the Vienna Conservatory, first appearing in 1899 at Cologne, then at Stettin and Karlsruhe, from 1901 at Berlin, from 1906 at Vienna, from 1910 at the Metropolitan, New York, and since 1913 again at Berlin. He sang at the American premières of Die Königskinder (1910), Lobetanz (1911) and Le Donne Curiose (1912).

Jaëll, Alfred (Trieste, 1832–1882, Paris). Famous Austrian pianist, pupil of his father, beginning incessant concert-tours in his eleventh year, soon becoming known throughout Europe. In 1852–54 he was in the United States. In 1866 he married Marie Trautmann (see below). Wrote brilliant salon-music and many fine transcriptions. From 1856 he held the title of court-pianist at Hanover. G.

Jaëll-Trautmann, Marie (Steinseltz, 1846), wife of the above. Able Alsatian pianist, pupil of Hamm and Herz. Has written a piano-concerto, a piano-quartet, many piano-waltzes (some 4-hand) and other characteristic pieces, besides a series of analytic monographs on touch, rhythm, the psychology of playing, etc. (1895-1912).

Jaffé, Moritz (Posen, 1835). Prussian violinist, pupil of Ries, Böhmer, Laub, Wüerst, Bussler, Maurin and Massart. Has written the operas Das Käthchen von Heilbronn, 1866, Ekkehard, 1875, and La Duchessa di Serbia, 1893 (Milan), a string-quartet, violin-pieces and songs.

Jaffé, Sophia (Odessa, 1872). Russian violinist, pupil of Auer, Massart and Sauzay, becoming known from 1892 in Paris and from 1895 in Germany, but her career was soon given up because of inheriting large wealth.

Jahn, Otto (Kiel, 1813-1869, Göttingen). Eminent philologist, archæologist and historian, educated chiefly at Leipzig and Berlin and by travel in France and Italy, from 1842 professor at Griefswald University, in 1847-51 professor at Leipzig University (in charge of the archæological museum), and in 1855-67 professor and museum-director at Bonn University, whence he was called to Berlin, but prevented by illness from service. In the field of music author of a monumental life of Mozart (4 vols. 1856-59, 4th ed., revised by Deiters, 1905-07), the first of the thorough pieces of historical research in musical biography, besides collecting data about Beethoven later utilized by Thayer and about Haydn utilized by Pohl, and many essays published as Gesammelte Aufsätze über Musik, 1866, and an essay on Mendelssohn's St. Paul (1842). He prepared a critical edition of Beethoven's Fidelio (1851). Also wrote part-songs and songs. Memoirs by Vahlen, 1870, Deiters, 1870 (Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung), and Pulver, 1913 (Mus. Times); see also Aus O. Jahns musik. Bibliothek, 1870, and his Briefe, edited by Petersen, 1912. G.

Jahn, Wilhelm (Hof, 1835-1900, Vienna). Able Moravian conductor, from 1852 chorister at Temesvár Cathedral, in 1857-64 theater-director at Pest, Agram, Amsterdam and Prague successively, from 1864 conductor at the Wiesbaden Opera and in 1881-97 at the Vienna Opera (followed by Mahler). Wrote some songs.

Jahns, Friedrich Wilhelm (Berlin, 1809-1888, do.). Eminent Prussian vocal teacher, choral conductor and historical student, pupil of Grell, Stümer, Detroit and Horzizky, as a boy singing in the Opera-chorus at Berlin, but achieving fame later as a fine singing-teacher and in 1845-70 as head of his own Gesangverein. He gained the title of professor in 1870. From 1881 he taught rhetoric at the Scharwenka Conservatory. He formed an exhaustive collection of material relating to Weber, including scores, autographs, published editions, critical and biographical works, etc. (in 1883 bought by the Royal Library). Author of C. M. von Weber in seinen Werken, 1871, with thematic catalogue, and a standard sketch of Weber's life (1873), besides articles in periodicals. Also wrote a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, many piano-pieces, vocal duets and songs (including the noted Schottische Lieder). G.

Jambe de Fer, Philibert (? -1572). 16th C.

James, Philip (New York, 1890). American organist and composer, pupil of J. W. Andrews, Norris and Elliott Schenck, since 1904 playing at various New York churches and conducting choral societies in or near the city. In 1917-19 he was in war service as lieutenant, and at its end was bandmaster of Gen. Pershing's band. Has written an overture, the symphonic poem Aucassin and Nicolette, incidental music to The House of Rimmon, 2 violin-sonatas, piano- and organ-pieces, 3 cantatas, various choruses, canticles and anthems, several songs, etc. In 1908 he gave recitals in London and Paris. A.

Jan, Jarl von (Schweinfurt, 1836-1899, in Switzerland). Bavarian specialist in ancient music, educated at Berlin University (Ph.D. 1859), becoming teacher at the Graues Kloster (Gymnasium) in Berlin, then at Landsberg and Saargemünd and from 1883 at the Strasburg Lyceum. Author of various books and articles on Greek music and metrics (from 1859), the most important being Musici Scriptores Græci, 1895, which is a critical edition of all the essential texts. He also wrote occasionally upon points in early modern music (editions of Schütz and on Rousseau).

Janiewicz, Felix (Vilna, 1762-1848, Edinburgh). Polish-Russian violinist of noble family, from about 1785 in contact with Mozart in Vienna and later with Italian musicians. After some concert-work in Paris, from 1792 he was in Great Britain, giving concerts in England and Ireland, from 1800 living in Liverpool (where he married) and after 1815 in Edinburgh. At Liverpool he established a music-publishing business. In London he joined in founding the Philharmonic Society in 1813 and was a leading player in it for a time. In Edinburgh he was concertmaster at the festivals of 1815, '19 and '24. He retired in 1829. Wrote string-trios, violin-concertos, etc. [In England he regularly spelt his name Yaniewicz]. G.

Janitsch, Anton (1753-1812, Burgsteinfurt). Bohemian violinist, pupil of Pugnani, from 1758 concertmaster at Coblenz for the Elector of Treves, in 1774-79 and 1782-85 in the court-band at Wallerstein, from 1794 conductor for the Grossmann troupe at Hanover and finally for Count Burgsteinfurt. Wrote symphonies, concertos, etc.

Jankó, Paul von (Totis, 1856-1919, Constantinople). Hungarian mathematician and improver of the piano-keyboard, educated at Vienna and Berlin, after 1892 living in Constantinople as a civil official (in the oversight of tobacco-manufacture). In music he studied at the Vienna Conservatory and with Ehrlich. In 1882 he invented a novel keyboard (see Keyboard) which attracted much attention and has exercised a limited influence. Its use has been advocated and exemplified by some players and occasionally emphasized by music-schools (notably the Scharwenka Conservatory in Berlin). Jankó issued a pamphlet about it in 1886. Author of an essay on the practical application of pure or just intonation (in Stumpf's Beiträge, 1901). See books by H. Schmitt, 1889 (Wiener Rundschau), Hansmann, 1892, K. W. Marschner, 1899, and Münnich, 1905, with articles in I. M. G. Zeitschr. 1903-04. G.

Jannaoni, Giuseppe (Rome, 1741-1816, do.). Famous Italian church-musician, pupil of Rinaldini and Carpani, with his friend Pisari a diligent student of Palestrina's music and one of the latest followers of the latter's best style. In 1811 he succeeded Zingarelli as maestro at St. Peter's in Rome. His numerous works (preserved in the Santini Collection at Rome) include (for 16 voices) a mass, Te Deum, Magnificat, Dixit Dominus and Tu es Petrus, 30 other masses, 48 Psalms, many motets, offertories, antiphons, etc., and remarkable canons (1 for 64 parts, 1 for 24, 2 for 16, 1 for 12, etc.), besides an oratorio on the Agony for 2 tenors and a bass. G.

Jannequin, Clément. 16th C. G.

Janotha, Natalie (Warsaw, 1856). Fine Polish pianist, trained at the Berlin Hochschule and by Clara Schumann, Brahms, Princess Czartoryska, F. Weber and Bargiel, making her début at Leipzig in 1874 and soon gaining high regard in Germany and England, and in 1885 becoming court-pianist at Berlin. She has received many medals and decorations. Has written an Ave Maria, Mountain Scenes and various other piano-pieces, and has translated Kleczinski's Chopin into English (1896) and German (1898).

Janowka, Thomas Balthasar (?1660-?). Bohemian organist at Prague, author of the oldest musical dictionary (except Tinctor's), Clavis ad thesaurum magnæ artis musicæ, 1701.

Jansa, Leopold (Wildenschwert, 1795-1875, Vienna). Eminent Bohemian violinist, pupil of Worzischek and E. A. Förster, from 1824 in the court-orchestra at Vienna, in 1834-49 music-director and professor at the University, then banished for engaging in London in a concert on behalf of Hungarian revolutionists and lived in London as player and teacher until amnestied in 1868, when he returned to Vienna and was pensioned. His last appearance was in 1871. Wrote 4 violin-concertos, 8 string-quartets, 3 string-trios, many violin-duets and solo-pieces, some church-works, including an Offertorium, 2 cantatas, etc. G.

Jansen, Albert (Kassel, 1833). Hessian student and teacher of history, from 1859 gymnasium-instructor at Landsberg, Potsdam and Brandenburg, in 1864-67 tutor of Grand-duchess Olga at Petrograd, in 1872-78 professor at the War Academy in Berlin and then laid aside by failing health. He has specialized upon the life and works of J. J. Rousseau, publishing several monographs and articles (from 1882).

Jansen, Friedrich Gustav (Jever, 1831-1910, Hanover). Hanoverian organist, pupil of Coccius and Riccius, in 1855-1900 organist at Verden Cathedral, gaining the title of royal director in 1861. Wrote Die Davidsbündler [Schumann], 1883, edited some of Schumann's letters (1886) and the 4th ed. of his collected works (1891).

Janson, Jean Baptiste Aimé Joseph (Valenciennes, ?1742-1803, Paris). French 'cellist, from 1795 professor in the new Paris Conservatory. Wrote 2 symphonies, a 'cello-concerto, sonatas, etc. His brother Louis Auguste Joseph (b. 1749) was also a good 'cellist, from 1815 in the orchestra at the Opéra, with some compositions.

Janssen, Julius (Venlo, 1852-1921, Dortmund). Dutch conductor, trained at the Cologne Conservatory, from 1872 pianist and teacher in southern Russia, from 1876 director of the Music Union at Minden, from 1882 director of two choral societies at Dortmund and from 1890 city-director there. He conducted the first two Westphalian Festivals. In 1908 he received the title of royal professor. Wrote good songs.

Janssens, Jean François Joseph (Antwerp, 1801-1835, do.). Short-lived, but gifted Belgian composer, trained as lawyer, but pupil in music of his father, De Loeuw and Lesueur. In 1832, driven to Cologne by the siege of Antwerp, he lost all his belongings, including manuscripts, by fire, and became insane. Wrote the operas Le Père Rival, 1824, La Jolie Fiancée, 1824, and 2 others, the cantatas Les Grecs and Winterarmode, the ode Le Roi, 5 masses, a Te Deum, 25 motets and much other church-music, besides the symphony Le Lener du Soleil and another that won a prize at Ghent, songs, etc. Memoir by Hendrickx, 1860, and Van der Straeten, 1866.

Januschowsky, Georgine von (?1859-1914, New York). Able Austrian operatic soprano, from 1875 a favorite in soubrette parts at Stuttgart, Freiburg, Gratz, Vienna and Leipzig, in 1880-91 at the Germania Theatre, New York, then at Mannheim and Wiesbaden, and in 1893-95 in grand opera at the Vienna Opera. She married the conductor Neuendorff about 1890. Besides a large repertory of lighter rôles, she was a competent singer in Wagnerian and standard Italian operas. A.

Japart, Jean. 15th C. G.

Japha, Georg Joseph (Königsberg, 1835-1892, Cologne). East Prussian violinist, pupil of David, Dreyschock, E. Singer and Alard, from 1855 playing in the Gewandhaus Orchestra at Leipzig and concertizing there and in 1857-58 in Russia, from 1858 teacher at Königsberg, where he started chamber-concerts with Ad. Jensen, and from 1863, after a successful visit to London, concertmaster of the Gürzenich Orchestra at Cologne and teacher in the Conservatory.

Japha, Louise (Hamburg, 1826-1910, Wiesbaden), sister of the above. Eminent North

German pianist and composer, pupil of Warendorf, G. A. Gross and W. Grund, with further study under Schumann and his wife, becoming a fine exponent of Schumann's works. In 1858-74 she was the wife of the violinist Langhans, joining him in notable chamber-concerts. In 1863-69 she had great success in Paris. After her divorce in 1874 she lived in Wiesbaden. Wrote an opera, a string quartet, piano-pieces and songs.

Jaques-Dalcroze, Émile (Vienna, 1865). French (-Austrian) composer and specialist in rhythmic action. From boyhood he lived in Geneva, studying in the Conservatory and also at the Vienna and Paris Conservatories, returning to Geneva as professor in 1892. There, with the psychologist Claparède, he developed a remarkable system of rhythmic exercises, at first as an adjunct to musical practice, but ultimately as a comprehensive method of bodily action. In 1910-15 he conducted a special school at Hellerau, near Dresden, and his system was adopted in various countries by teachers or branch-schools under his general direction. His ideas have had a marked influence upon the modern treatment of the ballet, besides affecting methods of general physical training. Has written the operas Le Violon Mauduit, 1893, Janie, 1894, Sancho Panza, 1897, Le Bonhomme Jadis, 1905 (at first as Onkel Dazumal), and Les Jumeaux de Bergame, 1908, the operetta Respect pour Nous, 1898, the pantomime Écho et Narcisse, 1912, the choral works Festival Vaudois, La Veillée and Poème Alpestre, 2 violin-concertos, a string-quartet, a 'cello-suite, a Fantasia Appassionata for violin, many piano-pieces and collections of songs. Author of lectures on his system of 'Eurhythmics' (1907), a method (1907-14) and collected essays on rhythm, music and education (1921). See works by Seidl, 1912, Storek, 1912, and Sadler, 1912.

Jardine & Son. A noted firm of organ-makers in New York, formed in 1860 to continue the business originally established by George Jardine (1801-?), an English workman who came to America in 1837. A.

Jarecki, Heinrich (Warsaw, 1846-1918, Lemberg). Polish conductor, pupil of Moniuszko, from 1872 director of the Polish theater in Posen and in 1873-1900 of the Lemberg Opera and choir-master at the Cathedral. Wrote 7 operas, other stage-music, choruses and songs.

Jarnach, Philippe (Noisy, 1892). Talented French composer, son of a Catalan sculptor, largely self-trained, with some study with Rislér and Lavignac, from 1914 living in Switzerland and in 1918-21 teaching in the Zurich Conservatory, then moving to Berlin. Has written 2 short symphonies, a Prolog zu einem Ritterspiel, a prelude to Prometheus, a prelude and two other numbers for Wandbild (with women's voices), a string-quintet, a string-quartet, a violin-sonata, a sonata for violin solo, sonatinas for 'cello and for flute, etc.

Järnefelt, Armas (Viborg, 1869). Able Finnish conductor and composer, trained at the Helsingfors Conservatory and by A. Becker and Massenet, in 1896-97 chorus-master at Magdeburg and Düsseldorf, in 1893-1903 orchestral conductor at Viborg, then holding a government grant for foreign study, in 1904-05 opera-director at Helsingfors (producing many Wagnerian works), in 1905-07 leading the Royal Orchestra at Stockholm, besides in 1906-07 acting as head of the Helsingfors Conservatory, and since 1907 opera-director at Stockholm, becoming court-director in 1911. In 1893-1908 his wife was the singer Maikki Pakarinen (now wife of Selim Palmgren) and in 1910 he married the singer Liva Edström. Has written the symphonic poem Korsholm, 1894, an orchestral serenade, 2 orchestral fantasias, 4 orchestral suites, 2 overtures, the choral works Laula Vuoksella, Suomen Synty and Äbo Slott, men's choruses, songs and characteristic piano-pieces.

Jarno, Georg (Pest, 1868-1920, Breslau). Hungarian composer, from about 1890 for a time opera-director at Breslau and then settled at Vienna. Wrote the operas Die schwartze Kaschka, 1895, Der Richter von Zalamea, 1899, and Der zerbrochene Krug, 1903, and 5 operettas (1907-13).

Jarnovic, Giovanni Mane (Palermo, 1745-1804, Petrograd). Polish-Sicilian violinist, pupil of Lolli, from 1770 popular in Paris, from 1779 in the court-band at Berlin, from 1783 moving from place to place in Austria, Poland, Russia and Sweden, from 1791 in England, from 1796 at Hamburg and from 1802 in Berlin and Petrograd. Though a gifted player, he was contentious and inordinately conceited, so that he was often involved in serious quarrels (notoriously with Viotti and Cramer in London). Wrote much in an easy and agreeable style (7 symphonies, 16 concertos, 6 string-quartets, violin-sonatas, etc.). G.

Jarvis, Charles H. (Philadelphia, 1837-1895, do.). American pianist, pupil of his father and Meignen, appearing in concert when but seven and from about 1855 increasingly in request as soloist with leading orchestras. From 1862 he established series of chamber- and piano-recitals in Philadelphia which continued more than thirty years, presenting over 800 works. His fine library went to the Drexel Institute in Philadelphia. Memoir by Whitmer, 1900 (in Music). A.

Jaspar, Maurice (Liège, 1870). Belgian pianist, trained at the Paris Conservatory and since 1898 teacher there (professor from 1909). In 1894 he started a notable series of chamber-concerts with piano, in 1900 a historical course on the piano-sonata and concerto, and in 1909 (with Lefebvre) the Walloon Festivals. Has written chamber-music, songs and some theoretical text-books.

Jauner, Franz R. (Vienna, 1832-1900, do.). Austrian conductor, in 1871-78 at the Carl-Theater in Vienna, in 1877-80 at the Court Opera and in 1881 at the Ringtheater.

Jausions, Paul (Rennes, 1834-1870, Vincennes, Ind.). French Benedictine, pupil of Guéranger and Pothier at Solesmes, becoming from about 1860 their collaborer in the restoration of Gregorian music. He died while visiting the United States in pursuit of biographical data about an uncle of Guéranger. Memoir by Guépin, 1871 (La Semaine Religieuse). List of writings in Bibliographie des Bénédictins, 1907. He was joint-author with Pothier of the latter's Mémoires Grégoriennes, 1880.

Jebb, John (Dublin, 1805–1886, n. Hereford). Irish Anglican clergyman, from 1858 prebendary in Hereford Cathedral and from 1870 canon. Author of works on the Choral Service, 1843, the Cathedral Service, 1845, the Choral Responses and Litanies, 2 vols. 1847–57, and a catalogue of choir-books at St. Peter's College, Cambridge. G.

Jedliczka, Ernst (Poltava, 1855–1904, Berlin). Noted Russian piano-teacher, pupil of his father, N. Rubinstein, Klindworth and Tchakovsky, from 1879 professor at the Moscow Conservatory and from 1886 at the Scharwenka and Stern Conservatories in Berlin. G.

Jeffries, Georg. 17th C. G.

Jehin [-Prume], François (Spa, 1839–1899, Montreal). Eminent Belgian violinist, precociously developed under Servais, Prume, De Bériot, Léonard, Vieuxtemps and Wieniawski, playing in public at six and making his formal début at sixteen (Dresden) and soon joining De Kotski and Monsigny in a noted Trio. From about 1855 he toured in Russia, Germany, Scandinavia and the Low Countries, in 1862 becoming royal violinist at Brussels. From 1863 he began a series of tours in America (Mexico to Canada), though with frequent travels in Europe as well. After 1887 he settled in Montreal as teacher at the Trafalgar Institute, head of the Artistic Association (from 1893) and otherwise active till he retired in 1896. Among his many pupils was Ysaÿe. He married the singer Rosita del Vecchio. Wrote 2 concertos, about 30 violin-solos, songs, etc. A.

Jehin, Léon Noël Joseph (Spa, 1853). Belgian violinist and conductor, pupil of Léonard, from 1881 conductor at Antwerp, in 1882–88 conductor at the Monnaie in Brussels, besides in 1879–89 teaching at the Brussels Conservatory. Since 1893 he has led orchestras at Monaco and Aix-les-Bains. Has written pieces for orchestra and violin, songs, etc.

Jelensperger, Daniel (n. Mülhausen, 1797–1831, do.). Alsatian editor, originally employed in musical lithography at Mayence, Offenbach and Paris, but later a pupil of Reicha and finally his assistant in theory-classes at the Paris Conservatory. From 1820 he was publisher for a group of composers, editing Reicha's Composition, writing a text-book in harmony (1830) and translating works by Hummel and Häser.

Jelinek, Franz Xavier (n. Prague, 1818–1880, Salzburg). Bohemian oboist, pupil of the Prague Conservatory, after 1841 archivist at the Mozart-cum in Salzburg and later choir-master at the Cathedral. Wrote church-music, men's choruses and oboe-pieces.

Jemnitz, Alexander (Pest, 1890). Hungarian composer, pupil of the Pest Akademie and the Leipzig Conservatory, for a time in operatic duties at Bremen and Czernowitz and now living in Pest. Has written some orchestral pieces, a string-quartet, an organ-quartet, a string-trio, a trio for flutes and oboe, sonatas for violin, for 'cello and for piano, organ- and piano-pieces.

Jenkins, Cyril (n. Swansea, 1885). Welsh composer of the symphonic poems Coriolanus and Life Divine, a Celtic Rhapsody, a Welsh Rhapsody for strings, 2 suites for brass-wind, an Elegiac Poem for string-quartet, the symphonic hymn Song of the Silent Land, the cantatas Llewellyn, Lochinvar, 1911, and Freedom, 1920, several choral odes and ballades, etc., some of which have won prizes at the Eisteddfodau.

Jenkins, David (Trecastle, 1849). Welsh composer, pupil of Jos. Parry, becoming leader of choral societies and judge at singing-contests, since 1899 professor at University College, Aberystwyth, and examiner for the Royal and Tonic Sol-Fa Colleges in London. In 1885 he visited the United States as conductor of festivals. Has written the opera The Enchanted Isle, an operetta, the oratorios David and Saul, The Legend of St. David, 1894, and Scenes from the Life of Moses, 1915, the cantatas The Ark of the Covenant, David and Goliath, A Psalm of Life, 1895, The Maiden's Lake and The Storm, 1912, anthems, part-songs and songs. For years he has edited The Musician, at first with D. E. Evans and since 1913 alone.

Jenkins, John (1592–1678). 17th C. G.

Jenner, Gustav (Is. of Sylt, 1865–1920, Marburg). Frisian conductor and composer, pupil of Stange, Gänge, Mandyczewski and Brahms, from 1895 director of the Academic Concert Union in Marburg (Ph.D. of the University, 1904). Wrote a violin-sonata, a clarinet-sonata, Psalm 13 (baritone and organ), trios, songs and a life of Brahms (1905).

Jensen, Adolf (Königsberg, 1837–1879, Baden-Baden). Eminent East Prussian composer, mostly self-taught, aided in his early development by Ehlert and Marburg and greatly influenced by his intense admiration for Schumann. In 1856 he taught for a short time in Russia, in 1857 was theater-director at Posen, in 1858–60 was with Gade at Copenhagen, from 1860 taught at Königsberg, in 1866–68 was on the staff of Tausig's music-school at Berlin, and then struggled with increasing consumption at Dresden, Gratz and Baden-Baden. His high gifts as an emotional melodist were best displayed in his many songs. His works included the opera Turandot (completed and published by Kienzl), about 160 solo-songs, including the cycles Der Ungenannten, op. 6, Liebeslieder, op. 13, from Geibel and Heyse's Spanisches Liederbuch, opp. 4, 21, Dolorosa, op. 30, Gaudeamus, op. 40, etc., the cantatas Jephthas Tochter, Der Gang der Jünger nach Emmaus, Adonisfeier and

Donald Caird ist wieder da, the choruses Gesang der Nornen and Bräutlied, various part-songs, an overture in E min., a piano-sonata in F min., numerous poetic piano-pieces, including Deutsche Suite, Innere Stimmen, Fantasiestücke, Berceuse, Jagdscene, Der Scheidenden, Wanderbilder, several impromptus, 2 nocturnes, Idyllen, Erotikon, Erinnerungen, Wald-Idyll, Scènes Carnavalesques and (4 hands) Hochzeitsmusik, Abendmusik, Lebensbilder, Silhouetten and Ländliche Festmusik. Memoirs by Niggli, 1895 and 1900. Letters edited by Kuczinski, 1879. G.

Jensen, Gustav (Köngisberg, 1843–1895, Cologne), brother of the above. East Prussian violinist and composer, pupil of Dehn, Laub and Joachim, from about 1860 in the opera-orchestra at Königsberg and from 1872 professor at the Cologne Conservatory. Wrote a symphony, orchestral Characterstücke, a serenade for strings, a string-quartet, a string-trio, a violin-suite, sonatas for violin and for 'cello, piano-pieces and arrangements, songs, etc., besides editing Classische Violinmusik and a redaction of Cherubini's Contrepoint (1896, and revised by Heuberg-er, 1911). G.

Jensen, Niels Peter (Copenhagen, 1802–1846, do.). Danish flutist and organist (blind), pupil of Brunn, Hartmann and Kuhlau, from 1828 organist at the S. Petri Kirke in Copenhagen. Wrote 2 flute-sonatas, duets, solos, transcriptions and studies.

Jentsch, Max (Ziesar, 1855–1918, Stendal). Saxon pianist and composer, originally trained as a surveyor and then at the Stern Conservatory, Berlin, from 1880 touring in the Orient and living at Constantinople in 1884–89, then at Berlin till 1892 and from 1894 at Vienna, in 1899 becoming professor at Kaiser's music-school. Has written the operas Eine venetianische Hochzeit and Der Paria, a symphony, a symphonic poem, an orchestral serenade, a piano-concerto, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, the choral work Elysium, a piano-sonata, 2 scherzos, 6 concert-études, etc.

Jepson, Harry Benjamin (New Haven, Conn. 1870). Able American organist, pupil of Stoeckel, Hor. Parker and Widor, since 1895 director of the Yale University choir and instructor in the Yale School of Music, in 1906 becoming professor and University organist. Has written an orchestral Rhapsodie, a fantasia for organ and orchestra, 2 organ-sonatas, an organ-toccata, many organ-pieces and a Veni Creator Spiritus for men's voices, and edited University Hymns (men's voices). In 1918–19 he had charge of the Yale Bureau at the University Union in Paris. A.

Jewett, Randolph (1603–1675). 17th C. G.

Jhan, Maistre. See Gallus.

Jimenez, Jeronimo (Seville, 1854–1923, Madrid). Spanish composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory. Has written over 50 zarzuelas (from 1882) and some orchestral works.

Jimmerthal, Hermann (Lübeck, 1809–1886, do.). Able North German organist, pupil of Mendelssohn, and also an expert in organ-making. Author of a monograph on Buxtehude (1877) and essays on organ-making.

Jiránek, Aloys (Ledeč, 1858), brother of the following. Bohemian pianist, pupil of Fibich and the Prague Organ School, since 1881 teaching at Kharkov. Has written the opera Dagmar, some orchestral pieces, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, piano-pieces and songs.

Jiránek, Josef (Ledeč, 1855), brother of the above. Bohemian pianist and piano-teacher, pupil of Smetana and the Prague Organ School, from about 1875 harpist at the Prague Opera, from 1877 piano-teacher at Kharkov and since 1891 professor at the Prague Conservatory. Author of a series of important pedagogical works for piano-students, and composer of an orchestral Scherzo Fantastique, a piano-quintet, some other chamber-works, 2 piano-sonatas, etc.

Joachim, Albrecht (Hanover, 1876), Prince of Prussia, nephew of Emperor Wilhelm I. Has written 4 ballets, 3 pantomimes, an orchestral suite and a prelude, a violin-suite, 'cello-pieces and military marches.

Joachim, Amalie, née Weiss [Schneeweiss] (Marburg, 1839–1899, Berlin). Eminent Styrian contralto, from 1853 singing in opera with notable success at Troppau, Hermannstadt, Vienna and Hanover, but retiring in 1866. In 1863 she married the violinist Joachim (separated in 1854). From 1866 she devoted herself to concert-work, becoming internationally famous, especially as interpreter of Schumann's and Brahms' songs. She visited England in 1870 and '78, and about 1890 was in the United States. In her last years she taught at the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory in Berlin. G (Weiss).

Joachim, Joseph (n. Presburg, 1831–1907, Berlin). Extraordinary Hungarian violinist, pupil of Servaczinski and J. Böhm, appearing at seven in Pest and at twelve at Leipzig. From 1843 he lived at Leipzig in close association with Mendelssohn, David and Schumann, in 1844 beginning his many visits to London. From 1849 he was concertmaster at Weimar under Liszt, with whose radicalism he did not sympathize. From 1853 he was concertmaster of the court-orchestra at Hanover and violinist to the king, in 1859 being advanced to the conductorship. Here he married Amalie Weiss in 1863 (see above). In 1868 he was called to Berlin to be the first director of the famous Hochschule für Musik, after a time acting only as head of the stringed-instrument department, but in 1895 becoming again director. Here he not only displayed remarkable power as a teacher, but applied great energy and wisdom to the development of the whole institution. In 1869 he organized the great Joachim Quartet (at first with Schiever, De Ahna and Wilh. Müller), which became under his guidance one of the finest ensembles of the next quarter-century. As an interpreter, whether alone or in ensemble, he exalted strict fidelity to the composer's intention, for which he had unusual powers of scholarship and intuition, but he also added the resources of a mind of great acumen and a temperament of much emotional depth. He was an authority on the rendering of the works of Bach, Beethoven, Schumann and Brahms. Besides universal public acclaim, he received numerous honorary insignia, including degrees from the Universities of Cambridge, Glasgow, Oxford, Göttingen, etc. Wrote 5 overtures (Hamlet, Demetrius, Henry IV, etc.), 3 violin-concertos (especially the Hungarian), for violin and orchestra an Andantino and Allegro, Notturmo and Variations in E min., 7 violin-pieces with piano, melodies (Hebrew) and variations for viola and piano, 2 marches (with trios), violin-cadenzas for works by Beethoven and Brahms, the Scena der Marfa for contralto and orchestra and a few songs. Memoirs by A. Moser, 1898 (4th ed. 1907-10). Storck, 1902, Fuller-Maitland, 1905 and '06, Brieger-Wasservogel, 1907, and H. J. Moser, 1908. His letters are edited by A. Moser alone (1908) and with Joh. Joachim (3 vols. 1911-13). G.

João IV (1604-1656). 17th C.

Johannsen, Heinrich (Lauenburg, 1864). North German organist, trained at the Berlin Hochschule und Meisterschule, since 1898 active at Kiel, at first as choral conductor, in 1903 founding an a cappella choir and since 1906 teaching at the Theological Seminary. Prior to going to Kiel he was organist at the Preetz Kloster, and from 1904 at St. Jürgen's in Kiel. Has written choruses and songs.

Johannsen, Julius Ernst Christian (Copenhagen, 1826-1909, in Finland). Danish theorist, from 1867 professor at the Petrograd Conservatory, in 1871 becoming inspector and in 1892-97 director. His treatise on counterpoint was translated into Russian in 1906 by Kasanli.

Johns, Clayton (Newcastle, Del. 1857). American pianist and composer, at first studying architecture, then pupil of Paine, Sherwood, Grabow, Raif, Rummel and Kiel, since 1884 active in Boston, from 1912 on the staff of the New England Conservatory. Has written pieces for piano and for violin, over 100 effective songs, music for a 14th-century mystery-play, etc., besides The Essentials of Pianoforte-Playing, 1909, and From Bach to Chopin, 1911. G, A.

Johnsen, Henrik Filip (1717-1779, Stockholm). Swedish organist (born in England), from about 1740 musician to Duke Friedrich Adolf of Holstein-Gottorp (from 1743 crown-prince and in 1751-71 king of Sweden), becoming in 1745 organist at the Klarakyrka and later court-director. Wrote several stage-works, cantatas, orchestral, organ- and piano-pieces and many songs, including a set of odes in 1753.

Johnson, Edward. 16th C. G.

Johnson, James (Edinburgh, ?1750-1811, do.). Scottish music-engraver, probably trained by James Read, from 1772 till about 1790 executing almost all music published in Scotland and a leading workman till his death. Most of his work is copperplate, but he was also an early user of stamped pewter. Memoir in Scots Magazine, 1811. G.

Johnson, Robert, 16th C. G.

Johnson, Robert (?-1634). 17th C. G.

Johnstone, Arthur Edward (London, 1860). English teacher and editor, brought up in New York, pupil of Wm. Mason, Scharfenburg, S. P. Warren and L. Damrosch, for many years editor for the American Book Company and since 1919 for the Art Publication Society in St. Louis. Has written an overture (1915, Chicago Orchestra), a large number of piano-pieces and songs for younger pupils, a handbook of orchestral instruments, The Lyric Music Series, 4 vols. (with H. W. Loomis), etc. A.

Johnstone, J. Alfred (n. Dublin, 1861). Irish pianist, pupil of R. P. Stewart, for many years teacher in Melbourne (Australia), becoming head of the Athenæum Music School. Has written various articles and handbooks on piano-playing.

Jommelli, Nicola (Aversa, 1714-1774, Naples). Famous Italian composer, trained at two of the Naples conservatories by Durante, Feo, Leo, Prato and Mancini, beginning to write ballets and cantatas early and winning notice in opera from 1737, first at Naples, then at Rome, Bologna and Venice, with a sojourn at Vienna in 1748, and in 1750-53 becoming Bencini's assistant as choirmaster at St. Peter's in Rome. At Bologna he began intimate relations with Martini and at Vienna with the poet Metastasio. From 1753 he was court-director at Stuttgart, where he expanded his style by adopting much from the orchestral and dramatic resources of German music. In 1769, when the Stuttgart establishment was reduced, he returned to Italy, where he found himself almost forgotten and his mature style not appreciated. The failure of several works led to a stroke of apoplexy in 1773, from which he recovered only partially. But these final disappointments were overbalanced by the brilliance of his central period, when he stood out as on the whole the strongest composer of the Neapolitan school and the leader of one of the best musical establishments in Europe. He often laid aside the da capo form of aria, kept his recitatives flexible and expressive, greatly surpassed his Italian contemporaries in the quality of his accompaniments, and in dramatic construction somewhat anticipated Mozart and Gluck. Much of his sacred writing was decidedly rich and beautiful. Of his more than 50 operas mention may be made of Ezio, 1741 (Bologna, reset in 1748 for Naples and in 1771 for Lisbon), Merope, 1741 (Venice), Achille in Sciro, 1745 (Vienna), Artaserse, 1749, Ifigenia in Tauride, 1751 (both Naples), Demetrio, 1753 (Parma), Il Rè Pastore, 1755, Alessandro nell'Indie, 1757, La Clemenza di Tito, 1758, Demofoonte, 1760, L'Isola Disabitata, 1762, L'Olimpiade, 1765 (all Stuttgart), Demofoonte, 1772 (Naples, 2d setting), and Ifigenia in Aulide, 1773, besides the oratorios Isacco, Betulia Liberata, S. Elena and a Passion, several masses, including a fine Requiem, and many elaborate canticles and motets, including a Te Deum, several Misereres, etc. Memoirs by S. Mattei, 1785 [1774], Alfieri, 1845, and Abert, 1908. G.

Jonás, Alberto (Madrid, 1868). Eminent Spanish pianist, pupil of Mendizabal, the Brussels and Petrograd Conservatories, from 1880 touring most industriously in Europe and America. From 1894 he taught at the music-school of the University of Michigan (Ann Arbor) and in 1898-1904 was head of the Michigan Conservatory in Detroit, in 1905-14 taught in Berlin, attracting pupils from all countries and since 1914 has worked in New York. Has written many effective piano-pieces, a Master-School of Modern Piano-Virtuosity, a Piano-script Book and many articles on piano-playing, besides translating Gevaert's Instrumentation into Spanish (1903). A.

Jonas, Émile (Paris, 1827-1905, St. Germain-en-Laye). French composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (2d Prix de Rome, 1848) and in 1847-66 teacher of solfeggio there and in 1859-70 harmony-teacher for students of band-music. He was also director at the Portuguese Synagogue and bandmaster in the Garde Nationale. From 1867 he organized international competitions in band-music. Wrote over 20 popular comic operettas (1855-83), the cantata Antonio and 2 overtures, besides editing a Recueil de Chants Hébraïques, 1854. G.

Joncières, Félix Ludger Victorin de (Paris, 1839-1903, do.). French composer and critic, for a short time (about 1860) pupil of the Paris Conservatory, withdrawing because he had already become an intense Wagner partisan, soon seeking notice by some orchestral works, incidental music for Dumas' version of Hamlet (1863), and (from 1867) grand opera. From 1871 he was critic for La Liberté and other papers. In 1877 he became a member of the Légion d'Honneur. Wrote the operas Sardanapale, 1867, Le Dernier Jour de Pompéi, 1869, Dimitri, 1876 (his best work), La Reine Berthe, 1878, Le Chevalier Jean, 1885, and Lancelot du Lac (accepted at the Opéra, but not given), a Symphonie Romantique, the symphonic poem La Mer, the orchestral suite Les Nubiennes, an overture, other orchestral pieces (Aubade Triomphale, Sérénade Hongroise, Marche Slave, the Chinese piece Li Tsin, etc.), a violin-concerto (1869), etc. As critic he used the pen-name 'Jennius'. G.

Jones, Arthur Barclay (London, 1869). English composer, trained at the Guildhall School, London, and since 1892 teacher or professor there, besides in 1893 succeeding Wingham as director at the Brompton Oratory. Has written a symphony (1896), an overture (1892), a violin-sonata, pieces for 'cello, for piano and for organ, and some vocal music.

Jones, Edward (Llandertel, 1752-1824, London). Welsh harpist and author, from 1775 appearing in London and in 1783 becoming bard to the Prince of Wales. Wrote The Musical and Poetical Relicks of the Welsh Bards, 2 parts, 1784 (2d ed. enlarged, 1794), with three supplemental volumes in 1802 (The Bardic Museum) and posthumously, besides some lesser works. G.

Jones, F. O. The compiler of a Handbook of American Music and Musicians, 1886, which, though crude and unequal, contains valuable data. G.

Jones, Griffith Rhys (Treecynon, 1834). Welsh choral conductor, becoming famous about 1870 as leader of the Cor Caradog and later of various other organizations.

Jones, John (1728-1796, London). English organist, from 1849 organist at the Temple Church in London, from 1753 also of the Charterhouse (School) and from 1755 also of St. Paul's Cathedral. Wrote Sixty Chants, 1785, several sets of harpsichord-pieces and songs. G.

Jones, Robert. 17th C. G.

Jones, Sidney (Leeds, 1869-1914, London). English conductor and composer, pupil of his father, from about 1890 active as director of light opera companies and under the playwright George Edwardes, from 1905 conductor at the Empire Theatre, London, and from 1911 of the Whitney Theatre. Wrote many very popular operettas, including The Gaiety Girl, 1893, The Geisha, 1896, San Toy, 1899, The Persian Princess, 1909, The Girl from Utah, 1913, etc.

Jones, William (London, 1746-1794, Calcutta). Eminent English orientalist and jurist, from 1783 supreme court judge at Calcutta and founder and president of the Bengal Asiatic Society. Among numerous works in other fields wrote The Musical Modes of the Hindus, 1784 (also in his Collected Works, vol. vi). Knighted in 1783.

Jongen, Joseph (Liège, 1873). Gifted Belgian composer, trained at the Liège Conservatory (many prizes, including the Prix de Rome, 1898), with extensive further study in Germany, France and Italy, in 1903-04 professor at Liège and since then living in Brussels. Has written the symphonic poem Lalla Roukh, the mimo-symphonic legend S'Arka, 1912, various other orchestral pieces (fantasia on Walloon Christmas carols, Épithalame for 3 violins, Poème for 'cello, Méditation for English horn, etc.), a violin-concerto, a 'cello-concerto, a string-quartet, a piano-quartet, 2 piano-trios, 2 violin-sonatas, a 'cello-sonata, the prize-cantatas Calirrhoe, 1895, and Comala, 1898, and the opera Jélyane (finished 1916). His brother and pupil Léon (Liège, 1884) has written the opera Marie Joséphe and the prize-cantata La Nuit de Noël, 1913.

Jordan, Jules (Willimantie, Conn., 1850). American tenor, conductor and composer, pupil of Osgood and Sbriglia, from 1870 in much request as concert-singer and since 1881 conductor of the Arion Club of Providence. Mus.D. of Brown Univ. in 1895. Has written the operas Rip van Winkle, 1898, and Nisida, several operettas, the cantatas The Wind-Sweet Wheat.

The Night-Service and Barbara Frietche, many anthems and about 300 songs that have gained popularity. A.

Jordan, Mary (Cardiff, 1879). Welsh contralto, brought up in Scranton, Pa., pupil of D'Auria, H. J. Stewart, Saenger and Maurel, since 1891 employed in church-choirs, notably in Brooklyn and New York, from about 1900 becoming active in recitals and oratorios, and in 1911-14 a member of the Boston Opera Company. In 1919 she married C. C. Cresson. A.

Jordan, Sverre (Bergen, 1889). Norwegian pianist, pupil of La Motta, Gortatowski, An-sorge and Klatte, since about 1910 successful in concert in Germany, Finland, Denmark and Norway. Has written an orchestral suite, the melodrama Fiebergedichte, a violin-concerto, a violin-sonata, pieces for violin and for piano, songs, etc.

Jordani, João (Lisbon, 1793-1860, do.). Italian-Portuguese contrabassist, teacher at the Lisbon Conservatory. Wrote many ballets, 17 masses and much other church-music.

Jörn, Karl (Riga, 1876). Russian operatic tenor, pupil of Schütte, Harmsen, Elisabeth Jacobs, Röss and Weiss (largely as protégé of Gen. Vietinghoff-Scheel), from 1896 engaged at Freiburg (Baden), from 1898 at Zurich, from 1899 at Hamburg and from 1902 at the Berlin Opera, besides frequent appearances elsewhere in Germany and in Brussels, London (1905-08) and New York (1908-11). Since 1913 he has also sung at Buenos Aires. A.

José, Antonio de San Sebastian (San Sebastian, 1886). Basque Franciscan, author of works on Basque music, collector of about 400 folk-songs and composer of the opera Magdalena Larrañe, the oratorio Los Tres Milagros de Santa Cecilia, 1921, much church-music, many songs, a string-quartet, etc.

Joseffy, Rafael (Hunfalu, 1852-1915, New York). Eminent Hungarian pianist, brought up as a boy at Miskolcz, pupil of Brauer, the Leipzig Conservatory, Tausig and Liszt (being greatly influenced by the last two), making his début at Berlin in 1872 and promptly securing a brilliant European recognition. In 1879 he came to New York, playing first with the Symphony Society there and establishing himself as a foremost virtuoso. To his already extraordinary technical facility he steadily added remarkable attainments in poetic insight, warmth of emotion and breadth of sympathy with all sides of piano-literature. In 1888-1906 he was professor at the National Conservatory, New York. Besides some piano-pieces and arrangements, wrote a School of Advanced Piano-Playing, 1902, and First Studies for the Piano, 1913, and edited a monumental edition of Chopin (15 vols) and études by Czerny, Henselt, Moscheles, Schumann and Schlozer. See article by E. Hughes in Musical Quarterly, 1916. G, A.

Joseph [Josephil], Georg. 17th C.

Josephson, Jacob Axel (Stockholm, 1818-1880, Upsala). Able Swedish conductor and composer, pupil of Joh. Schneider, Hauptmann and Gade, with further study in Rome, from 1847 conductor of the Upsala Philharmonic Society, becoming also director at the University in 1849, professor in 1874 and organist at the Cathedral in 1864. Wrote numerous choral works, including Islossningen, Korsriddarne utanför Jerusalem, Psalms 23, 126 and 130, and many occasional cantatas, 21 books of songs, piano-pieces, etc.

Josquin. See Des Prés.

Joss, Viktor (Prague, 1869). Bohemian critic and author, educated at Prague University (Ph.D.), in 1897-1915 editor and music-critic of the Deutsche Abendblatt at Prague, besides contributing to Musik, the Allgem. Musikzeitung and the Guide Musical. In 1892-94 he also edited the Wagner-Zeitung, in 1893-95 wrote the musical section of the survey of Bohemian activities in science, art and literature, has served as co-editor of the Deutsch-öster. Künstler- u. Schriftstellerlexikon, was librettist of Weis' Der Sturm auf die Mühle (1911), translated the text of Alois Reiser's Iris (1912) and numerous Czechic and Slovak choruses and songs, etc. In 1892 he was a member of the music commission of the Vienna Exposition and prepared the catalogue of that section. Author of lives of Mozart (1892), Weber [as author] (1894), Dvořák (1894), Wieck (1900, '02), Pivoda [as singing-teacher] (1903) and Clara Schumann (1905). Die Sängervereinigung d. Prager Lehrer u. ihr Dirigent, 1913, Von Mozart bis Mahler (songs and poems), Gesammelte Essays and Die spanische Musik u. ihre Meister, 1915.

Jost, Franz (Oschatz, 1843-1909, Leipzig). Silesian bookdealer in Leipzig and in 1866-1907 editor of Hofmeister's important Monatsberichte and Jahresberichte.

Joteyko, Thaddeus (Poczniki, 1872). Ukrainian composer, pupil of Gevaert and Noskowski. Has written a symphony, a symphonic poem, an overture, a string-quartet, a 'cello-sonata, 2 piano-sonatas, part-songs and songs, besides a history of Polish and other music (1918).

Joule, Benjamin St. John Baptist (Salford, 1817-1895, Rothesay, N. B.). English organist, from 1846 at Hulme and from 1849 at Manchester, where he was also president of the Vocal Society. Compiler of Hymns and Canticles Pointed for Chanting, 1847, Directorium Chori Anglicanum, 1849, Words of Anthems [2270 texts], 1859, a Psalter, 1865, etc. In 1850-70 he was critic for the Manchester Courier. G.

Jouret, Léon (Ath, 1828-1905, Brussels), brother of the next. Belgian composer, pupil of the Brussels Conservatory and from 1874 teacher there. Wrote the operas Quentin Metsys and Le Tricorne Enchanté, music for Racine's Esther, cantatas, church-music, many part-songs and songs.

Jouret, Théodore (Ath, 1821-1887, Kissingen), brother of the above. Belgian chemist and music-critic, writing the opera Le Médecin

Turc, 1845 (with Meynne), part-songs and songs.

Journet, Hippolyte Jules Marcel (Grasse, 1869). French operatic bass, pupil of Obin and Seghettini, from 1893 engaged at the Monnaie, Brussels, and Covent Garden, London, from 1901 at the Metropolitan, New York, from 1908 at various European capitals and since 1914 with the Chicago Opera Company. He has an extensive repertory of about 100 rôles in French, Italian and German.

Jousse, J. (Orleans, 1760–1837, London). French teacher, from about 1792 in London, writing Lectures on Thoroughbass, 1819 (revised ed. as Catechism of Music, 1894).

Juch, Emma Antonia Joanna (Vienna, 1865). American-Austrian operatic soprano, educated in New York, pupil of Mme. Murio-Celli, appearing in concert from 1882 and in opera from 1883, at first in London, in 1886–87 with the American Opera Company under Thomas, in 1889–91 with her own company in the United States and Mexico, and then extensively in concert and oratorio. A.

Judenkunic, Hans (?–1526). 16th C. G.

Jue, Édouard (Paris, 1794–?). French violinist, trained at the Paris Conservatory and from about 1815 a follower of Galin, whose 'méloplaste' system he extended and about 1827 sought to advance in London. Wrote three elementary text-books (1823, '26, '36).

Julien, Paul (Brest, ?1841–1866, at sea). Talented French violinist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory (1st prize, 1850), in 1853–56 touring in America with Patti and again after 1860.

Jullien, Jean Lucien Adolphe (Paris, 1845), son of Marcel below. Distinguished French critic and music-historian, educated at the Lycée Charlemagne, pupil in the music of Bienaimé, long on the staff of the Ménestrel, the Revue et Gazette Musicale, the Journal des Débats and the Chronique Musicale, besides writing on non-musical topics for many other journals. Has written over 15 studies and monographs on various points about music in the 18th century (1873–84), Weber à Paris, 1877, Goethe et la Musique, 1880, monumental biographies of Wagner (1880) and Berlioz (1888), Musiciens d'Aujourd'hui, 2 series, 1891, '94, Musique, 1895 (historical studies), and Le Romantisme et l'Éditeur Renduel, 1897 (with new data about Meyerbeer). G.

Jullien, Louis Antoine (Sisteron, 1812–1860, Paris). Brilliant and erratic French conductor and dance-composer, for a time a pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1836 leading dance-concerts at the Jardin Turc, but obliged by debt to escape to London in 1838, where from 1840 he engaged in a long series of concert-enterprises with an extraordinary orchestra (90–100 players), a chorus and fine soloists, continuing with great éclat till 1859. Several times he took his entire force on tour through England and to Scotland and Ireland, and in 1853–54 he brought an orchestra to America. His programs varied from works of serious value to dance-miscellanies, but he was a magnetic and daring leader, often securing striking artistic results, though prone to indulge in childish eccentricities. His restless ambition led him to undertake a music-shop from before 1840 which in 1848 was sold to meet the debts incurred by an extravagant scheme to give English opera at Drury Lane. In 1852 the production of his opera Pietro il Grande at Covent Garden was a complete failure, involving heavy loss. In 1856 Covent Garden was destroyed by fire and he lost all his large stock of music and manuscripts. In 1857 he sustained further loss in the failure of the Surrey Gardens Company. In 1859 he fled back to Paris, was there arrested and tried for debt, but set free under parole. Later he was taken to an insane asylum, where he died. Wrote an enormous number of dances and pièces d'occasion. His visit to America was on the whole highly beneficial, as he brought good players and gave instructive programs. G.

Jullien, Marcel Bernard (Paris, 1798–1881, do.). French educator and grammarian, long secretary of the Société des Méthodes d'Enseignement. Author of two monographs on ancient physics, metrics and music (1854, '61) and a pamphlet on instrumental instruction in girls' schools (1848).

Jumilhac, Pierre Benoît de (1611–1682). 17th C.

Junck, Benedetto (Turin, 1852). Italian composer, pupil of Mazzucato and Bazzini, from about 1875 working in Milan. Has written a string-quartet (1886), 2 violin-sonatas (1884–85), a Serenata for soprano, tenor and string-quartet, several song-cycles, including La Simona, 1878, etc. G.

Jüngst, Hugo Richard (Dresden, 1853). Saxon conductor and choral composer, trained at the Dresden Conservatory, in 1876 founder of the Männergesangverein there and since 1880 its leader, from 1878 also of the Julius Otto Society, and from 1895 of the academic club Erato, besides often conducting men's choral festivals there and elsewhere or acting as judge in competitions. Made royal professor in 1898. Has written many effective men's choruses and edited fine arrangements of folk-songs from various countries, besides some orchestral and piano-works.

Junk, Victor (Vienna, 1875). Austrian student of German literature, trained at Vienna University (Ph.D. and lecturer), pupil also of August Sturm and latterly chiefly engaged in music. Author of Goethes Fortsetzung d. Zauberflöte, 1900, Tannhäuser in Sage u. Dichtung, 1911, Gralsage u. Galdichtung d. Mittelalters, 1911, Reger als Orchesterkomponist, 1911, etc. Has also written the opera Die Wildfrau, the oratorio Legende von der Liebe, Spieglein an der Wand for soli and orchestra, the symphonic poem Dürnstein, valuable piano-arrangements of works by Hugo Wolf and Reger, besides adapting Mozart's Mitridate for the German stage. He is now conductor of the chorus of the Vienna Bach-Gemeinde.

Junker, Karl Ludwig (Oehringen, ?1740-1797, n. Kirchberg). A Lutheran pastor, writing many manuals of musical information, including 20 Komponisten, 1776 (useful regarding Mannheim names), a musical almanac (1782-84), etc., and also 3 piano-concertos, the cantata Die Nacht, the melodrama Genoveva im Thurm, 1790, etc.

Juon, Paul (Moscow, 1872). Strong Russian composer, pupil of J. Hfimaly, Tanciev, Arensky and Bargiel, in 1896-97 teacher in Baku and since living in Berlin, in 1906 becoming professor at the Hochschule. In 1919 he was elected to the Akademie. His works exhibit a blending of Slavic materials with excellent German workmanship. Has written 2 symphonies, the orchestral suite Aus einem Tagebuch, a Serenade and Wächterweise for orchestra, 5 Stücke for strings, 2 violin-concertos, an octet for piano, strings and wind, a piano-sextet, a string- and a piano-quintet, 2 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, a Rhapsodie for piano and string-trio, a piano-trio, Litanie for piano-trio, sonatas for violin, for viola and for 'cello, various violin- and piano-pieces, etc. Author of text-books in harmony (1901, '20) and a German translation of M. Tchaikovsky's biography of his brother (2 vols. 1904). G, A.

Jupin, Charles François (Chambéry, 1805-1839, Paris). Gifted French violinist, pupil of Monticelli, Georgis and Baillot, in 1826-35 director at Strasburg. Wrote orchestral variations, a violin-concerto, a string-trio, a piano-trio, other violin-pieces and the opera La Vengeance Italienne, 1834.

Jürgenson, Peter Ivanovitch (Reval, 1836-1904, Moscow). Important Russian music-publisher, from 1861 building up an extensive business in Moscow and becoming active in leading musical enterprises there. He was a foremost promoter of Tchaikovsky's works, most of which he published. His editions of standard composers like Mendelssohn, Schumann and Chopin exerted a decided influence upon Russian musical culture. He was succeeded by his sons Boris and Grigori, the former of whom issued a thematic catalogue of Tchaikovsky's works in 1897. G.

K

Káan-Albést, Heinrich von (Tarnopol, 1852). Galician pianist, pupil of Blodek and Skuhersky, in 1884 going with Dvořák to London, from 1890 professor at the Prague Conservatory and since 1907 its director. Member of the Franz Josef Academy. Has written the operas Der Flüchtling and Germinal, the ballet Bajaja (the first large Czechic ballet), the pantomime Olim, 1905, the symphonic poem Sakuntala, an orchestral suite, Frühlings-Eklogen for orchestra, several piano-concertos, a prize-trio, piano-études, etc.

Kade, Otto (Dresden, 1819–1900, n. Rostock). Eminent Saxon conductor and musicologist, trained by Otto and Joh. Schneider and in Italy (as protégé of the King of Saxony), from 1848 founder and director of the Dresden Cäcilia (chiefly devoted to old choral music) and choir-master at the Dreikönigskirche, and from 1860 court-director at Schwerin (following Schäffer), besides from 1866 teaching in the Gymnasium. He retired in 1894. Ph.D. of Leipzig Univ. in 1884. Author of monographs on Le Maistre (1862, prize from the Dutch Musical Society), Isaak (in Allgemeine Deutsche Biographie), the Luther Codex of 1530 (1872) and Walther's Gesangbuch of 1524 (1878), translator of Scudo's Sarti (1858), editor of the official Melodienbuch, Choralbuch and Cantionale for Mecklenburg (1867–80, the latter containing Gregorian compositions of his own), vol. v (musical supplement) of Ambros' Geschichte (1881) and the revision of vol. iii (1893), a thematic catalogue of music in the Schwerin Library (2 vols. 1893) and 4 parts of a series of Passions from Obrecht to Schütz (from 1891). He joined Eitner and Erk in editing Ott's Liederbuch of 1544, and was influential in promoting Eitner's undertaking the Monatshefte (from 1869). Also published lectures on German secular song (1874) and many articles in periodicals. G (with index of the music-supplement to Ambros).

Kade, Reinhard (Dresden, 1859), son of the above. Professor in the Dresden Gymnasium, writing monographs on Demantius (1890) and Scandellus (1914), besides a catalogue of music in the Dresden Royal Library.

Kaden, Richard (Dresden, 1856). Saxon violist, pupil of the Dresden Conservatory, in 1872–96 playing in the court-orchestra there, in 1872–83 teaching in the Conservatory and since 1883 director of the Pedagogical Music School (founded by Frl. von Mertschinska, whom he married in 1909). Many of his lectures on music-history and aesthetics have been published, and he has edited collections of violin-music and the Baillot-Rode Violinschule. Has also written a symphony, a sinfonietta, an overture, etc.

Kadletz, Andreas (Dobruschka, 1859). Bohemian violinist, trained at the Petrograd Conservatory and long concertmaster at the Petrograd Opera. Has written the opera The Village Diplomat, 3 ballets, various violin-pieces and fantasias on Russian opera-themes.

Kaempfert, Max (Berlin, 1871). Prussian conductor, trained as violinist at Paris and Munich, for a time concertmaster of the Kaim Orchestra in Munich, in 1898 director at Eisenach and since 1899 conductor at Frankfurt of the Palmengarten and Tonkünstler Orchestras, gaining the title of royal director in 1912. Has written the 'volksoper' Der Schatz des Sultan, 3 orchestral Rhapsodien, quartets, trios, violin-sonatas, etc.

Kafka, Heinrich (Strazowitz, 1844–1917, Vienna). Bohemian teacher in Vienna, writing several stage-works, the symphonic poem Der Gott und die Bajadere, piano-trios, violin-sonatas, songs, etc.

Kahl, Heinrich (Munich, 1840–1892, Berlin). Bavarian violinist and conductor, trained at the Munich Conservatory, from 1857 concertmaster of the Wiesbaden court-orchestra, from 1866 director at Riga, Stettin and Aix, from 1872 chorusmaster at the Berlin Opera and from 1880 court-director.

Kahl, Willi (Zabern, 1893). Alsatian critic and music-historian, educated at Freiburg, Munich and Bonn Universities (Ph.D. 1919), author of several studies on the history of piano-music and of a revision of the Seiffert-Weitzmann Geschichte. He lives at Cologne, writing for the Kreuzzug and the Westdeutsche Wochenschrift.

Kähler, Willibald (Berlin, 1866). Prussian conductor, pupil of the Berlin Hochschule, from about 1885 director at Hanover, Freiburg (Baden), Basel, Ratisbon, Rostock and Mannheim (from 1891, following Rezníček), and since 1906 court-director at Schwerin, from 1911 with the title of professor. In 1896–1901 he was assistant-conductor at Bayreuth. Has written a symphonic prologue to Kleist's Der Prinz von Homburg, incidental music to Faust, a violin-elegy (with orchestra), etc., and edited the orchestral scores of Wolf's songs, besides preparing guides to Bruckner's Te Deum and 8th Symphony.

Kahlert, August Karl Timotheus (Breslau, 1807–1864, do.). Professor of philosophy in Breslau University, but always musically active. Author of Blätter aus d. Brieftasche eines Musikers, 1832, Tonleben, 1838, System d. Aesthetik, 1846, and many articles in Cäcilia and the Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung, besides some good songs.

Kahn, Otto Hermann (Mannheim, 1867). Badenese banker, since 1893 prominent in New York, where he has been a foremost promoter of various opera-enterprises, especially the Metropolitan Opera House. He has also been a director of the Boston Opera Company, the Chicago Opera Association and the Royal Opera Company (London). A.

Kahn, Robert (Mannheim, 1865), brother of the above. Able pianist and composer, pupil of E. Frank, V. Lachner and Rheinberger, with intimate relations with Joachim and Brahms, in 1891-93 founder and leader of a Ladies' Choral Club, and since 1893 teacher or professor (1903) at the Berlin Hochschule. Has written a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, 3 piano-quartets, 3 string-quartets, a clarinet-trio, 3 violin-sonatas, 2 'cello-sonatas, a Konzertstück for violin, the choral works Mahomets Gesang and Sturmlied, the song-play Sommerabend, a cappella and other choruses, part-songs for women's voices, duets and many songs. Sketch by Radecke, 1894. G.

Kahnt, C. F. A music-publishing firm in Leipzig, founded in 1851 by Christian Friedrich Kahnt (1823-1897), followed in 1886 by Oskar Schwalm, in 1888 by Paul Simon and since 1902 by Alfred Hoffmann. From 1857 Kahnt published the Neue Zeitschrift and from 1868 was its nominal editor (as also of Symphonia in 1863-68). A branch is maintained at Zwickau.

Kaim, Franz (n. Stuttgart, 1856), son of a piano-maker. After qualifying as a philologist and lecturing for some years in Stuttgart, in 1893 he established the Kaim Concerts at Munich, for which he assembled a fine orchestra and built a special hall. These concerts, which included both symphony and popular series, continued till 1908 under distinguished conductors, and were then succeeded by those of a new Konzertverein.

Kaiser, Alfred (Brussels, 1872). Belgian composer, pupil of Bruckner and J. Förster (Prague), in recent years living in London. Has written the operas Der Harlekin, Le Billet de Joséphine, 1902, Die schwarze Nina, 1905, Stella Maris, 1910, and Theodor Körner, 1913, an operetta (1900), a ballet (1895), music for Grabbe's Don Juan and Faust, a symphony, a piano-concerto, 3 serenades for strings, 2 piano-trios, etc.

Kaiser, Friedrich Emil (Coburg, 1853). Saxon conductor and composer, trained at the Coburg and Leipzig Conservatories, at first chorusmaster at Bamberg and Kissingen, then opera-director at Dortmund, Aix, Basel, Salzburg (also concerts at the Mozarteum), Olmütz and Brunn, then army-bandmaster at Prague and Vienna, in 1903 for a time conductor of the Kaim Orchestra at Munich, where he has since lived. Has written the operas Karabinere des Königs, 1879, Der Trompeter von Säckingen, 1882, Andreas Hofer, 1886, Der Kornet, 1886, Rodenstein, 1891, Das Hexenlied, 1895, An der Grenze, 1903, and Der deutsche Michel, a grand mass and many military marches (included in a collection of the official marches, etc., of the Austrian army). At Munich he has also produced at the Bauerntheater a large number of comic plays.

Kaiser, Georg Felix (n. Limbach, 1883-1918, Leipzig). Saxon writer, educated at Dresden, Munich and Leipzig (Ph.D. 1910), from 1910 critic for the Dresden Nachrichten and from 1915 for the Leipzig Volkszeitung. Edited Weber's literary works (1908) and his letters to Count von Brühl (1911), besides preparing a general edition of his correspondence and a thesis upon his characteristics as a writer.

Kajanus, Robert (Helsingfors, 1856). Eminent Finnish conductor and composer, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, with further study in Paris and Dresden, from 1882 active in Helsingfors, soon establishing an orchestral school, a choral society and (from 1886) the Philharmonic Orchestra, which he rapidly raised to the first rank. Since 1897 he has also been music-director at the University. Has written the symphonic poems Kullervo and Aino (with chorus), the orchestral suite Sommarminnen, 2 Finnish rhapsodies and other orchestral pieces, cantatas, men's choruses, piano-pieces and songs. See Flodin, Finska Musiker, 1900.

Kalafaty, B. (in the Crimea, 1869). Russian composer of a Phantasie-Ouverture, 2 piano-sonatas, other piano-works, choruses and songs.

Kalbeck, Max (Breslau, 1850-1921, Vienna). Eminent Silesian critic, biographer and poet, educated at Munich University and Conservatory, between 1870 and 1890 publishing several volumes of poems, from 1875 critic at Breslau first for the Schlesische Zeitung and then for the Breslauer Zeitung, besides for a time assisting at the new Art Museum, from 1880 (at Hanslick's suggestion) on the staff of the Allgemeine Zeitung at Vienna, becoming also critic for the Presse, the Montags-Revue and (from 1886) the Tageblatt. Collections of his critiques were published in 1885, '96 and '98. He also made fine German translations of the libretti of many famous operas (French, Italian, Czechic, Russian and English), prepared new original texts for Mozart's Bastien und Bastienne and Gärtnerin aus Liebe and for the Maienkönigin ascribed to Gluck, besides composing the books for Joh. Strauss' Jabuka (1894), Von Fielitz' Das stille Dorf (1897), Henschel's Nubia (1898), Poldini's Decius (1899) and Caro's Hochzeit zu Ulfösti. Author also of Wagnerian studies (1876, '77, '82), biographies of the poet J. C. Günther (1879), Daniel Spitzer (1894) and especially Brahms (4 vols. 1904-14), and collections of Brahms' letters (from 1906).

Káldy, Julius (Pest, 1838-1901, do.). Able Hungarian conductor and student of national music, trained at the Pest and Vienna Conservatories, from 1855 singer in the Vienna court-choir, from 1858 opera-director at Kolozsvár, from 1874 professor in the training-school of the Pest Nationaltheater, from 1875 Richter's successor as conductor of the Musikfreunde concerts there, from 1881 manager of the National-theater, from 1884 manager of the Opera and from 1895 (with Nikolics) head of the Hungarian Music School, besides following Nikisch as conductor at the Opera. He was an indefatigable investigator of Hungarian national songs, especially those from the revolutionary periods of Ráczky and of 1848-49, from 1890 publishing a series of striking collections, including one of dances (1896), and also composing the stage-work Lagerleben der Kuruzen, 1896.

Kalhauge, Sophus Viggo Harald (Copenhagen, 1840-1905, do.). Danish teacher and composer, pupil of P. Heise, Rongsted and J. C. Gebauer, with foreign study (as Ancker scholar), from about 1865 a prominent teacher at Copenhagen. Wrote the operas Zouavens Hjemkomst, 1868, Paa Krigsfod, 1880, and Mantellen, 1889, the choral An der Frühling, piano-pieces and songs.

Kalinnikov, Vassili Sergeievitch (Voima, 1866-1900, Jalta). Gifted, but short-lived Russian composer, pupil of the Moscow Philharmonic School, in 1893-94 assistant-conductor at the Italian Opera in Moscow and then laid aside by ill-health. Wrote music for Tolstoi's Tsar Boris (1899), the cantata John of Damascus, the choral ballade Russalka, 2 symphonies, the symphonic poems The Nymphs and Cedar and Palm, an orchestral suite and 2 intermezzi, a prologue to the opera 1812, a string-quartet, piano-pieces and songs. G.

Kalisch, Paul (Berlin, 1855). Able Prussian operatic tenor, at first educated as an architect, then pupil of Leoni and Lamperti, appearing for five years in Italy, then at the Munich Opera, from 1884 at the Berlin Opera, in 1887 at the Metropolitan, New York, in 1888 marrying the soprano Lilli Lehmann, and continuing for many years in favor both in Europe and in America. He and his wife sang together at the Paris première of Tristan und Isolde (1904). Of late years they have lived in the suburbs of Berlin.

Kalischer, Alfred Christlieb Salomo Ludwig (Thorn, 1842-1909, Berlin). Prussian student of literature and philosophy (Ph.D. at Leipzig in 1866), poet, critic and author, in music a pupil of Bürgel and Böhmer. From about 1870 he lived in Berlin, much occupied as a private tutor or in various schools (both musical and general). From 1873 he edited the Neue Musikzeitung, and wrote much for other periodicals. Besides other works author of Lessing als Musikästhetiker, 1889, and a long line of studies about Beethoven, including Beethoven u. seine Zeitgenossen, 4 vols. 1908, besides editing his letters (1902, '06-08) and reprinting notices or books by Wegeler and Ries, Von Bräuning and Schindler.

Kalkbrenner, Christian (Minden, 1755-1806, Paris). Hanoverian composer, pupil of Becker and Rodewald, court-musician at Berlin from 1788 and at Rheinsberg in 1790-96, and from 1799 chorusmaster at the Paris Opéra. Wrote several operas, some chamber-music, etc., besides a short music-history (1792, 2d ed. 1802), a text-book in composition (1789) and a French version of F. X. Richter's manual of harmony (1804).

Kalkbrenner, Friedrich Wilhelm Michael (n. Berlin, 1788-1849, n. Paris), son of the above.

Noted Prussian pianist, pupil of his father, the Paris Conservatory, Clementi and Albrechtsberger, from about 1805 gaining favor as a virtuoso in Berlin, Munich, Stuttgart and Paris, where he began to attract many pupils, from 1814 settled in London, where he was long a fashionable player and teacher, and from 1824 a partner in the Pleyel firm at Paris. In 1823 he toured in Germany with the harpist Dizi, went again in 1833 and visited Belgium in 1836. From 1818 he was active in promoting and using Logier's chiroplast. Though not really a great artist, he distinctly advanced many details of piano-technique, especially the equality and readiness of the fingers, octave-playing, the use of the pedal, etc. Wrote 4 piano-concertos (one for 2 pianos), a piano-septet, 2 piano-sextets, 2 piano-quintets, 3 piano-quartets, 7 piano-trios, 15 piano-sonatas and many salon-pieces. Author of a method with the chiroplast (1830) and a harmony-manual for pianists (1849). Memoir by Boivin, 1840. G.

Kalliwoda, Johann Wenzeslaus (Prague, 1801-1866, Karlsruhe). Eminent Bohemian violinist and composer, trained at the Prague Conservatory, from 1816 playing in the opera-orchestra there and from 1822 court-director at Donaueschingen, retiring in 1853 to Karlsruhe. In 1822 he married the singer Therese Brunetti. He toured but seldom, but was known as a finished and sympathetic player. Wrote 7 symphonies, many overtures and orchestral fantasias, 2 violin-concertos (one for 2 violins), 7 violin-concertinos, 3 string-quartets, 3 string-trios, various violin-pieces, 10 masses, a Requiem, other church-music, choruses, part-songs, songs and piano-pieces, besides (probably) the operas Prinzessin Christine and Bianca. Memoir by Strunz, 1909 (in Deutsche Arbeit). G.

Kalliwoda, Wilhelm (Donaueschingen, 1827-1893, Karlsruhe), son of the above. Badense pianist, pupil of his father and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1847 choirmaster at the Catholic Church in Karlsruhe and in 1853-75 opera-director there. Wrote good men's choruses, songs and pleasing piano-pieces. G.

Kallstenius, Edwin (Filipstad, 1881). Swedish composer, at first educated in natural science at Lund University, then pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, since 1907 active in Stockholm. Has written a symphonic Vorspiel für eine Tragödie, a Scherzo for string-quartet, oboe and clarinet, 2 string-quartets, a violin-sonata, a 'cello-sonata, songs, etc.

Kamienski, Lucian (Gnesen, 1885). Polish-Prussian composer and writer, educated at the Berlin Hochschule und University (Ph.D. 1910), in 1909-19 music-critic for the Königsberg Allgem. Zeitung, then going to Posen as assistant-director of the Akademie für Musik and from 1922 lecturer or professor at the University. Has written (under the name 'Dolega-Kamienski') many songs, part-songs for women's voices, some orchestral pieces, the operetta Tabu, 1917, and an unfinished Biblical opera, Thamar (original text). Author of Die Oratorien von J. A. Hasse, 1912, Zum Tempo Rubato, 1918 (Archiv für Musikwiss.), contributions to the program-books of the 2d and 3d East Prussian Festivals and various articles in periodicals.

Kamiński, Mathias (Oedenburg, 1734-1821, Warsaw). Polish-Hungarian composer, trained at Vienna and from about 1760 settled at Warsaw. In 1778 he successfully produced the first opera in Polish (Nedza Uszczesliwiona), followed by 5 others (till 1795) and 2 in German (not given), a cantata (at dedication of the Sobieski monument, 1788), masses and other church-music, etc.

Kammel, Anton (Hanna, ?1740-1788?, London?). Bohemian violinist, protégé of Count Waldstein, pupil of Tartini, at first active in Prague and from 1869 in London. Wrote several overtures, quartets, trios, duets, etc., for strings or with piano or wind, and some masses.

Kammerlander, Karl (Weissenhorn, 1828-1892, Augsburg). Swabian poet and vocal composer, pupil of Kempfer, from 1871 director at Augsburg Cathedral. Wrote church-music, men's choruses and songs.

Kämpf, Karl (Berlin, 1874). Prussian composer, pupil of Mme. Olbrich-Poppenhagen, Sormann and F. E. Koch, since 1896 working in Berlin. Has written the symphonic poem Im deutschen Wald, the suites Hiawatha, Andersens Märchen and Aus baltischen Landen, Melodien for strings, a violin-sonata, the ballade Verlorene Liebe, the men's choruses Meeressage and Aus Natur und Leben, songs, duets, piano-pieces and pieces for the harmonium. Sketch by Hagemann-Bonn. 1907 (in Monographien moderner Musiker).

Kandler, Franz Sales (Klosterneuburg, 1792-1831, n. Vienna). Austrian writer, trained when a boy in the Vienna court-choir, as an employee of the War Office from 1815 much in Italy, where he spent his leisure in historical studies. Wrote monographs on Hasse (1820) and Palestrina (1834) and notes on Italian music (1836). See his letters from Venice in the Riemann Festschrift, 1909. G.

Kanitz, Ernst (Vienna, 1894). Austrian theorist, pupil of Heuberger and Schreker, now teaching in the New Vienna Conservatory. Has written an overture, a string-quartet, a violin-sonata, the choral work Das hohe Lied, 1921, and songs.

Kanne, Friedrich August (Delitzsch, 1778-1833, Vienna). Saxon composer, originally trained in theology and medicine, but from 1807 a protégé of Prince Lobkowitz, in 1821-24 becoming editor of the Allgem. musikal. Zeitung at Vienna (much interested in Beethoven). Wrote a long line of operas and singspiele, beginning with Orpheus, 1807, and Fernando und Miranda, 1808 (original texts), besides symphonies, sonatas, masses, etc.

Kapp, Julius (Steinbach, 1883). Badenese biographer, educated at Marburg, Berlin and Munich Universities (Ph.D. 1906), in 1904 founding the Literarischer Anzeiger at Berlin and editing it (with Thyssen) till 1907. Author of Wagner u. Liszt, 1908, Liszt, 1909, a Liszt-Brevier, 1910, Wagner, 1910, Der junge Wagner, 1910, Liszt u.d. Frauen, 1911, Wagner u.d. Frauen, 1912, Paganini, 1913, Berlioz, 1914, Das Dreigestirn Berlioz-Liszt-Wagner, 1920, Meyerbeer, 1920, Franz Schreker, 1921, and Die Oper d. Gegenwart, 1922, and edited Liszt's writings (4 vols. 1910, with Register, 1909) and Wagner's writings (24 vols. 1914).

Fapsberger, Johann Hieronymus von. 17th C. G.

Karajan, Theodor Georg von (Vienna, 1810-1873, do.). Eminent Austrian literary scholar, head of the Academy of Sciences and vice-director of the Imperial Library. Author of Haydn in London 1791-92, 1861, and Aus Metastasio's Hofleben, 1861. He also supplied data for Jahn's life of Mozart. G.

Karasowski, Moritz (Warsaw, 1823-1892, Dresden). Polish 'cellist and writer, pupil of Kratzer, from 1851 playing in the opera-orchestra at Warsaw, in 1858-60 on tour, and from 1860 court-musician at Dresden. Author of a History of the Polish Opera, 1859, Chopin's Youth, 1862 (2d ed. 1869), Mozart, 1868, and Chopin, 1877 (3d ed. 1881)—all in Polish.

Karg-Elert, Siegfried (Oberndorf, 1879). Eminent Württemberger composer of ultra-modern tendency, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, where since 1919 he has been professor. He has given special attention to works for organ and for the 'kunstharmenium', for which he has published several technical manuals. His works include

For orchestra or ensemble—suite, Jeux d'Enfants; Kammer-Sinfonietta in A (prize, 1919); string-quartet.

For violin—Sonata in E min.; Partita in D; Sinfonische Legende; duets.

For 'cello—Sonata.

For piano—Concerto in D-flat; Sonatas in F-sharp min. and B-flat min. (2); 3 Sonatinas; 28 Präludien; 10 Bagatellen; 6 sets of Reisebilder; Aphorismen; Schwabenheimal.

For organ—Sonata; Fantasia and Fugue in D; Fugentriologie (quadruple fugue); Passacaglia; Chaconne; Sanctus and Pastorale (with violin); Choral-Impressionen; 3 Sinfonische Choräle; Chorale (with conclusion for wind); 3 Sinfonische Kanzonen; 20 Prä- u. Postludien; 3 Pastelle; 3 Impressionen (also for harmonium).

For harmonium—Sonatas in B min. and B-flat min.; 3 Sonatinas; Partita; Aquarellen; Szenes Pittoresques; 5 Monologe; Improvisation; Madrigale; Orchestrale Studien; Intarsien; Poesien; 8 Stücke; Silhouetten (duos with piano).

For voices—Das christliche Jahr (12 motets); Requiem aeternam (12-part); Pfingstymnus (8-part).

Many songs, secular and sacred (the latter with violin and organ).

See catalogue and sketch by Avril, 1908, and articles by Hull, 1913 (Musical Times). A.

Karl, Tom (Dublin, 1846-1916, Rochester, N. Y.). Irish operatic tenor, pupil of H. Phillips, Sangiovanni and Trivulzi, from about 1865 appearing in Italian opera in England, in 1871-73 touring in the United States in English opera with Mme. Parepa-Rosa and finally settling in

New York. From 1879 he turned to light opera and in 1887 (with Barnabee) organized The Bostonians, which had notable success. In 1896 he retired from the stage. A.

Karłowicz, Mieczysław (Wiszniewo, 1876–1909, Zakopane). Gifted Polish (–Lithuanian) composer, pupil of Barcewicz, Noskowski, Roguski, Maszynski and Urban, in 1904–06 director of the Warsaw Musical Society and then living at Zakopane (Galicia). His death under the fall of an avalanche cut short what promised to be a remarkably brilliant career. Wrote a symphony, the symphonic poems Returning Waves, Old, Old, Songs, Stanisław and Anna of Oswiecim and Sad News, a Lithuanian Rhapsody for orchestra, a violin-concerto, a Serenade for strings, a piano-sonata, a Prelude and Fugue for piano and some songs. He published some unedited letters of Chopin (1903).

Karpath, Ludwig (Pest, 1866). Hungarian singer and critic, pupil of the Pest Conservatory and of Laufer, in 1886–88 with the National Opera Company of New York, from 1894 critic for the Neue Wiener Tageblatt and in 1910–17 editing the Merker. Author of Siegfried Wagner, 1902, Zu den Briefen Wagners an eine Putzmacherin, 1906, and Wagner der Schuldenmacher, 1914.

Kashin, Daniel Nikititch (Moscow, 1773–1844, do.). Russian composer and song-collector, pupil of Sarti. Wrote the operas Natalya, 1801, Beautiful Olga, 1809, and The One-Day Reign of Nourmahal, 1817, cantatas, choruses and patriotic songs, and edited two important collections of Russian folk-songs.

Kashkin, Nikolai Dmitrievitch (Voronezh, 1839). Russian critic and author, since 1862 connected with several Moscow papers, especially the Mjedomosti and writing often for periodicals. Author of Recollections of Tchaikovsky, 1896, Outline of Russian Music-History, 1908, and a text-book in harmony (1875), besides translations from Bussler, Riemann and Lobe.

Kashperov, Vladimir Nikititch (Simbirsk, 1827–1894, n. Mozhaisk). Russian singing-teacher and composer, pupil of Voigt, Henselt and Dehn, in 1858–64 working in Italy, in 1866–72 professor at the Moscow Conservatory and then conducting free singing-classes there. Wrote the operas The Gypsies (1850, not given entire), Maria Tudor, 1859 (Milan), Rienzi, 1863 (Florence), Consuelo (Venice?), The Storm, 1867 (Petrograd), and Taras Bulba, 1893 (Moscow). He was also known as an author. Memoir by Fudel, 1894 (Russ. Rundschau). G.

Kaskel, Karl, Freiherr von (Dresden, 1866). Saxon composer, trained at the Leipzig and Cologne Conservatories, from about 1890 active at Dresden and since 1900 at Munich. Has written the operas Hochzeitsmorgen, 1893, Sjula, 1895, Die Bettlerin vom Pont des Arts, 1899, Der Dusle und das Babeli, 1903, Der Gefangene der Zarin, 1910, Die Nachtigall, 1910, and Die Schmiedin von Kent, 1916, an operetta, a Lustspielouvertüre, an orchestral Humoreske and Ballade, many songs, etc. Sketch by Schmitz, 1909 (Monographien moderner Musiker).

Kässmeyer, Moritz (Vienna, 1831–1884, do.). Austrian violinist and composer, pupil of the Vienna Conservatory, long playing in the court-opera-orchestra there. Wrote symphonies, a suite for strings, 5 string-quartets, masses and other church-music, part-songs and songs, besides a comic opera (1869).

Kastalsky, Alexander Dmitrievitch (Moscow, 1856). Able Russian church-musician, graduated from the Moscow Conservatory in 1882, from 1887 beginning to teach (piano) in the new Synodal School, from 1899 assisting in the direction of the Synodal Choir and since 1901 its conductor. Under his guidance the Choir has gained international fame. He has worked diligently to give new vitality to Russian church-music and in his own works has happily blended qualities old and new. Has written the oratorio The Furnace of Nabucho, 1909 (with a cappella choruses), the cantata Le Chant d'Église, a Requiem (1916, for those fallen in war), nearly 100 a cappella choruses, mostly sacred, but a few patriotic, the opera Clara Militcha, 1916, incidental music for Kamenski's Stenka Rasin (1918), for King Lear (1919) and for G. Hauptmann's Hannele (1920), the piano-suite En Géorgie, De Temps Passés, 4 vols. (piano-illustrations of ancient music of oriental countries), and a manual for self-instruction in church-music. A.

Kastner, Alfred (Vienna, 1870). Noted Austrian harpist, pupil of Zamara, making his début in 1885, followed by engagements at the Dresden and Warsaw Operas, in 1892–98 teacher at the Pest Academy, from 1898 touring in the United States, from 1900 in Zurich and since 1904 soloist in the Queen's Hall Orchestra, London. Has written concert-pieces for his instrument.

Kastner, Emerich (Vienna, 1847–1916, do.). Austrian critic and author of a Wagner-Katalog, 1878, a Wagner-Kalendar, 1881–83, Bayreuth, 1884, Wagneriana, 1885 (letters), Verzeichnis d. Briefe Wagners, 1887, Moniteur Musical, 1887, the first fascicle of a biographical dictionary (1889), and Die dramatische Werke Wagners, 1899, besides a collection of Beethoven's letters (1911). For some time he edited the Wiener Musikal. Zeitung (later called Parsifal).

Kastner, Georg Friedrich Eugen (Strasburg, 1852–1882, Bonn), son of the following. Alsatian physicist, early gaining notice by studies in sound-vibrations and by the invention of the pyrophone, and publishing an account of the latter (1873, 4th ed. 1876). See his father's biography, vol. iii.

Kastner, Johann Georg (Strasburg, 1810–1867, Paris). Remarkable Alsatian teacher, theorist, historian and composer, at first educated for the Lutheran ministry, but engaged upon music from youth. From 1832 he was busy with operas, to such purpose as to be sent by the Strasburg authorities to study at Paris with Berton and Reicha. There from 1837 he brought out a long series of text-books in harmony, counterpoint, composition, instrumentation, singing, playing different instruments, etc., which were adopted by the Conservatory and did much to systematize instruction generally. Having been a bandmaster in youth, he took special interest in military music and gave the impulse to the band-competitions that began in 1867. A peculiar undertaking was his Livre-Partitions or cantatas on various subjects, preceded by historical essays, the purpose of which was at once artistic and pedagogical. Besides other enterprises he was an industrious writer of articles for periodicals and for Schilling's Lexikon. He labored, also, with infinite pains on an Encyclopédie of his own, without living to complete it. He was an Officier in the Légion d'Honneur, member of various foreign societies and Ph.D. of Tübingen Univ. His compositions may be summarized as follows.

Operas—Gustav Wasa, 1832, Der Tod Oscars, 1833, Der Sarazene, 1834, Die Königin der Sarmaten, 1835, Béatrice, 1839, La Maschera, 1841, Le Dernier Roi de Juda, 1844 (Biblical opera, probably his best work), Les Nonnes de Robert le Diable (not given). Also music for Die Belagerung von Missaloughi, 1829.

Scenas with orchestra—La Veuve du Marin, Le Nègre, Le Proscrit, Pensées d'Amour, Le Barde, Judas Iscariote, Le Vélran, Glenallan, etc. (over 40 in all, including some songs).

Cantatas—La Résurrection, 1835, Sardanapale, 1852, Cantate Alsacienne, 1858, etc.

Livres-Partitions—Les Danses des Morts, 1852 (with voluminous essays), Stéphen, ou La Harpe d'Éole, 1856 (lyric monologue with choruses), Les Cris de Paris, 1857 (humorous symphony with soli and chorus), Rêve d'Oswald, ou Les Sirenes, 1858, Parémiologie Musicale de la Langue Française, 1862.

Collections of part-songs (men's voices mostly)—Bibliothèque Chorale (72 pieces), Heures d'Amour (6), Les Chants de la Vie, 1854 (28), Les Chants de l'Armée Française, 1855 (23), Les Orphéons, etc.

For orchestra—3 symphonies; 7 overtures; 10 serenades for wind; many marches, dances, etc., for military band. Also saxophone-sextet.

For piano—concerto; many waltzes, galops, polkas, marches, etc.

Memoir by Ludwig [von Jan], 1886. G.

Kate, André ten (Amsterdam, 1796–1858, Haarlem). Dutch 'cellist and composer, pupil of Bertelmann, becoming influential in promoting musical life throughout Holland. Wrote several operas, including Seid e Palmira, 1831, and Constantia, 1835, chamber-music, choruses, etc.

Kauder, Hugo (Tobitschau, 1888). Moravian composer of symphonies, a fantasia for violin and orchestra, a string-sextet, a string-quartet, sonatas for violin, for viola and for 'cello, a piano-trio, the choral work Zigeunerlied, about 80 songs and pieces for piano and for 'cello. In 1910–17 he was in the Konzertverein orchestra at Vienna, at first as violinist, then as violist.

Kauders, Albert. Austrian journalist and composer of the operas Der Schatz des Rhampsinis, 1887, and Walther von der Vogelweide, 1896 (original text).

Kauer, Ferdinand (n. Znaim, 1751–1831, Vienna). Moravian composer, pupil of Heidenreich, in youth organist at the Znaim Jesuit College, later for different periods director at the Josephstädter and Leopoldstädter Theaters in Vienna and of the Opera at Gratz, from 1795 director at Marinelli's and finally violinist at the Leopoldstädter. Wrote an enormous number of light operas, singspiele, vaudevilles, etc., including Das Donauweibchen and Die Sternenkönigin, the oratorio Die Sündfluth, 1809, 20 masses, Requiems, other church-music, cantatas, songs, symphonies, chamber-music, etc., but lost most of his manuscripts in the Danube flood of 1830. Also wrote methods for violin, flute and clarinet.

Kauffmann, Emil (Ludwigsburg, 1836–1909, Tübingen), son of the following. Württemberger violinist and teacher, trained at the Stuttgart Conservatory, from 1853 playing in the court-orchestra there, from 1868 teacher at the Basel Music School and in 1877–1907 director at Tübingen University (Ph.D. 1883). Author of a thesis on the development of music since 1750 (1884), a life of J. H. Knecht (1892) and articles in the Leipzig Wochenblatt. Wrote the choral work Die Nacht, men's choruses, over 60 songs, piano-sonatas, etc.

Kauffmann, Ernst Friedrich (Ludwigsburg, 1803–1856, Stuttgart). In 1827–35 teacher at the Realschule in Ludwigsburg, losing his place because of revolutionary sympathies and in 1838–42 suffering imprisonment at Asperg, where he wrote a series of exquisite songs (36 published).

Kauffmann, Fritz (Berlin, 1855). Prussian conductor and composer, pupil of Mohr, the Berlin Hochschule and (as Mendelssohn Scholar) at Vienna, from 1882 teaching in Berlin, and since 1889 at Magdeburg, chiefly as conductor of the symphony-concerts (till 1900), but also since 1897 of the oratorio-concerts. He gained the title of royal director in 1893. Has written a symphony, an overture, a piano-concerto, 2 violin-concertos, a 'cello-concerto, a wind-quintet, a string-quartet, a serenade for quartet, 2 piano-trios, 2 piano-sonatas, Tanz-Improvisationen for piano, several organ-pieces, many part-songs and songs, besides the comic opera Die Herzkrankheit.

Kaufmann, Friedrich (Dresden, 1785–1866, do.), son of an able clock-maker. Inventor of various mechanical instruments, including the Trumpet-automaton (1808), the Belloneon, the Harmonichord, the Chordaulion, the Salpinion and the Symphonion, from the last two of which his son, Friedrich Theodor (1823–1872) in 1851 developed the more successful Orchestron. The business is now in charge of Theodor Kaufmann (b. 1867).

Kaufmann, Maurice (New York, 1876). American violinist, trained at the Hoch (Frankfort) and Brussels Conservatories and by Thomson, playing in public from boyhood and since about 1900 touring widely in Europe and America, becoming concertmaster of the Russian, Volpe, People's and other New York orchestras, besides playing in various ensemble-groups, including (from 1907) his own Quartet. He has lectured on the growth of violin-literature. A.

Kaun, Hugo (Berlin, 1863). Able Prussian composer, pupil of the Berlin Hochschule, Kiel and the Raifs, from 1884 active in Berlin, but in 1887 coming to America, where till 1902 he was influential at Milwaukee as teacher, conductor and composer, and since 1902 in Berlin again. His genius for composition was extremely precocious (160 works before he was sixteen), and has developed with increasing originality and power. A summary of his works includes Operas—Der Pietist [Oliver Browne], Sappho, 1917, Der Fremde, 1920.

Choral Works—Normannen-Abschied, Abendfeier in Venedig, Auf dem Meer, Zigeuner-Treiben, Mutter Erde, 1914, Festkantate, Psalm 126.

For orchestra—symphonies in D (An mein Vaterland), C min. and E min. (1914); symphonic poems Vineta, Minnehaha and Hiawatha; symphonic prologue Marie Magdalene; overture Am Rhein; suites Ein Karnevalsfest and Märkische; Festmarsch (using 'The Star-Spangled Banner'); Feierlicher Einzugsmarsch; humoreske Falstaff; several pieces for strings or small orchestra, piano-concerto in E-flat.

Chamber-music—octets for wind and for strings and wind; piano-quintet in F-sharp min. (at first for strings); 3 string-quartets; 2 piano-trios.

Numerous piano-pieces, men's choruses and songs.

Sketch by Altmann, 1906 (Monographien moderner Musiker). A.

Kazanly, Nikolai Ivanovitch (Tiraspol, 1869). Russian conductor and composer, pupil of the Odessa Music School and the Petrograd Conservatory, with much intimacy with Balakirev, since 1897 directing concerts of Russian music at various places, notably in annual series at Munich (till 1904). Lately he has been on a commission for improving Russian military music. He has contributed articles to periodicals in both Russia and Germany. Has written the opera Miranda, 1910, a symphony (1897), a sinfonietta (1893), the orchestral fantasias The Villa by the Sea and La Nuit de Carneval, the cantata Le Loup dans le Chenil, the choral pieces Russalka, 1897, and Leonore, 1897, various choruses and songs, besides orchestrating piano-pieces by Glinka (Glinkiana), Liszt and Schubert, and making many arrangements (Philharmonica) for small orchestra.

Kazatchenko, Grigory Alexeievitch (b. 1858). Russian composer, trained at the Petrograd Conservatory, from 1883 chorusrmaster at the Opera, besides directing concerts there and in Paris (1898). Has written the operas Prince Serebryanny, 1892, and Pan Solkin, 1902, a symphony, an overture, 3 suites, a viola-fantasia, choral works, etc.

Kazhinsky, Viktor (Vilna, 1812-1870, Petrograd?). Lithuanian composer, pupil of Elsner, from 1843 active at Petrograd, where he became conductor of the Opera. In 1845 he made a tour in Germany and Austria with Lvov, of which he published a diary in Polish. Wrote the operas Fenella, 1840, Der ewige Jude, 1842, Les Pages du Duc de Vendôme, 1846, and Man and Wife, 1848, concertos for piano and for violin, overtures, cantatas, some fine songs (Album, 1855) and piano-pieces. Author of a Hist. of Italian Opera, 1851.

Kearns, William Henry (Dublin, 1794-1846, London). Irish violinist, from 1817 playing in the Covent Garden orchestra, London, and assisting in the first English presentations of Der Freischütz (1824), Zemire und Azor (1831) and Robert le Diable (1832). He wrote additional wind-parts for The Messiah and Israel in Egypt (1834) and for Handel choruses as given at festivals. He also collaborated with Gauntlett on his Comprehensive Tune-Book, 1846-47. G.

Keeble, John (Chichester, 1711-1786, London). English organist, pupil of Kelway and Pepusch, from 1737 playing at St. George's (Hanover Sq.), succeeding Roseingrave, and also at the Ranelagh Gardens. Wrote many organ-pieces and a Theory of Harmonics, 1784. G.

Keeley, Mary Anne, née Goward (Ipswich, 1805-1899, London). Noted English actress (comedy), in 1825-29, prior to her marriage with the comedian Robert Keeley, a successful stage-soprano. She took part in Der Freischütz (1825) and the première of Oberon (1826). G.

Keeton, Haydn (n. Chesterfield, 1847-1921, Peterborough). English organist, pupil of G. J. Elvey, from 1870 for more than a half-century organist at Peterborough Cathedral. Wrote services, anthems and canticles, besides a symphony.

Kéfer, Paul (Rouen, 1875). Able French 'cellist, pupil of the Verviers Music School and the Paris Conservatory, from 1900 playing in the Colonne, Lamoureux and Opéra-Comique Orchestras, in 1908-13 a leading player in the New York Symphony Society and in 1913 co-founder (with Barrère) of the Trio de Lutèce. A.

Keiser, Reinhart (n. Weissenfels, 1674-1739, Copenhagen). Eminent Saxon conductor and composer, trained by his father and at the Thomasschule in Leipzig, beginning his long career as opera-producer in 1692 at Brunswick. From 1694 he was at Hamburg, where in 1697-1734 he brought out about 115 stage-works, by his energy and enterprise soon acquiring a commanding position as opera-director and building up an orchestra of ability. In 1700-02 he gave series of concerts in the winter, in 1703-06 was manager of the Opera (at first with Drüsdicke), then lived for a time at Weissenfels, in 1709 returned to Hamburg and married the daughter of the rich town-musician Oldenburg, in 1716 resumed his winter-concerts, in 1717 visited Copenhagen, in 1719-21 was at Stuttgart, vainly seeking the post of court-director, in 1723-28 was court-director at Copenhagen, returning in 1728 to be cantor at the Hamburg Cathedral, and finally lived in Copenhagen again, where his daughter was a leading opera-singer. In 1703-06 the young Handel was closely associated with him, at first playing in the orchestra. Keiser was a facile melodist, a skillful organizer of musical forces and for his time a useful promoter of musical drama in Germany. He not only adapted to German use the styles prevalent elsewhere, but he furthered the advance of native production, including a few works upon topics of local popularity (Störtebecker und Goedje Michel, 1701, Die leipziger Messe, Der hamburger Jahrmarkt, 1725, etc.). For a short time his position was extremely brilliant. But he had neither the gifts nor the character to maintain it. In opera he mostly confined himself to the subjects of classical history and mythology after the Italian fashion. His sacred music, including oratorios, Passions, cantatas, Psalms, motets, etc., was often effective, especially as he sought to avoid the dryness and pedantry of many 17th-century writers. Some of these serious works were published, as were the operas Ottavia, 1705, Almira, 1706, and L'Inganno Felice, 1714. Memoirs by Voigt, 1890 (Vierteljahrsschr.) and Leichten-tritt, 1901, and see articles by Chrysander, 1878-79 (Allgem. musikal. Zeitung) and Kleefeld, 1900 (I. M. G. Sammelbde.), as well as Lindner, Die erste stehende deutsche Oper, 1855. G.

Kelbe, Theodore (Brunswick, 1862). North German violinist and conductor, pupil of G. Müller, W. Wenzel, G. Ewald and Heckmann, from 1879 playing in the court-orchestra at Brunswick, in 1882-1901 in the Cologne opera-orchestra, from 1901, having migrated to America, concertmaster of the Milwaukee Orchestra and since 1904 conductor of the Northwest Sängerbund, besides from 1910 teaching at the Schenuit music-school in Milwaukee. Since 1904 he has led large choral festivals at various places in the Interior. Has written some orchestral, violin- and piano-pieces and men's choruses. A.

Keldorfer, Viktor (Salzburg, 1873). Austrian choral conductor, trained at the Mozarteum, Salzburg, in 1900-21 Kremser's successor as director of the Vienna Men's Singing Society and the Sängerbund and from 1922 of the Schubertbund. Has written many men's choruses, a Missa Solemnis and orchestral arrangements of Strauss waltzes, besides reëditing the oratorio Sieg des Glaubens of Leopold I (1918).

Kéler-Béla [Albert von Kéler] (Bartfeld, 1820-1882, Wiesbaden). Hungarian dance-composer, pupil of Sechter and Schlesinger, from 1845 playing in the orchestra of the Theater an der Wien in Vienna, in 1854 conducting the Gungl orchestra in Berlin, in 1855 following Aug. Lanner at Vienna, from 1856 in military service as bandmaster, and in 1863-73 conductor of the Kur-Orchester at Wiesbaden. Wrote a large amount of brilliant dance-music, overtures and violin-pieces. G.

Keller, Karl (Dessau, 1784-1855, Schaffhausen). Saxon flutist, from 1804 in the Berlin court-band, from 1806 at Kassel, in 1814-16 at Stuttgart and from 1817 at Donaueschingen, finally becoming opera-director (pensioned in 1849). Wrote polonaises and divertimenti for orchestra, 3 flute-concertos and many other flute-pieces, part-songs and several fine songs.

Keller, Max (Trostberg, 1770-1855, Altötting). Bavarian church-musician, pupil of his brother, whom in 1788-98 he succeeded as organist at the Benedictine abbey in Seon, and from 1801 organist at Altötting. He was intimate with Michael Haydn at Salzburg. Wrote 12 masses (Latin and German), litanies, organ-pieces, etc.

Keller, Otto (Vienna, 1861). Austrian civil official (in service till 1906), musically a pupil of Hanslick and Bruckner, from as early as 1876 collecting data for a comprehensive survey of musical literature, from 1885 publishing many biographies and in 1886-1901 editing the Deutsche Kunst- und Musikzeitung. Author of lives of Beethoven (1885), Goldmark (1900), Suppé (1905) and Tchaikovsky (1914) and two music histories (1894, 1908, both in 4th eds. 1911-12). Publication of his immense mass of bibliographical material was begun in 1919 under the title Musikliteratur. Of recent years he has lived at Munich. He married Suppé's granddaughter.

Keller, Walter (Chicago, 1873). American organist, pupil of the American Conservatory (Chicago) and of Gleason, also of the Leipzig Conservatory and of Piutti, from 1899 teaching at Northwestern University and from 1906 at the Sherwood Music School (Chicago), in 1911 becoming its director. In 1903-18 he was organist at St. Vincent de Paul's and since 1912 has been dean of music at De Paul University (Mus.D. 1916). He has been active also in directing choral clubs, and in 1907 conducted the première of Gleason's Otho Visconti. He is prominent in the Am. Guild of Organists. Has written the comic opera The Crumpled Isle, the melodrama Alaric's Death, canticles and anthems for both Catholic and Episcopal services, organ-pieces, canons and other works for piano (including an ingenious synchronous Prelude and Fugue) and songs. A.

Kellermann, Berthold (Nuremberg, 1853). Able Bavarian pianist, trained at the Ramann Music School (Nuremberg) and by Liszt, in 1875-76 teaching at the Kullak Academy in Berlin, from 1876 at the Stern Conservatory there, from 1878 at Bayreuth (partly as tutor in Wagner's household) and since 1882 at the Munich Conservatory. At Bayreuth he also conducted orchestral concerts and in 1893-94 led the Academic Gesangverein at Munich.

Kellermann, Christian (Randers, 1815-1866, Copenhagen). Fine Danish 'cellist, pupil of Merk, from 1835 known through extensive tours in Austria, Russia and other northern countries (partly with Ole Bull), from 1847 soloist in the court-orchestra at Copenhagen, but with further tours in Italy and Germany.

Kelley, Edgar Stillman (Sparta, Wis. 1857). Eminent American composer, pupil of F. W. Merriam, Eddy and Ledochowski and of the Stuttgart Conservatory, in 1880-86 and '92-96 living in San Francisco, in 1886-92 and '96-1900 in New York, in 1901-02 acting-professor at Yale University, in 1902-10 teacher of piano and composition in Berlin, and since 1910 head of the composition-department of the Cincinnati Conservatory and also holding a fellowship from the Western College for Women at Oxford, O. For a time he was organist in San Francisco and Oakland, in 1890-91 conducted a comic-opera troupe in the East, in 1893-95 was critic for the San Francisco Examiner and in 1896-97 gave extension-lectures in New York. As a composer, he has taken special interest in developing American themes and sentiments, especially those connected with the 'colonial' period. His works include the comic opera Puritania, 1892, incidental music to Macbeth (two settings, 1885 and 1909), Ben Hur, (1899) and Prometheus Bound, a setting of Pilgrim's Progress as a miracle-play (1918), various choral works (as settings of Whitman's My Captain and Poe's The Sleeper), the symphonies Gulliver and New England, 1913, the orchestral suites Aladdin and Alice in Wonderland, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, Theme and Variations for string-quartet, various piano-pieces and notable songs (Israfel, 1901, etc.). Author of Musical Essays, 2 vols. and Chopin the Composer, 1913, besides many articles in magazines. Litt.D. of Miami Univ., 1916 and LL.D. of Univ. of Cincinnati, 1917. G. A.

Kellie, Earl of [Thomas Alexander Erskine] (1732-1781, Brussels). Scottish amateur violinist, pupil of Stamitz, from about 1755 writing several symphonies, overtures (notably The Maid of the Mill, 1765), minuets, etc. Memoir by Sharpe, 1826 (in a collection of his smaller pieces). G.

Kellner, David (Leipzig, 1670-1748, Stockholm). Saxon organist and theorist, also an expert lutenist. After long military service, from 1711 organist at Stockholm. Author of Treulicher Unterricht im Generalbass, 1732 (6 editions and in Swedish). Wrote also a festival-opera (1720) and some lute-pieces (1747).

Kellner, Ernst August (Windsor, 1792-1839, London). German-English pianist and singer, pupil of W. Parsons, Nozzari, Casella and Crescentini, from 1820 a favorite concertist in England and also on trips to Italy (1824), Petrograd (1828) and Paris (1833). From 1834 he was organist at the Bavarian Chapel in London. His precocity was exploited by Richard Cull (1839).

Kellner, Georg Christoph (?-1808, Mannheim). Author of works on musical aesthetics (1790) and 1800 [Deutsches Magazin], a piano-method, etc., besides historical romances.

Kellner, Johann Christoph (Gräfenrode, 1736-1803, Kassel), son of the following. Thuringian organist, pupil of his father and G. Benda, from about 1760 active at The Hague and Amsterdam and finally as court-organist at Kassel, teaching many able scholars. Wrote 7 piano-concertos, trios, piano-sonatas, organ-works, an opera and a text-book in harmony.

Kellner, Johann Peter (Gräfenrode, 1705-1772, do.). Thuringian organist, pupil of Nagel,

J. C. Schmidt and Quehl, from 1728 in service at Gräfenrode. He knew both Handel and Bach, and some of the latter's works are known only in his copies of them (besides a copy [1738] of Bach's simple rules for using a figured bass). Wrote a Passion, a full cycle of church-cantatas, organ-trios, fugues and preludes, figured chorales, 12 clavier-suites (or sonatas) and some dances (partly published, 1739-56). The suites are specially notable. Autobiography in Marburg's Kritische Beyträge.

Kellogg, Clara Louise (Sumterville, S. C. 1842-1916, New Hartford, Conn.). Eminent American operatic soprano, trained by her mother and in New York (from 1856), appearing there from 1861 and in London from 1867, continuing in much success until her retirement in 1887 after her marriage to her manager, Carl Strakosch. In 1874-75 she organized her own troupe for giving opera in English, not only superintending all details of the enterprise, but herself singing 125 times. Author of Memoirs of an American Prima Donna, 1913. G. A.

Kelly, Michael (Dublin, 1762-1826, Margate). Popular Irish stage-singer, pupil of Rauzzini, Fenaroli and Aprile, appearing in Dublin as early as 1779 and in Italy soon after. Besides engagements in Italy, in 1782-86 he was at the Court Opera in Vienna, becoming intimate with Mozart and taking a leading rôle at the première of Figaro (1786). In 1787-1811 he was active in London, until 1793 at Drury Lane and then at the King's Theatre, of which he was long acting-manager. Besides singing on the stage and at oratorios and concerts, he supplied music for over 60 plays (1789-1820) and wrote many songs. In 1802-11 he had a music-shop, which ended in bankruptcy. He was also for many years a wine-dealer, a fact which, with the rumor that much of his music was borrowed, led to the bon mot of Sheridan, 'Michael Kelly, Composer of Wines and Importer of Music.' Author of Reminiscences, 2 vols. 1826. G.

Kelso, Hugh Alexander (Charleston, Ill. 1862). American pianist, pupil of A. Beuter, W. S. B. Mathews and Sherwood, from about 1885 the latter's assistant, from 1889 teacher at the Chautauqua summer-school, and since 1893 head of his own school (music and drama) in Chicago. He has toured as recitalist and is author of several works on the details of piano-playing (from 1892). A.

Kelterborn, Louis (Boston, 1891). American composer, brought up in Basel, pupil of the Basel and Geneva Conservatories, from 1917 teaching at the Wolff Music School in Basel and since 1919 organist at Burgdorf. Has written the symphonic poems Madonna and Heiland, the 6 Essays for soloists and orchestra (partly with chorus) Penthésilée, Silvius, Hérode, Amon (opera), Hiob and Maria, 3 Skizzen (including a string-quartet), various choral pieces, etc.

Kemp, Joseph (Exeter, 1778-1824, London). English organist and teacher, pupil of Wm. Jackson, in 1802-09 organist at Bristol Cathed-dral, from 1809 in London (where from 1810 he was a pioneer advocate of class-teaching), and from 1814 working in Exeter, except for a sojourn in France in 1818-21. Mus.D. of Cambridge Univ. in 1809. Wrote some anthems, glees and songs, piano-sonatas, 'illustrations' of Shakespeare and Scott, and 2 stage-pieces (1809-10), besides a pamphlet on The New System of Musical Education, 1819. G.

Kemp, Robert (Wellfleet, Mass. 1820-1897, Boston). American shoe-dealer, from 1854 noted as the originator of 'old-folks' concerts' (reproducing the old New England psalmody), acquiring the popular name of 'Father Kemp.' Author of Father Kemp and his Old Folks, 1868 (with autobiography). A.

Kempff, Wilhelm (Jüterbog, 1895). Gifted Prussian organist and pianist, trained by his father, Barth and Kahn, in 1917 winning both the Mendelssohn prizes, and widely known since 1916 as virtuoso (especially in improvisation). Has written a symphony, an orchestral suite, a prelude to Kleist's Hermannsschlacht, the piano-concerto Dies Irae, a string-quartet, a violin-sonata, sonatas and other pieces for piano, choruses, etc.

Kempis, Nicolaus a. 17th C.

Kempter, Karl (Limbach, 1819-1871, Augsburg). Bavarian organist, pupil of J. M. Keller, from 1839 organist at Augsburg Cathedral and from 1865 Keller's successor as choirmaster. Wrote 4 oratorios, about 20 masses and much other church-music, including a collection of pieces for small choirs and harmonizations of German melodies used in the Augsburg diocese.

Kempter, Lothar (Lauingen, 1844-1918, Vitznau). Bavarian conductor and theorist, pupil of his father and at the Munich Conservatory, from 1869 chorusrmaster at the Munich Opera, from 1871 conductor at Strasburg, from 1874 director of the Zurich Opera and from 1886 also theory-teacher at the Music School. Ph.D. of Zurich Univ. in 1911. Wrote the operas Das Fest der Jugend, 1895, and Die Sansculottes, 1900, numerous choral works (mostly for men's voices), 4 song-cycles, orchestral marches and fantasias, etc.

Kenn, P. Noted German hornist, from 1782 active in Paris, where from 1783 he played in the Opéra orchestra, from 1791 in the Garde Nationale and in 1795-1802 taught at the new Conservatory. In 1808 he was pensioned at the Opéra. Wrote many horn-trios, duets and solos, besides duets for clarinet and horn.

Kent, James (Winchester, 1700-1776, do.). English organist, pupil of Richardson and Croft, from 1717 playing at Finedon, from 1731 at Trinity College, Cambridge, and from 1737 at Winchester Cathedral and College. Wrote services and about 25 anthems that for a time were much esteemed. G.

Kerle, Jacobus de (1532-1591). 16th C. G.

Kerll, Johann Kaspar (1627-1693). 17th C. G.

Kersbergen, Jan Willem (Delft, 1857). Dutch composer, pupil of the Hague Conservatory, from 1875 teaching at Groningen, from 1880 at Zaandam and from 1890 at the Amsterdam Conservatory. Has written a piano-quartet, variations for two pianos, organ-pieces, etc.

Kes, Willem (Dordrecht, 1856). Distinguished Dutch violinist and conductor, pupil of Nothdurft, Tyssens, Ferd. Böhm, David, Wieniawski and Joachim, from 1876 concert-master in Amsterdam orchestras and from 1877 also choral conductor at Dordrecht, in 1883 conductor of the concerts at the Parkschouwburg (Amsterdam), in 1884-88 director of a music-school at Dordrecht and conductor of the orchestra there, from 1888 conductor of the Concertgebouw orchestra in Amsterdam, in 1896-98 Henschel's successor as director of the Scottish Orchestra in Glasgow, from 1898 conductor of the symphony-concerts of the Moscow Philharmonic Society (except in 1901-02 head of its Music School), in 1904 living in Dresden, and since 1905 conductor of the Musikverein at Coblenz and also director of the Conservatory. Besides his other accomplishments he is an expert pianist. Has written a symphony, some overtures, the choral ballade Der Taucher, a violin-sonata and pieces, piano-pieces and songs, besides making an orchestral version of Schumann's Études Symphoniques. G.

Kessler [Kötzer], Joseph Christoph (Augsburg, 1800-1872, Vienna). Able Bavarian pianist, mostly self-taught (except for lessons from Bilek), from 1820 private tutor for Count Potocki, from 1826 teaching in Vienna and Warsaw, from 1830 in Breslau, from 1835 in Lemberg and from 1855 in Vienna. His études hold a high place in the pedagogy of the piano. Wrote also nocturnes, variations, preludes, etc., including some of permanent interest. Memoir by Pyllemann, 1872 (Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung).

Ketten, Henri (Baja, 1848-1883, Paris). Hungarian pianist, pupil of Marmontel and Halévy, writing much graceful salon-music. G.

Kettenus, Aloys (Verviers, 1823-1896, London). Belgian violinist, early a pupil of the Liège Conservatory and then self-taught, from 1841 playing in an orchestra at Aix, then touring in Germany, from 1845 concertmaster at Mannheim (with some study under V. Lachner), and after 1855 playing in the Hallé Orchestra in London and at the Italian Opera. Wrote the opera Stella Monti, 1862, a violin-concerto, a concertino for violin-quartet and orchestra, etc.

Ketterer, Eugène (Rouen, 1831-1870, Paris). French pianist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1852 a favorite player and composer of brilliant salon-music (some 300 pieces in all). G.

Keurvels, Edward H. J. (Antwerp, 1853-1916, do.). Belgian conductor and composer, pupil of Benoit, at first chorusrmaster at the Théâtre Royal in Antwerp and from 1882 conductor at the Théâtre Flamand, where he produced many important works, including Fidelio, Benoit's Pacificatie van Gent and Charlotte Corday, etc. He was also conductor at the Zoölogical Garden and administrator of the Benoit Fund (giving orchestral concerts and producing works like De Oorlog and De Rhyn). Wrote the operas Parisina, Rolla and Hamlet, several small song-plays, cantatas, a mass, ballades and songs.

Keussler, Gerhard von (Schwanenburg, 1874). Livonian conductor and composer, at first trained in natural history, then studying at the Leipzig Conservatory and University (Ph.D. 1902), for some years conductor of the Prague Singverein and the symphony-concerts of the Musical Union, and in 1918-21 director of the Hamburg Singakademie and in 1920-21 also of the Philharmonic Concerts. Has written the opera Gefängnisse, 1914, the oratorios Vor der Hohen Stadt, Der Tod und Jesus von Nazareth, 1917, the symphonic poems Der Einsiedler, Morgenländische Phantasie, Auferstehung und Jüngstes Gericht, etc.

Kewitsch [Kiewits], Karl Theodor (Posilge, 1834-1903, Berlin). Prussian organist and editor, pupil of his father and W. Maslon, at first oboist in an army band, then teacher and organist at Wabecz, Schwetz and Graudenz, from 1866 teacher and superintendent at the Seminary for Music-Teachers at Berent, and, retiring on pension in 1887, then in Berlin, where in 1891-92 he edited the Musikkorps, in 1893-97 the Hannoversche Musikzeitung and later the Deutsche Militärmusiker-Zeitung, besides preparing articles for other journals. Author of a directory of German military musicians (1901) and a Vade-mecum for organists. Wrote also church-music (largely Polish), part-songs and piano-pieces, besides orchestrating the Balli from Graun's Cinna.

Kidson, Frank (Leeds, 1855). English folk-song specialist, originally a landscape-painter, but since about 1880 engaged in the collection of old songs and dances in England, Scotland and Ireland, ultimately founding the Folk-Song Society. From 1904 he contributed to the 2d edition of Grove's Dictionary. Author of Old English Country-Dances, 1889, Traditional Tunes, 1890, and articles in The Musical Antiquary (1910-12), besides a book on British Music-Publishers, 1900, and a history of the ballad-opera (1922). With A. Moffat he edited The Minstrelsy of England and other collections.

Kiefer, Heinrich (Nuremberg, 1867-1922, Eisenach). Able Bavarian 'cellist, trained at the Munich, Stuttgart and Frankfurt Conservatories, from 1896 soloist in the Leipzig Philharmonic, from 1898 in the Berlin Philharmonic and in 1900-01 teaching at the Stern Conservatory, from 1902 settled in Munich, where (with Vollnhals, Kilian and Knauer) he formed the Munich Quartet and with it toured extensively. Then he lived in Dresden and from 1921 at Eisenach.

Kiel, Friedrich (n. Siegen, 1821-1885, Berlin). Eminent Westphalian composer, mostly self-taught, but with some lessons from Prince Wittgenstein, K. Kummer and Dehn, beginning to write variations and dances when but eleven. In 1840-42 he was concertmaster in the Coburg court-band and teacher of the Duke's children. After 1842 he lived in Berlin as a piano-teacher, but with only gradual recognition as a composer. The production of his Requiem in 1862 established his renown. From 1866 he taught composition in the Stern Conservatory and after 1870 in the Hochschule, gaining the title of professor in 1868. From 1865 he was a member of the Academy and from 1870 senator there. He was highly valued as a teacher, especially in strict form. His compositions illustrated sound classical traditions, though not without sympathy with modern methods. His greatest strength lay in choral works of large dimension. Wrote Requiems in F min. (1862 and, rewritten, 1878) and A-flat (1880?), a Te Deum (1866), a Missa Solennis (1867), the oratorio Christus, 1874, a Stabat Mater and Psalm 130 (both for women's voices), the oratorio Der Stern von Bethlehem (his last work with opus-number), various motets and choruses, 4 orchestral marches, a piano-concerto, 2 string-quintets, 3 piano-quartets, 2 string-quartets and 2 sets of waltzes for quartet, 7 trios, 4 violin-sonatas, a 'cello-sonata, a viola-sonata, many pieces for piano (some for 4 hands) and some songs. Sketches and memoirs by Saran, 1862 (Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung), Bungert, 1875 (Neue Zeitschr.) Gumprecht, 1886 (Monatshefte), Altmann, 1901 (Musik), and Frommel, 1886. G.

Kienle, Ambrosio (Siegmaringen, 1852-1905, Beuron). A Benedictine of the monastery of Beuron (Hohenzollern), author of able books and articles on Gregorian music (from 1884), including a Choralschule, 1884 (3d ed. 1899), a Kleines Handbuch, 1892, etc., and a translation of Pothier's Mémoires Grégoriennes (1881).

Kienlen, Johann Christoph (Ulm, 1784-1830, Dessau), son of a town-musician. Swabian composer, appearing as pianist and singer when but seven, sent by patrons in Munich to study under Cherubini, from about 1805 town-director at Ulm, from 1811 in Vienna, where he taught Schnyder von Wartensee and other pupils, soon becoming musician to Baron Zinnicz of Baden and Presburg, from 1817 in Berlin (after 1823 chorusmaster at the Opera) and from 1827 at Ulm, Posen and Dessau. Wrote at least 75 notable songs (1810-17), the operas Die Kaiser-rose, 1816, and Petrarca und Laura, 1816, the singspiel Claudine, 1811, incidental music to several plays (1817-25), 2 piano-sonatas, etc. See article by Holzer, 1909 (in Musik).

Kienzl, Wilhelm (Waizenkirchen, 1857). Distinguished Austrian conductor and composer, educated at Gratz, Prague, Leipzig and Vienna Universities (Ph.D. 1879), musically trained by W. A. Remy, Krejčí, Liszt and others, in 1879 at Bayreuth (for a time intimate with Wagner), in 1880 lecturing in Munich, in 1881-82 touring as pianist in Hungary, Rumania and throughout Germany, in 1883-84 director of the German Opera in Amsterdam, followed by similar work at Crefeld, from 1886 conductor of the Gratz Musikverein (symphony-concerts and oversight of provincial music-schools), from 1890 director of the Hamburg Opera, in 1892–93 head of the Munich Opera and then retired to Gratz, but in 1917 removed to Vienna. He has received numerous honors and decorations, including an honorary Ph.D. from Gratz Univ. in 1917. His 60th birthday was marked by the issue of a Festschrift. In 1886 he married the concert-singer Lili Hoke at Linz. His operas, especially Der Evangelimann, have made a strong impression. Has written the operas Urvast, 1886 (revised 1909), Heilmär der Narr, 1892, Der Evangelimann, 1895, Don Quixote, 1898, In Knecht Rupprechts Werkstatt, 1907 ('Märchenspiel'), Der Kuhreigen, 1911, and Das Testament, 1916, various orchestral pieces, music for the melodrama Die Brautfahrt, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, about 75 choruses (many with orchestra), at least 175 songs and as many piano-pieces. He has revised and completed Jensen's Turandot, edited a new version of Mozart's Clemenza di Tito and orchestrated Schubert's Trauermarsch. Author of Die musikal. Deklamation, 1880, Miscellen, 1885, Aus Kunst u. Leben, 1904, a life of Wagner (1904, 7th ed. 1908), Im Konzert, 1908, and Betrachtungen u. Erinnerungen, 1909, besides in 1886–89 preparing late editions of Brendel's Geschichte und Musik in Italien, etc. Sketch by Morold, 1909 (Monographien moderner Musiker). G.

Kiesewetter, Raphael Georg (Holleschau, 1773–1850, n. Vienna), Edler von Wiesenbrunn. Austrian military official and enthusiastic musical amateur, pupil of Albrechtsberger and Hartmann, from 1801 settled in Vienna and from about 1815 collecting a remarkable library of scores, etc., and making his home a rendezvous for musicians. He was more and more led into historical investigation, the fruits of which were embodied in notable books and many articles. His title of nobility arose from his services as a state-officer, while his musical studies brought membership in many societies and other honors. Author of Die Verdienste d. Niederländer um d. Tonkunst, 1826 (prize from the Dutch Academy) Gesch. d. europäisch-abendländischen oder unsrer heutigen Musik, 1834 (2d ed. 1846), Ueber d. Musik d. neuern Griechen, 1838, Guido von Arezzo 1840, Schicksale u. Beschaffenheit d. weltlichen Gesangs [to 1600], 1841, Die Musik d. Araber, 1842, Der neuen Aristoxener zerstreute Aufsätze, 1846, Ueber d. Oktave d. Pythagoras, 1848, and a Galerie aller Contrapunctisten, 1847 (a catalogue of his scores), besides many essays in the Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung (1826–45) and several unpublished works on theory. He also prepared Kandler's Palestrina for publication (1834). The eminent music-historian Ambros was his nephew. G.

Kiessig, Georg (Leipzig, 1885). Saxon composer, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and of Hagel, writing the opera Anselm, the symphonic poems Ahasver, Mein Vaterland and Ein Totentanz, 1920, an Eichendorff-Suite, chamber-music, choruses, songs, etc.

Kihl, Viggo Richard (Copenhagen, 1882). Danish pianist, pupil of Dahl and Teichmüller, appearing in 1901 at Copenhagen and from 1903 in London, then touring in England, on the Continent and in South Africa, and since 1913 teacher at Toronto Conservatory (Canada). A.

Kilburn, Nicholas (n. Durham, 1843). English choral conductor, since 1875 (–1885) directing societies in Durham, Middlesborough and Sunderland. Has written the oratorio St. Thomas, 3 cantatas, Psalm 23 and 137, services, choruses, an orchestral suite, an overture, etc., besides The Story of Chamber Music, 1904, and other handbooks.

Kilenyi, Edward (n. Bèkes, 1884). Hungarian violinist, trained at the Scuola Nazionale in Rome, the Cologne Conservatory and at Columbia University (New York), where in 1913 he was Mosenthal Fellow. Has written an overture, a string-quartet, violin-pieces, a short opera (1916, with C. E. Parker) and some songs. With Eleanor Hague he has edited Spanish-American Folk-Songs, 1914, contributed to The Art of Music, 1915–16, and written magazine-articles. A.

Kimball Company, The W. W. A firm in Chicago, founded in 1857 by William W. Kimball (1828–1904), which has become one of the largest makers of pianos, organs, etc., in America. A.

Kind, Johann Friedrich (Leipzig, 1768–1843, Dresden). The Saxon poet from whom Weber secured the text of Der Freischütz (1821) and of several cantatas, etc. He also wrote the libretto of Kreutzer's Das Nachtlager von Granada (1834) and Marschner's Der Hölzdieb (1825). His dramatic works were collected in 1821–27 (4 vols.). G.

Kinder, Ralph (n. Manchester, 1876). American-English organist, pupil of Macdougall, Pearce, Turpin and Lemare, beginning church-playing at twelve (Bristol, R. I.), in 1898–99 in Providence and since 1899 at Holy Trinity in Philadelphia, where he also directs an organ-school. He has given recitals in many parts of America and is conductor of choral societies in or near Philadelphia. Has written organ- and choir-music. A.

Kindermann, August (Potsdam, 1817–1891, Munich). Prussian operatic baritone, pupil of Meyer, from 1833 in the Berlin opera-chorus, from 1839 at the Leipzig Opera and after 1846 in high favor at Munich, where in 1886 he celebrated his 40th anniversary of steady activity. His daughter Hedwig was a fine soprano (see Reicher-Kindermann). G.

Kindermann, Johann Erasmus (1616–1655). 17th C. G.

King, Matthew Peter (London, 1773–1823, do.). English composer, pupil of K. F. Horn, writing about 10 stage-pieces (1804–19, partly with others), the oratorio The Intercession, 1816, glees and piano-pieces, besides hand-books in harmony (1796) and sight-singing (1806) and a Treatise on Music, 1800 (2d ed. 1809). G.

King, Oliver A. (London, 1855). English pianist, pupil of Barnby, W. H. Holmes and the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1879 in the service of Princess Louise, in 1880-83 touring in Canada and the United States, later also in Europe, and since 1893 professor at the Royal Academy, London. Has written the symphony Night, 1880, 2 overtures, concertos for piano (1885) and for violin, violin-, piano- and organ-pieces, Psalm 137, 1888, the cantatas The Romance of the Roses, Proserpina and The Naiades, about 50 anthems and services, part-songs and many songs.

King, Robert. 17th C. G.

Kingston, William Beatty (London, 1837-1900, do.). English government official, from 1856 in consular service, with wide travels. Author of Music and Manners, 2 vols. 1887, and Wanderer's Notes, 2 vols. 1888.

Kinkeldey, Otto (New York, 1878). Able American musicologist, educated at New York and Berlin Universities (Ph.D. 1909), musically a pupil of G. Viehl, MacDowell, Radecke and the Inst. für Kirchenmusik in Berlin, holding the title of royal professor in 1910-15. In 1898-1902 (before going to Berlin) he was organist at the Chapel of the Ascension, New York, and in 1903-05 was at the American Church in Berlin. In 1909-14 he was professor and music-director at Breslau University. Since 1915 he was been head of the music-division in the New York Public Library, and also organist at All Souls', Brooklyn. Author of Orgel u. Klavier in d. Musik d. 16. Jahrh. 1910, and editor of Erlebach's Harmonische Freude for the Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst (1914). A.

Kinsky, Georg (Marienwerder, 1882). Since 1909 curator of the Musikhistorisches Museum at Cologne founded by Wilhelm Heyer (q. v.). In 1921 he gave a course of lectures at Cologne University.

Kipke, Karl (Breslau, 1850). Silesian critic and editor, in 1872-75 conductor at Lippstadt and in 1878-86 at Pilsen and since 1886 active at Leipzig, where in 1887-1906 he edited the Sängerhalle and in 1902-07 the Musikal. Wochenblatt. With Vogel he was author of a history of the Leipzig Conservatory (1888), and has edited the 11th ed. of Frank's Tonkünstlerlexikon (1910) and new editions of F. L. Schubert's Instrumentationslehre, Musikdirigent (both 1893) Gesangslehre (1896) and Formenlehre (1907), G. Wunderlich's Instrumentierung (1900) and H. Zoppf's Dirigent (1902).

Kipper, Hermann (Coblentz, 1826-1910, Cologne). Rhenish critic at Cologne, pupil of Anschütz and Dorn, writing several comic operettas for men's voices.

Kirbye, George (? -1634). 16th C. G.

Kircher, Athanasius (1602-1680). 17th C. G.

Kirchner, Hermann (n. Ohrdruf, 1861). Thuringian conductor, originally a school-teacher in Ohrdruf, pupil of the Berlin Hochschule, in 1889-93 concert-singer in Berlin, then choral director in Mediasch and Hermannstadt, from 1906 leader of the Bucharest Liedertafel and professor in the Conservatory, and since 1910 living in Ratibor and conductor of the Beuthen Philharmonie. Has written the operas Der Herr der Hann, 1899, Stephania, 1902, and Viola, 1904, choruses and songs.

Kirchner, Theodor (n. Chemnitz, 1823-1903, Hamburg). Eminent Saxon piano-composer, pupil of Knorr, K. F. Becker, Joh. Schneider and the new Leipzig Conservatory (a half-year only), from 1843 organist at Winterthur (Switzerland), from 1862 conductor at Zurich and teacher in the Music School, in 1872-73 tutor for Princess Maria at Meiningen, from 1873 director of the Würzburg Music School, from 1875 living in Leipzig, from 1883 in Dresden (part of the time professor of ensemble at the Conservatory) and after 1890 in Hamburg. His development was strongly influenced by Mendelssohn and Schumann, especially the latter, of whom he is often counted one of the ablest disciples. He had distinct gifts of his own, particularly in the delicate shaping of characteristic pieces of small dimension. His works include the following (opus-numbers in brackets):

Chamber-works—string-quartet [20]; piano-quartet [84]; trio-serenades in B [15] and E; other trio-pieces [58, 59, 83]; violin-pieces [63, 90, 91, 92, the last two with organ]; 'cello-pieces [79].

Piano-works—Gruss an meine Freunde [5]; Albumblätter [7, 49, 80]; Scherzos [8, 54]; Preludes [9, 65]; Skizzen [11]; Adagio quasi Fantasia [12]; Lieder ohne Worte [13]; Phantasiestücke [14, 36]; Kleine Lust- und Trauerspiele [16]; Neue Davidsbündlerlänze [17]; Legenden [18]; Aquarellen [21]; Romanzen [22]; Waltzes [23, 34, 76, 104]; Still und bewegt [24]; Nachtbilder [25]; Album [26]; Capricen [27]; Nocturnes [28, 87]; Aus meinem Skizzenbuch [29]; Études [30, 38, 71, 105, 106]; Im Zwielicht [31]; Aus träben Tagen [32]; Ideale [33]; Spitalsachen [35]; Elegien [37]; Dorfgeschichten [39]; Verwehte Blätter [41]; Mazurkas [42]; Polonaises [43, 78]; Blumen zum Strauss [44]; Kinder- und Künstlerlänze [46]; Federzeichnungen [47]; Humoresken [48]; An Stephen Heller [51]; Ein neues Klavierbuch [52]; Florestan und Eusebius [53]; Neue Kinderszenen [55]; In stillen Stunden [56]; Plaudereien [60]; Charakterstücke [61]; Miniaturen [62]; Gavotten, Minuette und lyrische Stücke [64]; Sonatinas [70]; Stille Lieder und Tänze [72]; Romantische Geschichten [73]; Alle Erinnerungen [74]; Les Mois de l'Année [78]; Gedenblätter [82]; Aus der Jugendzeit [88]; Confidences [96]; Erinnerungsblätter [101]. Pieces, marches and waltzes for 4 hands [57, 94, 104] and Alle Bekannte im neuen Gewande. Variations [85], polonaises and waltzes for 2 pianos. Also Lyrische Stücke for organ [89].

He also arranged many songs by Jensen, Brahms and others for piano alone.

Vocal works—about 50 songs [1, 3, 4, 6, 40, 50, 67, 68, 81, 95, 103]. The baritone ballades Zwei Könige [10] and Heinrich IV auf dem Schlosshof zu Canossa [102] 4 poems by Goethe for men's voices [69] and Volkslieder for mixed chorus [93].

Sketch by Niggli, 1880. G.

Kirby-Lunn. See Lunn.

Kirkman. A firm of harpsichord- and piano-makers in London, founded in the middle of the 18th century by Jakob Kirchmann (d. 1778), a German who worked at first with the Belgian Tabel and became the chief rival of Tschudi and Broadwood. He gained wealth and prestige and was followed by a nephew and his several descendants. In 1896 the business was merged in that of the Collards. G.

Kirkmann, Jan (?-1799, Norwich). A Dutch organist, from 1782 at the Lutheran Church in London. Wrote piano-trios, violin-sonatas, organ- and piano-works.

Kirnberger, Johann Philipp (Saalfeld, 1721-1783, Berlin). Eminent Thuringian theorist, pupil of Kellner, H. N. Gerber, J. S. Bach and Fickler, in 1741-50 tutor in leading Polish families and at the Lemberg Nunnery, from 1754, after playing in the Berlin court-band, musician to Princess Amalia. Wrote a large amount of music (not regarded as specially important), including symphonies, orchestral suites and minuets, trio-sonatas, cantatas, motets, etc. Chiefly noted as author of Die Kunst d. reinen Satzes, 2 vols. 1774-79, Grundsätze d. Generalbasses, 1781, Gedanken über d. verschiedenen Lehrarten in d. Komposition, 1782, besides a work on equal temperament (1760) and a sort of musical game (1757). [Another book (1773) was claimed by his pupil, J. A. P. Schulz.] See Riemann, Gesch. d. Musiktheorie, 1898, p. 478ff. G.

Kist, Florent Corneille (Arnhem, 1796-1863, Utrecht). Dutch physician, practicing at The Hague in 1818-25, also flutist and hornist. In 1821 he was a founder of the Diligentia (society) at The Hague, later of the Cécilia and Harmonie there, as well as of the Choral Union and Collegium Musicum at Delft. After 1841 he lived at Utrecht, where he founded the Duce Apolline, promoted concert-series and at first edited the Muzikaal Tijdschrift and from 1844 the notable Cécilia. Wrote some cantatas, other vocal music and flute-variations, besides books on the state of Dutch church-music (1840), a life of Lassus (1841), a translation of Brendel's Geschichte (1851) and many articles in German periodicals as well as his own.

Kistler, Cyrill (n. Augsburg, 1848-1907, Kissingen). Able Bavarian composer and author, until 1876 a school-teacher, then pupil of Wüllner, Rheinberger and F. Lachner, in 1883-85 teacher at the Sondershausen Conservatory and then head of a music-school at Kissingen, where he edited the Tagesfragen (till 1894) and also was engaged in some music-publishing. Wrote the operas Alfred der Grosse, Lichtenstein, Kunihild, 1884, Eulenspiegel, 1889, Arm Elstein, 1902, Röslein im Hag, 1903, Der Vogt auf Mühlstein, 1904, Baldurs Tod, 1905, Die deutschen Kleinstädter and Im Honigmond, the symphonic poem Hexenküche, many orchestral and choral pieces, etc., his dramatic style being clearly derived from Wagner. Author of several manuals of harmony, counterpoint and singing (1879-1908), including especially a Harmonielehre, 1879 (enlarged ed. 1903), which is based on Wagner's practice, a school dictionary of musicians (3d ed. 1887), a life of Franz Witt (1888), Jenseits d. Musikdramas, 1888, and Ueber Originalität in d. Tonkunst, 1894 (2d ed. 1907). See sketch by Eccarius-Sieber, 1906 (in Monographien moderner Musiker), memoir in Musik, 1907, and analyses of Kunihild by F. Bauer (1893) and H. Ritter. G.

Kistner. A large music-publishing firm in Leipzig, founded in 1836 by Friedrich Kistner (1797-1844) through the purchase of Probst's business, and greatly developed by his son Julius (d. 1868) and K. F. L. Gurekhaus (1821-1884), followed by the latter's son Ludwig (d. 1918). Since 1919 the proprietors are Karl and Richard Linnemann. G.

Kitchiner, William (London, 1775-1827, do.). English physician, writing 2 stage-pieces, glees and songs, and author of Observations on Vocal Music, 1821, 4 collections of national songs, sea-songs, etc. (from 1823), and many other works. G.

Kittel, Bruno (in Posen, 1870). Prussian violinist, trained at the Stern Conservatory, Berlin, from about 1890 playing in the court-band and in 1901 founder of the Brandenburg Conservatory and in 1904 of his own choral society.

Kittel, Johann Christian (Erfurt, 1732-1809, do.). Eminent Thuringian organist, the last pupil of J. S. Bach, from 1751 at Langensalza and after 1756 at the Predigerkirche in Erfurt, in high repute as player and teacher, but so poorly paid that about 1800 he had to make a concert-tour to Hanover and Hamburg and to subsist at last on a small pension. He was the teacher of Rinck and transmitted Bach traditions to many others. Wrote Der angehende praktische Organist, 3 parts, 1801-08 (3d ed. 1831) a Choralbuch for Schleswig-Holstein (1803), organ-preludes and chorales, 6 clavi-chord-sonatas and a fantasia, clavier-variations and a Hymne an das Jahrhundert, 1801. G.

Kittl, Johann Friedrich (Schloss Worlik, 1806-1868, Lissa). Able Bohemian composer, pupil of Sawora and Tomaschek, in 1843-65 director of the Prague Conservatory, succeeding D. Weber. Wrote the operas Daphnis' Grab, 1825, Bianca und Giuseppe, 1848 (text by Rich. Wagner), Waldblume, 1852, and Die Bilderstürmer, 1854, masses, cantatas, 3 symphonies, a sonet, a septet, a piano-trio, etc. Memoirs by Rychnowsky, 1904-05, and in Musik, 1908, and see Ambros-Branberger's history of the Prague Conservatory (1911).

Kitzler, Otto (Dresden, 1834-1915, Gratz). Saxon 'cellist, pupil of Joh. Schneider, J. Otto, Kummer and the Brussels Conservatory, from about 1855 playing at the Strasburg and Lyons Operas, then theater-director at Troyes, Linz, Hermannstadt and Brünn, becoming at the latter from 1868 director of the Music Union and its School and conductor of the Gesangverein, retiring in 1898. He was Bruckner's teacher. Wrote for orchestra, piano and voice, and author of Erinnerungen, 1904 (including letters from Wagner, Brahms and Bruckner).

Kjerulf, Halfdan (Christiania, 1815-1868, do.). Gifted Norwegian composer, educated for the law at Christiania University, but from 1840 turning to music and finally, on a government-stipend, pupil of E. F. Richter, and from about 1850 teacher in Christiania, from 1860 in close intimacy with the poet Björnson and the young Grieg. Wrote over 100 beautiful songs, fine choruses and part-songs, and many lyric piano-pieces. All his work is marked by an exquisite poetic flavor. G.

Klafsky, Katharina (n. Wieselburg, 1855–1896, Hamburg). Able Hungarian operatic soprano, singing in church in childhood, but prevented by extreme poverty from artistic study till after 1870, then pupil of Mme. Marchesi, from 1874 gradually gaining notice at Vienna, Salzburg and Leipzig (1876–82) and in 1882, while touring with Neumann, undertaking important Wagnerian rôles. From 1883 she sang at Bremen and from 1885 at Hamburg, but with many visits to other cities. In 1895 she married the conductor Lohse and they both made an American tour with the Damrosch Opera Company. Memoir by Ordemann, 1903. G.

Klatte, Wilhelm (Bremen, 1870). North German critic, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and of R. Strauss, at first conductor at various places and since 1897 critic for the Berlin Lokalanzeiger and also from 1904 teacher at the Stern Conservatory. In 1900 he married the alto-singer Klara Senfft von Pilsach. Author of the earliest sketch of Strauss (1895, with Seidl), Zur Gesch.d. Programmusik, 1905, a life of Schubert, 2 vols. 1907, introductions to works by Dvořák, Wolfrum, Strauss, etc., and Aufgaben für d. einfachen Kontrapunkt.

Klauser, Julius (New York, 1854–1907, Milwaukee), son of the following. American theorist, pupil of his father and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1874 teaching in Milwaukee. Author of The Septonate, 1890 (developing the idea that the typical scale extends a fourth above and below the tonic). A.

Klauser, Karl (Petrograd, 1823–1905, Farmington, Conn.). Swiss-Russian pianist and teacher, chiefly self-taught, coming to New York in 1850 and in 1856–83 teaching at a noted girls' school at Farmington, Conn. He made many fine arrangements of standard works and edited Half-Hours with the Best Composers and Famous Composers (with Thomas and Paine). A.

Klauwell, Otto Adolf (Langensalza, 1851–1917, Cologne). Saxon theorist, historian and composer, educated at Leipzig University (Ph.D. 1874) and Conservatory, from 1875 connected with the Cologne Conservatory, at first as teacher of theory and history and from 1884 as head of the Piano Seminary, besides being from 1905 acting-director of the Conservatory. In 1894 he gained the title of royal professor. Wrote the operas Das Mädchen vom See, 1889, and Die heimliche Richter, 1902, the choral work Abendfriede, overtures, chamber-music, etc. Author of Die historische Entwicklung d. musikal. Kanons, 1874, Musikal. Gesichtspunkte, 1881 (2d ed. 1892), Der Vortrag in d. Musik, 1883, Der Fingersatz d. Klavierspiels, 1885, Die Formen d. Instrumental-musik, 1894

(2d ed. 1918, edited by W. Niemann), Gesch. d. Sonate, 1899, Beethoven u. d. Variationenform, 1901, life of Gouvy (1902), Studien u. Erinnerungen, 1904, and Gesch. d. Programmusik, 1910. He also completed G. Jensen's revision of Cherubini's Contrepoint (1896).

Kleber, Leonhard (?1490–1556). 16th C. G.

Klee, Eugen (Kaiserslautern, 1869). Able Bavarian choral conductor, trained by his father and at the Karlsruhe and Munich Conservatories, from 1894 active in America, until 1914 in Philadelphia, where he was organist at the Church of the Advocate and conspicuous as trainer of German singing-societies that won many prizes in compositions. In 1914–16 he was director of the Brooklyn Arion, and since 1917 of the New York Liederkrantz. A.

Klee, Ludwig (Schwerin, 1846). Prussian pianist, pupil of Th. Kullak, from 1868 teacher in the Kullak Academy and since 1875 head of his own school in Berlin. Author of Die Ornamentik d. klassischen Klaviermusik and editor of Klassische Vortragsstücke, 3 vols.

Kleeberg, Clotilde (Paris, 1866–1909, Brussels). Gifted French pianist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, making a striking début at twelve and immediately establishing herself as a masterly artist. From 1881 she became known throughout Europe. Of her visits to England (from 1883) that of 1898 was specially brilliant. In 1894 she was made Officier in the Académie. From about 1900 she lived at Brussels, where she married the sculptor Charles Samuel. G.

Kleefeld, Wilhelm (Mayence, 1868). Rhenish conductor and opera-specialist, pupil of Radcke, Härtel and Spitta, in 1891–96 director at Mayence, Treves, Munich and Detmold, in 1897 Ph.D. at Berlin University, from 1898 teacher in the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory, Berlin, from 1900 lecturer at Greifswald University, and since 1904 at Berlin University. Author of Das Orchester d. Hamburger Oper, 1678–1738, 1899 (I. M. G. Sammelbde.), Landgraf Ludwig v. Hessen-Darmstadt u. d. deutsche Oper, 1904, and a large number of articles in periodicals, besides analyses of works for the Opernführer. He has also prepared new editions (under the title of Opernrenaissance) of operas by Cimarosa, Cherubini, Fioravanti, Paër, Boieldieu, Donizetti and Berlioz, and has translated Saint-Saëns' Harmonie et Mélodie (1902, 2d. ed. 1905). Has also written the opera Anarella, 1896, a suite for strings, piano-pieces and songs.

Kleemann, Karl (Rudolstadt, 1842). Thuringian composer, pupil of Frdr. Müller, with further study in Italy, from 1882 court-director at Dessau and in 1889–1913 court-director at Gera and conductor of the Musical Union. Has written the short opera Der Klosterschüler von Mildensfurt, 1898, the Christmas legend Das Marienkind, 1917 (original text), music for Grillparzer's Der Traum ein Leben, symphonies in C, D (Im Frühling) and D min. (Durch Kampf zum Sieg), the symphonic poem Des Meeres und der Liebe Wellen, a Lustspielouvertüre, a string-quartet, choral works, 7 books of songs, piano-pieces, etc.

Kleffel, Arno (Pössneck, 1840-1913, n. Berlin). Thuringian conductor and composer, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1863-67 director of the Riga Musical Society, then opera-conductor at Cologne, Amsterdam, Görlitz, Breslau, Stettin, Berlin (1873-80), Augsburg, Magdeburg and the Cologne Stadttheater (1886-92, 1894-1904), in 1892-94 teacher at the Stern Conservatory, Berlin, from 1904 leader of the Stern Gesangverein and from 1910 head of the opera-department of the Hochschule, besides serving as critic on the Lokalanzeiger. Wrote the opera Des Meermanns Harfe, 1865, music for Goethe's Faust and for the Christmas legend Die Wichtelmännchen, overtures, a string-quartet, many short piano-works, choruses and songs.

Klein, Bernhard (Cologne, 1793-1832, Berlin). Eminent Rhenish church-musician, pupil of Cherubini, with study in the Paris Conservatory library, from about 1813 director at Cologne Cathedral (with visits to Heidelberg and intimacy with Thibaut), in 1818 invited to Berlin as governmental adviser on musical institutions, becoming in 1820 teacher in the new Institut für Kirchenmusik and music-director at the University. Wrote the oratorios Hiob, 1820, Jephtha, 1828, and David, 1830, the cantata Wörter des Glaubens, a mass, a Pater Noster (8-part), a Magnificat (6-part), Responsories (6-part), 8 books of very effective Psalms, motets and hymns for men's voices, the operas Dido, 1823, Atlantide, 1825, and Irene (uncompleted), music for Raupach's Erdenacht, songs and ballades, piano-sonatas and variations, etc. Memoir by C. Koch, 1902. In 1823 he visited Rome to consult Baini and study in libraries. G.

Klein, Bruno Oscar (Osnabrück, 1858-1911, New York). Gifted Hanoverian pianist, organist and composer, pupil of his father and the Munich Conservatory, emigrating to America in 1878, at first touring as concertist and settling in New York in 1883, where from 1884 he taught piano at the Sacred Heart Convent, in 1887-92 was theory-professor at the National Conservatory, in 1884-94 was organist at St. Francis Xavier's and in 1904-11 at St. Ignatius'. Wrote the opera Kenilworth, 1895 (Hamburg), 6 masses (including Solennelle, Paschal and de Nativitate), many motets (mostly in the strict style), 3 books of songs and nearly 100 others, an overture, Thema und symphonische Variationen, 5 American Dances and many other orchestral pieces, a Konzertstück for piano and orchestra, concertos for piano (unfinished) and for violin, Konzertstücke for violin and orchestra, a Ballade do., a suite for 'cello and orchestra, a serenade for flute and strings, 2 violin-sonatas, a quintet for soprano, violin, 'cello, horn and piano, the scenes Die Wallfahrt nach Keulaar (alto) and Ingeborgs Klage (soprano), 2 piano-suites and many characteristic pieces (often recalling the style of Schumann). A.

Klein, Hermann (Norwich, 1856). English singing-teacher and critic, pupil of Manuel Garcia, from 1877 critic for London papers and in 1887-1901 teacher at the Guildhall School, besides in 1886-89 publishing annual Musical Notes, in 1901-09 teaching in New York and then returning to London. Author of Thirty Years of Musical Life in London, 1903, Unmusical New York, 1909, and The Reign of Patti, 1920. A.

Klein, Karl (New York, 1884), son of Bruno Oscar above. American violinist, pupil of Bögner, Hilf, Ysaÿe and Wilhelmj, appearing in London, Berlin and Vienna from 1905 and in New York from 1907, touring with Calvé in 1908-09 and in 1911-12 serving as concertmaster for the Russian Symphony Orchestra. Has written violin-transcriptions. In 1916 he married the harpist Wanda de Chiari. A.

Klein, Manuel (London, 1876-1919, New York), brother of Hermann above. English conductor, trained in London, from 1904 musical director at the New York Hippodrome, for which he wrote numerous plays, incidental music and songs.

Kleinheinz, Franz Xavier (Mindelheim, 1772-1832?, Pest?). Swabian conductor and composer, early playing in the Munich orchestra, then pupil of Albrechtsberger, for a time conductor at Brünn and finally for Count Bruns- wick at Pest. Wrote the operas Harald, 1814, and Der Käfig, 1816, the cantata Il Ciclope, a festal mass, a piano-concerto, a wind-quintet, a trio for clarinet, 'cello and piano, 4 violin-sonatas, several piano-sonatas, 4 ballads by Schiller, etc., besides about 1803 arranging some of Beethoven's piano-sonatas for string-quartet.

Kleinknecht, Jakob Friedrich (Ulm, 1722-1794, Ansbach). Württemberger flutist, from 1743 in the court-band at Bayreuth, becoming in 1749 assistant-conductor and in 1761 chief, besides being court-composer. Wrote a double concerto for flutes, flute-trios, sonatas for flute, for violin, for 'cello and for piano. He was a noted flute-virtuoso.

Kleinmichel, Richard (Posen, 1846-1901, Charlottenburg). Prussian pianist and composer, pupil of his father and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1866 teacher in Hamburg, in 1876 moving to Leipzig again and in 1882 becoming director at the Stadttheater and finally, after similar work at Magdeburg, living in Berlin. Wrote the operas Der Pfeiffer von Dusenbach, 1881, and Manon, 1883, 2 symphonies, chamber-music, many characteristic piano-pieces and fine études, etc. He made good piano- and vocal arrangements of Wagner's later operas, especially Die Meistersinger and Parsifal. G.

Klemetti, Heikki (Helsingfors, 1876). Finnish conductor, trained at the Helsingfors Orchestral School and the Stern Conservatory, Berlin, since 1902 leader of the Helsingfors Students' Gesangverein (with which he has made concert-tours) and history-teacher at the Conservatory.

Has written secular and sacred songs and edited collections of Finnish folk-songs and old church-music, with two historical text-books (1916, '21).

Klemm, Johann. 17th C. G.

Klemperer, Otto (Breslau, 1885). Silesian conductor, brought up in Hamburg and trained at the Hoch Conservatory, Frankfurt and by Ph. Scharwenka and Pfützner. On Mahler's recommendation in 1907 he became conductor of the German Opera in Prague and also in 1909 of the Hamburg Opera, followed by terms at Bremen, Strasburg and Cologne (since 1917). Has written a Missa Sacra, a setting of Psalm 42 for bass, organ and orchestra, songs and an aria for insertion in Rossini's Barbiere.

Klenau, Paul August von (Copenhagen, 1883). Danish conductor and composer, pupil of Hilmer, Malling, Halir, Bruch, Thuille and Schillings, in 1907-08 and also since 1914 opera-conductor at Freiburg (Baden), but in 1908-14 in similar work at Stuttgart. Has written the operas Sulamith, 1913, Klein Idas Blumen, 1916 (dance-play), and Kjartan und Gudrun, 1918, the ballade Ebba Skammelsen (baritone), 4 symphonies (1908, '11, '13, '14), a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, a violin-sonata and songs.

Klengel, August Alexander (Dresden, 1783-1852, do.). Able Saxon pianist, organist and contrapuntal composer, pupil of Milchmeyer and Clementi, with whom he went to Berlin in 1803 and in 1805 to Petrograd, where he remained as teacher till 1811. After two years in Paris and visits to Italy and England, from 1816 he was court-organist at Dresden (R. C. court-church). In 1828 he again visited Paris, becoming intimate with Fétis. He was so expert in canon and fugue as to be called 'Kanon-Klengel'. Wrote 3 piano-concertos, a trio, a polonaise for piano with wind- and string-quintet, a 4-hand piano-fantasia, several piano-sonatas and many salon-pieces, besides Les Avant-Coureurs (24 canons), 1841 (or earlier) and Canons et Fugues dans tous les tons majeurs et mineurs (48 canons and fugues after the style of Bach's Wohltemperiertes Clavier), 1854 (edited by Hauptmann). G.

Klengel, Julius (Leipzig, 1859), brother of the following. Eminent Saxon 'cellist, pupil of Hegar and Jadassohn, since 1874 playing in the Gewandhaus Orchestra at Leipzig and since 1881 teacher in the Conservatory, gaining the title of royal professor. Besides forming one of the Gewandhaus Quartet (with Wollgandt, Hamaan and Hermann), he has toured extensively through Europe as soloist. In dexterity of execution he is phenomenal. Has written a serenade for strings, 4 'cello-concertos, 2 string-quartets, a piano-trio, a suite and Konzertstück for two 'cellos, a suite and many pieces for 'cello solo, etc. G.

Klengel, Paul (Leipzig, 1854). Able Saxon pianist, violinist and conductor, educated at Leipzig University (Ph.D. 1876) and Conservatory, in 1881-86 conductor of the Euterpe there, in 1887-91 second court-director at Stuttgart, from 1892 again at Leipzig as leader of the Arion and the Singakademie, from 1898 director of the New York Liederkranz, returning once more to the Leipzig Arion in 1902. In 1908 he received the title of professor. Has written many pieces for violin, viola, 'cello and piano, besides choruses and songs. Author also of some analyses for the Konzertführer. G. A.

Klenovsky, Nikolai Semenovitch (Odessa, 1857). Russian conductor and composer, trained at the Moscow Conservatory, from 1879 director at provincial theaters, from 1881 in Moscow as leader of private concerts, from 1883 conductor at the Opera and from 1889 also of the University orchestra, from 1893 director of the Music School at Tiflis, and from 1902 assistant-conductor of the Imperial Choir at Petrograd. He was the first to give concerts illustrating various racial styles in Russia. Has written music for Messalina, The Star of Seville and Antony and Cleopatra, 3 notable ballets (1885-90), 2 coronation cantatas and 2 for the Pushkin Centenary (1899), the orchestral suite Fata Morgana, a piano-suite, a setting of the Georgian liturgy (1902, a cappella), Georgian songs, etc. G.

Klička, Josef (Klattau, 1855). Able Bohemian organist, trained at the Prague Conservatory and Organ School, from about 1880 conductor of the Landestheater and in 1890-97 of the Hlahol (choral society), and latterly professor at the Conservatory. Has written much for the organ, besides orchestral pieces, choruses and the opera Die schöne Müllerin.

Kliebert, Karl (Prague, 1849-1907, Würzburg). Bohemian director, pupil of Rheinberger and Wüllner, though originally taking his degree at Prague in law, from about 1865 conductor at Augsburg and from 1876 director of the Würzburg Music School, succeeding Kirchner. Wrote the overture Romeo und Julia, organ- and piano-pieces, songs, etc., besides a Festschrift for the centenary of the Music School (1904). Memoir by Heuler, 1907.

Klimov, Dmitri Dmitrievitch (Kasan, 1850). Russian pianist, pupil of the Petrograd Conservatory, from 1880 teacher there and in 1887-1908 director of the Music School at Odessa and conductor of the symphony-concerts there.

Klindworth, Karl (Hanover, 1830-1916, n. Oranienburg). Eminent Hanoverian pianist, precociously developed (playing in public at six), with an early ambition also to become a violinist, but thwarted by poverty and other causes from securing regular training. Finally from 1852 he had lessons from Liszt and in 1854 settled in London as teacher and occasional concertist. In 1861-62 he organized series of chamber-concerts there with moderate success. From 1868 he was professor at the new Moscow Conservatory under N. Rubinstein, not only becoming noted as a teacher of the first rank, but completing important works in piano-arrangement. From 1882 he lived in Berlin, conducting (with Joachim and Wüllner) the Philharmonic Concerts and also for ten years those of the Wagnerverein. He also established his own Piano School, which in 1893, when he retired to Potsdam, was merged with that of Scharwenka. Wrote many piano-pieces and elaborate études, but is best known by his fine editions of Beethoven's sonatas and of Chopin's entire works, and his remarkable piano-scores of the dramas of the Wagnerian Ring, his reorchestration of Chopin's F min. Concerto and of Alkan's Concerto (Étude) in G-sharp min., and his arrangements of Schubert's Symphony in C for two pianos and of Tchaikovsky's Francesca da Rimini for 4 hands, etc. G, A.

Kling, Henri (Paris, 1842–1918, Geneva). French teacher and facile composer of several operas and much vocal and instrumental music. From about 1865 he was professor in the Geneva Conservatory and teacher in the city schools. Author of methods for the horn and many other instruments, manuals of instrumentation, conducting, etc.

Klingenberg, Friedrich Wilhelm (n. Krotoschin, 1809–1888, Görlitz). Silesian conductor, trained in Breslau, from 1830 leader of the Académie Musikverein there, from 1837 of the Künstlerverein and in 1840–85 cantor of the Peterskirche in Görlitz, besides directing the Musikverein. Wrote a symphony, overtures, church-music, etc.

Klitzsch, Karl Emanuel (Schönheide, 1812–1889, Zwickau). Saxon gymnasial teacher at Zwickau, conductor of the concerts of the Musikverein and the A Cappella Choir, as well as choirmaster at the Marien- and Katharinenkirchen. He was a diligent contributor to the Neue Zeitschrift. Wrote the opera Juana, 1850?, Psalm 96 and songs, all under the pseudonym, 'Emanuel Kronach'.

Klose, Friedrich (Karlsruhe, 1862). Able Badense composer, pupil of V. Lachner, A. Ruthardt, Provesi and Bruckner, in 1889–91 teacher at the Geneva Academy, then living successively at Vienna, Karlsruhe and Thun, in 1906–07 teacher at the Basel Conservatory, from 1907 Thuille's successor at the Munich Conservatory and since 1919 member of the Berlin Akademie. He gained the title of professor in 1910. Has written the opera Ilsebill, 1903 (called a 'dramatic symphony'), the oratorio Der Sonne Geist, 1918, a mass in D min., the choral works Vidi Aquam, Ein Festgesang Neros, and Die Wallfahrt nach Kevelaar, the symphonic poem Das Leben ein Traum, 1899 (in 3 parts, for orchestra and organ, with voices at the end), an Elegie for violin and orchestra, a Prelude and Double Fugue for organ and brass, a string-quartet (1911), a song-cycle, etc. Sketch by Louis, 1907 (in Monographien moderner Musiker).

Klosé, Hyacinthe Eléanore (Corfu, 1808–1880, Paris). French clarinetist, pupil of Berr and, after service in an army-band, in 1839–68 his successor as professor in the Paris Conservatory. In 1843 he improved the fingering of his instrument by utilizing Boehm's device of ring-keys. Wrote many clarinet-pieces, marches and other pieces for military band, besides a clarinet-method and 3 saxophone-methods.

Kloss, Erich (Görlitz, 1863–1910, Berlin). Silesian writer, educated at Halle University for a philological career, but debarred from teaching by imperfect hearing. Author of a long series of useful books about Wagner (1896–1913), including editions of some of his letters (1909–10).

Klotz Family. A line of Bavarian violin-makers whose center of activity was Mittenwald (close to the Tyrolean boundary, about 20 m. from Innsbruck). The earliest was Egidius (b. 1675) and the first to become noted Matthias (1653–1743), who in 1663–83 learned his trade from Amati at Cremona and worked long at Padua. The latter was followed by his sons Georg (b. 1687), Sebastian (b. 1696) and Johann Karl (b. 1709), of whom the second was the most skillful. His son was Josef Thomas (b. 1743). The industry still flourishes at Mittenwald, its products continuing to take the highest rank. G.

Klughardt, August Friedrich Martin (Köthen, 1847–1902, Dessau). Saxon conductor and composer, pupil of Blassmann and A. Reichel, after short terms as theater-conductor at Posen and Lübeck, from 1869 court-director at Weimar, from 1873 at Neustrelitz and from 1882 at Dessau. In 1900 he was made Ph.D. by Erlangen Univ. Wrote the operas Mirjam, 1871, Iwein, 1879, Gudrun, 1882, and Die Hochzeit des Mönchs, 1886 (in 1888 as Astotte), the oratorios Die Grablegung Christi, Die Zerstörung Jerusalems, 1899, and Judith, 1901, the choral works Die heilige Nacht, Psalm 100, Die Bremer Stadtmusikanten and Aschenputtel (the last two for women's voices and piano), Psalm 51 (medium voices and orchestra), 4 symphonies, the symphonic poem (or symphony) Lenore, 6 overtures (including Sophonisbe and Im Frühling), 2 orchestral suites (the first in 6 movements, the second Auf der Wanderschaft), a Capriccio, Gavotte and Tarantelle for orchestra, 3 pieces for strings, concertos for violin, for 'cello and for oboe, a string-sextet, a piano-quintet, 2 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, a violin-fantasia with orchestra, Schilflieder for piano, oboe and viola, and numerous songs. As a composer he was much influenced by Liszt. Memoir by Gerlach, 1902. G.

Knabe & Company. A leading piano-making firm in Baltimore, founded in 1837 by Wilhelm Knabe (1803–1864) and continued by his descendants. In 1908 the business was merged in the American Piano Co. of New York, but without losing its identity. G, A.

Knappertsbusch, Hans (Elberfeld, 1888). Able Rhenish conductor, pupil of the Cologne Conservatory, in 1912–13 director of Wagner festivals in Holland, from 1913 at the Elberfeld Opera, in 1918 at the Leipzig Stadttheater, in 1919–22 Mikorey's successor at Dessau and then following B. Walter at Munich.

Knecht, Justin Heinrich (Biberach, 1752-1817, do.). Able Würtemberger organist and theorist, in 1771-1807 and again from 1809 organist at Biberach. In 1807-09 he was court-director at Stuttgart, resigning because of hostile intrigues. As a player he was often compared with Vogler, whose theoretic system he adopted. Author of various works on harmony (1785-1803), methods for organ (1795-98) and clavier (1800-02), an Allgem. Catechismus, 1803, and Luthers Verdienst um Musik u. Poesie, 1817, besides articles in periodicals. Also wrote much church-music, symphonies, sonatas, etc., often of a descriptive character (his Portrait Musical de la Nature has a slight external similarity to Beethoven's Pastoral Symphony). Memoir by Kauffmann, 1892. G.

Kneisel, Franz (Bucharest, 1865). Eminent German-Rumanian violinist, trained at the Bucharest and Vienna Conservatories, making his début at Vienna in 1882 and becoming leader at the Hofburg-Theater, in 1884-85 concertmaster of the Bilse Orchestra in Berlin. In 1885-1903 he was concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and in 1886 organized his famous Quartet (at first with Roth, Svecenski and Giese), in connection with both organizations establishing an international reputation as soloist and masterly ensemble-player. Since 1905 he has been professor at the Institute of Musical Art in New York. In 1917 the Quartet was disbanded. In 1893 he acted as conductor of the Boston Orchestra at the Chicago World's Fair and in 1902-03 was assistant-director at the Worcester Festival. In 1907 he was a member of the jury (in violin) at the Paris Conservatory. Mus.D. of Yale Univ. in 1911 and of Princeton Univ. in 1915. Has published a collection of violin-pieces, and advanced études. G, A.

Knetsch, Berthold (n. Schweidnitz, 1855). Silesian teacher, trained by Brosig and at the Stettin and Leipzig Conservatories, in 1878-87 teacher in the Stettin Conservatory, where in 1891-93 (after a long illness) he was one of the directors, in 1893-1906 head of his own school there (since 1899 known as the Riemann Conservatory), and since 1907 active in Berlin as leader of a choral society and lecturer at the Freie Hochschule. Author of an account of his Stettin school (1903), Grundlagen für d. Verständnis d. musikal. Kunstwerks, 1911, and an article on Tonale Chromatik, 1907 (in Wochenblatt).

Kniese, Julius (n. Jena, 1848-1905, Dresden). Saxon conductor, pupil of Stade, Brendel and K. Riedel, after touring as pianist and organist, from 1871 director of the Glogau Singakademie, from 1876 of the Rühl and Wagner societies at Frankfurt and in 1884-87 town-director at Aix, following Breunung. After two years at Breslau from 1889 he worked at Bayreuth, where from 1882 he had already been chorusmaster for the Wagner festivals, and from 1890 was head of the new School of Dramatic Singing. Wrote the symphonic poem

Frithjof, the prelude for an opera (König Wittichis) and 4 books of songs.

Knittl, Karl (Poznań, 1853-1907, Prague). Bohemian conductor and teacher, pupil of the Prague Organ School and of Pivoda and Smetana, in 1877-90 and also 1897-1901 conductor of the Hlahol (choral society) at Prague, besides from 1882 teaching at the Organ School and from 1890 at the Conservatory. From 1901 he was manager of the latter (with Dvořák as artistic director) and in 1904 followed Dvořák as director. In 1877-1901 he also taught in other schools. Wrote some orchestral and chamber-music, cantatas, choruses and songs, besides two theory-manuals and many critiques and articles for periodicals.

Knoch, Ernst (Karlsruhe, 1875). Badenese conductor, trained at the Karlsruhe Conservatory and by Mottl, from 1898 the latter's assistant at the Karlsruhe Opera, from 1901 opera-director at Strasburg and also from 1904 assistant at the Bayreuth festivals, from 1907 director at Essen, from 1909 at Cologne, in 1912-13 with the Quinlan troupe on a tour round the world, in 1913-14 at Elberfeld and in 1914 at Rotterdam, in all these later posts securing distinction in Wagnerian works. From 1914 he was with the Century Opera Company in New York, in 1916 going for the summer to Ravinia Park (near Chicago) and then to the Interstate Opera Company in Cleveland. A.

Knöfel, Johann. 16th C.

Knorr, Ivan (Mewe, 1853-1916, Frankfurt). Prussian theorist and composer, brought up in Russia, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1874 teaching at Kharkov, where from 1878 he was engaged at the Music School, and from 1883 theory-professor at the Hoch Conservatory in Frankfurt, of which from 1908 he was director, following Scholz. Wrote the operas Dunja, 1904, Die Hochzeit, 1907, and Durchs Fenster, 1908, 2 orchestral suites, orchestral variations on a Ukrainian theme, a piano-quartet, variations for piano and 'cello or violin and 'cello, variations for piano on a theme from Schumann, Ukrainische Liebestlieder for chorus, etc., besides a life of Tchaikovsky, analyses for the Musikführer and three manuals in harmony and counterpoint (1903-12). G.

Knorr, Julius (Leipzig, 1807-1861, do.). Able Saxon piano-teacher, appearing first as player at Leipzig in 1831 and in 1834 the first editor of Schumann's Neue Zeitschrift. He remained one of the Schumann circle, though turning from 1835 to the systematic development of piano-technique, especially in its early stages. Author of a long series of technical manuals and methods (1835-60).

Knote, Heinrich (Munich, 1870). Noted Bavarian operatic tenor, pupil of E. Kirchner, in 1892-1914 engaged at the Munich Opera, but with many trips elsewhere (as to New York in 1903), and since 1915 at the Charlottenburg (Berlin) Opera. He has been sometimes counted as a rival of Caruso or of Jean de Reszké.

Knüpfer, Paul (Halle, 1866–1920, Berlin). Saxon operatic bass, pupil of Günzburg, from 1885 singing at Sondershausen, from 1887 at Leipzig and from 1898 at the Berlin Opera, besides from 1901 often appearing at Bayreuth and from 1904 in London, especially in Wagner's works.

Knüpfer, Sebastian (1633–1676). 17th C. G.

Knutzen, Martin (Drammen, 1869–1909, Christiania). Norwegian pianist, pupil of Barth and Leschetizky, from 1890 known throughout Norway and Sweden as one of the best Scandinavian artists.

Knyvett, Charles (in Norfolk, 1752–1822, London). English singer, in the Chapel Royal from 1786 and from 1796 its organist. In 1792 he and Harrison founded the Vocal Concerts, which they continued till 1794. In 1801 these were revived by his sons Charles (1773–1852) and William (1779–1856), the latter of whom was a prominent singer (from 1797 in the Chapel Royal), for more than forty years in much request as a male alto. William was one of Arnold's successors in 1802 as composer to the Chapel Royal, in 1832–40 conducted the Antient Concerts, in 1834–43 the Birmingham Festivals and in 1835 the York Festival. He wrote effective glees and coronation-anthems in 1821 and '38. G.

Kobbé, Gustav (New York, 1857–1918, Bay Shore, N. Y.). American critic, educated for the law, in music pupil of A. Hagen and Mosenthal, from 1880 on the staff of the New York Sun, World, Mail and Herald in succession (in 1883 special correspondent at Bayreuth), besides other literary work. Author of a life of Wagner (2 vols. 1890, 2d ed. 1896), Opera-Singers, 1901 (6th ed. 1913), Lives of the Great Composers, 1905, How to Appreciate Music, 1906, Wagner and his Isolde, 1906, and Famous American Songs, 1906, with several novels. A.

Kobelius, Johann Augustin (n. Halle, 1674–1731, Weissenfels). Saxon composer, pupil of Schiefferdecker, Brausen and J. P. Krieger, long a member of the court-band at Weissenfels, in 1712 organist at Sangerhausen, from 1713 at Querfurt and from 1725 court-director at Weissenfels. Wrote about 20 operas (1716–29), overtures, concertos, sonatas, cantatas and much church-music.

Koch, Caspar P. (Carnap, 1872). German organist, brought up in America, pupil of Singenberger, the Kullak Academy, Berlin, and the Ratisbon Church Music School, in 1892–1901 organist at Trinity Church in Pittsburgh and since 1904 city-organist at Allegheny, besides from 1914 teaching at the Carnegie Inst. in Pittsburgh. Has written for orchestra, ensemble and organ.

Koch, Eduard Emil (n. Stuttgart, 1809–1871, do.). Lutheran pastor, from 1847 at Heilbronn, author of a valuable Gesch. d. Kirchenliedes u. Kirchengesanges, 1847 (3d ed. 8 vols. 1866–76, completed by Lauxmann).

Koch, Emma (Mayence, 1860). Gifted Rhenish pianist, pupil of Liszt, Von Bülow, Scharwenka, Moszkowski and Bärmann, since 1898 teacher of advanced pupils at the Stern Conservatory, Berlin.

Koch, Friedrich E. (Berlin, 1862). Eminent Prussian 'cellist and composer, trained at the Berlin Hochschule, in 1883–91 playing in the court-orchestra at Berlin, in 1891–92 conductor at Baden-Baden, and then returning to Berlin, from 1900 as singing-teacher at the Lessing Gymnasium and since 1917 head of the theory-department in the Hochschule. In 1900 he was made royal professor and in 1901 member of the Akademie. Has written the operas Die Halliger, 1897, Lea and Die Hügelmühle, 1918, the oratorios Von den Tageszeiten and Die Sündflut, the choral works Der gefesselte Strom, Polyhymnia, Das Sonnenlied, Halleluja and Die deutsche Tanne, 2 symphonies (Von der Nordsee and in G), a Symphonische Fuge, a violin-concerto (Deutsche Rhapsodie), the sinfonietta Waldidyll (piano-trio), Phantasiestücke for piano-trio, a string-trio (Mendelssohn prize), various pieces for 'cello, a set of German motets, several songs, etc.

Koch, Heinrich Christoph (Rudolstadt, 1749–1816, do.). Able Thuringian violinist, theorist and lexicographer, pupil of Göpfert, from 1768 connected with the Rudolstadt court-band. Author of Versuch einer Anleitung zur Composition, 3 parts, 1782–83 (a remarkable work, especially in its treatment of form), Musikalisches Lexikon, 2 parts, 1802 (abridged, 1807 and '28, revised ed. by Von Dommer, 1865), Handbuch bei d. Studium d. Harmonie, 1811, a manual of enharmonic modulation (1812) and many articles in the Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung (1788–91) and other periodicals. In 1795 he also issued two numbers of a Journal der Tonkunst. G.

Koch, Markus (n. Passau, 1879). Bavarian composer, in 1900 one of the founders of the Musikerfachschule at Munich and since 1913 teacher in the Conservatory. Has written a suite for piano, and wood-wind quartet, a string-quartet, various organ-pieces, several masses, including a Requiem, a Religiöse Symphonie for military band, choruses for women's or children's voices, fine songs for children, etc., besides an Abriß d. Instrumentenkunde.

Koch, Matthäus (n. Gmünd, 1862). Noted Swabian organist, originally a school-teacher, then pupil of the Stuttgart Conservatory and of Faiszt, from 1892 teacher at the Music School and organist at the Friedenskirche, and since 1900 head of his own Music Institute. Has written 6 organ-sonatas and other pieces, motets and Ein Gang zu d. Quellen d. Sprache, 1912.

Koch, Max (Munich, 1855). From 1880 lecturer on German literature at Marburg University and since 1895 professor at Breslau University. Author of a notable life of Wagner (3 vols. 1907–14) and Wagners Stellung in d. Entwicklung d. deutschen Kultur, 1913, besides an early study in the same field (1888).

Köchel, Ludwig, Ritter von (n. Krems, 1800–1877, Vienna). Austrian naturalist and high government official, living mostly at Vienna (at Salzburg in 1850–63). He became noted as a musical historian, publishing Ueber d. Umfang d. musikal. Productivität Mozarts, 1862, a monumental Chronologisch-systematisches Verzeichnis sämtlicher Tonwerke Mozarts, 1862 (additions in Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung, 1864, 2d ed. 1895, edited by Waldersee), Die kaiserliche Hofmusikkapelle zu Wien, 1543–1867, 1868, and a life of Fux (1872), besides editing letters of Beethoven to Grand-duke Rudolf (1865). He rendered valuable assistance in the preparation of the standard edition of Mozart's works and of Jahn's great biography. G.

Kocher, Conrad (n. Stuttgart, 1786–1872, do.). Württemberger church-musician, originally a private tutor in Petrograd, then pupil of Klengel, Berger and J. H. Müller, with study of a cappella music in Italy in 1819, from 1820 leader of a choral society in Stuttgart and from 1827 director at the Stiftskirche. Ph.D. of Tübingen Univ. in 1852. Wrote 2 operas, an oratorio, church-music, a piano-quartet, piano-sonatas, etc. Die Tonkunst in d. Kirche, 1823, a harmony-manual (1864), 2 Choralbücher and a piano-method.

Kócian, Jaroslav (Wildenschwert, 1884). Bohemian violinist of the bravura class, pupil of the Prague Conservatory, since 1901 widely known in both Europe and America.

Köckert, Adolph (Magdeburg, 1828–1911, Zurich). Saxon violinist, trained at the Prague Conservatory, for a time playing in the opera-orchestra there and in 1852–57 touring as virtuoso. In 1857 he married a banker's daughter in Geneva and till 1881 was associated in business with her father, though also organizing a Quartet in 1859. After 1881 he published works for orchestra and for violin, songs, etc., and wrote Gelegentlich d. Programmusik, 1898, Im Gesangverein, 1901, articles for periodicals and some French oratorio-texts.

Koczalski, Raoul Armand Georg (Warsaw, 1885). Polish pianist, pupil of his father and Godowsky, beginning appearances when but four and touring throughout Europe from 1892 (1000 concerts before his twelfth year!): Has written the operas Hagar, Rymond, 1902, and Die Sühne, 1909, a Symphonische Legende, various piano-fantasias and dances. Sketch by A. B. Vogel, 1896. G.

Koczirz, Adolf (n. Olmütz, 1870). Moravian lawyer and civil official, but also pupil of Adler at Vienna University (Ph.D. 1903), becoming a specialist on the history of lute-music. Member of the committee of the I. M. G. on this subject and editor of lute-works for the Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Oesterreich (vols. 37 and 50), besides some periodical-articles.

Kodály, Zoltán (Kecskemét, 1882). Hungarian composer, trained at the Pest Akademie and University (Ph.D. 1905), in 1907 becoming teacher at the Akademie. He was early influenced by Brahms, then by Debussy and finally by his intimate study of the folk-music of Hungary, Bukowina and Transylvania. Has written the symphonic picture Nyári Éste, 2 string-quartets, 2 'cello-sonatas (one solo), a trio-serenade, many choruses and songs, including 20 Hungarian folk-songs (1906, with Bartók), besides collections of Hungarian laments, etc. (partly also with Bartók).

Koechlin, Charles (Paris, 1867). Eminent French composer (of Alsatian stock), graduate of the École Polytechnique and the Conservatory. He has devoted himself industriously to composition and to writing for the Gazette des Beaux-Arts, Chronique des Arts and various other journals, besides contributing to Lavi-gnac's Encyclopédie. Has written the orchestral suites Les Saisons (with final chorale), Études Antiques, Soleil-Danses dans la Forêt and Légendaire, several other orchestral works, including a Ballade with piano, a piano-quintet, 3 string-quartets, a suite for piano, flute, violin and viola, sonatas for flute, for two flutes alone, for oboe, for bassoon, for horn, for viola and for 'cello, 5 sonatinas for piano, a suite for four hands and one for two pianos, many piano-pieces, including 12 Paysages et Marines, 3 organ-chorales with orchestra, the ballets La Divine Vespée and La Forêt Paienne, the Biblical pastoral Jacob et Laban (original text), the choral work L'Abbaye and many other settings of religious texts, 3 books of Rondels and 4 books of songs, etc. Sketches by Vuillermoz, 1921 (in Le Temps) and Calvocoressi, 1921–22 (in Musical Times).

Koemmenich, Louis (Elberfeld, 1866–1922, New York). Rhenish conductor, pupil of Krause and the Kullak Academy, Berlin, migrating in 1890 to America, where at first he directed various German singing-societies in Brooklyn and Philadelphia, and also in 1910 the German Theatre in New York, in 1912–17 the New York Oratorio Society, in 1913–19 the Mendelssohn Glee Club, in 1916 the Beethoven Society and from 1917 the New Choral Society. He led the New York premières of many large works, like Hegar's Manasse, Taubmann's Deutsche Messe, G. Schumann's Ruth, etc. Wrote many choruses and part-songs for men's voices (with orchestra or a cappella), incidental music for plays and songs. A.

Koenen, Friedrich (n. Bonn, 1829–1887, Cologne). Rhenish priest and church-musician, pupil of his father and the Ratisbon Music School, from 1863 choirmaster at Cologne Cathedral and teacher at the Priests' Seminary. In 1869 he started a branch of the Cäcilienverein, continuing as president till his death. Wrote 7 masses, other church-music, 2 cantatas, organ-preludes and songs. In 1880 he was made honorary canon of Palestrina.

Koenen, Tilly (in Java, ?1880). Gifted Dutch contralto, pupil of the Amsterdam Conservatory, since 1904 highly successful in oratorio and recital throughout Europe and America (from 1909).

Koennecke, Fritz (New York, 1876). German-American composer, trained at the Munich Conservatory, writing the operas Cagliostro and Magdalena, 1919, the Shrove-Tuesday play Der Fahrendt Schueler in Paradies, 1913 (after Sachs), the pastoral Rokoko (1915), music for Shakespeare's Tempest and Reinhardt's Saul und David (1917), duets and songs.

Koessler, Hans (Waldeck, 1853). Able Bavarian composer, from 1871 organist at Neumarkt, then pupil of Rheinberger, from 1877 teacher at the Dresden Conservatory and leader of the Liedertafel, in 1881-82 director at the Cologne Stadttheater, and in 1882-1908 and again since 1920 professor at the National Academy at Pest. Has written the opera Der Münzenfranz, 1902, the choral works Sylvesterglocken and Hymne an die Schönheit; 3 Psalms (including one for 16 parts, Tonkünstlerverein prize), a mass (women's voices), a symphony, Sinfonische Variationen, a violin-concerto, a string-sextet, a string-quintet, 2 string-quartets, sonatas for violin and for 'cello, a piano-suite, choruses and songs (including Kammergesänge with oboe, horn and string-quintet).

Kofler, Leo (Brixen, 1837-1908, New Orleans). Tyrolean organist and singing-teacher, from 1877 organist at St. Paul's Chapel, New York, and prominent as a voice-trainer. Author of The Art of Breathing, 1889. A.

Kogel, Gustav Friedrich (Leipzig, 1849-1921, Frankfurt). Saxon conductor, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1867 teacher in Alsace, in 1870-74 editor for Peters in Leipzig, from 1874 theater-conductor at Nuremberg, Dortmund, Ghent, Aix, Cologne and Leipzig (1883-86), from 1887 director of the Berlin Philharmonic, in 1891-1903 of the Museum Concerts at Frankfurt and from 1908 of the Wiesbaden Cäcilienverein. He served as guest-conductor in Spain, Russia and New York. Prepared notable editions of many operas, such as Spohr's Jessonda, Nicolai's Lustige Weiber, Lortzing's Zar und Zimmermann and Marschner's Hans Heiling.

Kögler, Hermann (Lodz, 1885). Gifted Polish pianist and composer (blind), pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory (Mozart and Nikisch prizes), writing a symphony, an overture, a violin-concerto, a string-quartet, piano-trios, sonatas for violin, for 'cello and for piano, piano-suites and variations, much other piano-music, an Osterhymnus, a Pfingstgebet, a Psalm, many other choral works, songs, etc.

Köhler, Christian Louis Heinrich (Brunswick, 1820-1886, Königsberg). Eminent North German pianist and teacher, pupil of Sonnemann, the Zinkeisens, Leibrock, Sechter, Seyfried and Bocklet, in 1843-46 theater-director at Marienburg, Elbing and Königsberg, from 1847 settling at the last as teacher (establishing his own school) and conductor of the choral society, steadily making a name as one of the foremost piano-pedagogues in succession to Czerny. In 1859 he was one of the leading promoters of the new Allgem. deutscher Tonkünstlerverein (Leipzig). He was long a useful critic of new music for the Leipzig Signale. He gained the title of royal professor in 1880. Wrote the operas Prinz und Maler, Maria Dolores, 1844, and Gil Blas, the ballet Der Zauberkomponist, 1846, music for Euripides' Helena (1843), a symphony, an overture to Terence's Phormio, a quartet, many piano-pieces and songs. Author of a number of important manuals of piano-study (1856-82), especially the large Systematische Lehrmethode, 2 vols. 1856-58, Die Gebrüder Müller u. d. Streichquartett, 1858, Die neue Richtung in d. Musik, 1864, Brahms u. seine Stellung in d. neuern Klavierliteratur, 1880, and 2 harmony-manuals. For the Neue Zeitschrift and the Berlin Musik-Zeitung he wrote many essays on the history of piano-music. G.

Köhler, Ernesto (Modena, 1849-1907, Petrograd). Austrian-Italian flutist, pupil of his father, from 1869 playing at the Karltheater in Vienna and after 1871 in the opera-orchestra at Petrograd. Wrote about 100 flute-works, including a concerto and a Konzertstück, many fine études, etc., besides the opera Ben Achmed and several ballets.

Köhler, Ernst (Langenbielau, 1799-1847, Breslau). Good Silesian organist and pianist, from 1827 organist at the Elisabethkirche in Breslau. Wrote 2 symphonies, 9 overtures, organ- and piano-pieces, 12 large choral works and as many church-cantatas.

Köhler, Moritz (Altenburg, 1855). Saxon violinist, pupil of his father, Stamm and Müller-Berghaus, from 1873 playing in the Bilse Orchestra at Berlin and from 1880 in the court-orchestra at Petrograd, where he became director in 1898. Has written 2 orchestral suites, 3 serenades, Phantasietänze, a violin-concerto, a string-quartet, many violin- and some 'cello- and viola-pieces, etc.

Köhler, Oskar (Schrauditz, 1851-1917, Erfurt). Saxon composer, pupil of Brambach, Tausch and Th. Kirchner, at first theater-conductor at various places, then teacher at the Stern Conservatory, Berlin, and finally settled in Leipzig. Wrote about 200 works, including an orchestral suite, 3 overtures, several notable church-cantatas, choruses and piano-pieces.

Köhler, Wilhelm (Wümbach, 1858). Thuringian church-musician, originally teaching in Wümbach and Hamburg, then in Berlin under Grell and Bargiel, becoming about 1900 choir-master at the Petrikirche in Hamburg and teacher at the Seminary. Has written masses, 2 Psalms for double chorus, motets, the choral work Das Mädchen von Kola (men's voices), piano-sonatas, etc. Among his pupils is the organist Sittard.

Kohout, Franz (Hostin, 1858). Bohemian composer, pupil of Skuhersky. Has written the short operas Babinsky, 1892, and Stella, 1896, the larger Juan de Marana, incidental music for several plays, organ- and piano-pieces.

Kohut, Adolf (Mindszent, 1847-1917, n. Berlin). Prolific Bohemian author, educated at Breslau, Berlin, Vienna and Jena Universities (Ph.D. 1878), at first engaged in journalistic writing, in 1884-89 living at Dresden and after 1890 at Berlin. Author of over 100 books in historical and literary fields, including Moses Mendelssohn u. seine Familie, 1886, Weber-Gedenkbuch, 1887, Das Dresdener Hoftheater, 1888, Die grössten deutschen Soubretten im 19. Jahrh. 1890, Bilder aus d. Musikwelt, 1891, Aus d. Zauberlande Polyhymnias, 1892, Dur- u. Moll-akkorde, 1894, Schiller in seinen Beziehungen zur Musik, 1905, Die Gesangsköniginnen d. letzten drei Jahrhunderte, 1906, and biographies or appreciations of Wieck (1888), Meyerbeer (1890), Joachim (1891), Rossini (1892), Auber (1895) and Liszt (1911). He married the singer Elisabeth Mannstein, daughter of Heinrich Mannstein. In 1912 he was made Ph.D. by Klausenburg Univ.

Kolar, Victor (Pest, 1888). Bohemian-Hungarian violinist and composer, as a boy a protégé of Kubelik and graduating at the Prague Conservatory. In 1904 he migrated to America, at first playing as soloist with the Chicago Orchestra on tour, from 1905 with the Pittsburgh Orchestra and in 1907-19 with the New York Symphony Society (assistant-conductor from 1915). Since 1919 he has been deputy-conductor of the Detroit Orchestra. Has written a symphony (1916), the symphonic poems Hia-watha, 1908 (score later destroyed), and A Fairy Tale, 1913, the suites Lyric and Americana, 1914, and 2 string-quartets (1913). A.

Kolatchevsky, Michail Nikolaievitch (b. 1851). Russian composer, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, writing a Ukrainian Symphony, a string-quartet and trio, a Requiem, a cappella canticles and songs.

Kolb, Karlmann (Köstlar, 1703-1765, Munich). Bavarian priest and organist, publishing organ-pieces in 1733. G.

Kolbe, Oskar (Berlin, 1836-1878, do.). Prussian teacher, pupil of the Berlin Institut für Kirchenmusik and the Academie, from 1859 theory-teacher at the Stern Conservatory, gaining the title of royal director in 1872 and retiring in 1875. Wrote the oratorio Johannes der Täufer, 1872, an overture to Wallensteins Tod, songs and two harmony-manuals (1862, '73).

Kolberg, Oskar (n. Radom, 1814-1890, Warsaw). Polish composer, pupil of Rungenhagen. Wrote many Polish dances and songs, besides the opera Le Retour de Jena, 1854, and edited a unique and valuable collection of Polish folk-songs (22 vols. beginning in 1842).

Kolderup, Amunda (Hoel, 1846-1882, Christiania). Gifted Norwegian operatic singer, pupil of Leuhusen, R. Levy and Sangiovanni, from about 1870 a favorite in Norway and later appearing in Austria and Germany for a brief time.

Köler, David (? -1565). 16th C. G.

Kolf, J. van Santen (Rotterdam, 1848-1896, Berlin). Dutch writer of a vast number of essays on music and musicians in Dutch, German and French papers and magazines, especially about topics connected with Wagner's works.

Koller, Oswald (Brünn, 1852-1910, Klagenfurt). Professor in the Realschule at Kremsier and from 1893 at the Gewerbeschule in Vienna. Author of valuable historical articles on various topics (Klopstock's relation to music, the Montpelier Codex, etc.) and editor of sections in the Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Oesterreich (vii, ix, xi).

Kollmann, August Friedrich Christoph (Engelbostel, 1756-1829, London). Hanoverian organist, from 1784 employed at the German Chapel (St. James) in London. Besides some compositions, author of various harmony-manuals (from 1796), analyses of trios and the beginning of a new edition of Bach's Wohltemperiertes Clavier (1799) and of a Quarterly Musical Register (1812). G.

Kömpel, August (Brückenau, 1831-1891, Weimar). Able Bavarian violinist, pupil of the Würzburg Conservatory and of Spohr, David and Joachim, from 1844 in the court-band at Kassel, in 1852-61 in that at Hanover, then touring widely until 1863, when he joined the Weimar orchestra, becoming concertmaster in 1867 and retiring in 1884. He is regarded as Spohr's best pupil. G.

König, Johann Balthazar (n. Gotha, 1691-1758, Frankfurt). Saxon church-musician, trained as a choirboy at the Frankfurt Cathedral, from 1718 assistant to Telemann at the Katharinenkirche and from 1727 city-director. Editor of Harmonischer Lieder-Schatz, 1738, the largest chorale-book of the 18th century (over 1900 melodies, including those of the Reformed Psalter). All the tunes are reduced to monotonous rhythmical uniformity. G.

Königslöw, Johann Wilhelm Cornelius von (Hamburg, 1745-1833, Lübeck). North German organist, from 1771 at the Marienkirche in Lübeck. Wrote many Abendmusiken or church-oratorios after Buxtehude's example.

Königslöw, Otto Friedrich von (Hamburg, 1824-1898, Bonn). Noted North German violinist, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1846 for many years on concert-tours (often with Reinecke), and in 1858-81 concertmaster of the Gürzenich Orchestra at Cologne, besides teaching at the Conservatory, where he became vice-director and gained the title of royal professor. In 1884 he retired to Bonn.

Königspurger, Marianus (Roding, 1708-1769, n. Ratisbon). Bavarian organist, from 1734 at the Benedictine monastery at Prüfening (near Ratisbon), where he had high repute as player and composer. Wrote many masses, Psalms, canticles, motets, etc., various concerted instrumental works (sonatas, sinfonie), preludes and fugues for organ or clavier, and a clavier-method. G.

Koning, David (Rotterdam, 1820-1876, Amsterdam). Fine Dutch pianist, conductor and composer, pupil of Aloys Schmitt, from 1840 conductor of the Musæ (choral society) at Amsterdam and prominent in the affairs of the Cecilia and other societies, besides being a leading teacher. Wrote the comic opera The Fishermayden (prize-work), the choral work Elegy on an Artist's Death, a motet with orchestra for the accession of William II (1840), many choruses, concert-scenas, chorals, a symphony, 4 overtures, several string-quartets, piano-sonatas, pieces and études, etc.

Konius, Georgy Eduardovitch (Moscow, 1862). Russian composer, trained at the Moscow Conservatory, in 1891-99 professor there and from 1902 at the Philharmonic Music School. Has written the symphonic poems From the World of Illusion and La Forêt Brûlée, the orchestral suite Scènes Enfantines, a cantata in memory of Alexander III, the ballet Daita, 1896, many piano-pieces and songs, besides a large manual on instrumentation. His brother Julius (b. 1869) is a violinist, long teaching at the Moscow Conservatory (medal, 1888) and writing a violin-concerto, pieces, etc. G. A.

Könnemann, Arthur (Baden-Baden, 1861). Badenese conductor and composer, pupil of his father, Krasselt and Deecke, at first theater-director at Brandenburg, Paderborn, Greifswald, Osnabrück, Wesel, Münster, etc., and since 1887 conductor of an orchestra at Mährisch-Ostrau and director of a music-school. Has written the operas Gavrillo, 1882, Der Bravo, 1886, Vineta, 1895, Der tolle Eberstein, 1898 (Belgian prize), and Die Madonna mit den Mantel, 1912, the overture Der Herbst, the suite Indien, the scherzo Lichtelfentanz, the interlude Vision, a Sinfonisch-odisches Eröffnungsspiel, a violin-concerto, and many lesser works.

Konta, Robert (Vienna, 1880). Austrian composer of the opera Das kalte Herz, 1908, the pantomime Der bucklige Geiger, 1909, the short Jugunda, 1922, a symphony and songs.

Kontski, Antoine de (Cracow, 1817-1899, n. Novgorod). Gifted Polish pianist, pupil of Field and the Vienna Conservatory, from before 1835 making many long tours, at first from Paris, from 1853 from Petrograd, from 1867 from London and in 1885 for a time from New York. When eighty years old he undertook a world-tour, ending at Warsaw and continued concerts two years more. His style was extremely brilliant, finished and delicate, though without much depth of conception. Wrote 2 piano-concertos and many showy pieces, the opera Les Deux Distraits, 1872, an operetta, an oratorio, orchestral and church-music. G.

Kontski, Apollinaire de (Warsaw, 1825-1879, do.), brother of the above. Noted Polish violinist, pupil of his brother Charles and Paganini, precociously developed and early beginning general tours, from 1853 chamber-musician at the Russian court and from 1861 founder and director of the Warsaw Conservatory. Other members of this talented family (all pianists) were Charles (1815-1867), Stanislas (1820-?) and Eugénie. G.

Kopecky, Ottokar (n. Deutschbrod, 1850-1917, Hamburg). Able Bohemian violinist, trained at the Prague Conservatory, from 1870 playing in orchestras at Brünn, Vienna, Sondershausen and finally Hamburg, where he was concertmaster of the Philharmonic, conductor of the Schaeffer Orchestra and teacher in the Conservatory.

Kopfermann, Albert (Dortmund, 1846-1914, Berlin). Prussian librarian, educated at Bonn, Berlin and Halle Universities (Ph.D. 1872), from 1878 custodian of the music-section of the Berlin Library. He was severely wounded in the Franco-Prussian war.

Kopsch, Julius (Berlin, 1887). Prussian conductor, pupil of Klatte and Kleffel, now in charge of the orchestra and opera at Oldenburg. Has written a symphony (1920), the tone-poem Komödianten (1914), a piano-concerto (1917), a string-quartet (1916), a violin-sonata (1919) and many songs.

Koptiaiev, Alexander Petrovitch (Petrograd, 1868). Has written lives or critiques of Cui (1895), Glasunov (1897), Wagner (1897), d'Albert (1898) and Scriabin (1899), guides for the Wagnerian operas, the orchestral pieces Cortège de la Vie, Poème Élégiacque and Oriental Dances, a piano-suite, Psalm 18, etc.

Kopylov, Alexander (Petrograd, 1854). Russian composer, trained in the Imperial Chapel at Petrograd and later vocal instructor there. Has written a symphony, an overture, an orchestral scherzo, 2 string-quartets, other quartet-works, many salon-pieces for piano, some études, choruses and songs.

Korbay, Francis Alexander (Pest, 1846-1913, London). Hungarian tenor and pianist, pupil of Moronyi, Volkmann, Roger and Liszt, in 1865-68 singing at the Pest Opera, then touring as pianist, from 1871 in New York as teacher (with many excellent song-recitals) and in 1894-1903 professor at the Royal Academy in London. Wrote a Hungarian Overture, 1912, the orchestral piece Nuptiale, transcriptions of Hungarian folk-songs and other piano-pieces, various solos and songs, including Le Matin (orchestrated by Liszt), settings of Lenau's Schilflieder, etc. G. A.

Korestchenko Arseni Nikolaievitch (Moscow, 1870). Gifted Russian composer, trained at the Moscow Conservatory, from 1891 teacher there and at the Synodal School. Has written the operas Belshazzar's Feast, 1891, The Angel of Death and The Ice-Palace, 1900, the ballet The Magic Mirror, 1902, music for Euripides' Trojan Women and Iphigenia in Aulis, the cantata Don Juan, settings of Armenian and Georgian songs and many other choral works, an Armenian Suite for orchestra, a Symphonie Lyrique, Symphonic Pictures and several other orchestral pieces, a string-quartet, violin-, cello- and piano-pieces, and some songs. G.

Korganov, Gennari Ossipovitch (in the Caucasus, 1858-1890, Rostov-on-Don). Short-lived Russian composer, pupil of the Leipzig and Petrograd Conservatories, writing about 40 works, including graceful piano-pieces.

Korn, Clara Anna, née Gerlach (Berlin, 1866). Prussian-American composer, brought up in Jersey City and pupil of the National Conservatory, New York, where she taught in 1893-98. Has written a symphony, a piano-concerto, some chamber-music, a piano-sonata, pieces for violin and for piano, and songs (some with orchestra), besides the opera Our Last War. A.

Kornauth, Egon (Olmütz, 1891). Moravian composer, trained at the Vienna Akademie and University (Ph.D. 1915), becoming in 1915-16 coach at the Opera and then active as teacher in either Vienna or Gratz. He is in request as accompanist and in 1910 visited America in that capacity. Has written music for Streicher's Traumland (1913), a Sinfonie-Suite, a Festliche Vorspiel, an orchestral Ballade with 'cello obbligato, a Sinfonietta, a Rhapsodie for violin and orchestra, a string-sextet, a string- and a piano-quartet, Abendmusik for string-quartet, sonatas for violin, for viola, for clarinet and for piano, a Phantastisches Scherzo for flute, a piano-fantasia, various songs, etc.

Körner, Gotthilf Wilhelm (n. Halle, 1809-1865, Erfurt). Saxon music-publisher, from 1838 established at Erfurt, issuing many organ-works and from 1844 the organ-journal Urania. In 1886 the business was merged with C. F. Peters of Leipzig.

Korngold, Erich Wolfgang (Brünn, 1897). Precocious Moravian composer, pupil of his father and the Vienna Conservatory, from his eleventh year producing significant orchestral and dramatic pieces, besides appearing as pianist. In 1919 he became conductor at the Hamburg Opera. Has written the short operas Der Ring des Polykrates and Violanta, both 1916, the larger Der tote Stadt, 1920, music for Shakespeare's Much Ado about Nothing, the pantomime Der Schneemann, 1910, a Schauspiel-Ouvertüre, 1911, a Sinfonietta, a string-sextet, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, 2 piano-sonatas, Märchenbilder for piano, some songs, etc. At first his style, more or less modeled after Strauss, seemed turgid and crude, but his unquestioned ability has later displayed itself to better effect.

Kornmüller, Otto (Straubing, 1824-1907, Metten). Bavarian priest and (from 1858) Benedictine, long connected with the monastery at Metten, where he was choirmaster and finally prior. For years he was head of the Ratisbon branch of the Cäcilienverein. Wrote masses, motets and other church-music, and Der katholische Kirchenchor, 1868, a Lexikon d.kirchlichen Tonkunst, 1870 (2d ed. 2 vols. 1891-95), Die Musik beim liturgischen Hochamt, 1871, and articles in periodicals.

Korten, Ernst. Composer of the operas Der Nachtwächter, 1891, Albrecht Roser, ein badischer Held, 1896, Der Blondin von Namur, 1914, and Z'widerwurz'n, 1905 ('volksoper').

Koschat, Thomas (n. Klaggenfurt, 1845-1914, Vienna). Gifted Carinthian singer and vocal composer, while a student of natural science at Vienna University singing in the chorus at the Opera, passing in 1874 to the Cathedral choir and in 1878 to the court-choir (retired in 1913). In 1875 he organized the Kärnthner Quintett, which became famous for its renderings of Carinthian and other folk-songs. As early as 1871 he began publishing harmonizations of Carinthian melodies and original songs in their style, for which he wrote the texts. Many of these were gathered in his 'Liederspiel' Am Wörthersee. Also wrote the singspiele Die Rosenthaler Nachtigall and Die Bürgermeister von St. Anna, 1893. See works by O. Schmid, 1887, Morold, 1895, and Krobath, 1912.

Köselitz, Heinrich. See Gast, Peter.

Kosleck, Julius (Neugard, 1825-1905, Berlin). Noted Pomeranian trumpeter, cornettist and trombonist, in the royal band at Berlin and from 1873 teacher at the Hochschule. He organized the famous Kaiser-Cornett-Quartett, which in 1890 was enlarged into the Patriotischer Bläserbund. Wrote many wind-arrangements and a method for trumpet and cornet.

Kossmaly, Carl (Breslau, 1812-1893, Stettin). Silesian conductor and author, pupil of Berger, Zelter and Klein, from 1830 opera-director at Wiesbaden, Mayence, Amsterdam (from 1838), Bremen (from 1841), Detmold and Stettin (1846-49), and then teacher and concert-conductor at Stettin. Author of a Schlesisches Tonkünstler-Lexikon, 1846-47, Mozarts Opern, 1848 (after Oulibichev), on program-music (1858) and Ueber Rich. Wagner, 1874 (hostile), besides many detached articles. Also wrote instrumental and vocal pieces.

Köster, Luise, née Schlegel (Lübeck, 1823-1905, Schwerin). Able North German operatic soprano, from 1838 appearing at Leipzig and Berlin, in 1841-44 at Schwerin, then at Breslau and in 1847-62 at the Berlin Opera, where she became an honorary associate.

Köstlin, Heinrich Adolf (Tübingen, 1846-1907, Cannstatt). Württemberger church-musician and theologian, the son of the noted Tübingen professor Christian Reinhold Köstlin and the song-composer Josephine Lang, educated as both clergyman and musician, in 1870 army chaplain, in 1871-73 lecturer at Tübingen, then holding charges at Sulz, Maulbronn, Friedrichshafen and Stuttgart, from 1883 professor at the Friedberg Theological Seminary, from 1891 district-superintendent at Darmstadt and in 1895-1900 professor of theology at Giessen University. From 1875 he was active in forming choir-associations, which in 1877 became the Evangelical Kirchengesangverein for Württemberg and in 1883 for all Germany (now numbering over 2000 choirs). Of this he was at first vice-president and from 1903 president. He conducted most of its earlier festivals, as well as an oratorio society at Friedrichshafen. Author of Gesch.d.Musik im Umriß, 1873 (6th ed. 1910, edited by Nagel), Einführung in d.Aesthetik d. Musik, 1878, a sketch of his mother (1881), Luther als Vater d. evangel. Kirchenliedes, 1882, Gesch. d. christlichen Gottesdienstes, 1886, and

Das deutsche Tonkunst, 1898 (in Meyer's Das deutsche Volkstum), besides important articles and book-reviews.

Köstlin, Karl Reinhold (Urach, 1819-1894, Tübingen). From 1857 professor of æsthetics at Tübingen University, writing Æsthetik, 2 vols. 1863-69 (with some treatment of music), the section on music in Vischer's Æsthetik (1858) and a brochure on Wagner.

Kotchetov, Nikolai Razumnikovitch (Oranienbaum, 1864). Russian composer and critic, chiefly self-taught while studying law at Moscow, where he has also been conductor and writer for several papers and from 1906 lecturer on music-history at the University. Has written the opera The Terrible Revenge, 1897 (1903?), a symphony (1895), an Arabian Suite for orchestra, a serenade for strings, many piano-pieces, including The Heart of Nature, Eastern Sketches, etc., and songs. G (Kochetov).

Kothe, Bernhard (Gröbnig, 1821-1897, Breslau). Silesian church-musician, pupil of the Berlin Institut für Kirchenmusik and of Marx, from 1851 director and school-teacher at Oppeln and in 1869-96 in the Teachers' Seminary at Breslau (succeeding his younger brother Aloys). He started a branch of the Cäcilienverein. Wrote motets, sacred part-songs, organ-pieces, a method for school-singing, Die Musik in d. kathol. Kirche, 1862, and Abriss d. Musikgeschichte, 1874 (8th ed. 1908, edited by Procházka), besides editing the 4th ed. of Seidel's Die Orgel (1887) and (with Forchhammer) a Führer durch d. Orgelliteratur, 1890 (2d ed. 1909, edited by Burkert).

Kothen, Karl Axel (Frederikshamn, 1871). Finnish singing-teacher, pupil of the Helsingfors Conservatory, with much further study at Petrograd, Vienna, Rome and Paris, besides later work under Thuille and Courvoisier, in 1900-06 concert-singer at Helsingfors and since 1908 professor in the Conservatory there. Has written incidental music for Lindberg's Kristina Vasa, a Jubilee Cantata, 1911, other choral works, such as Finland Namn and Till Musiken, 1911, many songs and piano-pieces.

Kotilainen, Otto (Heinävesi, 1868). Finnish conductor and composer, trained at the Helsingfors Conservatory and the Philharmonic Orchestral School, with study also at Berlin. He has led many choral festivals and been critic for Helsingfors papers. Has written incidental music for several plays, an orchestral suite, a Légende for strings, the cantata Cygneus, violin-pieces, choruses and songs.

Kotte, Johann Gottlieb (n. Schandau, 1797-1857, Dresden). Saxon clarinettist, from 1817 drawn to Dresden at Weber's desire and soon playing in the opera-orchestra there. Weber and Reissiger wrote works for him, and he was a fruitful teacher.

Kotter, Hans (?1485-1542?). 16th C.

Köttlitz, Adolf (Treves, 1820-1860, in Siberia). Rhenish violinist, beginning public playing at ten, from about 1840 living at Cologne, from 1845 at Paris (patronized by Liszt), in 1848-56 opera-conductor at Königsberg and then, after extended tours in Russia and Siberia, director at Uralsk. Wrote 2 striking string-quartets.

Kotzebue, August Friedrich Ferdinand von (Weimar, 1761-1819, Mannheim). Eminent Saxon dramatist, author of several libretti, as of Der Wildfang, 1798, Der Spiegelritter, 1802, Himmel's Fanchon, 1804 (from the French of Bouilly) and Beethoven's Ruinen von Athen, 1811. In 1815 and '17 he issued an Opern-Almanach, and in his journal Der Freimüthige included useful musical items.

Kotzolt, Heinrich (n. Neustadt, 1814-1881, Berlin). Silesian singer (bass) and choral conductor, pupil of Dehn and Runghagen, in 1838-42 engaged at the Danzig Opera and then, after tours, from 1843 leading bass in the Domchor at Berlin, in 1862 becoming vice-conductor. From 1849 he was founder and director of his own Gesangverein (for a cappella music), which still flourishes under his name. From 1876 he held the title of royal professor. He was noted as a vocal teacher and wrote a method for a cappella singing, besides several choruses.

Kotzschmar, Hermann (Finsterwalde, 1829-1909, Portland, Me.). Prussian organist and choral conductor, pupil of his father, Hayne and Jul. Otto, becoming expert on various instruments. After some years in the opera-orchestra and a leading band at Dresden, he came to America with the Saxonia Band in 1848, settling in Portland, Me., where from 1849 he was organist at the First Church (Unitarian) and from 1896 at the State Street Church, besides directing several choral societies. The municipal organ of Portland, given by C. H. K. Curtis of Philadelphia [whose middle names were taken from him], is his memorial. A.

Kovařovic, Karl (Prague, 1862-1920, do.). Noted Bohemian composer, pupil of Fibich and the Prague Conservatory, from 1899 director at the Bohemian Opera at Prague. composer of the operas The Bridegrooms, 1884, Through the Window, 1886, The Night of Simon and Judas, 1893, Dog-Heads, 1898, On the Bleaching-Ground, 1901, and Fraguita, 1902, 7 ballets (from 1884, partly under the name 'Charles Forgeron'), a piano-concerto, many choruses and songs.

Kowalski, Henri (Paris, 1841-1916, Bordeaux). Popular salon-pianist, pupil of Montel and Reber, becoming known in Germany, England and America. Wrote many pleasing pieces.

Kozeluch, Johann Anton (Welwarn, 1738-1814, Prague), cousin of the following. Bohemian church-musician, pupil of Seegert, Gluck and Gassmann, from about 1760 active in several places in succession, in 1784 becoming choir-master at Prague Cathedral. Wrote many masses, other church-music, 2 oratorios, 2 operas, etc. G.

Kozeluch, Leopold Anton (Welwarn, 1752-1818, Vienna), cousin of the above. Bohemian pianist and composer, pupil of his cousin, from 1771 rising rapidly into great favor as player and extremely facile composer, from 1778 becoming teacher of the Archduchess Elisabeth at Vienna and in 1792 succeeding Mozart as court-composer. Wrote several operas (from 1780), an oratorio, cantatas, 30 symphonies, 13 piano-concertos, much chamber-music, etc., besides setting some of Thomson's Scottish songs. G.

Kozłowski, Josef Antonovitch (Warsaw, 1757–1831, Petrograd). Polish composer, from about 1770 tutor in the family of Count Oginski, in 1787–89 in military service and then invited to Petrograd by Count Potemkin as inspector of the theater-orchestras and the court-balls. Wrote incidental music for Œdipus in Athens (1804), Ozerov's Fingal (1805), Zhukovsky's Deborah (1810), Grusinzov's King Œdipus (1811) and Racine's Esther (1816), several masses, a Requiem (1798, for funeral of Stanislaus II, also at that of Alexander I in 1826), a Te Deum for double chorus, many choruses and songs, besides polonaises that were long popular (one of them served for a time as the Russian national hymn).

Krabbe, Wilhelm (n. Solingen, 1882). Rhenish historian and librarian, educated at Bonn and Berlin Universities (Ph.D. 1910), becoming assistant in the Berlin Library and now librarian. Author of various studies in the history of German song in the 16–17th centuries (1910–22).

Krafft-Lortzing, Karl. Composer of the operas Die Löwenbraut, 1886, Die drei Wahrzeichen, 1891, Der Goldschuh, 1905, and Frau Hitt, 1909 ('volksoper'). He was a nephew of Albert Lortzing. He died at Munich in 1923.

Kraft, Anton (n. Pilsen, 1752–1820, Vienna). Bohemian 'cellist, pupil of Werner and Haydn, from 1778 in Prince Esterházy's band, from 1790 in that of Prince Grassalkovics, and from 1795 in that of Prince Lobkowitz. Wrote a 'cello-concerto, 6 'cello-sonatas, duets for 'cello or 'cello and violin, trios (with barytones), etc. G.

Kraft, Edwin Arthur (New Haven, Conn. 1883). American organist, pupil of his brother (below) and at the Yale School of Music, with later study in Berlin and Paris, in 1901–04 at St. Thomas in Brooklyn, in 1905–07 at St. Matthew's in Wheeling, W. Va. (also organizing a choral society), from 1907 at the Cleveland Cathedral (P. E.), in 1914–16 city-organist at Atlanta, Ga., and since 1916 at Cleveland again. He has often appeared as recitalist. A.

Kraft, Nicolaus (Esterház, 1778–1853, Stuttgart). Bohemian-Hungarian 'cellist, pupil of his father (Anton above), played with Mozart at Dresden when but eleven, from 1790 was patronized at Vienna by Princes Lichnowsky and Lobkowitz (as protégé of the latter had studied in 1791 with Dupont), in 1794–95 played in the famous Schuppanzigh Quartet, made long tours in Bohemia and Germany, from 1809 was in the court-orchestra at Vienna and from 1814 in that at Stuttgart (laid aside by an accident after 1834). Wrote 5 'cello-concertos, 'cello-dances with orchestra, a fantasia with string-quartet, duets and divertissements for two 'celli, and many solos. He had several able pupils. G.

Kraft, William Jacob (New Haven, Conn. 1872), brother of Edwin above. American organist, trained at Yale School of Music and as Mosenthal Fellow at Columbia University, in church and concert work from 1890, at first in New Haven, later in New York, where in 1905–15 he was organist at Columbia University Summer School, in 1909–13 taught in the public schools, from 1912 was associate-professor at Teachers College and has been teaching for the Univ. of California in Los Angeles. Has written an orchestral scherzo, anthems and songs, the music for the pageant The Wayfarer (1919) and (with Farnsworth) The Tonal Phrase-Book, 1915. A.

Kramer, Arthur Walter (New York, 1890). American composer, largely self-taught, but with violin-study under his father, Hauser and Arnold, since 1910 on the staff of Musical America. Has written 4 orchestral Sketches, a Rhapsody for violin with orchestra, a suite for strings, a string-quartet, an Elegy for quartet, several violin-pieces, a Concert-Prelude and other pieces for organ, piano-pieces, the choral scene The Hour of Prayer, and many effective songs. In 1916 he contributed a section on 'The Modern Italians' to The Art of Music. A.

Kramm, Georg (Kassel, 1856–1910, Düsseldorf). Hessian violinist, pupil of Dilleher, Kaletsch and Rundnagel, playing in orchestras at Kassel, Stettin and Hamburg, from 1880 at Düsseldorf (adding study with Tausch), where from 1896 he led men's choruses and taught at the Conservatory and the Luise School. Wrote the opera Leonore, 1903, the cantata Der Felsenstrom, orchestral and piano-pieces.

Krantz, Eugen (Dresden, 1844–1898, Königstein). Saxon pianist, trained at the Dresden Conservatory, from 1865 private music-master in Pomerania, in 1869–84 chorusmaster at the Dresden Opera and also teacher at the Conservatory, where he undertook ensemble-singing and operatic rôles from 1877, the chief choral work from 1884 and in 1890 became director (and also owner) of the institution. From 1862 he was noted as accompanist for concerts of the highest class. He served as critic for the Pressa and the Nachrichten for brief periods. From 1882 he held the title of professor and from 1896 that of councillor. Wrote some songs and a piano-method (1882).

Kranz, Johann Friedrich (Weimar, 1754–1807, Stuttgart). Saxon violinist, from about 1775 playing in the Weimar court-band (twice sent by the Grand-duke to Italy for study) and in 1789 becoming concertmaster. In 1803 he followed Zumsteeg as court-director at Stuttgart.

Krasselt, Alfred (Glauchau, 1872–1908, Eisenach). Saxon violinist, pupil of his father, Petri and Brodsky, from 1893 concertmaster of the Kaim Orchestra in Munich and from 1896 of the Weimar court-orchestra.

Kraus, Adrienne, née Osborne [Eisbein] (Buffalo, N. Y. 1873). American operatic contralto, pupil of Augusta Götze and Felix von Kraus (below), whom she married in 1899. Like her husband, she confines herself to Wagnerian rôles. A.

Kraus, Alessandro (Frankfort, 1820-1904, Florence). Eminent patron and collector of instruments, one of the promoters of the Musical Fund Society at Frankfort and of the Società del Quartetto in Florence. His remarkable collection of instruments became part of the Heyer Museum at Cologne.

Kraus, Alessandro (Florence, 1853), son of the above. Author of Le Quattro Scale Moderna Tonalità, 1874, Catalogue des Instruments du Musée Kraus, 1878, La Musique au Japon, 1878, Catalogo della sua Collezione Etnografica Musicale, 1901, Appunti sulla Musica dei Popoli Nordici, 1907. He is also a good pianist and has written elementary piano-exercises (1873).

Kraus, Ernst (Erlangen, 1863). Eminent Bavarian operatic tenor, pupil of Galliera and Mme. Schimon-Regan, from 1893 appearing in both concert and opera, at once engaged at Mannheim and since 1896 at the Berlin Opera, though with many visits to other stages and to foreign countries (in America from about 1895). He is noted as a Wagnerian interpreter (at Bayreuth in 1901).

Kraus, Felix von (Vienna, 1870). Eminent Austrian operatic bass, trained in musicology at Vienna University (Ph.D. 1894), but mostly self-taught in singing (some lessons from Stockhausen). He became known from 1895 in song-recitals and oratorio, but from 1899 has appeared steadily at the Bayreuth festivals, as well as more or less on other stages (always in Wagnerian rôles). Since 1908 he has been professor at the Munich Conservatory and artistic director at the Opera. In 1899 he married the contralto Adrienne Osborne (see above).

Kraus, Joseph Martin (n. Mayence, 1756-1792, Stockholm). Rhenish conductor and composer, pupil of Vogler, from 1778 chorus-master at the Stockholm Opera, in 1781 being advanced to the directorship. From 1788, after wide travels as royal protégé, he was court-director. Wrote the operas Alzira, 1777, Proserpina, 1780, Soliman II, 1788, and Aeneas in Carthago, 1790, music for the funeral of Gustavus III (1792), orchestral and chamber-pieces, etc. His autobiography is in the Berlin Library.

Krause, Anton (n. Chemnitz, 1834-1907, Dresden). Able Saxon pianist and conductor, pupil of Wieck, Reissiger, Spindler and the Leipzig Conservatory, appearing first as a boy of twelve, from 1853 teacher in Leipzig and from 1856 director of the Liedertafel, and after 1859 conductor of the Singverein at Barmen and also of the Concert Society, retiring in 1897. Wrote some choral and solo music, with many elementary piano-études and pieces, and edited collections of sonatinas and music for two pianos.

Krause, Christian Gottfried (n. Glogau, 1719-1770, Berlin). Silesian lawyer, from about 1750 in a leading post at Berlin. He was musically cultured and became a leading spirit in the growth of interest in the song, writing odes, a singspiel, etc., and aiding in the issue of Birnstiel's Oden mit Melodien (1753-55). Author of Von d. musikal. Poesie, 1753, etc. See sketch by Schering, 1907 (Zeitschr. für Aesthetik).

Krause, Eduard (Swinemünde, 1837-1892, Berlin). Pomeranian pianist, pupil of Kroll and Hauptmann, from 1862 teaching in Stettin, then for a time at the Geneva Conservatory and finally retired in Berlin. Wrote a piano-sonata and various other pieces, motets, choruses and a text-book in composition (not published).

Krause, Emil (Hamburg, 1840-1916, do.). North German pianist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1860 teaching at Hamburg (after 1885 at the Conservatory), besides in 1864-1907 acting as critic for the Fremdenblatt. Author of able pedagogical works on piano-technique, including a method (1892), a Neue Gradus (100 études), etc. a text-book in harmony (1869, 8th ed. 1908), the choral work Den Heimgegangenen, 3 cantatas, an Ave Maria (6-part), chamber-music and many piano-pieces.

Krause, Karl Christian Friedrich (Eisenberg, 1781-1832, Munich). Saxon writer on philosophy, among whose many works are Darstellung aus d. Gesch. d. Musik, 1827 (new ed. 1911, edited by Wünsche), Anfangsgründe d. allgem. Theorie d. Musik, 1838, System d. Aesthetik (1882, edited by Hohlfeld and Wünsche) and a manual of piano-technique (1808).

Krause, Martin (n. Leipzig, 1853-1918, n. Deggendorf). Eminent Saxon piano-teacher, pupil of his father and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1876 private teacher at Montreux and Bremen, in 1878-80 concertizing with success, but then laid aside by ill-health. From 1882 he was intimate with Liszt, making a close study of his method as a player, and in 1885 established a Lisztverein at Leipzig whose annual concerts (under his oversight) continued influential till given up in 1900. In 1900-01 he taught at the Dresden Conservatory, from 1901 at that in Munich and from 1904 at the Stern Conservatory in Berlin. While at Leipzig he wrote much as critic. From 1892 he held the title of professor. Author of a Wagner-Kalendar, 1908.

Krause, Paul (Klingenthal, 1880). Saxon organist, trained at the Leipzig and Dresden Conservatories, becoming professor at the latter. Has written an organ-sonata, a suite, chorale-studies and many smaller organ-works, some of which are ultra-modern in style.

Krause, Theodor (Halle, 1833-1910, Berlin). Saxon church-musician, until 1898 in the Lutheran ministry, musically trained by Hauptmann, Grell, Mantius and Blumner. In 1880 he organized the united choirs of the Nikolai- and Marienkirchen in Berlin, took charge of the Seifert a cappella chorus and became critic for various papers. From 1895 he also taught at the Institut für Kirchenmusik. In choral instruction he used a system analogous to Tonic Sol-Fa (with movable do). Wrote about 100 choruses, etc., Die Wandernote, 1888, Deutsche Singschule, 1888 (both with later editions), and lectures Ueber Musik u. Musiker, 1900.

Kraushaar, Otto (Kassel, 1812–1866, do.). Hessian theorist, pupil of Hauptmann, whose theory of major and minor he set forth in 1852 in advance of the latter's Natur der Harmonik. Author also of a work on equal temperament (1838) and many articles in periodicals.

Krauss, Marie Gabrielle (Vienna, 1842–1906, Paris). Eminent Austrian operatic soprano, trained at the Vienna Conservatory and by Mme. Marchesi, appearing in concert at Vienna from 1858 and in opera from 1859, continuing at the Opera there till 1867, in 1867–71 at the Italiens, Paris, then as guest on various stages, and in 1875–88 at the Paris Opéra. In 1880 she was named officer of the Académie. Among the premières at which she sang were Grandval's Piccolino (1869), Petrella's Manfredo (1872) and Bianca Orsini (1874), Mermet's Jeanne d'Arc (1876), Gounod's Polyeucte (1878) and Tribut de Zamora (1881), Saint-Saëns' Henri VIII (1883) and Paladilhe's Patrie (1886). She retired in 1888. See Charnace, Les Étoiles du Chant, 1868–69. G.

Krebs, Johann Ludwig (n. Weimar, 1713–1780, Altenburg). Noted Thuringian organist, pupil of J. S. Bach (by him considered the best), from 1737 at Zwickau, from 1744 at Zeitz and from 1750 at Altenburg, where he was succeeded as court-organist by his son and grandson. Wrote about 50 organ-pieces (complete edition issued by Heinrichshofen), a clavier-concerto, trio-sonatas for flute, violin and bass, flute-sonatas, suites and preludes for clavier, clavier-exercises (1743–49), etc. G.

Krebs, Carl (Hanseberg, 1857). Würtemberger critic and historian, trained at Rostock University (Ph.D. 1895) and the Berlin Hochschule, long critic at Berlin for the Vossische Zeitung, Deutsche Rundschau, Tag und Moderne Kunst, and since 1898 professor of music-history at the Hochschule. Author of a thesis on Diruta's Transilvania (1892), a life of Dittersdorf (1900, with thematic catalogue), Die Frauen in d. Musik, 1895, Schaffen u. Nachschaffen in d. Musik, 1902, Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, 1906 (2d ed. 1913), Meister d. Taktstocks, 1920, and important articles in several magazines.

Krebs [Miedke], Karl August (Nuremberg, 1804–1880, Dresden). Bavarian pianist and conductor, pupil of J. B. Krebs (who adopted him) and Seyfried, in 1825 concertizing with much success, in 1826–27 third conductor at the Vienna Opera, from 1827 director at the Hamburg Opera and in 1850–72 at the Dresden Opera. Wrote the operas Silva, 1830, and Agnes Bernauer, 1835 (revised in 1858), church-music, notably popular songs and piano-pieces. In 1850 he married the operatic singer Aloysia Michalesi. Their daughter Mary (1851–1900) was a precocious and brilliant pianist, first appearing in 1863 and touring steadily through Europe and America (1870–72) till her marriage to Herr Brenning (about 1885). From about 1870 she was pianist to the court at Dresden. G.

Krehbiel, Henry Edward (Ann Arbor, Mich. 1854–1923, New York). Distinguished American critic and author, originally educated for the law and always connected with journalism, from 1874 on the staff of the Cincinnati Gazette and from 1880 on that of the New York Tribune, besides for a time editing the Musical Review. He was long the Nestor among American critics, exerting a wide influence through his culture, sanity and acumen. Author of Notes on the Cultivation of Choral Music, 1884 (concerning the New York Oratorio Society), Review of the New York Musical Season, 5 vols. 1885–90, Studies in the Wagnerian Drama, 1891, The Philharmonic Society of New York, 1892, How to Listen to Music, 1896, Annotated Bibliography of Fine Art, 1897 (with Sturgis), Music and Manners in the 18th Century, 1898, Chapters of Opera, 1908 (2d ed. 1911), A Book of Operas, 1909, The Piano-forte and its Music, 1911, Afro-American Folk-Songs, 1914, A Second Book of Operas, 1917, More Chapters of Opera, 1919, and an English version of Parsifal (1919), besides assisting in the preparation of The Music of the Modern World (1895–97), serving as American editor on the 2d edition of Grove's Dictionary (1904–10) and translating, revising and completing Thayer's great life of Beethoven (3 vols. 1921). He often acted as judge at competitions, notably at the Paris Exposition in 1900. From 1901 he was a member of the Légion d'Honneur. G. A.

Krehl, Stephan (Leipzig, 1864). Able Saxon composer, trained at the Leipzig and Dresden Conservatories, from 1889 teacher in the Karlruhe Conservatory and since 1902 in that at Leipzig. Has written a symphonic prelude to Hannele, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, sonatas for violin and for 'cello, many piano-pieces, including Phantastische Skizzen, Slovenische Tänze (4-hands), etc., and various songs. Author of 5 text-books in composition (1902–21).

Kreisig, Martin Hermann (n. Pirna, 1856). Since 1904 school-superintendent at Zwickau and from 1910 head of the Schumann Museum there. In 1914 he edited the 5th edition of Schumann's works.

Kreisler, Fritz (Vienna, 1875). Distinguished Austrian violinist, pupil of his father and the Vienna and Paris Conservatories (first prize though only twelve), at fourteen making a tour in the United States with Rosenthal. In 1889–99 he turned aside to study medicine and art, besides becoming during his military service an Uhlan officer. From 1899 he resumed his musical career with brilliant and even amazing success, soon becoming everywhere known in Europe and America. His recognized place among the finest players of the time was signalized in 1904 by the gift of a medal from the London Philharmonic. In 1914, when the World War began, he returned to military service and was wounded at Lemberg. Mustered out, he recovered health and soon resumed his place on the American concert-stage. In 1917-18 he naturally had to intermit public activity. Has written the comic opera The Marriage-Knot, 1919, a string-quartet (1919), many violin-pieces and arrangements and Four Weeks in the Trenches, 1915. He owns the famous del Gesù (1737) formerly used by Wilhelmj and also one of the finest Stradivaris. G. A.

Kreissle von Hellborn, Heinrich (Vienna, 1812-1869, do.). Austrian lawyer and civil official in Vienna, author of a sketch of Schubert (1861) and also a full biography (1865), both inspired by an intense regard for the master. G.

Krejčí, Josef (Milostin, 1822-1881, Prague). Noted Bohemian organist, pupil of Witásek and Proksch, from 1844 organist at the Kreuzherrenkirche in Prague, from 1848 choirmaster at the Minoritenkirche, from 1853 choirmaster at the former church, from 1858 director of the Organ School and from 1865 head of the Conservatory (where he had taught since 1849). Wrote several masses and other church-music, an oratorio, organ-sonatas and many pieces, some works for orchestra and songs. He exercised a notable influence both as church-musician and as a leader in musical education.

Krepelsetzer, Georg (n. Landshut, 1827-1871, do.). Bavarian conductor, pupil of Fr. Lachner, from 1865 theater-director at Munich, Gölitz and Königsberg. Wrote the opera Der Onkel aus der Lombardei, 1861, and a series of popular operettas (from 1863).

Kremser, Eduard (Vienna, 1838-1914, do.). Austrian choral conductor, in 1869-99 leader of the Vienna Männergesangverein (later honorary leader) and in 1878-80 conductor of the Gesellschaft Concerts. Wrote several operettas (from 1874), a singspiel (1891), 4 effective cantatas for men's voices, men's choruses with orchestra, many part-songs (especially settings of old Netherland folk-songs), some songs and many fine piano-pieces.

Krenek, Ernst (Vienna, 1900). Austrian composer, pupil of Schreker, writing 2 symphonies (the first in one movement), a concerto grosso, a nonet, 2 string-quartets, a serenade for clarinet and string-trio, sonatas for violin and for piano, etc.

Krenn, Franz (Dross, 1816-1897, n. Salzburg). Able Austrian church-musician, pupil of Seyfried, from 1844 active in Vienna churches and from 1862 director at the Michaeliskirche (the court-church) and also from 1869 professor at the Conservatory. Wrote 15 masses, 3 Requiems, much other church-music, 2 oratorios, choruses, part-songs, a symphony, quartets, an organ-method, text-books in harmony and singing, etc.

Kretschmann [Krečman], Theobald (n. Prague, 1850). Bohemian 'cellist, from 1881, after work at Salzburg and Breslau, soloist at the Vienna Opera and conductor of chamber-concerts, besides organizing his own Quartet, in 1889-1902 director at the Votivkirche and in 1907-14 conductor at the Volksoper. Has written the opera Die Brautschau, 1895, a burlesque on Salome (1906) and Tempi Passati, 2 vols. 1910-13.

Kretschmer, Edmund (Ostritz, 1830-1908, Dresden). Eminent Saxon organist and composer, pupil of Jul. Otto and Joh. Schneider, with independent study, from 1854 at the Hofkirche (R. C.) at Dresden and in 1863-1901 court-organist. In 1850-70 he directed two or three choral societies, including the Cäcilia, and in 1872-97 was instructor in the court choir-school. In 1892 he received the title of royal professor. Wrote the operas Die Folkunger, 1874, Heinrich der Löwe, 1887 (original text), and Schön Rotraud, 1887, the operetta Der Flüchling, 1881, the choral works Die Geisterschlacht, 1865 (prize at the first Sängerkongress), Pilgerfahrt und Sieg in Gesang, a choral Festgesang und Dramatisches Tongedicht, several masses (one taking the Brussels Academy prize in 1868), the orchestral Musikalische Dorfgeschichten, Festmarsch and Hochzeitsmusik (suite), etc. He also published poems (1904). Sketch by Otto Schmid, 1890. G.

Kretzschmar, August Ferdinand Hermann (Olbernhau, 1848). Eminent Saxon conductor and critic, pupil of the Dresden Kreuzschule, the Leipzig Conservatory and University (Ph.D. 1871), from 1871 continuing as teacher at the Conservatory and as conductor of choral societies in Leipzig (Ossian, Singakademie, Bach-Verein and Euterpe), in 1876-77 opera-director at Metz, from 1877 music-director at Rostock University and from 1880 town-director there, in 1887-97 music-director at Leipzig University and also in 1888-97 conductor of the Riedelverein (succeeding Riedel), besides in 1890 starting the Academical Orchestral Concerts. In 1904 he became the first full professor of music at Berlin University (retired in 1921) and also in 1907-22 director of the Institut für Kirchenmusik, and in 1909-20 director of the Hochschule. He gained the title of royal professor in 1890 and that of imperial councilor in 1908. As critic he has written for the Musikal. Wochenblatt, the Grenzboten, etc. and contributed often to various larger periodicals. In addition to his distinction in all these ways he has been known as an organist of high rank. His compositions include only some organ-pieces, sacred and secular choruses and part-songs, and some songs. Author of lectures on choral music, a study of Cornelius (1880, in Waldersee's Sammlung), a widely-known Führer durch d. Konzertsaal, 3 parts, 1887-90 (late editions of all, 1918-20), Ueber d. musikal. Teil unserer Agende, 1894, Musikalische Zeitfragen, 1903, J. S. Bachs Handschrift, 1911 (final volume of the standard edition of Bach's works), Gesammelte Aufsätze, 1911, and Gesch. d. neuen deutschen Liedes, 1912 (one vol. only), besides editing a new edition of Lobe's Komposition (4 vols. 1884-87) and vols.

viii and ix of the Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst. In celebration of his seventieth birthday (1918) Peters issued a Festschrift (65 essays). G.

Kreubé, Charles Frédéric (Lunéville, 1777-1846, n. St. Denis). French conductor and composer, pupil of Rod. Kreutzer, in 1816-28 conductor at the Opéra-Comique, Paris. Wrote 16 comic operas (1813-28, some with Kreutzer or Pradher) and many violin-pieces.

Kreutzer, Jean Nicolas Auguste (Versailles, 1778-1832, Paris), brother of Rodolphe below. French violinist, pupil of his brother, from 1798 playing in the Opéra-Comique orchestra, in 1802-23 in that of the Opéra and in 1804-30 in the court-orchestra as well, and in 1826 his brother's successor as teacher at the Conservatory. Wrote 2 concertos, 3 sonatas, 2 duets and many solos for his instrument.

Kreutzer, Konradin (Messkirch, 1780-1849, Riga). Badenese composer, pupil of Rieger, Weihrauch and Albrechtsberger, producing his first operetta at Freiburg, then lived at Constance, in 1807-11 was at Vienna, in 1811-12 toured as pianist, from 1812 was court-director at Stuttgart, in 1816-22 held the same post at Donaueschingen, from 1822 was again at Vienna, becoming in 1822-27, '29-32 and '37-40 director at the Kärthnertheater and in 1833-37 at the Josephstädtertheater, in 1840-46 was town-director at Cologne (in 1841 conducting the Lower Rhine Festival there), and then returned to Vienna once more. In 1827 and '46 he visited Paris. Some of his dramatic works, though not rising to great power, have enjoyed a wide and in certain circles a lasting popularity. Wrote over 30 operas, including especially Jery und Bätely, 1810, Das Nachtlager von Granada, 1834, and Der Verschwander, 1836 (fairly-opera), the oratorio Die Sendung Mosis, 1814, 11 masses and much other church-music, notably fine choruses for men's voices, songs, chamber-music and some piano-pieces. See Riehl, Musikal. Charakterköpfe, 1879. G.

Kreutzer, Léon Charles François (Paris, 1817-1868, Vichy), son of Auguste above. Able French critic and composer, pupil of Benoist, writing for the Revue et Gazette Musicale, the Revue Contemporaine, La Quotidienne, L'Union, etc., including series on the opera and on Meyerbeer, and author also of an Essai sur l'Art Lyrique au Théâtre, 1845 (as far as Meyerbeer), besides a text-book in modulation. Wrote 2 operas (not given), 2 symphonies, a prelude to The Tempest, a string-quartet, a trio, piano-sonatas and songs. Memoir by Pougin, 1868. G.

Kreutzer, Rodolphe (Versailles, 1766-1831, Geneva), brother of Auguste above. Distinguished French violinist and composer, pupil of his father and Anton Stamitz, appearing at thirteen with an original concerto, and in 1782 entering the court-orchestra and in 1790 becoming soloist at the Italiens. From 1795 he was professor at the new Conservatory and in 1796 made a brilliant tour in Italy, Germany and Holland. From 1801 he followed Rode as soloist at the Opéra, where from 1816 he was assistant-conductor and from 1817 chief. From 1802 he was also musician at the court. From 1790 he had been bringing out a constant stream of operas. But in 1810 he broke an arm and had to cease work as a soloist. In 1825 he retired at the Conservatory and in 1826 from all public activity. Wrote in all over 40 operas, including Lodoiska, 1791, Astyanax, 1801, and La Camp de Sobieski, 1813, 19 violin-concertos, 3 double concertos, 15 string-quartets, 15 string-trios, violin-duets, sonatas, variations, études, etc., including his famous 40 Études ou Caprices for violin solo. With Rode and Baillot he prepared the violin method adopted by the Conservatory. To him Beethoven dedicated his sonata in A (op. 47), 1803, which is known by his name, though he probably did not play it. G.

Kreuz, Emil (Elberfeld, 1867). Rhenish violinist, pupil of Japha and the Royal College, London, since 1888 favorably known in England as soloist and member of the Gompertz Quartet (till 1903). Has written a viola-concerto, a quintet for horn and strings, a piano-trio, etc. G.

Krieger, Adam (1634-1666). 17th C. G.

Krieger, Johann (1652-1735). 17th C. G.

Krieger, Johann Philipp (1649-1725). 17th C. G.

Kriens, Christiaan Pieter Willem (Amsterdam, 1881). Precocious Dutch violinist and composer, trained at the Hague Conservatory, at fourteen appearing as both violinist and pianist in Beethoven concertos and conducting his own 2d Symphony, from 1896 toured as soloist in the Low Countries and France, from 1899 taught at the Hague Conservatory, in 1906 came to America as conductor with the French Opera Company, soon settling in New York, where in 1911 he started a Quartet and in 1912 a Symphony Club (to train young players). Has written 2 symphonies, the symphonic poem Les Rois en Exile, the suite In Holland for small orchestra, a string-quartet, 2 violin-sonatas, and many other pieces, a flute-sonata, piano-pieces and songs. A.

Kroeger, Ernest Richard (St. Louis, 1862). Able American pianist, organist and composer, trained by various teachers in St. Louis, including C. Kunkel, Spiering and L. Mayer, from 1883 organist at different churches in St. Louis, teacher at the Forest Park Seminary and more and more in favor as recitalist, also from 1893 leader of choral societies, from 1887 music-director at Forest Park University and since 1904 head of his own music-school. He has given notable series of piano-recitals in St. Louis and elsewhere (as at Cornell Univ. and the Univ. of California) and in 1915 was one of the organists at the Panama-Pacific Exposition. He has also been prominent in the Missouri and the National Teachers' Associations. In 1904 he became a member of the French Académie and in 1915 of the Nat. Institute of Arts and Letters. Has written the overtures Endymion, Thanatopsis, Hiawatha, Sardanapalus, Atala and Pittoresque, the orchestral suite Lalla Rookh, an orchestral scherzo and 2 marches, a piano-quintet (1890), a string-quartet (1914), a piano-quartet (1889), a piano-trio (1891), a violin-sonata (1908), pieces for violin and for 'cello, a piano-sonata, a piano-suite, concert-études, variations and almost 200 other piano-pieces, choruses and nearly 100 songs. A.

Krogulski, Joseph (Tarnów, 1815-1842, Warsaw). Galician church-musician, pupil of Elsner, writing a Passion, 10 masses, a Requiem, cantatas and other sacred music, besides a string-quartet, etc.

Krohn, Ilmari Henrik Reinhold (Helsingfors, 1867). Finnish composer and specialist in folk-music, pupil of Faltin, the Leipzig Conservatory and Bauszner, besides study at Helsingfors University (Ph.D. 1899), from 1900 lecturer at the University on musical science, also on history at the Conservatory in 1900-01, '05-07 and from '14, and at the Orchestral School in 1900-01 and '04-14, in 1894-1905 organist at Tammerfors and since 1914 at Helsingfors, in 1906 founder of the periodical Säveletär, in 1910 of the Finnish section of the I. M. G. and in 1916 of the Finnish Society of Musical Science. Since 1886 he has traveled through Finland and Sweden in pursuit of folk-song material and has lectured widely on the subject, including papers at many international musical congresses since 1891. In 1906 he invented an 'acoustic harmonium' for scientific demonstration, which he described in a pamphlet. In 1903 and '15 he received state prizes for composition. Author of the comprehensive collection of Finnish melodies Suomen Kansan, from 1893 (about 3700 examples), a series of essays on great composers (1899), the section on Finnish runic melodies in the collection Orna Maa (1908), a work on pure intonation (1911), a treatise on composition (from 1914), the articles on music in the encyclopedia Tietosanakirja, and numerous contributions to periodicals in various countries, especially to the I. M. G. Sammelbde. Has written the opera Tuhotulva (text by his second wife, the writer Hilja Hahti), the oratorio Ikiaartehtet, 1914, a cantata for St. John's Day (1908), various Psalms (some with kantele), motets, secular choruses, a suite for strings, a piano-sonata, sacred and secular songs, etc.

Kroll, Franz (Bromberg, 1820-1877, Berlin). Prussian piano-teacher, pupil of Liszt, from 1849 settled in Berlin. Edited the Wohltemperiertes Clavier for the standard Bach edition (1864) and other important works for Peters. G.

Krolop, Franz (Troja, 1839-1897, Berlin). Bohemian operatic bass, pupil of Rich. Levy, from 1863 in favor at Troppau, Linz, Bremen and Leipzig, and from 1872 at the Berlin Opera.

Krommer, Franz (Kamenitz, 1760-1831, Vienna). Gifted Moravian violinist and fertile composer, pupil of his uncle (choirmaster at Turas, Hungary), in 1776-84 organist at Turas, then violinist to Count Styrum at Simontornya and later to Prince Grassalkovics at Vienna, where in 1818 he followed Koželuch as court-director. Wrote 5 symphonies, other orchestral music, 5 violin-concertos, 18 string-quintets, 69 string-quartets, much other effective chamber-music, a mass, etc. For a time his music was popular in Vienna. See Riehl, Musikal. Charakterköpfe, 1879. G.

Kromolički, Josef (Posen, 1882). Polish-Prussian church-musician, educated at the Ratisbon Music School, the Stern Conservatory, Berlin, the Institut für Kirchenmusik and Berlin University (Ph.D. 1909), from 1905 choirmaster at the Michaeliskirche in Berlin and since 1910 head of his own church-music school. Has written masses and other church-music and edited works of Franck, J. E. Bach and Görner for the Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst (from 1911).

Kronke, Emil (Danzig, 1865). Prussian pianist and composer, trained at the Leipzig and Dresden Conservatories, settling in Dresden as recitalist and teacher. He has specialized in Liszt's works. Has written Symphonische Variationen, a Karnevalsuite, an orchestral ballade, a piano-concerto, horn-quartets, suites for violin, for 'cello and for flute, concert-variations for piano, many instructive piano-pieces, etc., and edited an edition of Chopin.

Kronold, Hans (Cracow, 1872). Gifted Polish 'cellist, pupil of Kiesling, Vollrath, Rasch and Hekking, coming to America in 1886, at first touring with Emma Juch, Patti and other artists, then in the orchestras of the Metropolitan Opera House and the New York Symphony Society, and since 1898 mainly as concertist and teacher. Has written 'cello- and piano-pieces and songs. A.

Kroyer, Theodor (Munich, 1873). Bavarian musicologist trained at the Munich Conservatory and University (Ph.D. 1897), from 1897 critic for the Munich Allgem. Zeitung, in 1900-02 teacher of history at Kaim's Institute, and since 1902 lecturer or professor of musical science at the University. Author of articles in various magazines and in Herder's Konversationslexikon, editor of works by Senfl and Aichinger for the Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Bayern (from 1903) and composer of 2 symphonies, string-quartets and lesser works. Among his later writings are a study of Rheinberger (1916, in Weinmann's Kirchenmusik), A Cappella und Concerto, 1918 (in the Kretzschmar Festschrift), and Die Musica Speculativa d. Erasmus Heritius, 1918 (in the Sandberger Festschrift).

Krückl, Franz (Edlspitz, 1841-1899, Strasburg). Moravian operatic baritone, pupil of Dessoff, from 1868 appearing at Brünn, Kassel, Augsburg, Hamburg, Cologne and in 1876-84 again at Hamburg, then becoming teacher at the Hoch Conservatory at Frankfurt, and from 1892 director of the Strasburg Opera. Author of two works on opera-management and criticism.

Krug, Arnold (Hamburg, 1849-1904, do.). North German composer, pupil of his father, Gurlitt, the Leipzig Conservatory (Mozart Scholar), Kiel and Ed. Frank, in 1872-77 teacher at the Stern Conservatory, Berlin, then (as Meyerbeer Scholar) in France and Italy, after 1878 at Hamburg, where he organized a choral society and from 1885 taught at the Conservatory, besides leading the Altona Singakademie. Wrote a symphony, the suite Aus der Wanderzeit, a prelude for Othello, Romanische Tänze for orchestra, Italienische Reiseskizzen, Liebesnovelle and a Serenade for strings (with solo violin or flute), a violin-concerto, a string-sextet, a string-quartet, a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, romances for violin and for 'cello, various piano-pieces, the choral works La Régine Avrillouse, Nomadenzug, Sigurd, Altrömisches Frühlingslied, An der Morgensonne, Fingal, Herr Olaf, Chor der wilden Jagd, Aus allen Zonen, Hymne an Germania, Der Künste Lobgesang, etc.

Krug, Friedrich (Kassel, 1812-1892, Karlsruhe). Hessian baritone, singing on various stages till 1849 and then for a time court-director at Karlsruhe. Wrote the operas Die Marquise, 1843, Meister Martin, 1845, and Der Nachtwächter, 1846.

Krug, Wenzel Joseph (Waldsee, 1858-1915, Magdeburg). Able Swabian conductor and composer, pupil of the Stuttgart Conservatory, from 1882 leader of a Stuttgart choral society, from 1889 chorusmaster at the Hamburg Opera, from 1892 theater-director at Brünn, Nuremberg, Augsburg and Nuremberg again (Privatkapelle), and from 1901 conductor of the Magdeburg Symphonie und Gesellschaft concerts and the Lehrgesangsverein. He held the title of royal professor from 1913. Wrote the operas Der Procurador von San Juan, 1893, Astorre, 1896, and Der Rotmantel, 1898, the dramatic Christmas-tale Heinzelmännchen, 1889, a ballet, the secular oratorio König Rother, the choral works Harald, Dornröschen, Hochzeitslied, Der Geiger zu Gmund, Seebilder, 1894, Das begrabene Lied and Ikarus, a symphony, the symphonic poem Des Meeres und der Liebe Wellen, a concert-overture, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, a violin-suite, part-songs, songs, etc. He was often called Krug-Waldsee.

Krüger, Eduard (Lüneburg, 1807-1885, Göttingen). Learned North German critic and theorist, from 1861 professor of music at Göttingen University. For several years he edited the Neue Zeitung at Hanover and after going to Göttingen contributed able articles to Berlin musical journals. In 1876 he was co-founder (with Herold and Schöberlein) of the church-music periodical Siona. Author of a thesis on Greek music in Pindar's time (1830), Grundriss d. Metrik, 1838, Beiträge für Leben u. Wissenschaft d. Tonkunst, 1847, and System d. Tonkunst, 1866.

Krüger, Felix E. (Posen, 1874). Able Prussian music-psychologist, trained at Strasburg, Berlin and Munich Universities (Ph.D. 1897), from 1899 connected with the Psychological Institutes in Leipzig and Kiel, from 1903 lecturer at Leipzig University, in 1906-08 professor at Buenos Aires, from 1910 professor at Halle University (in 1912-13 exchange-professor at Columbia University, New York), and since 1918 Wundt's successor as head of the Leipzig Psychological Institute. Author of Beobachtungen an Zweiklängen, 1900, Zur Theorie d. Kombinationstöne, 1901 (both in Philos. Studien). Ueber d. Bewusstsein d. Konsonanz, 1903, Differenztöne u. Konsonanz (Archiv d. ges. Psychologie), Beziehungen d. experimentellen Phonetik zur Psychologie, 1907, Die Theorie d. Konsonanz, 1908-10 (in Wundt's Psycholog. Studien), etc.

Kruis, M. H. van't (Oudewater, 1861). Dutch organist, pupil of his father and Nicolai, from 1881 organist at Winterswyk and since 1884 teacher at the Rotterdam Music School. In 1886 he founded the musical journal Het Orgel. Has written the opera De Bloem van Island, 3 symphonies, 8 overtures, many organ- and piano-pieces, choruses and a summary of music-history (1892).

Krumpholtz, Johann Baptist (n. Prague, ?1745-1790, Paris), son of a bandmaster in the French army. Eminent Bohemian harpist, pupil of his father and Haydn, appearing in Vienna in 1772 and till 1776 a member of Prince Esterházy's orchestra, then toured extensively in Germany, married a young Fr. Stekler at Metz, who had been his pupil, and with her gave brilliant concerts in Paris, especially after he invented a harp with a damper-mechanism controlled by two pedals. He also suggested to Érard the pedal-system now used, as well as a project for a 'pianoforte contrebasse'. His wife's elopement to England led him to drown himself. Wrote 6 harp-concertos, a symphony for harp, violins, flute, horns and bass, a quartet for harp and strings, a duet for two harps, over 50 sonatas, variations, etc. Many of these are artistically valuable. G.

Krumpholtz, Wenzel (?1750-1817, Vienna), brother of the above. A violinist, from 1796 in the orchestra of the Vienna Opera, who was intimate with Beethoven. The latter wrote his Gesang der Mönche in memory of him, and Czerny dedicated his op. 1 to him. Wrote violin-solos under the titles Abendunterhaltung and Eine Viertelstunde für eine Violine. G.

Kruse, Georg Richard (Greiffenberg, 1856). Silesian conductor and critic, educated at Bern University, with musical study at Leipzig, from about 1808 theater-director in various places in Germany and at Milwaukee, Wis., where he was also critic for the Herald, in 1894-96 in charge of a troupe giving Humperdinck's Hänsel und Gretel, then theater-director at Bern, St. Gall and Ulm, and since 1900 active in Berlin, in 1900-09 as editor for the Dramatic Association, as editor of musical and dramatic works for the Reclam Library, and especially (from 1908) as founder and director of the Lessing Museum and associated institutions. He is also a contributor to various periodicals and a lecturer on music-history. Author of a life of Lortzing (1899), a collection of Lortzing's letters (1901, enlarged 1913), a new edition of Lortzing's works, biographies of Goetz and Nicolai (1911), the libretto for Weigmann's Der Klarinettenmacher (1913), etc. He has made many adaptations, as of the music of Schubert's Rosamunde to Shakespeare's As You Like It. He has brought to light several forgotten works of Nicolai (see Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung, 1908, and I. M. G. Sammelbde. xii), besides editing his Gesammelte Aufsätze (1913).

Kruse, Johann Secundus (Melbourne, 1859). German-Australian violinist, pupil of Joachim, from 1882 concertmaster of the Berlin Philharmonic and head of his own Quartet, from 1885 (after a visit to Australia) teacher at the Hochschule, from 1892 concertmaster of the Bremen Philharmonic, in 1892-97 also second violin in the Joachim Quartet (as well as leading one of his own), and in 1897 removed to London, where he again established a Quartet, took charge of two popular concert-series and from time to time has arranged more pretentious symphony-series, including Beethoven Festivals in 1903-04. G.

Krygell, Johan Adam (Naestved, 1835). Danish organist and composer, originally a painter, then pupil of the Copenhagen Conservatory, with further study in Germany on the Ancker scholarship, since 1880 organist at St. Matthew's in Copenhagen, gaining the title of royal professor in 1893. He is noted as an improvisator. Has written the opera Saul, an oratorio, a mass, many and fine organ-works (including a set of preludes and fugues in all keys, a prelude, fugato and postlude on G-A-D-E, a toccata, a Sonata Appassionata, preludes and postludes, etc.), symphonies, overtures, a septet, 24 string-quartets, etc.

Krylow, Paul Dmitrievitch (Tver, 1886). Russian composer, pupil of the Philharmonic Conservatory in Moscow, writing an opera, a symphony, the symphonic poem Spring, a string-quartet, 3 piano-sonatas and many a cappella choruses. He is professor in the Moscow Conservatory.

Kryzhanovsky, Ignacy [Johann] (Kiev, 1867). Russian physician (since 1909 professor at the Medical Institute and the Military Academy at Petrograd) and also composer, pupil of Sevéik and Rimsky-Korsakov. Has written a violin-concerto, a violin-sonata, a 'cello-suite, violin- and piano-pieces, and songs, besides articles in musical periodicals.

Kubelik, Johann [Jan] (n. Prague, 1880). Brilliant Bohemian violinist, pupil of his father and Sevéik, gaining experience in playing and conducting while but a boy of eight and making his formal début at Prague and Vienna in 1898, followed by tours in Europe and America (from 1901) that gave him international fame. In 1903 he married the Countess Szell and became a Hungarian citizen. He has tended to emphasize extreme dexterity and also popular sentimental appeal, though a competent interpreter of the most serious works. G.

Kucharcz, Johann Baptist (Chotecz, 1751-1829, Prague). Bohemian organist and conductor, trained at Jesuit schools and by Seegert, from about 1775 organist at the Heinrichskirche in Prague and from 1790 at the Strahow Monastery, besides in 1791-1800 being conductor at the Opera. Wrote 3 organ-concertos and much other organ-music, piano-sonatas, 3 cantatas and some stage-pieces. He was expert on the piano, the mandolin and the harmonica.

Kücken, Friedrich Wilhelm (n. Lüneburg, 1810-1882, Schwerin). Hanoverian vocal composer, pupil of the organist Lührss, Birnbach, Sechter, Halévy and Bordogni, in 1851-61 court-director at Stuttgart (till 1856 with Lindpaintner) and then living at Schwerin. He was proficient on many instruments and essayed ambitious composition, but is best known by his many popular songs and part-songs in folk-like style. Wrote also the operas Die Flucht nach der Schweiz, 1839, and Der Prätendent, 1847, sonatas for violin and for 'cello, etc. In 1863 he was on a jury with Abt and Berlioz at a competition at Strasburg, evoking great enthusiasm. G.

Kuczinski, Paul (Berlin, 1846-1897, do.). Prussian banker and vocal composer, musically trained by Von Bülow and Kiel and intimate with Jensen. Wrote the choral works Die Bergpredigt, Ariadne, Psalm 130, Des Rodensteiners Ritt zum Mond, Fahrt zum Licht, Schicksal, Gesang des Turmwächters (from the opera Margrita), Gesang an der Ruhe, Totenklage, Geschenke der Genien, Neujahrs-gesang, etc., mostly to his own poems, and various piano-pieces. Author of Aus Briefen Jensens, 1879, and Erlebnisse u. Gedanken, 1898 (poems for musical setting), which is inspired by admiration for Wagner.

Kudelski, Karl Matthias (Berlin, 1805-1877, Baden-Baden). Prussian violinist, pupil of Lafont, Ritz and Urban, from about 1825 in a Berlin theater-orchestra, from 1830 playing in quartet at Dorpat, from 1839 musician to a Russian nobleman and in 1841-51 concertmaster or conductor at the Petrograd Opera, retiring on pension. Wrote concertos for violin and for 'cello, piano-trios, violin- and 'cello-sonatas, etc.

Kufferath, Ferdinand Hubert (Mülheim-an-der-Ruhr, 1818-1896, Brussels), the last of eight brothers, all musicians (see Johann and Louis below). Rhenish pianist and violinist, pupil of his brothers, Hartmann, Mendelssohn and David, from 1841 leader of the Cologne Männergesangverein (with some tours as virtuoso) and after 1844 at Brussels, where for a time he led a choral society, with Léonard and Servais organized chamber-concerts, taught in the royal family and from 1871 was professor at the Conservatory. Wrote a symphony, a piano-concerto, a piano-quartet, a trio, many piano-pieces and songs, besides a Praktische Chorschule, 1896. G.

Kufferath, Johann Hermann (Mülheim, 1797-1864, Wiesbaden), brother of Hubert and Louis. Rhenish violinist, pupil of Spohr and Hauptmann, from 1823 town-musician at Bielefeld and from 1830 in a similar post at Utrecht, where he taught in the Music School and directed choral societies, retiring to Wiesbaden in 1862. Wrote several cantatas, motets, overtures and a singing-method for schools (Maatschappij prize).

Kufferath, Louis (Mülheim, 1811–1882, n. Brussels), brother of Hubert and Johann. Rhenish pianist and teacher, pupil of his brother Johann and Frdr. Schneider, from 1836 director of the Leeuwarden Music School and leader of three musical societies, and after 1850 teaching in Ghent and Brussels. Wrote the cantata Artevelde, a mass with orchestra, many piano-works, 250 canons, part-songs and songs.

Kufferath, Maurice (Brussels, 1852–1919, do.), son of Hubert above. Eminent Belgian journalist, author and opera-manager, pupil of his father and F. Servais (on the 'cello), educated in law and art-history at Brussels and Leipzig Universities, from 1875 on the staff of the Indépendance Belge, later editor and proprietor of the Guide Musicale and correspondent of the Frankfurter Zeitung, and from 1900 director of the Théâtre de la Monnaie at Brussels (jointly with Guillaume Guidé). Besides extensive writing on non-musical subjects, author of Berlioz und Schumann, 1879, a report on instruments at the Brussels Exposition of 1880, a life of Vieuxtemps (1883), Le Théâtre de Wagner, 6 vols. 1891–98 (and later editions), Musiciens et Philosophes, 1897, L'Art de Diriger l'Orchestre, 2d ed. 1901, La Salome de Rich. Strauss, 1908, Fidelio de Beethoven, 1912, etc., besides many translations into French of books by various authors and the libretti of several operas (with careful historical notes). Under his management many operas of the first order were introduced in Brussels. He was one of the promoters of the Ysaÿe concerts, a member of important artistic associations and received notable decorations. G.

Küffner, Joseph (Würzburg, 1776–1856, do.). Facile Bavarian composer of much music for military band or orchestra, for chamber-ensemble and for individual instruments, besides 2 operas. He was long in the court-band at Würzburg (mostly as violinist). Author of an oboe-method (reprinted in 1894).

Kügele, Richard (Loslau, 1850). Silesian vocal composer, pupil of the Berlin Institut für Kirchenmusik, from about 1870 teacher at schools in Silesian towns and latterly living at Görlitz. Has written about 300 popular choruses and songs, the sacred play Maria Virgo and several text-books in harmony, singing, piano-playing, etc.

Kugelmann, Hans (?–1542). 16th C. G.

Kuhač, Franz Xaver (Escheck, 1834–1911, Agram). Croatian student of Slavic music, pupil of the Pest and Leipzig Conservatories and of Liszt and Hanslick. Author of a collection of Slavic folk-songs (4 vols), various monographs on Slavic notation, tonal system and instruments and an essay on the Turkish element in Croatian, Serbian and Bulgarian music (1900, Mittheilungen aus Bosnien, u. s. w.). In 1880 he argued for the Croatian derivation of Haydn, as also for that of Tartini.

Kuhe, Wilhelm (Prague, 1823–1912, London). Bohemian pianist, pupil of Tomaschek, Proksch and Thalberg, emigrating to England in 1845, where he gained popularity as player and teacher at London and Brighton, organized annual festivals in 1870–82 and in 1886–1904 taught at the Royal Academy. Wrote graceful salon-music and My Musical Recollections, 1897. G.

Kuhlau, Friedrich (Uelzen, 1786–1832, n. Copenhagen). Noted Hanoverian composer, pupil of Schwenke, in 1810 escaping from army-conscription by going to Copenhagen, where from 1813 he became flutist in the court-orchestra, soon started producing popular operas and from 1818 was court-composer, receiving the title of professor in 1828. In 1825 he visited Vienna and had an amusing experience with Beethoven. Wrote the operas Røverborgen, 1814, Trylleharpen, 1816, Elisa, 1819, Lulu, 1824, and Hugo og Adelheid, 1827, music for Boye's Shakespeare (1826) and Heiberg's Elverhøi (1828), 2 piano-concertos, 3 piano-quartets, 3 quintets for flute and strings, a flute-quartet, flute-trios and duets, various sonatas for flute, for violin and for piano, etc., with many part-songs and songs. Memoir by Thrane, 1886 (also see his Danske Komponister, 1875). G.

Kühmstedt, Friedrich (n. Weimar, 1809–1858, Eisenach). Able Thuringian teacher and composer, pupil of Rinck and aspiring to be an organist, but checked by partial paralysis of his right hand, from 1831 teaching at Darmstadt and after 1836 at the seminary at Eisenach, ultimately gaining the title of professor. Wrote excellent works for organ, including a Gradus ad Parnassum (designed to prepare for Bach-study), Kunst des Vorspiels, a Fantasia Eroica, fugues, preludes and postludes, a text-book in harmony (1838), and various piano-works, besides an opera, 2 oratorios, a mass, motets, choral ballads, symphonies and overtures. G.

Kuhnau, Johann (1660–1722). 17th C. G.

Kühner, Vassili Vassilievitch (Stuttgart, 1840–1911, Vilna). Russian-Würtemberger composer, trained at the Stuttgart Conservatory and by Massart and Henselt, in 1870–78 director of the Tiflis Music School and then at Petrograd, where in 1892 he started his own school. Wrote the opera Tarass Bulba, 1880, 2 symphonies, a string-quintet, 2 string-quartets, suites for 'cello and for piano, etc.

Kühns, Emil (Prague, 1866). Bohemian violinist, trained at the Prague and Paris Conservatories, from about 1885 on tour, then concertmaster in the Sondershausen court-band, from 1891 in like work at Linz, for a time co-director of the Freudenberg Conservatory at Wiesbaden and later head of the Königsberg Conservatory. Has written for violin, piano and chorus.

Kuiler, Kor (Alblasserdam, 1877). Dutch conductor, pupil of R. F. Bokelman and the Amsterdam Conservatory, from about 1900 director of the Groningen Music School and conductor of several societies, and since 1910 director of the Harmonie at Arnhem. Has written a violin-sonata, large choral works and songs.

Kulenkampf, Gustav (Bremen, 1849-1921, Berlin). North German pianist and composer, trained by Reinthaler, Barth and Bargiel, from 1882 conductor of his own women's chorus in Berlin, often appearing as pianist and for a time director of the Schwantzer Conservatory. Wrote the operas Der Page, 1890, Der Mohrenfürst, 1892, Die Braut von Cypern, 1897, König Drosselbart, 1899, and Annemarie, 1903, etc.

Kulke, Eduard. Author of Ueber d. Umbildung d. Melodie, 1884, Wagners Anhänger u. Gegner, 1884, Wagner u. Nietzsche, 1890, and Kritik d. Philosophie d. Schönen, 1906.

Kullak, Adolf (Meseritz, 1823-1862, Berlin), brother of Theodor below. Prussian theorist and critic, educated in philosophy at Berlin University (Ph.D.), musically a pupil of Agthe and Marx, then teaching in the Kullak Academy. Author of Das Musikalisch-Schöne, 1858, and Asthetik d. Klavierspiels, 1861 (4th ed. by Niemann, 1906, 5th ed. 1916), and articles in periodicals. G.

Kullak, Franz (Berlin, 1844-1913, do.), son of the following. Prussian teacher, pupil of his father, Wieprecht and Liszt, from 1867 teaching in the Kullak Academy, succeeding his father as director in 1882 and suddenly discontinuing it in 1890. He held the title of royal professor from 1883. Wrote the opera Ines de Castro, 1877, an overture, much instructive piano-music and songs, besides an essay on Der Vortrag in d. Musik, 1898.

Kullak, Theodor (Krotoschin, 1818-1882, Berlin). Eminent Prussian pianist and teacher, pupil (at first as protégé of Prince Radziwill) of Agthe, Dehn, Czerny, Sechter and Nicolai, from 1843 touring in Austria and then coming to Berlin, where in 1846 he became teacher in the royal family, in 1850 (with Stern and Marx) founded the Berlin Conservatory (later called Stern), whence he withdrew in 1855 to start his own Neue Akademie, which till 1890 had notable success. Wrote the famous pedagogical works Schule d. Oktavenspiels (with études added later), Materialien für d. Elementarunterricht and the practical part of Moscheles and Fétis' method, with a great variety of piano-pieces and paraphrases, often either graceful or brilliant, including a concerto, a trio, duets with violin, etc. He taught a host of remarkable pupils. See sketch of the Kullak Academy by Reinsdorf, 1870, and memoir by Bischoff, 1883. G.

Kummer, Friedrich August (Meiningen, 1797-1879, Dresden). Eminent Saxon 'cellist, pupil of Dotzauer, from 1814 oboist and from 1817 'cellist in the Dresden court-orchestra, retiring in 1864. He made some tours, mostly in Germany and Italy, and was an able teacher. Wrote concertos, a concertino, variations, fantasias, etc., for his instrument, a 'cello-method, pieces for oboe, clarinet, horn and trumpet, and about 200 entr'actes for the Dresden Opera. G.

Kummer, Kaspar (Erlau, 1795-1870, Coburg). Able Saxon flutist, from 1813 in the Coburg court-band and ultimately court-director. Wrote much flute-music, including concertos, quintets and quartets with strings, trios, duets, etc., and a method.

Kümmerle, Salomon (n. Stuttgart, 1838-1896, Samaden). Württemberger church-musician, from 1853 teaching at Tempelhof, Nice, Ludwigsburg and in 1874-90 in the schools of Samaden (Switzerland). Author of various collections of sacred choral music and an Encyclopädie d. evangel. Kirchenmusik, 4 vols. 1888-95, with a new edition of André's Handlexikon (1875).

Kunits, Luigi von (Vienna, 1870). Austrian violinist, trained at Vienna University and Conservatory, in 1893 coming to America with the Austrian Orchestra (Chicago Exposition) and continuing in Chicago as teacher and leader of a Quartet, in 1896-1910 concertmaster of the Pittsburgh Orchestra, with many appearances as soloist and with quartet, besides much teaching, in 1910-12 in Vienna, and since 1912 at Toronto as professor at the Canadian Academy, leader of its quartet and in 1915 founder of the Canadian Journal of Music. Has written 2 violin-concertos, a string-quartet, violin-pieces and études, choruses and songs, besides an appreciation of Beethoven (1913). A.

Kunkel, Franz Joseph (n. Darmstadt, 1808-1880, Frankfurt). Hessian theorist, in 1828-54 rector and music-master at the Bensheim Seminary. Wrote several books on harmony (1844-77), including an exposition of Weitzmann's system.

Künnecke, Eduard (Emmerich, 1885). Rhenish composer, pupil of the Berlin Hochschule. Has written the operas Robins Ende, 1909, and Cœur As, 1913, the festspiel Die Circe, 1912, and the singspiel Dorf ohne Glock, 1919, 5 operettas (1920-21), besides an orchestral suite and songs.

Kunsemüller, Ernst (Rehme, 1885-1918, Düsseldorf). Westphalian conductor, educated at Berlin and Bonn Universities (Ph.D. 1909), with musical training at the Cologne Conservatory, from 1910 leader of an a cappella chorus at Neuss, from 1912 conductor of two choruses at Kiel and from 1914 music-director at Kiel University, following Stange. Wrote 2 piano-sonatas and other pieces, a serenade for small orchestra, choruses and songs.

Kuntze, Karl (Treves, 1817-1883, Delitzsch). Rhenish organist and singing-teacher, trained at the Institut für Kirchenmusik, Berlin, from about 1840 organist at Pritzwalk and Aschersleben and from 1873 teacher in the Delitzsch Seminary. Wrote many taking comic men's choruses and part-songs, an operetta (1875), organ- and choir-pieces, and edited the 3d edition of Seidel's Die Orgel u. ihr Bau (1875).

Kunwald, Ernst (Vienna, 1868). Eminent Austrian conductor, a graduate in law at Vienna University, studying also with Leschetizky, Epstein and Grädener and at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1895 theater-conductor in succession at Rostock, Sondershausen, Essen, Halle, Madrid, Frankfurt, Berlin (Kroll's), and Nuremberg, from 1907 conductor of the Berlin Philharmonic, and in 1912-17 of the Cincinnati Orchestra, withdrawing for political reasons. His first visit to America was in 1906 as guest-conductor of the New York Philharmonic. Since 1920 he has conducted the Symphony Concerts in Königsberg, becoming general director in 1922, and in 1919 took charge of the periodical Der Merker. A.

Kunz, Konrad Max (Schwandorf, 1812-1875, Munich). Bavarian composer of popular men's part-songs and useful piano-canons. He helped found the Munich Liedertafel, becoming conductor, and from 1845 was chorusmaster at the Opera.

Kunzen, Adolph Karl (Wittenberg, 1720-1781, Lübeck), son of Johann below. Saxon composer, pupil of his father and Lustig, precociously developed as a harpsichordist (appearing in Holland and England at eight), from 1750 court-director at Schwerin and in 1757-71 his father's successor as organist at Lübeck. Wrote many church-oratorios, many concerted serenatas, concertos and sonatas for violin and for clavier, 3 sets of songs (1748-56), etc. G.

Kunzen, Friedrich Ludwig Aemilius (Lübeck, 1761-1817, Copenhagen), son of the above. North German composer, educated at Kiel University, from 1787 teacher at Copenhagen, in 1791-92 associated with Reichardt in Berlin in editing the latter's Wochenblatt and Monatschrift, then for short periods conductor at Frankfurt and Prague, and from 1795 court-director at Copenhagen, succeeding Schulz. Wrote 13 Danish and German operas, including Holger Danske, 1789, Das Fest des Winzer, 1795, other stage-music, oratorios, cantatas, odes and songs of historic value, overtures, other orchestral music, sonatas, etc. G.

Kunzen, Johann Paul (n. Leipzig, 1696-1757, Lübeck). Saxon composer, early active as singer and organist, in 1718 director at Zerbst, in 1719 at Wittenberg as concert-director, then at Dresden, in 1723-32 opera-composer at Hamburg (with some concert-tours), and from 1732 organist of the Marienkirche in Lübeck. Wrote several operas, an oratorio, cantatas, a Passion, overtures, etc. He gave series of concerts somewhat like Buxtehude's Abendmusiken. G.

Kupfer-Berger, Ludmilla (Vienna, 1850-1905, do.). Austrian operatic soprano, trained at the Vienna Conservatory, making her début in 1868 and soon engaged at the Berlin Opera (marrying the merchant Ernst Kupfer), from 1875 at the Vienna Opera in alternation with Materna, from 1885 touring in Italy, Spain and South America and after 1898 teaching in Vienna.

Kurpinski, Karl Kasimir (n. Fraustadt, 1785-1857, Warsaw). Polish-Prussian conductor and composer, from 1810 Elsner's assistant at the Warsaw Opera and in 1825-42 his successor as conductor. Wrote about 25 operas (from 1811), including Jadwiga, 1814 (revived in 1907), Kalmora, 1820, etc., a symphony, 4 overtures, cantatas, masses, other church-music, and 2 harmony text-books (1819-20).

Kurt, Melanie (Vienna, 1880). Eminent Austrian operatic soprano, trained at the Vienna Conservatory, and by Leschetizky and Fannie Mütter, appearing in 1897-1900 as concert-pianist, but from 1902 on the stage at Lübeck and Leipzig. After further study with the Lehmann sisters, from 1905 she was at the Brunswick Opera and in 1908-12 at the Berlin Opera, becoming a noted Wagnerian interpreter and from 1912 was engaged at the new opera-house at Charlottenburg, but with many appearances elsewhere. In 1915-17 she made a striking success at the Metropolitan in New York. Since 1910 she has been the wife of Prof. Max Deri of Berlin. A.

Kurth, Ernst (Vienna, 1886). Austrian theorist, trained at Vienna University (Ph.D. 1908), since 1912 lecturer at Bern University and leader of the Collegium Musicum. Author of Der Stil d. Opera Seria von Gluck bis zum Orfeo, 1909 (Adler's Studien), on Franco's Cantus Mensurabilis (1908, Kirchenmusikal. Jahrbuch), Die Voraussetzungen d. theoret. Harmonik, 1913, Grundlagen d. linearen Kontrapunkts, 1917, and Romantische Harmonik u. ihre Krise in Wagners Tristan, 1920.

Kurth, Martin Alexander Otto (Triebe, 1846). Prussian composer, pupil of Haupt, Löschhorn and Jul. Schneider, since 1871 music-master at the Teachers' Seminary at Lüneburg, gaining the title of royal director in 1885. Has written the operas Königin Bertha, 1892, Das Glück von Hohenstein and Wittekind, an oratorio, an Advent-cantata, 3 symphonies, other orchestral pieces, a piano-quartet, trios, 2 violin-sonatas, choral settings of old Prussian war-songs, etc.

Kusser (Cousser), Johann Siegmund (1660-1727). 17th C. G (Cousser).

Kussewitzky, Sergei Alexandrovitch (Vishni Volochok, 1874). Eminent Russian double-bassist and conductor, trained at the Philharmonic Music School, Moscow, from 1900 professor there and from 1904 in the court-orchestra at Petrograd. In 1907 he organized a large orchestra of his own, giving concerts in Petrograd and Moscow, in 1909-14 also (by means of a special steamer) up and down the Volga. In 1916-17 he visited America and since 1921 has lived in Paris. He followed Monteux in 1924 as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Küster, Hermann (Templin, 1817-1878, Herford). Prussian organist, trained at the Institut für Kirchenmusik and the Akademie in Berlin, in 1845-52 director at Saarbrücken and from 1857 cathedral-organist at Berlin, following Grell. About 1855 he started the Berlin Tonkünstlerverein. From 1874 he held the title of royal professor. Author of Ueber Händels Israel in Aegypten, 1854, notable Vorträge über Bildung u. Begründung eines musikal. Urteils, 4 vols. 1870-77, Ueber d. Formen in d. Musik, 1872, text-books in singing and articles in periodicals, besides 7 oratorios, orchestral pieces, church-music, etc.

Kutscherra, Elise (Prague, 1874). Bohemian operatic soprano, pupil of Mmes. Viardot-Garcia and Padilla, from 1892 appearing in Berlin and later at the Monnaie in Brussels, with tours in the United States in 1895 and 1915 and several engagements at Paris.

Kutzschbach, Hermann Ludwig (Meissen, 1875). Saxon conductor, trained at the Dresden Conservatory, from 1895 chorumaster or assistant-conductor at the Dresden Opera, but in 1906-09 court-director at Mannheim. In 1914 he became chief conductor at Dresden in conjunction with Reiner.

Kuula, Toivo (Vasa, 1883-1918, Viborg). Able Finnish composer, pupil of the Helsingfors Conservatory and of Bossi, Sitt and Labey, from 1910 conductor of the orchestra at Uleåborg, in 1913-14 assistant in the Helsingfors Philharmonic and then at Wupuri. Has written a symphonic poem, 2 orchestral suites, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, 3 cantatas, 2 Legends for voice and orchestra, a cappella choruses, songs and piano-pieces.

Kuyper, Elisabeth (b. 1877). Gifted Dutch composer, pupil of the Berlin Hochschule and from 1908 teacher there. In 1908 she founded a women's orchestra and also a singing-society which she conducted with skill. Has written an orchestral serenade, a violin-concerto, a violin-sonata, a ballade for 'cello, etc.

Küzdö, Victor (Pest, 1869). Hungarian violinist, graduated from the Pest Conservatory at thirteen and immediately beginning extensive tours throughout Europe and America (from 1884). After further study with Lotto and Auer, since 1887 concertist and teacher in America. Has written various violin-works.

Kuznietsov, Maria (Odessa, 1884). Russian operatic soprano, appearing from 1905 in Russia, Spain, France, England and (from 1915) America. She sang at the première of Strauss' Josef-Legende in 1914 (Paris).

Kwast, James (Nijkerk, 1852). Dutch pianist, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, Th. Kullak, Würst, Brassin and Gevaert, from 1874 at the Cologne Conservatory, from 1883 at the Hoch Conservatory, Frankfort, from 1903 at the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory, Berlin, and then at the Stern Conservatory. Has written a piano-concerto, a piano-trio, piano-pieces and études, an overture, etc. His first wife was the daughter of Ferd. Hiller and his second the accomplished concert-player Frieda Hodapp (b. 1880).

L

Labarre, Théodore (Paris, 1805-1870, do.). Noted French harpist, pupil of Bochsa, Nadermann and the Paris Conservatory, from about 1825 touring widely while living at Paris and London alternately, in 1847-49 conductor at the Opéra-Comique, from 1851 director of the private band of Napoleon III and from 1867 professor at the Conservatory, following Prumier. Wrote much harp-music in varied forms, often with other instruments, and a method, besides 4 operas (1831-55), 5 ballets and effective songs.

Labatt, Leonard (Stockholm, 1838-1897, do.). Able Swedish operatic tenor, trained at the Stockholm Conservatory and by Masset, from 1866 appearing in Sweden, in 1869-83 engaged at the Vienna Opera and in 1888 making an American tour. He excelled in Wagnerian works. See Hedberg's Svenska Opera-Sångare, 1885.

Laber, Heinrich (Ellingen, 1880). Bavarian violinist, pupil of the Munich Conservatory, from about 1900 concertmaster at Munich, Bern, Augsburg, Baden-Baden and Stuttgart successively, in 1913 conductor of the Nuremberg Lehergesangverein, in 1914-22 court-conductor at Gera and then in charge of opera at Plauen.

Labey, Marcel (n. Rodez, 1875). French conductor and composer, after taking his degree in law (1898) pupil of the Schola Cantorum, where he became teacher, inspector and conductor of the orchestral classes and (with d'Indy) of the public concerts. He is also secretary of the Société Nationale. Has written the opera Bérangère, 1912, 2 symphonies (1903, '08), a piano-quartet (1911), and orchestral fantasia, a viola-suite, sonatas for violin and for piano, piano-arrangements of some of d'Indy's orchestral works (including his 2d Symphony) and songs.

Labia, Maria (Verona, 1885). Able Italian operatic soprano, pupil of her mother, at first appearing in concert in Milan, Petrograd and Stockholm, in 1905 also in opera at Stockholm, from 1906 engaged at the Berlin Komische Oper, in 1908-10 a leading artist at the Manhattan, New York, and since 1911 at the Vienna Opera. She is highly gifted as an actress.

Labitzky, Joseph (n. Eger, 1802-1881, Karlsbad). Popular Bohemian violinist and dance-composer, pupil of Veit, from 1821 playing in the Karlsbad orchestra and in 1834-53 touring throughout northern Europe with his own orchestra. Wrote about 300 very effective dances. His son August (1832-1903) succeeded him as director of the Karlsbad Kurorchestra. G.

Lablache, Luigi (Naples, 1794-1858, do.), son of a French father and an Irish mother. Eminent Italian operatic bass, pupil of Varesi, from 1812 appearing at Naples theaters in comic parts and from 1813 at Palermo in opera seria, from 1817 at Milan and Turin, in 1824 in Vienna and from 1830 in London and Paris, continuing with phenomenal success till 1856, including a trip to Petrograd in 1852. His voice had enormous sonority, but was capable of perfect adaptation to all emotions and situations, and he had great versatility in interpreting the most varied styles. As a boy in 1809 he sang the alto solos in Mozart's Requiem at a memorial service for Haydn and in 1827 he was one of the torch-bearers at Beethoven's funeral and sang the bass solos of Mozart's Requiem at the later service. To him Schubert dedicated three of his songs (1827). In his youth he was expert on violin and 'cello. His development as a stage-artist in the first rank was largely due to the influence of his wife, Teresa Pinotti, the daughter of a foremost Italian actor. G.

Labor, Josef (Horowitz, 1842). Gifted Bohemian pianist and organist (blind), pupil of the Vienna Conservatory, from 1863 making a strong impression as a touring virtuoso (piano) and becoming chamber-musician to the King of Hanover, from 1868 living in Vienna, where after 1879 he became known as one of the best organists in Austria. Has written 2 piano-quintets, a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, horn-variations, a Konzertstück for piano and orchestra, many other piano-pieces, organ-fantasias and pieces, some choral church-music, etc., besides editing Biber's violin-sonatas for the Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Oesterreich (v, xii) and filling out the continuo for Cesti's Pomo d'Oro for the same (iii, iv).

Laborde, Jean Benjamin de (Paris, 1734-1794, do.). French courtier under Louis XV (at one time governor of the Louvre), becoming wealthy through connection with the tax-system of the Fermiers Généraux and increasingly active in music (as amateur). Wrote 11 comic operas (1758-72), a collection of songs (1773), an Essai sur la Musique Ancienne et Moderne, 4 vols, 1780 (with a supplement in 1781) and a monograph on Raoul de Coucy (1781). He was put to death during the Revolution. G.

Lach, Robert (Vienna, 1874). Eminent Austrian musicologist, poet and composer, educated at Vienna and Prague Universities (Ph.D. 1902), pupil of Fuchs at the Vienna Conservatory, for some years living in the South for his health, but in 1911-20 head of the music-division of the Vienna Library, then becoming professor at the University. Author of various monographs in the I. M. G. Sammelbde. (1903-04) and masterly Studien zur Entwicklungsgesch. d. ornamentalen Melopöie, 1913 (involving exhaustive use of ethnological data), besides libretti for various operas and ballets, a volume of lyrics and legends, and many articles in periodicals. Has written a symphony (1895), the overtures Don Juan, Totentanz and Narrentraum, music for Schönherr's Ein Königreich

(1909), 3 piano-quintets, 3 piano-quartets, 3 string-quartets, 3 piano-trios, 3 sonatas for viola d'amour, works for piano and wind, the choral work Der Mönch von Heisterbach, 3 masses, choruses, duets and songs, besides settings of his own dramatic poems (König Hummelsang, Goldener).

Lachmund, Carl Valentine (Booneville, Mo., 1857). American pianist, trained at the Cologne Conservatory and by Moszkowski, Kiel, the Scharwenkas and Liszt, from 1885 teacher at the Scharwenka Conservatory, Berlin, and since 1891 teaching in New York, where in 1896-1908
he conducted the Women's String Orchestra.
In 1880 he toured the United States with Wil-helmj and in 1887 with Marianne Brandt. Has written 2 overtures (one called Japanese), an Italian Suite for orchestra, other orchestral pieces, a trio for harp, violin and 'cello, piano-pieces and a comic operetta (not yet given). A.

Lachner, Franz (n. Donauwörth, 1803-1890, Munich), brother of the two following. Eminent Bavarian conductor and composer, pupil of his father, Ett, Stadler, Sechter and Weigl (also intimate with Schubert), in 1822-24 organist at the Evangelical Church in Vienna, from 1827 conductor at the Kärnthnerthor Theater, from 1834-36 court-director at Mannheim and in 1836-68 court-director at Munich, where he exercised an increasingly powerful influence, though at the end he was disturbed at the growing interest in Wagner. Besides his heavy work as conductor of the court-opera, the court-choir and the concerts of the Conservatory, he was repeatedly called to direct large festivals (as at Munich in 1854 and '63, at Aix in 1861 and '70). Besides holding the title of general musical director from 1852, Munich University made him
Ph.D. in 1872. Wrote the operas Die Bürgschaft, 1828, Alidia, 1839, Caterina Cornaro, 1841, and Benvenuto Cellini, 1849, incidental music for Lanassa (1832), the oratorio Moses, 1836, the cantata Die vier Menschenalter, 1831, a solemn mass and several others, a Requiem, 2 Stabat
Maters, various Psalms, motets, etc., 8 symphonies (including the Appassionata in C min., which gained a prize from the Musikfreunde, and No. 6 in D, which Schumann eulogized), 7 orchestral suites, several overtures and serenades, the orchestration of Schubert's Miriam's Siegesgesang, a festival march for brass, a wind-nonet, sextets, quintets, 5 quartets, trios, etc., for piano and strings, an elegy for 5 'cellos, a serenade for 4 do., 2 harp-concertos, violin-sonatas, organ-sonatas, fugues and other pieces, choruses, part-songs and songs. All his work was characterized by great contrapuntal and technical skill, often rising to much dignity and beauty. Memoirs by Kronseder, 1903 (in Altbayr. Monatsschrift, with catalogue of works), and Schwind, 1904. G.

Lachner, Ignaz (n. Donauwörth, 1807-1895, Hanover), brother of the above and the following. Able Bavarian conductor and composer, pupil of his father, Neugebauer, Keller and Witschka, early playing (with his brother Franz) in a Munich orchestra, in 1824-31

Franz's successor at the Evangelical Church in Vienna and also from 1825 assistant-conductor at the Opera, besides playing under his brother at the Kärnthnerthor Theater, from 1831 court-director at Stuttgart, returning in 1836 to Munich, where in 1842-53 he was his brother's assistant, from 1853 director at the Hamburg Opera, from 1858 court-director at Stockholm and in 1861-75 opera-conductor at Frankfurt. Wrote the operas Der Geisterturm, 1837, Die Regenbrüder, 1839, and Loreley, 1846, several singspiele, ballets and other stage-music, symphonies, string-quartets, piano-trios, sonatas and other pieces, violin-works, masses and other church-music, etc. G.

Lachner, Vincenz (n. Donauwörth, 1811-1893, Karlsruhe), brother of the two foregoing. Able Bavarian conductor and composer, pupil of his father and brothers, succeeding Ignaz as organist at the Evangelical Church in Vienna in 1831-36 and then following Franz as court-director at Mannheim in 1836-73 (with absences as opera-conductor at London in 1842 and at Frankfurt in 1848), and from 1873 living at Karlsruhe, where from 1884 he taught in the Conservatory.
Wrote symphonies, overtures (notably Turan-dot, Demetrius and Festouvertüre), string-quartets, a piano-quartet, famous choruses and partsongs for men's voices, many songs, etc. G.

Lachnith, Ludwig Wenzel (Prague, 1746-1820, Paris). Bohemian hornist, pupil of Rudolph and Philidor, appearing as soloist in Paris from about 1775. Later, besides writing 4 operas (1785-98), 18 symphonies, 3 piano-concertos and a quantity of facile chamber-music, he made a temporary hit with a reckless rehash of Mozart's Zauberflöte
(Les Mystères d'Isis, 1801) a compilation with Berton and others (Le Laboureur Chinois, 1813), the 'action-oratorios' Saul and La Prise de
Jéricho, 1805 (both with Chr. Kalkbrenner), etc.
G.

Lack, Théodore (Quimper, 1846-1921, Paris).
Gifted French pianist, precociously developed (organist at Quimper in 1856-60), then pupil of the Paris Conservatory and from 1864 professor there. Since 1881 he had been officier in the Académie and since 1887 also de l'Instruction Publique. He wrote a large amount of polished salon-music.

Lackowitz, Walter (n. Berlin, 1837-1916, do.).
Prussian editor, pupil of his father, Erk, Kullak and Dehn, in 1877-97 in charge of the Deutsche Musikerzeitung. Author of Musikal. Skizzen-blätter, 1872, an Opernführer, 2 parts (6th ed.
1899) and an Operettenführer, 1898. He was also a practical botanist.

Lacombe, Louis Brouillon- (Bourges, 1818-1884, St.-Vaast-la-Hougue). Able French pianist and composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory and by Czerny, Fischhof, Seyfried, Sechter and Barbireau, in 1832-40 (at first with his sister) touring widely in Belgium, Germany and Austria and then active in Paris as virtuoso and teacher, with increasing composition. Wrote the operas La Madone, 1860, Winkelried, 1892, Le Tonellier, 1897 (at first as Meister Martin), and Korrigane, 1901, the choral melodrama Sapho, 1878 (Exposition prize), music for Niboy-et's L'Amour (1859), the dramatic symphonies with soli and chorus Manfred, 1847, and Arva, 1850, an orchestral Épopée Lyrique, an overture, the Hungarian fantasia Lassan et Friss, an elegy, Au Tombeau d'un Héros, for violin and orchestra, a quintet for piano, violin, 'cello, oboe and bassoon, 2 piano-trios, piano-nocturnes, études and many other graceful pieces, choruses a cappella or with organ, and songs. Author of Philosophie et Musique, 1895. Memoirs by Bourdin, 1882, Boyer, 1888, and Gallet, 1891. G.

Lacombe, Paul (Carcassonne, 1837). Gifted French composer, mostly self-trained. Has written 3 symphonies, a symphonic overture, a Suite Pastorale, a serenade and other orchestral works, a suite for piano and orchestra, notable chamber-pieces, including a piano-trio, a serenade for flute, oboe and strings, 3 violin-sonatas, etc., a mass, a Requiem, songs, etc. In 1889 he was awarded the Prix Chartier.

Lacome [d'Estalenz], Paul Jean Jacques (n. Auch, 1838-1920, do.). French composer of many operettas (1870-1900), 3 orchestral suites, chamber-music, over 200 songs, piano-pieces, etc., and an Introduction à la Vie Musicale, 1911.

Lacoste. French composer of 5 operas (1705-32) and other stage-pieces for Paris or Versailles. In 1693-1708 he was a chorus-singer at the Opéra and later conductor. He lived till after 1757.

Lacy, Michael Rophino (Bilbao, 1795-1867, London). Irish (Spanish) violinist, pupil of Kreutzer, from 1804-05 appearing in Paris and various British cities and from 1818, after being engaged as an actor, concertmaster at Liverpool and London. He was notable as the maker of clever (sometimes over-free) adaptations of well-known operas (as Semiramide, 1829, Guillaume Tell, 1830, Fra Diavolo, 1831, a pasticcio of Mosè in Egitto and Israel in Egypt, 1833, and Der Freischütz, 1839). He assisted Schœlcher in his Life of Handel (1857). G.

Ladegast, Friedrich (n. Leipzig, 1818-1905, Weissenfels). Saxon organ-maker, from 1846 established at Weissenfels, in 1855 completing the organ in Magdeburg Cathedral and in 1862 that in the Nikolaikirche at Leipzig, with many others (over 200).

Ladmirault, Paul Émile (Nantes, 1877). French composer, trained at the Nantes and Paris Conservatories, beginning works on a large scale in 1893. In 1900-02 he was critic for the Courrier Musical and for many years for L'Ouest-Artiste (Nantes), besides since 1913 contributing to the journal of the S. I. M. He is one of the executive committee of the Société Nationale. Has written the operas Gilles de Retz (1893) and Myrdhin (1909), the ballet-pantomime La Prêtresse de Korydwen, 1922, the symphonic poem Tristan dans la Forêt de Morois, a symphony (1910), Les Sablaises (1899) and Marche de Gorsedd (1910), both for military band, an offertorio for string-quartet and organ, a Ballet Bohémien for flute, oboe, double string-quartet and piano, a violin-sonata (1901), a suite for oboe and piano (1896), a Chanson Grecque for flute and piano (1900), a violin-fantasia, various piano-pieces (solo or 4-hands), the choral works Les Berceaux, 1898 (with string-quartet and piano), Printemps, 1902, Chœurs des Âmes de la Forêt, 1903 (both with orchestra), L'Hymne National Breton, 1910, Chanson Bretonne, 1910 (both with military band), Les Dominicales, 1911 (with piano), and a Tantum Ergo for tenor, chorus, organ, harp, violin and double-bass, many songs and collections of folk-songs from Brittany and Vendée, Noëls Anciens, etc. Several numbers from Myrdhin (for orchestra) have been published. See Sérè, Musiciens d'Aujourd'hui, 1911.

Laduchin, Nikolai Michailovitch (Petrograd, 1860). Russian composer, pupil of Taneiev, writing Variations Symphoniques, a Crépuscule for strings, a Petite Suite for violin, the choral Liturgy of St. John Slatoust, piano-pieces, songs (many for children) and solfeggi.

Ladurner, Ignaz Anton Franz Xavier (Aldein, 1766-1839, n. Paris). Tyrolese pianist, from 1788 active in Paris as both player and teacher, ultimately on the Conservatory staff. Wrote 12 piano-sonatas (one also for 4 hands), variations, divertissements, etc., 9 violin-sonatas and 2 short operas (1793-96). Auber was among his pupils.

Lafage, Juste Adrien Lenoir de (Paris, 1801-1862, Charenton), grandson of the archæologist M. A. Lenoir. Learned French music-historian, pupil of Perne, Choron and Baini, with further study in Italy and travels in Germany, Spain and England (1851). In 1829-33 he was choir-master at St.-Étienne du Mont. In 1859 he started the periodical Le Plain-Chant and his labor upon it, added to previous overwork, led to insanity. Author of Manuel Complet de Musique, 6 vols. 1836-38 (in part based on notes by Choron), Sémétiologie Musicale, 1837 (also based on Choron's ideas), De la Chanson considérée sous le rapport musicale, 1840, Miscellanées Musicales, 1844 (sketches of various composers), many other detached sketches (1837-44), Histoire Générale de la Musique, 2 vols. 1844 (only the early portions of a gigantic plan), monographs on the history of plain-song (1853), Cours Complet de Plain-Chant, 2 vols. 1855-56, with a Nouveau Traité later (1859), De l'Unité Tonique, 1859, Essais de Diphthéographie Musicale, 2 vols. 1864, and Extraits du Catalogue Critique et Raisonné d'une Petite Bibliothèque Musicale, n. d. (only 100 copies printed). His valuable library (catalogue issued in 1862) was scattered after his death, but his papers and incomplete writings went to the Paris Library. Memoir by Denne-Baron, 1863. G.

Lafont, Charles Philippe (Paris, 1781-1839, n. Tarbes). Eminent French violinist, pupil of Berthaume (his uncle), Kreutzer and Rode, appearing in Germany with Berthaume when but eleven and in 1801-08 touring steadily throughout the Continent, from 1808 soloist to the Emperor of Russia and from 1815 to Louis XVIII. In 1816 he competed with Paganini at Milan. From 1831 he was largely occupied with tours with Herz, on one of which he was killed in an accident. Wrote 7 violin-concertos and many pieces, about 200 songs and 2 small operas (from 1803). G.

La Forge, Frank (Rockford, Ill. 1879). Gifted American pianist, pupil of his sister, Wild, Leschetizky, Labor and Navrátil, from about 1900 becoming noted as accompanist for Mmes. Gadske, Sembrich, Alda, Matzenauer, Schumann-Heink and many others. He regularly accompanies without notes. Has written effective piano-pieces and songs. His home is in New York. A.

Lagkner, Daniel. 17th C.

Lagoanère, Oscar de (Bordeaux, 1853). French conductor and composer of light stage-music, pupil of the Paris Conservatory and since 1876 active at several Parisian theaters, producing before 1914 about 10 operettas and as many ballets, etc.

La Grange, Anna Caroline de (Paris, 1825-?). French operatic soprano, pupil of Bordogni and Lamperti, from 1842 winning success in Italy, in 1848-49 at Vienna (where she married the rich Russian Stankovitch) and then (till 1869) traveling widely in Europe and America (New York in 1855).

Laguette, Elizabeth Claude de, née Jacquet (1659-1729). 17th C.

La Harpe, Jean François de (Paris, 1739-1803, do.). French poet and critic, in 1777 among those arrayed against Gluck.

Lahee, Henry (London, 1826-1912, do.). English pianist and organist, pupil of W. S. Bennett, Goss and Potter, in 1847-74 organist at Holy Trinity (Brompton) and popular as pianist and teacher. Wrote the cantatas The Building of the Ship, 1869, The Blessing of the Children, 1870, The Sleeping Beauty (women's voices), etc., many striking part-songs and glees (several prizes) and some anthems. G.

Lahee, Henry Charles (London, 1856), son of the above. English writer, since about 1883 in Boston (U. S.), where in 1891-99 he was secretary of the New England Conservatory. Has written a series of useful popular handbooks about singers, violinists, pianists, organists, etc. (from 1898), and Annals of Music in America, 1923. A.

La Hèle, George de (?-1589). 16th C. G.

Lahoussaye, Pierre (Paris, 1735-1818, do.). French violinist and conductor, early employed by French and Italian noblemen, in 1770-75 director of the Italian Opera in London, from 1779 of the Concerts Spirituels in Paris, from 1781 of the Comédie Italienne and from 1790 of the Théâtre Feydeau, besides ultimately teaching at the Conservatory. G.

Laidlaw, Anna Robena (Bretton, 1819-1901, London). Gifted English pianist, pupil of Robert Müller and Herz, with study in Germany where she appeared in Berlin while still very young and in 1837 at the Gewandhaus in Leipzig, with tours in Austria and Russia. After 1840 she was active in London till her marriage to a Mr. Thomson in 1855. Schumann dedicated his Fantasiestücke to her in 1837 [he suggested the change of her given names, originally Robena Anna]. G.

Lajarte, Théodore Édouard Dufaure de (Bordeaux, 1826-1890, Paris). French critic and composer, pupil of Leborne, at first active in making light stage-music and pieces for military band, and from 1873 librarian at the Opéra. Author of Bibliothèque Musicale. de l'Opéra, 2 vols. 1876, Curiosités de l'Opéra, 1883, a large collection (9 series) of Chefs-d'œuvre Classiques de l'Opéra Français, another of Airs à Danser, and some text-books. G.

Laker, Karl (Gmünd, 1859). Carinthian specialist in throat- and ear-diseases at Gratz, writing several studies in tone-perception, notation and acoustical problems (from 1910).

Lalande, Désiré (Paris, 1867-1904, London). Able French oboist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1886 active in England in Hallé's orchestra at Manchester, from 1891 in the Scottish Orchestra (Henschel) and later in the Queen's Hall Orchestra in London. He was also expert on the English horn. G.

Lalande, Henriette Clémentine (Dunkirk, 1798-1867, Paris). French operatic singer, from 1814 heard in light opera in Naples and some French towns, then pupil of Garcia, Bonfichi and Banderali, winning applause in Italy in 1824-31 and finally visiting London and Paris. About 1823 she married the hornist Méric in Paris, and in 1833 retired. G.

Lalande, Michel Richard de (1657-1726). 17th C. G.

Lallouette, Jean François (1651-1728). 17th C.

Lalo, Charles (Périgueux, 1877). Professor of philosophy at the Bayonne Lycée, author of several works on musical aesthetics (1908-21).

Lalo, Édouard Victor Antoine (Lille, 1823-1892, Paris). Eminent French composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (at first largely as violinist and violist), taking the second Prix de Rome in 1847, immediately entering upon varied forms of composition, but not securing much recognition until 1872, when his orchestral works began to appear, and 1874, when Sarasate played his violin-concerto. After this time his genius was generally acclaimed, especially in thematic originality and orchestration. In 1880 he became a member of the Légion d'Honneur and in 1890 officier. Wrote the operas Fiesque (1867, only the overture given) and especially Le Roi d'Ys, 1888 (begun in 1875), with portions of Savonarola and La Jacquerie (completed by Coquard and given in 1895), the pantomimes Namouna, 1882, and Néron, 1891, 3 symphonies, including that in G min. (1886), an orchestral Divertissement, 1872, Allegro Symphonique, 1875, Rapsodie Norvégienne, 1881, Scherzo, 1884, and some other pieces, concertos for violin (1872), for 'cello (1876) and for piano (1889), for violin and orchestra a Symphonie Espagnole, 1873, Fantaisie Norvégienne, 1880, Romance-Sérénade, 1880, and Concerto Russe, 1883, a string-quartet (revised, 1880), 3 piano-trios, sonatas for violin and for 'cello, several lesser works for violin or 'cello with piano, some choral church-music and 33 songs. These varied works established his place among the more gifted French composers of his period. In 1865 he married the fine contralto Mlle. Bernier de Maligny. Memoirs in biographical summaries by Imbert, 1892, Jullien, 1892, Lavignac, 1896, Servièrès, 1897, Bellaigue, 1898, Dufour, 1908, and Séré, 1911. G.

Laloy, Louis (Gray, 1874). Eminent French musicologist, graduate of the University of Paris in 1904 (Dr. ès Lettres) and pupil also of the Schola Cantorum, in 1905 founding (with Marnold) the Mercur Musical, which in 1907 he continued (with Écorcheville), as the organ of the French section of the I. M. G. He has been an influential critic for many other periodicals. In 1906-07 he took Rolland's place as lecturer on music-history at the University. Author of articles on the Greek enharmonic scales (1899, 1900), Aristoxène et la Musique de l'Antiquité, 1904, lives of Rameau (1904), Debussy (1909) and Chopin, La Musique Chinoise, 1910, and transcription of Chinese kin-music (in S. I. M. Bulletin), besides notes on Cambodian music (1907, at Basel Congress of the I. M. G.).

La Mara. See Lipsius.

Lambardi, Camillo and Girolamo. 17th C.

Lambert, Alexander (Warsaw, 1862). Polish pianist, pupil of his father, the Vienna Conservatory, Urban and Liszt, in 1881 visiting New York and then touring in Germany and Russia, since 1884 settled in New York, where in 1887-1905 he was director of the New York College of Music. Until 1892 he appeared widely as virtuoso. Has written several piano-works, a notable Systematic Course of Studies, 3 vols. 1907, and a short method. A.

Lambert, Johann Heinrich (Mülhausen, 1728-1777, Berlin). Alsatian government official, author of four articles on acoustics (1763-75, for the Berlin Akademie).

Lambert, Lucien (Paris, 1861). French composer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory (Prix Rossini, 1883). Has written the operas Brocéliande, 1893, Le Spahi, 1897, La Marseillaise, 1903, Flamenco, 1903, Pentecosta, 1908 (prize at the Concours Astruc), and La Sorcière, the dramatic legend Sire Olaf, 1887, the ballet-pantomime Russalka, 1911, the cantata Prométhée Enchaîné, 1883, the symphonic poem, Légende Roumaine, the suite Esquisses Créoles (themes from Gottschalk), the Moorish rhapsody Tanger le Soir, a piano-concerto and an Andante et Fantaisie Tzigane for piano and orchestra, besides other piano-pieces. G.

Lambert, Michel (1610-1696). 17th C.

Lamberti, Giuseppe (Cuneo, ?1820-1894, Turin). Italian composer of the operas Malek-Adel, 1851, and Leila di Granata, 1857, with some church-music.

Lambeth, Henry Albert (n. Gosport, 1822-1895, Glasgow). English organist and conductor, pupil of Thos. Adams, from about 1853 city-organist at Glasgow and from 1859 conductor of the Choral Union there (till 1880), besides in 1874 forming a Select Choir (till 1878). He was later organist at St. Mary's and Park Church. Wrote 2 Psalms, piano-pieces and songs and (with Baptie) edited the Scottish Book of Praise, 1876. G.

Lambillotte, Louis (Charleroi, 1796-1855, Vaugirard). Belgian Jesuit and church-musician, in youth organist at Charleroi and Dinant, from 1822 connected with various monasteries. Wrote considerable church-music, including masses, motets, etc., and edited a Musée des Organistes, 2 vols. 1842-44. Author of a monograph on the famous St. Gall Antiphonary (1851), Clef des Mélodies Grégoriennes, 1851, and two other works on the practice of plain-song (1855, edited by Dufour, who added versions of the Gradual and Vespéral as illustrations). Memoirs by Dufour, 1857, Nisard, 1857, Monter, 1871, and in the Jesuit biography by Somervogel.

Lambord, Benjamin (Portland, Me. 1879-1915, Lake Hopatcong, N. J.). Gifted, but short-lived, American composer, pupil of Arth. Whiting, MacDowell and Rybner (Mosenthal Fellow at Columbia Univ. 1905-06), from 1904 organist in New York churches and from 1912 founder and leader of the choral Society that in 1914 became the Modern Music Society. Wrote a part of the opera Woodstock, Verses from Omar for chorus and orchestra, an orchestral Introduction and Variations, a piano-trio, about 15 songs and some piano-pieces and studies, besides editing the orchestral division of The Art of Music. A.

Lambrino, Télémaque (Odessa, 1878). Greek-Russian pianist, trained at the Munich Conservatory and by Carreño, from 1900 touring or teaching from Leipzig as a center (1908-09 at the Moscow Conservatory) and also taking advanced classes in the Erfurt Music School and (from 1919) at the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory in Berlin.

Lammers, Thorwald Amund (Modum, 1841). Norwegian bass-baritone, pupil of Arlberg and Lamperti, in 1874-77 engaged at the Christiania Opera and from 1879 founder and director of a choral society (from 1900 called the Cæcilienverein). Author of a Store Musikere, 1912, and harmonizations of Norwegian folk-songs.

Lamond, Frederick A. (Glasgow, 1868). Able Scottish pianist, pupil of his brother, H. C. Cooper, the Raff Conservatory (Frankfort), Von Bülow and Liszt, making his début at Berlin in 1885, followed by many tours throughout Europe, usually with Berlin as center. He has been famous for his interpretation of Beethoven's later works. Has written a symphony (1889), the overture Aus dem schottischen Hochlande (1889), a piano-trio, a 'cello-sonata and other chamber-music, piano-pieces, etc. In 1909 he taught at the Sondershausen Conservatory and since 1917 has been professor at the Hague Conservatory. G.

Lamote de Grignon Bocquet, Juan (Barcelona, 1872). Spanish conductor of the Orchestra Sinfónica and Banda Municipal at Barcelona and also director of the Conservatorio del Liceo. Has written many orchestral pieces and songs.

Lamotte, Antoine Houdart de la (Paris, 1672-1731, do.). French poet, his many works including opera-libretti used by Campra, Des-touches, Marais, Labarre and others.

Lamoureux, Charles (Bordeaux, 1834-1899, Paris). Eminent French violinist and conductor, trained mostly at the Paris Conservatory, from 1850 soloist in the Gymnase orchestra and then at the Opéra, in 1860 founded important chamber-music concerts (with Colonne, Adam and Rignault), in 1873 organized the Société de l'Harmonie Sacrée for choral music of the highest class, in 1872-77 was also assistant-conductor at the Conservatory Concerts, in 1876 held the same post at the Opéra, becoming in 1877-79 chief conductor, and in 1881 established the Concerts Lamoureux, which promptly became famous. He was often called to act as guest-conductor (as at the Boieldieu Festival at Rouen in 1875, and at London in 1881) and in 1896-99 took his orchestra several times to London. He was not only a consummate drill-master, but his programs were always strong and progressive. His vigorous advocacy of Wagner aroused violent protest, but he succeeded as champion of the new school of younger French composers. From 1897 he gradually transferred the leadership to his son-in-law Chevillard. In 1880 he was admitted to the Légion d'Honneur. G.

Lampadius, Wilhelm Adolf (1812-1892, Leipzig). Lutheran pastor, author of a life of Mendelssohn (1848, revised, 1886).

Lampe, Walther (Leipzig, 1872). Saxon composer, pupil of Knorr, Herzogenberg and Humperdinck, from about 1895 teaching at Munich, from 1920 at the Conservatory. Has written an orchestral Tragisches Tongedicht, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, a serenade for 15 wood-winds, various piano-pieces, etc.

Lamperti, Francesco (Savona, 1811-1892, Como). Distinguished Italian singing-teacher, trained at the Milan Conservatory, but about 1840 in charge of the theater at Lodi and much sought for as teacher, in 1850-75 professor at the Milan Conservatory, there continuing to form a long list of famous singers. Author of several manuals and practical exercises. G.

Lamperti, Giovanni Battista (?Milan, 1839-1910, Berlin), son of the above. Italian singing-teacher, pupil of his father and equally influential at Milan, Paris, Dresden and Berlin in succession. Author of Die Technik des Bel Canto, 1905, Scuola di Canto (solfeggi, etc.), and other practical handbooks.

Lampugnani, Giovanni Battista (Milan, 1706-1781, do.). Italian conductor and composer, at first a teacher at Milan, in 1743-70? conductor of the Italian Opera, London, following Galuppi, and later cembalist at La Scala, Milan. Wrote about 50 operas (from 1737), including many pasticcios (some with Hasse), and considerable instrumental music. G.

Land, Jan Pieter Nicolaus (Delft, 1834-1897, Arnhem). From 1864 professor of Oriental languages at Amsterdam University and in 1872-94 at Leyden University, writing various important musicological monographs on Arabian and Javanese music (1884-92), on the works of Huygens (1882), on music in the 17th century (1889), etc.

Landi, Camilla (Geneva, 1866). Italian-Swiss soprano, pupil of her parents (both singers) and Buonamici, at first appearing in concert at Florence (1884) and in France (from 1886), but also once in 1888 and again in 1890 in opera at Paris. In 1892-97 she was active in England, especially in concert and festivals, then in Germany and throughout the Continent, returning in 1904-05 to England and then living at Geneva. To a beautiful voice she adds a high degree of musicianship and of personal magnetism. G.

Landi, Stefano (?1590-1655?). 17th C.

Landino, Francesco (?1325-1397). 14th C.

Landormy, Paul Charles René (Paris, 1869). French student of philosophy, musically trained by Sbriglia and Plançon, since 1902 active in Paris as lecturer on music-history, student of acoustics and writer for various journals. Author of a Histoire de la Musique, 1910 (3d ed. 1913), and a life of Brahms (1919) and a study of Gounod's Faust.

Landowska, Wanda (Warsaw, 1877). Polish pianist, pupil of the Warsaw Conservatory and of Moszkowski and Urban, in 1900-13 teaching at the Schola Cantorum, Paris (with concert-tours from 1906), but gradually devoting herself to music for the harpsichord with such success as to be made professor in 1913-19 at the Berlin Hochschule. Author of Bach et ses Interprètes, 1906, La Musique Ancienne, 1908, and Les Allemands et la Musique Française au XVIII<sup>e</sup> Siècle, 1911, besides some works for orchestra, piano or voice.

Landshoff, Ludwig (Stettin, 1874). Pomeranian musicologist, trained at Berlin and Munich Universities (Ph.D. 1900), living then near Munich, in Italy and for a time opera-conductor at Kiel, Würzburg, etc., and since 1918 leader of the Munich Bach-Verein. Author of a study of Zumsteeg (1902), an edition of Bach's sacred songs (1905), a collection of Alte Meister des Bel Canto, 2 vols. 1912-15, and a monograph on the transcription of the basso continuo (1919, in the Sandberger Festschrift).

Lang, Benjamin Johnson (Salem, Mass. 1837-1909, Boston). Eminent American pianist, organist and conductor, pupil of his father, F. G. Hill, Jaëll, Satter and Liszt, from 1852 organist at various Boston churches (from 1865 at the South Church [Unitarian] and from 1885 at King's Chapel), also in 1859-95 for the Handel and Haydn Society, from 1862 gradually coming into prominence as conductor, in 1871-1901 leading the new Apollo Club, in 1874-1907 the new Cecilia Club, in 1895-97 succeeding Zerrahn in the Handel and Haydn Society and in concerts of his own. During this period he was also active as soloist and in much ensemble-playing (as with the Mendelssohn Quintett Club), with constant teaching. Wrote the oratorio David, orchestral and chamber-music, church-works, songs, etc., mostly remaining unpublished. G, A.

Lang, Heinrich (Laichingen, 1858-1919, Stuttgart). Württemberger organist, trained at the Stuttgart Conservatory, in 1884-97 teacher at the Stuttgart Mittelschule and organist for the Classical Music Union, from 1894 organist at the Stiftskirche (following Faiszt) and from 1897 professor at the Conservatory, of which from 1910 he was vice-director. In 1907 he became head of the Organists' Union for Württemberg and was also in request as an organ-virtuoso. Wrote an organ-sonata, an Introduction and Double Fugue, a Festival Prelude, chorale-preludes, etc., many a cappella motets, choruses, part-songs and songs (notably for children), and assisted in editing the Württemberg Choralbuch in 1903 and '12.

Lang, Henry Albert (New Orleans, La. 1854). German-American pianist and composer, trained at the Stuttgart Conservatory and by V. Lachner, at first, after touring with Remenyi, teacher at the Karlsruhe Conservatory and in Riga and Königsberg, in 1890 returning to America, where, after a year at Galveston, in 1891 he settled in Philadelphia. Since 1913 he has taught at the Philadelphia Conservatory (Mus. D. 1911). Has written 2 symphonies (1914-15), the suite Fantastic Dances, a violin-concerto, a piano-quintet, 2 string-quartets, 2 piano-trios, a 'cello-sonata, piano-pieces and songs. Many of his larger works have won prizes. A.

Lang, Hermann (n. Freiberg, 1872). Saxon violinist and composer, pupil of the Dresden Conservatory, in 1893-95 playing in the court-orchestra there and since 1895 teaching at the Conservatory. Has written a sextet for strings, clarinet and bassoon, a quintet for wind and piano, trios, violin-pieces and songs.

Lang, Josephine (Munich, 1815-1880, Tübingen). Gifted Bavarian song-composer, pupil of her mother (Regina Hitzelberger), Frau Berlinghof-Wagner and Mendelssohn (who greatly admired her genius), from about 1835 teaching in Munich, from 1842 wife of the Tübingen professor C. R. Köstlin (d. 1856) and from 1856 again in Munich. Wrote many songs and piano-pieces. Memoir by H. A. Köstlin (her son), 1881 (in Waldersee's Sammlung). G.

Lang, Margaret Ruthven (Boston, 1867), daughter of Benjamin above. Able American composer, pupil of her father, L. Schmidt, Drechsler, Abel, Gluth, Chadwick and MacDowell. Has written the overtures Witichis, 1893, Dramatic, 1893, and Totila, an orchestral Ballade, 1901, the solos with orchestra Sappho's Prayer to Aphrodite, 1895, Armida, 1896, and Phæbus, the cantata The Wild Huntsman, a Te Deum, the a cappella chorus Wind (8-part), The Heavenly Noël (women's voices, with harp, organ, etc.), other choruses and part-songs, about 100 effective songs and many piano-pieces. G, A.

Langbecker, Emanuel Christian Gottlieb (Berlin, 1792-1843, do.). Prussian businessman, ultimately secretary to Prince Waldemar at Berlin. His avocation was the history of chorale-music. Author of Das deutsch-evangel. Kirchenlied, 1830, Crügers Choral-Melodien, 1835, Gesangblätter aus d. 16. Jahrh. 1838, and a life of Gerhard (1841).

Langdon, Richard (Exeter, ?1729-1803, do.). English organist at the cathedrals of Exeter (from 1753), Ely (1777), Bristol (from 1778) and Armagh (1782-94). Wrote Psalms, anthems, glees, songs and 2 cantatas. G.

Lange, Daniel de (Rotterdam, 1841-1918, Point Loma, Cal.), brother of Samuel below. Dutch conductor and composer, pupil of M. Ganz, Servais, Verhulst, Dameke and Mme. Dubois, in 1860-63 teacher at the Lemberg Music School, for a time organist in a suburb of Paris, from 1870 teacher and secretary at the Amsterdam Conservatory (at first while it was still the Maatschappij Music School) and in 1895-1913 its director, following Coenen. He was long Coenen's assistant in the leadership of the Mannenkoor and also of the A Cappella Choir which in 1888-94 toured in England and Germany. He was for years critic for the Nieuws. His last years were spent in California. Wrote the opera De Val van Kuilenburg, music for Ernani, an a cappella mass, a Requiem, several cantatas, 2 symphonies, the overture Willem van Holland, a 'cello-concerto, sonatas for 'cello and for piano, etc., besides a text-book in theory (1908). G, A.

Lange, Gustav (n. Erfurt, 1830-1889, Wernigerode). Saxon pianist, pupil of A. W. Bach, Grell and Löschhorn, from 1860 active in Berlin as player and composer of over 400 salon-pieces, often of much effectiveness.

Lange, Hieronymus Gregor (?-1587). 16th C. G.

Lange, Konrad von (Göttingen, 1855-1915, Tübingen). From 1894 professor of the science of fine art at Tübingen University (from 1905 rector). He emphasized the part played by illusion in art-appreciation, especially in Die bewusste Selbsttäuschung, 1895, Das Wesen d. Kunst, 2 vols. 1901-02 (2d ed. 1907), Das Wesen d. künstlerischen Erziehung, 1902, and Der Zweck d. Kunst, 1912.

Lange, Samuel de (Rotterdam, 1840-1911, Stuttgart), brother of Daniel above. Eminent Dutch organist, conductor and composer, pupil of his father, Verhulst, Winterberger, Damecke and Mikuli, in 1858-59 touring in Galicia and then living in Lemberg, from 1863 organist at Rotterdam and teacher in the Music School, with some tours in various countries, in 1874-76 teacher at the Basel Music School, from 1876 teacher at the Cologne Conservatory and conductor of the chorus for the Gürzenich concerts and of a men's chorus, in 1885-93 conductor of the Oratorio Society and other societies at The Hague, from 1894 teacher at the Stuttgart Conservatory and vice-director (director from 1900), besides directing choral and orchestral organizations, retiring in 1908. Wrote 3 symphonies (from 1879), a violin-concerto, a 'cello-concerto, a piano-concertino, a serenade for small orchestra, a Konzertstück for 'cello with orchestra, a piano-quintet, 4 string-quartets, a serenade for string-quartet and piano, 2 piano-trios, 4 violin sonatas, 2 'cello-sonatas, 8 great organ-sonatas, (no. 2 based on Ein feste Burg), many preludes and fugues, a Konzertstück for organ, etc., the oratorio Moses, 1889, the cantatas De Opstanding, Die Totenklage and Eines Königs Tränen, 3 choruses for men's voices with orchestra, etc. He also edited Muffat's Apparatus (1888). G.

Lange-Müller, Peter Erasmus (n. Copenhagen, 1850). Eminent Danish composer, trained at the Copenhagen Conservatory and in 1879 holder of the Ancker Scholarship. In 1877-82 he held minor posts as leader of local societies. He has devoted himself almost wholly to composition, usually with a decided national flavor. Has written the operas Tove, 1878 (original text), Spanish Students, 1883, Frau Jeanna, 1891, and Vikingebloed, 1900, incidental music to about a dozen plays (including Drachmann's Es var einmal), 2 symphonies, the orchestral suites Alhambra and Weyerburg, the tone-picture Sommernat ved Sundet, a violin-concerto, a piano-trio, various violin-pieces, many cantatas and a cappella choruses, and about 200 songs, including many that have acquired almost the hold of folk-songs.

Langenus, Gustave (Mechlin, 1883). Able Belgian clarinetist, pupil of the Brussels Conservatory, from about 1905 playing in the Queen's Hall Orchestra, London, and also in that at Eastbourne, and in 1909 going to New York to join the Symphony Society and teach at the Institute of Musical Art. In 1914 he was one of the founders of the Chamber Music Society (with Carolyn Beebe), conducting it till 1916, when he became leader of the city band-concerts. Has written a method (1916), études, etc. A.

Langer, Eduard (Moscow, 1835). Russian (German) pianist and organist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from about 1855 organist at Protestant churches in Moscow and from 1866 professor at the Conservatory. Has written a string-quartet, a string-trio, 2 violin-sonatas and many piano-pieces, including notable 2-piano arrangements of Russian operas and orchestral works.

Langer, Ferdinand (n. Heidelberg, 1839-1905, Kirneck). Badenese 'cellist, self-taught, from about 1865 in the Mannheim opera-orchestra, becoming assistant-conductor. He helped Heckel in the promotion of the Wagner-Verein (from 1883). Wrote 5 operas (1868-94) that had local popularity at Mannheim, and revised Weber's Silvana for its revival in 1885.

Langer, Hermann (n. Tharandt, 1819-1889, Dresden). Saxon organist and conductor, trained at Leipzig University and by K. F. Becker, from 1843 organist to the University and leader of the Pauliner (student-chorus), soon becoming teacher there of church-music and in 1857 music-director (Ph.D. 1859), besides from 1855 conducting the Euterpe (till 1860) and other choral societies. From 1882 he held the title of professor. In 1887 he became royal organ-inspector at Dresden. Published a collection of men's choruses, a text-book in singing and the periodical Die musikal. Gartenlaube.

Langer, Victor (Pest, 1842-1902, do.). Hungarian vocal composer, pupil of Volkmann and the Leipzig Conservatory, from about 1865 active at Pest as theater-conductor, critic and teacher. Wrote (under the name 'Aladár Tisza') many effective songs, choruses, dances, etc., with a strong national flavor.

Langert, Johann August Adolf (Coburg, 1836-1920, do.). Saxon composer, in 1860-68 theater-conductor at Coburg, Mannheim, Basel and Triest, then living at Paris and Berlin, in 1872-73 teacher at the Geneva Conservatory, and in 1873-97 court-director at Gotha, then retiring to Coburg. Wrote the operas Die Jungfrau von Orleans, 1861, Des Sängers Fluch, 1863, Die Fabier, 1866, Doña Maria, 1866, Dornröschen, 1871, and Jean Cavalier, 1880 (revised as Die Camisarden, 1887).

Langey, Otto (Frankfort-on-Oder, 1851-1922, New York). Prussian 'cellist, pupil of Specht, Ullrich, Cabisius and Fritze, from 1877 playing under Hallé and Richter in London and from 1889 in America, teaching in New York and in 1909 becoming arranger of orchestral works for the publisher Schirmer. Author of a series of Tutors for nearly 30 instruments. Has also written many light, but effective, orchestral pieces.

Langgaard, Siegfried (1852-1914, Copenhagen). Able Danish pianist, pupil of the Copenhagen Conservatory, Neruda, Neupert and Liszt, from about 1875 known as a striking interpreter, especially of Rubinstein and Liszt, and from 1881 teacher at the Copenhagen Conservatory. Wrote brilliant piano-pieces and songs. His wife was also a fine pianist and his son Rudolf Immanuel (b. 1893) has written for orchestra, organ and piano.

Langhans, Friedrich Wilhelm (Hamburg, 1832-1892, Berlin). Able North German violinist and music-historian, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and of Alard, from 1852 playing in the Gewandhaus and other Leipzig orchestras, in 1857-60 concertmaster at Düsseldorf, then living at Hamburg, Paris, Heidelberg (Ph.D.

1870) and Berlin (from 1871), where from 1874 he taught history at the Kullak Academy and from 1881 at the new Scharwenka Conservatory. In 1858-74 his wife was the pianist Louisa Japha. Author of Das musikal. Urtheil, 1872 (2d ed. 1886), a history of the Berlin Hochschule (1873), Musikgeschichte in 12 Vorträgen, 1878, Die Gesch. d. Musik d. 17., 18. u. 19. Jahrh. 2 vols. 1882-86 (supplementing Ambros), and Der Endreim in d. Musik, 1891, besides a German translation of Niecks' life of Chopin (1889). Also wrote a symphony, the overture Spartacus, a string-quartet (1864), various violin-pieces and songs. He was elected to the Florence Academy in 1878 and to that at Rome in 1887. G.

Langlé, Honoré François Marie (Monaco, 1741-1807, n. Paris). French theorist, pupil of Caffaro, from 1764 conductor at Genoa, after 1768 in Paris, where he taught at the École Royale in 1784-91 and at the new Conservatory in 1795-1802, then continuing as librarian. Author of a Traité d'Harmonie, 1793 (2d ed. 1797), Traité de la Fugue, 1805, and other text-books, besides assisting on Cherubini's singing-method. Also wrote several operas (from 1783) and some symphonies.

Lanier, Sidney (Macon, Ga. 1842-1881, Lynn, N. C.). The gifted American poet, who was also a fine flutist in the Peabody Orchestra at Baltimore (from 1873) and author of The Science of English Verse, 1881 (dealing with the musical aspects of versification). His poems contain remarkable passages on musical themes. A.

Lanière, Nicolas (1558-1666). 17th C. G.

Lankow, Anna (Bonn, 1850-1908, do.). Rhenish contralto and singing-teacher, trained at Cologne, Leipzig and Dresden, from 1877 appearing for a time in concert and opera (at Weimar), but soon gave up the latter. From 1885 she was soloist and teacher in New York. Author of Die Wissenschaft d. Kunstgesangs, 1899 (4th ed. 1905). A.

Lanner, Joseph Franz Karl (n. Vienna, 1801-1843, do.). Famous Austrian violinist and dance-composer, self-taught, from 1823 leading a Quartet (Joh. Strauss the violinist) and presently an orchestra that was in much demand. Later he and Strauss alternated as leaders at the court-balls and he was named bandmaster of a crack regiment. He established the modern waltz as distinct from the earlier and simpler form. Wrote almost 200 dances, including waltzes (over 100), galops, ländler, mazurkas, polkas, quadrilles, etc., an overture and some other extended works (complete edition, 8 vols., edited by Kremser, 1889). Memoirs by H. Sachs, 1889, Rebay and Keller, 1901, and F. Lange, 1904. G.

Lannoy, Eduard, Freiherr von (Brussels, 1787-1853 Vienna). Austrian-Belgian nobleman, highly educated at Gratz and Paris, from 1813 active in Vienna as conductor of the Concerts Spirituels, promoter of the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde and in 1830-35 on the directorate of the Conservatory. Wrote 3 operas (1814-19), singspiele, orchestral, chamber- and piano-music, etc.

Lans, Michael J. A. (Haarlem, 1845). Dutch R. C. priest, from 1869 teacher at Voorhout Seminary (n. Leyden) and from 1887 pastor at Schiedam. Author of a life of Palestrina (1882) and a text-book in counterpoint (1889). In 1876 he founded the periodical Gregoriusblad and in 1878 a Gregorius-Verein.

Lanzetti, Salvatore (Naples, ?1710-1780?, Turin). One of the earliest to emphasize the superiority of the 'cello over the viola da gamba. Wrote sonatas (1736), trios, etc., and a method. About 1748-56 he was active in London.

Lapicida, Erasmus. 15th C. G.

Laparra, Raoul (Bordeaux, 1876). French composer of the operas Peau d'Âne, 1899, La Habanera, 1908, and La Jota, 1911.

Laporte, Joseph de (Béfort, 1713-1779, Paris). French Jesuit (abbé), author of several dramatic annals, etc., including Anecdotes, 4 vols. 1775, a Dictionnaire, 3 vols. 1776, and an annual Almanach (from 1750, 48 vols. in all, those after 1779 by Duchesne and others).

La Pouplinière, Alexandre Jean Joseph Le Riche de (Paris, 1692-1762, do.). Contractor for the taxes under Louis XV (from 1718), becoming very wealthy. He was a pupil of Rameau and the latter not only lived at his house, but tested his works in his patron's private theater (from about 1730). In this theater frequent soirées were held, in which from 1751 Gossec was conductor and in 1754-55 Joh. Stamitz appeared. It was in his orchestra that various wind-instruments (including apparently clarinets) were first regularly introduced. See monograph by Cucuel, 1913.

Lappi, Pietro. 17th C.

Larocque, Hermann Augustovitch (Petrograd, 1845-1904, do.). Eminent Russian critic, pupil of A. Rubinstein and Zarembo, long intimate with Tchaikovsky, in 1867-70 teaching at the Moscow Conservatory and in 1872-79 at the Petrograd Conservatory, then living mostly at Petrograd (1883-86 at Moscow). He wrote abundantly for various Russian periodicals, usually with a conservative trend and always with much zeal for Tchaikovsky. Author of a life of Glinka (1868), a volume of collected essays (1894) and contributions to Kashkin's Reminiscences (1896) and Modeste Tchaikovsky's Life (1900-02) of Tchaikovsky, besides a translation of Hanslick's Vom Musikalisch-Schönen (1895), with a valuable preface. Also wrote the overture Karmosina, an orchestral Allegro and some songs. G.

L'Arronge, Adolf (Hamburg, 1838-1908, Berlin). North German conductor and composer, pupil of Genée and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1854 theater-conductor at Cologne, Danzig, Königsberg, Würzburg, Stuttgart, Pest, Berlin (from 1866), Breslau (1874-78) and then Berlin again. Wrote many light operas and other stage-pieces, etc.

La Rue, Pierre de (? -1518). 16th C. G.

Laruelle, Jean Louise (Toulouse, 1731-1792, do.). French actor and composer of several early comic operas (1753-72).

Láska, Gustav (Prague, 1847). Bohemian double-bassist and composer, trained at the Prague Conservatory, in 1867-68 touring as virtuoso, then (till 1875) in the court-orchestras at Kassel and Sondershausen, and since 1878 in that at Schwerin. Has written 2 symphonies, 2 overtures, a double-bass concerto and many pieces, the opera Der Kaisersoldat, the choral work Deutsches Aufgebot, etc.

Lassalle, Jean Louis (Lyons, 1847-1909, Paris). Eminent French operatic baritone, pupil mainly of Novelli, from 1869 appearing at Liège, The Hague, Lille and Toulouse, in 1872-93 steadily engaged at the Paris Opéra, where he succeeded to the place long held by Faure, and from 1903 professor at the Conservatory. At intervals he visited all parts of Europe and America (from 1892), everywhere with great success. He sang at the premières of Joncières' Dimitri (1876), Massenet's Roi de Lahore (1877). Gounod's Polyeucte (1878) and Tribut de Zamora (1881), A. Thomas' Françoise de Rimini (1882), Saint-Saëns' Henri VIII (1883) and Ascanio (1890), Reyser's Sigurd (1885), Paladilhe's Patrie (1886), A. G. Thomas' Esmeralda (1890), etc. G.

Lassen, Eduard (Copenhagen, 1830-1904, Weimar). Eminent Danish conductor and composer, brought up in Brussels and pupil of the Conservatory there (many honors, including Prix de Rome, 1851), in 1851-58 traveling in Germany and Italy, with long residence at Rome, in 1858 opera-conductor at Weimar and in 1861 full court-director in succession to Liszt, continuing with distinction till 1895. A notable achievement was the giving of Tristan in 1874 (preceded only by the first renderings at Munich). In 1881 he received the Leopold Order and later a Ph.D. from Jena Univ. Wrote the operas Landgraf Ludwigs Brautfahrt, 1857 (Weimar, under Liszt), Frauenlob, 1860, and Le Captif, 1865, incidental music for Hebbel's Nibelungen, Sophocles' Œdipus at Colonus (1874), Goethe's Faust (1878), Calderon's Circe (Devrient's version), and Goethe's Pandora (1886), the ballet Diana, the cantata Der Künstler and one or two more, the choral Biblische Bilder, a Te Deum, a scena for soprano, 2 symphonies, several overtures, a violin-concerto, an orchestral polonaise, a Phantasiestück for 'cello and orchestra, many effective songs, etc. G.

Lasserre, Jules (Tarbes, 1838-1906, do.). Able French 'cellist, trained at the Paris Conservatory, from about 1855 playing at the new Padeloup Concerts and on tour, from 1859 court-musician at Madrid and from 1869 for some years active in England under Costa and Ella. Wrote 'cello- and violin-pieces and a 'cello-method. G.

Lassus, Ferdinand [2] (d. 1609, 1636). 16th C.

Lassus, Orlandus (1530-1594). 16th C. G.

Lassus, Rudolf (d. 1625). 16th C.

Latilla, Gaetano (Bari, 1711-1791, Naples). Italian composer, pupil of Gizzi, from 1732 producing operas at Naples, Rome and Venice, in 1739-41 assistant-maestro at S. Maria Maggiore in Rome, from 1756 teacher at the Conservatorio della Pietà at Naples and in 1762-72 second maestro at St. Mark's in Venice. Wrote about 50 operas (1732-75), including Demofoonte, 1738, Orazio, 1738, etc., an oratorio, masses, motets and cantatas. G.

La Tombelle, Fernand de (Paris, 1854). French organist and composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory and winner of various prizes (including the Prix Chartier), in 1885-98 Dubois' assistant as organist at the Madeleine, since about 1900 professor at the Schola Cantorum and active in connection with Orphéonistes contests. He is Officier de l'Instruction Publique and holder of several orders. Has written the symphonic poem Antar, the suites Impressions Matinales, Livres d'Images, Tableaux Musicaux and Féodale, the ballets La Muse Fleurie and La Roche aux Fées, incidental music for La Magdaléenne, Yannic and Conte Bleu, the cantatas St.-Cécile and St.-Anne, the operettas Un Bon Numéro and Un Rêve au Pays du Bleu, 1892, considerable chamber-music (including quartets, trios, violin-sonatas, etc.), organ-works, choruses and songs. Author (with others) of a tribute to Guilmant's memory (1911).

Latrobe, Christian Ignatius (Fulneck, n. Leeds, 1757-1836, n. Manchester). English Moravian minister, from 1795 in charge of the English branch of the United Brethren. Edited a Selection of Sacred Music, 6 vols. 1806-25, through which much fine church-music became accessible in England. Also wrote sonatas (3 dedicated to Haydn), anthems and some songs, and edited the first English collection of Moravian tunes. His son John Antes (1799-1878) wrote The Music of the Church, 1831. G (with contents of Sacred Music).

Laub, Ferdinand (Prague, 1832-1875, Gries). Eminent Bohemian violinist, pupil of Mildner, appearing at Prague when but eleven, then protégé of the Grand-duke Stephan at Vienna, from 1850 touring in Germany and England, in 1853-55 Joachim's successor as concertmaster at Weimar, from 1855 prominent at Berlin, at first teaching at the Stern Conservatory, from 1856 concertmaster in the court-band and head of a noted Quartet, but from 1864 either touring or (from 1866) teaching at the Moscow Conservatory, through hampered by increasing ill-health. Wrote various violin-pieces and an opera. G.

Laub, Thomas Linnemann (n. Nyborg, 1852). Danish organist, pupil of the Copenhagen Conservatory. He has collected and discussed Protestant church-music and Danish folk-songs (from 1887). Author of Vor Musikundervisning og den Musikalske Dannelse, 1880.

Lauber, Joseph (n. Lucerne, 1864). Swiss composer, pupil of Gust. Weber, Rheinberger and Massenet, living long at Neuchâtel, then at Zurich and Geneva, where, after two years as conductor of opera, he became professor at the Conservatory. Has written 3 symphonies, the symphonic poems Sur l'Alpe, Chant du Soir and Le Vent et la Vague, overtures, orchestral suites, 2 violin-concertos, 2 piano-concertos, a piano-quintet, 2 string-quartets, a piano-trio, 3 violin-sonatas, the choral works Wellen und Wogen, Weltendämmerung, En Mer, Ode Patriotique and Sapho, music for the festspiel Neuchâtel Suisse, 1898, the opera Die Heze, etc.

Lauella, Nicola (n. Montella, 1882). Italian flutist, educated in New York, playing in the Pittsburgh Orchestra in 1904-07 and since about 1910 in the New York Philharmonic. Has written several orchestral works, including Consaleo, 1911, Sunday at the Village, 1914, Prelude and Temple Dance, 1915, and Impressions of Norfolk, 1917, a string-quartet (1910), a wind-trio, etc., besides the opera Mochanà. A.

Launis, Armas Emanuel (Hämeenlinna, 1884). Finnish composer, pupil of Sibelius, I. Krohn, Klatte, and Bauszner (also Ph.D. of Helsingfors Univ). He has specialized in Finnish folk-songs, publishing collections (1908, '10) and a thesis (1910). Has also written the operas Seven Brothers, 1913, and Kullervo, 1920, 2 festival cantatas (1906, '10), a piano-quintet (1907), a string-quartet (1904), piano-pieces and songs.

Laurence, Lionel de la (Nantes, 1861). Able French critic and musicologist, originally trained for governmental service and so employed in 1883-98, meanwhile pupil of Weingartner, Reynier and Bourgault-Ducoudray, since 1898 lecturing at the École des Hautes Études Sociales and writing for various periodicals. Author of La Légende de Parsifal et le Drame Musical de Wagner, 1888-94, España, 1890, Le Goût Musical en France, 1905, L'Académie de Musique et le Concert de Nantes, 1906, Quelques Documents sur Rameau, 1907, a life of Rameau (1908), articles on Blavet and Dauvergne (1912), Campra (1913), the French symphony about 1750 (1912), L'École Française de Violon, 1922, etc., besides contributing to Lavignac's Encyclopédie (on early French instrumental music).

Laurencin [d'Armond], Ferdinand Peter, Count (Kremsier, 1819-1890, Vienna). Moravian essayist at Vienna, author of a history of church-music (1856), a study of Schumann's Paradies und die Peri (1859), a defence of Hanslick's Vom Musikalisch-Schönen (1859), Die Harmonik d. Neuzeit, 1861, and articles in the Neue Zeitschrift. Memoir by Schucht, 1890 (in the latter).

Lauska, Franz Seraphinus Ignatius (Brünn, 1764-1825, Berlin). Gifted Moravian pianist, pupil of Albrechtsberger, from about 1785 attached to wealthy patrons in Vienna, Rome and Munich, from 1794 teacher at Copenhagen and from 1798 in court-service at Berlin (Meyerbeer was his pupil as a boy). Wrote many elegant piano-sonatas, rondos, polonaises, variations, etc., and a 'cello-sonata, besides a piano-method.

Lauterbach, Johann Christoph (Kulmbach, 1832-1918, Dresden). Eminent Bavarian violinist, pupil of the Würzburg Music School and of De Bériot and Fétis, in 1852 acting as Léonard's assistant, from 1853 concertmaster at Munich and teacher at the Conservatory and from 1861 in like positions at Dresden, continuing at the Conservatory till 1877 and in the orchestra till 1889. He made many tours, as to England in 1864-65 and to Paris in 1870. His skill secured him many prizes and decorations. In 1876 he was badly injured in Switzerland, but made a complete recovery. Wrote many violin-pieces, including some with orchestra. G.

Lavallée, Calixa (Verchères, Que. 1842-1891, Boston). Canadian pianist, pupil of his father and the Paris Conservatory, first appearing as a boy and again from 1860, especially on tours in the United States (as with Gerster in 1881), where he was an early advocate of American composers. In 1887 he was president of the Music Teachers' National Association. After unsuccessful efforts to establish a conservatory at Quebec he settled in Boston. Wrote a symphony, 2 suites, overtures, 2 string-quartets, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, a 'cello-suite, many piano-pieces and études, an oratorio, a cantata, an offertory (with orchestra) and 2 operas. A.

Lavigna, Vincenzo (Naples, 1777-1837, Milan). Italian singing-teacher and composer, trained at the Conservatorio della Pietà, Naples, from 1809 accompanist and coach at La Scala, Milan, and from 1823 teacher at the Conservatory there. Wrote about 10 operas, beginning with La Muta per Amore, 1802, and 2 ballets. Verdi was one of his pupils.

Lavignac, Alexandre Jean Albert (Paris, 1846-1916, do.). Eminent French teacher and writer, trained at the Paris Conservatory, from 1882 professor there and later dean of the faculty. His pedagogical works include a Cours Complet Théorique de Dictée Musicale, 6 books, 1882 (additional exercises, 1900), Solfèges Manuscrits, 6 books, 50 Leçons d'Harmonie and École de la Pedale (with 12 études). The first of these promoted the adoption of dictation as a regular study in numerous conservatories. Author also of La Musique et les Musiciens, 1895, Le Voyage Artistique à Bayreuth, 1897, Les Gaietés du Conservatoire, 1900, L'Éducation Musicale, 1902, and Notions Scolaires de Musique, 1905. He was editor of the great Encyclopédie de la Musique et Dictionnaire du Conservatoire, with a large corps of contributors, published upon governmental subvention (from 1913). G, A.

Lavigne, Antoine Joseph (Besançon, 1816-1886, Manchester). French oboist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1837 playing at the Italiens in Paris, from 1841 soloist at the Promenade Concerts at Drury Lane (London) and after 1855 in Hallé's orchestra at Manchester. He sought to apply Böhm's ring-keys to the oboe. G.

Lavigne, Jacques Émile (Pau, 1782-1855, do.). French operatic tenor, in 1809-25 very popular at the Paris Opéra, though somewhat overshadowed by the elder Nourrit. His vocal power was extraordinary, so that he was called the 'Hercules of song'.

Lavoix, Henri Marie François (Paris, 1846-1897, do.), often called Lavoix fils to distinguish him from his father, the numismatician. Eminent French librarian, graduate of Paris University, from 1865 in charge of the National Library and later of the Ste. Geneviève Library. Author of Les Traducteurs de Shakespeare en Musique, 1869, La Musique dans la Nature, 1873, La Musique dans l'Imagerie du Moyen-Âge, 1875, (in Didron's Annales), Histoire de l'Instrumentation, 1878 (prize from the Académie), Les Principes et l'Histoire du Chant, 1878-81 (with Lemaire), L'Histoire de la Musique, 1883, La Musique au Siècle de St. Louis, 1884 (in Raynaud's Recueil de Motets), and periodical articles. G.

Lavrovskaja, Elisabeth Andrejevna (Kashin, 1845). Russian operatic soprano, pupil of Fenzi and Mme. Nissen-Saloman, with further study at Paris and London, appearing from 1867, in 1868-72 at the Petrograd Opera and again, after tours abroad, in 1878-1902. In 1871 she married Prince Zeretev. Her repertory included most of the older and many new Russian operas. G.

Lawes, Henry (1595-1662), and William (1582-1645). 17th C. G.

Layolle, François. 16th C. G.

Lays [Lay], François (in Gascony, 1758-1831, n. Angers). French operatic tenor, in 1779-1822 almost steadily engaged at the Paris Opéra, besides teaching at the new Conservatory in 1795-99 and at the École Royale de Chant in 1819-26. He also sang in Napoleon's private choir in 1801-15. During the Revolution he was an eager popular partisan. G.

Lazare, Martin (Brussels, 1829-1897, do.). Belgian pianist, pupil of Van der Does and Zimmerman, from about 1850 concertizing in London, on the Continent and in America, then living at Brussels. Wrote the opera Le Roi de Bohême, 1852, an operetta (1878), chamber-music and various piano-pieces and études.

Lazarus, Gustav (Cologne, 1861). Rhenish pianist and composer, trained at the Cologne Conservatory, from 1887 professor at the Stern Conservatory in Berlin and since 1899 director of the Breslauer Music School there. Has written the operas Mandanika, 1899, and Das Nest der Zaunkönige, the choral works Das begrabene Lied, Der starke Hakon, Nächtliche Rheinfahrt, Am Strande and Die gefangenen Frauen, an orchestral suite, a piano-trio, a 'cello-sonata, a flute-suite, Fantasiestücke for violin, many suites, characteristic pieces and études for piano, choruses and songs.

Lazarus, Henry (London, 1815-1895, do.). Able English clarinetist, pupil of Blizard and the older Godfrey, from 1838 Willman's associate in the concerts of the Sacred Harmonic Society in London and after 1840 his successor as the leading player of the city, besides playing often at festivals, etc., elsewhere. From 1854 he taught at the Royal Academy, retiring in 1891. G.

Lazzari, Raffaello. Italian composer of the operas Urgella, 1898, and La Contessa d'Egmont, 1902.

Lazzari, Sylvio (Bozen, 1858). Tyrolese critic and composer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from about 1885 active in Parisian journals on behalf of the Wagner-Verein and since 1894 absorbed in composition. Has written the operas Amor, 1898, L'Ensorcélé, 1903, La Lépreuse, 1912 (as Die Aussätze, 1913), and Le Sauteriot, 1918, the pantomime Lulu, 1887, the symphonic poems Ophelia and Effet de Nuit, the suite Impressions, the orchestral Rapsodie Espagnole and Marche pour une Fête Joyeuse, a Konzertstück for piano and orchestra, a Phantasie for violin and orchestra, a woodwind octet, a string-quartet, a trio, a violin-sonata and Romance, characteristic piano-pieces, choruses and duets for women's voices, and many songs. In style he belongs to the impressionists.

Le Bé, Guillaume. 16th C.

Le Beau, Luise Adolpha (Rastatt, 1850). Gifted Badense pianist and composer, pupil of Kalliwoda, Mme. Schumann, M. E. Sachs, Rheinberger and Fr. Lachner, from 1885 active in concert and teaching at Wiesbaden, from 1890 in Berlin and since 1893 at Baden-Baden, with tours throughout Germany and Austria. Has written the opera Der verzauberte Kalif, the dramatic cantatas Ruth and Hadumoth, 1894, 2 piano-concertos, a piano-fantasia with orchestra, 2 violin-sonatas, a 'cello-sonata, a piano-sonata, variations and many fine pieces, part-songs and songs. Autobiography, 1910.

Le Bègue, Nicolas Antoine (1630-1702). 17th C. G.

Lebert [Levy], Siegmund (Ludwigsburg, 1822-1884, Stuttgart). Noted Württemberger piano-pedagogue, pupil of Tomaschek, D. Weber, Tedesco and Proksch, from about 1845 teacher in Munich and in 1856 one of the founders of the Stuttgart Conservatory. Author (with Stark) of a Grosse Klavierschule, 1859 (latest editions by Max Pauer and Ruthardt, 1904), a Systematische Elementar-Singschule, 1859, and a Jugendalbum, besides a collection of classical pieces (with Faiszt, Von Bülow, etc.), an edition of Clementi's Gradus, etc. In 1873 he was made royal professor and also Ph.D. of Tübingen Univ. G.

Lebeuf, Jean (Auxerre, 1687-1760, do.). French ecclesiastic (abbé), long canon at Auxerre Cathedral. From 1740 he was a member of the Paris Académie. Author of a Traité Historique et Pratique sur le Chant Ecclésiastique, 1741, and many articles on plain-song in the Mercur de France (1725-37), besides much about music in his general historical works (1738-45).

Leblond [Gaspard Michel] (Caen, 1783-1809, Aigle). Librarian of the Bibliothèque Mazarin in Paris, member of the Académie and editor of a collection of the pamphlets and articles regarding the Gluck-Piccinni controversy (1781).

Leborne, Aimé Ambroise Simon (Brussels, 1797-1866, Paris). Noted French teacher, trained at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1820), beginning to teach there while a student and from 1836 Reicha's successor as professor of composition, besides from 1834 being librarian at the Opéra and later at the royal chapel. He issued a new edition of Catel's Harmonie. Wrote 4 operas (1827-38).

Le Borne, Fernand (Paris, 1862). Gifted French critic and composer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory. In 1901 he won the Prix Chartist. He is on the staff of Le Monde Artiste. Has written the operas Daphnis et Chloé, 1885, Hedda, 1898, Mudarra, 1899, Les Girondins, 1905, La Catalane, 1907, and Cléopâtre, 1914, the orchestral pieces Temps de Guerre, Symphonie Dramatique, Scènes de Ballet, Fête Bretonne, 4 suites and 2 overtures (Symphonique and Guerrière), a double concerto (piano, violin and orchestra), a string-quartet, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, a 'cello-sonata, violin-pieces, piano-works, the choral work Amour Trahi, a short mass, motets, etc. G.

Lebouc, Charles Joseph (Besançon, 1822-1893, Hyères). Able French 'cellist, trained at the Paris Conservatory (prizes, 1842, '44), in 1844-48 playing at the Opéra and also prominent in the Société des Concerts (secretary, 1856-60), besides founding the Soirées de Musique Classique. Wrote a piano-trio, many 'cello-pieces and a method, besides songs with 'cello.

Lebrun, Jean (Lyons, 1759-1809, Paris). French hornist, in 1786-92 playing at the Paris Opéra, from 1792 at the Berlin court-opera and after 1806 living at Paris. He had phenomenal dexterity as a player and wrote concertos that only he could perform.

Lebrun, Louis Sébastien (Paris, 1764-1829, do.). French tenor and composer, not specially successful in opera, but from 1803 a coach at the Opéra and from 1807 singer in the court-choir, in 1810 becoming its leader. Wrote about 15 operas (1780-1818), 2 masses, a Te Deum and a book of songs.

Lebrun, Ludwig August (Mannheim, 1746-1790, Berlin). Famous Badenese oboist, probably the best of his century, from 1764 playing in the Mannheim orchestra and in 1778 continuing with it at Munich, besides making extensive tours, especially after 1775, when he married Francisca Danzi (1756-1791), a gifted soprano (G). Wrote 7 oboe-concertos, trios for oboe, violin and 'cello, etc. His wife, besides being court-singer at Mannheim and Munich and joining her husband on concert-tours, wrote many sonatas for violin and piano. They visited London in 1781, Paris in 1784 and Berlin in 1789.

Lebrun, Paul Henri Joseph (Ghent, 1861). Belgian composer, trained at the Ghent Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1901, and later also a prize from the Brussels Académie), from 1890 Miry's successor as theory-professor there, besides directing the Orphéon at Cambrai and from 1895 also the Cercle Artistique at Ghent. He is officer in the Légion d'Honneur. Has written the opera La Fiancée d'Abydos, 1897, the cantata Andromeda, 1891, a symphony and other orchestral works, choruses, etc.

Lechner, Leonhard (?1550-1606). 16th C. G.

Leclair, Jean Marie (Lyons, 1697-1764, Paris). Eminent French violinist, originally a dancer and ballet-master, pupil of Somis and Chéron, from 1729-35 playing at the Paris Opéra and from 1831 for a time in the court-orchestra, then turning to teaching. Later in life he visited Holland to meet Locatelli. He died by a mysterious assassination. His public renown as player was limited, though his ability was remarkable, but his works for the violin are important both for technical difficulty and for original power. Wrote the opera Glaucus et Scylla, 1747, the ballet Apollon et Climène, 1750, 48 violin-sonatas, concerti grossi for 3 violins, viola, 'cello and organ, 6 trios, duets, etc. G.

Lecocq, Alexandre Charles (Paris, 1832-1918, do.). Famous French composer of light operas, pupil of the Paris Conservatory (two prizes), though (with Bizet) taking the Offenbach prize for an opéra bouffe in 1856, did not gain the public ear until about 1870, when Fleur de Thé and La Fille de Mme. Angot established him as a rival of Offenbach and soon his superior in piquancy of melody and cleverness of scoring. From 1894 he was a member of the Légion d'Honneur. His stage-works include

Le Docteur Miracle, 1857 (with Bizet), Huis-Clos, 1859, Le Baiser à la Porte, 1864, Liliane et Valentin, 1864, Les Ondines de Champagne, 1865, Le Myosotis, 1866, Le Cabaret de Ramponneau, 1867, L'Amour et son Carquois, 1868, Fleur de Thé, 1868, Les Jumeaux de Bergame, 1868, Le Carnaval d'un Merle, 1868, Gandolfo, 1869, Deux Portières pour un Cordon, 1869 (with Hervé and Legouix), Le Rajah de Mysore, 1870, Le Beau Dunois, 1870, Le Testament de M. de Crac, 1871, Le Barbier de Trouville, 1872, Sauvons la Caisse, 1872, Les Cent Vierges, 1872, La Fille de Mme. Angot, 1872, Giroflé-Girofla, 1874, Les Près St. Gervais, 1875, Le Pompon, 1875, La Petite Mariée (Graziella), 1876, Kosiki, 1877, La Marjolaine, 1877, Le Petit Duc, 1878, Camargo, 1879, La Petite Demoiselle, 1879, Le Grand Casimir, 1880, Le Jolie Persane, 1880, Le Marquis de Windsor, 1881, Janot, 1881, La Roussotte, 1882, Le Jour et la Nuit, 1882, Le Cœur et la Main, 1882, La Princesse des Canaries, 1883, L'Oiseau Bleu, 1884, La Vie Mondaine, 1885, Plutus, 1886, Les Grenadiers de Mont-Cornette, 1887, Ati Baba, 1887, La Volière, 1888, L'Égyptienne, 1890, Nos Bons Chasseurs, 1894, Ninette, 1896, Ruse d'Amour, 1898, La Belle au Bois Dormant, 1900, Yetta, 1903, Rose-Mousse, 1904, La Salustiste, 1905, Le Trahison de Pan, 1910, with a few others not given.

Also the ballets Barbe Bleue, Le Cygne and Les Fantoccini (pantomime).

Also sacred and secular songs, including La Chappelle au Couvent, 1865, and various piano-pieces.

He prepared a piano-score of Rameau's Castor et Pollux (1877). G.

Le Couppey, Félix (Paris, 1811-1887, do.). French piano-teacher, pupil of Dourlen, from 1828 assistant at the Paris Conservatory, from 1837 professor and in 1843 Dourlen's successor in harmony and in 1848 Herz' substitute in piano. Author of several instruction-books. G.

Ledebur, Karl, Freiherr von (n. Bielefeld, 1806-1872, Stolp). Westphalian cavalry-officer (resigned in 1852), till 1862 living at Berlin. Author of a careful Tonkünstlerlexikon Berlins, 1860-61, and a sketch of the court-music under Frederick the Great (1878).

Lederer, Viktor (Prague, 1881). Bohemian violinist, critic and historical student, educated at Prague University (law degree, 1904), pupil of Sevcík, diverted from a concert-career by ill-health, then critic for the Prague Tageblatt, from 1904 for the Leipzig Nachrichten and Signale, and since 1907 editor of the Musik-literarische Blätter at Vienna. Author of the striking study Ueber Heimat u. Ursprung d. mehrstimmigen Tonkunst, vol. i. 1906 (emphasizing the influence of Celtic elements in musical development from the 15th century).

Leduc, Alphonse (Nantes, 1804-1868, Paris). French publisher (see below) and popular composer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory and of Rhein, becoming expert on the flute, bassoon and guitar, from about 1830 active in Paris. Wrote about 1300 dances, pieces, études, etc., for piano or other instruments, and many songs, besides a piano-method.

Leduc, Simon (Paris, 1748-1777, do.). French violinist, pupil of Gaviniés, noted as an early follower of the style of Stamitz. Wrote symphonies, violin-concertos and sonatas. His brother Pierre (1755-1816), was also a violinist, from about 1775 music-publisher at Paris, succeeding La Chevardière and being followed by his son-in-law G. J. Sieber (1775-1834).

Leduc. A publishing-firm in Paris, founded in 1841 by Alphonse Leduc (see above), who in 1868 was followed by his son Alphonse (d. 1892), then by his widow (née Ravina) and in 1904 by Émile Leduc and P. Bertrand. Besides numerous educational works, they have issued the important collection Les Maîtres Musiciens de la Renaissance Française (edited by Expert), many works by the younger French and Russian composers, in 1860-95 the periodical L'Art Musical (finally merged in the Guide Musical) and L'Orgue Moderne (edited by Guilmant and Widor). G.

Lee, Ernest Markham (Cambridge, 1874). English organist and pianist, educated at Cambridge University (Emmanuel College) and serving more or less as organist there, in 1896-1911 organist at Woodford Green (suburb of London), where he instituted chamber-concerts, and then professor at the Guildhall School, London. Mus.D. of Cambridge Univ. Author of lives of Tchaikovsky (1904), Grieg (1908) and Brahms (1916), The Story of Opera, 1909, program-books for the London Symphony Orchestra, analyses of Puccini's operas (in Nights at the Opera), etc. Has also written church-music and songs.

Lee, Louis (Hamburg, 1819-1896, Lübeck). Fine North German 'cellist, pupil of Prell, first appearing at twelve, from about 1840 at the Hamburg Opera, then some years in Paris, returning to Hamburg and establishing chamber-concerts (first with Hafner, then with Böie), besides playing in the Philharmonic and teaching at the Conservatory (till 1884). Wrote symphonies (one given by Spohr), overtures, 2 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, a sonata and sonatina for 'cello, also do. for violin, other 'cello- and piano-pieces, music for Schiller's Jungfrau von Orleans and Wilhelm Tell, etc. His elder brother Sebastian (1805-1887), also a fine 'cellist, in 1837-68 was soloist at the Paris Opéra, then returning to Hamburg. He wrote 'cello-pieces and a method.

Lefébure-Wély, Louis James Alfred (Paris, 1817-1869, do.). Distinguished French organist, pupil of his father and the Paris Conservatory, besides lessons from Adam and L. Séjan, organist at St.-Roch from 1831, in 1847-58 at the Madeleine and from 1863 Séjan's successor at St.-Sulpice. He was accomplished as improvisator and in registration. He devoted much time to developing the latent possibilities of the perfected harmonium. Wrote the opera Les Recruteurs, 1861, the cantata Après la Victoire, 1863, 3 masses (one with orchestra), other church-music, brilliant organ-offertoires, 3 symphonies, a string-quintet, a string-quartet, much salon-music and many études for piano, harmonium-pieces, etc. From 1850 he was a member of the Légion d'Honneur. G.

Lefebvre, Charles Édouard (Paris, 1843-1917, Aix-les-Bains). Gifted French composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1870), after residence at Rome and a tour in the Orient, from 1873 in Paris, where in 1895 he followed Godard as professor of ensemble at the Conservatory. He took the Prix Chartier in 1884 and '91. Wrote the operas Le Trésor, 1883, Zaire, 1887, Djelma, 1894, Singalla and Lucrèce (not given), the legend Melka, the choral works Le Jugement de Dieu, 1870, Judith, 1879, Eloa, La Messe du Fantôme, Dalila, Ste. Cécile, etc., the overture Toggenburg, 1904, an orchestral serenade, quartets, trios, suites, etc., for various instrumental combinations. G.

Lefèvre, Jean Xavier (Lausanne, 1763-1829, Paris). Noted Swiss clarinettist, pupil of Yost, appearing from 1787 in Paris, in 1791-1817 in the orchestra at the Opéra, in 1795-1825 professor at the new Conservatory, and from 1807 also in the court-orchestra. He added the sixth key to his instrument. Wrote 6 concertos, sonatas, trios, duets and other ensemble-pieces, besides the clarinet-method of the Conservatory (1802).

Leffler-Burckard, Martha (Berlin, ?1870). Prussian operatic soprano, pupil of Anna von Meichsner, from 1890 appearing at Strasburg, Breslau and Cologne, from 1894 at Bremen, from 1898 at Weimar, in 1900-02 at Wiesbaden, then at various places as guest (Bayreuth in 1906 and the Metropolitan, New York, in 1908), and from 1912 at the Berlin Opera. At first essaying mostly coloratura parts, she rapidly advanced to the most exacting Wagnerian rôles. She holds various decorations and honors.

Leflem, Paul (Lézardieux, 1881). French composer of Breton descent, pupil of the Paris Conservatory and the Schola Cantorum, writing a symphony (1908), the 'trypitchon' Pour les Morts, Danse and Invocation, the symphonic sketch La Voix du Large, 1912, a piano-quintet, a violin-sonata, a fantasia for piano and orchestra, the singspiel Aucassin et Nicolette, choruses, songs and piano-pieces.

Leginska [Leggins], Ethel (Hull, 1883). Brilliant English pianist, pupil of the Hoch Conservatory, Frankfurt, and of Leschetizky, from about 1905 touring throughout Europe and from 1913 in the United States. Her first appearance in public was in 1892.

Legoux, Isidore Édouard (Paris, 1834). French composer of 4 operas (1863-74) and several operettas (from 1866).

Legrenzi, Giovanni (?1625-1690). 17th C. G.

Lehár, Franz (Komorn, 1870). Famous Hungarian composer, pupil of his father, the Prague Conservatory and Fibich, at first (1888-89) violinist in the Elberfeld orchestra, then bandmaster in the Austrian army and in 1902 for a time conductor at the Theater an der Wien at Vienna. Here the success of his first light opera led him to devote himself to that form, with steadily increasing renown, especially after the production of Die lustige Witwe in 1905. He has marked gifts both of invention and of workmanship. His works include Opera—Kukúška, 1896 (revised as Tatjana in 1905). Operettas—Wiener Frauen, 1902 (or Der Klavierstimmer, also revised as Der Schlüssel zum Paradies in 1906), Der Rastelbinder, 1902, Die Juxheirat, 1904, Der Göttergatte, 1904, Die lustige Witwe, 1905, Peter und Paul reisen ins Schlaraffenland, 1906, Mitislav, der Moderne, 1907, Edelweiss und Rosenstock, 1907, Der Mann mit den drei Frauen, 1908, Das Fürstentkind, 1909, Der Graf von Luxemburg, 1909, Zigeunerliebe, 1910, Eva, 1911, Die ideale Gattin, 1913, Endlich allein, 1914, Der Sterngucker, 1917, Wo die Lerche singt, 1918, Die blaue Mazur, 1920, Frühling, 1922.

Orchestral works—the symphonic poems Il Guando and Fieber (1916); the overtures Huldigung and Eine Vision; Ein Märchen aus 1001 Nacht; Ungarische Fantasie (violin and small orchestra); about 100 marches and dances.

Various songs.

Le Heurteur, Guillaume. 16th C. G.

Lehmann, George (New York, 1865). American violinist, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and of Joachim (Helbig prize, 1883), in 1884-93 touring in America or Europe (1889-92) as soloist and as head of his own Quartet, besides in 1886-89 leading an orchestra in Cleveland, from 1893 in New York as soloist, teacher and critic for Musical America, from 1907 in Berlin and since 1916 head of his own violin-school in New York. Author of True Principles of the Art of Violin-Playing, 1899, The Violinist's Lexicon, 1917, besides translating De Bériot's method. A.

Lehmann, Lilli (Würzburg, 1848). Distinguished Bavarian operatic soprano, pupil of her mother (singer and harpist, from 1853 at Prague), from 1865 appearing at Prague, Danzig, Leipzig and (from 1870) Berlin, making her first reputation as a coloratura-singer. In 1875 she studied under Wagner and in 1876 sang at the premières of the Ring dramas at Bayreuth. Meanwhile she was engaged at the Berlin Opera on a life-contract and was made royal 'Kammersänger', but with leave at intervals for appearances elsewhere (London from 1880, New York in 1885-89 and '91-92). In 1889-91 she was debarred from German stages because she had overstayed her leave, but her status was restored at the instance of the Emperor. During this interval she became famous in song-recitals. Later she was frequently heard on all the leading European stages (in 1896 she sang the three Brünnhilde rôles at Bayreuth), continuing her active operatic career till 1910. Since 1901 she has been prominent in the annual Mozart Festivals at Salzburg and since 1905 their chief manager. In 1888 she married the tenor Paul Kalisch at New York and they have often appeared together. Her repertory includes about 175 rôles in about 115 operas old and new, serious and comic, all important oratorios and choral works, and hundreds of lieder. In all these not only her supreme technical facility, but her exalted intelligence and interpretative power have been so displayed as to set her among the finest dramatic artists. In recent years, also, she has been a fruitful teacher of a long line of eminent pupils. Author of Meine Gesangskunst, 1902, Studie zu Fidelio, 1904, and the autobiography Mein Weg, 1913, besides a translation of Maurel's Dix Ans de Carrière (1899). Sketch by Andro, 1907, and see Wagenmann, Lilli Lehmanns Geheimniss d. Stimmabänder, 1905. G, A.

Lehmann, Liza [Elizabetha Nina Mary Fredrika] (London, 1862-1918, do.). Eminent English soprano and composer, pupil of her mother, Randegger, Raunkilde, Freudenberg and MacCunn, in 1885-94 singing with much success throughout England and in Germany, then retiring from concert-work because of her marriage to the painter and composer Herbert Bedford. In 1910 she made a very successful tour in the United States. From 1913 she was professor at the Guildhall School, London. Wrote the operas Sergeant Brue, 1904, The Vicar of Wakefield, 1906, and Everyman, 1915, the cantatas Once upon a Time and The Golden Threshold, the choral work Young Lochinvar, the scena Endymion for soprano, the striking song-cycles In a Persian Garden (from Omar Khayyâm) for solo-quartet, The Daisy-Chain (child-songs), More Daisies, Frairie-Pictures, In Memoriam (from Tennyson), Nonsense-Songs (from Alice in Wonderland), etc., various choruses and single songs, a Romantic Suite for violin, and piano-pieces. G.

Lehmann, Marie (Würzburg, 1851), sister of Lilli above, and also a fine operatic soprano, making her début in 1867 at Leipzig, in 1876 assisting at the Ring premières at Bayreuth and in 1881-1902 engaged at the Vienna Opera, then becoming a teacher at Berlin. G.

Lehmann, Robert (Schweidnitz, 1841). Silesian 'cellist, pupil of König and Oswald, since 1875 settled in Stettin as organist at the Johanniskirche and the Synagogue, leader of the Liedertafel and teacher at the Polytechnic School. Has written orchestral waltzes (Briefe aus Wien), pieces for 'cello and other instruments, church-music and Erinnerungen eines Künstlers, 1895.

Leibrock, Joseph Adolf (Brunswick, 1808-1886, Berlin). North German 'cellist, pupil of Maucourt and Gödeke, from about 1825 playing in the Brunswick court-orchestra (in 1830 opera-conductor at Ratisbon). Wrote music for Schiller's Räuber, melodramas, overtures, quartets, 'cello-arrangements, etc., a history of the Brunswick court-music (1865-66, in the Braunschweiger Magazin) and an Akkordenlehre, 1875.

Leichtentritt, Hugo (Pleschen, 1874). Prussian composer and musicologist, educated at Harvard University (Cambridge, Mass.), the Berlin Hochschule und University (Ph.D. 1901), from about 1905 teacher for some time at the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory, Berlin, and then devoting himself to writing. Author of lives of Chopin (1905, 2d. ed. 1913), Lendvai (1912) and Busoni (1916), Gesch. d. Musik, 1905, Gesch. d. Motette, 1908, Musikal. Formenlehre, 1911 (2d. ed. 1920), a selection from Beethoven's letters (1912), analyses of Chopin's piano-works (1920), new editions of Bussler's works on harmony, counterpoint and form, additions to Ambros' Geschichte, vol. iv (especially on the rise of the monodic style), a collection of Deutsche Hausmusik aus vier Jahrh. 1906, various contributions to the Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst (works by Praetorius and Hammerschmidt), the Edition Peters (Monteverdi's madrigals), and other scholarly series, besides many articles in periodicals. Has also written a symphony, the symphonic poem Hero und Leander, a violin-concerto, a string-quintet, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, a 'cello-suite, a viola-sonata, Ein Sommertag (women's voices and small orchestra), about 50 songs (texts from old German, Goethe, Hölderlin, Dehmel, etc.), and the dance-play Der Sizilianer (1920).

Leighton, William. 17th C. G.

Leite, Antonio da Silva (Oporto, 1759-1833, do.). Portuguese composer, from 1814 choir-master at Oporto Cathedral. Wrote 2 operas (1807), much church-music (including a Hymn for the coronation of John VI and a careful resetting of the Burial Service), 6 sonatas for guitar, violin and trumpets, a guitar-method, songs and duets.

Leitert, Johann Georg (Dresden, 1852-1901, n. do.). Fine Saxon pianist, pupil of Kragen, Reichel, Rischbieter and Liszt, making his début in 1865 at Dresden and gradually extending his tours throughout Europe. In 1879-81 he taught at the Horák School in Vienna. Besides characteristic piano-pieces he wrote many transcriptions, especially from Wagner.

Leitzmann, Albert (Magdeburg, 1867). Lecturer on literature at Jena University, among his many works being selections from the letters of Beethoven (1909, 2d. ed. 1912) and Mozart (1910), studies of their personality (1914, '18) and contemporary notices on Beethoven (1921, 2 vols.).

Le Jeune, Claudin (1528-1602). 16th C. G.

Lekeu, Guillaume (n. Verviers, 1870-1894, Angers). Gifted, but short-lived, French composer, pupil of Vallin, Franck and d'Indy. Wrote 2 Études Symphoniques (no. 1, Chant de Triomphale Délivrance, no. 2, Sur Hamlet and Sur Faust), a Fantaisie Symphonique (on two Angevin songs), an Adagio for quartet and orchestra, a piano-quartet (completed by d'Indy), a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, a 'cello-sonata (completed by d'Indy), a piano-sonata and a few pieces, 6 songs, the cantata Andromède (2d Prix de Rome, Brussels, 1891) and sketches for the comedy Barberine. Memoirs by Tissier, 1906, and Séré, 1911 (in Musiciens d'Aujourd'hui). G.

Lem, Peder Mandrup (Copenhagen, 1754-1826, do.). The first important Danish violinist, pupil of the elder Joh. Hartmann, with study abroad, from 1783 playing in the court-orchestra at Copenhagen and in 1793 following Hartmann as concertmaster.

Le Maistre, Matheus (? -1577). 16th C. G.

Lemare, Edwin Henry (Ventnor, Isle of Wight, 1865). Eminent English organist, trained at the Royal Academy, London (Goss Scholar), from 1882 holding positions in various churches, notably at Sheffield from 1886, at Holy Trinity (Sloane St., London) from 1892 and at St. Margaret's (Westminster) from 1897. From 1884 he became increasingly famous as recitalist, displaying such versatile ability in both pure organ music and orchestral transcriptions as to be considered the leading English player. In 1900 he made a tour in America with much success and in 1902-05 was city-organist at Pittsburgh. For over ten years thereafter he toured throughout the world (twice visiting Australia). In 1917 he became city-organist at San Francisco, and since 1920 has held a similar position at Portland, Me. Has written 2 organ-symphonies, overtures, 2 concert-fantasias, 2 marches, many lesser pieces and about 50 transcriptions of importance, besides an Easter cantata, a Communion Service, canticles and anthems. G. A.

Lemba, Arthur (Reval, 1885). Russian (Esthonian) pianist and composer, trained at the Petrograd Conservatory (gold medal and Rubinstein prize), where he taught from 1910, in 1920 removing to Reval and in 1921-22 teaching at Helsingfors. Has written an opera, the cantata Queen of the Sea, a symphony, concertos for violin (Poème d'Amour) and for piano, piano-fugues and songs.

Lemlin, Laurentius. 16th C. G.

Lemmens, Nicolas Jacques (n. Diest, 1823–1881, n. Mechlin). Eminent Belgian organist, pupil of his father, Van der Broeck, the Brussels Conservatory (several prizes), and of Hesse (with whom he studied on a stipend from the government), from 1849 professor at the Brussels Conservatory, but after 1857, when he married the English soprano Helene Sherrington, living more or less in England. In 1879 he started a school for organists and choirmasters at Mechlin. He was the leading Belgian player of his time, besides being an able teacher. Wrote a large amount of excellent organ-music (much published posthumously), a monumental École d'Orgue, masses, motets and other choir-music, 2 symphonies and piano-pieces. His wife (1834–1906), a pupil of Verhulst and the Brussels Conservatory, made her début in concert in 1856 and in opera in 1860, becoming a favorite in England and later in Italy. From 1891 she taught at the Royal Academy, London. G.

Lemoine, Henri (Paris, 1786–1854, do.). French pianist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory and of Reicha, from about 1810 well-known as a teacher and after 1817 taking up the publishing business founded by his father. Wrote sonatas, variations, dances, etc., and methods for piano, singing and harmony.

Lemoine. A Paris music-publishing firm, established in 1793 by Antoine Marcel Lemoine (1763–1817), continued and much developed by his son Henri (see above) and later by his grandson Achille Philibert Lemoine (1813–1895), who enlarged the facilities for engraving and printing, besides in 1885 starting a Brussels branch. The business is carried on by further members of the family. G.

Lemoyne [Moyne], Jean Baptiste (n. Bergerac, 1751–1796, Paris). French composer, originally conductor in provincial theaters, then pupil of Graun, Schulz and Kirnberger (becoming for a time assistant court-director at Berlin), from 1775 in Warsaw and later active in Paris, at first posing as a pupil of Gluck and then joining the Italian party. Wrote over 15 operas (1769–95), including Nephté, 1789.

Lenaerts, Constant (Antwerp, 1852). Belgian conductor, pupil of Benoît, from 1870 director at the Flemish Opera, Antwerp, later of the Popular Concerts, the Tonkunstenaarbond and (from 1914) of the Société Royale de l'Harmonie. He is also professor at the Conservatory. Wrote the cantata De Triomf van't Licht, 1890.

Lendvai, Erwin (Pest, 1882). Hungarian composer, pupil of Koessler and Puccini, since 1909 active in Germany, in 1913–14 teaching theory at the Jaques-Dalcroze school at Hellerau and then professor of dramatic composition at the Hoch Conservatory, Frankfurt, and since 1919 at the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory, Berlin. Has written a symphony (1909), a Festmarsch for orchestra or band, the orchestral scherzo Masken, 3 string-trios, a 'cello-suite, organ- and piano-pieces, the opera Elga, 1916, the choral suite Nippon (women's voices), Japanese and other songs, etc. Sketch by Leichtentritt, 1912.

Lenepveu, Charles Ferdinand (Rouen, 1840–1910, Paris). French composer, trained mainly at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1865), and under Chauvet, from 1880 harmony-teacher at the Conservatory and after 1892 Guiraud's successor as professor of composition. In 1887 he was admitted to the Légion d'Honneur and in 1896 to the Académie. Wrote the operas Le Florentin, 1874 (prize, 1869), and Valléda, 1882, the lyric drama Jeanne d'Arc, 1886, the cantata Renaud dans les Jardins d'Armide, 1866, Hymne Funèbre et Triomphale, 1889, Ode à Jeanne d'Arc, 1892, 2 Requiems (1871, '93), a nuptial mass, motets, the scena Iphigénie, a string-quartet and piano-pieces, besides 100 Leçons in harmony (1898). Sketch by Saint-Arroman, 1898. G. A.

Langely [von Bagota], Ernst (Vienna, 1893–1914, Berlin). Phenomenal Austrian pianist, pupil of his mother and Szendy, at eleven appearing in Berlin and Vienna and at sixteen in London, displaying remarkable maturity. But his career was cut short by consumption.

Lenormand, René (Elbeuf, 1846). Gifted French composer, pupil of his mother and Damecke, from 1871 devoting himself to smaller forms with notable skill and poetic grace. For years he has been the moving spirit of the society Le Lied en Tous Pays (for the cultivation of the songs of all nations). Has written about 100 remarkable songs, the lyric drama Le Cachet Rouge, the choral work Souvenirs du Valais (for soprano and men's chorus, with English horn or clarinet), the 'mimodrame' La Nuit de Juillet, the symphonic picture Le Voyage Imaginaire (after Loti), 2 orchestral Esquisses on Malay themes, a piano-concerto (1903), Le Lahn de Mabel for violin and orchestra (on an Arabic theme), other violin-pieces, a 'cello-sonata, a quartet-suite, a piano-trio, various piano-pieces (some for 4 hands), etc., besides an Étude sur l'Harmonie Moderne, 1912.

Lent, Ernest (Brandenburg, 1856). Prussian 'cellist, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1881–82 teacher at the Königsberg Conservatory, then touring in Denmark and Sweden, in 1883–84 in the orchestra of the Metropolitan, New York, and then settled in Washington. Has written a symphony, an overture, a Festival March, several pieces for strings, the quartet-suite Scènes Champêtres, a piano-trio, a 'cello-sonata, pieces for 'cello-quartet, 'cello- and violin-solos, besides violin-exercises.

Lenton, John. 17th C. G.

Lentz, Heinrich Gerhard (Cologne, ?1764–1839, Warsaw). Rhenish pianist, pupil of his father, from 1785 appearing in Paris as virtuoso at the Concerts Spirituels, from 1792 at Salomon's concerts in London, in 1795 at Hamburg, in 1795–1802 in service to Prince Louis Ferdinand and from about 1805 at Warsaw, where (till 1831) he taught in the Music School. Wrote symphonies, a piano-concerto (with small orchestra), trio-sonatas, piano-sonatas and songs.

Lenz, Wilhelm von (1808–1883, Petrograd). German-Russian jurist, state councillor at Petrograd. Author of Beethoven et ses Trois Styles, 2 vols. 1852–65, Beethoven, eine Kunststudie, 5 vols. 1855–60 (vol. i. also separate and further revised by Kalischer, 1908), Die grossen Pianoforte-Virtuosen unserer Zeit, 1872 (Liszt, Chopin, Tausig, Henselt and others), and Aus d. Tagebücher eines Livländers. He was industrious in gathering facts and enthusiastic in presenting them. G.

Leo, Leonardo (n. Brindisi, 1694–1744, Naples). Eminent Italian maestro and composer, trained by Provenzale and Fago, from 1715 teacher at the Conservatorio della Pietà, Naples, from 1716 also organist at the court-chapel, from 1717 choirmaster at the nunnery church of S. Maria della Solitaria, in 1725 succeeded Scarlatti as teacher at the Conservatorio di S. Onofrio and in 1741 followed Fago at the Pietà. He is counted as one of the leaders (with Scarlatti and Durante) in establishing the Neapolitan school that remained influential throughout most of the 18th century. He was the first of that school to gain freedom in the modern harmonic counterpoint. His greatest success as composer was in his church-music and his comic operas. Wrote about 70 operas, serenatas and other dramatic works (from 1714), including Sofonisba, 1718, Bajazette, 1722 (adapted from Gasparini), La Mpeca Scoperta, 1723, La Semmeglianza, 1726, Catone in Utica, 1729, Demofonte, 1735 (usually called his best serious opera), Siface, 1737, Ciro Riconosciuto, 1737, L'Olimpiade, 1737, Amor vuol Sofferenza, 1739 (his brightest comic opera), etc., about 8 oratorios, including La Morte di Abele, 1732, and S. Elena al Calvario, 1732, about 6 masses, with parts of others (mostly a 5), numerous motets, Psalms, etc., including a famous Miserere (1739) and more than one fine Dixit Dominus, a concerto for 4 violins and bass, 6 concertos for 2 violins, 'cello and bass, clavier-toccatas and variations. Memoir by G. Leo, 1905 (with list of works). G.

Léonard, Hubert (n. Liège, 1819–1890, Paris). Eminent Belgian violinist, trained at the Paris Conservatory, from 1839 playing in the orchestras of the Opéra-Comique and the Opéra, from 1844 establishing his reputation by extended tours in Germany and elsewhere, in 1848–67 De Bériot's associate and successor as teacher at the Brussels Conservatory, and then living in Paris, principally occupied with teaching. Wrote 5 violin-concertos, 6 concert-pieces with piano, a serenade for 3 violins, a concert-piece for 2 do., various fantasias, etc., many études and other instructive pieces, a method, a collection of studies in double-stopping and Le Violon au point de vue de l'Orchestration. His wife, née Antonia Sitcher de Mendi (1831–1914), a niece of Manuel Garcia, was a noted concert-singer and vocal teacher in Paris. G.

Leoncavallo, Ruggiero (Naples, 1858–1919, n. Florence). Eminent Italian pianist and composer, pupil of the Naples Conservatory, appearing first as pianist (from 1874), but aspiring also to become a dramatic composer. His first opera was ready for production at Bologna in 1878, but his manager ran away, leaving him without resources. To support himself, he then turned back to the piano, teaching and playing in cafés and similar resorts, and for years wandered through many countries, both in the Orient and in northern Europe. During this period, under the influence of Wagner's works and theories, he was led to project a great historic trilogy, Crepusculum, treating characters from the Italian Renaissance (the Medici, Savonarola, Caesar Borgia), of which, with the support of the publisher Ricordi, he completed the first drama in 1888. Finally quarreling with Ricordi over the delays in getting this produced, he wrote Pagliacci for the rival publisher Sonzogno and its brilliant success in 1892, coupled with the failure of I Medici in 1893, led to his giving up the trilogy and devoting himself mainly to the 'veristic' style. He was unable, however, to equal his initial success. In 1906 and 1913 he visited America, and in 1912–13 was in London. His total works include the operas Tommaso Chatterton, 1896 (1878), I Medici, 1893 (1888), I Pagliacci, 1892, La Bohème, 1897 (handicapped by coming just after Puccini's opera on the same theme), Zaza, 1900, Der Roland, 1904 (prepared for the Emperor Wilhelm II and based on Alexis' romance Der Roland von Berlin), Le Jeunesse de Figaro, 1906 (given only in America), Maia, 1910, Malbruk, 1910, La Reginetta della Rose, 1912, Gli Zingari, 1912, Ave Maria, 1916, and Gioffredo Mameli, 1916, the operetta Are you there?, 1913 (London), the ballet La Vita d'una Marionetta, the symphonic poem Serafita (after Balzac), a Hymne France-Italie, 1916, and some songs. He wrote the texts for all his dramas as far as Der Roland, as well as for Machado's Mario Wetter (1898). G. A.

Leonhard, Julius Emil (Lauban, 1810–1883, Dresden). Silesian pianist, from 1852 teaching at the Munich Conservatory and from 1859 at that in Dresden. Wrote the oratorio Johannes der Täufer, 3 cantatas, a symphony, an overture for Oehlenschläger's Axel und Walpurg, a piano-quartet, 3 trios, 2 violin-sonatas, a piano-sonata, etc.

Leonhardt, Karl (Coburg, 1886). Saxon conductor, pupil of Langert and the Leipzig Conservatory and University, from 1907 soloist-trainer at the Hanover Opera, becoming 1912 conductor, in 1920–22 chief conductor at the Weimar Opera and since 1922 general director at the Stuttgart Opera. In 1909, '11 and '12 he was also assistant at Bayreuth. In 1921 he was entitled professor.

Leoni, Carlo. Italian composer of the opera Urbano, 1896, and the operetta Per un Bacio, 1894.

Leoni, Franco (Milan, 1864). Italian composer, pupil of the Milan Conservatory, from 1892 active in London and latterly living at Bergamo. Has written the operas Raggio di Luna, 1888, Rip van Winkle, 1897, Ib and Little Christine, 1901, and L'Oracolo, 1905, the cantatas Sardanapalus, 1896, The Gate of Life, 1898, and Golgotha, 1911, chamber-music and songs.

Leoni, Leone. 16th C. G.

Leonova, Darya Mikailovna (n. Tver, 1825–1896, Petrograd). Able Russian operatic contralto, pupil of Glinka, appearing from 1843 in many important Russian works. In 1874 she made a successful tour around the world.

Leopold I (1640–1705). 17th C.

Leopolda, Martin (1540–1589). 16th C.

Lerner, Tina (Odessa, 1890). Gifted Russian pianist, pupil of Rud. Helm and the Moscow Conservatory, from 1905 appearing in Moscow and then throughout Europe, touring also in America in 1908–10 and since 1912. In 1909–15 she was wife of the pianist Louis Bachner and since 1915 of the violinist Vladimir Shavitch. A.

Leroux, Xavier Henri Napoléon (Velletri, n. Rome, 1863–1919, Paris). Able French (Italian) composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (many prizes, including the Prix de Rome, 1885) and from 1896 professor there. Wrote the operas Évangéline, 1895, Astarté, 1901, La Reine Fiammetta, 1903, Vénus et Adonis, 1905 (developed from a lyric scene, 1897), William Ratcliff, 1906, Théodora, 1906, Le Chemineau, 1907, Le Carillonneur, 1912, La Fille de Figaro, 1914, Les Cadeaux de Noël, 1916, and 1814, 1918, incidental music for Sardou and Moreau's Cléopâtre (1890), for adaptations of Æschylus' Persians and Aristophanes' Plutus (both 1896), for La Montagne Enchantée (1897, with Messager), for Sardou's Sorcière (1903) and for Richépin's Xantho (1910), the cantata Endymion, 1885, the overture Harald, a mass, motets, songs and piano-pieces. G, A.

Le Roy, Adrien. 16th C. G.

Lert, Ernst Josef Maria (n. Vienna, 1883). Austrian dramatic expert, educated at Vienna University (Ph.D.), with extensive musical study, in part under Mahler, in 1908–09 associated with the Hofburg-Theater in Vienna, in 1909–10 with the Breslau Stadttheater, in 1910–12 manager of the Freiburg (Baden) Stadttheater, from 1912 Lohse's successor as manager of the Leipzig Opera, in 1919 director of the Basel Stadttheater and from 1920 of the Frankfurt Opera. Author of numerous musical articles, Mozart auf d. Theater, 1918, and a life of Lohse (1919), besides a life of Weber and Grundbegriffe d. Bühnenkunde in preparation. Has also written the drama Der Mönch von St. Gallen, songs, etc.

Léry, Fernand de (Paris, 1859). French leader and composer, in 1896 founder of Le Timbalier (amateur society) and since 1905 conductor of the Nouveaux Concerts Populaires, producing many recent works. Has written several overtures, violin-pieces, 3 masses and other church-music, choruses for women's voices and songs.

Lesage de Richée, Philipp Franz. 17th C.

Leschen, Christoph Friedrich (Vienna, 1816–1899, do.). Austrian composer of the opera Der geraubte Kuss, 1892, symphonies, overtures, church-music and songs. He was for a long time in the revenue service.

Leschetizky, Theodor (n. Lemberg, 1830–1915, Dresden). Eminent Polish-Galician pianist and teacher, pupil of his father, Czerny and Sechter, from 1845 becoming noted as a brilliant player, from 1852 active at Petrograd, where he was one of the founders of the Russian Musical Society and also professor in the Conservatory, besides sometimes taking Rubinstein's place as conductor at the court-concerts. In 1878 he resumed touring for a time and then settled in Vienna, where he gradually gained a foremost international position as teacher (especially after Paderewski's success in 1887), forming a long list of distinguished pupils. He was four times married—to the singer Anna Friedburg, in 1880–91 to the pianist Annette Essipov, in 1894–1908 to Dominirka Benislavskaya and in 1908 to Marie Pozborska (divorced from all but the last). Wrote the opera Die erste Falte, 1867, and many brilliant and effective pieces for the piano, including several études. Sketches by Countess Potocka, 1903, and A. Hullah, 1906, besides works on his method by Marie von Unschuld, 1901, Malwine Brée, 1902, and Marie Prentner, 1903. G, A.

Leslie, Henry David (London, 1822–1896, n. Oswestry). Able English choral conductor and composer, pupil of Chas. Lucas, from about 1840 'cellist at concerts of the Sacred Harmonic Society and elsewhere, from 1847 secretary of the Amateur Musical Society and in 1855–61 its conductor, from 1855 conductor of the Leslie Choir, which he made famous, at first for a cappella madrigal-singing, later for more extensive works (first prize at the Paris competition in 1878), continuing till 1880 (when it was temporarily disbanded, but reformed in 1882 under Randegger) and resuming its leadership in 1885–87. From 1864 for a time he was principal of the short-lived National College of Music. He was also conductor of various choral societies outside of London. Wrote the oratorios Immanuel, 1853, and Judith, 1858, the operettas Romance, 1857, and Ida, 1865, the cantatas Holyrood, 1860, The Daughter of the Isles, 1861, and The First Christian Morn, 1880, various anthems and canticles, many choruses and part-songs, a symphony (1847), the overture The Templar, 1852, chamber-music, piano-pieces and songs. G.

Lessel, Franz (n. Pulawi, ?1780–1838, Piotrkow). Polish composer, a favorite pupil of Haydn and a devoted friend in his last years, from 1810 in the service of the Czartoryski family (till the Revolution of 1830) and finally head of the Piotrkow Gymnasium. Wrote symphonies, a piano-concerto, chamber-music, pianosonatas and fantasias, church-music, etc. G.

Lessmann, W. J. Otto (n. Berlin, 1844-1918, Jena). Prussian piano-teacher and critic, pupil of A. G. Ritter, Von Bülow, Kiel, Teschner and Liszt, from 1864 teaching in Count Brühl's family and in Berlin music-schools, from 1872 at the Kaiserin Augusta-Stiftung at Potsdam and later also at the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory, besides in 1881-1907 being owner and editor of the Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung. In 1917 he retired to Weimar. Author of a life of Liszt (1881) and editor of the 2d ed. of Weitzmann's Gesch. d. Klavierspiels (1879).

Lester, Thomas William (Leicester, 1889). English organist and composer, brought up in Keokuk, Ia., pupil of Brune and Middelschulte, since 1913 organist at the Second Church of Christ (Scientist) in Chicago and active as accompanist, besides in 1911-14 serving as critic for the Record-Herald. Has written a string-quartet, suites for violin, for 'cello, for organ and for piano, a Rhapsody for violin, organ-pieces, 2 operettas, several cantatas, choruses and songs. A.

Lesueur, Jean François (n. Abbeville, 1760-1837, Paris). Eminent French composer, almost wholly self-taught except while choirboy at Amiens Cathedral, in 1779 for a few months choirmaster at Séz Cathedral, in 1779-81 assistant at Sts.-Innocents in Paris, in 1781-83 at Dijon Cathedral, in 1783-84 first at Le Mans and then at Tours Cathedrals, in 1784-86 at Sts.-Innocents again and in 1786-87 at Notre-Dame in Paris, where he introduced a full orchestra and showy performances. This innovation was violently assailed and before long he turned to dramatic music. In 1795 he became one of the inspectors at the new Conservatory and joined with others in drafting the Principes Élémentaires and the Solfèges there used, but in 1802 quarreled with Catel and Sarrette and was dismissed. In 1804, however, Napoleon made him court-director in succession to Paisiello, and in 1814-30 he held this and the post of court-composer under Louis XVIII. Meanwhile in 1806-24 he was one of the judges for both the Opéra and the Opéra-Comique, in 1813 took Grétry's place in the Académie, and from 1818 was professor of composition at the Conservatory. As composer he is counted as one of the forerunners of Berlioz in the exaltation of descriptive or delineative effects. But his gifts of invention and construction were by no means equal to his imaginative impulse. As a teacher he was effective and popular. Of his pupils at least twelve took the Prix de Rome (including Berlioz, Ambr. Thomas, Elwart and Gounod). His works include the operas La Caverne, 1793, Paul et Virginie, 1794, Télémaque, 1796, Ossian, ou Les Bardes, 1804, La Mort d'Adam, 1809, Tyrée, [1794], Artaxerxe [1801], and Alexandre à Babylone [1823] (last three accepted at the Opéra, but not given), the divertissements

L'Inauguration du Temple de la Victoire, 1807, and Le Triomphe de Trajan, 1807 (both in collaboration with Persuis), the oratorios Débora, Rachel, Ruth et Noëmi, Ruth et Booz and others for festivals or occasions, the cantata L'Ombre de Sacchini, 1786, over 30 masses (including 3 Messes Solennelles), 3 Te Deums, several Psalms, motets, etc., various choruses and odes, a Coronation March for orchestra, Fête Music for Sept. 23, 1800, a Marche Séraphique, etc. Author of a dissertation on ancient music (1793), a sketch of Paisiello (1816) and numerous pamphlets relating to the controversies in which he was involved in 1787 and 1802. Memoirs by Raoul-Rochette, 1837, S. de la Madeleine, 1841, Fouque, 1882 (in Les Révolutionnaires en Musique), Lamy, 1912, Buschköter, 1912 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.), and Servièrs, 1914 (in Épisodes d'Histoire Musicale). G.

Letz, Hans (n. Lahr, 1887). Gifted Badenese violinist, pupil of the Strasburg Conservatory and the Berlin Hochschule from 1908 appearing in New York and elsewhere in the United States, from 1911 concertmaster of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, from 1914 second in the famous Kneisel Quartet and since 1917 head of the Letz Quartet (at first with Sandor Harmati, Edward Kreiner and Gerald Maas, now with Edwin Bachmann, Kreiner and Horace Britt). A.

Leuckart. A music-publishing business in Leipzig, founded in 1782 at Breslau by F. Ernst Christoph Leuckart, but purchased in 1856 by Constantin Sander (1826-1905) and by him transferred to Leipzig and there extended by adding the interests of other firms in Breslau, Berlin, Vienna, Neuruppin and Halle. The present owner is Martin Sander (b. 1859). The firm has published a fine list of works by recent composers and many valuable books about music (notably Ambros' Geschichte).

Leva, Enrico de (Naples, 1867). Gifted Italian song-composer, pupil of the Naples Conservatory, beginning to produce songs and piano-pieces at fifteen, securing the attention of the publisher Ricordi and in 1890 that of Queen Margherita. Besides writing hundreds of songs, largely in the Neapolitan dialect and often having the charm of true folk-songs, he is known as a good vocal teacher and a promoter of improved school-music. Has also written the opera La Camargo, 1898, the serenata A Capomonte, 1890, violin-pieces, etc. G.

Levadé, Charles Gaston (Paris, 1869). French composer, pupil of Massenet, writing the opera Les Hérétiques, 1905, the pantomime Cœur de Margot, 1895, the salon-opera L'Amour d'Héliodora, 1903, the lyric comedy La Rotisserie de la Reine Pedauque, 1919, orchestral suites, a Prélude Religieux for strings, chamber- and piano-pieces.

Levasseur, Jean Henri (Paris, 1765-1823, do.), brother of Pierre below. French 'cellist, pupil of Cupis and J. P. Duport, from 1789 member of the Opéra orchestra, from 1795 also professor at the new Conservatory and from 1814 also in the court-orchestra. Wrote

'cello-sonatas, duets, études and pieces, and collaborated on the Conservatory method.

Levasseur, Nicolas Prosper (n. Beauvais, 1791-1871, Paris). Eminent French operatic bass, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1813 appearing at the Opéra and from 1815 also in London, at first without disclosing his full ability, except in concerts at Paris with Ponchard. From 1819 he was engaged at the Italiens and in 1828-53 at the Opéra. In 1841-69 he was professor at the Conservatory. Member of the Légion d'Honneur from 1869. He sang at the premières of Meyerbeer's Robert (1831) and Prophète (1849), his delineation of the title rôle in the former being specially famous. G.

Levasseur, Pierre François (Abbeville, 1753-after 1815), brother of Jean above. French 'cellist, pupil of J. P. Duport, in the Opéra orchestra in 1785-1815. Wrote 12 'cello-duets.

Levasseur, Rosalie (Valenciennes, 1749-1826, Neuwied). Able French operatic soprano, in 1766-84 engaged at the Paris Opéra, gradually gaining the place of leading singer, succeeding Sophie Arnouldt, and singing at the premières of Gluck's Orphée (1774, second rôle), Alceste (1776), Armide (1777) and Iphigénie en Tauride (1779). Memoir by Prod'homme, 1916 (in Musical Quarterly).

Levey [O'Shaughnessy], Richard Michael (Dublin, 1811-1899, do.). Irish conductor and composer of light opera, from 1826 in the orchestra of the Theatre Royal in Dublin and in 1834-80 its conductor, besides being interested in many other musical enterprises. Wrote about 50 overtures and as many pantomimes. He was intimate with Balfe and Wallace. G.

Levey, William Charles (Dublin, 1837-1894, London), son of the above. Irish conductor, pupil of his father, Auber, Thalberg and Prudent, in 1868-74 conductor at Drury Lane, London, and then at several other theaters. Wrote 2 operettas, incidental music to several plays, pantomimes, cantatas, piano-pieces and songs. G.

Levi, Hermann (Giessen, 1839-1900, Munich). Excellent Hessian conductor, trained by V. Lachner and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1859 director at Saarbrücken, from 1861 in charge of the German Opera at Rotterdam, from 1864 court-director at Karlsruhe and in 1872-96 court-director at Munich, attaining high distinction. In 1882 he led the first performances of Parsifal at Bayreuth and also the music at Wagner's funeral in 1883. Wrote a piano-concerto and songs, prepared fresh editions of Mozart's Così fan tutte and Kistler's Eulenspiegel, translated the texts of Chabrier's Gwendoline and Berlioz' Les Troyens and revised Grandaur's renderings of those of Mozart's Figaro and Don Giovanni. Author also of Gedanken aus Goethes Werken, 1901 (3d ed. 1911). Memoirs by Possart, 1900, and Ettlinger, 1903 (in Bettelheim's Biograph. Jahrbuch). See also his letters in the Brahms correspondence (vol. vii). G.

Levitzi, Mischa (Krementchug, 1898). Gifted Russian pianist, pupil of Michailowski, the Institute of Musical Art (New York) and the Berlin Hochschule (Mendelssohn Prize), playing in public at Antwerp when but eight and making his formal début there in 1912, followed by extended tours throughout Europe and in America (from 1916). A.

Lévy, Alexandre (São Paulo, 1864-1892, do.). Talented, but short-lived, Brazilian composer, pupil of Durand, writing a symphony (prize at the Columbus Celebration in 1892), chamber-music, a piano-suite (Schumanniana), variations on a Brazilian theme, an Allegro Appassionato and other piano-pieces.

Lévy, Heniot (Warsaw, 1879). Able Polish pianist, pupil of the Berlin Hochschule and of Bruch, from 1899 appearing widely in Germany and Scandinavia, and since 1905 active in Chicago as professor at the American Conservatory and as soloist in recital and with various orchestras. Has written an overture, 2 piano-concertos, 2 string-quartets, a piano-trio (prize at Paris, 1906), a violin-sonata (prize at Warsaw, 1901), a 'cello-sonata, 2 sets of piano-variations and other pieces, besides an orchestral setting of Tennyson's Guinevere. A.

Lewalter, Johann (Kassel, 1862). Hessian song-composer, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, since 1886 active at Kassel. Has written many fine part-songs and songs (mostly in folk-song manner) and piano-pieces, besides editing several collections of German folk-songs and dances (from 1891), including those of the World War (1920).

Lewicki, Ernst Anton Wilhelm (Olten, 1863). Swiss professor in the Technical High School at Dresden. Besides many works in mechanical designing, author of articles on Mozart, co-founder (1896) and archivist of the Dresden Mozartverein and editor of new editions of some of Mozart's works.

Lewing, Adele (Hanover, 1866). North German pianist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory and by Leschetizky and Fuchs, first appearing at fourteen and from 1885 widely known in both Europe and America. She has taught in Chicago, Boston and New York (from 1897), where she married Dr. B. W. Stiefel in 1899. Has written songs and piano-pieces. A.

Lewinger, Max (n. Cracow, 1870-1908, Dresden). Gifted Galician violinist, trained at the Cracow, Lemberg and Vienna Conservatories, in 1892 on tour, in 1893 teacher at the Bucharest Conservatory, then concertmaster at the Helsingfors Philharmonic, in 1897 concertmaster of the Gewandhaus Orchestra in Leipzig and at the Opera, and from 1898 concertmaster in the court-orchestra at Dresden. Wrote various violin-pieces.

Lewis, Leo Rich (South Woodstock, Vt. 1865). American teacher, trained at Harvard University and the Munich Conservatory, since 1892 professor in Tufts College (Mass.), at first of French, but since 1895 of music. Has written a prelude for Browning's Blot on the 'Scutcheon, a violin-sonata, the cantata The Consolation of Music, 1895, arrangements of the old music for Milton's Comus (1901) and Dekker's Fortunatus (1906), many part-songs and songs, besides editing school-music. A.

Lewy, Eduard Constantin (n. Nancy, 1796–1846, Vienna). French hornist, at first in military service, then on extensive concert-tours and from 1822 in the opera-orchestra at Vienna and professor at the Conservatory. His brother Joseph Rodolphe (1802–1881) and his son Richard (1827–1883) were both also expert horn-players, the former long in the Dresden court-orchestra, the latter from 1840 with his father at the Vienna Opera and later inspector and stage-manager there, besides being a noted singing-teacher.

Leybach, Ignace Xavier Joseph (n. Strasbourg, 1817–1891, Toulouse). Alsatian pianist and organist, pupil of Pixis, Kalkbrenner and Chopin, from 1844 organist at Toulouse Cathedral. He was noted as pianist and teacher. Wrote over 200 salon-pieces for piano, about 350 organ-pieces, works for harmonium, motets and songs.

L'Héritier, Jean. 16th C. G.

Lhévianné, Joseph (Moscow, 1874). Eminent Russian pianist, pupil of Chrisander and the Moscow Conservatory, first appearing at fifteen (with orchestra under Rubinstein), from 1891 making brilliant tours throughout Europe and ultimately in the United States (from 1906) and Mexico, in 1900–02 teacher at the Tiflis Music School, in 1902–06 at the Moscow Conservatory and then living in Berlin. In 1895 he won the Rubinstein Prize at Berlin.

Liadov, Anatol Constantinovitch (Petrograd, 1855–1914, do.). Eminent Russian composer, pupil of his father and the Petrograd Conservatory and from 1878 professor there, for a time also teaching in connection with the Imperial Chapel. From 1894 he was assistant-conductor of the Musical Society. He was one of those appointed by the Geographical Society to investigate Russian folk-songs. As composer he presents many analogies with Chopin, though with distinctly Russian individuality. Wrote the symphonic poems Baba Yaga, Le Lac Enchanté and Kikimora, 2 orchestral Scherzos, the mazurka Près de la Guinguette, a Ballade and a Polonaise in memory of Pushkin, a great variety of elegant and often difficult piano-pieces, including variations, preludes, mazurkas, sketches, études, etc., choruses for Schiller's Braut von Messina and Maeterlinck's Sœur Béatrice, choruses for women's voices, over 130 Russian folk-songs and other songs, besides the unfinished ballet Leila and Adalai. He also collaborated with Borodin and others in the string-quartet in honor of Beliaiev and The Paraphrases, etc. G., A.

Liapunov, Serge Michailovitch (Yaroslav, 1859). Able Russian conductor and composer, trained at the Moscow Conservatory, from 1884 assistant-director of the Imperial Choir at Petrograd, from 1902 inspector at St. Helen's Institute and since 1910 professor at the Conservatory. In 1893 he served on the Geographical Society's folk-song commission (about 275 songs published in 1897). Since 1907 he has appeared as pianist or guest-conductor in Germany and Austria. Has written a symphony (1887), the symphonic poems Yelasova Vola and Haschisch, an Ouverture Solennelle, 2 piano-concertos, a Rapsodie on Ukrainian themes for piano and orchestra, an orchestral Ballade and Polonaise, various piano-preludes, dances, études, etc., and some striking songs. Has edited letters between Tchaikowsky and Balakirev. G., A.

Libon, Philippe (Cadiz, 1775–1838, Paris). Able French-Spanish violinist, pupil of Viotti and Cimador, from 1796 court-player at Lisbon, from 1798 in the Madrid court-orchestra and after 1800 in Paris, where he was in court-service under the Empresses Josephine and Marie Louise, continuing after the Restoration. Wrote 6 violin-concertos, 3 string-trios, Duos Concertantes, variations, caprices, etc.

Lichey, Reinhold (n. Liegnitz, 1879). Fine Silesian organist, pupil of Baumert, Rudnick and the Berlin Hochschule, from 1905 organist at Aix and from 1907 at the Trinitatiskirche in Königsberg, as well as conductor of the Haberberger Oratorien-Verein, teacher at the Conservatory and the Polytechnic College and organ-expert, and since 1919 in similar positions at Naumburg and Pforta. Has written organ-pieces, motets, choruses, etc.

Lichnowski, Carl (1758–1814) and Moritz, brothers. Polish noblemen (the one with the title Fürst, the other with that of Graf), living in Vienna. Carl married one of the daughters of the Countess Thun, and his house became a musical center. He maintained a considerable force of singers and players, from 1793 including the earlier Schuppanzigh Quartet. He had had lessons from Mozart and in 1789 took the latter to Berlin, perhaps instigating the offer of a court-position there which Mozart declined. From 1794 he was a devoted friend of Beethoven, who lived for years at his house and to whom he gave instruments and an annual stipend. To him Beethoven dedicated several works (opp. 1, 13, 26, 36 and a set of variations). To Moritz or his wife he dedicated opp. 35, 51 and 90. G.

Lichtenberg, Leopold (San Francisco, 1861). Excellent American violinist, pupil of Beaujardin and Wieniawski (prize at Brussels, 1876), in 1876–77 taking the latter's place on a tour in Holland, in 1877–78 touring in America with Thomas, in 1878–81 again in Europe, then, after further American trips, member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra until 1889, from 1890 in the first Margulies Trio in New York (with Herbert) and from 1904 in the second (with Schulz). Since 1899 he has taught at the National Conservatory, New York. A.

Lichtenstein, Karl August, Freiherr von (Lahm, 1767–1845, Berlin). Bavarian poet and composer, pupil of Forkel, from 1798 manager of the court-theater at Dessau, in 1800–06 at Vienna (with Baron von Braun), from 1811 at Bamberg and from 1823 at Berlin. Wrote about 10 singspiele (from 1795), vaudevilles, etc., besides texts for himself or others.

Lichtenthal, Peter (Presburg, 1780–1853, Milan). Hungarian surgeon, composer and writer, educated at Vienna, after about 1815 living in Milan. Author of Der musikal. Arzt, 1807, 2 works on Mozart (1816, '42), Estetica, 1831, Dizionario e Bibliografia della Musica, 4 vols. 1826, and 2 books on harmony (1816). Wrote also 3 operas, 4 ballets, chamber- and piano-music.

Lidón, José (Béjar, 1752–1827, Madrid). Spanish church-musician, long cathedral-organist at Malaga and from 1808 organist at the Royal Chapel in Madrid, finally also choirmaster. Wrote masses, Psalms, canticles, motets, etc., organ-fugues and 2 operas.

Lie, Erica (n. Christiania, 1845–1903, do.). Able Norwegian pianist, pupil of Kjerulf, Th. Kullak and Tellefsen, for a time teacher at Kullak's Academy in Berlin, besides touring in Germany, Denmark and Sweden, from 1870 professor at the Copenhagen Conservatory, but, after marrying Dr. Oscar Nissen in 1874 and making further tours, from 1877 settled in Christiania. She was a member of the Swedish Academy and from 1894 had a government pension in Norway. G.

Lie, Sigurd (Drammen, 1871–1904, do.). Gifted Norwegian violinist, pupil of Lindemann, Böhm, Holter and the Leipzig Conservatory, with later study at Berlin, in 1893–1900 conductor of the Harmonie at Bergen and also at the Opera, and from 1901 leader of the Handelsstand Sångförening at Christiania. Wrote a symphony, a Marche Symphonique, an Orientalisk Suite, a piano-quintet, Norske Danse for violin, the cantata Erling Skjöldsson (men's voices), choruses, 1894 songs and piano-pieces. G.

Liebe, Edouard Ludwig (Magdeburg, 1819–1900, Chur). Saxon pianist, pupil of Spohr and Baldewin, from 1844 director at Coblenz, Mayence and Worms, and from 1850 long active at Strasburg, finally moving to London. Wrote the opera Die Braut von Azola, 1868, songs and piano-pieces.

Liebeskind, Joseph (Leipzig, 1866–1916, do.). Saxon composer and bibliophile, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory. Has written a symphony, a Festmarsch, 2 string-quartets, a piano-trio, organ-fugues, choruses, etc., and edited little-known works of Haydn, Gluck, Mozart and Dittersdorf, besides translating Wotquenne's thematic list of Gluck's works (1904, and appendix, 1911). His remarkable library included a full set of Gluck's extant works (autographs and first editions).

Liebig, Franz (London, 1860–1922, do.). English pianist, pupil of his father, the Cologne Conservatory, Kretschmer, Von Bülow and Debussy, from 1885 active in London as player and teacher, specializing in the works of Debussy and the recent French school. His wife (née Louise Shirley) is author of an early life of Debussy (1908).

Liebig, Karl (Schwedt, 1808–1872, Berlin). Prussian conductor, from 1827 clarinetist in the Alexander Grenadiers and from 1843 head of a touring orchestra which soon, as the Symphoniekapelle, was utilized by the Berlin Singakademie, the Stern Gesangverein and other societies, besides giving independent concerts. From 1860 he held the title of royal director. In 1867 the orchestra displaced him, choosing Jul. Stern in his stead. He tried unsuccessfully to establish a second orchestra.

Liebling, Emil (Pless, 1851–1914, Chicago). Able Silesian pianist, coming to America in 1867, but returning to study with Ehrlich, Th. Kullak, Dorn, Dachs and Liszt, in 1872–74 teaching in Chicago, in 1874–76 at the Kullak Academy, Berlin, and then again in Chicago, where he came to occupy a place of much influence as player, teacher and critic. Wrote many fine pieces of salon-music and was one of the editors of The American History and Encyclopedia of Music, 1908. A.

Liebling, Georg Lothar (Berlin, 1865). Prussian pianist, pupil of the Kullaks, Wüerst, A. Becker, Urban and Liszt, in 1880–85 teaching at Kullak's Academy, Berlin, in 1881–95 making many tours in Germany and finally to China and South Africa, from 1890 court-pianist at Coburg, in 1894–97 head of his own school at Berlin, from 1898 teacher at the Guildhall School, London, and since 1908 head of his own conservatory at Munich. Has written various orchestral works, including concertos for piano and for violin, violin-sonatas, piano-suites and many excellent salon-pieces, besides a mass and dramatic works. Sketch by G. Braun, 1896.

Liebling, Leonard (New York, 1874), nephew of Emil above. American editor, pupil of Godowsky, Th. Kullak, Barth and Urban, from 1899 mostly engaged in literary work, in 1902 joining the staff of the New York Musical Courier and in 1911 becoming its editor. Has written texts for various comic operettas. A.

Lienau, Robert (Neustadt, Holstein, 1838–1920, do.). Important Berlin publisher, in 1864 acquiring the business of Schlesinger and in 1875 that of Haslinger (Vienna).

Liepe, Emil (Potsdam, 1860). Prussian baritone and composer, trained at the Schwantzer (Berlin), Leipzig and Vienna Conservatories, in 1884–1902 appearing at various German opera-houses (in 1891–92 at Bayreuth), but since then only in song-recitals, from 1903 teacher at the Sondershausen Conservatory and since 1907 teacher at Berlin and critic for the Allgem. Musikzeitung. Has written the short opera Columba, 1894, a symphony (1913), the symphonic poems Fatum, 1891, and Rückblick, 1905, incidental music for Narziss (1885), etc., besides editing collections of Wagner arias and a new edition of Erk's Liederschatz.

Lier, Jacques van (The Hague, 1875). Eminent Dutch 'cellist, pupil of Hartog, Giese and Eberle, in 1891-92 playing in the Palace Orchestra at Amsterdam, in 1892-95 at Basel, then touring extensively, in 1897-99 in the Berlin Philharmonic and since 1899 professor at the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory in Berlin. In 1900-07 he was widely known as founder of the Holländisches Trio (with Van Veen and Bos) and in 1910-12 as one of the Heermann-Van Lier Quartet. Has published works on 'cello-technique and edited about 400 standard 'cello-works.

Lierhammer, Theodor (Lemberg, 1868). Able Galician baritone, educated at Vienna University (M. D.) and began practice as throat-specialist, then pupil of Ress, Caraffa and Stockhausen, from 1894 appearing in concert in Vienna and then throughout Europe and finally America (1904). Since 1904 he has been professor at the Royal Academy, London.

Liliencron, Rochus, Freiherr von (Ploen, 1820-1912, Coblenz). Eminent North German historical scholar, educated at Kiel and Berlin Universities (Ph. D. 1846), with further studies of literature at Copenhagen, in 1848-50 a political agent for Schleswig-Holstein, from 1850 professor of Old Norse literature at Kiel University, from 1852 professor of German literature at Jena University, in 1855-68 privy councilor and court-librarian at Meiningen, from 1869 living in Munich and after 1876 provost of the Johanniskloster at Schleswig. In 1858 he was appointed by the new Historical Commission at Munich to edit medieval German folk-songs, leading to the issue of Historische Volkslieder, 4 vols. 1865-69, and Deutsches Leben im Volkslied, 1885 (in Kürschner's Nationalliteratur). Author also of Lieder u. Sprüche aus d. letzten Zeit d. Minnesangs, 1854, Weyse u. d. dänische Musik, 1878 (in Raumer-Riehl's Histor. Taschenbuch), Ueber d. Chorgesang in d. evangel. Kirche, 1881 (in Zeit-u. Streitfragen), Die horazischen Metren in deutschen Kompositionen d. 16. Jahrh., 1887, '94 (in Vierteljahrsschrift), Ueber Kirchenmusik u. Kirchenkenzer, 1883 (Denkschrift d. Evangel. Kirchengesangsvereins), and several other essays on church-music, Die Chorgesänge d. latein. Schuldramas in 16. Jahrh., 1891, etc. From 1869 he was one of the editors of the Allgem. Deutsche Biographie, for which he wrote a notable memoir of J. B. Cramer. He also supplied the musical parts of Herm. Paul's Grundriss d. german. Philologie, 1898. In 1910 his 90th birthday was marked by a remarkable Festschrift (over 30 essays). Reminiscences in Deutsche Rundschau, 1913, and memoir by Bettelheim, 1917. G.

Lilienthal, Abraham Wolf (New York, 1859). American violinist and composer, pupil of Wein-garten, Brandt, C. C. Müller and Grill, from about 1880 playing in New York orchestras under Damrosch and Thomas, in 1891-93 violist in the New York String Quartet, and then engaged in teaching and composition. Has written a string-sextet, a string-quintet, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata (1911), dances and transcriptions for orchestra, and songs. A.

Liljefors, Ruben (Upsala, 1871). Swedish conductor, pupil of Hedenblad, Jadassohn, Draeseke, Kutzschbach and Reger, in 1902-03 leader of the Students' Chorus at Upsala, in 1903-09 of the same at Gothenburg and also in 1903-11 chorus-master for the Philharmonic, and since 1912 conductor of the Orchestral Union there. Has written a symphony (1906), an overture, an orchestral intermezzo, a piano-concerto (1899), incidental music for Fritjof och Ingeborg (1908), a violin-sonata (1896), several cantatas, choruses, songs and piano-pieces.

Lillo, Giuseppe (Galatina, 1814-1863, Naples). Italian pianist and composer, trained at the Naples Conservatory, from 1834 engrossed in opera-writing, but from 1842 turning back to teaching, from 1846 professor at the Conservatory, but also continuing composition. Wrote about 15 operas, (1834-53) including L'Osteria di Andujar, 1840, symphonies, a piano-quartet, piano-pieces and much good church-music.

Limbert, Frank L. (New York, 1866). German-American conductor and composer, educated in Germany at the Hoch Conservatory, Frankfurt, under Rheinberger and at Berlin and Strasburg Universities (Ph. D. 1894), in 1895-98 and also since 1906 conductor of the Oratorienverein at Hanau, in 1898-1901 living at Frankfurt, and in 1901-06 teacher at the Düsseldorf Conservatory and leader of the society Düsseldorf. Has written a Konzertstück for piano and orchestra, orchestral variations on a theme by Handel, a string-quartet, 2 viola-sonatas, 2 scenes from Sudermann's Johannes for 3 soli and orchestra, sonnets by Lenau and other texts for a cappella chorus, many other choruses, duets and songs. Also author of essays on English ballad-writing (1894) and on Mozart's mass in C min.

Limander de Nieuwenhove, Armand Marie Ghislain (Ghent, 1814-1892, n. Paris). Belgian composer, pupil of V. Cornette, Lambillotte and Fétis, from 1835 active at Mechlin in promoting choral singing, and from 1845 in Paris, where he soon undertook dramatic composition. Wrote the operas Les Monténégrins, 1849, Le Château de Barbe-Bleu, 1851, Le Maître-Chanteur, 1853, Yvonne, 1859, and La Messe de Minuit (not given), the symphony La Fin des Moissons, Scènes Druidiques, a quartet, a 'cello-sonata, festal cantatas, a Requiem, a Te Deum and other church-music, many choruses and part-songs, songs, etc.

Lincke, Joseph (Trachenberg, 1783-1837, Vienna). Silesian 'cellist, in 1808-16 playing in the famous Rasumowsky Quartet in Vienna, then at some of Schuppanzigh's public concerts, from 1818 at the Theater an der Wien and later at the Opera. For years he was intimate with Beethoven. Wrote concertos, variations, capriccios, etc. G.

Lind, Jenny (Stockholm, 1820-1887, Malvern). Distinguished Swedish soprano, pupil of Berg, Lindblad and Manuel Garcia, appearing at Stockholm in 1838-41, at Berlin (on Meyerbeer's recommendation) in 1844, at Vienna in 1846 and at London in 1847, rapidly advancing to a place of the first rank in lyric and coloratura rôles. In 1849, however, she gave up the stage and then continued a supreme favorite in oratorio and concert till her retirement in 1870. In 1850-52 she made a brilliant tour in the United States, and in 1852 married Otto Goldschmidt, her accompanist, in Boston. In 1852-55 they lived at Dresden, then returning to London. In 1883-86 she taught at the Royal College. Her extreme facility, the beauty of her tone and her taste and dignity in interpretation gave her a unique hold on popular appreciation and the grace and nobility of her character increased her fame. From the large returns from her career she made many gifts in England, Sweden and Germany. Sketches and memoirs by Becher, 1846, Lyser, 1847, Rosenberg, 1851, Hedberg, 1885 (in Svenska Operasångare), Holland and Rockstro, 1891 (2 vols.), Rockstro and Goldschmidt, 1894, Wilkens, 1894 (4th ed. 1913), Holmstrom, 1913, article in Norlind's Lexikon, 1913, Dorph, 1919, Norlind, 1919, Elmblad, 1920, and Svensk Tidskrift för Musikforskning, ii.3. See also an original letter in Musical Quarterly, 1917. G.

Lindblad, Adolf Fredrik (n. Stockholm, 1801-1878, n. Linköping). Swedish composer, pupil of Zelter, from 1827 teaching in Stockholm. Wrote the opera Fruendörerna, 1835, a symphony (1839), a violin-sonata, part-songs and songs (many made popular by his pupil Jenny Lind). G.

Lindgren, Johan (Ullared, 1842-1908, Stockholm). Swedish church-musician, trained at the Stockholm Conservatory, where from 1876 he was also teacher, besides from 1884 being cantor at the Storkyrka and teacher at the Jakobs Institute. Wrote a string-quartet, a canon-sonata, various orchestral pieces, etc., and edited a Koralbok (1906).

Linden, Karl van der (Dordrecht, 1839). Able Dutch conductor, pupil of the elder Kwast and Aug. Böhme, from 1860 director of the Harmonie at Dordrecht, later also of the Liedertafel and other societies, garrison-bandmaster and from 1875 conductor of national festivals at Rotterdam and elsewhere, with service on juries at competitions. Has written 2 operas, several overtures, the cantatas De Starrenhemel and Kunzlein, choruses, part-songs, songs and piano-pieces.

Linder, Gottfried (n. Ulm, 1842-1918, Stuttgart). Bavarian composer, from 1868 teaching at the Stuttgart Conservatory, receiving the title of professor in 1879 and retiring in 1912. Wrote the operas Dornröschen, 1872, and Konradin von Schwaben, 1879, the overture Aus nordischer Heldenzeit, the orchestral Waldlegende and Charakter-Tanz, 2 string-quartets, a piano-trio, choruses and songs.

Lindgren, Adolf (n. Stockholm, 1846-1905, do.). Swedish critic, from 1875 writing for the Stockholm Aftonblad, in 1881-85 founding and editing the Svensk Musiktidning and contributing to other journals. Author of Satser i svensk Verslära, 1880, Om Wagnerismen, 1881, Svenske Hofkapellmästare, 1882, and Musikaliska Studier, 1896, besides translations of librettos, etc.

Lindley, Robert (Rotherham, 1776-1855, London). Fine English 'cellist, pupil of Cervetto, in 1794-1851, a leading player at the Opera in London and at important concerts, succeeding to the place held earlier by Sperati. From 1822 he taught at the new Royal Academy.

Lindner, Adolf (Lobenstein, 1808-1867, Leipzig). Saxon hornist, from 1826 court- or town-musician at Gera, in 1844-46 touring with Gungl, then in the Potsdam theater-orchestra and from 1854 in the Gewandhaus Orchestra at Leipzig.

Lindner, August (Dessau, 1820-1878, Hanover). Fine Prussian 'cellist, pupil of Drechsler, from 1837 in the court-band at Hanover. Wrote a concerto, Fantasietücke, etc.

Lindner, Edwin (Brünn, 1884). Moravian pianist and conductor, trained at the Vienna Conservatory and by Janoch, Reisenauer and Nikisch, from about 1905 active in Belgium and Holland, in 1913 director of the Schumann (society) at Dresden, which in 1914 he merged (with other societies) in a new Singakademie, and in 1915 founder of the Philharmonic Orchestra.

Lindner, Ernst Otto Timotheus (Breslau, 1820-1867, Berlin). Silesian journalist (long editor of the Vossische Zeitung in Berlin) and critic, one of the leaders of the Bach-Verein and author of a critique of Meyerbeer's Prophète (1850), Die erste stehende deutsche Oper, 2 vols. 1855, Zur Tonkunst, 1864, and Gesch. d. deutschen Liedes im 18. Jahrh. 1871 (edited by Erk).

Lindner, Eugen (Leipzig; 1858-1915, Weimar). Saxon singer and composer, pupil of Kogel, Bolck, Stade and Götze, from 1878 chorusmaster at the Leipzig Opera, in 1884 traveling with Neumann's Wagner troupe, then teacher at the Weimar Music School and from 1902 at the Leipzig Conservatory, gaining the title of professor in 1913. Wrote the operas Ramiro, 1885, Der Meisterdieb, 1889, and Eldena (not given), and about 60 songs.

Lindner, Friedrich (?1540-1597). 16th C. G.

Lindpaintner, Peter Joseph von (Coblentz, 1791-1856, Nonnenhorn). Eminent Rhenish conductor and composer, pupil of Winter and Grätz, from 1812 director at the new Isarthor-Theater at Munich and from 1819 court-director at Stuttgart, the orchestra becoming one of the best in Europe. Wrote about 20 operas (from 1811), including Der Vampyr, 1829, Die Genueserin, 1838, and Lichtenstein, 1845, 2 oratorios, masses, cantatas, church-music, a symphony, many overtures (including especially that for Faust), several ballets (notably Joco), concertos for flute and for clarinet, many other concerted pieces, a string-trio, about 50 songs, additional accompaniments to Handel's Judas Macabæus, etc. His writing was skillful, but without great originality or force. G.

Linley, George (Leeds, 1798-1865, London). English composer of light operas (from 1849) and other vocal pieces. Author of The Musical Cynics of London, 1862 (largely against Chorley), and The Modern Hudibras, 1864. G.

Linley, Thomas (Wells, 1732-1795, London). English writer of ballad-operas, pupil of Chilcot and Paradies, from about 1755 teaching and giving concerts in Bath, in 1774 succeeding J. C. Smith in the management of the Drury Lane 'oratorios' (at first with Stanley and after 1786 with Arnold) and from 1776 part-owner of the theater (succeeding Garrick). Wrote a long list of dramatic pieces (1768-88), madrigals, songs, etc., often with much grace. His son Thomas (1756-1778) was a good violinist, pupil of Nardini, and writer of various vocal pieces. In 1770 he was intimate with the young Mozart at Florence. G.

Lioncourt, Guy de (Caen, 1885). French composer, pupil of d'Indy and inspector at the Schola Cantorum in Paris. Has written the cantata Hyalis, some orchestral works, songs, etc.

Lipinski, Karl Joseph (n. Lublin, 1790-1861, n. Lemberg). Eminent Polish violinist, self-taught, in 1810-14 concertmaster or conductor at the Lemberg theater, then living at Vienna and Milan (in 1817-18 intimate with Paganini), for many years on extensive tours, and in 1839-59 concertmaster in the court-orchestra at Dresden, where he greatly improved the standard of performance. Wrote 4 violin-concertos (the 2d known as the Military), a Polonaise Guerrière for orchestra, a string-trio, numerous rondos, variations, capriccios, etc., besides the opera The Siren of the Dniester and a collection of Galician folk-songs (2 vols. 1833). G.

Lippius, Johann (1585-1612). 17th C.

Lipps, Theodor (Wallhalben, 1851-1914, Munich). Bavarian psychologist, from 1877 professor at Bonn University, from 1889 at Breslau and from 1894 at Munich. Author of Das Wesen d. musikal. Harmonie u. Disharmonie, 1885 (2d ed. 1905), Tonverwandtschaft u. Tonverschmelzung, 1899 (Zeitschr. für Psychol.), Zur Theorie d. Melodie, 1901 (ibid.), and especially his Aesthetik, 2 vols. 1903-06. See Moos, 1907, on his music-aesthetics, and F. Krüger, Die Theorie d. Konsonanz, 1908 (contra Stumpf and Lipps).

Lipsius, Ida Marie (Leipzig, 1837), using the pseudonym 'La Mara'. Noted Saxon writer, educated by her father (rector of the Thomasschule, Leipzig) in company with her brother (in 1869-1920 professor in Leipzig University), from about 1857 closely connected with the Liszt circle at Weimar. Author of Musikal. Studienköpfe, 5 vols. 1868-82 (later eds. and 20 sketches separately in 1911-13), Musikal. Gedanken-Polyphonie, 1873 (comments of famous musicians on their art), Das Bühnenfestspiel in Bayreuth, 1877, Musikerbriefe aus fünf Jahrh. 2 vols. 1886, Klassisches u. Romantisches aus d. Tonwelt, 1892, Aus d. Glanzzeit d. Weimarer Altenburg, 1906, 2 works on Beethoven's 'unsterbliche Geliebte' (1908, '09), Liszt u. d. Frauen, 1911, a translation of Liszt's Chopin (1880, 3d ed. 1910), collections of letters from Liszt (3 vols. 1893-94, '98, 1908), Wagner (1895), Berlioz (1903), etc. She was entitled professor in 1917. Autobiography, 1917. G.

Lishin, Grigory Andreievitch (1854-1888, Petropograd). Russian composer of the opera Don César de Bazan, 1888.

Lissenko, Nikolai Vitalievitch (n. Kremenchug, 1842-1912, Kiev). Russian composer and folk-song specialist, pupil of Wilczek, Panotchiny, Dimitriev and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1868 settled at Kiev, where he made careful investigations in Ukrainian folk-music (16 sets of songs, part-songs, ritual music, etc. 1868-95). Wrote the operas Tchernomorzy, Christmas, The May-Night, Winter and Spring, Taras Bulba, 1890, and Sappho, the children's operas Kozadereza, 1888, and Pan Kotsky, 1891, 2 cantatas, the choral ballade Sapovit, 1867 (men's voices), choruses, songs and piano-pieces. Author of an essay on the Little Russian dumkas and the songs of Veresai [kobsa-player] (1877).

Lissinsky, Vatroslav (Agram, 1819-1854, do.). Croatian composer, pupil of Sojka, Wiesner von Morgenstern and the Prague Conservatory, long connected with the Agram Music School. Wrote the first Croatian operas, Ljubav i Zloba, 1846, Porin, 1849, etc., besides over 150 other works, orchestral, vocal and for piano.

Lissmann, Heinrich Fritz (Berlin, 1847-1894, Hamburg). Able Prussian operatic baritone, pupil of Hillmer and Stockhausen, from about 1870 heard at Zurich, Lübeck, Leipzig and Bremen, and from 1883 Gura's successor at the Hamburg Opera. His wife, née Anna Marie Gutzschbach (b. 1850), was (till 1892) a favorite soprano, now teaching in Hamburg.

Listemann, Bernhard Friedrich Wilhelm (Schlotheim, 1841-1917, Chicago), brother of the following and till 1893 closely associated with him. Able Thuringian violinist, pupil of Ulrrich (his uncle), David, Vieuxtemps and Joachim, from 1859 soloist with the Rudolstadt court-band, in 1867 migrating to America, where he toured with De Meyer, lived two years in Boston, in 1871-74 was concertmaster under Thomas in New York and on tour and in 1881-85 in the same post with the new Boston Symphony Orchestra. In 1875-79 at Boston he founded and led the Philharmonic Club (sextet), in 1879-81 the Philharmonic Orchestra that grew out of it and in 1881-85 the Listemann Quartet, then taught in Boston, but with some further tours with the Listemann Concert Company. In 1893-1907 he taught at the Chicago Musical College and in 1909-11 at the Sherwood Music School there. Wrote a symphony, violin-pieces and a method. His sons Paul (b. 1871) and Franz (b. 1873) became violinist and 'cellist respectively, both settling in New York in 1896. A.

Listemann, Fritz [Ferdinand] (Schlotheim, 1839-1909, Boston), also a fine violinist, brother of the above and his close companion in almost every enterprise until 1893, when he remained in Boston as teacher. Wrote 2 concertos, other violin-pieces and songs. A.

Liszt, Franz [Ferencz] (Raiding, [Oct. 22] 1811–1886 [July 31], Bayreuth). Distinguished Hungarian pianist, conductor and composer. His father, an agent or factor on one of the Esterházy estates, was his first teacher. When but nine he played at Oedenburg and Presburg with such effect that five noblemen promised 600 gulden annually for six years for his further training. In 1821 his parents moved to Vienna, placing him under Czerny and Salieri. In 1822–23 his appearances there, as at Pest and Presburg, made a sensation, moving even Beethoven to enthusiasm. The family then set out for Paris, the boy giving concerts at Munich, Augsburg, Stuttgart and Strasburg. Cherubini refused to admit him at the Conservatory (being a foreigner), but he took composition with Paër and Reicha, producing an operetta. His playing won admiration not only in Paris and some French towns, but in England (from 1824) and later in Switzerland. By 1827, when his father died, he was well able to maintain himself.

His Paris life developed his character rapidly. At times he inclined to enter the priesthood, was greatly stirred by the rising spirit of romanticism, by the excitement attending the Revolution of 1830, by Saint-Simonism, by the democratic ideas of Lamennais, as well as other literary and political influences, and was daily mixing with a host of eminent musicians, from 1831–32 including Paganini, Chopin and Berlioz. In 1835 he was drawn to elope with Countess d'Agoult ('Daniel Stern'), settling at Geneva, where he taught somewhat at the new Conservatory. In 1837 he outshone Thalberg at Paris. In 1837–39 he was much in Italy and visited Vienna. His connection with the Countess was not broken till 1844.

During 1839–47 he made a long series of triumphant tours as virtuoso, reaching from London and Brussels to Pest, Bucharest, Constantinople and Odessa and from Marseilles and Madrid to Copenhagen, Hamburg, Berlin, Warsaw, Petrograd and Moscow. Besides gaining fame and fortune, he became known as a princely giver (as for flood-relief at Pest in 1837 and to hasten the Beethoven monument at Bonn in 1845). From 1842 he came yearly to Weimar and in 1848 settled there as court-director, with the chance to declare his interest in the radical or 'New-German' movement and to develop his power as composer. Here in 1847 began his connection with Princess Sayn-Wittgenstein, whose villa (Altenburg) became an artistic center.

At Weimar he proved a notable conductor, not only giving standard works with fresh distinction, but bringing out many new or neglected ones (as Wagner's Lohengrin, 1850, Raff's König Alfred, 1851, Rubenstein's Sibirische Jäger, 1854, Schubert's Alfonso ed Estrella, 1854, Schumann's Genoveva, 1855, and Cornelius' Barbier von Bagdad, 1858, besides many orchestral novelties). From 1852 he also led many festivals, as at Baltenstedt, Karlsruhe, Vienna, Magdeburg, Aix and Leipzig. Around him gathered a large circle of enthusiasts eager for the replacement of pedantry and mere traditionalism by 'the music of the future'. His loyal support of the proscribed Wagner became one of the chief factors in the latter's final triumph. Meanwhile his own aspirations as composer unfolded abundantly, especially in the then novel form of the 'symphonic poem', with its emphasis upon a 'program' basis. He also became known as an essayist of brilliance and force.

In 1859 friction at Weimar led to his removing to Rome, where his vein of religious mysticism reasserted itself and he even took minor orders, gaining the title of abbé (1865). But he continued musical activities at many places and extended his list of compositions by various large works, sacred and secular. About 1870 his relations with Weimar were restored, so that he spent some months there each year, dividing the rest between Rome and Pest, where from 1873 he was much concerned in the upbuilding of the National Academy. From about 1860 he was everywhere pursued by troops of pupils, many of the finest quality. His interest in Wagner was steadily maintained and after 1876 Bayreuth became one of his favorite places of frequent sojourn.

In certain respects his career remains unmatched. His gifts as pianist were phenomenal from the first. His facility and verve as an executant gave him mastery over every ordinary technical problem, and his instinct for achieving the most dazzling success led him to explore various latent possibilities of pianistic effect, particularly through the addition of characteristic ornamentation, the subtle increase of color contrasts by means of varied touches and the masterly use of the pedals. (In every branch of pianistic technique he established a new standard not only of daring dexterity, but of the full emancipation of style from its previous limitations.) With him begins the successful use of the piano on a scale to suggest the sonority and splendor of the orchestra. But he was much more than a transcendent virtuoso. He was also a marvelously catholic and faithful interpreter, bringing an acute intelligence and a responsive sympathy to the rendering of the whole range of keyboard literature. He also had rare gifts in improvisation, perhaps not of the most learned variety, but certainly of no mean order. And whatever he did was made enormously effective by a singular eloquence and magnetism that showed him a master of audiences. His innumerable performances had usually a regal or imperial quality that has not been surpassed.

From about 1850 he occupied a central position in the musical world that gave him great influence. His virtuoso-life had made him intimate with musicians and music-lovers throughout the whole of Europe. His own predilection for progressive advance, with his ready response to the progressive spirit in others, naturally made him a leader among all who were intent upon expansion, innovation and even reconstruction. He early threw his weight in favor of the rising interest in what is called 'program' music which (at its best) would enlist the definite, concrete action of the imagination along with the operation of undefined tonal instinct. Naturally the extreme conservatives either stood aloof or were actively hostile, but even they were forced in the end to confess that his radicalism was not so much iconoclastic as constructive. For ten years he made Weimar a pivotal center, using his power there with notable skill to demonstrate the interrelation between the old and the new. And for at least thirty-five years he wrought mightily upon the personal development of a host of impressionable pupils, many of whom became leaders of taste in their turn. In many ways his own playing and his writing exerted a widespread educational force. The total impact of his influence was stimulating and fertilizing in a notable degree, reaching far beyond the period of his own life.

His work as composer has been variously estimated. His adherence to 'program' led him to exalt tonal delineation, emotional intensity, dramatic sequence, even to the point of stagey sensationalism, rather than devices of thematic and structural evolution. He made much, however, of the 'leading' or 'characteristic' motif and subjected it to ingenious transformation. But his thematic creativeness tended to lag behind his imagination and desire, so that many passages are more grandiose than majestic, more voluptuous than passionate, more pretentious than inspired. Yet in treating details he constantly displayed notable skill and ingenuity, especially in ornamentation and in scoring.

His favorite forms were usually not cyclical, or tonally genetic, but analogous to the chain of scenes in a story or play, not architectonic, but rhetorical. Hence his use of the 'symphonic poem' in place of the classical sonata or symphony, of the richly-shaped 'rhapsodie' in place of the loose 'fantasia', and of several idealized dances, etc. He raised the piano-transcription to real artistic dignity, and by the abundance of his work in this field doubtless enlarged the musical horizon of many pianists. His songs were often exquisite, but his larger vocal works seldom attain the impressiveness that he evidently intended.

His principal works may be summarized as follows:

For Orchestra

Dante-Symphonie (Inferno, Purgatorio, Magnificat), with women's chorus (dedicated to Wagner).
Faust-Symphonie (Faust, Gretchen, Mephistopheles), with men's chorus (dedicated to Berlioz).
 Symphonic Poems: Bergsymphonie (from Hugo), Tasso (Lamento e Trionfo), Les Préludes (from Lamartine), Orpheus (suggested by Gluck's Orfeo), Prometheus, Mazeppa (expanded from a piano-étude), Festklänge, Héroïde Funèbre or Heldenklage (first meant as part of a Symphonie Révolutionnaire), Hungaria, Hamlet (from Shakespeare), Hunnenschlacht (suggested by Kaulbach's picture), Die Ideale (from Schiller), Von der Wiege bis zum Grabe (from Zichy).
Zwei Episoden aus Lenau's Faust (Der nächtliche Zug, Der Tanz in der Dorfschenke or Mephisto-Walzer). Also a 2d Mephisto-Walzer.

Goethe-Festmarsch; Huldigungsmarsch; Vom Fels zum Meer (patriotic march); Festmarsch on themes by E. H. zu S.; Bälou-Marsch; Ungarische Festmarsch; Ungarische Sturm-Marsch; Rákoczy-Marsch; 4 marches arranged from Schubert. Fest-Vorspiel; Künstler Fest-Zug; Gaudeamus igitur (Humoreske with chorus); 6 Ungarische Rhapsodien (arr. from piano-version). Music for Halm's Vor 100 Jahren (1859).

For Piano and Orchestra

Concertos: 1, E-flat (1855), 2, A (1857).
Todten-Tanz (Danse Macabre), paraphrase on 'Dies iræ.'
 Arrangements of Schubert's Fantasia in C, Weber's Polonaise; fantasias on themes from Beethoven's Ruinen von Athen and on Hungarian folk-songs.

For Piano

Sonata in B min. (dedicated to Schumann).
 Concert-Solo (Concerto Pathétique).
Rhapsodies Hongroises: 1, E, 2, C-sharp, 3, B-flat, 4, E-flat, 5, E min., 6, D-flat, 7, D min., 8, F-sharp min. (Capriccio), 9, E-flat (Can-neral de Pesth), 10, Préludio, 11, A min., 12, C-sharp min., 13, A min., 14 F min., 15, Rákoczy March, four others published and one in MS.
Concert-Fantasia über Spanische Weisen.
Études d'Exécution Transcendante (Préludio, Paysage (2), Mazeppa, Feux Folles, Vision, Eroica, Wilde Jagd, Ricordanza, Harmonies du Soir (2), Chasse-Neige).
Grandes Études de Concert (Capriccio (2), Allegro affettuoso).
Concertetuden (Waldestrauchen, Gnomensreigen). Ab-Itato (Étude de perfection).
 Variations on theme from Bach's B min. Mass.
Rhapsodie Espagnole, Folies d'Espagne, Jota Aragonesa.
Harmonies Poétiques et Religieuses (Invocation, Ave Maria, Bénédiction de Dieu dans la Solitude, Pensée des Morts, Pater Noster, Hymne de l'Enfant à son Réveil, Funérailles, Misère d'après Palestrina, Andante Lirioso, Cantique d'Amour).
Années de Pèlerinage: I, Suisse (Chapelle de Guillaume Tell, Au Lac de Wallenstadt, Pastorale, Au Bord d'une Source, Orage, Vallée d'Obermann, Eglogue, Le Mai du Pays, Les Cloches de Genève); II, Italie (Sposalizio, Il Penseroso, Canzonetta di Salvator Rosa, Tre Sonetti del Petrarca, Après une Lecture de Dante, Gondoliera, Canzone, Tarantella); III, (Angelus, Aux Cyprès, Les Jeux d'Eaux, Sunt lachrimae rerum, Marche Funèbre, Sursum corda, Abchied).
Apparitions (3); Consolations (6); Liebesträume (3 nocturnes); 3 Caprice-Valses; 2 Dallades; 2 Impromptus; 2 Légendes (St. François d'Assisi, St. François de Paul); Beauce; Scherzo und Marsch; 2 Polonaises; Galop Chromatique; various marches, variations, etc.
 Arrangements of Beethoven's Symphonies and Septet, Hummel's Septet, Berlioz's Symphonie Fantastique, 2 ouvertures, etc., Rossini's overture to Guillaume Tell, Weber's overtures to Der Freischütz, Oberon and Jubel, Wagner's overture to Tannhäuser, numerous paraphrases of operas by Auber, Halévy, Donizetti, Bellini, Meyerbeer, Gounod, Raff, Verdi and Wagner, transcriptions of numerous songs by Schubert, Beethoven, Franz, Schumann, Mendelssohn and many others.

For Organ

Fantasia and Fugue on B-A-C-H.
Fantasia and Fugue on the chorale in Le Prophète.
 Variations on a theme from Bach's B min. Mass.
Introduction and Fugue from Bach's Ich hatte viel Bekümmerniss.
Lassus' Regina Celi.
 Several detached pieces. Also several works unpublished.

Vocal Works

Masses—Fest-Messe in D, for the dedication of Gran Cathedral in 1856; Ungarische Kronungs-Messe in E-flat, for the coronation of Francis Joseph at Budapest in 1867; 2 other masses (C min. and A min.), Requiem (men's voices); requiem for Maximilian I (1867).
 Psalms 13, 19, 23, 116, 129 and 137.
An den heiligen Franziskus (men's voices).

Various motets, canticles, etc.

Oratorios—Die Legende von der heiligen Elisabeth, 1865, Christus, 1873, St. Stanislaus (not completed).

Cantatas—Die heilige Cäcilia, 1865?, Die Glocken des Strassburger Münsters, 1876, choruses for Herder's Der entfesselte Prometheus, 1850, Fest-Album for the Goethe Centenary, 1849, cantata for the Beethoven Centenary, 1870, An die Künstler, 1853, and several other works for men's voices.

Operetta—Don Sancho, 1825.

Over 60 solo songs.

His literary works include De la Fondation Goethe à Weimar, 1851, Lohengrin et Tannhäuser de R. Wagner, 1851, Frédéric Chopin, 1852 (5th ed. 1906), Des Bohémiens et de leur Musique en Hongrie, 1859, Ueber Fields Nocturnes, 1859, Robert Franz, 1872, and Keine Zwischenaktmusik mehr, 1879. His Gesammelte Schriften were edited by Lina Ramann in 1880-83 (6 vols., abridged ed. 4 vols. 1910, with general index by Kapp). Selections of his letters are published by various editors, beginning with his correspondence with Wagner (2 vols. 1887, 3d ed. by Kloss, 1910), about 2500, edited by La Mara, 8 vols. 1893-1905, with further selections in 1898, 1909, etc., by Bache, 2 vols. 1894, Von Seydlitz, 1902, Stern, 1903, Von Schlözer, 1913, etc. The Liszt-Stiftung is engaged in publishing through Breitkopf & Härtel a complete edition of his music (9 vols. to 1919), under Peter Raabe as editor-in-chief.

Memoirs and appreciations by Ramann, 1880-94 (3 vols.), Wagner, 1883, Pohl, 1893, Nohl and Göllerich, 1884-87 (2 vols.), Vogel, 1887, Habets, 1893, Louis, 1899, Pozsony, 1900, Calvocoressi, 1905, Göllerich, 1908, Gottschalg, 1909, Kapp, 1909 (10th ed. 1919) [and other fine studies], Chantavoine, 1910, Segnitz, 1911, Kohut, 1911, Hervey, 1911, Huneke, 1911, Mackenzie, 1913, Schrader, 1914, etc. G.

Litloff, Henry Charles (London, 1818-1891, Paris). Gifted English (half-Asiatian) pianist, composer and publisher, pupil of Moscheles, appearing first when but twelve and from 1835 becoming known at various places on the Continent. In 1840 he made a fine impression at Paris, in 1841-44 was conductor at Warsaw, in 1846 re-visited London, in 1848 was active in the Revolution at Vienna, in 1851-60 (having married the widow of the publisher G. M. Meyer) developed a noted publishing-business at Brunswick ('H. Litloff') and then left it to his adopted step-son Theodor (1839-1912) and returned to Paris. Most of his compositions belong to his later years, his career as a virtuoso having been checked as early as 1850 by ill-health. He was four times married. Wrote the operas Die Braut vom Ky-nast, 1847, Les Templiers, 1886, and 2 others not given, several operettas (from 1871), including Héloïse et Abelard, 1872, the oratorio Ruth et Booz, 1869, the overtures Robespierre, Les Girondistes, Les Guelfes and Chant des Belges, 5 'concerto-symphonies' for piano and orchestra, the violin-concerto Eroica, a Funeral March for Meyerbeer (1864), 3 piano-trios, 3 duets for violin and piano (with Léonard), brilliant concert-pieces and études for piano, the cantata Szenen aus Goethes Faust, etc. Memoir by Magnette, 1914, and see Berlioz' Les Musiciens et la Musique, 1878, G.

Litta, Giulio [Duca, Visconte Arese] (Milan, 1822-1891, n. Monza). Italian composer (amateur) of 10 operas (from 1843), the last being Il Violino di Cremona, 1882, an oratorio and songs.

Litvinne, Félia (b. ?1860). Russian operatic soprano, pupil of Mme. Barth-Banderoli and Maurel, from about 1880 appearing in Paris, in 1885-86 in America (with Mapleson), then at Petrograd and Moscow and since about 1890 settled in Paris, where she has been a favorite at the Opéra-Comique and the Gaieté. In 1896-97 she sang at the Metropolitan, New York. She is the wife of Dr. Emmanuel Depoux.

Litzau, Johannes Barend (Rotterdam, 1822-1893, do.). Dutch organist, pupil of Bremer and Tours, from 1842 at the Reformed Church in Rotterdam and from 1855 Bremer's successor at the Lutheran Church. Wrote 3 organ-sonatas, fugues and other contrapuntal pieces, etc., besides collections of psalm-tunes and other church-music.

Litzmann, Berthold (Kiel, 1857). Professor of German literature, from 1884 at Jena University and in 1892-1921 at Bonn. Author of a notable life of Clara Schumann (3 vols. 1902-08, latest ed. 1912, in English by Hadow, 1913).

Liuzzi, Ferdinando (Bologna, 1884). Italian opera-conductor, trained at the Munich Conservatory (prize in composition from the Parma Conservatory in 1908), since 1910 teaching at the latter institution. Has written the opera L'Augellino Bel Verde, 1917, the symphonic poem Hyla, an Introduction and Fugue for organ, a sonata for violin and organ, violin-pieces and songs.

Liverati, Giovanni (Bologna, 1772-1830?) Italian operatic tenor and composer, pupil of Mattei and Gibelli, from 1792 engaged as singer or conductor at Barcelona, Madrid, Potsdam, Prague and Trieste, from 1805 singing-teacher at Vienna and from 1814 composer at the London Opera. Wrote about 15 operas (from 1790), including Il Maestro Fanatico, 1804, 2 oratorios, several cantatas, masses and other church-music, string-quartets, 'cello-pieces, songs, etc.

Lloyd, Charles Harford (Thornbury, 1849-1919, Slough). Able English organist, educated at Oxford, from 1876 S. S. Wesley's successor at Gloucester Cathedral (in 1877 and '80 conducting the Three Choirs' Festivals there), from 1882 Corfe's successor at Christ Church Cathedral, Oxford, and conductor of the Symphony and Choral Societies, from 1887 professor at the Royal College, London, and in 1892-1914 precentor at Eton College, following Barnby. Mus.D. of Oxford Univ. in 1890, often examiner there and elsewhere, from 1914 organist of the Chapel Royal, etc. Wrote the cantatas Hero and Leander, 1884, The Song of Balder, 1885, Andromeda, 1886, A Song of Judgment, 1891, Sir Ogie and Lady Elsie, 1894, and A Hymn of Thanksgiving, 1897, The Longbeards' Saga, 1897 (men's voices),

The Gleaner's Harvest (women's voices), incidental music for Euripides' Alcestis (1887), services, anthems, Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis, 1880, the motet The Souls of the Righteous, 1901, choruses, part-songs and songs, an organ-concerto, an organ-sonata, other organ-pieces, a trio for clarinet, bassoon and piano, etc. In 1903 he edited a revision of Church Hymns. Memoir in Musical Times, 1919. G.

Lloyd, Edward (London, 1845). Gifted English tenor, trained as choirboy at Westminster Abbey, in 1866-71 engaged in choirs in Cambridge and London, then for thirty years in constant request in recitals, concerts and festivals (from 1888 also in the United States), and since 1900 retired at his country-home in Sussex. He assisted at the premières of many oratorios by Gounod, Sullivan, Parry, Mackenzie, Stanford, Elgar, etc., and was noted for concert-renderings of Wagnerian arias. G.

Lobe, Johann Christian (Weimar, 1797-1881, Leipzig). Able Saxon flutist, theorist and composer, pupil of A. Riemann and A. E. Müller, in 1811 appearing as flutist at the Gewandhaus, then (till 1842) playing flute or viola in the Weimar court-band, from 1842 head of his own school at Weimar, in 1846-48 editor of the Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung at Leipzig and then active as teacher there. Wrote 6 operas (1822-44), 2 symphonies, several overtures, piano-quartets, flute-concertos and other pieces. Author of Lehrbuch d. musikal. Composition, 4 vols. 1850-67 (later eds., partly revised by Kretzschmar, 1879-87), various smaller treatises (from 1844), including useful Catechisms (1851, '72), Musikal. Briefe eines Wohlbekannten, 1852 (2d ed. 1860), Fliegende Blätter für Musik, 3 vols, 1853-57, Aus d. Leben eines Musikers, 1859, and Consonanzen u. Dissonanzen, 1869. G.

Lobkowitz, Josef Franz Maximilian [Prince] (1772-1816, Raudnitz), son of Prince Ferdinand Philip (1724-1784), who in 1745-46 was associated with Gluck in London. Wealthy Bohemian nobleman, with a notable palace at Vienna, where he maintained an extensive musical establishment, besides being a fine singer (bass) and player on violin and 'cello. He was one of Beethoven's most powerful and faithful friends. To him the latter dedicated his opp. 18, 55, 56, 67, 68, 74 and 98 (1800-16). G.

Löbmann, Hugo (Schirgiswalde, 1864). Saxon organist and school-music teacher, trained at the Bautzen Teachers' Seminary, becoming assistant in the Cathedral School there, from 1888 engaged in the Catholic town-schools in Leipzig and since 1911 director of one of them, besides from 1894 being organist at the Trinitatiskirche, and taking courses at the University (Ph. D. 1908). Author of text-books in singing, directing, organ-inspection and music-history (from 1904) and a school song-book, besides Glockenkunde, 1915.

Lobo, Alonso. 16th C.

Lobo [Lopez], Duarte (1540-1643). 16th C.

Locatelli, Pietro (Bergamo, 1693-1764, Amsterdam). Brilliant Italian violinist, pupil of Corelli, widely known through tours and finally settled at Amsterdam, where he gave regular series of concerts. He carried virtuoso-feats to an extreme, but had genuine artistic power as well. Wrote 30 violin-concertos (1721-41), 6 quartet-concertos, 6 string-trios, 6 Introduzioni Teatrali, 24 Caprices (1723), Caprices Énigmatiques, Contrasto Armonico (quartet-concertos), 6 sonatas for violin solo (1737), flute-sonatas, etc. Editions of some of his works have been made by Wittgen, Alard, David and Riemann. G.

Locher, Karl (Bern, 1843-1915, do.). Swiss organist, pupil of J. R. Weber and A. Reichel, from 1863 at the Protestant Church in Freiburg, at the Catholic Church in Bern and from 1890 at the Nydeck Church there. Author of the valuable Die Orgelregister, 1887 (4th ed. 1912).

Locke, Matthew (1630-1677). 17th C. G.

Loder, Edward James (Bath, 1813-1865, London). English composer, pupil of Ferd. Ries, from 1834 connected with various stage-enterprises in London. Wrote the operas Nourjahad, 1834, The Night-Dancers, 1846, and Raymond and Agnes, 1855, several song-plays and additions to works by others, music for Oxford's Dice of Death (1835), the cantata The Island of Calypso, 1852, many fine songs and some string-quartets. G.

Loder, Kate Fanny (Bath, 1825-1904, London), cousin of the above. English pianist, trained at the Royal Academy, London, in 1840-54 appearing with much success in London and then (as wife of Sir Henry Thompson, the surgeon) continuing as an influential promoter of musical interests. Wrote an opera, an overture, 2 string-quartets, a violin-sonata, 2 piano-sonatas, etc. G.

Loeb, Jules (Strasburg, 1857). Able Alsatian 'cellist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, since about 1880 widely known in Paris and the provinces as soloist, playing also at the Opéra and the Conservatory Concerts, besides being a member of the Marsick Quartet and of Philipp's ensemble.

Loeffler, Charles Martin Tornov (Mulhouse, 1861). Gifted Alsatian violinist and composer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory and of Kiel and Dehn, at first playing at the Pasedeloup Concerts and in the orchestra of Prince Dervier at Nice and Lugano, in 1883-1903 Kneisel's associate in the Boston Symphony Orchestra and since 1903 engaged upon composition in Boston. Has written the symphonic poems La Mort de Tintagiles, 1897, (after Maeterlinck), La Bonne Chanson (after Verlaine), La Villanelle du Diable (after Rollinat) and A Pagan Poem (after Virgil), the orchestral suite (with violin) Les Veillées de l'Ukraine, 1891 (after Gogol), the one-movement symphony Hora Mystica, 1916 (with men's chorus), a 'cello-concerto (1894), a Divertimento for violin and orchestra, a Divertissement Espagnole for saxophone and orchestra (1901), an octet for strings with clarinets and harp (1897), a string-sextet (1893), a string-quartet (1889), To the Mem- ory of Victor Chapman, 1917 (string-quartet), 2 Rhapsodies for oboe, viola and piano, Psalm 137 (women's voices), the chorus For One Who Fell in Battle, 1906, and various songs. G. A.

Loeillet [Loelly], Jean Baptiste (Ghent, ?—1728?, London). Belgian flutist, educated at Ghent and Paris, from 1705 active in London as teacher and member of the opera-orchestra. From 1710 he held series of ensemble-concerts at his house. Wrote much for one, two or three flutes and for various instrumental combinations, harpsichord-studies, etc. G.

Loewe, Johann Jakob (1628–1703). 17th C.

Loewe, Johann Karl Gottfried (Löbjeun, n. Halle, 1796–1869, Kiel). Gifted Saxon tenor and composer, pupil of his father and of Türk and Naue (at the Francke Institute, Halle, where he was aided till 1813 by a grant from Jérôme Bonaparte), besides studying theology at Halle University. In 1820 he went to Stettin as cantor and teacher, in 1821 becoming town-director and organist at the Jacobikirche and continuing in increasing honor till 1866, when he retired to Kiel. At intervals he made tours (as in 1837 to Berlin, Hamburg and the Rhine Valley, in 1844 to Vienna, in 1847 to London, in 1851 to Sweden and Norway, in 1857 to Paris), largely to introduce his ballades by his own skillful interpretation. In 1832 he was made Ph.D. by Greifswald Univ. and from 1837 was a member of the Berlin Akademie. His literary culture, vivid imagination and instinct for original melodic expression enabled him to develop a strongly individual type of vocal composition, particularly in the form of descriptive and dramatic ballades. At his best he deserves to be ranked with Schubert and Schumann, though his musical inspiration is less rich, varied and sustained. His eager industry led him to produce a large number of works in various forms, including Operas—Rudolph der deutsche Herr, 1825, Malek Adhel, 1832 (in concert), Die drei Wünsche, 1834 (singspiel), and 2 others.

Oratorios—Die Zerstörung von Jerusalem, 1829, Die sieben Schläfer, 1833, Die eiserne Schlange, 1834 (men's voices), Die Apostel von Philipp, 1835 (do.), Gutenberg, 1837 (for unveiling of monument at Mayence), Die Festzeiten, Johann Huss, 1842, Der Heilung des Blindgeborenen, 1861 (a cappella), Die Auferweckung des Lazarus, 1863 (do.), Palestrina, Hiob, Johannes der Täufer, and 6 others.

Cantatas—Die erste Walpurgisnacht. Three complete cycles for the Church Year.

Ballades—about 150 in all, of which there are published in the Schlesinger and Peters Albums (in order of opus-numbers) Eduard, Der Wirthin Töchterlein, Der Erbkönig, Treurischen, Herr Oluf, Abschied, Elvershöf, Die drei Lieder, Die späte Gast, Des Goldschmieds Töchterlein, Graf Eberstein, Hochzeitlied, Die wandelnde Glocke, Die Gruft der Liebenden, Die nächtliche Heerschau, Jungfrau Lovenz, Des fremden Kindes heiliger Christ, Der grosse Christoph, Der Fischer, Harald, Heinrich der Vogler, Fredericus Rex, Das Erkennen, Die Glocken von Speier, Landgraf Ludwig, Schwalbenmärchen, Der Edelstark, Der Blumen Rache, Die verlorene Tochter, Prinz Eugen, Meerfahrt, Der Mohrenfürst, Der Graf von Habsburg, Das Wiegenfest zu Gent, Kaiser Karl V in Wittenberg, Der Pilgrim von St. Just, Die Leiche von St. Just, Des Glockenthürmers Töchterlein, Der Mönche zu Pisa, Der gefangene Admiral, Odins Meeresritt, Trommelständ- chen, Die Uhr, Landgraf Philipp, Der alte Schiffsherr, Archibald Douglas, Der seltene Peter, Spirito Santo, In der Ferne, Der kleine Haushalt, Der heilige Franziscus, Der Junggesell, Tom der Reimer.

Various part-songs, including Gesang der Geister über den Wassern, a Salvum fac regem, 8 Free-Masons' Songs, etc.

About 250 songs, including 23 Hebräische Gesänge (Byron), 54 in Gesammelte Gedänge (1828, 10 books), etc.

For orchestra—symphonies, overtures and piano-concertos not published.

4 string-quartets; piano-trio; Schottische Bilder (clarinet and piano).

For piano—4 sonatas, various fantasias and other pieces.

Author of a Gesanglehre, 1826 (3d ed. 1834), a commentary on the 2d Part of Faust (1834), Musikal. Gottesdienst (on vocal and organ-music), 1851 (later eds.), and Clavier- u. Generalbass-Schule, 2d ed. 1851. Autobiography, 1870 (edited by Bitter). A complete collection of over 500 lyrical works has been edited by Runze (17 vols. 1899–1903). Memoirs and critiques by Runze, 1884, '88, 1905 (also on relations with Giesebrecht, '94, and Goethe, 1901), Wellmer, 1886, A. B. Bach, 1890 (3d ed. 1896), Wossidlo, 1894, Niggli, 1897, Bulthaupt, 1898, Lüpke, 1898, Draheim, 1905, Hirschberg, 1911, '19, K. Anton, 1912 (also later essays), Kleemann, 1913, and studies in Ambros' Kulturhistor. Bilder, 1860, and Gumprecht's Charakterbilder, 1876. A Loewe-Verein was organized at Berlin in 1882, and this has issued a Jahresbericht. He was twice married, his second wife being the singer Auguste Lange of Königsberg (1805–1895). G.

Loewengard, Max Julius (Frankfort, 1860–1915, Hamburg). Hessian critic and theorist, pupil of Raff, from about 1880 employed as theater-conductor, in 1890–91 teacher at the Wiesbaden Conservatory, from 1891 at the Scharwenka Conservatory in Berlin and critic for the Börsen-Zeitung, and after 1904 at Hamburg as critic for the Korrespondent and teacher at the Conservatory. Wrote the comic opera Die vierzehn Nothelfer, 1896, an orchestral serenade and some songs. Author of several text-books in harmony, counterpoint, form, etc. (1892–1913), of which the Lehrbuch d. Harmonie, 1892 (6th ed. 1906), is best known.

Loewenstern, Matthäus Apelles von (1594–1648) 17th C. G.

Löffler, Johann Heinrich (n. Eisfeld, 1833–1903, Pössneck). Thuringian teacher, organist and writer, largely self-taught, from 1863 town-organist at Pössneck and leader of a choral society. Besides writing choral works and pieces for organ and for piano, he was active as a strong supporter of Wagner, contributing ably to the Bayreuther Blätter.

Logier, Johann Bernhard (Kassel, 1777–1846, Dublin), of French descent. Originally a precocious flutist, about 1790 he was brought to England, where he joined a regimental band under Willman (father of the clarinetist) and was sent to Ireland. In 1796 he married Willman's daughter, undertook piano-teaching and made and taught band-music, in 1798–1807 becoming organist at Westport. With his brother-in-law he went to Dublin in 1809, in 1811 opened a music-shop and for a year was conductor at a theatre. Here he perfected his 'chiroplast' (apparatus for establishing hand-position at the piano-keyboard), which in 1814 he patented with exclusive rights over its use. He also advocated teaching elementary piano-pupils in groups or classes, and devised charts for training the eye in reading notes. He soon introduced his system throughout England, arousing a bitter controversy between adherents and critics that lasted several years. In 1821-24 he was in Berlin at the request of the government to introduce his system there. After 1826 he retired to Dublin with considerable wealth. His ideas were adopted widely, even by the Paris Conservatory, but with progressive modifications (as by Kalkbrenner) and finally with only the class-system remaining. Author of books about his system (1816, '18) and a manual of harmony, etc. Wrote also a piano-concerto, trios, sonatas, etc. Besides a method for the bugle-horn. G.

Logroscino, Nicola (Naples, ?1700-1763, do.). Eminent Italian composer, pupil of Durante, from 1738 conspicuously successful in opera buffa, from 1747 professor at the new Palermo Conservatory. Wrote about 20 operas, including Il Vecchio Marito, La Violante, 1741, Il Leandro, 1744, and Giunio Bruto, 1750 (opera seria), 2 Stabat Maters, Psalms, etc. Very little of his music is extant. G.

Lohet, Simon (?-1611). 16th C. G.

Löhlein, George Simon (n. Coburg, 1727-1781, Danzig). Saxon violinist and pianist, in 1743 seized while on his way to Copenhagen and forced to serve in the Prussian Grenadiers, in action through several campaigns and badly wounded in 1757, being then set free. After his recovery he studied at Jena, in 1761-63 serving as conductor there, from 1763 teacher and player at Leipzig and from 1779 director at Danzig. Besides composing the singspiel Zemire und Azor, 1775, a Todtenfeier (1771), various concert-pieces for ensemble or clavier, etc. he was noted for his Clavier-Schule, 2 parts, 1765-81, and Anweisung zum Violinspielen, 1774 (later eds. of both).

Lohmann, Peter (Schwelm, 1833-1907, Leipzig). Westphalian critic and poet, from 1856 living in Leipzig, where he was connected with the Illustrierte Zeitung, Neue Zeitschrift (1858-61) and Brendel's Anregungen. Author of a critique of Schumann's Faust music (1860), a discussion of the opera (1861, 3d ed. 1886, as Das Ideal d. Oper), and many poems (from 1861, 3d ed. 4 vols. 1886), including librettos used by Huber, Göbel, Freudenberg, Dreszer and others.

Löhr, George Augustus (Norwich, 1821-1897, Leicester). English organist, trained as choir-boy at Magdalen College, Oxford, from 1835 Buck's assistant at Norwich Cathedral and in 1845-85 at St. Margaret's in Leicester, besides leading a choral society.

Löhr, Richard Harvey (Leicester, 1856), son of the above. English pianist and organist, pupil of the Royal Academy, London (many prizes), from 1882 known as pianist, besides for years being organist at St. James' (Marylebone). Has written the opera Kenilworth, the oratorio The Queen of Sheba, 5 symphonies, a piano-quintet, 2 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, works for violin and for 'cello, piano-pieces, church-music, part-songs and songs, besides text-books in harmony (from 1882).

Lohse, Otto (Dresden, 1859). Eminent Saxon conductor, trained at the Dresden Conservatory, in 1877-79 'cellist in the court-orchestra there, from 1879 piano-teacher at the Vilna Music School, from 1882 leader of the Wagner and Russian Musical Societies at Riga, from 1889 conductor at the Opera there, in 1893-95 the same at Hamburg, in 1896 assistant to W. Damrosch in America, from 1897 opera-conductor at Strassburg (from 1901 also at Covent Garden, London, and in 1902 also leader of symphony-concerts at Madrid), from 1904 at Cologne, in 1911-12 at Brussels and then at Leipzig, where he gained the title of professor in 1916. In 1895 he married the noted soprano Katharina Klafsky (d. 1896). Has written the light opera Der Prinz wider Willen, 1890, and many songs.

Lolli, Antonio (Bergamo, ?1730-1802, Palermo). Noted Italian violinist, probably self-taught, from 1755 in the Stuttgart court-band, soon becoming concertmaster, in 1775-78 in court-service under Catherine II at Petrograd and then visiting various places (Paris, 1779, London, 1785, Madrid, Berlin, 1791, Copenhagen, etc.). He had extraordinary ability in execution, but was singularly deficient in musician-ship and mental capacity. His works included concertos, sonatas and a method, all of little value. G.

Lomakin, Gabriel Joachimovitch (Petrograd, 1812-1885, Gatchina). Russian vocal teacher, leader and composer, trained as choirboy in Count Sheremetiev's choir at Petrograd (with lessons also from Sapienza), becoming its conductor from 1830 and bringing it to notable perfection. He also taught in various schools, in 1848-59 in the Imperial Chapel, at the Theatrical School, etc. In 1862 he joined Balakirev in starting the Free Music School, where he taught till 1870. In 1874 ill-health forced him to retire. Wrote many motets and liturgical pieces, a manual of choir-singing and arrangements (4-part) of old church-music. Autobiography, 1886 (in Russ. Altertümer). G.

Longhurst, William Henry (London, 1819-1904, Canterbury). English church-musician, trained as choirboy at Canterbury Cathedral, from 1836 assistant-organist and trainer there, and in 1873-1898 organist, following T. E. Jones. His total service at the Cathedral covered 70 years. He also taught at St. Augustine's College. Mus.D. in 1875 from the Archbishop of Canterbury and in, 1886 from Toronto Univ. Wrote the oratorio David and Absalom, 1872, the cantata The Village Fair, 1882, a service, anthems, part-songs, violin- and piano-pieces. G.

Longy, Georges (Abbeville, 1868). Able French oboist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1886 playing in the Lamoureux Orchestra, from 1888 in the Colonne Orchestra, at the Opéra-Comique and elsewhere, and since 1898 in Boston as member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in 1899-1913 also conductor of the Orchestral Club, from 1900 head of the Longy Club (wind and piano), from 1915 conductor of the MacDowell Orchestra and from 1916 director of his own music-school. He has been a member of the Académie since 1895. A.

Loomis, Harvey Worthington (Brooklyn, 1865). American composer, pupil of the National Conservatory, New York. Has written the opera The Traitor Mandolin (1900), 4 comic operas, several pantomimes, incidental music for plays and recitations, a violin-sonata, a piano-sonata, piano-pieces (including Lyrics of the Red Man), music for children, etc. A.

Lorentz, Alfred (Strasburg, 1872). Alsatian conductor, pupil (as flutist) of Ruequoy and Tafanel, later of Rheinberger and Mottl, acting for a time as the latter's assistant at Karlsruhe, from 1894 chorusmaster at the Strasburg Opera, becoming conductor, from 1899 again with Mottl at Karlsruhe and since 1907 court-director. Has written the operas Der Mönch von Sendomir, 1907, Die beiden Automaten, 1913, and Liebesmacht, 1922, the operetta Die Mondscheindame, 1919, and unpublished orchestral works.

Lorenz, Alfred Ottokar (Vienna, 1868). Austrian conductor, educated at Vienna University, in 1893-94 coach at the Königsberg Opera and in 1897-98 at Munich, in 1894-97 conductor at theaters in Königsberg and Elberfeld, and in 1898-1920 at Coburg, until 1902 as assistant-conductor, then conductor and from 1905 court-director, besides in 1901-11 leading the Musical Union at Gotha, in 1907-19 that at Coburg and in 1902 assisting at Bayreuth. Has written the opera Helges Erwachen, 1896, the symphonic poems Bergfahrt and Columbus, a Tragische Ouvertüre, the scena Ingraban, music for Æschylus' Orestes, a piano-quartet and songs.

Lorenz, Franz (Stein, 1805-1883, Vienna). Austrian physician, author of In Sachen Mozarts, 1851, Mozart als Claviercomponist, 1866, Haydns Mozarts u. Beethovens Kirchenmusik, 1866, and articles in periodicals. G.

Lorenz, Julius (Hanover, 1862). North German conductor and composer, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1884 director of the Singakademie at Glogau, from 1895 of the Arion in New York and since 1911 again in Glogau, often serving as organist at the Synagogue. In 1887-88 he toured as pianist with the violinist Senkrah and in 1899 took the Arion on an extended circuit in America. Has written the opera Holländische Rekruten, a mass, Psalm 95, a Festhymne, 1904 (Arion Jubilee), overtures, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, choruses and songs. A.

Lorenz, Karl Adolf (Köslin, 1837). Pomeranian conductor and composer, trained by Dehn, Kiel and Gährich and at Berlin University (Ph. D. 1861), for a time leader of the Meixner Gesangverein in Berlin, from 1864 in similar work at Stralsund and from 1866 Loewe's successor at Stettin as city-director, conductor of several societies and gymnasium-teacher, gaining the title of professor in 1885 and retiring in 1910. Has written the operas Harald und Theano, 1893, and Die Komödie der Irrungen, the oratorios Winfried, 1888, Otto der Grosse, 1890, Krösus, 1892, Die Jungfrau von Orleans, 1895, Golgotha and Das Licht, 1907, the cantatas Heinrich der Vogelteller and Hymne an die Kunst, a symphony, overtures, a piano-trio, motets, organ-pieces, etc.

Lorenzi-Fabris, Ausonio de (Montebelluna, 1861). Italian composer of the operas Gli Adorati del Fuoco, 1891, Maometto II, 1892 (revised 1897), Il Rè si Annoia, 1904, Giuditta and Sordello, and the oratorio Refugium Peccatorum, 1897.

Lorenzo, Leonardo de (Viggiano, 1875). Italian flutist, pupil of the Naples Conservatory, from 1897 in the theater-orchestra at Alessandria (Piedmont), in 1900-07 on wide tours in Europe and to South Africa, from 1910 in New York, at first with the Philharmonic, then with the Symphony Society, and since 1914 in the Minneapolis Orchestra. Has written many effective studies and pieces for his instrument. A.

Lortat, Robert (Paris, 1885). Gifted French pianist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory (Prix Diémer in 1909), since 1910 highly successful in Paris, London, Germany and America (from 1916). His recitals with Thibaud in 1917 demonstrated his ability in ensemble.

Lortzing, Gustav Albert (Berlin, 1801-1851, do.). Eminent Prussian composer, mostly self-taught. His early training was as an actor, but this led to undertaking light stage-works from 1824 and from 1833 also appearing as tenor at the Leipzig Opera, where for a few months (1844-45) he was director, thereafter moving from place to place. His style was natural and easy, with taking melodiousness and often gay humor. He married the actress Regina Ahles. Wrote the operas Die beiden Schützen, 1837, Czar und Zimmermann, 1837, Hans Sachs, 1840, Der Wildschütz, 1842 (counted his best work), Undine, 1845, Der Waffenschmied, 1846, Die Rolandsknappen, 1849, and Regina, 1899 (text revised by d'Arronge and score by Kleinmichel), besides about as many other stage-works, the oratorio Die Himmelfahrt Christi, 1829, music for Benedix' Drei Edelsteine, some overtures, choruses, etc. Memoirs by Düringer, 1851, Wittmann, 1889, Kruse, 1899, Büner, 1900, and Webster, 1900. Letters edited by Kruse in 1902. G.

Löschhorn, Albert (Berlin, 1819-1905, do.). Influential Prussian pianist and teacher, trained at the Berlin Institut für Kirchenmusik and from 1851 teacher there, gaining the title of professor in 1858. Wrote about 140 works for piano, including excellent études, salon-pieces, sonatas, suites, etc., and also piano-quartets. Author of a Wegweiser in d. Pianoforte-Litteratur, 1862 (with J. Weiss, 2d ed. alone, 1885). G.

Lossius, Lucas (1508-1582). 16th C. G.

Loth, Louis Leslie (Richmond, Va. 1888). American pianist and composer, pupil of Herm. Epstein, Jonás and Ertel, appearing in Germany from about 1908 and assisting Jonás as teacher, and since 1914 in Richmond. Has written 2 symphonies, a string-quartet, a string-trio, a quartet for violin, flute, bassoon and piano, various pieces for violin, flute and piano, etc. A.

Lotti, Antonio (?1667-1740). 17th C. G.

Lotto, Isidor (Warsaw, 1840). Able Polish violinist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, after becoming widely known as virtuoso, from 1862 soloist in the Weimar court-band, from 1872 teacher at the Strasburg Conservatory and from 1882 at the Warsaw Conservatory.

Lotze, Rudolf Hermann (Bautzen, 1817-1881, Berlin). Eminent professor of philosophy at Göttingen University from 1844. His Gesch. d. Aesthetik in Deutschland, 1868, contains much on musical æsthetics in general and critiques of various musical theorists.

Louis, Rudolf (Schwetzingen, 1870-1914, Munich). Able Badenese critic and writer, educated at Geneva and Vienna Universities (Ph.D. 1894), pupil in music of Klose and Mottl, in 1895-97 theater-conductor at Landshut and Lübeck and then active at Munich, where from 1900 he was critic for the Neueste Nachrichten. Author of Der Widerspruch in d. Musik, 1893, Wagner als Musikästhetiker, 1897, Die Weltanschauung Wagners, 1898, lives of Liszt (1900), Berlioz (1904) and Bruckner (1905), Die deutsche Musik d. Gegenwart, 1909 (3d ed. 1912), a Harmonielehre, 1907 (with Thuille, 6th ed. 1919), with an abridgment in 1908 and supplement in 1911, besides sketches of Pfitzner and Klose and the publication of Hausegger's Unsere deutschen Meister, 1901. Wrote also the symphonic fantasy Proteus, 1903, piano-pieces and songs. See appreciation by Istel in Musik, 1914.

Louis Ferdinand, Prince (n. Berlin, 1772-1806, in battle, Saalfeld), nephew of Frederick the Great. Fine amateur pianist and composer, from about 1795 intimate with many leading musicians and a warm admirer of Beethoven. Wrote a piano-octet (with clarinet and horns), a piano-quintet, 2 piano-quartets, 3 piano-trios, piano-variations and a fugue, and various other instrumental works. Memoirs by Tschirch, 1916 (in Hohenzollern-Jahrbuch), and Wintzer, 1916. G.

Lövenskjöld, Herman Severin (Holdensjærn-bruk, 1815-1870, Copenhagen). Norwegian composer, from 1828 educated at Copenhagen, later pupil of Seyfried. From 1851 he was court-organist at the Kristiansborg Slot in Copenhagen. Wrote the opera Turandot, 1854, 2 ballets (1836-39), incidental music to plays, 3 overtures (including one for the Coronation in 1839), a piano-quartet (1859), a piano-trio and various piano-pieces.

Lover, Samuel (Dublin, 1797-1868, Isle of Jersey). Irish novelist, poet and painter, writing numerous songs and stage-pieces with music (from 1832). From 1844 he had success with his 'Irish Evenings' (in 1846 visiting America). He wrote two librettos for Balfe. G.

Lowe, Edward (?1610-1682). 17th C. G.

Löwe, Ferdinand (Vienna, 1865). Eminent Austrian conductor, trained at the Vienna Conservatory, and in 1883-96 teacher there, in 1897-98 conductor of the Kaim Orchestra in Munich, from 1898 director of the Vienna Opera, from 1900 conductor of the Musikfreunde Concerts, from 1904 at the head of the new Konzertverein, as well as in 1908-14 conductor of the new Konzertverein in Munich, from 1907 of annual series at Pest and from 1916 in Berlin. This manifold activity marks him as one of the ablest orchestral leaders of the time. In 1919-22 he was director of the Musikakademie in Vienna. He has been active, also, in publishing various works of Bruckner.

Lozzi, Antonio (Ascoli Piceno, 1873). Italian composer of the operas Emma Liona, 1895, Mallata, 1896, Le Vergini, 1900, Mirandolina, 1904, Bianca Cappello, 1910, and Elisir di Vita, 1913, besides 2 symphonic poems.

Lualdi, Adriano (Larino, 1887). Italian composer, pupil of Falchi and Wolf-Ferrari. Has written the opera La Figlia del Rè, 1922, and the short Nozzi di Haura, the intermezzi Le Furie di Arlecchino, 1914, and Il Cantico, 1915, the scena La Morte di Rinaldo, the cantata Attilio Portas, the symphonic poem Leggenda del Marinaio, 1910, a string-quartet (1913) and songs. In 1920 he edited the Bergamo Emporium.

Lübeck, Ernst (The Hague, 1829-1876, Paris), son of the following. Dutch pianist, in 1849-54 touring in America with Franz Coenen and then in Paris, where he joined Lalo, Armingaud and Jacquard in chamber-concerts. G.

Lübeck, Johann Heinrich (n. Leyden, 1799-1865, The Hague). Dutch violinist, as a youth employed in a Prussian army-band (1813-15), then studying at Potsdam, playing in orchestras at Riga and Stettin and making tours until 1823, when he returned to Holland. From 1827 he was director of the new Hague Conservatory and from 1829 also court-director and conductor of the Diligencia (society). Wrote a Psalm for the festival of 1863. G.

Lübeck, Louis (The Hague, 1838-1904, Berlin), son of the foregoing. Dutch cellist, pupil of Jacquard, in 1863-68 teaching at the Leipzig Conservatory, touring in Germany, Holland and England, in 1875-81 in the United States and then soloist in the court-orchestra at Berlin. G.

Lübeck, Vincentius (1654-1740). 17th C.

Lubrich, Fritz (Bärsdorf, Posen, 1862). Prussian church-musician, pupil of Ad. Fischer (Breslau), from 1890 cantor at Peilau (Silesia), in 1899-1901 organist, cantor and teacher at Meissen, then teacher at the Kyritz Seminary, later at Sagan and from 1920 at Naumburg. In 1889-97 and since 1909 he has edited Die Orgel (periodical) and also since 1896 the Fliegende Blätter of the Silesian branch of the Kirchenmusikverein and other journals, besides preparing various collections of choir- and chorus-music. His son Fritz (b. 1888) is an able organist, in 1911-19 at the Bielitz Seminary and then cantor at the Pauluskirche in Breslau.

Luca, Giuseppe de. See De Luca.

Lucas, Charles (Salisbury, 1808-1869, London). English 'cellist, early a choirboy under Corfe, pupil of the Royal Academy, London, from 1830 employed as teacher by the royal family, and from 1832 at the Royal Academy (ensemble), besides playing at the Opera and elsewhere. At times he conducted the Choral Harmonists' Society and the Antient Concerts. After 1851 he followed Lindley as leading 'cellist at the Opera, festivals, etc. In 1859-66 he was Potter's successor as director of the Royal Academy. In 1856-65 he was also engaged in music-publishing. Wrote the opera The Regicide, 3 symphonies, overtures, a 'cello-concerto, string-quartets, anthems and songs. G.

Lucas, Clarence (n. Niagara, 1866). Canadian critic and composer, pupil of Marty and Du-bois, from 1889 teacher at the Toronto College of Music and conductor of the Hamilton Philharmonic Society and in 1891-93 teacher at the Utica (N. Y.) Conservatory, conductor of a choral society and organist. In 1893 he removed to London, where he has written for various papers (from 1903 including the New York Musical Courier), done much editorial work for Chap-pell & Co. and in 1902-04 directed the Westminster Orchestral Society. He has made tours with opera or dramatic companies, and for a time before 1919 was in New York on editorial work. Has written 7 comic operas (The Money-Spider given in 1897), 4 sacred cantatas, including The Birth of Christ, 1902, a symphony, 2 symphonic poems, several overtures, including Macbeth, 1901, a Ballade for violin and other pieces, organ-music, many effective piano-works and about 75 songs. Author of a Story of Musical Form, 1908. G. A.

Lucatello, Ettore. Italian composer of the operas Carmilla, 1897, Colpa e Pena, 1897, La Fioraja, 1898, Vittime, 1900, and Il Giullare, 1907.

Lucca, Pauline (Vienna, 1841-1908, do.). Brilliant Austrian operatic soprano, pupil of Uchmann and Lewy, at fourteen already in the choir of the Karlskirche and soon after in the chorus at the Opera. In 1859-60 she made her formal début at Olmütz and Prague with such success that in 1861 she was permanently engaged at the Berlin Opera under Meyerbeer, but with frequent absences (in London annually from 1863). In 1872 she withdrew at Berlin, spent two years in the United States and in 1874-89 was a supreme favorite at the Vienna Opera, while at the same time extending her fame throughout Europe (including visits to Russia in 1877 and to Spain in 1878). Her repertory included about 60 rôles, which she sustained not only with exquisite vocal finish, but with remarkably original dramatic force. In 1869-71 she was the wife of Baron von Rhaden and from 1873 of Baron von Wallhofen (d. 1899). Sketch in La Mara's Studienköpfe, 1902. G.

Lucchesi, Andrea (Motta, 1741-1800, in Italy). Italian conductor of an operatic troupe that came to Bonn in 1771. In 1774-94 he was director of the court-band there (succeeding Beethoven's grandfather) and was one of the leaders under whom the young Beethoven played viola. Wrote 9 operas or other stage-works (from 1765) piano-concertos, 4 piano-quartets, a piano-trio, 6 violin-sonatas, masses, cantatas, etc.

Lucerna, Eduard (Klagenfurt, 1869). Carinthian composer of 6 symphonies, an orchestral serenade, 2 sets of Tyrolese dances for orchestra, several string-quartets, sonatas for viola and for 'cello, choruses, songs and an opera. He has long been a collector of Alpine melodies and has conducted a chorus for singing folk-songs. He is also in the drug-business at Gries.

Lück, Stephan (Linz, 1806-1883, Treves). Rhenish priest, from 1849 professor at the Treves Seminary. Author of text-books and a collection influential in the improvement of Catholic church-music (1846-59).

Luckstone, Isidore (Baltimore, 1861). American pianist (accompanist) and singing-teacher, pupil of his sister and Ph. Scharwenka, from about 1880 employed by the actor Joseph Jefferson, in 1883-84 touring with Camilla Urso, in 1884-91 with Reményi, then with Materna, Ondříček and Nordica, and since 1897 teaching in New York. A.

Ludwig, August (Waldheim, 1865). Saxon critic and composer, trained at the Cologne and Munich Conservatories, in 1894-1903 editor of the Neue Berliner Musikzeitung. Has written the overtures Ad Astra and Luther, a Philosophen-Scherzo, Schicksalsmarsch and other orchestral works, including two added movements for Schubert's 'Unfinished' Symphony, piano-pieces, songs and the comic opera Kunst und Schein, 1906. Author of Geharnischte Aufsätze, Der Konzertagent, 1894, Stachel u. Lorbeer, 1897, Zur Wertschätzung d. Musik, 1898, and Tannhäuser Redivivus, 1908.

Ludwig, Franz (Graslitz, 1889). Bohemian composer, educated at Prague and Leipzig Universities and at the Leipzig Conservatory, where, after a year as opera-conductor at Sondershausen, since 1912 he has taught. Has written a Lustspielouvertüre, a piano-concerto, a horn-concerto, an octet-serenade for wind, piano-sonatas and pieces, besides articles on J. K. F. Fischer and on two letters of E. A. Förster in the I. M. G. Zeitschr.

Ludwig, Friedrich (Potsdam, 1872). Prussian musicologist, educated at Marburg and Strasburg Universities, from 1905 lecturer and from 1911 professor at the latter. He has specialized in the music of the 13-14th centuries, writing articles in the I. M. G. Sammelbde. iv-v, and also Die liturg. Organa d. Leoninus u. Per otinus in the Riemann Festschrift, 1909, and a source-book on organ-music and motets (1910).

Ludwig, Joseph (Bonn, 1844). Able Rhenish violinist, pupil of the Cologne Conservatory and of Joachim, in 1870 settling in London (becoming a British citizen) and teaching at the Royal Academy. He has often given chamber-concerts, usually with G. Collins, A. Gibson (or A. Hobday) and W. E. Whitehouse. He plays a notable del Gesù instrument. Has written 2 symphonies, a piano-quartet, violin- and 'cello-pieces. G.

Lugert, Josef (Frohnau, 1841). Bohemian violinist and school-inspector, pupil of Krejčí, from about 1860 playing at the German Opera at Prague and from 1868 teaching at the Conservatory. Since 1876 he has been state-inspector of music-schools. Author of various elementary text-books. Has written a symphony, an orchestral suite, 2 serenades (one for strings only), In Memoriam for orchestra and English horn, a piano-quartet, 3 string-quartets, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata and piano-pieces.

Luigini, Alexandre Clément Léon Joseph (Lyons, 1850–1906, Paris). Noted French conductor and composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory, from 1869 playing in his father's orchestra at Lyons, from 1877 opera-conductor there and professor at the Conservatory, and from 1897 one of the conductors at the Opéra-Comique in Paris (at first with Danbé and Messager). At Lyons he organized two series of orchestral concerts. In 1903 he was conductor for the Lyrique in Paris. Wrote the operas Les Caprices de Margot, 1877, La Reine des Fleurs, 1878, and Faublas, 1881, many popular ballets (from 1870), a Romance Symphonique, orchestral marches, 3 string-quartets (prizes), etc. G.

Lully [Lullii], Jean Baptiste de (1632–1687). 17th C. G.

Lumbye, Hans Christian (Copenhagen, 1810–1874, do.). Danish dance-musician, often called 'the Northern Strauss', from 1841 at the head of an orchestra in Copenhagen with which from 1845 he made many tours. In 1865 he was succeeded by his son Georg (b. 1843). Memoir by Skjerne, 1912. G.

Lund, John Reinhold (Hamburg, 1859). North German conductor, chiefly trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1880 chorusmaster at the Bremen Opera, in 1883–84 assistant-conductor at Stettin, from 1884 assistant to Leopold and Walter Damrosch at the Metropolitan, New York, or on tour, from 1887 director of the Buffalo Symphony Orchestra and of the Orpheus Society, from 1903 touring with a troupe giving operas by Herbert and since 1914 again at Buffalo. Has written the choral works Germanenzug, Griechisches Kriegstied, Kaiser Karl and Spring Morning, pieces for string-orchestra, a piano-sonata, suite, etc., and songs. A.

Lunn, Charles (Birmingham, 1838–1906, London). Noted English singing-teacher, pupil of Sangiovanni, Cattaneo and Vizione, from 1864 singing in concert, from 1867 teaching in Birmingham and after 1895 in London. Author of an able Philosophy of the Voice, 1874 (10th ed. 1906), Vocal Expression, 1878, and Vox Populi, 1880, besides many articles on vocal subjects.

Lunn, Henry Charles (London, 1817–1894, do.). English editor, trained at the Royal Academy, London, and also teacher there, in 1863–87 editor of the Musical Times. Author of Musings of a Musician, 1846, and many articles.

Lunn, Louise Kirkby (Manchester, 1873). Eminent English operatic contralto, pupil of J. H. Greenwood and Visetti at the Royal College, London, appearing first in 1893–94 while still a student, in 1895–96 with the Harris troupe and in 1897–99 with the Carl Rosa Company. In 1899 she married W. J. K. Pearson. Since 1901 she has sung steadily at Covent Garden, in concert and at festivals, since 1904 being a prime favorite. Since 1902 she has visited the United States at intervals and in 1912–14 went to Australia and New Zealand. G.

Luporini, Gaetano (Lucca, 1865). Italian composer, pupil of Quilici (as protégé of Ricordi) at the Istituto Pacini (Lucca). Has written the operas Marcella, I Dispetti Amorosi, 1894, La Collana di Pasqua, 1896, and Nova, 1908, an orchestral suite, a mass, etc.

Lupot, Nicolas (Stuttgart, 1758–1824, Paris). Famous French violin-maker (born in Stuttgart because his father worked there as court employé in 1758–70). Until 1794 he followed the family trade at Orléans and then removed to Paris. His specialty was the imitation of Stradivari models, with which he was remarkably successful. G.

Luscinius [Nachtgall], Ottomar (1487–1537). 16th C. G.

Lusitano, Vicente. 16th C.

Lussan, Zélie de (New York, 1863). French-American operatic soprano, pupil of her mother, from 1879 appearing in concert, in 1885–89 with the Boston Ideal Opera Company, from 1889 in England with the Carl Rosa Company, in 1895–1902 frequently at Covent Garden and later at Paris and Madrid. In 1894–95 and 1900–01 she was heard at the Metropolitan, New York. On her marriage in 1907 to the pianist Fronani she retired from the opera, though occasionally appearing in vaudeville. A.

Lussy, Mathis (Stans, 1828–1910, Montreux). Able Swiss piano-teacher and writer, pupil of Businger and Nägeli, becoming active at Paris. Author of Exercices de Mécanisme, 1863, Traité de l'Expression Musicale, 1873 (7th ed. 1897, partly republished as Le Rythme Musical, 1883, 4th ed. 1911), Histoire de la Notation Musicale, 1882 (Prix Bordin from the Académie), L'Anacrouse dans la Musique Moderne, 1903, De la Diction Musicale et Grammaticale, 1909 (in Riemann Festschrift), and La Sonate Pathétique de Beethoven, 1912 (edited by Dechevrens), besides some articles. Much of his theory of rhythm is adapted from Momigny, but his analysis has freshness and interest.

Lustig, Jakob Wilhelm (Hamburg, 1706–1796, Groningen). North German organist, from 1728 active at Groningen, where he published several theoretical text-books (from 1754) and made translations into Dutch of works by Quantz, Werckmeister, Marpurg and Burney. Wrote clavier-sonatas (1742).

Lüstner, Ignaz Peter (n. Jauer, 1793–1873, Breslau). Silesian violinist, from 1819 concertmaster in the private band of Prince Karolath, from 1826 in a similar post at Breslau and from 1844 head of his own violin-school there. Of his five sons, all violinists or 'cellists, Karl (1834–1906) and Louis (1840–1918) were prominent in the Kurorchester at Wiesbaden, while Otto (1839–1889), after being concertmaster at Berlin and Sondershausen, from 1877 was town-director at Barmen.

Lüttendorff, Willibald Leo, Freiherr von (Augsburg, 1856). Bavarian painter, since 1889 head of the Art School at Lübeck and curator of the Art Gallery. Author of a notable lexicon, Die Geigen- u. Lautenmacher vom Mittelalter bis zur Gegenwart, 1904 (4th ed. 1922).

Luther, Martin (1483–1546). 16th C. G.

Lutkin, Peter Christian (Thompsonville, Wis. 1858). Able American teacher, conductor and composer, pupil of Mrs. R. Watson, Eddy, Gleason, the Berlin Hochschule, Stepanov, Moszkowski and Leschetizky, from 1884 organist at St. Clement's in Chicago and in 1891–97 at St. James', from 1888 theory-teacher at the American Conservatory there, and since 1891 at the music-school of Northwestern University (Evanston), becoming dean in 1895. Besides bringing the school to high efficiency, he has had notable success with various choral enterprises and since 1908 has conducted the annual Chicago North Shore Festival (at Evanston). He has had manifold relations with musical interests generally and in 1911 and '20 was president of the Music Teachers' National Association. In 1908 he lectured at the Western Theological Seminary (Chicago), his lectures appearing as Music in the Church, 1910, and has written often for periodicals, besides joining in the editing of both the Methodist and Episcopal Hymnals (1905, '18). Mus. D. of Syracuse Univ. in 1900. Has written much church-music, including a Communion Service, 4 Te Deums, 4 Magnificats (2 a cappella), Psalms 51 and 137, many fine anthems, part-songs and songs, an organ-march and preludes, etc. A.

Lütsch, Karl (Petrograd, 1839–1899, Blankenburg). Able Russian piano-teacher, pupil of Kroll, Moscheles, Henselt, E. F. Richter and Kiel, for many years engaged at the Petrograd Conservatory (at first as Dreyschock's assistant). Editor of several valuable collections of études and pieces.

Lutz, Wilhelm Meyer (n. Kissingen, 1822–1903, London). Bavarian organist, conductor and composer, educated at Würzburg University, pupil of his father, Eisenhofer and Keller, removing in 1848 to England, where in 1851–55 he was conductor at the Surrey Theatre, London, and in 1869–81 at the Gaiety, besides touring with Grisi and Mario, Pyne and Harrison, etc. From about 1850 he was also organist at St. George's Cathedral (R. C.). Wrote many clever operettas (from 1855), a cantata, orchestral, chamber- and piano-pieces, masses and other Catholic church-music, and songs. G.

Lux, Friedrich (Ruhla, 1820–1895, Mayence). Able Saxon conductor and composer, pupil of his father and F. Schneider, appearing as both organist and pianist when but twelve, from 1841 director at the Dessau court-opera, in 1851–77 opera-director at Mayence and from 1864 also leader of choral societies. Wrote the operas Käthchen von Heilbronn, 1842, Rosamunde (not given), Der Schmied von Ruhla, 1882, and Die Fürstin von Athen, 1890 (comic), the dramatic scene Coriolan, the choral symphony Durch Nacht zum Licht, 1895, other orchestral and choral works, 3 string-quartets, a piano-trio, organ- and piano-pieces, songs, etc. He directed several of the Middle Rhine Festivals. Life by Reissmann, 1887 (2d ed. 1895).

Luython, Charles (?–1620). 16th C. G.

Luzzaschi, Luzzasco (?–1607). 16th C. G.

Luzzi, Luigi (Olevano, 1828–1876, Stradella). Italian composer of the operas Chiarina, 1853, Tripilla, 1874 (buffa) and Fra Dolcino (not given), a symphony, an orchestral funeral-march, effective songs, choral pieces, etc.

Lvov, Alexis Feodorovitch (Reval, 1799–1871, n. Kovno). Noted Russian violinist and conductor, trained for the army and rising to high rank and favor (adjutant to Nicholas I), from 1836 his father's successor as head of the Imperial Choir at Petrograd. Wrote the Russian National Hymn, 1833, 3 operas, a violin-concerto, violin-fantasias, a Stabat Mater, 6 Psalms, other church-music, etc., and edited a large collection of old Russian ritual-chants, besides writing an essay on their rhythm (1859). G.

Lyon, James (Newark, N. J. 1735–1794, Me.). American clergyman, noteworthy for writing an ode in 1759 and editing the tune-book Urania in 1761, being thus closely contemporaneous with Hopkinson, the first American composer. A.

Lyra, Justus Wilhelm (Osnabrück, 1822–1882, n. Hanover). From 1846 Lutheran clergyman at various places. Wrote many popular part-songs and songs (collected in 1896), a Christmas cantata (1872) and some other church-music. Author of a discussion of Bertrand's 'color-music' (1864), essays on the Lutheran liturgy (1873 and 1904, the latter edited by M. Herold), and a study of Ornithoparcus' 'church-accents' (1877). Memoir by Bär and Ziller, 1900.

Lysberg [Bovy], Charles Samuel (n. Geneva, 1821–1873, do.). Swiss pianist, pupil of Chopin and Delaire, from about 1845 teacher at the Geneva Conservatory. Wrote about 150 salon-pieces for piano and a comic opera (1854). G.

M

Maas, Gerald Christopher (Mannheim, 1888). Gifted Badenese 'cellist, trained at the Paris Conservatory and by Jul. Klengel, from 1908 playing with the Munich Konzertverein, from 1912 with the Berlin opera-orchestra and from 1914 professor at the Hoch Conservatory, Frankfurt, and member of the Rebner Quartet there. He has had success as soloist throughout Germany, at London and in America (from 1916), in 1917-21 playing in the Letz Quartet. A.

Maas, Joseph (Dartford, 1847-1886, London). Able English tenor, pupil of J. L. Hopkins, Mme. Bodda-Pyne and Sangiovanni, appearing in concert in London from 1871 and from 1872 in opera (in English), in 1873 joining the Kellogg troupe in America, but in 1878-81 returning to sing under Carl Rosa and soon at the London opera-houses. He was also a favorite at choral festivals. G.

Maas, Louis Philipp Otto (Wiesbaden, 1852-1889, Boston). Able Hessian pianist and composer, educated in England, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and of Liszt, from 1875 teaching at Leipzig and in 1880 migrating to Boston, where he taught at the New England Conservatory and in 1881-82 led the Philharmonic Orchestra, besides touring as soloist. Wrote the symphony On the Prairies, overtures, suites and other orchestral music, a piano-concerto, a string-quartet, sonatas for violin and for piano, piano-pieces and songs. A.

Mabellini, Teodulo (Pistoia, 1817-1897, Florence). Italian composer, pupil of the Florence Conservatory and of Mercadante (as protégé of the Grand-duke of Tuscany), producing his first opera at nineteen at Florence, where from 1843 he was conductor of the Società Filharmonica and from 1848 also at the Pergola, as well as court-director from 1847. In 1859-87 he was professor at the Conservatory. Wrote the operas Matilda a Toledo, 1836, Rolla, 1840, Ginevra degli Almieri, 1841, Il Conte di Savagna, 1843, I Veneziani a Constantinopoli, 1844, Maria di Francia, 1846, Il Venturiere, 1851 (with Giordani), Baldassare, 1852, and Fiammetta, 1857, the oratorios Eudossia e Paolo, and L'Ultimo Giorno di Gerusalemme, several cantatas, masses, a Requiem, motets, chamber-music, piano-pieces, etc. Memoir by Giannini, 1899. G.

Macan, Kárel Emanuel (Pardubitz, 1858). Bohemian composer (blind), trained at the Prague Organ School. Has written a string-quartet, a piano-trio, a dumka for violin, several masses (including one in the Dorian mode), about 80 effective songs and piano-pieces.

Macbeth, Allan (Greenock, 1856). Scottish organist and choral conductor, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, since 1876 engaged in Glasgow churches, from 1880 also directing choral societies and since 1890 head of the Athenæum Music School. Has written orchestral and chamber-pieces (trios, a 'cello-suite, etc.), several cantatas, part-songs, songs and an operetta. G.

Macbeth, Florence (Mankato, Minn. 1891). Gifted American operatic soprano, pupil chiefly of Y. Griffith, in 1912 making her début in both concert and opera in Holland and Germany, and in 1914 joining the Chicago Opera Company. A.

MacCunn, Hamish (Greenock, 1868-1916, London). Talented Scottish conductor and composer, trained at the Royal College, London, in 1888-94 professor of harmony there, from 1898 conductor for Carl Rosa, at the Savoy Theatre and (from 1910) as assistant to Beecham in his opera undertakings. Wrote the operas Jeanie Deans, 1894, and Diarmid and Ghríne, 1897, the cantatas Lord Ullin's Daughter, Bonny Kilmeny, The Lay of the Last Minstrel, all 1888, The Cameronian's Dream, 1890, Queen Hynde of Caledon, 1892, The Death of Percy Reed (not given) and The Wreck of the Hesperus, 1905, the comedy The Golden Girl, 1905, the overtures Cior Mhor, 1885, The Land of the Mountain and Flood, 1888, and The Dowie Dens o' Yarrow, 1888, the orchestral ballade The Ship o' the Fiend, 1888, Highland Memories for orchestra, Psalm 8, 1901, some part-songs, about 80 songs, pieces for violin and for 'cello, etc. In 1912 he followed Coleridge-Taylor as professor at the Guildhall School. G., A.

Macdougall, Hamilton Crawford (Warwick, R. I. 1858). Able American organist, pupil of Bonner, Sherwood, S. B. Whitney, Lang and Turpin, from 1882 at the Central Baptist Church in Providence, from 1895 at the Harvard Church in Brookline and since 1900 professor at Wellesley College. He has often lectured elsewhere and has been active in many musical societies, especially the American Guild of Organists. Mus. D. of Brown Univ. in 1901. Has written Psalm 95, the men's chorus The Red Cross Knight, a festival setting of 'Onward, Christian soldiers', many anthems, music for the Masonic ritual, part-songs, songs, a piano-trio, etc. Author of several sets of piano-studies and many periodical articles. A.

MacDowell, Edward Alexander (New York, 1861-1908, do.). Distinguished American pianist and composer, as a boy pupil of three South American teachers (including Carreño), later of the Paris and Frankfurt Conservatories and of Ehlert, in 1881-84 teaching at the Darmstadt Conservatory, in 1882 visiting Liszt, who asked him to play his 1st piano-suite at the Zurich meeting of the Allgem. Deutscher Musikverein, and then settling at Wiesbaden. In 1884 he visited America and married Marian Nevins. In 1888 he returned, making his home in Boston, but speedily becoming widely known as both player and composer. In 1896-1904 he was professor at Columbia University (the first appointee on a new foundation), resigning partly because of ill-health and presently becoming mentally disabled. While in New York he was in 1897-99 conductor of the Mendelssohn Glee Club. In 1896 he was made Mus.D. by Princeton University and in 1902 also by the University of Pennsylvania. These honors were signs of his notably prompt recognition as the most original and gifted musician of American origin. One of his earliest and most effective exponents was Mme. Carroño. Though fascinating and forceful as player, his lasting significance lies in his singular gifts as composer. He usually employs small types of form, though amply competent and even eloquent in larger ones. He frequently indicates by title or motto a definite poetic image or conception by which his fancy has been stimulated. Yet his actual expression rarely seems like 'program-music' in the ordinary sense. It is rather depictive of a sensitive mood, tonally wrought out not conventionally, but in idioms of melody, harmony and rhythm that are usually full of creative freshness. He is so much at home in structural technique that he is inevitably coherent and impressive. Yet that which is most telling is the subtle incorporation of his tonal materials with personal feeling. In this instinctive attitude toward his art he presents obvious analogies with Schumann and especially with Grieg. But he was not the follower of any one, though his early development was much affected by intimacy with Raff and by familiarity with the works of many other romanticists.

His literary power was somewhat embodied in the lectures that he gave at Columbia (collected by Baltzell as Critical and Historical Essays, 1911), but more characteristically in the many poems that he wrote or translated for his vocal (and some instrumental) works (collected as Verses, 1908).

The list of his works is as follows (opus-numbers in brackets):

For Orchestra

Symphonic Poems—Hamlet, Ophelia (1885) [22], Lancelot and Elaine (1888) [25], Lamia (1888-89) [29].

Suites—1st (1891) [42], 2d, Indian (1897) [48].
The Saracens, Lovely Alda (fragments from a projected symphony based on the Chanson de Roland) (1891) [30].

Piano-Concertos—1st, A min. (1884) [15], 2d, D min. (1890) [23].

Romance for cello and orchestra (1888) [35].

For Piano

Suites—1st Modern (1883) [10], 2d do. (1883) [14].
 Sonatas—1st, Tragica (1893) [45], 2d, Eroica (1895) [50], 3d, Norse (1900) [57], 4th, Kellic, (1901) [59].

Prelude and Fugue (1883) [13]; Serenade (1883) [16];
Air and Rigaudon (1894) [49].

2 Fantasiestücke (1884) [17]; 2 Stücke (1884) [18];
 4 Wald-Idyllen (1884) [19]; 4 Stücke (1887) [24]; 6
Idyllen (1887) [28]; 6 Gedichte (after Heine) (1887) [31];
 4 Kleine Poesien (after Tennyson, Bulwer, Rossetti, Shelley) (1894) [32]; (3) Les Orientales (1889) [37]; 6 (8) Marionetten (1888) [38]; 19 Woodland-Sketches (1896) [51]; 8 Sea-Pieces (1898) [55]; 6
Fireside-Tales (1902) [61]; 19 New England Idylls (1902) [62].

Étude de Concert (1889) [36]; 12 Etüden (1890) [39];
 12 Virtuosos-Etüden (1894) [46].

Amourette [1]; In Lulling Rhythm [2]; 4 Forgotten Fairy-Tales [4]; 6 Fancies [7]; Waltz [8] (nos. 1-7 published in 1896-98 under the pseudonym 'Edgar Thorn'). 6 small pieces elaborated from sketches of J. S. Bach (1890).

For 4 hands—3 Poesien (1886) [20]; 5 Mondbilder (1886) [21].

Technical Exercises, 3 vols. (1893-95).

For Voice

30 choruses and part-songs, including Northern Songs (1891) [43], Barcarole (1892) [44], many for men's voices [3, 5, 6, 27, 41, 52, 54].

42 solo-songs, including From an Old Garden (1887) [26], Love-Songs (1890) [40], [9, 11, 12, 33, 34, 47, 56, 58, 60].

Edited Works

For orchestra—4 Shakespeare-Ouvertüren by Raff (posthumous).

For men's chorus—11 part-songs by various composers.
 For piano—about 40 pieces by various composers.

[For bibliographical details about all the above, see Sonneck, Catalogue of First Editions of Edward MacDowell, 1917. As to the intricate questions of variant versions and editions, see also Sonneck's article in M.T.N.A. Proceedings, 1911.]

Memoirs by L. Gilman, 1908, and Page, 1910.
 See also Adams, What the Piano Writings of MacDowell Mean to the Student, 1913, and article by Currier, 1915 (in Musical Quarterly).

The interest in his genius has led to the formation of many MacDowell Clubs (from 1905). Soon after his death, also, a Memorial Association was established to maintain a musical center at his summer-home in Peterboro, N. H., where since 1910 summer-festivals of more or less importance have been given annually. G. A.

Mace, Thomas (1613-1709?). 17th C. G.

Macfarlane, William Charles (London, 1870). English-American organist, brought up from early childhood in New York, pupil of his father and S. P. Warren, from 1885 at various churches there, notably Temple Emanu-El (from 1898) and St. Thomas' (from 1900), in 1912-19 city-organist at Portland Me., and since then in New York again. Mus.D. of Bates College in 1918. Has written several organ-works, the cantata The Message of the Cross, 1907, 2 operettas, anthems, part-songs and songs. Several of his vocal works have gained prizes, and he has often appeared as concert-organist. A.

Macfarren, George Alexander (London, 1813-1887, do.). Accomplished English composer (though from 1865 blind), trained by Lucas and at the Royal Academy, where from 1837 he was professor and from 1875 principal, succeeding Bennett, whom he also followed in 1875 as professor at Cambridge University. He lectured at times at the Royal and London Institutions, prepared analyses for the programs of the Sacred Harmonic and Philharmonic Societies, wrote for the Musical World and contributed to the Imperial Dictionary of Biography and to Grove's Dictionary, besides exerting a wide and beneficial influence as both teacher and adviser. In 1875 he was made Mus.D. by Cambridge and in 1883 was knighted.

His compositions were numerous and varied, marked by careful workmanship, but not by great originality or power. They include Operas—The Devil's Opera, 1838, Don Quixote, 1846, King Charles II, 1849, Robin Hood, 1860, Jessy Lea, 1863, She Stoops to Conquer, The Soldier's Legacy, Helvellyn, all 1864, 4 others not given, 2 masques, some farces, melodramas, etc.

 Oratorios—St. John the Baptist, 1873 (Bristol), The Resurrection, 1876 (Birmingham), Joseph, 1877, King David, 1883 (both Leeds).
 Cantatas—Leonora, 1851, May-Day, 1856, Christmas, 1859, Songs in a Cornfield, 1868, The Lady of the Lake, 1877, Around the Hearth.
 Symphonies in C (1828), D min., A min., F min. (1834), B-flat, C-sharp min., D, E min.
 Overtures—Cherry Chase (1836), The Merchant of Venice, Romeo and Juliet, Hamlet, Don Carlos, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, etc.
 Concertos for piano, for violin and for flute.
 An orchestral Idyll in memory of Bennett.
 Piano-quintet; quintet for concertina and strings.
 6 string-quartets. Piano-trio; trio for piano, flute and cello. 2 violin-sonatas; 5 violin-romances.
 Flute-sonata. Piano-sonatas. Organ-sonata.
 Services in E-flat (1863) and G (unison); about 85 anthems; other church-music.
 Many glees, part-songs, trios, duets and solo-songs, including sets from Shakespeare, the Arabian Nights, Tennyson, Kingsley, etc.
 Editions of Purcell's Dido and Æneas, Handel's Belshazzar, Judas Maccabæus and Jephtha; harmonizations for Chappell's Music of the Olden Time (1845-49), etc.

Author of Rudiments of Harmony, 1860 (later eds.), Six Lectures on Harmony, 1867 (3d ed. 1880), and Addresses and Lectures, 1888. His wife, Natalia Macfarren (1827-1916), was a successful operatic contralto and also an excellent teacher. Memoir by Banister, 1891. G.

Macfarren, Walter Cecil (London, 1826-1905, do.), brother of the above. English pianist and composer, pupil of the Royal Academy and from 1846 professor there, as well as conductor of its concerts in 1873-80. He appeared often as soloist and in 1882 gave an orchestral series. Wrote a symphony (1880), the overtures A Winter's Tale (1844), The Taming of the Shrew (1845), Beppo (1847), Pastoral (1878), Hero and Leander (1879), Henry V (1881), and Othello (1896), a piano-concerto, 3 piano-trios, 2 violin-sonatas, a cello-sonata, 4 violin-romances, a large number of salon-pieces for piano, the cantata The Song of the Sunbeam (women's voices), part-songs and songs, besides editions of piano-works by Mozart, Beethoven, etc. Autobiography, Musical Memories, 1903. Sketch in Musical Times, 1898. G.

Mach, Ernst (Turas, 1838-1916, n. Munich). Moravian physicist, from 1864 professor at Gratz University, from 1867 at Prague and from 1895 at Vienna. Author of various treatises and articles on acoustics (from 1865), especially as regarded by Helmholtz.

Machado, Augusto (Lisbon, 1845). Able Portuguese composer, pupil of Lisbon teachers, Lavignac and Danhauser, in 1892-1908 inspector at the Lisbon Opera, in 1894-1910 director of the Conservatory and in 1907-11 on the state Board of Education. Has written the operas A Cruz de Oiro, 1873, A Maria da Fonte, 1879, Lauriane, 1883, Os Dorias, 1887, Mario Wetter, 1898, Venere, 1905, and La Borghesina, 1909, many operettas, the symphonic ode Camões e os Luziadas, 1880 (Camoens Tercentenary), organ- and piano-pieces.

Machado, Raphael Coelho (in the Azores, 1814-1887, Rio de Janeiro). Portuguese composer, educated at Lisbon, from 1835 active in Brazil. Wrote masses and other church-music, Brazilian popular songs and several elementary text-books, besides translating various methods from the French.

Machault, Guillaume (1300-1372?). 14th C.

Macirone, Clara Angela (London, 1821-?). English pianist and composer, trained at the Royal Academy, London, and from 1844 professor there. From 1872 she was highly valued as teacher in leading girls' schools. Wrote fine part-songs, some church-music, songs, violin- and piano-pieces. G.

Mackenzie, Alexander Campbell (Edinburgh, 1847). Eminent Scottish violinist, conductor and composer, pupil of the Sondershausen Conservatory and the Royal Academy, London, from 1865 active in Edinburgh as player and leader, from 1879 living in Florence for reasons of health, but in 1885 called to London to conduct the Novello Oratorio Concerts and in 1888 made principal of the Royal Academy there, succeeding Macfarren, besides in 1892-99 directing the Philharmonic. In 1903 he visited Canada as conductor of concerts at many places. His eminence as organizer and composer has brought him numerous honors, including degrees in music from St. Andrew's, Cambridge and Edinburgh Universities (1886, '88, '96) and in laws from Glasgow, McGill and Leeds (1901, '03, '04), membership in the Florence and Swedish Academies, decorations from the courts of Hesse and Saxe-Coburg, etc. He excels in the treatment of imaginative subjects and in the handling of construction and instrumentation. His works include the following:

Operas—Colomba, 1883, The Troubadour, 1886, Phæbe (not given), His Majesty, 1897 (comic), The Cricket on the Hearth, 1914, St. John's Eve, 1919 (short). Operetta, The Knights of the Road, 1905.
 Incidental music for Marmion (1889), Ravenswood (1890), The Little Minister (1897), Manfred (1899) and Coriolanus (1901).

Oratorios—The Rose of Sharon, 1884, Bethlehem, 1894. Also Veni Creator Spiritus, 1891, The Temptation, 1915.

Cantatas—The Bride, 1881, Jason, 1882, The Song of Sayid, 1886, The New Covenant, 1888, The Collar's Saturday Night, 1888, The Dream of Jubal, 1889, The Witch's Daughter, 1904, The Sun-God's Return, 1910. Also Jubilee Ode, 1887, Odes for Buchanan's Bride of Love, 1893.

Overtures—To a Comedy, 1876, Cervantes, 1877, Twelfth-Night, 1888, Britannia, 1894.

Orchestral Rhapsodies—I, Scottish, 1880, 2, do., Burns, 1881, 3, do., Tam o' Shanter, Canadian, 1905.

Orchestral Scherzo, 1878; Ballade, La Belle Dame sans Merci, 1883; Suite, London Day by Day, 1902; Coronation March; Air de Ballet, La Savannah; An English Joy-Peal; Invocation; Morris-Dance and Processional March.

Concertos—for violin (1885); Scottish, for piano (1897). Also Highland Ballad, for violin and orchestra (1893); Suite, do.

String-quartet in G (1875); Piano-quartet in E-flat; piano-trio in D (1874). Violin-suite, Pibroch, 1889; Barcarolle and Villanelle, for violin; 4 sets of violin-pieces. Larghetto and Allegretto, for cello.

For piano—In the Scottish Highlands; Fantasia; English Air and Variations; various other minor pieces. Also 3 organ-pieces.

Chorus, Firm in her native strength; 3 anthems; about 25 trios and part-songs; about 50 solo-songs; 5 recitations with piano. G.

Maclean, Charles Donald (Cambridge, 1843–1916, London). English organist and composer, pupil of Ferd. Hiller, in 1872–75 music-master at Eton College, then recitalist in London (Crystal Palace, 1880) and a civil official in India till 1893, when he returned to London. From 1899 he was prominent in the Internationale Musik-Gesellschaft, becoming editor of its English matter and from 1908 its secretary. Mus.D. of Oxford Univ. in 1865. Wrote the oratorio Noah, 1865, the Gaelic cantata Sulmalla, the symphonic poems Songs of Selma and On the Heights, the overtures Cynthia's Revels (1864), Artegall (1900), Penthesilea, Iona, Laodomeia and Joyous (1908), an orchestral suite, a sinfonietta, various other works for orchestra, a piano-concerto, etc. He contributed a sketch of modern English music to Lavignac's Encyclopédie (1914).

MacLennan, Francis (Bay City, Mich. 1879). Able American operatic tenor, pupil of Dufft, Tamaro, Henschel and Emerich, making his stage-debut in London in 1902, in 1904–06 in America with the H. W. Savage troupes, in 1906–12 with the Berlin Opera, in 1912–15 with the Hamburg Opera, then with the Chicago Opera Company till 1917 and latterly at the Metropolitan, New York, or concertizing. In 1904 he married the noted soprano Florence Easton (b. in England, 1884) and they have been constantly associated in both opera and song-recitals in Europe and the United States. A.

Macmillan, Francis (Marietta, O. 1885). Gifted American violinist, pupil of B. Listemann, Markees, Joachim, Thomson, Flesch and Auer, from 1903 appearing in Europe and from 1906 in America, making a series of extensive tours (in Europe, 1911–14) with marked success. During the World War he was in service as interpreter and first lieutenant. Has written some violin-pieces and made arrangements. A.

Macpherson, Charles Stewart (Liverpool, 1865). English organist, conductor and educator, trained at the Royal Academy, London, from 1887 continuing as teacher. In 1885 he became organist at the suburb of Streatham, in 1885–1902 conductor of the Westminster Orchestral Society and in 1886–1904 of the Streatham Choral Society. Since 1898 he has been examiner for the Royal Academy and Royal College, making trips to Canada and Australia in 1900 and to South Africa in 1905. Since 1903 he has been professor at the Normal College for the Blind (Norwood) and is also on the staff of London University. Has written a symphony, overtures, an orchestral ballade, a violin-concerto, a notable mass, services, songs and piano-pieces, besides several elementary text-books. G.

Macpherson, Charles Stewart (Edinburgh, 1870). Scottish organist and composer, pupil of Martin and the Royal Academy, London, where since 1896 he has been professor. From 1887 he held organ-posts at Weem (Scotland) and for Mme. de Falbe near Bedford, from 1895 was Martin's assistant at St. Paul's in London and in 1916 his successor. In 1914 he conducted the London Church Choir Association. Mus.D. of Durham Univ. in 1919. Has written the overture Cridhe an Ghaidhìl (1895), fantasias on Jacobite and Scottish airs, the orchestral suites Hallowe'en and Highland, a sextet for woodwind, a piano-quartet, Psalm 137, much church-music, organ-pieces, part-songs and songs. G, A.

Macque, Jean de. 16th C. G.

Mader, Raoul Maria (Presburg, 1856). Able Hungarian conductor and composer, at first law-student at Vienna University, then pupil of the Conservatory there (many prizes), from 1882 coach and sub-conductor at the Opera, from 1895 and also since 1921 chief conductor at the Pest Opera, but during 1917–19 director of the Volksoper at Vienna. In 1891–95 he was also chorus-master of the Vienna Academical Gesangverein. Has written the opera Die Flüchtlinge, 1891, the effective operettas Cœur d'Ange, 1895, Kadet Kivasszony, 1900, Das Garnisonsmädel, 1904, Der selige Vincenz, 1907, and A Nagymama, 1908, many ballets, choruses and songs.

Madetoja, Leevi (Oulu, 1887). Gifted Finnish composer, pupil of Järnefelt, Sibelius, d'Indy and Fuchs, for a time conductor at Viipuri and then teacher and a director in the Helsingfors Conservatory, as well as critic for the Sonomat. Has written 2 symphonies, 2 orchestral suites, the symphonic poem Kullervo, a Tanzvision for orchestra and various choral works, including a Stabat Mater for women's voices. He holds a life-stipend from the government (like Sibelius, Kajanus and others).

Maelzel, Johann Nepomuk (Ratisbon, 1772–1838, at sea). Bavarian teacher and mechanician, from 1792 active in Vienna, where from 1808 he was in court-employ and intimate with Beethoven. Among his many inventions were two or three instruments of the orchestration type (the 'panharmonicon', etc.), an automatic chess-player, a mechanical trumpeter and especially the 'metronome' or time-keeper (1816, idea borrowed from Winkel). From 1813 he traveled somewhat, for some years lived in Paris, finally went to America (Philadelphia) and died on the way to the West Indies. His relations with Beethoven were varied, including making ear-trumpets to help his hearing and suggesting his op. 91, which he hoped to exploit on the panharmonicon. G.

Maggini, Giovanni Paolo (1580–1631?). 17th C. G.

Magnard, Lucien Denis Gabriel Albéric (Paris, 1865–1914, n. Senlis). Eminent French composer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory and of d'Indy, never holding official position, but devoting himself to composition at his country-place at Baron, in defense of which he lost his life. Wrote the operas Yolande, 1892, Bérénice, 1911, and Guerceur (1914), all to his own texts, 3 symphonies, an overture, an orchestral suite in antique style, the orchestral Chant Funèbre, Hymnes à la Justice et à Vénus, a quintet for piano and wind, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, sonatas for violin and for 'cello, and a few songs. G. A.

Magnette, Paul (Liège, 1888-1914, do.). Belgian writer, pupil of Riemann, author of short works on Berlioz' Symphonie Fantastique (1908), Bruckner (1910), Glazunov (1911) and Litolff (1914), with a French translation of Dittersdorf's Autobiography (1910) and an unfinished dictionary of Walloon musicians.

Magnus, Désiré [Magnus Deutz] (Brussels, 1828-1884, Paris). Belgian pianist, pupil of Vollweiler and the Brussels Conservatory, from 1843 making wide tours throughout Europe and then settling in Paris as player, teacher and critic. Wrote sonatas, salon-pieces, études and a method.

Mahillon, Charles Victor (Brussels, 1841). Belgian specialist on instruments; since 1865 partner in his father's business (see below), in 1869-86 editor of L'Écho Musical and from 1877 also curator of the instrument-collection at the Brussels Conservatory, of which he has issued a notable catalogue (1880, 2d ed. 3 vols. 1893-1912). Author also of Tableaux Synoptiques of voices, instruments and harmony, treatises on acoustics (1874) and on Le Matériel Sonore des Orchestres, 1897, a study of the Boehm flute and an elaborate work on wind-instruments, besides valuable dictionary articles. G.

Mahillon, Charles, & Co. A Brussels firm of instrument-makers, founded in 1836 by Charles Mahillon (1813-87), succeeded by his sons Victor (see above) and Joseph, and with a London branch managed by a third son, Fernand. G.

Mahler, Gustav (Kalisht, 1860-1911, Vienna). Distinguished Bohemian conductor and composer, trained at Vienna University and Conservatory, from 1880 engaged as theater-director at Hall, Laibach and Olmütz, from 1883 at Kassel as second court-conductor, in 1885-86 assistant to Angelo Neumann at the Prague Opera, from 1886 assistant to Nikisch at the Leipzig Opera, from 1888 in charge of the Pest Opera and effecting marked gains in efficiency, from 1891 director of the Hamburg Opera, from 1897 court-director at Vienna, bringing the opera to unexampled perfection, and from 1907 in New York as chief conductor at the Metropolitan, but from 1909 as leader of the Philharmonic, which he completely reorganized. Early in 1911, however, his health gave way. While at Vienna he directed the Gesellschaft Concerts in 1898-1900, and he occasionally served as guest-conductor elsewhere (as in London in 1892). His primary reputation came from his extraordinary equipment of intellect, temperament and will for the work of conducting. But he had colossal ambitions as composer as well and from about 1890 built up a series of very extended and elaborate orchestral works whose absolute artistic significance is more or less debated, though their earnestness of idea and fine workmanship are acknowledged. His total compositions include the following:

Symphonies—1, D (1891), 2, C min., with alto and chorus (1895), 3, D min., with alto and choruses of women and boys (1896), 4, G, with soprano (1901), 5, C-sharp min. (1904), 6, A min. (1906), 7, E min. (1908), 8, E-flat, with seven soloists, two choruses and boys' chorus (1910), 9, D (1912). Though he directed that sketches for a 10th Symphony should be destroyed, they were developed by Mikorey as Symphonia Enquadiana (1913, Berlin).

Das klagende Lied, for soli, chorus and orchestra. Song-Cycles, with orchestra—Des Knaben Wunderhorn (12 nos.), Rückert-Lieder (5 nos.), Lieder eines fahrenden Gesellen (4 nos.), Kindertotenlieder (5 nos.), Das Lied von der Erde (6 nos.). Several single songs with orchestra.

Songs, with piano—3 books (early) and a few others. Operatic works—Die Argonauten, Rübezahl (both early and unimportant).

Arrangements—Weber's Die drei Pintos (1888), Mozart's Die Hochzeit des Figaro and one of Bach's suites.

Sketches or memoirs by Schiedermair, 1900, Specht, 1905, '13, Stefan, 1908, '10-12, G. Adler, 1916, and Neisser, 1918, besides numerous articles. G. A.

Mahr, Emil (Wiesbaden, 1851-1914, Boston). Hessian violinist, pupil of Joachim, from 1877 concertmaster under Richter in London and from 1885 also under Henschel there, and from 1887 professor at the New England Conservatory in Boston. In 1876 and '82 he played in the Bay-reuth orchestra.

Mahu, Stephan. 16th C. G.

Maier, Guy (Buffalo, N. Y. 1892). American pianist, pupil of the New England Conservatory, Boston, and of Geo. Proctor, Arthur Schnabel and Juon, since about 1915 becoming noted for two-piano interpretations with Lee M. Pattison.

Maier, Julius Joseph (Freiburg, 1821-1889, Munich). Badenese librarian and theorist, from 1850 teaching at the Munich Conservatory and in 1857-87 head of the music-division of the Munich Library. Published vol. i (1879) of a notable catalogue of the musical manuscripts there (to about 1700).

Maikapar, Samuel (Kherson, 1867). Russian pianist, trained mainly at the Petrograd Conservatory and under Leschetizky, from about 1895 appearing with success in Russia and Germany, then settling at Moscow and since 1910 professor at the Petrograd Conservatory. Has written 2 piano-sonatas, many graceful pieces, some études and sets of songs, besides a work on Musical Hearing, 1900.

Maillard, Jean. 16th C. G.

Maillart, Louis [called Aimé] (Montpellier, 1817-1871, Moulins). Genial French composer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1841), with considerable travel. Wrote the operas Gastibelza, 1847, Moulins de Tilleuls, 1849, La Croix de Marie, 1852, Les Dragons de Villars, 1856 [in Germany as Das Glückchen des Eremiten], Les Pêcheurs de Catane, 1860, and Lara, 1864, and several cantatas. G.

Mailly, Alphonse Jean Ernest (Brussels, 1833-1918, do.). Brilliant Belgian organist, pupil of the Brussels Conservatory and from 1861 teacher of piano and organ there, with many tours as virtuoso. Wrote an organ-sonata, many fantasias (including one with orchestra), a serenade for flute, violin, 'cello, organ and piano, a piano-trio, piano-pieces, motets, etc.

Mainwaring, John (1735-1807, Cambridge). English clergyman, author of the first life of Handel (1760, anonymous).

Mainzer, Joseph (Treves, 1801-1851, Manchester). Rhenish singing-teacher (trained as a priest and holding the title of abbé), from 1832 driven to Brussels because of sympathy with the Polish revolution, from 1834 in Paris, from 1841 in London and Edinburgh and from 1847 in Manchester. Besides establishing popular classes after Wilhem's system and publishing many text-books, at Paris he started the Chronique Musicale in 1838 and at London Mainzer's Musical Times in 1842 (taken over by Novello in 1844). Author also of reminiscences (1838, '42), besides 2 slight operas (1833, '39). G.

Mair, Franz (n. Vienna, 1821-1893, do.). Austrian choral leader and composer, from 1883 founder and conductor of the Schubertbund at Vienna. Wrote many effective works for men's voices, music for several plays and instrumentation for Schubert's Gondelfahrer.

Majo, Gian Francesco di (Naples, ?1740-1771, Rome). Short-lived Italian organist and composer, pupil of the Conservatorio S. Onofrio, Naples, from about 1760 connected with the Royal Chapel there as organist or maestro. Wrote about 15 operas, oratorios, 5 masses, other church-music, etc. G.

Major, Julius Jacques (Kaschau, 1859). Able Hungarian pianist and composer, trained at the Pest Academy and since 1896 head of a school there, besides from 1894 leading a women's choral society. Has written the operas Lisbeth, 1901, Erysika, 1901, Széchi Maria, 1906, and Mila, 1913, 6 symphonies, the symphonic poem Balaton, concertos for piano, for violin and for 'cello, a serenade for strings, a Concert Symphonique and 3 fantasias for piano and orchestra, a Bosnian Rhapsody, 3 string-quartets, 3 string-trios, several violin-sonatas, a Hungarian piano-sonata, the choral work Niels Finn, Psalm 47, choruses for women's voices, and songs. Author of a text-book in counterpoint (1918).

Malashkin, Leonid Dimitrievitch (1842-1902, Moscow). Russian composer of the opera Ilya Murometz, 1879, a symphony (1872), considerable church-music, songs and piano-pieces, besides a collection of Ukrainian folk-songs.

Malát, Jan (Alt-Bunzlau, 1843). Bohemian composer of the operas Stáňa, 1899, and Veselé Náměvy, 1908.

Malata, Fritz (Vienna, 1882). Able Austrian pianist, at first in practice as an engineer, but in 1911 diverted into music by Steinbach. After study at the Cologne Conservatory from 1913 he was assistant there (in 1914 taking the Ibach prize and in 1915 the Mendelssohn prize) and since 1916 has taught training-classes at the Hoch Conservatory, Frankfort (succeeding Hoehn).

Malata, Oscar (Vienna, 1876). Austrian conductor, trained at the Vienna Conservatory, from about 1900 opera-conductor at Belgrade, Elberfeld, Hamburg, Bremen and Dresden and since 1909 orchestra-conductor at Chemnitz, in 1919 becoming general director for the city. Has written several operas, orchestral and piano-pieces.

Maldegheem, Robert Julien van (Denterghem, 1810-1893, n. Brussels). Belgian organist, editor of a valuable Trésor Musical, 29 vols. 1865-93, containing old Belgian works. He was also editor for a time of the periodical Cecilia.

Malder, Pierre van (Brussels, 1724-1768, do.). Belgian violinist and composer, long soloist at the Brussels Opera and from 1758 for Prince Charles of Lorraine. He was one of the early exemplars of the new instrumental style, writing many symphonies, quartets, trios and violin-sonatas (some dating from 1757), besides some operas, including La Bagarre, 1762.

Maleingreau, Paul de (Trélon-en-Thiérache, 1887). French composer, brought up in Namur, pupil of Tinel, writing, in a style influenced both by Tinel and by Bach, 2 suites for piano (the smaller Les Angelus du Printemps) and for organ an Opus Sacrum, Symphonie de Noël and Symphonie de la Passion, also a 'cello-sonata.

Malherbe, Charles Théodore (Paris, 1853-1911, n. Lisieux). Able French critic and historian, originally trained as a lawyer, then pupil of Danhauser, Wormser and Massenet, from 1881 active as writer for various Paris papers, especially Le Ménestrel, Guide Musical and Monde Artiste, and from 1896 archivist at the Opéra (till 1899 as Nutter's assistant). He also lectured at the École des Hautes Études Sociales. He made an extraordinary collection of musical autographs which he bequeathed to the Conservatory. Wrote 4 operas, including L'Amour au Camp, 1905, music for Les Yeux Clos (1896), the ballet Cendrillon, some orchestral pieces, also for violin and for piano, songs, etc. Author of two discussions of Wagner (1886, '91, both with Soubies), two histories of the Opéra-Comique (1887, '92-93), critiques of Massenet's Esclarmonde (1889), Saint-Saëns' Ascanio (1890) and Tchaikovsky's 6th Symphony (1901), a life of Auber (1911) and catalogues of the works of Donizetti (1897) and of Gounod. He was active in the publication of Rameau's works and of those of Berlioz. G.

Malibran, Alexandre (Paris, 1823-1867, do.). French violinist and critic, pupil of Spohr, from 1845 living at Kassel, after 1850 starting musical papers at Paris, Frankfort and Brussels without permanent success, as well as concerts in Paris at the Gaietés after Pasdeloup's example. Author of a life of Spohr (1860), besides some orchestral and chamber-works and a mass for the Légion d'Honneur (for men's voices).

Malibran, Maria Felicità, née García (Paris, 1808-1836, Manchester), daughter of Manuel García. Extraordinary French (-Spanish) operatic contralto, pupil mainly of her father, appearing in Naples when but a child of five and making her formal début at London in 1825, followed by a season's engagement there and by two years of brilliant success in New York (1825-27), at first with her father. During this sojourn she married the French merchant Malibran, from whom she soon separated. For a time she sang in the choir of Grace Church. In 1827 she entered upon a career of immense success at Paris, whence in 1829 she went again to England, from 1830 on tours with the violinist de Bériot (whom she formally married in 1836, after the legal annulment of her first marriage) and from 1832 to Italy. Everywhere the richness of her voice, her musical and histrionic intelligence and the force of her personal magnetism combined to make her famous. Her premature death was caused by too quickly resuming work after a fall from a horse. Besides her singing she made somewhat of a mark as pianist and even as composer (some works published by Troupenas as her Derniers Pensées Musicales). Memoirs by Barbieri, 1836, Nathan, 1836, Von Treskow, 1837. Comtesse Merlin, 1838, Bürkli, 1840, Legouvé, 1880, Heron-Allen, 1894 (in De Fidiculis Opuscula), Pougin, 1911, and Lanquaine, 1911. G.

Malipiero, Francesco (Venice, 1882). Able Italian composer, pupil of the Bologna Liceo and of Bruch, since 1921 teacher at the Parma Conservatory. Especially since 1911 he has been counted one of the leading Italian progressives. Has written the stage-works Elen e Fuldano, Canossa, 1914, Pantea, Orfeo and several others, the 'mystery' Francesco d'Assisi, many orchestral works, including the earlier Sinfonia del Mare, Sinfonia del Silenzio e della Morte and Arione (poem for 'cello and orchestra) and the later Impressioni dal Vero, 2 series (the first, 1911), Pause del Silenzio, Ditrambo Tragico, Armenia (suite) and Illustrazione Sinfonica per una Favola Cavalleresca, a string-quartet, a 'cello-sonata, the choral work Canto Notturmo d'un Pastore, various piano-pieces and songs. In 1920 he won the Coolidge prize for chamber-music at Pittsfield, Mass. He has also edited and discussed music of the olden time. Sketch by Jean-Aubry, 1919 (in Musical Times).

Malling, Jørgen (Copenhagen, 1836-1905, do.). Danish singing-teacher and composer, pupil of Gebauer and Gade, in 1861 as Ancker Scholar visiting Paris and becoming an admirer of the Chev  system of teaching, which he then sought to make known in northern countries. After short terms as organist or teacher in Denmark, from 1875 he lived first at Vienna and from 1882 at Munich, where for a time he lectured on aesthetics at the University, in 1901 returning to Copenhagen. Wrote the operas Lisenka and Frithjof, the cantata K vala, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, piano-pieces and songs.

Malling, Otto Valdemar (Copenhagen, 1848-1915, do.), brother of the above. Eminent Danish organist, conductor and composer, trained at the Copenhagen Conservatory, from 1878 organist at the S. Petri Kirke, from 1891 at the Heiliggeistes and from 1900 at the Cathedral (Frue Kirke), in 1872-84 leader of the Students' Singing Society and in 1874-93 of the Konzertverein (which he helped to found), and from 1885 teacher at the Conservatory and from 1899 its director, following Winding. Wrote about 100 works, including a symphony, an overture, the orchestral Musique de Ballet and Orientalische Suite, a piano-concerto, 2 fantasias for violin with orchestra, a string-octet, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, the violin-suites Faust and Aus den vier Jahreszeiten, a violin-sonata, several important organ-works, characteristic piano-pieces, the choral works Das heilige Land and Es war einmal ein K nig, the R veil for soli and strings, the ballet Askepot, 1911, and many songs, besides a manual of instrumentation.

Mallinger, Mathilde, n e Lichtenegger (Agram, 1847-1920, Berlin). Able Croatian operatic soprano, trained at the Prague Conservatory and by Lewy, from 1866 engaged at the Munich Opera (singing at the premiere of Die Meistersinger in 1868) and in 1869-82 at the Berlin Opera, with many visits elsewhere. From 1890 she taught at the Prague Conservatory and after 1895 at the Eichelberg School in Berlin. In 1869 she married Baron von Schimmelpfennig. G.

Mallinson, Albert (Leeds, 1870). English organist and song-composer, from 1887 at St. Chad's in Leeds, then for some years at churches in Melbourne (Australia), from 1898 for Viscount Portman in England and from 1904 at the English Church in Dresden. In 1903 he married the Danish singer Anna Steinhauer and with her toured with success in Denmark, Germany and England (from 1906), largely to introduce his own songs. Has written over 300 songs to German, English and Danish verses, the choral work Tegner's Drapa and The Battle of the Baltic (men's voices), a piano-quartet and a piano-trio.

Malliot, Antoine Louis (Lyons, 1812-1867, Rouen). French tenor, pupil of Choron, Garaud  and Banderali, from 1835 employed in various provincial towns and from 1843 teaching at Rouen and writing for the Nouveliste. Wrote the operas La Vend enne, 1857, and La Truffomanie, 1861, and pamphlets on the opera,   Rouen conservatory, etc. (from 1861).

Malmsj , Johan Gustav (n. Lund, 1815-1891, Gothenburg). Important Swedish piano-maker, trained by Marshall at Copenhagen and in 1843 founder of a noted factory at Gothenburg which gained for him the name of 'Nordens Steinway'. He was succeeded in 1891 by his assistant, Alfred Agren, and in 1906 the business was incorporated as a stock-company.

Malten [M ller], Therese (Insterburg, 1855). Superior Prussian operatic soprano, pupil of G. Engel, making her d but in 1873 at Dresden and remaining there in high renown till pensioned in 1903, after 1882 with leave to visit other stages on the Continent and in England (11 times at Bayreuth). In 1882 she made a deep impression as Kundry at the premiere of Parsifal. G.

Malvezzi, Cristofano (1547-1597). 16th C. G.

Malyshevsky, Vitold Josefovitch (Mogilov-Podolsk, 1873). Russian composer, trained in both medicine and music at Tiflis, later pupil of Rimsky-Korsakov, from 1898 instructor at the Nikolai Institute in Petrograd and since 1908 director of the Odessa Music School. Has written 3 symphonies, 2 overtures, a string-quintet, 4 string-quartets, a violin-sonata, a cello-suite, etc., besides a treatise on modulation.

Manhicourt, Pierre de. 16th C. G.

Mancinelli, Luigi (Orvieto, 1848-1921, Rome). Eminent Italian 'cellist, conductor and composer, pupil of Sbolci and Mabellini, from 1863 playing in the Pergola orchestra at Florence and from 1870 at the Rome Opera, where in 1874 he became conductor, from 1881 highly efficient as director of the Liceo Filarmonico at Bologna and also at S. Petronio and the Opera, from 1886 conductor at Drury Lane, London, from 1888 at Covent Garden (till 1906) and also at the Madrid Opera (till 1895), besides serving at the Metropolitan, New York, in 1894-1902 and at Madrid leading the Concert Society for three years. In 1906-12 he was conductor at the new Teatro Colón at Buenos Aires, then retiring to his home on Lago Maggiore. He received numerous honors and decorations in addition to his general fame as a competent interpreter of modern opera, Wagnerian as well as Italian. Wrote the operas Isora di Provenza, 1884, Ero e Leandro, 1897, Paolo e Francesca, 1907, and A Midsummer-Night's Dream (1916), the oratorio Isaiah, 1887, the cantata St. Agnes, 1905, the choral works Tizianello and La Prière des Oiseaux (1916), music for Cossa's Cleopatra, the overtures Romantica and Messalina, the orchestral suite Scene Veneziane, a Carmen Tragicum for orchestra, 2 masses and other church-music. Sketches by Arnedo, 1898, and Orefice, 1921. G.

Mancini, Francesco (Naples, 1674-1739, do.). Italian composer, pupil of the Conservatorio S. Loreto, where he finally became head-teacher, besides from 1709 being maestro at the court. Wrote about 25 operas (from 1697), several oratorios, cantatas, a Magnificat, etc. His Idaspe, 1710, was brought out in London. G.

Mancini, Giambattista (Ascoli, 1716-1800, Vienna). Able singing-teacher, pupil of Bernacchi and Martini, from about 1760 employed at the court at Vienna. Author of a valuable discussion of florid song (1774, 2d ed. 1777).

Mancinus [Mencken], Thomas (1550-1620?). 16th C. G.

Mandič, Josip (Trieste, 1883). Austrian composer of the opera Svačić, 1904.

Mandl, Richard (Prossnitz, 1859-1918, Vienna). Moravian composer, trained at the Vienna Conservatory and somewhat by Delibes (who was his close friend), from 1900 living at Vienna, much hampered by ill-health. Wrote the operas Rencontre Imprévue (Nächtliche Werbung), 1888 (comic), and Parthenia, the symphonic poems Griselidis, 1909 (with soprano, women's chorus and organ), and Stimme des Orients, the rhapsody Algier, 1913, the orchestral suite Viennensis, the overture Zu einem gaskognischen Ritterspiele, 1910, a Hymnus an die aufgehende Sonne for harp, strings and organ, the choral work Gesang der Elfen, 1910 (women's voices), a string-quintet, 5 Intermezzi for piano-trio, violin- and piano-pieces, and many songs. His wife, née Camilla Barda, has published a useful Kompendium d. gesammten Klavertechnik, 3 vols., and some minor compositions.

Mandyczewski, Eusebius (Czernowitz, 1857). Polish-Austrian musicologist, son of a priest in the Orthodox Greek Church, pupil of R. Fuchs and Nottebohm, from 1887 trainer of the Vienna Singakademie and librarian of the Musikfreunde and from 1897 teacher of history at the Conservatory (since 1914 of composition). He is chairman of the Tonkünstlerverein, a member of various other musical societies and commissions and has been active among the editors of standard editions of the works of Haydn and Schubert and of Bach's arias. Author also of a resume of Sammlungen u. Statuten for the history of the Musikfreunde (1912). He is Ph.D. of Leipzig Univ. (1897) and member of many learned societies. Has written choruses, songs and piano-pieces.

Manelli, Francesco (?1595-1670?). 17th C.

Manén, Joan de (Barcelona, 1883). Precocious Spanish violinist, pupil of his father and Alard, early becoming known not only as phenomenal player, but as composer of ultra-modern tendency. Has written the operas Giovanna di Napoli, 1903, Acté, 1903, Der Fackeltanz, 1909, and Der Weg zur Sonne, the symphonic poem Nova Catalonia, 2 violin-concertos (the 2d, Espagnol), the 'concerto grosso' Juventus, a suite, variations on a Tartini theme, 5 Catalonian Caprices and a Scherzo Fantastique, all for violin and orchestra, various other violin-pieces, songs, etc. He has lately lived in Berlin.

Manfredini, Francesco (Pistoia, 1688-?). Italian violinist and composer, pupil of Perti, from about 1705 employed at Ferrara and Bologna, from 1711 director at Monaco, then at Bologna and Pistoia again. Wrote trio-sonatas, concerti and several oratorios (from 1709).

Mangeot, Édouard Joseph (Nantes, 1834-1898, Paris). French piano-maker, inventor of a piano with two keyboards, exploited at the Paris Exposition of 1878 by J. de Zarembski and later in London by Ant. de Kontski. In 1889 he started the periodical Le Monde Musical.

Mangold, Karl Ludwig Amand (Darmstadt, 1813-1889, Oberstdorf). Gifted Hessian conductor and composer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, in 1831-36 and from 1839 violinist in the Darmstadt court-band, becoming in 1848-69 court-director, besides leading the Musikverein from 1839, the Sängerkranz, the Cäcilia and in 1869-75 the Mozart-Verein. Wrote the operas Das Köhlermädchen, Tannhäuser, 1846 (revived, 1892, as Der treue Eckert), Gudrun and Dornröschen, the oratorios Abraham, Wittekind and Israel in der Wüste, the large choral works Frithjof, Hermanns Tod, Ein Morgen am Rhein, Barbarossas Erwachen, Die Weisheit des Mirza Schaffy (prize-cantata), Hermannsschlacht, and Elysium (symphony-cantata), many famous choruses and part-songs for men's voices, the dramatic scena Des Mädchens Klage, songs, 2 symphonies and some chamber-music.

Mankell, Gustav (Christiansfeld, 1812–1880, Stockholm). Able Swedish (-Schleswiger) organist, from 1836 at the Jakobkyrka in Stockholm and from 1853 professor at the Conservatory. He published several fine collections of organ-music and a method (1867).

Mann, Arthur Henry (Norwich, 1850). Able English organist, trained as choirboy by Buck and later at Oxford (Mus.D. 1882), in 1870 at St. Peter's, Wolverhampton, from 1871 at Tettenthal, in 1875 at Beverley Minster and since 1876 at King's College, Cambridge, the music of which he has made famous. Since 1902 he has also been chorusmaster for the Norwich Festivals. He has made special studies of Handel's scores, in 1893 contributing results of research at the Fitzwilliam Museum to the catalogue edited by Fuller-Maitland, and in 1894 joining Prout in the recovery at the Foundling Hospital of the lost wind-parts of The Messiah. Has written the oratorio Ecce Homo, 1882, a Festival Te Deum, 2 Evening Services, anthems, part-songs and organ-pieces, besides editing Tallis' 40-part motet, The Church of England Hymn Book, 1895, and other hymnals. G.

Manners, Charles [Southcote Mansergh] (London?, 1857). Irish operatic bass and manager, trained in music at the Dublin and London Royal Academies and at Florence, from 1881 in the chorus of the D'Oyly Carte Company and in 1882 making his début as soloist (from 1890 in grand opera at Covent Garden), in 1893 visiting America and in 1896–97 South Africa. In 1890 he married the soprano Fanny Moody and in 1897 was formed the Moody-Manners Opera Company, which soon became prominent in London as well as throughout England for efficient performances in English. Prizes have been offered for new operas, and at intervals notable opera-festivals held. G.

Mannes, David (New York, 1866). American violinist, pupil mainly of De Ahna, Halir and Ysaÿe, from 1891 playing in the New York Symphony Society and in 1898–1912 being its concertmaster. In 1902–04 he gave chamber-concerts with his own Quartet and then founded the Symphony Club, which he has since conducted. In 1898 he married the pianist Clara Damrosch (b. 1869) and from 1900 they gave many sonata-recitals in and outside of New York (in 1913 in London). In 1902 he began teaching at the Music School Settlement, and in 1910–15 was its director. In 1912 he started similar work for colored people. Since 1916 he has conducted his own school. A.

Manns, August Friedrich (Stolzenberg, 1825–1907, London). Eminent Pomeranian conductor, of humble origin and meagre early training, from about 1840 gaining experience in military bands at Elbing and Posen, from 1848 at Berlin, where in 1848–51 he was conductor at Kroll's and then bandmaster at Königsberg and Cologne. In 1854 he was brought to England by Schallehn, whom in 1855 he succeeded as conductor of the concerts at the Crystal Palace. He presently changed the band into a full symphony orchestra and advanced the standard of programs and performance until they became famous. Up to his retirement in 1901 he led about 14,000 concerts there, besides 6 Handel Festivals, the concerts of the Glasgow Choral Union in 1879–92, etc. He was knighted in 1904. Memoir by Wyndham, 1909. G.

Mannstädt, Franz (Hagen, 1852). Westphalian conductor, trained at the Stern Conservatory, Berlin, from 1874 theater-director at Mayence, in 1876–79 conductor of the Berlin Symphony Orchestra, then teacher at the Stern Conservatory, for a time Von Bülow's assistant at Meiningen, in 1885–87 and again in 1893–97 conductor of the Berlin Philharmonic and in 1887–93 and from 1897 conductor of the Wiesbaden Opera, becoming court-director.

Mannstein [Steinmann], Heinrich Ferdinand (n. Pirna, 1806–1872, n. Dresden). Saxon singing teacher and writer, pupil of Mieksch, active in Dresden. Author of several treatises on the Italian school of singing (1835–64) and chronicles of the Dresden Court Chapel (1863), besides a catalogue of the works of J. G. Naumann (1841).

Mansfield, Orlando Augustine (n. Warminster, 1863). Able English organist and writer, pupil of W. H. Cox, Turpin and the London College of Music, from 1881 organist at Trowbridge, from 1885 at Torquay and often appearing as recitalist or lecturer. In 1912–18 he was music-director at Wilson College (Chambersburg, Pa.) and in 1918–20 at Brenau College (Gainesville, Ga.). Mus.D. of Trinity College, Toronto, in 1890 and of Toronto Univ. in 1905. Has written about 400 works for organ or piano, besides many arrangements. Author of a text-book in harmony (1896, and many later editions), besides about 500 articles in periodicals. A.

Mansfield, Purcell James (Torquay, 1889), son of the above. English organist, pupil of his father, from 1905 playing in Devonshire churches and since 1910 prominent at Glasgow. Has written many extensive organ-works and 4 overtures.

Manskopf, Jakob Friedrich Nicolas (Frankfort, 1869). Founder of an extensive Musik-historisches Museum at Frankfort.

Mantica, Francesco (Reggio, 1875). Italian (Calabrian) composer and historical scholar, trained at the Conservatorio S. Cecilia, Rome, and director of its library, as well as teacher at the Istituto Nazionale. Besides writing operas, orchestral and chamber-works, he has edited Cavaliere's Rappresentazione (1912) and Caccini's Nuove Musiche (not yet out).

Mantius, Eduard (Schwerin, 1806–1874, Ilmenau). Able North German operatic tenor, pupil of Pohlenz, in 1830–57 engaged at the Berlin Opera and also a favorite in concert and oratorio, later a successful teacher. G.

Mantovani, Tancredi (Ferrara, 1864). Italian editor and historian, pupil of Busi, since 1894 at the Liceo Rossini at Pesaro as librarian and professor of history and aesthetics. Since 1896 he has also edited the Cronaca Musicale. Author of an Estetica Musicale, 1892, lives of Lassus (1895), Rossini (1902), Gluck (1914) and A. Mariani (1921), and many historical articles in periodicals.

Mantuan, Josef (Laibach, 1860). Competent Austrian musicologist, educated at Vienna University (Ph.D.), pupil also of A. Förster, J. Böhm and Bruckner, from 1893 employed at the Imperial Library, becoming chief of the music-division, and since 1909 director of the Landesmuseum at Laibach. Author of an exhaustive catalogue of the musical manuscripts in the Vienna Library (2 vols. 1897–99), a catalogue of the exhibit at the Cimarosa Centenary (1901), Ueber d. Beginn d. Notendrucks, 1901, Ein unbekanntes Druckwerk, 1902, Gesch. d. Musik in Wien, 1904 (part I only), Nachtridentinische Kirchenmusikliteratur, 1907–08 (in Gregorian. Rundschau), a history of Slovenian church-song (1913), a life of the composer Georgiceus (1915), and the Opus Musicum of Handel for the Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Oesterreich, xii, xv, xx, xxiv, besides a brochure on Beethoven u. Klingers Beethoven-Statue, 1902.

Manuel, Roland (Paris, 1891), name originally Lévy. French composer of the opera buffa Isabella et Pantalon, the symphonic poems Le Harem du Vice-Roi and Cynthia, a string-trio, song-cycles, etc., and critic for the Revue Musicale and Éclair. He was a pupil of Roussel and Ravel.

Manzuoli, Giovanni (Florence, ?1725–?). Noted Italian artificial soprano, from about 1745 known in Italy; from 1753 conspicuous at Madrid under Farinelli, in 1764–65 at London, then at Vienna and later at Florence, where in 1770–71 Mozart recognized him as a good artist. G.

Mapleson, James Henry (1828–1901, London). Ambitious English operatic manager, pupil of the Royal Academy, London, at first a singer and violinist, in 1861 in charge of the Lyceum there, in 1862–68 of Her Majesty's, in 1869 of Drury Lane, in 1869–71 with Gye at Covent Garden, then returning to Drury Lane and in 1877 to Her Majesty's. In 1878–86 and also in 1896–97 he managed seasons at the Academy of Music in New York. He was clever and enterprising, but maintained no consistent artistic standard. Author of The Mapleson Memoirs, 2 vols. 1888. G. A.

Mara, Gertrud Elisabeth, née Schmeling (Kassel, 1749–1833, Reval). Extraordinary

Hessian operatic soprano, at first a precocious violinist (appearing in Vienna and London when but nine or ten), pupil at J. A. Hiller's school in Leipzig, where and at Dresden she began to appear from 1766 in both concert and opera, in 1771–80 engaged at the Berlin Opera, then going by way of Dresden, Vienna, Munich and other cities to Paris, where till 1784 she was in keen rivalry with Todi. From 1784 she was increasingly a favorite at London, remaining till 1802, though with several leaves to visit Italy, and making her mark at the Handel Festivals of 1784, '85 and '87 as well as on the stage. In 1802–13 she lived in Moscow, where she lost all her property in the fire of 1812 and betook herself to Reval as a teacher. In 1819 she journeyed to London and made an unsuccessful appearance at the King's Theatre. Her life was embittered by her marriage in 1773 to the dissipated 'cellist Mara (divorced in 1799). Though hampered by physical limitations from childhood and her lack of systematic training, she came to rank as one of the best singers of the later 18th century, especially in works of Handel, Hasse, Jommelli, Graun, etc. Memoirs by Grosheim, 1823, Rochlitz, 1824 (in Für Freunde d. Tonkunst), Bürkli, 1835, Niggli, 1881 (in Waldersee's Sammlung), and E. Wolff, Mignon, 1909. Her autobiography was edited by Riesemann in 1875 (Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung). G.

Marais, Marin (1656–1728). 17th C. G.

Marazzoli, Marco (?–1662). 17th C.

Marbeck [Merbecke], John (1523–1585?). 16th C. G.

Marcel, Lucille [name originally Wasself] (New York, ?1887–1921, Vienna). Gifted American operatic soprano, pupil of Lambert, Mme. Serrano and J. de Reszke, making her début at Vienna in the local première of Strauss' new Elektra and continuing there till 1910. In 1911 she married the conductor Weingartner and was associated with him in 1912–14 at Hamburg and then at Darmstadt, also joining him in guest-engagements with the Boston Opera Company in 1912 and '13. A.

Marcello, Benedetto (Venice, 1686–1739, Brescia). Eminent Italian lawyer, composer and poet, in music trained by Lotti and F. Gasparini. From 1711 he belonged to the Council of Forty at Venice, from 1730 purveyor at Pola and from 1738 chamberlain at Brescia, keeping up musical activity meanwhile. His chief works were settings of Psalms 1–50 for 1–4 voices (1724–27), the texts by Girolamo Giustiniani, also concerti for 5 instruments, sonatas for cembalo and for flute, Canzoni Madrigaleschi, 3 stage-works, 2 oratorios, several cantatas and considerable church-music. Author of the satire Il Teatro alla Modo, 1720? (2d ed. 1722), a theoretical treatise, an early letter about Lotti's madrigals (1705) and various lyrics, sonnets and operalibretti. Memoirs by Sacchi, 1789, Caffi, 1830, Crevet de Charlemagne, 1841, Busi, 1884, Chilesotti, 1885 (in Maestri del Passato), and Fondi, 1909. G.

Marchand, Louis (Lyons, 1669-1732, Paris). French organist, active at Paris from before 1700, in 1703-07 at St.-Honoré and in 1708-14 at the Chapel Royal. In 1717 at Dresden he was challenged to a competition by Bach which he accepted, but defaulted. Wrote 3 books of pieces for the clavessin and 1 for the organ (the latter in new edition by Guilmant), besides some vocal works. Memoir by Pirro, 1904 (I. M. G. Sammelbde.). G.

Marchant, Arthur William (London, 1850-1921, Stirling). English organist, from 1870 at Mansfield, from 1878 in a London suburb, in 1880-82 at Denver (Colo.) Cathedral, from 1882 at Sevenoaks (Eng.), from 1889 at Huntingdon and from 1895 at St. John's, Dumfries (Scotland). Wrote services, anthems, songs, violin-, organ- and piano-pieces, besides 500 Fugue Subjects and Answers (Novello primer) and a pamphlet on voice-culture.

Marchesi, Blanche (Paris, 1864), daughter of Salvatore below. French soprano, pupil of her mother (also in violin of Nikisch and Colonne), at first assistant to her mother, but, after her marriage to Baron André Caccamisi, from 1895 appearing in concert in Germany, France and England and settling in London, though with further Continental tours. Since 1900 she has also sung in opera, in 1901 with the Moody-Manners Company and later at Covent Garden and widely elsewhere. In 1899 and 1909 she visited America. Her repertoire includes most of the Wagnerian rôles. She is now a leading teacher in London. G.

Marchesi, Luigi [called Marchesini] (Milan, 1755-1829, do.). Noted Italian artificial soprano, pupil of Caironi, Albujo and Fioroni, from 1774 appearing throughout Italy and at Munich (1775-77) with rapidly increasing fame, so that in 1785 he made a sojourn at Petrograd and in 1788-90 at London, besides keeping his hold on Italian stages. He retired in 1806. G.

Marchesi, Mathilde, née Graumann (Frankfort, 1826-1913, London). Eminent Hessian singing-teacher, pupil of Nicolai and Garcia, for a time the latter's assistant at Paris, in 1849-54 appearing in England and on the Continent as a concert-singer. In 1852 she married Salvatore Marchesi (see below) and in 1854-61 won much applause as professor at the Vienna Conservatory, continuing till 1878 except for short periods at Paris (1861-65) and the Cologne Conservatory (1865-68). From 1881 she lived in Paris and after 1908 in London. Among her pupils were many of the most famous singers at the end of the 19th century, including Gerster, Melba, Eames, Calvé and her own daughter (see above). Wrote a method, many sets of vocalises and an autobiography (1897), based upon earlier reminiscences (1877, '88). G.

Marchesi de Castrone, Salvatore [Marchese della Rajata] (Palermo, 1822-1908, Paris). Sicilian baritone and teacher, pupil of Raimondi, Lamperti, Fontana and Garcia, making his stage-debut in New York in 1848 (having fled from Italy because of revolutionary activity), but soon returning to London as a concert-singer. After marrying Mathilde Graumann in 1852 (see above) he toured widely with her and also taught at Vienna, Paris and Cologne. He received many honors in Italy and from 1862 was chamber-musician at Weimar. Wrote many charming songs, vocalises and a method, besides translations into Italian of French and German libretti and a report on instruments at the Vienna Exposition of 1873. G.

Marchetti, Filippo (Bologna, 1831-1902, Rome). Italian composer, trained at the Naples Conservatory, making a promising start with his first opera in 1856, but then failing of much success for about ten years. From 1881 he was head of the Accademia S. Cecilia at Rome and from 1885 of its Liceo Musicale. Wrote the operas Gentile da Varano, 1856, La Demente, 1857, Il Paria (not given), Romeo e Giulietta, 1865, Ruy Blas, 1869 (his chief work), Gustavo Wasa, 1875, and Don Giovanni d'Austria, 1880, some orchestral music, choruses and church-music. G.

Marchettus of Padua. 13-14th C. G.

Marcillac, F. (Geneva, 1817-1876, do.). Swiss private teacher, with a Russian family in 1831-48, and later vice-president of the Geneva Conservatory. Wrote a useful Histoire de la Musique Moderne, 1876.

Marcoux, Vanni (Turin, 1879). French-Italian operatic baritone, pupil of Collino and Boyer, from 1899 appearing with rapid success in Paris, London and Brussels (especially at the premières of Février's Monna Vanna in 1909 and of Massenet's Don Quichotte in 1910) and then coming to America, where he has been active in the Chicago Opera Company. A.

Maréchal, Charles Henri (Paris, 1842). Able French composer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1870), from 1867 chorus-master at the Théâtre Lyrique and from 1896 inspector of musical instruction. Has written the operas Les Amoureux de Cathérine, 1876 (short), La Taverne des Trabans, 1881 (Prix Monbinne in 1876), L'Étoile, 1889 (short), Déidamie, 1893, Calendal, 1894, Ping-Sin, 1895, and Daphnis et Chloé, 1899, incidental music to several plays, the sacred drama Le Miracle de Naim, 1891, a Christmas oratorio (1875), Les Vivants et les Morts, 1886, for soli and orchestra, the orchestral pieces Esquisses Vénitienes, 1894, and Antar, 1897, etc. Author of Souvenirs of Rome (1904) and of Paris (1907) and of Lettres et Souvenirs, 1920. G.

Marenco, Romualdo (Novi Ligure, 1841-1907, Milan). Italian ballet-composer, pupil of Fenaroli and Mattei, at first violinist and bassoonist at Genoa and from 1873 ballet-master at La Scala in Milan. Wrote about 20 ballets and the operas Lorenzino de' Medici, 1874, I Moncada, 1880, Le Diable au Corps, 1884 (operetta), Strategia d'Amore, 1896 ('idillio gioioso'), and Federico Struensee, 1908.

Marenzio, Luca (?1550-1599). 16th C. G.

Mareš, Johan Anton (Choteboř, 1719-1794, Petrograd). Bohemian hornist, pupil of Hampel and Zika, from 1748 active at Petrograd, where he became chamber-musician to the Empress Elizabeth and, with the help of Marshal Narishkin, from about 1755 developed the idea of a horn-band in which each player plays only one tone. He held the post of court-director of horn-music till 1779. See Hinrichs, Russische Jagdmusik, 1796.

Maretek, Max (Brünn, 1821-1897, Staten Island, N. Y.). Moravian violinist, conductor and opera-manager, pupil of Seyfried, after experience as band-leader in Germany and England (London in 1844), in 1848 came to New York as conductor under Fry and in 1849-78 was constantly active with operatic troupes in New York, Havana and Mexico, usually with but moderate success. Wrote the operas Hamlet, 1843, and Sleepy Hollow, 1879, pieces for orchestra, etc., besides his anecdotal Crotchets and Quavers, 1855, and Sharps and Flats, 1890. A.

Margulies, Adele (Vienna, 1863). Gifted Austrian pianist, trained at the Vienna Conservatory (several prizes), since 1881 active in New York both as soloist with leading orchestras and as leader of an important Trio (in 1890-92 with Lichtenberg and Herbert, from 1904 with Lichtenberg and Schulz [since 1915 Schroeder]). Since 1887 she has also taught at the National Conservatory. A.

Maria Antonia Walpurgis (Munich, 1724-1780), daughter of the Elector of Bavaria (later Emperor Charles VII) and wife of the Elector of Saxony. Pupil of Ferrandini, Porpora and Hasse, member of the Arcadian Academy in Rome, and composer of the operas Il Trionfo della Fedeltà, 1754, and Telestri, 1763, besides writing libretti for Hasse and Ristori. Memoir by K. von Weber, 1857. G.

Mariani, Angelo (Ravenna, 1822-1873, Genoa). Eminent Italian conductor, pupil of Rossini, from 1844 directing operas at Messina, Milan and Vicenza, in 1847-48 court-conductor at Copenhagen, served in the Italian Revolution and visited Constantinople, and from 1852 conductor at the Teatro Carlo Felice in Genoa, where he made the performances famous. At intervals he was called to lead at other theaters, especially at Bologna. Wrote a Requiem, several cantatas and many fine songs. Memoir by Mantovani, 1921. G.

Marie, Gabriel (Paris, 1852). French conductor, pupil for a time of the Paris Conservatory, from 1881 chorusmaster at the Lamoureux Concerts, from 1887 conductor for the Société Nationale, from 1894 director of the Cecilia Concerts at Bordeaux and since 1912 conductor for the Association Artistique at Marseilles and (in summer) at the Casino at Vichy. In 1887 he led the concerts at the Havre Exposition and in 1891 was associated with Guilman at the Trocadero in Paris. Has written effective pieces for orchestra or strings, choruses, etc.

Marimon, Marie (Paris, ?1835). French operatic soprano, pupil of Duprez, from 1857 favorably known at the Lyrique and the Opéra-Comique in Paris, at Brussels about 1865, in London in 1871-77, then again at Paris and elsewhere on the Continent, besides visiting America in 1879-80. She retired in 1885. G.

Marin, Marie Martin Marcelle de (Bayonne, 1769-?), of Italian descent. Able French harpist, mostly self-taught, from 1783 member of the Arcadian Academy in Rome and then, after military service, on many long tours as virtuoso. Wrote a quintet for harp and strings, a trio for two harps and violin, harp-sonatas and variations, songs with harp, etc.

Marini, Biagio (?1600-1655?). 17th C. G.

Marini, Carlo Ambrogio. 17th C.

Marinuzzi, Giuseppe Gino (Palermo, 1882). Italian conductor, in 1919 at the Costanzi, Rome, then at Chicago and since 1922 at Turin, besides directing the Bologna Liceo in 1915-18. Has written the operas Il Sogno del Poeta, 1899, Barberina, 1903, and Jacquerie, 1918, the symphonic poem Sicania and a Suite Siciliana.

Mario, Giuseppe, Conte de Candia (Cagliari, 1810-1883, Rome). Eminent Sardinian operatic tenor, originally trained for the army, but later pupil of the Paris Conservatory, making a brilliant début there in 1838, soon after appearing in London and long remaining a prime favorite in both capitals. He also sang in Petrograd and in America (1854, also 1872). In 1844 he married the soprano Grisi (d. 1869) and they were constantly associated. He retired in 1871. His voice, appearance and acting had great charm, especially in the rôles of the older Italian type. He was also gifted as a song-singer, but rarely essayed oratorio. Memoirs by L. Engel, 1886, and Candia, 1913. G.

Mariotte, Antoine (Avignon, 1875). French organist and composer, pupil of d'Indy, from 1899 organist at St. Étienne (Loire) and conductor of symphony-concerts, and since 1902 professor at the Lyons Conservatory. Has written the operas Salomé, 1908, Le Vieux Roi, 1913, and Nele Dooryss, a Poème de Pitié, a piano-sonata and pieces, songs, etc.

Markees, Karl (Chur, 1865). Gifted Swiss violinist, trained at the Berlin Hochschule, where since 1889 he has been professor. From about 1885 he played in the Philharmonic and at different times has been a member of the Kruse and the Halir Quartets. From 1909 he made long trips as virtuoso. Author of Beiträge zu technischen Studien für Violine.

Markull, Friedrich Wilhelm (n. Elbing, 1816-1887, Danzig). Able Prussian organist and composer, pupil of his father, Kloss and Fr. Schneider, from 1836 organist at the Marienkirche in Dessau, besides conducting the Gesangverein and writing for the Zeitung. Wrote the operas Maja und Alpino, 1843, Der König von Zion, 1848, and Das Walpurgisfest, 1855, the oratorios Johannes der Täufer and Das Gedächtnis der Ent- schlafenen, 1856, Psalm 86, several symphonies, many organ- and piano-works, arrangements, songs and a Choralbuch, 1845. G.

Markwort, Johann Christian (n. Brunswick, 1778–1866, n. Darmstadt). North German voice-theorist, in 1810–30 choirmaster at Darmstadt, author of thoughtful books on voice-production in speech and song (1826, '47), besides articles in the Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung, Cécilia, etc. From about 1800 he sang in opera at Felsberg, Trieste, Munich and Darmstadt.

Marmontel, Antoine François (Clermont-Ferrand, 1816–1898, Paris). Excellent French piano-teacher, pupil of the Paris Conservatory and from 1837 on its staff, at first in solfeggio, but from 1848 as Zimmerman's successor in piano, continuing in great usefulness till retiring in 1887. Wrote many effective salon-pieces, studies and exercises. Author also of a pedagogical text-book for the pianist (1876, 2 vols.), three sets of critical sketches of players and composers (1878, '80, '82), Éléments d'Esthétique Musicale, 1884, and a Histoire du Piano, 1885. Among his pupils were Bizet, d'Indy, Dubois, Guiraud, Diémer, etc.

Marnold, Jean (Paris, 1859). Able French critic and editor, in 1905 founder of the Mercure Musical and since 1912 writing for the Mercure de France, besides contributing to various other periodicals (as on Greek music in the I. M. G. Sammelbde. 1909).

Marpurg, Friedrich (Paderborn, 1825–1884, Wiesbaden), great-grandson of the following. Westphalian conductor, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, from about 1850 theater-director at Königsberg, then at Mayence (in 1860 leading the 4th Middle Rhine Festival), from 1864 court-director at Sondershausen, from 1869 in a like post at Darmstadt, then at Freiburg and Laibach, and from 1875 settled at Wiesbaden, where from 1883 he conducted the Cäcilienverein. Wrote the operas Musa, der letzte Maurenkönig, 1855, Agnes von Hohenstaufen, 1874, and Die Lichtensteiner (not given).

Marpurg, Friedrich Wilhelm (Seehausen, Altmark, 1718–1795, Berlin). Eminent Prussian critic and theorist, living in Paris in 1746–49, then briefly in Berlin, with several years in Hamburg, and from 1763 at the head of the state-lottery at Berlin. He was a man of decided culture and literary ability, though little is known as to how he became so. Author of manuals of clavier-playing (1750–51, '55), a monumental Abhandlung von d. Fuge, 1753–54, Historisch-Kritische Beyträge zur Aufnahme d. Musik, 5 vols. 1754–62, '82, Handbuch beim Generalbass u. d. Composition, 3 parts, 1755–58 (supplement, 1760), a translation of d'Alembert's Éléments (1757), Kritische Einleitung in d. Gesch. u. Lehrsätze d. alten u. neuen Musik, 1759 (ancient period only), Kritische Briefe über d. Tonkunst, 1759–63 (weekly periodical), Anleitung zur Musik, 1763 (especially as to singing), and a treatise on temperament and tuning (1779). Also wrote some keyboard-sonatas and other pieces, organ-works, songs and part of a mass. See Riemann, Gesch. d. Musiktheorie, 1898. G.

Marqués y García, Pedro Miguel (Palma, 1843). Majorcan composer at Madrid of about 20 zarzuelas (1870–96), orchestral variations, etc.

Marschalk, Max (Berlin, 1863). Prussian critic at Berlin for the Vossische Zeitung (since 1894) and composer of the short operas In Flammen, 1896, Aucassin und Nicolette, 1907, Lobeltanz, Der Held von Oggersheim, Das Wichtelchen and Der Abenteuer, incidental music to various plays, including Maeterlinck's Sœur Béatrice (1904) and Der weisse Heiland (1920), and songs.

Marschner, Franz (Leitmeritz, 1855). Able Bohemian æsthetician, pupil of the Prague Conservatory and of Bruckner, since 1886 teacher at the Vienna Normal School. Author of a discussion of piano-touch (1888), Die Grundfragen d. Aesthetik im Lichte d. immanenten Philosophie, 1899, Kants Bedeutung für d. Musikästhetik d. Gegenwart (in Kantstudien, vi) and Der Wertbegriff als Grundlage d. Musikwissenschaft, 1909 (in Riemann Festschrift). Has also written a violin-sonata, the choral Sturmesmythe and songs.

Marschner, Heinrich August (Zittau, 1795–1861, Hanover). Eminent Saxon conductor and composer, a precocious singer, pianist and composer, mostly self-taught, but encouraged by Rochlitz, Beethoven and others, from 1816 protégé of a Hungarian Count and for a time teacher at Presburg, from 1822 in Dresden, where in 1824–26 he was associated with Weber and Molacchi in the opera-direction. After some travel, from 1827 he was opera-director at Leipzig, beginning to produce his most famous works (Der Vampyr and Der Templer), and in 1831–59 was court-director at Hanover. An invitation in 1836 to become court-director at Copenhagen was declined. Though producing only a few works of the highest quality, he stands out as the companion of Weber and Spohr in the establishment of the German romantic opera. With Weber he had the closest personal relation and their intellectual and artistic tastes were akin. While not Weber's equal in inspiration, he extended the latter's influence and thus helped to prepare the way for Wagner. The list of his works is as follows:

Operas and operettas—Der Kyffhäuserberg (1817), Saidor, 1819, Heinrich IV und d'Aubigné, 1820, Der Holzdieb, 1825, Lucretia, 1826, Der Vampyr, 1828, Der Templer und die Jüdin, 1829, Des Falkners Braut, 1832, Hans Heiling, 1833 (the third of his greater works), Das Schloss am Aetna (Der Feuerbrand), 1836, Der Babu, 1837, Kaiser Adolf von Nassau, 1843, Austin, 1851, Hjarne der Sängerkönig, 1863. Der Templer has been revised by Pfitzner (1912). Incidental music to Kleist's Friedrich von Homburg, Kind's Schön Ellen, Hell's Ali Baba, Rodenberg's Waldmüllers Margret and Mosenthal's Goldschmied von Ulm.

Piano-quartet in B-flat; trios in A min. and G min. 6 piano-sonatas; numerous divertissements, fantasias, variations and dances. Many part-songs for men's voices, including Zigeunerleben; many solo-songs.

He was four times married, losing his first two wives soon after marriage. The others were both operatic singers, Marianne Wohlbrück (d. 1854), whom he married at Dresden in 1826, and Therese Janda [Jander] (d. 1884), married at Hanover in 1855, who subsequently became the wife of Otto Bach. Memoirs and studies by Rodenberg, 1893, Wittmann, 1897, Münzer, 1901, Fischer, 1902 (Musik in Hannover) and 1918 (Erinnerungen), Gaartz, 1912, and collections of letters by Kürschner, 1879, La Mara, 1892, and Istel, 1910 (in Süddeutsche Monatshefte). G.

Marsick, Armand (Liège, 1878). Belgian composer, pupil of Dupuis, Ropartz, Lenepveu and d'Indy, since about 1900 teacher and conductor at the Athens Conservatory. Has written the operas Vendetta Corsa, 1912, and Lara, the lyric scene Ismael, the symphonic poems La Source and La Voile de la Mort, a violin-sonata (1900), pieces for violin, for 'cello and for piano, songs, etc.

Marsick, Martin Pierre Joseph (n. Liège, 1848). Able Belgian violinist, pupil of the Liège Conservatory and of Léonard, Massart and Joachim, from 1873 pursuing the virtuoso-career with success throughout Europe and since 1892 professor at the Paris Conservatory. In 1895-96 he toured in the United States. Has written 3 violin-concertos and many pieces. G.

Marsop, Paul (Berlin, 1856). Prussian writer, pupil of Ehrlich and Von Bülow, since 1881 living in Munich. Author of Musikal. Essays, 1899, Studienblätter eines Musikers, 1903, and Neue Kämpfe, 1913, besides pamphlets on Wagner, etc. At Munich in 1902 he established a popular music-library (in 1907 turned over to the city) and has founded about 20 more in other places. Zur Sozialisierung d. Musik u. d. Musiker, 1919.

Marteau, Henri (Rheims, 1874). Eminent French violinist, trained at the Paris Conservatory, appearing in public at Vienna when but ten and constantly since 1888, everywhere with impressive success (in America often from 1892). From 1900 he was professor at the Geneva Conservatory and in 1908-15 at the Berlin Hochschule, succeeding Joachim. He has often led quartet-parties with masterly skill and is an able conductor. Léonard bequeathed his fine Maggini to him. Has written the opera Meister Schwalbe, 1921, the scene La Voix de Jeanne d'Arc, 1896, 2 violin-concertos (in suite-form), a 'cello-concerto, a quintet for clarinet and strings, 2 string-quartets, a string-trio, violin and viola-pieces, songs with string-quartet, etc. In 1915-18 he was interned in Germany, then led the Gothenberg Opera, in 1921 taught at Prague and is now conductor at Malmö. G. A.

Martens, Frederick Herman (New York, 1874), related to K. P. Grädener of Hamburg. American critic, pupil of Spicker, Timm and W. H. Barber, since 1907 writing for various papers and magazines. Author of many librettos for cantatas and operettas, translations of texts from French and German, verses for songs, a biography of Ornstein (1917) and Violin-Mastery, 1919. A.

Martin, Frank (Geneva, 1890). Swiss composer of an orchestral suite, the symphonic Poèmes-Païens, a sketch for small orchestra, a piano-quintet, a violin-sonata and the choral work Les Dithyrambes, 1919.

Martin, Friedrich (Wiesbaden, 1888). Hessian organist, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1916-22 active at Weimar as city-organist (following Keller), teacher at the Music School and critic for the Tageszeitung and from 1922 in charge of the Reger Archiv in Weimar. Has written various choral works, including Komm, heiliger Geist, 1913, Eine geistliche Frühlingsskantate, 1915, Es ist alles ganz eitel, etc.), many songs and organ-works, besides editing anew several works by Bach.

Martin, George Clement (Lambourn, 1844-1916, London). Able English organist, pupil chiefly of Stainer, from 1871 organist to the Duke of Buccleuch at Dalkeith (Scotland), from 1874 choirmaster at St. Paul's in London, becoming assistant-organist under Stainer and the latter's successor in 1888. From 1883 for a brief time he taught at the Royal College. Wrote about 20 services, as many anthems, hymn-tunes, part-songs and songs, important among these being the Festival Te Deum at the Queen's Jubilee in 1897. Mus.D. from the Archbishop of Canterbury in 1883 and of Oxford Univ. in 1912. Knighted in 1897. Memoir in Musical Times, 1916. G. A.

Martin, Jean Blaise (Paris, 1769-1837, n. Lyons). French operatic baritone, from 1788 employed at the Théâtres Feydeau and Favart and in 1801-23 at the Opéra-Comique, their successor, besides in 1816-18 and from '32 teaching at the Conservatory. His voice had an unusually wide range.

Martin, Riccardo [Hugh Whitfield] (Hopkinsville, Ky. 1881). Gifted American operatic tenor, pupil of MacDowell, Sbriglia, Escalaïs and J. de Reszké, making his début in 1904 at Nantes (then using the stage-name 'Riccardo'). In 1905-06 he sang in Italy, in 1906 in New Orleans and with the Russell company, in 1907-15 at the Metropolitan, New York (in 1910 also in London and Mexico City) and in 1916-17 with the Boston Grand Opera Company. A.

Martin y Solar, Vicente (Valencia, 1754-1806, Petrograd). Spanish composer, at first organist at Alicante, then at Madrid, and from 1780 in Italy, from 1785 at Vienna and after 1788 at Petrograd. Of his 10 operas, some of them successful for the time, the chief was La Cosa Rara, 1785. From this Mozart used a theme in his Don Giovanni. G.

Martinelli, Giovanni (Montagnana, 1885). Able Italian operatic tenor, since 1910 brilliantly successful, first throughout Italy, from 1912 in London and from 1913 at the Metropolitan, New York, with appearances also at Pest, Brussels and Buenos Aires. He sang at the premières of Zandonai's Melenis (1912), Giordano's Madame Sans-Gêne (1915) and Granados' Goyescas (1916). A.

Martinez, Marianne di (Vienna, 1744–1812, do.). Austrian amateur, pupil of Porpora, Metastasio and Haydn, long prominent in Vienna society. She sang and played well, but is more notable as composer of 2 oratorios, 5 masses, Psalm 42, motets and other church-music, symphonies, concertos for harpsichord, etc. G.

Martini, Giambattista (Bologna, 1706–1784, do.). Distinguished Italian composer and theorist, from 1729 in priest's orders (hence usually called Padre). His teachers were his father, Predieri and Riccieri, besides help from Perti and Zanotti. From 1725 he was maestro at S. Francesco. In his eagerness for knowledge of all kinds, he accumulated a remarkable library (in 1770 estimated by Burney to contain 17,000 vols.). His learning became so famous that scholars came from all Europe to study with him or to consult him, and he conducted a perpetual correspondence. His favorite disciple was Stanislao Mattei, who succeeded him at S. Francesco. He was an honored member of the Accademia Filarmonica in Bologna and of the Arcadians in Rome. As composer he followed the finest traditions of the old Italian school, but with full knowledge of the harmonic resources of his own time. As theorist he was not so much an innovator as the competent summarist and codifier of strict practice on the part of previous masters. He projected and began the first extensive and truly scholarly treatment of music-history. The bulk of his compositions were sacred, including some masses, Requiems, many motets, hymns, canticles, etc., 3 oratorios, about 20 cantatas, litanies and antiphons, but also a large number of duetti da camera, many vocal canons, intermezzi, madrigals, organ-sonatas (suites), preludes and fugues for clavier, etc. His chief literary works were the Storia della Musica, 3 vols. 1757, '70, '81 (ancient period only), Regole per Accompanyare il Canto Fermo, 1757, Esemplare ossia Saggio Fondamentale Pratico di Contrappunto, 2 vols. 1774–76, and many shorter essays, often controversial, catalogues of works and musicians, acoustical and other discussions. His letters have been collected by Parisini (1888). A part of his library went to the Vienna Library, but most of it to the Liceo Filarmonico in Bologna (now Liceo Rossini). Memoirs by Della Valle, 1784, '85, Parisini, 1887, Busi, 1891, and Gandolfi, 1913. G.

Martini [Schwarzenordf], Jean Paul Égide (n. Ratisbon, 1741–1816, Paris), often called 'il Tedesco.' Bavarian composer, organist at Neustadt-on-Danube when but ten, from 1758 student at Freiburg (Baden) and organist at the Franciscan Convent, going thence in 1760 to Nancy and in 1764 to Paris, where for a time he was in a Hussar regiment and engaged upon military music. In 1771 his first opera made a hit and he became musician to the Prince Condé and later to Count d'Artois. Not long before the Revolution he bought the post of royal music-intendant and in 1791 was the first conductor at the new Théâtre Feydeau, but lost all in 1792 and fled to Lyons. In 1798, however, he was connected with the management of the new Conservatory and in 1814 regained his place as intendant. Wrote the operas L'Amoureux de Quinze Ans, 1771, Sapho, 1794, and 10 others, masses, Psalms and much other church-music, cantatas, chamber-music in several forms, etc. Memoir by Pougin, 1864. G.

Martucci, Giuseppe (Capua, 1856–1909, Naples). Eminent Italian pianist, conductor and composer, pupil of his father and the Naples Conservatory, becoming professor at the latter in 1874 and, after in 1886–1902 being director of the Bologna Conservatory, from 1902 its director. In his youth he had renown as a clever pianist and at intervals he toured through Germany, France and England as a virtuoso of the first rank. From about 1875 he was the leader of the Neapolitan Quartet and also conductor of the orchestra instituted by Prince d'Ardore. In 1888 he directed the Italian première of Tristan at Bologna. As composer he adopted the opulent style of Liszt and Wagner. He was a member of the Naples Accademia and received various decorations. Wrote symphonies in D min. (1895) and F (1904), piano-concertos in B-flat and D min., a piano-quintet, piano-trios in C and E-flat, a 'cello-sonata and some pieces, a few violin-pieces, many fine works for piano, including a fantasia and a set of variations for two pianos, an organ-sonata, the oratorio Samuel, the 'poemetto' La Canzone dei Ricordi and some songs, besides many transcriptions (as of Bach's suites). Memoir by Prati, 1915, and see Torchi's analysis of the 2d Symphony (1905). G.

Martucci, Paolo (Naples, 1885), son of the above. Italian pianist, pupil of his father, appearing in 1902 at Bologna, from 1903 mainly in London, but with several tours on the Continent, in 1911–13 teacher at the Cincinnati Conservatory and then in New York. A.

Marty, Georges Eugène (Paris, 1860–1908, do.). French conductor and composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1882), from 1892 professor there, besides serving as chorusmaster at the Théâtre Eden and later at the Opéra, in 1895–96 being conductor at the latter and from 1903 succeeding Taffanel as director of the Conservatory Concerts. From 1906 he also led the symphony-concerts at Vichy, following Danbé. Wrote the operas Le Duc de Ferrare, 1899, Daria, 1905, and La Grande Mademoiselle (not given), the pantomime Lysic, 1888, the cantata Edith, 1882, the symphonic poem Merlin Enchanté, the overture Balthazar, 1887, the suite Les Saisons, 1888, several other orchestral pieces, piano-works and songs. G.

Marx, Adolf Bernhard (Halle, 1795–1866, Berlin). Eminent Saxon theorist, educated at Halle University, pupil in music of Türk and Zelter, in 1824–30 editor of the short-lived Berliner Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung, meanwhile taking further studies at Marburg (Ph.D. in 1827) and lecturing at Berlin University, where from 1830 he was professor and from 1832 music-director. In 1850-56 he was associated with Kullak and Stern in starting the Berlin (later Stern) Conservatory. Author of Ueber Malerei in d. Tonkunst, 1828, Ueber d. Geltung Händelscher Sologestänge, 1829, Die Lehre von d. musikal. Composition, 4 vols. 1837-47 (new edition by Riemann in repeated issues), Allgemeine Musiklehre, 1839 (10th ed. 1884), Die alte Musiklehre im Streit mit unsrer Zeit, 1842, Die Musik d. 19. Jahrh. u. ihre Pflege, 1855, a life of Beethoven, (1858, 6th ed. by Behnke, 1911), Anleitung zum Vortrag Beethovenscher Klavierwerke, 1863 (5th ed. by E. Schmitz, 1912), Gluck u. d. Oper, 2 vols. 1863, Erinnerungen, 2 vols. 1865, and Das Ideal u. d. Gegenwart, 1867. Many of his essays have been collected by Hirschberg as Ueber Tondichter u. Tonkunst, 1912 (vol. I only). Wrote also the opera Jery und Bätely, 1827, a melodrama, the oratorios Johannes der Täufer and Moses, the song-cycle Nahid und Omar, a symphony, a piano-sonata, etc., besides collections of chorales and organ-pieces and two vocal methods. For a time he was intimate with the young Mendelssohn and claims to have suggested the form of the latter's Midsummer-night's Dream overture. See critique of his Moses by Mosewius, 1843, extracts from his literary remains by Selle, 1898, and memoir by Hirschberg, 1908 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.). G.

Marx, Joseph (Graz, 1882). Styrian composer, educated at Gratz University (Ph.D.), from 1910 active at Gratz and since 1914 teaching in Vienna at the Akademie, in 1922 succeeding Löwe as director. Has written the choral work Herbstchor an Pan, over 80 striking songs (some with orchestra), various pieces for string-quartet or trio, a violin-sonata and pieces, a Romantisches Konzert for piano, etc.

Marxsen, Eduard (n. Altona, 1806-1887, do.). Well-known teacher at Hamburg, pupil of his father, Clasing, Seyfried and Bocklet. His most famous pupil was Brahms (from 1843). Wrote 60-70 works, including Beethovens Schatten for orchestra. G.

Maryon, Edward (London, 1867). English composer, early writing the opera L'Odalisque (medal at the Paris Exposition of 1889), then pupil of Max Pauer and the Cologne Conservatory, from about 1895 writing many operettas and a choral Requiem and Beatitudes, besides projecting an extensive heptology, The Cycle of Life (partially completed). He conducts a music-school at Montclair, N. J.

Marzials, Theodor (Brussels, 1850). Belgian baritone, since 1870 in charge of the music-section of the British Museum in London. Has written many popular songs.

Marzo, Eduardo (Naples, 1852). Italian pianist, organist and singing-teacher, pupil of Nacciarone and Micheli, coming to America as a youth and from 1869 active as accompanist in opera-troupes and with eminent soloists, in 1878 settling in New York as organist in Catholic churches and teacher. Has written many masses, Te Deums, Psalms, motets, etc., anthems for the Protestant service, operettas, part-songs and songs, besides some instrumental works and an extended vocal method. He has edited church-music for Schirmer and Ditson. A.

Mascagni, Pietro (Leghorn, 1863). Noted Italian composer, trained chiefly at the Milan Conservatory, from 1885 conductor of the town-orchestra at Cerignola, in 1890 winner of the Sonzogno prize for a 1-act opera with his Cavalleria Rusticana, which made a furore and has continued popular, in 1895-1902 director of the Liceo Rossini at Pesaro, in 1902 making an ill-starred tour in the United States and in 1911 visiting South America with somewhat better success. Neither his first work nor any of its several successors has commanded critical commendation, but the Cavalleria not only gave the composer a firm hold upon Italian popular interest, but served to stimulate the production by others of numerous brief, exciting and 'veristic' dramas. In 1890 he received the Order of the Crown. The list of his works includes the operas Cavalleria Rusticana, 1890, L'Amico Fritz, 1891, I Rantzau, 1892, Guglielmo Ratcliff, 1895, Silvano, 1895, Zanetto, 1896, Iris, 1898, Le Maschere, 1901, Amica, 1905, Isabeau, 1911, Parisina, 1913, Lodoletta, 1917, St., 1919, and Il Piccolo Marat, 1921 (of which only Ratcliff and Iris are laid out upon a large operatic scale), and some choral works like the early cantata Filanda and the Poema Leopardiana, 1898, etc. He has often served as guest-conductor for various orchestras. Autobiography, 1893 (edited by Brehmer), and sketches or critiques by Pudor, 1891, Joachim, 1893, Monaldi, 1899, Marvin, 1904, Bastianelli, 1910, and Pompei, 1912. G, A.

Maschera, Florentio. 16th C.

Mascheroni, Edoardo (Milan, 1857). Eminent Italian conductor, pupil of Boucheron, from 1883 conductor at the Goldoni at Leghorn, from 1885 at the Apollo in Rome and in 1893-97 at La Scala in Milan. He has been called to act as guest-conductor throughout Italy and in Germany, Spain and South America. Lately he has directed the symphony-concerts at the Augusteo in Rome. Has written the operas Lorenza, 1901, and La Perugina, 1909, 2 Requiems (one in memory of Victor Emanuel, the other a cappella), considerable chamber-music and a set of piano-pieces. G.

Mašek, Paul (Zwikowecz, 1761-1826, Vienna), brother of the following. Bohemian pianist, for some years teacher for Counts Nádasdy and Niozky in Hungary and from 1792 settled in Vienna. Wrote 2 operas, several symphonies, much chamber-music in a variety of combinations, etc.

Mašek, Vincenz (Zwikowecz, 1755-1831, Prague), brother of the foregoing. Bohemian pianist, pupil of Seeger and Dussek, from about 1775 on tour, from 1794 organist at the St. Nikolauskirche in Prague and later music-dealer. His wife was also an accomplished player and they gave concerts together. Wrote 2 operas, symphonies, a piano-concerto, some chamber-music, many masses and motets, 2 cantatas, piano-sonatas, etc.

Masetti, Umberto (Bologna, 1869). Italian composer, pupil of the Bologna Conservatory and since 1895 professor there. Has written the opera Vindice, 1891, a Requiem, a Messa di Gloria (for soli), a Scherzo Sinfonico and many songs.

Masini, Angelo (Forlì, 1845). Able Italian operatic tenor, from about 1870 noted in Italy, at Paris, Madrid, Buenos Aires and especially Petrograd, where he sang for several years. G.

Mason, Daniel Gregory (Brookline, Mass. 1873), grandson of Lowell below. Gifted American critic and composer, educated at Harvard, pupil of Johns, E. Nevin, Paine, A. Whiting, Chadwick, Goetschius and d'Indy, from about 1900 prominent in New York as lecturer and critic and since 1910 one of the musical faculty of Columbia University, with much lecturing at other institutions. Has written a symphony (1916), music for the Cape Cod Pageant (1914), a piano-quartet, a string-quartet on Negro themes, a quartet-intermezzo (1918), a Pastorale for piano, violin and clarinet, sonatas for violin and for clarinet, 2 violin-pieces, a Passacaglia and Fugue for organ, various piano-works, including Country-Pictures and an Impromptu and Ballade, the song-cycles Love-Songs and Russians (with orchestra), etc. Author of From Grieg to Brahms, 1902, Beethoven and his Fore-runners, 1904, The Romantic Composers, 1906, The Appreciation of Music, 1907 (with Surette), The Orchestral Instruments, 1908, A Guide to Music, 1909, A Neglected Sense in Piano-Playing, 1912, Great Modern Composers, 1916 (with his wife), Short Studies of Great Masterpieces, 1918, and Contemporary Composers, 1918. In 1914-17 he was editor-in-chief of The Art of Music, 14 vols. A.

Mason, Edith Barnes (St. Louis, 1892). American operatic soprano, in 1912 appearing with the Boston Opera Company, in 1913-15 singing at Nice and Marseilles and since 1915 at the Metropolitan, New York. A.

Mason, Henry Lowell (Boston, 1864), grandson of Lowell below. A member of the firm of Mason & Hamlin since 1888 and from 1915 its president. Author of small histories of the piano and the American reed-organ (1901) and is preparing a biography of Lowell Mason. A.

Mason, Lowell (Medfield, Mass., 1792-1872, Orange, N. J.). Influential American church- and school-musician, in business at Boston and Savannah till 1827, when he became choirmaster in three Boston churches, as well as organist at one. In 1827-32 he was president and conductor of the Handel and Haydn Society. In 1829-54 he was absorbed in the development of popular education in music, basing his methods upon the principles of Pestalozzi and working them out both in the Boston public schools (especially in 1837-41) and in the foundation of the Boston Academy of Music (1833-47). He was also active in promoting interest in chorus-choirs and the holding of musical 'conventions.' He visited Europe twice (1837, '53-54) to study methods. The result of his efforts was a widespread and fruitful enthusiasm, the effect of which persisted long after. He wrote a large number of hymn-tunes, simple anthems and part-songs, publishing them (with many others) in a long series of collections, sacred and secular (1829-65). After 1854 he lived in Orange, N. J. Mus.D. of Yale Univ. in 1855. G, A.

Mason, Luther Whiting (Turner, Me. 1828-1896, Buckfield, Me.) [not related to the foregoing]. American school-musician, from 1853 active at Louisville and Cincinnati, from 1864 in Boston, in 1879-82 as government-supervisor in Japan and then in Boston again. He edited (with G. A. Veazie) an extensive series of manuals for school-singing. A.

Mason, William (Hull, 1724-1797, Aston). English clergyman, from 1756 connected with York Minster. Author of several essays on cathedral music (from 1782). G.

Mason, William (Boston, 1829-1908, New York), son of Lowell above. Eminent American pianist, pupil of H. Schmidt, the Leipzig Conservatory, Droyschok and Liszt, appearing in Boston as early as 1846 and more formally in 1853-54 in London and then on tour in the United States. In 1855-68 he was the moving spirit in annual chamber-music recitals in New York in which Thomas, Mosenthal, Matzka, Bergmann and others participated. For many years he held the place of leading American teacher of the piano. Mus.D. of Yale Univ. in 1872. Author of several pedagogical works, especially Touch and Technique, besides Memories of a Musical Life, 1901. G, A.

Mason & Hamlin Company. A firm established in Boston in 1854 by Henry Mason (1831-90, son of Lowell Mason) and Emmons Hamlin (d. 1881) to manufacture reed-organs, the character of which they speedily improved and perfected. After developing this business to notable proportions, in 1882 they entered upon piano-making, which they have also carried to conspicuous success. From 1869 the president was Lowell Mason, Jr., followed in turn by others of the family. A.

Massa, Nicolò (Calice Ligure, 1854-1894, Genoa). Italian composer of the operas Aldo e Clarenza, 1878, Il Conte di Chatillon, 1882, Salammbô, 1886, and Eros, 1895.

Massaini, Tiburtio. 16th C.

Massart, Lambert Joseph (Liège, 1811-1892, Paris). Eminent Belgian violinist, pupil of R. Kreutzer and in 1843-90 exceedingly influential as professor at the Paris Conservatory (Wieniawski, Marsick, Sarasate and Taa among his pupils). With his wife, née Louise Aglaé Masson (1827-1887), an accomplished pianist, he gave fine chamber-concerts. His shyness kept him from often appearing as soloist. G.

Massart, Nestor Henri Joseph (Ciney, 1849–1899, Ostend). Belgian army-officer, often detached from service to appear as operatic tenor not only in Brussels, but at Lyons, Cairo and in America (New Orleans, San Francisco, Mexico).

Massé, Félix Marie [called Victor] (Lorient, 1822–1884, Paris). Gifted French composer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1844), from 1860 chorustmaster at the Opéra and in 1866–80 professor at the Conservatory. In 1872 he succeeded Auber as member of the Académie. Wrote a large number of short and tuneful operettas (from 1849), including Les Noces de Jeannette, 1853, and La Reine Topaze 1856, the operas Paul et Virginie, 1876, and La Nuit de Cléopâtre, 1885, the cantata Le Renégat de Tanger, 1845, a Messe Solennelle (1846), and many songs or romances, often of decided beauty. G.

Massenet, Jules Émile Frédéric (n. St.-Étienne, 1842–1912, Paris). Distinguished French composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1863), and in 1878–96 professor there. In 1876 he was admitted to the Légion d'Honneur (officier from 1888) and in 1878 to the Académie, following Bazin. His facile and melodious style was early acquired and remained without much development through his long career. He had the wit to apply it with consummate tact so as to win and keep the popular interest, always with the aid of fine workmanship and versatility of subject. But his genius did not rise to great heights or display marked vigor of positive conviction or inspiration. He was, however, a master in instrumentation and in other points of technical presentation. His works include the following:

Vocal

Operas—La Grand Tante, 1867, Don César de Bazan, 1872, Le Roi de Lahore, 1877, Hérodiade, 1881, Manon, 1884, Le Cid, 1885, Esclarmonde, 1889, Le Mage, 1891, Werther, 1892, Thaïs, 1894, Le Portrait de Manon, 1894, La Navarraise, 1894, Sapho, 1897, Cendrillon, 1899, Grisélidis, 1901, Le Jongleur de Notre-Dame, 1902, Chérubin, 1905, Ariane, 1906, Thérèse, 1907, Bacchus, 1909, Don Quichotte, 1910, Roma, 1912, Panurge, 1913, Cléopâtre, 1914, Amadis. Also completed and orchestrated Delibes' Kassya, (1893).

Incidental music to de Lisle's Les Érynnies (1873), de Porto-Riche's Un Drame sous Philippe II (1875), Richépin's Nana-Sahib (1883), Sardou's Théodora (1884) and Le Crocodile (1886), Racine's Phèdre (1900), de Francmesnil's Le Grillon (1904), Sicard's Le Manteau de Roi (1907), and Dortal's Perce-Neige et les Sept Gnomes (1909).

Ballets—Le Carillon, 1892, Cigale, 1904, Espada, 1908. Oratorios and Cantatas—Marie-Magdeleine, 1873, Ève, 1875, Narcisse, 1877, La Vierge, 1879, Biblia, 1886, La Terre Promise, 1900. Also the prize-cantata David Rizzio, 1863.

About 200 songs (some with orchestra), some duets and several choruses.

Orchestral

Overtures—de Concert, 1863, Phèdre, 1873, Brumaire, 1899.

Suites—1st, 1865, Scènes Hongroises, 1871, Scènes Dramatiques, 1873, Scènes Pittoresques, 1874, Scènes Napolitaines, 1876, Scènes de Fête, 1879, Scènes Alsaciennes, 1881.

Parade Militaire, 1887; Visions, 1890 (symphonic poem); Devant la Madone, 1897; Marche Solennelle, 1897; Les Rosati, 1902.

Piano-concerto (1903). Fantaisie for 'cello and orchestra (1897).

His reminiscences appeared in 1911 in the Écho de Paris (enlarged by Leroux as Souvenirs d'un Musicien, 1912). Memoirs and critiques by Solenière, 1897, Bruneau, 1901 (in La Musique Française), Fournier, 1905, Aubin, 1908 (in La Drame Lyrique), Schneider, 1908 (a thorough monograph), Finck, 1910, Séré, 1911 (in Musiciens d'Aujourd'hui), Soubies, 1913, Pougin, 1913, and Jean-Aubry, 1916 (in La Musique Française d'Aujourd'hui). G. A.

Masson, Paul Marie (Cette, 1882). French musicologist, trained by Rolland and at the Schola Cantorum, Paris, since 1910 professor at Grenoble University and in charge of the music-division of the Institut Français de Florence (analogous for historic Italian works to the German Denkmäler), of which 4 vols. have appeared, including Canti Carnascialeschi, 1913. Author also of Lullistes et Ramistes, 1912, and several articles in scholarly periodicals.

Maszynski, Peter (Warsaw, 1855). Polish composer, pupil of Michailowski, Roguski and Noskowski, since about 1880 teacher at the Warsaw Institute. Has written incidental music for Gadowski's Larik and Grabowski's Barusa, a cantata for the Sienkiewicz Jubilee (1895), other choral works, orchestral pieces, quartet-variations, a violin-sonata and pieces, piano-works and songs.

Materna, Amalie (Sankt Georgen, 1845–1918, Vienna). Eminent Styrian operatic soprano, early singing in church and concert at Gratz, with some stage-appearances from 1865. Marrying the actor Karl Friedrich, she went with him to the Carl-Theater in Vienna and in 1869 made her début at the Opera, being then steadily engaged there till her retirement in 1897. Her remarkable gifts in Wagnerian rôles led to many engagements elsewhere, as at Bayreuth in 1876 and '82, at the Wagner Festival in 1877 at London, in 1882, '84 and '94 in America, etc. From 1900 she taught in Vienna. G.

Materna, Hedwig (Gratz, 1871), niece of the above. Styrian operatic soprano, pupil of Frau Weinlich-Tipka and Ida Fichna, since 1896 engaged at the Mayence Opera (in 1900 at Zurich). She is specially successful in Wagner's works and since 1897 has repeatedly sung at Bayreuth. She is the wife of the critic Heinrich Hirsch. Author of Wagners Frauengestalten, 1904.

Mathews, William Smythe Babcock (London, N. H. 1837–1912, Denver, Colo.). Noted American teacher and writer, early musically active in church and school, with some study at Lowell and Boston. From 1860 he taught in various schools in the South and from 1867 was located in Chicago, where he was organist at the Centenary (M. E.) Church (till 1893), an industrious teacher, critic for several papers and constant author. In 1891–1902 he edited the magazine Musica. In 1910 ill-health led him to remove to Denver. Author of How to Understand Music, 2 vols. 1880, '88, 100 Years of Music in America, 1889, a Popular History of Music, 1891, Music, its Ideals and Methods, 1897, The Masters and their Music, 1898, and The Great in Music, 3 vols. 1900-03, besides technical handbooks, editions of piano-classics and a share in several pedagogical publications. A.

Mathias, Franz Xavier (n. Strasburg, 1871). Able Alsatian priest and organist, educated at Strasburg and Leipzig Universities (Ph.D. at the latter in 1901 and Theol.D. at the former in 1907), in 1898-1908 organist at Strasburg Cathedral, in 1907 lecturer at the University and since 1908 regent of the Priesterseminar, where in 1913 he established the St. Leo Institute (for church-music). Author of several manuals and essays on the organ-accompaniment of Gregorian music, including extended drafts of his own praxis at the Strasburg Cathedral (from 1905), the monograph Der Strassburger Chronist Königshofen als Choralist, 1903, Die Musik in Elsass, 1905, a thematic catalogue of the works of F. X. Richter (1909, in the Riemann Festschrift), etc., besides editing the periodical Cäcilia from 1906. Has also written considerable church-music, including an 'eucharistic' organ-suite, variations on the Stabat Mater, etc.

Mathias, Georges Amédée St. Claire (Paris, 1826-1910, do.). French composer, pupil of Kalkbrenner, Chopin and the Paris Conservatory, becoming professor at the latter in 1862-93. Wrote a symphony, the overtures Hamlet and Mazeppa, 2 piano-concertos, 5 Morceaux Symphoniques for piano and strings, 6 piano-trios, many effective études and pieces for the piano, the choral works Prométhée Enchaîné and Olaf, the lyric scene Jeanne d'Arc and some songs.

Mathieu, Adolphe Charles Ghislain (Mons, 1804-1883, Paris). Curator of manuscripts in the Brussels Library and author of a life of Lassus (1838, 2d ed. 1840).

Mathieu, Émile Louis Victor (Lille, 1844). Eminent Belgian-French composer, trained at the Brussels Conservatory (many prizes, including the 2d Prix de Rome in both 1869 and '71), from 1867 teacher at the Louvain Music School, in 1873-74 conductor at the Théâtre du Châtelet in Paris and then at the Monnaie in Brussels, from 1881 director of the Louvain Music School and since 1898 of the Ghent Conservatory, succeeding Samuel. He was admitted to the Belgian Academy in 1897 and has received other honors. Has written the operas Georges Dandin, 1876, Richilde, 1888, Bathylé, 1893, L'Enfance de Roland, 1895, and the shorter comedies L'Échange, 1863, La Bernoise, 1880, and Les Fumeurs de Kiff, 1876 (ballet), incidental music for Séjour's Cromwell (1874), the cantatas La Dernière Nuit de Faust, Le Songe de Colomb, Tasso's Dood, Debout, Peuple!, Les Bois and L'École Fraternelle (last two for children), with the 'poèmes' Le Hoyoux, Freyhir and Le Sorcier (original texts), the symphonic poems Le Lac, Sous Bois and Noces Féodales, concertos for violin and for piano, a Te Deum, many choruses for men's voices, including a Hymne au

Soleil (prize, 1891) and French and Flemish songs. G.

Mattei, Stanislao (Bologna, 1750-1825, do.). Italian priest (abbate) and church-musician, favorite pupil and assistant of Martini, succeeding him as maestro at S. Francesco in Bologna and later at S. Petronio, besides from 1804 teaching at the new Liceo. Among his many pupils were Rossini, Morlacchi, Donizetti, Tadolini and his successor Pilotti. In 1790 and '94 he was head of the Filarmonici and in 1824 became a member of the French Académie. Wrote many masses and other church-music, a Passion (1792), an intermezzo and a manual of harmony (3 parts, 1825-30). Memoirs by Canuti, 1829-30, and La Fage, 1839. G.

Mattei, Tito (n. Naples, 1841-1914, London). Gifted Italian pianist and composer, pupil of Maggioni, Parisi, Ruta, Conti and Thalberg, from early youth noted in Italy, then touring on the Continent and from about 1865 in London, where he became conductor at Her Majesty's (till 1871). Wrote the opera Maria di Gand, 1880, the comedies The Grand Duke and La Prima Donna, both 1889, the ballet The Spider and the Fly, 1893, effective piano-pieces and many songs of much popularity.

Matteis, Nicola. 17th C. G.

Matthay, Tobias Augustus (London, 1858). Eminent English pianist and teacher, pupil of the Royal Academy, London (Bennett Scholar), in 1876-1895 teacher there and since 1895 head of his own school, becoming famous as a gifted trainer. Author of a series of technical handbooks (from 1903). Has also written 4 overtures, a Konzertstück for piano and orchestra, a piano-quartet, many piano-pieces and the choral work Hero and Leander.

Mattheson, Johann (Hamburg, 1681-1764, do.). Important North German theorist and composer, precociously developed, pupil of Braunmüller, Praetorius and Kellner, besides a wide general education, from as early as 1690 in the chorus at the Hamburg Opera (later singing tenor rôles), from 1706 secretary at the English consulate, in 1715-28 choirmaster at the Cathedral (resigning because of deafness) and from 1719 having the title of court-director to the Duke of Holstein. Author of voluminous and egotistical writings that are yet valuable for their historical data and for a sturdy independence and impatience with mere tradition. They include Das neu-eröffnete Orchester, 1713, Das beschützte Orchester, 1717 (against Buttstedt), Die exemplarische Organistenprobe, 1719 (2d ed. 1731, as Generalbass-Schule), Der brauchbare Virtuoso, 1720, Das forschende Orchester, 1721, Critica Musica, 2 vols. 1722, De Eruditione Musica, 1732, Der vollkommene Capellmeister, 1739, Grundlagen einer Ehrenpforte, 1740 (biographical dictionary, reprinted by M. Schneider, 1910), Die neueste Untersuchung d. Singspiele, 1744, a life of Handel (1761), etc. Wrote also 8 operas (1699-1715), 24 oratorios and cantatas, a mass, a Passion, clavichord-suites, sonatas for flute and violin, etc. In 1703-06 he was intimate with Handel, though with some violent quarrels (late in 1704 they actually met in an impromptu duel!). Memoirs by Meinardus, 1879, Haberl, 1885 (in Kirchenmusikal. Jahrbuch), and H. Schmidt, 1897. G.

Matthews, Harry Alexander (Cheltenham, 1879), brother of the following. English organist, pupil of his father, since 1899 prominent in Philadelphia churches (2d Presbyterian, St. Luke's, Epiphany). Has written the cantatas Life Everlasting, The Conversion, The Story of Christmas, The Triumph of the Cross, The City of God, 1917 (Luther celebration), The Song of the Silent Land, etc., many anthems, pieces for organ or piano, songs, etc. A.

Matthews, John Sebastian (Cheltenham, 1870), brother of the above. English organist, pupil of his father and G. B. Arnold, from 1888 the latter's assistant at Winchester Cathedral and since 1891 in America (in Philadelphia, Burlington, N. J., Boston, from 1901 Morristown, N. J., and since 1916 Providence). Has written the cantatas The Paschal Victor, 1913, The Eve of Grace, 1914, and The Way of Life, 1919, many anthems, carols, part-songs, songs and organ-pieces, besides a comic opera (not given). A.

Matthison-Hansen, Hans (Flensburg, 1807-1890, Roskilde). Danish organist, pupil of Weyse, from 1832 organist at Roskilde Cathedral, writing the oratorio Johannes, Psalms, cantatas, organ-sonatas, preludes, variations, fantasias, etc. His son Vaage (1841-1911) was his assistant from 1877 and later his successor.

Matthison-Hansen, Johan Gotfred (Roskilde, 1832-1909, Copenhagen), son of the above. Able Danish organist, pupil of his father and (as Ancker Scholar) at Leipzig, from 1859 at the Frederiks Kirke in Copenhagen, from 1871 at S. Johannis and from 1881 at Trinitatis, with several tours in Germany as virtuoso. In 1865 he joined Grieg, Nordraak and Horneman in starting the Euterpe and from 1868 taught at the Conservatory, in 1900 becoming director (following Hartmann). Wrote a piano-trio, sonatas for violin and for 'cello, various concert-pieces for organ, a piano-ballade, etc.

Mattieson, Emil (Dorpat, 1875). Able German-Russian song-composer, originally trained in philosophy and science at Dorpat and Leipzig Universities (Ph.D. 1896) and engaged in scientific work from 1904 in England, from 1908 in Berlin, from 1915 in Rostock and since 1922 in Munich, besides in 1898-1903 traveling widely in Asia and America. His musical studies were under Harthan at Dorpat. Since 1910 his songs have been favored by Muck and Paul Müller, while in 1921 a Mattiesen-Verein was formed to aid in their extension.

Matzenauer, Margarete (Temesvár, 1881). Eminent Hungarian operatic singer, at first ranked as contralto, but since 1914 taking soprano rôles as well. She studied with Mme. Neuendorff, Antonia Mielke and Emerich, appearing in 1901-04 at Strasburg, then at the Munich Opera and from 1911 at the Metropolitan, New York. Since 1904 she has been often engaged elsewhere, especially in Wagnerian works, as at Bayreuth, Hamburg and Buenos Aires (1912). Her unusual compass gives her command of an extensive repertory and her emotional intensity makes her interpretations remarkably impressive. In 1902-11 she was the wife of Ernst Preuse of Munich, in 1912-17 of the tenor Ferrari-Fontana and from 1921 of Floyd Gltzbach.

Matzke, Hermann Karl Anton (Breslau, 1890). Silesian historical student, educated at Berlin, Bern and Breslau Universities (Ph.D. 1920), from 1916 employed in the state archive at Brussels, in 1919 at the Bückeburg Musical Institute and in 1920-21 also city-director there and conductor of symphony-concerts. Author of monographs on Belgian army-songs (1918) and on the introduction of German church-music into the electoral archbishopric of Mayence (1920).

Maubourg [-Goffaux], Jeanne (Namur, 1875). Belgian operatic soprano, pupil mostly of Mmes. Labarre and Jouron-Duvernay, in 1897-1907 engaged at the Monnaie in Brussels, from 1900 also at Covent Garden in London and in 1909-14 at the Metropolitan, New York, then devoting herself to teaching. She has made a name, also, in light opera. A.

Mauduit, Jacques (1557-1627). 16th C. G.

Mauke, Wilhelm (Hamburg, 1867). North German critic and composer, pupil of Huber, Löw and the Munich Conservatory, since about 1895 writing for the Munich Zeitung. Has written the operas Der Taugenichts, 1905, Laurins Rosengarten and Das Fest des Lebens, the operettas Der Tugendprinz, 1907, Fanfreluche, 1912, and Die letzte Maske, 1917 (mimodrama), the symphonic poems Einsamkeit, Liliencron and Sursum Corda, a Romantische Sinfonie, the choral 'sinfonie' Das Gold and the scena Ora pro Nobis. Author of a life of Mielke (1901). Sketch by Nagel, 1919.

Maurel, Victor (Marseilles, 1848-1923, New York). Eminent French operatic baritone, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, appearing at the Opéra in 1868, but gaining early renown in Italy, England, Spain, Russia and Egypt. In 1879-1894, however, he was steadily engaged at the Opéra (except in 1883-84, when he embarked on an ill-starred independent venture, and in 1885-86, when he was at the Opéra-Comique) and from 1895 till he retired in 1904 he was attached to the Opéra-Comique. He visited New York in 1874 and 1894-95. In 1903 he lectured at the Sorbonne on vocal art and then became a favorite teacher (at New York after 1909). Among premières at which he sang were Gomes' Il Guarany (1870), Verdi's Otello (1887) and Erlanger's Juif Polonais (1900). Though without a phenomenal voice, he was a consummate vocal artist and exceptionally gifted as an actor.

Author of several works on singing (1892-97) and Dix Ans de Carrière, 1898. G, A.

Maurer, Julius (Pforzheim, 1888). Badenese violinist, pupil of Spies and Mottl, with further study at Munich, Berlin and Halle Universities (Ph.D. 1911), in 1911-13 engaged as theater-conductor and since then active in promoting art-interests in and near Munich. Author of a monograph on Schweitzer als dramatischer Komponist, 1912.

Maurer, Ludwig Wilhelm (Potsdam, 1789-1878, Petrograd). Eminent Prussian violinist, pupil of Haack, entering the court-orchestra at Berlin when but thirteen and in 1806 (when the band was suspended) going to Russia, where he became director in the Chancellor's private band (till 1817). After tours in Germany, in 1824-33 he was concertmaster at Hanover, then returning to Russia and serving as royal orchestra-inspector. After 1845 he lived mostly at Dresden. Wrote 8 violin-concertos, a double concerto, a Symphonie Concertante for violin-quartet and orchestra, 2 concertinos, 2 string-quartets, duets and many solo-pieces, besides 6 operas. G.

Maurice, Alphons (Hamburg, 1862-1905, Dresden). North German composer, pupil of the Vienna Conservatory and of Schulz-Beuthen, writing many effective songs, part-songs, choruses (some a cappella), orchestral pieces, several operettas or singspiele, etc.

Maurice, Pierre, Baron de (Geneva, 1868). Swiss composer, pupil of the Geneva, Stuttgart and Paris Conservatories, in 1899-1917 living at Munich. Has written the operas Die weisse Flagge, 1903, Misé Brun, 1908, Lanval, 1913, and the mimodrama Arambel, 1920, the biblical drama Die Tochter Jephthas, 1899, the orchestral suite Die Islandfischer, the prelude and scene Daphne, the choral work Gorm Grymme, a fugal suite for two pianos, piano-pieces and songs.

Maurin, Jean Pierre (Avignon, 1822-1894, Paris). French violinist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory and from 1875 Alard's successor as professor there. He was one of the founders of the Société des Derniers Quatuors de Beethoven.

Mawet, Émile (n. Verviers, 1884), brother of the following. Belgian 'cellist, pupil of the Liège and Cologne Conservatories, in 1903 soloist at Baden-Baden and from 1904 at Strasbourg, where he also has taught at the Conservatory. Has written the opera Phosphoreine, the prize-cantata Les Temps sont Révolus, 1905 (for 75th anniversary of Belgian independence), an orchestral Esquisse Symphonique and Fantaisie-Caprice, a string-quartet, 'cello- and organ-pieces, etc.

Mawet, Fernand (n. Verviers, 1870), brother of the above. Belgian organist, pupil of the Liège Conservatory and later professor there. Has written the opera Noël Sanglant, 2 comedies in the Walloon dialect, the oratorio Abraham, a mass, a Stabat Mater, many motets and organ-pieces.

Maxson, Frederick (Beverly, N. J. 1862). American organist, pupil of D. D. Wood and Guilman, from 1884 at Philadelphia (Central Congregational and since 1902 1st Baptist Churches), besides teaching at the Leefson-Hille music-school and giving many recitals. Has written a service, anthems, many organ- and piano-pieces. A.

May, Edward Collett (Greenwich, 1806-1887, London). English organist, pupil of Th. Adams, Potter and Crivelli, in 1837-69 organist at the Greenwich Hospital, from 1841 extensively active in promoting music among the masses, including a vast amount of teacher-training, and from 1880 professor at Queen's College. He reinforced and prolonged the influence of Hullah. His daughter Florence is an accomplished pianist, pupil of Brahms and a foremost interpreter of his works, besides writing his life (2 vols. 1905). G.

Mayer, Charles (Königsberg, 1799-1862, Dresden). Excellent Prussian pianist, pupil of Field (whose style he imitated to a singular degree), beginning to tour at fifteen, teaching at Petrograd in 1819-50 (with a long tour in 1845) and then moving to Dresden. His playing had great charm. Wrote about 900 works for piano, including 2 concertos, a concert-polonaise, a toccata, a Fantaisie Dramatique, many other concert-pieces, notable études, salon-pieces, variations, etc. G.

Mayer, Emilie (Friedland, 1821-1883, Berlin). Prolific Prussian composer, pupil of Loewe, Marx and Wieprecht, writing 7 symphonies, 12 overtures, a piano-concerto, 14 string-quartets, 2 piano-quartets, 11 piano-trios, 12 violin-sonatas, piano-pieces, over 150 songs, etc.

Mayer, Joseph Anton (n. Constance, 1855). South German conductor and composer, trained at the Stuttgart Conservatory and by Bargiel and Taubert, from 1880 in the opera-orchestra at Stuttgart and in 1892-1905 conductor, besides from 1890 teaching at the Conservatory. Has written the operas Der Stern von Bethlehem and Magdalenenbrunnen, 1912, other stage-works, the choral works Kyffhäuser, Der Geiger von Gmünd, Jephtha, Die Würde der Frauen and a Schiller Festhymne, 1905, choruses and songs.

Mayer, Max (Hamburg, 1859). North German pianist, pupil of the Stuttgart Conservatory and of Liszt, since 1883 settled at Manchester (England), where from 1908 he has taught at the Royal College, besides appearing often in ensemble and as accompanist. Has written many effective songs and piano-pieces.

Mayer, Wilhelm ['W. A. Remy'] (Prague, 1831-1898, Gratz). Able Bohemian teacher and composer, originally a lawyer and civil official, pupil of Pietsch, in 1862-70 conductor of the Gratz Musical Society and then absorbed in teaching (Busoni, Kienzl, Heuberger and Weingartner among his pupils). Wrote the concert-opera Waldfräulein, 1876, 3 symphonies, the symphonic poem Helene, the overture Sardanapal, the fantasias Slavisches Liederspiel and Oestliche Rosen for two pianos and orchestra. part-songs, songs, etc.

Mayer-Mahr, Moritz (Mannheim, 1869). Excellent Badense pianist and teacher, since 1892 professor at the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory in Berlin. Has written fine piano-pieces and songs, besides a large text-book of piano-technique (3 vols.).

Mayer-Reinach, Albert (Mannheim, 1876). Able Badense conductor and musicologist, educated at Berlin University (Ph.D. 1899), from 1900 theater-conductor at various places, from 1904 lecturer at Kiel University and from 1905 conductor of the Philharmonic Chorus there, directing notable Beethoven and Wagner Festivals in 1907 and '13. Since 1908 he has also been head of the Conservatory. Author of a thesis on Graun als Opernkomponist, 1900 (in I. M. G. Sammelbde.), Zur Gesch. d. Königsberger Hofkapelle, 1904 (do.), and a critical edition of Graun's Montezuma (1904, Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst), besides editions of early Königsberg composers.

Mayerhoff, Franz (Chemnitz, 1864). Able Saxton conductor and composer, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1883 theater-conductor at Lübeck, Memel and Tilsit, and from 1885 teacher at Chemnitz, where from 1888 he was cantor at the Petrikirche and from 1893 at the Jacobikirche, besides leading the Musikverein and from 1910 the Lehrergesangverein (concert-tour in 1913 to Berlin and Hamburg). Since 1915 he has been conductor of the Riedel-Verein in Leipzig, succeeding Wetz. In 1911 he gained the title of royal professor. Has written the cantatas Frau Minne and Lenzfahrt, the dramatic scena Die Nonne, choruses, songs, 2 symphonies, Die heilige Nacht for strings and organ, and a short Instrumentenlehre, 1909.

Mayr, Johann Simon (Mendorf, 1763-1845, Bergamo). Eminent Bavarian composer, pupil of Lenzi and Bertoni, from 1790 increasingly successful at Bergamo (where he had been a private tutor) with church-works and then with operas. From 1802 he was maestro at S. Maria Maggiore, from 1805 was head of the new Conservatory, in 1808 opened a music-school for poor scholars and in 1809 founded a home for aged musicians. He declined flattering invitations to become court-director at Paris and Dresden. In his later years he became blind. As composer he thoroughly identified himself with Italian progress, being the ablest worker between Cimarosa and Rossini. Wrote in all over 70 operas (from 1794), including Lauso e Lidia, 1798, Lodoiska, 1800, Ginevra di Scozia, 1801, and Medea in Corinto, 1813, 9 oratorios (1791-1822), many masses, Psalms, motets, canticles and other church-music, cantatas, sacred and secular, etc. Author of a life of Haydn (1809) and some works on theory. His chief pupil was Donizetti. Memoirs by Alborghetti and Galli, 1875, Schmidl, 1901, Scotti, 1903, Kretzschmar, 1904 (in Peters' Jahrbuch), and Schiedermaier, 1907-10. G.

Mayrberger, Karl (Vienna, 1828-1881, Presburg). Austrian composer, pupil of Preyer, from 1864 music-director at Presburg Cathedral. Wrote the opera Melusina, 1876, music for Oehlschlägel's Yrsa, a burlesque opera, choruses and songs, besides a text-book in harmony and Die Harmonik Wagners, 1883.

Mayrhofer, Isidor (Passau, 1862). Austrian (-Bavarian) priest and church-musician, pupil of the Ratisbon Music School and of Habert, in 1882-87 organist and since 1900 choirmaster at the Seitenstetten Convent (n. Vienna). Author of Ueber d. Bedingungen einer gesunden Reform d. Kirchenmusik, 1896, Aesthetische u. technische Fingerzeige zum Studium d. Bachschen Orgel- u. Klavierwerke, 1901 (1st vol. only), and an account of a new method of organ-pedaling (1909, 2d ed. 1913), besides articles in the Gregorian. Rundschau.

Mayrhofer, Robert (Gmunden, 1863). Austrian theorist at Brixen, author of several manuals of harmony advocating a theory of chord-formation by thirds (from 1907) and Zur Theorie d. Schönen, 1911.

Mayseider, Joseph (Vienna, 1789-1863, do.). Eminent Austrian violinist, pupil of Suche, Wrantzky and E. Förster, appearing in Vienna when but eleven, from 1804 second in the Schuppanzigh Quartet, from 1816 in the court-orchestra, from 1820 soloist at the Opera and from 1835 court-virtuoso, besides duties at St. Stephen's. He did not attempt tours and was but rarely heard in concert in Vienna, but held his place as a superior player nevertheless. Wrote 3 violin-concertos, 2 concertinos, 3 string-quintets, 7 string-quartets, 4 piano-trios and a large variety of solo-pieces, besides a mass. He was also a superior teacher. G.

Mazas, Jacques Féréol (Béziers, 1782-1849, do.). French violinist, trained at the Paris Conservatory, from 1805 in the orchestra at the Italiens, in 1811-29 engaged in wide tours, and in 1837-41 director of the Cambrai Music School. Wrote concertos, quartets, trios, duets, many solo-pieces, useful études and methods for violin (new ed. by Hřimaly) and for viola, besides 3 short operas. G.

Mazer, Johann (Stockholm, 1790-1847, do.). In 1823 the founder of a Chamber Music Society at Stockholm which he endowed liberally. See memorials by Kinberg, 1899, and E. A. Schlesinger, 1909.

Mazzaferrata, Giovanni Battista. 17th C.

Mazzinghi, Joseph (London, 1765-1839, do.). Corsican-English composer, pupil of J. C. Bach, Bertolini, Sacchini and Anfossi, playing the organ at the Portuguese Chapel in London when but ten, from 1784 conductor and composer at the King's Theatre and a popular teacher. Wrote many ballad-operas and other stage-music, piano-sonatas and pieces, glees, part-songs and songs, besides a mass. He retired about 1830. G.

Mazzocchi, Domenico (?1590-1650?). 17th C. G.

Mazzocchi, Virgilio (?-1646). 17th C. G.

Mazzolani, Antonio (n. Ferrara, 1819–1900, do.). Italian composer of the operas Nicolò de' Lapi, 1852, Gismonda, 1854, and Enrico Charlis, 1876, and effective choruses.

Mazzucato, Alberto (Udine, 1813–1877, Milan). Able Italian violinist and composer, pupil of Bresciani, from 1839 teacher at the Milan Conservatory and from 1872 Rossi's successor as director, besides in 1859–69 being concert-master at La Scala (in 1854–55 he had also been director there) and from 1845 one of the editors of the new Gazzetta Musicale. Wrote 8 operas (from 1834), some church-music, a pamphlet on musical æsthetics, an edition of Ascoli's Principi and translations of text-books by Garcia, Berlioz, Fétis and others.

McAlpin, Colin (Leicester, 1870). English composer, pupil of the Royal Academy and the London College of Music, writing the stage-works King Arthur, 1896, Cross and Crescent, 1903, and The Vow, 1916, the cantata The Prince of Peace, organ-pieces and songs, besides the æsthetic study Hermæia.

McClellan, John Jasper (Payson, Utah, 1874). American organist, pupil of Stanley, Jonás, X. Scharwenka and Jedliczka, beginning activity at the University of Michigan as player and teacher from about 1890 and since 1900 organist at the Mormon Tabernacle in Salt Lake City, besides teaching at the University of Utah. In 1908 he started a symphony-orchestra and in 1911 the Utah Conservatory. He has toured often as recitalist. A.

McCormack, John (Athlone, 1884). Eminent Irish operatic tenor, pupil of V. O'Brien and Sabbatini, winning a medal at eighteen (without previous instruction) and singing with the Dublin Cathedral choir from 1903 (in 1904 at the St. Louis Exposition). From 1907 he was highly successful in both concert and opera in London, and from 1909 in Naples and New York. In 1910–11 he was with the Boston Opera Company and in 1912–13 with the Chicago Opera Company. Of late he has devoted himself mostly to concert-singing. Litt. D. of Holy Cross College in 1917. Autobiography, 1918. G, A.

McCoy, William J. (Crestline, O. 1848). American composer, pupil of Wm. Mason and the Leipzig Conservatory, for many years active in San Francisco. Has written the 'grove-plays' The Hamadryads, 1904, and The Cave-Man, 1910 (both for the Bohemian Club), the opera Egypt, 1914, a symphony (1872), the overture Yosemite, other orchestral pieces (including an incomplete violin-concerto), a violin-sonata, pieces for flute and for saxophone, a mass, an elaborate Kol Nidrei, other church-music, many songs and a work on Cumulative Harmony. A.

McDonald, Peter (Durness, 1729–1824, Kilmore.) Scottish minister, author of a pioneer Collection of Highland Vocal Airs, 1783, in part made by his brother Thomas (1739–1762), who wrote an essay on the Scottish bagpipe (1808). G.

McEwen, John Blackwood (Hawick, 1868). Gifted Scottish composer, trained at the Royal Academy, London, from 1896 lecturer at the Glasgow Athenæum and since 1898 professor at the London Royal Academy. His works include Symphonies—F min., A min., C-sharp min., Solway.

Overtures—Comedy, Tragedy.
Suite in E and Ballet-Suite; 3 Border-Ballades; Highland Dances, for strings.
Viola-concerto.
String-quartets—in G, C min., G min., A, F min., F, E-flat, A min., C min., A, Biscay, E-flat, Threnody, and 2 others. Also Studies and Nugæ (7 bagatelles).
Phantasie in E min., for string-quintet.
Violin-sonatas—E-flat, F min., G, A. Also 6 Highland Dances.
For piano—Sonata in E min.; Suite, Vignettes from La Côte d'Argent; 4 Sketches; Sonatina in G.
Choral works—A Scene from Hellas; The Last Chantey; Hymn on the Nativity (Milton).
Opera Comique, The Royal Rebel; music for the melodrama The Gamekeeper, Romney's Remorse and Grash my Chree.
Songs and part-songs.

He has published several treatises on harmony, piano-playing, phrasing and æsthetics. G, A.

McGuckin, Barton (Dublin, 1852). Able Irish operatic tenor, pupil of Turle, Jos. Robinson and Trevulsi, from 1871 singing at St. Patrick's in Dublin and from 1874 in concert there and in London, from 1880 also in opera, becoming a favorite in oratorio and at festivals. Since 1905 he has been leader of a Dublin choral society. G.

McLean, Alick (Eton, 1872). English composer, pupil of Barnby, from 1899 in the employ of Sir C. Wyndham and from 1911 leader at Scarborough. Has written the operas Quentin Durward, 1895, Petrucchio, 1895 (Moody-Manners prize), Die Liebesgeiger, 1906, and Maitre Seiler, 1909, incidental music for Parker's The Jest and Rostand's Cyrano de Bergerac, the choral work The Annunciation, a violin-serenade and songs.

McNaught, William Gray (London, 1849–1918, do.). Influential English teacher, pupil of the Royal Academy, London, even as a student (1873) becoming notable in choral conducting and soon also as gifted in elementary school-teaching. He was one of Curwen's ablest disciples in promoting the Tonic Sol-fa system. From 1883 he was Stainer's assistant as inspector for the Board of Education and soon became the foremost advocate of competitive festivals for stimulating musical study. From 1908 he was editor of the Musical Times (succeeding F. G. Edwards). Author of various manuals in choir-training and allied subjects.

Mead, Olive (Cambridge, Mass. 1874). American violinist, pupil of Eichberg and Kneisel, from about 1895 appearing as soloist, often with leading orchestras, and since 1904 head of her own Quartet (with Elizabeth Houghton, Gladys North and Lillian Littlehales). A.

Meder, Johann Valentin (1649–1719). 17th C.

Mederitsch, Johann [called Gallus] (Nimburg, 1765–1835, Lemberg). Bohemian composer, pupil of Grillparzer, in 1781–82 conductor at Olmütz and in 1794–96 at Ofen, but living mostly at Vienna. Wrote 6 singspiele (1783-97), music for Macbeth, piano-concertos, chamber-music, piano-sonatas, masses, etc. Memoir by Komorzynski, 1919 (in Alt-Wiener Kalendar).

Medtner, Nikolaus (Moscow, 1879). German-Russian composer, pupil of the Moscow Conservatory and in 1909-10 and 1918-21 professor there. In 1900 he took the Rubinstein prize at Vienna and for some years toured as pianist. His early works showed the influence of Brahms, but he has since tended toward less classical styles. Has written 7 piano-sonatas, a Sonaten-Ballade, a variety of shorter piano-pieces, a violin-sonata, cadenzas for Beethoven's 4th Concerto and many songs. Sketch by Newman, 1915 (in Musical Times).

Meerens, Charles (Bruges, 1831). Belgian acoustician, originally trained as 'cellist by Bessems, Dumont and Servais, but from about 1856 tuner in his father's piano-factory. Author of a long series of monographs on acoustical questions (1859-1902), in which he contends that the system of music is not based upon subtle tone-phenomena (like overtones, etc.), but is the free creation or assumption of artistic thought.

Meerts, Lambert Joseph (Brussels, 1800-1863, do.). Able Belgian violinist, pupil of Lafont, Habeneck and Baillet, from 1828 in the opera-orchestra at Brussels and from 1835 professor at the Conservatory there. Wrote many sets of admirable studies. G.

Mees, Arthur (Columbus, O. 1850-1923, New York). Eminent American conductor, from 1870 active in Cincinnati as organist, teacher and conductor (organist for the first Cincinnati festival in 1873), then pupil of Kullak, Weitzmann and Dorn, in 1880-86 associated with Thomas as chorusmaster (Cincinnati), in 1886-87 with the National Opera Company and in 1896-98 with the Chicago Orchestra. Meanwhile, with New York as center, from 1888 he led the Mendelssohn Union in Orange, N. J., from 1891 the Musical Association in Albany, N. Y., in 1898-1904 the Mendelssohn Club of New York, in 1900-1921 the festivals in Norfolk, Conn. (with R. P. Paine), from 1903 the Orpheus in Newark, N. J., in 1907-11 the festivals in Worcester, Mass., in 1911-15 the Cecilia Society in Boston and from 1913 the Oratorio Society in Bridgeport, Conn. He led a long list of first productions in America of famous choral works. In 1887-96 he edited program-books for the New York Philharmonic Society, in 1896-98 for the Thomas Orchestra (Chicago) and at intervals for the Worcester Festivals. Author of Choirs and Choral Music, 1901, and some piano-studies. Mus.D. of Alfred University in 1901. A.

Megerlin, Alfred (Antwerp, 1880). Gifted Belgian violinist, trained at the Antwerp and Brussels Conservatories and by Ysaÿe, from 1894 in the opera-orchestra at Antwerp, in 1901-05 (summers) at the Puy-de-Dôme Casino, in 1906-12 making extended tours in France, Germany, Austria and Italy, in 1912-14 concertmaster at the Flemish Opera in Antwerp, migrating to New York in 1914, and since 1917 concertmaster of the Philharmonic there. A.

Mehlig, Anna (Stuttgart, 1846). Able Württemberger pianist, pupil of Liebert and Liszt, from 1866 becoming known in Germany, England and America (from 1869) as a leading representative of the Stuttgart school. She married an Antwerp merchant named Falk. G.

Mehrkens, Friedrich Adolf (n. Cuxhaven, 1840-1899, Hamburg). North German choral conductor, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1862 teaching at Hamburg and from 1872 leader of the Bachgesellschaft there and from 1876 also of the Amicitia (society), besides from 1893 being organist at the Jacobikirche. Wrote a mass, a Te Deum and a symphony.

Méhul, Étienne Nicolas [or Henri] (Givet, [June 22] 1763-1817 [Oct. 18], Paris). Distinguished French composer, pupil of Wilhelm Hanzer (organist at Laval Dieu Monastery) and Edelman, with some guidance from Gluck. When but ten he had played the organ at Givet, and became Hanzer's assistant at fourteen. He was helped by a patron to go to Paris in 1778, supporting himself at first by teaching, and by about 1780 was at work on ambitious composition, though not known to the public till 1790. Then, in spite of the turmoil of the Revolution, he rapidly gained a commanding place by a series of dramatic and other works, full of original conception and usually effective technical presentation. He excelled in serious and passionate expression, but undertook much in lighter vein as well. He contributed strongly to the growth of that union of diction with melody, that sharpness of characterization and that freshness of local color which mark the French operatic type. He strove earnestly to broaden and diversify his style, seeking to make up by industry the defects of his early training. His masterpiece was Joseph in 1807, but several other operas long held the boards. His overtures are by far his strongest instrumental production, though he seldom fails anywhere in sincere and thoughtful musicianship. His eminence was early attested by his election to the Académie in 1795, his appointment then as one of the inspectors of the new Conservatory and his entrance in 1802 into the Légion d'Honneur. His career was shortened by consumption, perhaps aggravated by his consciousness of the rising popularity of Spontini.

His works include the following:

Operas—Euphrosyne et Coradin, 1790, Alonso et Cora, 1791, Stratonice, 1792, Le Congrès des Rois, 1793 (with Berton, Cherubini, Grétry and others), Le Jeune Sage et le Vieux Fou, 1793, Horatius Coclès, 1794, Phrosine et Mélidore, 1794, La Caverne, 1795, Doria, 1797, La Toupie et le Papillon, 1797, Le Jeune Henri, 1797, Le Pont de Lodi, 1797, Arion, 1798, Adrien, 1799, Épiqueure, 1800 (with Cherubini), Bion, 1800, L'Irato, 1801, Une Folie, 1802, Le Trésor Supposé, 1802, Joanna, 1802, L'Heureux malgré lui, 1802, Hélène, 1803, Le Baiser et la Quittance, 1803 (with Boieldieu, Isouard and Kreutzer), Les Hussites, 1804, Les Deux Aveugles de Tolède, 1806, Uthal, 1806, Gabrielle d'Estrées, 1806, Joseph, 1807, Les Amazones, 1811, Le Prince Troubadour, 1813, L'Oriflamme, 1814 (with Berton, Kreutzer and Paër), La Journée aux Aventures, 1816, Valentine de Milan, 1822 (completed by Daussolgne-Mébul). Also, not given, Psyché, Lausus et Lydie, Hypsipyle (all before 1790), Arminius, Scipion (both 1794), Tancrède et Clorinde, Sesostrius, Agar dans le Désert (all before 1790), Le Roi Édipus. Also the ballets Dansomanie, 1800, Le Retour d'Ulysse, 1807, and Perseé et Andromède, 1811. His chief successes were with Euphrosyne, Stratonice, Phrosine, La Caverne, Le Jeune Henri, Adrien, Arion, Bion, L'Irato, Uthal, Joseph and Les Amazones.

Choral works—several patriotic works, including Les Chants du Départ de Victoire et du Retour, a Chant National for double chorus and orchestra (1800), etc.; cantata for the marriage of Napoleon (1805), for the birth of the King of Rome (1811), etc.; a Messe Solennelle for Napoleon's Coronation (1804) and 2 others.

4 symphonies; 14 overtures (mostly extracted from operas); several piano-sonatas.

Memoirs by Vieillard, 1859, Pougin, 1889 (2d ed 1893), and Brancour, 1912. G.

Meibom, Marcus (1626–1711). 17th C. G.

Meifred, Joseph Jean Pierre Émile (n. Digne, 1791–1867, Paris). French hornist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from about 1815 employed in Paris theaters and at the Opéra and in 1833–65 teacher at the Conservatory. Wrote a general treatise on the horn (1829), a pamphlet on improvements in band-music and two methods.

Meiland, Jacob (1542–1577). 16th C. G.

Meinardus, Ludwig Siegfried (n. Jever, 1827–1896, Bielefeld). North German conductor, composer and critic, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and of Riccius, Liszt and Marx, from 1853 director of the Glogau Singakademie, from 1865 teacher at the Dresden Conservatory, from 1874 living at Hamburg, where he was critic for the Korrespondent, and from 1887 organist at Bielefeld. Wrote the oratorios Simon Petrus, 1857, König Salomo, 1865, Gideon, 1868, Luther in Worms, 1874, Emmaus (1887) and Odrun, the choral ballades Roland and Schwanenlied, 1865, Frau Hitt, Die Nonne, 1876, and Jung Baldurs Sieg, 1883, the further choral works Deutsche Messgesänge, Wanderlied and Passionlied, 2 small operas (not given), 2 symphonies, a wind-octet, a piano-quintet, several string-quartets, 3 piano-trios, violin-sonatas, a 'cello-sonata, 3 piano-suites and other pieces, songs, etc. Author of Kulturgeschichtliche Briefe über deutsche Tonkunst, 1872 (2d ed.), Ein Jugendleben, 2 vols. 1874 (autobiographical), Rückblick auf d. Anfänge d. deutschen Oper, 1878, lives of Mattheson (1879) and Mozart (1882), Die deutsche Tonkunst im 18.–19. Jahrh. 1887, Klassizität u. Romantik in d. deutschen Tonkunst, 1893, and Eigene Wege, 1895. G.

Meiners, Giovanni Battista (Milan, 1826–1897, n. Bellano). Italian composer, pupil of the Milan Conservatory and of Donizetti and Sechter, from about 1845 maestro at Vercelli, then opera-conductor at Turin and finally teacher at the Guildhall School, London. Wrote the operas Il Desertore Svizzero, 1842, Elodia di S. Mauro, 1855, Riccardo III, 1857, and Veronica Cybo, 1866, besides 2 others not given and some church-music.

Meister, Ferdinand (Wiesbaden, 1871). Hessian conductor, pupil of Reissmann, Fuchs, Mannstädt, Riemann and Löwengard, from about 1895 court-conductor at Arolsen, from 1899 also promoter of festivals at Pyrmont (for contemporary music) and since 1909 director of symphony-concerts at Nuremberg. With Kämpfer in 1909 he started the association of German conductors and shared in the founding of the orchestral school at Bückeberg.

Meister, Karl Severin (n. Frankfort, 1818–1881, Montabaur). Hessian church-musician, from 1851 teacher at the Montabaur Seminary. He began the collection Das kathol. deutsche Kirchenlied, vol. i, 1862 (2d ed. 1886), continued by Bäumker (vol. ii, 1883).

Mel, Raynald. 16th C. G.

Mela, Vincenzo (Isola, 1821–1897, Cologna Veneta). Italian composer of the operas Il Feudatorio, 1853, Il Convento di S. Nicola, 1858, La Testa di Bronzo, 1855, Cristoforo Colombo, 1857, and Il Casino di Campagna, 1865.

Melani, Alessandro (?1630–1703) and Jacopo (1623–?). 17th C.

Melartin, Erkki Gustaf (Kexholm, 1875). Gifted Finnish composer, pupil of the Helsingfors Conservatory and of R. Fuchs, from about 1895 teacher of theory at the Helsingfors Conservatory and since 1911 its director, turning aside in 1908–11 to conduct the Viborg symphony-orchestra. He is counted a leader in the circle of the younger Finnish composers. Has written the opera Aino, 1907, 4 symphonies (1902–12), the symphonic poems Sukajoki and Traumgesicht, an orchestral suite, a violin-concerto (1913), 4 string-quartets, a violin-sonata, music for Prinsessan Törnrosa, a cantata (1907), choruses, many piano-pieces and songs. See Flodin, Finska Musiker, 1900.

Melba, Nellie [Nellie Porter Armstrong, née Mitchell] (n. Melbourne, 1861). Famous Australian operatic soprano, musically gifted from early childhood, but not formally trained till after marriage in 1882 to Capt. Charles N. F. Armstrong, then pupil of Cecchi and Mme. Marchesi. She made her début in concert at Sydney in 1885 and at London in 1886 and in opera at Brussels in 1887 (using her stage-name, derived from Melbourne). From 1888 she was permanently engaged at Covent Garden, London, but soon became known as star in leading Continental capitals and from 1893 in the United States, from 1903, also, in Australia again. In New York she has been chiefly connected with the Metropolitan, but in 1906–07 sang at the Manhattan. In 1917 she was with the Chicago Opera Company. Since 1918 she has taught in Melbourne. Her voice is singularly pure, even and flexible, making her supreme in coloratura rôles. Among the premières at which she has assisted are Bemberg's Elaine (1892) and Saint-Saëns' Hélène (1904). Biographies by Zedlitz, 1896, and Murphy, 1909. G. A.

Melcer, Henryk (Kalish, 1869–1915, in Galicia [in battle]). Gifted Polish pianist and composer, trained at the Warsaw Conservatory and by Leschetizky, taking the Rubinstein prize in 1895 and the Paderewski prize in 1898 (both for concertos), from about 1895 touring extensively in Germany, Russia and France, in 1900 teacher at the Helsingfors Conservatory, in 1901-02 at the Lemberg Conservatory and also conductor of the Harmonie there, in 1903-06 at the Vienna Conservatory and from 1908 conductor of the Warsaw Philharmonic. Wrote the operas Marja, 1904, and Protasilas and Laodamia, the choral work Pani Twardowska, 2 piano-concertos, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, characteristic piano-pieces, transcriptions of songs by Moniuszko, a Canzona for women's voices, etc.

Melchior, Edward A. (Rotterdam, 1860). Author of a biographical dictionary (1889), containing data about many Dutch musicians.

Melgunov, Julius von (Vetluga, 1846-1893, Moscow). Pupil of the Petrograd and Moscow Conservatories and of Westphal, applying the latter's system of rhythmic analysis to some of Bach's preludes and fugues, with other similar studies. Also collected Russian folk-songs (1879-85, with Klenovsky and Blaraberg) and wrote choruses.

Melis, Carmen (Cagliari, 1885). Able Sardinian operatic soprano, pupil of Teresina Singer, Carignani and J. de Reszké, from 1906 appearing widely in Italy, in Egypt, at Odessa and Warsaw, in 1909-10 at the Manhattan, New York, in 1911-13 with the Boston Opera Company and then at the New York Metropolitan and the Paris Opéra. Her vocal and dramatic gifts are superior and have been mainly applied to modern French and Italian rôles. A.

Melli, Domenico Maria. 17th C.

Meltzer, Charles Henry (London, 1852). Good English critic, from about 1875 European correspondent for New York and Chicago papers, removing in 1888 to New York, where he has been on the staff of the World, Herald, American, Cosmopolitan and (lately) Independent. In 1903-07 he was assistant to Grau and Conried at the Metropolitan. Has written many plays, libretti for operas, singing-versions in English of various important operas, including Walküre, Rheingold and Königskinder. A.

Meluzzi, Salvatore (Rome, 1813-1897, do.). Eminent Italian church-musician, from 1852 maestro at St. Peter's in Rome, writing a large variety of masses, Requiems, Psalms, motets and other church-music, including especially a Stabat Mater and a Miserere.

Membrée, Edmond (Valenciennes, 1820-1882, n. Paris). French composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory. Wrote the operas François Villon, 1857, L'Esclave, 1875, Les Parias, 1876, and La Courte Échelle, 1879, with 2 not given, the cantata Fingal, 1861, choruses for Edipe Roi and many songs. Memoir by Mention, 1908.

Mendel, Hermann (Halle, 1834-1876, Berlin). Noted Saxon critic and lexicographer, pupil of Mendelssohn, Moscheles and Wieprecht, from 1853 connected with music-publishing in Berlin (till 1868), writer for several papers there and in 1870 founder of the Deutsche Musiker-Zeitung. Author of lives of Nicolai (1866) and Meyerbeer (1868, '69), contributions to Mode's Opernbibliothek and especially the first part of a remarkable Musikal. Conversations-Lexikon (to letter M, in vol. vii), 12 vols. 1870-83 (completed by Reissmann). This latter was the most comprehensive work up to its time and remains of much value. G.

Mendelssohn, Arnold (Ratibor, 1855), son of a cousin of the following. Able Silesian composer, trained at the Berlin Hochschule, from 1880 organist and teacher at Bonn University, in 1883-85 conductor of the Bielefeld Musikverein, from 1885 professor at the Cologne Conservatory and since 1890 Gymnasium professor at Darmstadt and church-director, besides from 1912 teaching at the Hoch Conservatory in Frankfurt. He gained the title of royal professor in 1899. Has written the operas Elsi, die seltsame Magd, 1896, Der Barenhäuter, 1900, and Die Minneburg, 1909, the choral works Abendkantate, 1881, Das Leiden des Herrn, Auferstehung, Neckreigen, Der Hagestolz, 1890, Frühlingsfeier, 1891, Paria, 1905, Pandora, 1908, Aus tiefer Not and Psalm 137, fine a cappella choruses and songs, besides editing oratorios and other works by Schütz. Theol. D. of Gies-sen Univ. in 1917. See Nagel in Monographien moderner Musiker, 1906.

Mendelssohn-Bartholdy, Jacob Ludwig Felix (Hamburg, [Feb. 3] 1809-1847 [Nov. 4], Leipzig), son of Abraham M., banker at Berlin (from 1811), and grandson of Moses M., famous Jewish philosopher.* The family was wealthy and cultivated, the mother being the children's first teacher in music and other subjects. Their Berlin home was a social center, so that careful training under tutors was constantly supplemented by contact with writers, artists, musicians, diplomats and many distinguished visitors. Felix had lessons from L. Berger, Zelter, Henning, Mme. Bigot (1816, Paris) and finally Moscheles (1824). His progress was stimulated by weekly musicales held at the family home at which leading players and singers assisted. He began to play in public at nine and at ten joined the Singakademie (as alto, continuing later as tenor). In 1820 began the systematic series of his formal compositions (now deposited in the Berlin Library). The solidity of his precocious development is attested not only by the number and variety of the earlier works, but by the impression made in 1826 by his overture to A Midsummer-

*The name Bartholdy was appended by Abraham M. when, like some other members of their families, he and his wife (née Lea Salomon) adopted Christianity. It had already been used by her brother. Both the Mendelssohns and the Salomons were identified with Berlin.

The other children were Fanny Cäcilie (1805-1847), from 1829 wife of the painter Hensel, Rebecca (b. 1811) and Paul (b. 1813). Fanny was as precocious as Felix in music and was his special companion always, while Rebecca and he studied Greek together as children. The latter married Professor Derichlet.

Night's Dream and in 1827 by his short opera Die Hochzeit des Camacho, followed by his directing the Singakademie in a revival of Bach's St. Matthew Passion in 1829. At sixteen, when he became committed to a musical career, he was already a finished player on piano, organ and viola and an expert composer.

The years 1829-32 were mainly filled with travel or sojourns in England, southern Germany, Austria, Italy, Switzerland and France, mostly for general culture. In 1830 he declined a place in Berlin University and in 1832 failed of election as Zelter's successor in the Singakademie. In 1833, however, he conducted the Lower Rhine Festival at Düsseldorf and was then made town-musician there, with varied and onerous duties. He soon handed the opera over to Rietz, but continued energetically with the rest till 1835, when, after leading another festival at Cologne, he accepted a call to be conductor of the Gewandhaus Orchestra in Leipzig. His work here was promptly crowned with immense success and around him gathered a circle of eminent musicians, including the violinist David and also Schumann.

From this point his life became extremely strenuous, owing partly to his own insistent aspiration and partly to his growing fame, which took him often away as performer or conductor and also brought burdens of counsel or correspondence. Besides other trips he went often to England. The stream of creative activity went on incessantly, his largest works being the oratorio Paulus (1836) and the Lobgesang (1840). In 1837 he was happily married at Frankfort to Cécile Jeanrenaud (daughter of a Swiss clergyman).

In 1841 he was induced by the King of Prussia to take charge of the music-section of a projected Academy of Arts at Berlin. This ungenial task led to two sojourns, made annoying by the vagueness of the scheme and the jealousy or apathy of individuals. The one genuine result of his efforts was the reorganization of the Cathedral Choir, which has ever since been famous. Returning to Leipzig, he gained the support of the King of Saxony for the founding of a Conservatory, which was opened in 1843 with a brilliant staff of teachers and presently drew many students from far outside of Germany. Into this epochal enterprise he threw himself with vigor and ability. But he also had duties at Berlin and Dresden as kapellmeister at both courts. In his many absences Hiller and Gade filled his place as conductor, though in 1845-46 he resumed it more or less. In 1846 he had conducting to do at Aix, Düsseldorf, Liège, Cologne and finally Birmingham (his ninth trip to England), where his Elijah had a memorable first performance. A few months later his sister Fanny suddenly died. The shock of this, added to the strain of the preceding years, was so severe that he soon followed, his untimely death being felt generally throughout Germany and England as a public calamity.

His musicianship was thoroughly masterly on every side, enabling him to execute his conceptions with rapid precision, fullness and finish. He was instinctively clear, orderly and normal in his ideas and his expression of them. His habitual forms were those of the classical school, though often treated with freshness and ingenuity. And his temperament led him to keep uppermost that which was bright, buoyant, animated and energetic. His total style may be said to embody one face of the characteristically German spirit. In many ways he is strikingly akin to Mozart, though much less affected by Italian influence. In his serious writing he is obviously related to Bach, though lacking in the latter's profundity and sheer originality. Some of his nobler passages, however, rise to a fine sublimity of thematic massiveness. He reaches his best in his larger choral works and in those for chamber-ensemble.

The fascination of his ardent and brilliant personality, the earnest vivacity of his gifts as performer on both piano and organ, the solidity of his general artistic equipment and his inevitable renown as head of the Gewandhaus Orchestra and then of the first German conservatory—all these combined to give him for a few years extraordinary influence. It happened that his career coincided in time with the strong putting forth of different strains of romanticism under geniuses like Schumann, Chopin, Berlioz, Liszt and Wagner. With Schumann he had much intimacy, but even with him, and still more with the others, he had no strong sympathy. His instinctive predilections were rather classical in essence, though by no means stiffly reactionary. He was foremost in promoting the Bach revival. He magnified the style of Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven. As composer he hardly touched the field of opera. As teacher he insisted upon thorough discipline in form, structure and exactness of detail. In all these ways he exerted more and more a restraining and conservative influence. It may be that the historic value of this is greater than has always been recognized. Yet the fact that he was more a preserver of continuity with the past than a breaker of new paths takes something from his eminence to many minds.

The following is a summary of his works (opus-numbers in brackets):

Orchestral Works

- Symphonies—C min. [11] (1824), 'Italian', A [90] (1833), Lobgesang (symphonie-cantata) [52] (1840, for 400th anniversary of the invention of printing), 'Scotch', A min. [56] (1842), 'Reformation', D [107]. Also 12 early works (all but one for strings only) and string-fugues.
- Overtures—A Midsummer-Night's Dream, E [21] (1826), for wind, C [24], Die Fingalshöhle or 'Hebrides', B min. [26] (1830), Meeresstille und glückliche Fahrt, D [27], Die schöne Melusine, F [32] (1833), Ruy Blas [95] (1839), 'Trumpet', C [101]. Also Trauer-Marsch [103] (1836, funeral of N. Burgmüller) and March in D [108] (1841, for a fête to the painter Cornelius).
- Concertos—for piano, G min. [25], D min. [40] (1837); for violin, E [64] (1844), Capriccio Brillante, B min. [22]; Rondo (or Capriccio) Brillante, E-flat [29] (1834); Serenade and Allegro Gioioso, B min. [43]

(1838), all for piano. Also early concertos for piano, for violin and 2 for two pianos.

Chamber-Works

Piano-octet, E-flat [20]; piano-sextet, D [110] (1824); string-quintets, A and B-flat [18, 87] (1831, '45). String-quartets, E-flat (1823), E-flat [12] (1829), A [13] (1827), D, E min., E-flat [44] (1837-38), F min. [80] (1847). Piano-quartets, C min. [1] (1822), F min. [2] (1823), B min. [3] (1825). Andante, Scherzo, Capriccio, Fugue [81], for strings. Piano-trios, D min. [49] (1839), C min. [66]. 2 pieces for clarinet, basset-horn and piano [113-4] (1833). Also an early string-trio. Violin-sonata, F min. [4]. 'Cello-sonatas, B-flat [45] (1838), D [58]. Variations Concertantes [17] (1829), Lied ohne Worte [109], both for 'cello. Also early sonatas for violin (one, however, dated 1838), for viola and for clarinet.

Piano-Works

Sonatas—G min. [105] (1821), E [6] (1826), B-flat [106] (1827). Capriccios and Fantasias—F-sharp min. [5] (1825), E [14] (Rondo), E, on The Last Rose of Summer [15], A min., E min., E [16] (1829), F-sharp min. 'Sonate Ecossaise' [28] (1833), A min., E, B-flat min. [33] (1833-4), E [118] (1837), B min. (Scherzo), F-sharp min. (Scherzo and Capriccio). Variations Sérieuses [54] (1841); variations, E-flat [82] (1841), B-flat [83]. Lieder ohne Worte, 8 books, each of 6, 1 [19] (1830), 2 [30] (1833), 3 [38] (1836-7), 4 [53] (1841), 5 [62] (1842-4), 6 [67] (1843-5), 7 [85] (1834, '41, '45), 8 [102] (1842, '45). Albumblatt [117]. Andante Cantabile and Presto Agitato, B (1838). Gondellied, A (1837). 6 Preludes and Fugues [35] (1832-7); Prelude and Fugue, E min. (1827, '41); 3 Preludes and 3 Studies [104] (1834, '36); Perpetuum Mobile [119]; Étude, F min. (1836). 7 Charakterstücke [7]; 6 Kinderstücke [72] (1842); 2 Clavierstücke. For 4 hands—Allegro Brillante [92] (1841); Duo Concertante (variations on march from Weber's Preciosa) (with Moscheles). Various fantasias, fugues, studies, etc., of early date.

Organ-Works

6 Sonatas [65] (1839, '44-5); 3 Preludes and Fugues [37] (1837); Fugue, F min. (1839); Prelude, G min. (1841); Andante (with variations) and Allegro (1844). Also many early fugues.

Choral Works

Oratorios—Paulus or St. Paul [36] (1836, Düsseldorf), Lobgesang or Hymn of Praise [52] (1840, Leipzig) [see under orchestral works above], Elias or Elijah [70] (1846, Birmingham), Christus [97] (unfinished). Psalms—115 [31] (1830), 42 [42], 95 [46] (1839), 114 [51] (1839), 2, 43, 22 [78] (1844), 98 [91] (1844). Lauda Sion [73] (1846); Tu es Petrus [111] (1827); Verleih' uns Frieden (1831); Festgesang (1840); Hear my Prayer (1844). Also 3 early works. Die erste Wälpurgisnacht [60] (1831-2); An die Künstler [68] (1846). Also 1 early work. Te Deum; Nunc dimittis, Jubilate, Magnificat [69] (1847); 2 Kyries (1833, '46); Responsorium et Hymnus [121]; Hymn [96] (1840, '43); about 15 other motets, anthems and sacred choruses [23, 39, 79, 115, 116].

Dramatic Works

Die Hochzeit des Camacho, comic opera [19] (1827); Heimkehr aus der Fremde or Son and Stranger, sing-spiel [89] (1829); Loreley, operetta (unfinished) [98]. Also 5 early operettas. Music for Sophocles' Antigone [55] (1841), Shakespeare's Midsummer-Night's Dream [61], Racine's Athalie [74] (1843-5), Sophocles' Œdipus in Colonus [93] (1845). Also early music for Calderon's El Principi Costante.

Songs and Part-Songs

Aria, Infelice! [94] (1834). About 85 songs [8, 9, 19, 34, 47, 57, 71, 84, 86, 99, 112, etc.], and many early. 9 duets [63, 77].

About 50 part-songs [41, 48, 50, 59, 75, 76, 88, 100, 120], including Die Stiftungsfeier (1842).

Additional Accompaniments, etc.

Handel's Israel in Egypt, Solomon, Dettingen Te Deum and Acis and Galatea. Editions of Bach's Violin-Chaconne, Chorale-Preludes and Elaborations, etc.

Standard edition, edited by Rietz, is published by Breitkopf & Härtel (1874-77), and also a Thematic Catalogue (1846, 3d ed. 1882). Collections of letters by Paul Mendelssohn, 1861, '63, Nohl, 1867, Polko, 1868, Devrient, 1869, Hiller, 1874, F. Moscheles, 1888, Friedländer, 1891, Wolff, 1907, and Klingemann, 1909. Memoirs by Lampadius, 1848, Benedict, 1850, Schubring, 1866, Reissmann, 1867, Devrient, 1869, Hensel, 1879, Rockstro, 1884, Schrader, 1898, Stratton, 1900, Hadden, 1904, Blackburn, 1904, Wolff, 1906, Bellaigue, 1907, Stoecklin, 1907, Hartog, 1908, Dahms, 1919, etc. G.

Mengal, Martin Joseph (Ghent, 1784-1851, do.). Belgian hornist and conductor, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1806 playing at the Odéon and the Feydeau in Paris, from 1825 theater-director or conductor at Ghent, Antwerp and The Hague and from 1835 director of the Ghent Conservatory. Wrote 5 operas (1818-28), an overture, 2 horn-concertos, a large variety of chamber-pieces (many for wind-ensemble), etc.

Mengelberg, Josef Willem (Utrecht, 1871). Eminent Dutch conductor, trained at the Utrecht and Cologne Conservatories, from 1891 town-director at Lucerne and since 1895 conductor of the Concertgebouw-Orkest at Amsterdam, besides from 1898 leading the choral society Toonkunst there and from 1907 the Museum-Concerts at Frankfurt, as well as from 1908 those of the Cäcilienverein. From 1903 he has often served as guest-conductor elsewhere, especially at London (Philharmonic). In 1905 and since 1921 he has been one of the conductors of the New York Philharmonic. He is a foremost interpreter of Strauss.

Mengelberg, Kurt Rudolf (Krefeld, 1892). Rhenish writer, educated at Leipzig University (Ph.D. 1915), then settling in Amsterdam, where he has prepared program-books for the Concertgebouw Orchestra. Has written orchestral and chamber-pieces, songs and a monograph on G. A. Ristori (1916).

Menges, Isolde (Brighton, 1894). Gifted English violinist, pupil of her father, Sametini and Auer, appearing in London from 1913 and in New York from 1916.

Mengewein, Karl (Zaunroda, 1852-1908, Berlin). Thuringian conductor and composer, from 1876 teaching at the Freudenberg Conservatory in Wiesbaden and from 1881 also leading the Sacred Music Society, and since 1896 in Berlin, where till 1896 he joined Freudenberg in starting a new music-school, besides being from 1888 choir-master at the Bethlehemkirche and from 1893 at the Zwölf Apostelkirche, in 1889 founding the Oratorienverein and later conducting also a men's chorus and the a cappella society Madrigal. Wrote the oratorio Johannes der Täufer, 1892, the cantatas Martin Luther, Frau Musica and Frühlingsfeier, an operetta (1884), several singspiele, a Requiem, motets, women's choruses, songs, the overture Dornröschen, violin- and viola-pieces, a piano-method and Die Ausbildung d. musikal. Gehörs, 1908, besides translating J. K. Fabricius' opera Schön Karen from the Danish.

Mengozzi, Bernardo (Florence, 1758–1800, Paris). Italian operatic tenor, pupil of Potenza, from about 1780 appearing in Italy, in 1786 in London and then active in Paris, where he was long at the Théâtre de Monsieur and from 1795 taught at the new Conservatory. Wrote about 12 operas (from 1790) and most of the Conservatory singing-method (finished by Langlé). G.

Ménil, Félicien de (Boulogne, 1860). French historical student, after extensive travel in America, Asia and Africa, from 1899 professor at the École Niedermeyer in Paris: Author of monographs on Monsigny (1893), Josquin des Prés (1896), the Flemish contrapuntal school (1895, extended, 1906) and the history of dancing (1904). Has also written the comedy La Janelière, 1894, the operetta Gosses, 1901, and 2 ballets (1902).

Mennicke, Karl (Reichenbach, 1880–1917, in battle). Saxon conductor and writer, educated at Leipzig University (Ph.D. 1905), in 1906–07 connected with the Leipzig Opera, from 1907 conductor of the Glogau Singakademie, from 1911 opera-director at Treves and then conductor of the Liegnitz orchestra, meanwhile giving orchestral novelties in Munich and Berlin, and from 1913 conductor at Helsingfors (opera and orchestra). Author of Hasse u. d. Brüder Graun als Symphoniker, 1906, and articles in the 6–8th editions of Riemann's Lexikon, besides editing the Riemann Festschrift, 1909.

Menter, Joseph (n. Landshut, 1808–1856, Munich). Able Bavarian 'cellist, pupil of P. Moralt, from 1829 in the court-band at Hechingen and from 1833 in that at Munich. He made wide tours from Austria to England. G.

Menter, Sophie (Munich, 1848–1918, n. do.), daughter of the above. Eminent Bavarian pianist, pupil of the Munich Conservatory, Niest, Tausig, Von Bülow and Liszt, appearing at Stuttgart in 1863 and soon gaining international fame, with many honors. In 1883–87 she was professor at the Petrograd Conservatory. Wrote Ungarische Zigeunerweisen for piano and orchestra (instrumented by Tchaikovsky) and piano-pieces. In 1872–86 she was the wife of the 'cellist Popper. G.

Mercadante, Giuseppe Saverio Raffaele (Altamura, 1795–1870, Naples). Eminent Italian composer, pupil of Zingarelli at the Naples Conservatory, from 1818 becoming known through instrumental works and in 1819 entering on a long operatic career which took him hither and thither, including sojourns in various Italian cities, at Madrid and Lisbon (1827–29), Paris and Vienna. From 1833 he was maestro at Novara Cathedral, following Generali, in 1839 in a like position at Lanciano and from 1840 Zingarelli's successor as director of the Naples Conservatory. At Novara he lost one of his eyes and in 1862 became wholly blind. Wrote about 60 operas (1819–66), including L'Apoteosi d'Ercole, 1819, Elisa e Claudio, 1821, Ipermestra, 1824, Ezio, 1827, I Briganti, 1836, Il Giuramento, 1837 (counted his best), Il Bravo, 1839, and Leonora, 1844, many cantatas for occasions, about 20 masses, Psalms, motets and other church-music, Le Sette Parole di Nostro Signore, many orchestral 'sinfonie' (overtures or fantasias), including those in memory of Donizetti, Bellini (1860), Pacini (1868) and Rossini (1868), as well as characteristic or descriptive pieces, numerous songs and solfeggi, etc. Memoirs by Neumann, 1855, and Bustico, 1921. G.

Méreaux, Jean Amédée Lefroid de (Paris, 1803–1874, Rouen). Able French pianist, pupil of Reicha, from 1835 settled in Rouen. Editor of Les Clavecinistes de 1637 à 1790, 1867, and author of Variétés Littéraires et Musicales, 1878 (with memoir by Marmontel). G.

Merian, Hans (Basel, 1857–1905, Leipzig). Swiss critic and writer, author of Mozarts Meisteropern, 1900, a notable Gesch. d. Musik im 19. Jahrh. 1902 (2d ed. by Smolian, 1906, 3d ed. by Egg, 1914), and many Führer to operas, symphonies, etc.

Merian, Wilhelm (Basel, 1889). Swiss student of musicology, educated at Basel and Berlin Universities (Ph.D. 1916), author of a thesis on Kotter's tablatures and a history of the Basel Conservatory (1917).

Mériel, Paul (Mondoubleau, 1818–1897, Toulouse). French violinist and composer, pupil of Napoleão and Somma, early playing with operatic troupes (for a time at Amiens) and after 1847 teaching at Toulouse, where he later became head of the Conservatory. Wrote the opera L'Armorique, 1854, several comic operas, the dramatic oratorio Caïn, the symphony Le Tasse (Tasso) and chamber-music. He was a member of the Légion d'Honneur.

Merikanto, Oskar (Helsingfors, 1868). Able Finnish organist and composer, trained at Helsingfors, Leipzig and Berlin, from about 1890 organist at St. John's in Helsingfors and conductor at the National Opera. Has written the operas The Girl of Pohja, 1899, and The Death of Elina, pieces for organ, piano and violin, and songs, besides editing a collection of folk-songs.

Merk, Joseph (Vienna, 1795–1852, n. do.). Gifted Austrian 'cellist, pupil of Schindlöcker, from 1818 leading player at the Vienna Opera, from 1823 professor at the new Conservatory and from 1834 in court-service, besides concert-tours. Wrote a 'cello-concerto, a concertino, variations, fantasias and excellent études. G.

Merkel, Gustav Adolf (n. Bautzen, 1827–1885, Dresden). Eminent Saxon organist, pupil of Joh. Schneider, Jul. Otto, Reissiger and Schumann, from 1858 at the Waisenhaus, from 1860 at the Kreuzkirche and from 1867 at the Hofkirche (Catholic), besides from 1861 teaching at the Conservatory and in 1867-73 conducting the Dreyssig Singakademie. Wrote 9 organ-sonatas (one for 4 hands and double pedal), important preludes and fugues, a Weihnachts-Pastorale, many fantasias, chorale-preludes, fugues, studies and a method, besides motets, piano-pieces and songs. G.

Merkel, Johannes Gottfried (Leipzig, 1860). Saxon pianist and composer, trained at the Leipzig University (Ph.D.) and Conservatory and under Liszt, from 1888 teaching at the Riga Conservatory, in 1892-94 at the Eichelberg Conservatory in Berlin and since 1898 at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1918 with the title of royal professor. Has written a symphony, an overture, a piano-concerto, a string-quartet, a piano-sonata and various pieces, mostly contrapuntal, besides editing works by Muffat and Mme. Backer-Gröndahl.

Merkel, Karl Ludwig. Professor at Leipzig University, author of several works on the voice and the vocal organs (1856-73).

Merklin, Joseph (n. Freiburg, Baden, 1819-1905, Nancy). Noted organ-maker, trained by his father and Walcker, from 1843 building up a business at Brussels (from 1853 with his brother-in-law F. Schütze), from 1855 with a branch in Paris. They built the organ in St.-Eustache in Paris.

Merlo, Alessandro. 16th C. G. (Alessandro).

Mermet, Auguste (1810-1889, Paris). French composer, pupil of Lesueur and Halévy, writing the operas Le Bannière du Roi, 1835, Le Roi David, 1846, Roland à Roncevaux, 1864, and Jeanne d'Arc, 1876. See Peellaert, Cinquante Ans de Souvenirs, 1867.

Méro, Yolanda (Pest, 1887). Gifted Hungarian pianist, pupil of her father and the Pest Conservatory, from 1903 appearing with marked success at Dresden and throughout Europe, since 1909 also in America. In 1908 she was made professor at the Pest Conservatory. In 1909 she married Hermann Irion of New York.

Mersenne, Marin (1588-1648). 17th C. G.

Mersmann, Hans (Potsdam, 1891). Prussian musicologist, educated at Munich, Leipzig and Berlin Universities (Ph.D. 1914), from 1915 assistant in the music-history seminar at Berlin University, teacher at the Stern Conservatory and critic for the Allgem. Musikzeitung, and from 1921 at the Technische Hochschule. Author of Beiträge zur Ansbacher Musikgeschichte, 1916, and a series entitled Kulturgesch. d. Musik (2 vols. out). He is a member of the Folk-Song Commission and is engaged on an exhaustive collation of their comprehensive collections, as well as being himself a poet of note.

Mertens, Joseph (Antwerp, 1834-1901, Brussels). Belgian violinist and composer, from about 1855 playing at the Antwerp Opera and teaching at the Conservatory, in 1878-79 conductor at the Flemish Opera in Brussels, then inspector of Belgian music-schools and later director of the Hague Opera. From 1866 wrote about 10 effective short operas, including De Zwaarte Kapitein, 1877, the oratorio L'Angelus, 1876, etc.

Mertke, Eduard (Riga, 1833-1895, Cologne). German-Russian pianist, pupil of Von Lützu and Agthe, first appearing when but ten and making his formal début in Russia in 1850. In 1853-59 he was a violinist in the Gewandhaus Orchestra at Leipzig, but resumed tours as pianist in 1859. From 1869 he taught at the Cologne Conservatory. Wrote the operas Lisa, 1872, and Kyrrill von Thessalonica, the cantatas Des Liedes Verklärung and Blumengeister, a piano-suite and some pieces and études, besides editing Chopin's works, concerted pieces of Weber, Hummel and Mendelssohn and a collection of Ukrainian folk-songs.

Mertz, Joseph Kasper (Presburg, 1806-1856, Vienna). Noted Hungarian guitarist, from 1840 for about fifteen years touring through Austria, Poland and Germany, after 1842 assisted by his wife, née Josephine Plantin, who was a good pianist.

Merula, Tarquinio. 17th C. G.

Merulo [Merlotti], Claudio, (1533-1604). 16th C. G.

Merz, Karl (Bensheim, 1836-1890, Wooster, O.). Hessian organist and teacher, from 1854 in America, at first in or near Philadelphia and in the South, from 1861 music-director at Oxford College and from 1882 at Wooster University (both in Ohio). From 1868 he wrote with ability for Brainard's Musical World (Cleveland) and edited it from 1873. Wrote a piano-trio, a sonata, many pieces, songs, choruses and organ-pieces, besides 3 operettas. Author of methods for piano and for reed-organ, a text-book in harmony and Music and Culture, 1890 (edited by his son). His library went to the Carnegie Institute in Pittsburgh. A.

Merz, Viktor (Brünn, 1891). Moravian chemist and composer, pupil of Frobeler, Fuchs and Schreker, since 1918 settled at Brünn. Has written a Komödien-Ouvertüre, a Prolog zu einem romantischen Schauspiel, the choral work Natur, Gesänge des Hafis for baritone and small orchestra and many songs.

Mesnard, Léonce (Rochefort, 1826-1890, Grenoble). French civil official and from 1865 in literary work. Author of a critique of Schumann (1866) and Essais de Critique Musicale, 1888 (on Berlioz and Brahms).

Messenger, André Charles Prosper (Montluçon, 1853). Eminent French organist, conductor and composer, pupil of the École Niedermeyer (Paris) and of Saint-Saëns, early winning prizes with instrumental and vocal works. From 1874 he was assistant-organist at St.-Sulpice in Paris, in 1880-81 director at the Théâtre Éden in Brussels, then again in Paris as organist at St.-Paul-et-St.-Louis and in 1882-84 choirmaster at Ste.-Marie-des-Batignolles. In 1898-1903 he was conductor at the Opéra-Comique, in 1901-07 artistic director at Covent Garden in London, in 1907-19 one of the directors of the Opéra and in 1919-20 once more director at the Opéra-Comique. In 1908 he succeeded Marty as conductor of the Conservatory Concerts, and in 1918 made a tour with the orchestra in America. In 1907 he was made officer in the Légion d'Honneur. His style is refined, melodious and skillful, though without marked originality or force. His works include the following:

Operas—François les Bas-bleus, 1883 (begun by F. Bernicat), La Fauvette du Temple, 1885, La Béarnaise, 1885, Le Bourgeois de Calais, 1887, Isoline, 1888, La Basoche, 1890, Madame Chrysanthème, 1893, Mirette, 1894, Le Chevalier d'Harmant, 1896, Véronique, 1898, Les Dragons de l'Impératrice, 1905, Fortunio, 1907, Béatrice, 1914.

Operettas—Le Mari de la Reine, 1889, Miss Dollar, 1893, La Fiancée en Loterie, 1896, Les P'tites Michus, 1897, enormously popular.

Ballets—Fleur d'Oranger, 1878, Les Vins de France, 1879, Mignons et Villains, 1879, Les Deux Pigeons, 1886, Scaramouche, 1891, Amants Éternels, 1893, Le Chevalier aux Fleurs, 1897, Le Procès des Roses, 1897, and Une Aventure de la Guinard, 1900.

Incidental music for Delair's Hélène (1891) and for Moreau and Carré's La Montagne Enchantée (1897). Cantatas—Don Juan et Haydée, 1876, Prométhée Enchaîné.

A symphony (1875). Some piano-pieces. About 20 songs.

See articles in Musica, 1908, and Sere, Musiciens d'Aujourd'hui, 1711. G. A.

Messchaert, Johannes Martinus (Hoorn, 1857-1922, Berlin). Gifted Dutch baritone, pupil of the Cologne, Frankfurt and Munich Conservatories, for a time teacher and choral conductor at Amsterdam, also singing in De Lange's a cappella choir, but from about 1885 famous as a lieder-singer and Bach interpreter. He toured at times with Jul. Röntgen. From 1911 he taught at the Berlin Hochschule and from 1920 at the Zurich Conservatory. Sketch by Martienssen, 1914.

Mestrino, Niccolò (Milan, 1748-1789, Paris). Italian violinist, from about 1770 in the bands of Princes Esterházy and Erdödy, then touring in Italy, Germany and France, from 1786 a favorite in Paris. Wrote 12 concertos, sonatas, caprices, études, etc. G.

Metallov, Vassili Mihailovitch (n. Saratov, 1862). Russian church-musician, trained at Moscow, from 1894 teaching at the Synodal School and since 1901 professor of church-music at the Conservatory. Author of works on the technique and a history of Russian church-music (from 1893).

Metastasio, Pietro Antonio Domenico Bonaventura [name originally Trapassi] (Rome, 1698-1782, Vienna). Celebrated Italian poet, educated under the critic Gravina as patron, from 1730 court-poet at Vienna. He excelled in the drafting of opera-texts, which were elegant and fluent, though without high dramatic value. They became the fashion throughout the 18th century, some of them being put to music 30-40 times by different composers. They include (with date of earliest musical setting)

Operas—Didone Abbandonata, 1724, Siface, 1726, Siroe, 1726, Catone in Utica, 1727, Ezio, 1728, Semiramide, 1729, Alessandro nell'Indie, 1727, Artaserse, 1730, Demetrio, 1731, Adriano in Siria, 1732, Issipile, 1723, Olimpiade, 1733, Demofonte, 1733, La Clemenza di Tito, 1734, Achille in Sciro, 1736, Ciro Riconosciuto, 1736, Zenobia, 1740, Temistocle, 1742, Antigono, 1743, Ipermestra, 1744, Attilio Regolo, 1750, Il Rè Pastore, 1751, L'Eroe Cinese, 1752, L'Isola Disabitata, 1754, Nitteti, 1759, Alcide al Bibio, 1760, Il Trionfo di Clelia, 1760, Teide, 1760, Egeria, 1764, Romolo ed Ersilia, 1765, Il Parnasso Confuso, 1765, Il Trionfo d'Amore, 1765, Partenope, 1767, Il Ruggiero, 1771. Oratorios—La Passione, 1730, S. Elena, 1731, La Morte d'Abel, 1732, Giuseppe Riconosciuto, 1733, La Betulia Liberata, 1734, Gioas, Rè di Giuda, 1735, Isacco, 1740. Many other texts of slighter extent, used for 'feste teatrali', 'azioni teatrali', etc.

He was careful to arrange his poems so as to conform to the established operatic customs of the time, providing for a fixed rotation of recitatives and arias. His works have been collected in 1780-82 and 1816-20, and were critically estimated by Calzabigi in 1755 and 1790. Memoirs or studies by Mattei, 1785, J. A. Hiller, 1786, Burney, 1796, Karajan, 1861, Mussafia, 1882, Falconi, 1883, Zito, 1904, and Leonardi, 1909. See also catalogues by Wotquenne, 1901, '05 (texts of Zeno, Metastasio and Goldoni), Fehr, 1912 (on Zeno), and Sonneck, Opera-Librettos, 1914. G.

Methfessel, Albert Gottlieb (Stadttilm, 1785-1869, n. Gandersheim). Thuringian composer, from 1810 in court-service at Rudolstadt, from 1822 director at Hamburg and in 1832-42 court-composer at Brunswick. Wrote very popular songs and part-songs, piano-sonatas and pieces, an opera and an oratorio. See Riehl, Charakterköpfe, 1879: G.

Métra, Jules Louis Olivier (Rheims, 1830-1889, Paris). French conductor and composer of dance-music, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1855 leader at various Paris theaters and dance-halls, in 1872-77 conductor at the Folies-Bergère, as well as at balls at the Opéra-Comique, the Opéra and the Monnaie (Brussels). Wrote about 20 operettas, ballet-divertissements, etc., and innumerable taking dances.

Mettenleiter, Dominicus (Thannhausen, 1822-1868, Ratisbon), brother of the following. Catholic theologian, associated with his brother at Ratisbon, where his fine musical library was combined with that of Proske. Author of histories of music in Ratisbon (1866) and in the Oberpfalz (1867), lives of his brother (1867) and of Proske (1868, 2d ed. 1895) and contributions to his brother's Enchiridion.

Mettenleiter, Johann Georg (n. Ulm, 1812-1858, Ratisbon), brother of the above. Würtemberger church-musician, from about 1840 choir-master at the Ratisbon Cathedral. Wrote important masses, a Stabat Mater, Ave Maria, Misereres, Psalm 95, etc., and edited a Manuale Breve Canticum, 1852, and Enchiridion Chorale, 1855, both with organ-accompaniments.

Metzdorff, Richard (Danzig, 1844-1919, Berlin?). Prussian conductor and composer, pupil of F. Geyer, Dehn and Kiel, from 1865 theater-director at Düsseldorf, Berlin, Nuremberg, Brunswick and finally Hanover, where he conducted a piano-school till 1914, then moving to Berlin.

Wrote the operas Rosamunde, 1875, and Hagbart und Signe, 1896, 3 symphonies, the overture King Lear, an orchestral Phantasiestück, a violin-concerto, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, piano-trios, piano-sonatas and pieces, the choral ballade Frau Alice and songs.

Metzger, Ottilie (Frankfort, 1878). Eminent Hessian operatic contralto, pupil of Frau Nicklass-Kempner, G. Vogel and Reicher, from about 1897 appearing at Halle and Cologne, and since 1903 engaged at the Hamburg Opera, besides many visits and tours elsewhere (as at Bayreuth, in Austria, Belgium, England and America (1914-15)). In 1902-08 she was the wife of the writer Klemens Froitzheim and in 1910 married the bass Theodor Lattermann. She is equally notable in opera and concert.

Meuerer, Johannes Georg (Würzburg, 1871). Able Bavarian church-musician, trained at the Würzburg Music School, in 1892-1921 active at Gratz as teacher in the school of the Styrian Musical Union, from 1899 organist at the Herz-Jesu-Kirche and from 1904 at the Cathedral. Has written about 20 masses, a Requiem, motets, other church-music, an Auferstehungschor, etc., besides an organ-method.

Meursius, Johannes (1579-1639). 17th C.

Meusel, Johann Georg (Eyrichshof, 1743-1820, Erlangen). Professor of history at Erlangen University, author of a Deutsches Künstler-Lexikon, 2 vols. 1778, '89, and other lexicographical works that contain musical data.

Mey, Kurt Johannes (Dresden, 1864-1912, do.). Saxon historical student, trained at Berlin and Leipzig Universities, in 1890-93 chorus-master at Karlsruhe, then living at Dresden. Author of Der Meistersang in Geschichte u. Kunst, 1892 (2d ed. 1901), Die Musik als tönende Weltidee, 1901 (part i only, Die metaphys. Urgesetze d. Melodik), and many essays in the Bayreuther Blätter, etc.

Meyer, Gustav (Königsberg, 1859). Prussian theater-director, pupil of Schwalm and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1885 working at Liegnitz, Görlitz, Eisenach, Dorpat, Breslau, Stettin (from 1895), Leipzig (Stadttheater) and Prague (Landestheater). Has written operettas (from 1897), the ballet Elektra, the ballet-pantomime Künstlerfest, the farce Aus bewegter Zeit, and over 30 effective songs.

Meyer, Jenny (Berlin, 1834-1894, do.). Prussian contralto, pupil of the Stern Conservatory (Berlin), in 1855-65 favorably known throughout Germany and in England, then teaching at the Stern Conservatory and becoming its owner and director in 1888.

Meyer, Karl Klemens (Ober-Planitz, 1868). Saxon violinist and violist, pupil of Hilf and Herm. Ritter, though at first self-taught, from about 1885 playing in various orchestras (often as concertmaster), finally joining the Bremen Philharmonic under Erdmannsdörfer (as violist) and since about 1900 soloist (viola) in the court-band at Schwerin, often playing also at Bayreuth and the Wagner performances at Munich. Has written a piano-trio (with viola), many viola-pieces and études and a method, men's choruses and songs, besides editing sets of old works for viola, violin or piano. Author of histories of the court-music at Schwerin (1913) and at Güstrow (not yet issued).

Meyer, Kathi G. (Berlin, 1892). Prussian historical student, trained at Berlin University, from 1919 lecturing at the Luckenwalder Hochschule in Berlin and since 1922 librarian of the Hirsch library in Frankfort. Author of able essays on the history of sacred music.

Meyer, Leopold von (n. Vienna, 1816-1883, Dresden). Showy Austrian pianist, pupil of Czerny and Fischhof, from 1835 almost constantly on tour throughout Europe, visiting America in 1845-47 and 1867-68. He confined himself mostly to salon-pieces of his own, but rendered with clever effectiveness.

Meyer, Waldemar Julius (Berlin, 1853). Excellent Prussian violinist, pupil of Joachim, playing in the court-orchestra at Berlin in 1873-81 and then active as soloist and leader of his own Quartet, with many tours. Has written several pieces for his instrument.

Meyer, Wilhelm (Speyer, 1845-1917, Göttingen). Professor of philology at Göttingen University, author of important studies in the history of verse and rhythmic, collected as Gesammelte Abhandlungen zur mittellatein. Rhythmik, 2 vols. 1905.

Meyer-Helmund, Erik (Petrograd, 1861). Gifted German-Russian singer and composer, pupil of his father, Kiel and Stockhausen, from 1881 becoming widely known through recitals in Germany and England, largely devoted to his own graceful songs (many to original texts). Has written the operas Margitta, 1889, Der Liebeskampf, 1892, and Traumbilder, 1912, the singspiel Taglioni, 1912, the operettas Trischka, 1894, Lucullus, 1905, and Die Heiratslustigen, the ballet Rübezahl, 1893, the 'tanzspiel' Münchener Bilderbogen, 1910, an orchestral serenade, a violin-fantasia, melodious piano-pieces, men's choruses and over 200 songs. G.

Meyer-Olbersleben, Max (n. Weimar, 1850). Able Saxon teacher and composer, pupil of Müller-Hartung, Liszt and the Munich Conservatory, from 1877 teaching at the Würzburg Music School, where in 1907-20 he was director, besides conducting the noted Liedertafel. From 1896 he was an officer in the Deutscher Sängerbund. Since 1885 he has held the title of royal professor. Has written the operas Clare Dettin, 1896, and Der Haubenkrieg, 1902 (comic), the overtures Feierklänge and Festouvertüre, the symphonic poem Sonnenhymnus, a piano-trio, a viola-sonata, a flute-sonata, 3 'cello-pieces, the choruses Das begrabene Lied, Der Blumen Rache, Zigeunermädchen, Eine alte Mär and others for mixed voices, the men's choruses Konradin, Gothentreue, Tanzreigen, Des deutschen Liedes Sendung, Wanda, Das Fest, Jubelhymne, Der Spielmann, Des Königs Einzug and about 40 other men's choruses, some 60 songs and about 35 highly original piano-pieces.

Meyer-Stolzenau, Wilhelm (Bückeburg, 1868). North German choral conductor, trained at the Weimar Conservatory, from 1893 leader of various societies in Hanover, in 1901-06 head of the Gumbinnen Liedertafel and then teaching again in Hanover. Has written the operas Der Nachtwächter, 1900, and Klein-Däumling, 1906, the operetta Grosspapa, 1906, the symphonic poem Hero und Leander, choruses, songs and piano-pieces.

Meyerbeer, Giacomo [Jakob Liebmans Beer] (Berlin, [Sept. 5] 1791-1864 [May 2], Paris). Distinguished Prussian (Jewish) pianist and composer, like Mendelssohn the son of a banker and with a cultured mother, besides inheriting wealth from a rich relative. He was musically precocious, having lessons from Lauska and even Clementi, first playing in public at seven and a confident artist at ten, then studying with Zelter, B. A. Weber and Vogler (1810-12), becoming expert in all branches of strict composition. In 1813 he brought out his first opera at Munich and also made his début as pianist at Vienna (though only after months of special self-discipline, due to the impression made on him by hearing Hummel). At Salieri's suggestion, in 1815 he went to Italy to mellow and enrich his dramatic style and there became fascinated with Rossini's methods, which he sought to imitate—with prompt and striking success (notably in Il Crociato in 1824). In 1823 he visited Germany and had a memorable interview with Weber, who strove to detach him from his Italian infatuation. A gap in his active production followed and in 1826 he removed to Paris. Here, after elaborate study of French masterpieces and with the aid of the accomplished librettist Scribe, he made a brilliant hit with Robert le Diable in 1831. This and Les Huguenots in 1836 gave him a sort of imperial position in the operatic world. In 1842 this was strengthened by an invitation to become royal opera-director at Berlin and by his happy fortune in securing Jenny Lind as frequent prima donna there and elsewhere (1844-49). In 1847 he visited Vienna and London, but still spent much time at Berlin, though Le Prophète, his next chief work, was produced in Paris in 1849. He next attempted two works after the style of the French opéra comique and was much engaged, also, upon L'Africaine, which did not come out till after his death.

His knowledge and ability are unquestionable, as well as his skill in voicing the artistic spirit and tendency of his time. And in his finest works he often attained heights of real grandeur and beauty. But his genius was lacking in spontaneity, in independence and especially in consistency with itself. He constantly needed external stimulus to set his powers in action, was incessantly changing his style to secure attention, displayed the hesitation of a novice in embodying his aspirations and seemed never really to know his own mind about what he apparently finished. He instinctively defined the type of the historical opera and in doing so experimented with several technical procedures that Wagner was beginning to apply in the field of myth with far greater assurance and splendor. His works include the following:

Operas—Jephthas Gelübde, 1811, Alimélek or Die beiden Kalifen, 1813, Romilda e Costanza, 1818, Semiramide Riconosciuta, 1819, Emma di Resburgo, 1819, Margherita d'Angiù, 1820, L'Esule di Granata, 1822, Das Brandenburger Thor, 1823, Il Crociato in Egitto, 1824, Robert le Diable, 1831, Les Huguenots, 1836, Das Feldlager in Schlesien, 1844, Le Prophète, 1849, L'Étoile du Nord, 1854, Dinorah or Le Pardon de Ploërmel, 1859, L'Africaine, 1865. Almanzor, begun in 1823, was not completed. Also the monodrama Theodelinde's Liebe, 1813, for soprano, with chorus, and the festspiel Das Hoffest von Ferrara. The singspiel Goethes Jugendzeit was left unfinished.

Incidental music for Michael Beer's [his brother] Struensee, 1846 (counted one of his finest works) and choruses for Æschylus' Eumenides.

Oratorio—Gott und die Natur, 1811.

Cantatas—Gutenberg (for unveiling of statue at Mayence, 1837), Maria und ihr Genius (for silver wedding of Prince Karl of Prussia), Festhymnus (for silver wedding of Friedrich Wilhelm IV, 1848), Das Genus der Musik am Grabe Beethovens, an ode to the sculptor Chr. Rauch, Bavarian Archers' March, 7 sacred cantatas by Klopstock.

Other choral works—Brautgeleite aus der Heimat, serenade (for wedding of Princess Luise), Psalm 91 (for Berlin Domchor), 12 other Psalms (a cappella), Pater Noster, Stabat Mater, Te Deum, Miserere, and some quartets.

About 50 songs and part-songs (several with instrumental obbligati).

For orchestra—Fackellänze for the King of Bavaria's wedding, 1846, for that of Princess Charlotte, 1850, and for that of Princess Anna, 1853; March for the Schiller Centenary, 1859, Overture (in march-form) for the London Exposition, 1862, Coronation March, 1863.

Much unpublished piano-music.

He bequeathed 10,000 thalers to establish a Meyerbeer Scholarship, open to German students from the Berlin Hochschule, the Stern or Cologne Conservatories, intended to provide a year and a half of study in Italy, Paris, Vienna, Munich and Dresden. Memoirs by Lasalle, 1864, Pougin, 1864, Blaze de Bury, 1865, Ella, 1868, Mendel, 1868, Schuch, 1869, Kohut, 1890, J. Weber, 1898, Curzon, 1910, Eymieu, 1910, Dauriac, 1913, Hervey, 1913, and Kapp, 1920. G.

Meyrowitz, Selmar (Bartenstein, 1875). Prussian conductor, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and the Berlin Meisterschule, from 1897 associated with Mottl at Karlsruhe and later at the Metropolitan, New York and on tour in America with Gadsdi, from 1905 at the German Opera in Prague, then at the Komische Oper in Berlin, from 1913 at the Hamburg Opera and from 1917 engaged in concert-work, especially with the Berlin Philharmonic, but in 1920-21 conducting the Blüthner Orchestra.

Mézeray, Louis Charles Lazare Costard de (Brunswick, 1810-1887, n. Paris). North German conductor, self-taught at first, then pupil of Talliez, Wachethal and Reicha, from 1825 in the opera-orchestra at Strasburg, from 1827 conductor of the opera at Liège and of symphony-concerts there, in 1830-33 conductor at the court-opera at The Hague, after 1834 conductor or baritone at several places in Belgium and France and from 1843 conductor at the Bordeaux Opera. He also founded the Société Ste.-Cécile, which he brought to much efficiency.

Miceli, Giorgio (Reggio, Calabria, 1836-1895, Naples). Italian composer, trained at the Naples Conservatory, from 1872 director of a women's college in Naples and in 1887-94 of the Palermo Conservatory. Wrote the operas Zoe, 1852, Gli Amanti Sessagenari, 1853, Il Conte di Rossiglione, 1854, La Fata, 1875, Il Convito di Baldassare, 1878, La Leggenda di Pisa, 1885, and La Figlia di Jette, 1886 (the last two on sacred subjects), the operetta La Somnabule, 1869, church-music and some chamber-works.

Michael, Rogier (?1550-1618). 16th C. G.

Michael, Tobias (1592-1657). 17th C. G.

Michaëli [Michal], Louise (Stockholm, 1830-1875, do.). Gifted Swedish operatic soprano, pupil of Garcia, from 1854 engaged at the Stockholm Opera, with tours elsewhere and a sojourn in 1859-63 at Her Majesty's in London, retiring for ill-health in 1873. She was perhaps the ablest Swedish singer since Jenny Lind.

Michaelis, Christian Friedrich (Leipzig, 1770-1834, do.). Lecturer at Leipzig University, author of Ueber d. Geist d. Tonkunst, 2 vols. 1795, 1800 (discussion of Kant's æsthetics), Entwurf d. Aesthetik, 1796, Catechismus über Logiers System, 1828, and many articles on musical æsthetics in periodicals, besides translations of Busby's History, Villoteau's essay on Egyptian music, etc.

Micheli, Romano (?1575-1655?). 17th C. G.

Michi [Mihij], Orazio (?1595-1641). 17th C.

Mickwitz, Paul Harald von (Helsingfors, 1859). Finnish pianist, pupil of the Petrogard Conservatory and Leschetizky, from 1886 teaching at the Karlsruhe Conservatory, in 1893-95 at the Wiesbaden Conservatory and then removing to America, where he has been active mostly in Texas, but with sojourns in Chicago in 1906-08 (Bush Conservatory) and 1912-16. Since 1916 he has been dean of fine arts at the Southern Methodist University in Dallas.

Middelschulte, Wilhelm (n. Dortmund, 1863). Eminent Westphalian organist, trained by Aug. Knabe and at the Institut für Kirchenmusik, Berlin, in 1888-91 at the Lukaskirche there and then going to Chicago, where in 1891-95 he played at the Cathedral of the Holy Name (also studied further with Ziehn) and in 1899-1919 at St. James (R. C.), besides teaching at the Wisconsin Conservatory in Milwaukee. In 1894-1918 he was organist of the Thomas (Chicago) Orchestra, often appearing in works of large magnitude, both old and new. He has also served extensively as recitalist in America and Europe. Has written an organ-concerto, a Passacaglia, a Toccata on Ein feste Burg, Canons and Fugue on Vater unser, a Canonical Fantasia on B-A-C-H, a Chaconne, a cadenza for Handel's 4th Concerto and masterly transcriptions or arrangements of works by Bach and others. A.

Mielck, Ernst (Viborg, 1877-1899, Locarno). Gifted, but short-lived, Finnish composer, pupil of Tietze, Bruch and the Stern Conservatory (Berlin), writing a symphony (1897-99), the overtures Macbeth and Dramatische, a Finnische Suite for orchestra, a Finnische Phantasie for piano and orchestra, a Konzertstück for violin and orchestra, a string-quintet, a string-quartet, the choral works Altböhmisches Weihnachtslied and Altgermanisches Julfest, piano-pieces and songs. Memoir by Mauke, and see Flodin, Finska Musiker, 1900.

Mielezewski, Ma:tin. 17th C.

Mielke, Antonia (Berlin, ?1852-1907, do.). Able Prussian operatic soprano, from about 1875 appearing at Dessau, Würzburg, Vienna, Rotterdam and Cologne, at first in coloratura rôles, but soon in those of heroic character. In 1890-91 she made a fine impression in Wagnerian works at the Metropolitan, New York and in 1891-92 toured in the United States in concert. Until 1902 she continued a favorite in Germany, and then taught in Berlin.

Miersch, Karl Alexander Johannes (Dresden, 1865-1916, Cincinnati). Able Saxon violinist, pupil of Rappoldi, Abel and Massart, in 1887 concertmaster at Gratz, in 1888-90 teacher at Aberdeen (Scotland), in 1892-93 player in the Boston Symphony Orchestra, from 1894 director of the Athens Conservatory, from 1898 touring in Europe and from 1902 again in America, where from 1910 he taught at the Cincinnati College of Music. Wrote a concert-polonaise for violin and orchestra. A.

Miersch, Paul Friedrich Theodor (Dresden, 1868), brother of the above. Able Saxon 'cellist, pupil of the Munich Conservatory, since 1892 in New York, where from 1893 he played with the Symphony Society and since 1898 at the Metropolitan. Has written concertos for violin and for 'cello, an Indian Rhapsody for orchestra, a string-quartet (1922), pieces for strings, for 'cello and for piano, and songs. A.

Mignard, Alexander Konstantinovich [name originally Sheltobruhov] (Warsaw, 1852). Polish official and composer, pupil of Freyer and the Paris Conservatory, from 1876 in the civil service at Warsaw and since 1893 living at Moscow. Has written the operas Kolma, Vorosheya and The Widow, 2 symphonies, 2 overtures (one In the Carpathians), music for both Catholic and Russian services, many piano-pieces and songs.

Migot, Georges (Paris, 1891). Talented French composer, pupil of Bouval, Ganaye and Widor, in 1918-20 taking a series of four special prizes, writing the symphonic 'frescoes' Agrestides, the 'symphonie choréographique et lyrique' Hagoromo, 1922, a piano-quintet (1920), the string-quartet Mouvements d'Eau, a quartet for piano, violins and clarinet, a piano-trio (1919), 3 Épigrammes for piano, an Esquisse for violin, Christmas part-songs a cappella and various songs. Author of essays on æsthetics.

Mihalovich, Edmund von (Fericisance, 1842). Eminent Slavonian composer, trained by Mosonyi, Hauptmann and Von Bülow, with further study in Italy, from about 1870 head of the Dramatic Academy at Pest and from 1887 Liszt's successor as director of the Musical Academy there, retiring in 1919. Has written the operas Hagbart und Signe, 1882, Wieland der Schmiede and Toldi, 1898, 4 symphonies, several overtures, the orchestral ballades Das Geisterschiff, Hero und Leander, La Ronde du Sabbat and Die Nize, the orchestral Trauerklänge, a Frühlingsphantasie for tenor and orchestra, etc.

Mikorey, Franz (Munich, 1873). Able Bavarian conductor and composer, pupil of H. Schwartz, Thuille, Levi and Herzogenberg, in 1894 assistant at Bayreuth and Munich, then in succession third director at the Prague Opera and first at Ratisbon, Elberfeld and Vienna, from 1902 court-director at Dessau, making a fine reputation and gaining the title of royal professor in 1917, and since 1919 director of the Helsingfors Opera. Has written the operas Der König von Samarkand, 1910, Phryne and Das Echo von Wilhelmsthal, the symphonies Tragische and An der Adria, a piano-concerto, a piano-quintet, a piano-trio, the choral work Nordische Sommernacht, Frühlingsgesänge for tenor and orchestra, men's choruses and songs. In 1913 he extended Mahler's sketches for his 10th Symphony as Symphonie Engadina. Sketch by Hamann in Monographien moderner Musiker, 1907.

Miksch, Johann Aloys (Georgenthal, 1765–1845, Dresden). Bohemian singer and teacher, beginning as choir-boy at Dresden and becoming a member of the court-choir in 1786 and of the Italian Opera in 1797, besides in 1820–31 being chorusmaster at the German Opera. He was noted as a teacher after Caselli's method (Mme. Schröder-Devrient, Agnes Schebest and Mitterwurzer among his pupils). In early life he made a vain attempt to change his voice from baritone to tenor.

Mikuli, Karl (Czernowitz, 1821–1897, Lemberg). Talented Austrian pianist, pupil of Chopin and Reicha, from 1848 on tour in Russia, Galicia and Rumania, from 1858 director of the Lemberg Conservatory and from 1888 head of his own school there. He prepared an edition of Chopin embodying notes made by the latter. Wrote many piano-pieces, chiefly Polish dances, a clarinet-serenade, a Veni Creator and other sacred vocal works.

Mikusich, Margarethe von (Baydorf, 1884). Austrian composer, pupil of Stocker, Loewengard, Klatte, Klose, Reger and Kwast. Has written a suite for strings, a string-quartet, a string-trio, a piano-trio, 2 partitas for violin solo, preludes and fugues for piano and songs. She was married in 1904 and lives in Munich.

Milan, Luis. 16th C.

Milanollo, Maria (Savigliano, 1832–1848, Paris), and Teresa (1827–1904, Paris), sisters. Highly gifted Italian violinists, precociously developed at Turin, Marseilles and Paris (from 1837), where they studied with Lafont and Habeneck, with early tours throughout France, Belgium and Holland, in 1843–45 also in Germany and at Vienna, always with remarkable success. In 1857 Teresa married the French military engineer Parmentier and gave up her public career. She established Concerts des Pauvres at Marseilles. Wrote some violin-pieces and an Ave Maria. G.

Milde, Hans Feodor von (n. Vienna, 1821–1899, Weimar). Austrian operatic baritone, from about 1845 engaged at the Weimar Opera, singing at the première of Lohengrin (1850), as did also his wife, née Rosa Agthe (1827–1906). Their son Franz (b. 1855) is a good baritone, from 1876 at Weimar, from 1878 at Hanover and since 1906 professor at the Munich Conservatory.

Mildenberg, Albert (New York, 1878–1918, do.). American composer, pupil of Joseffy, Klein, C. C. Müller, Sgambati, Massenet and Jemain, while studying at Paris conductor of the Société Symphonique and from 1913 teacher at Meredith College (Raleigh, N. C.). He wrote the short operas Wood-Witch, 1909, Rafaello, 1910, and Love's Locksmith, 1912, the cantata The Garden of Allah, 1911, piano-pieces and songs, besides the opera Michael Angelo, submitted in 1911 for a prize-competition in New York, but lost in transit.

Mildenburg, Anna von (Vienna, 1872). Eminent Austrian operatic soprano, trained at the Vienna Conservatory, from 1895 noted for appearances at Hamburg and Bayreuth (from 1897) and since 1898 a leading artist at the Vienna Opera, with guest-appearances elsewhere. In 1909 she married the poet Hermann Bahr and with him wrote Bayreuth u. d. Wagner-Theater, 1910 (2d ed. 1912). He is also author of Parsifalschutz ohne Ausnahmegesetz, 1912.

Milder-Hauptmann, Pauline Anna (Constantinople, 1785–1838, Berlin). Noted Austrian operatic soprano, pupil of Tomaselli and Sallieri, from 1803 engaged at the Vienna Opera (marrying the jeweler Hauptmann in 1810), from 1816 at the Berlin Opera and from 1829 touring in Denmark, Sweden and Russia. She sang at the première of Fidelio (1805). Her voice was enormously powerful and rich in quality, but she had little real musical or dramatic ability. G.

Mildner, Moritz (Turnitz, 1812–1865, Prague). Bohemian violinist, pupil of Pixis, from about 1830 concertmaster at the Prague Opera and from 1842 teacher at the Conservatory. He is noted as the teacher of Laub, Hřimalý and Zajíc.

Milhaud, Darius (Aix, Provence, 1892). French modernist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory and of Widor, writing the stage-work La Brebis Égarée, music for Orestes, the ballet L'Homme et son Désir, the cantata Le Retour de l'Enfant Prodigue, a farce, 2 symphonic suites, 3 symphonies for small orchestra, a serenade, Suites de Danses du Bresil, 5 string-quartets, sonatas for piano with violins and with wind-instruments, 2 violin-sonatas, a piano-sonata, a Psalm for baritone and orchestra and many songs. He is one 'the Six' (see Honegger).

Mililotti, Giuseppe (Ravenna, 1833-1883, Rome) and Leopoldo (b. 1835), brothers. Together wrote the operettas La Vendetta d'un Folleto and Un Sogno nella Luna, both 1875. The latter also wrote graceful songs.

Millard, Harrison (Boston, 1830-1895, do.). American tenor and song-composer, trained in Italy, in 1854 touring in England with Catherine Hayes and from 1856 teaching in New York. Wrote the opera Deborah (not given), a mass, services and other church-music, over 350 songs and many adaptations of foreign songs. A.

Miller, Dayton Clarence (Strongsville, O. 1866). Since 1890 professor of physics at the Case School of Applied Science (Cleveland), author of Boehm on the Flute and Flute-Playing, 1908, '22, The Science of Musical Sounds, 1916, and many articles on acoustics. A.

Miller, Edward (Norwich, 1731-1807, Doncaster). English organist, pupil of Burney, at Doncaster parish-church from 1756. Mus.D. of Cambridge Univ. in 1786. Wrote harpsichord-sonatas, flute-pieces, church-music and songs, besides manuals in harpsichord-playing (1771) and harmony (1787) and a Hist. of Doncaster, 1804. G.

Miller, Frank E. (Hartford, Conn. 1859). American physician in New York, specializing in laryngology, author of The Voice, 1910, Vocal Art-Science, 1917, and many articles on vocal anatomy and hygiene. He has emphasized a theory of 'kinaesthesia' (rhythmic vibration and its perception and coördination.) A.

Miller & Sons Piano Company, The Henry F. Noted piano-making business in Boston, founded in 1863 by Henry F. Miller (1825-1884) and continued by his five sons. A.

Miller, Horace Alden (Rockford, Ill. 1872). American composer, trained at the Oberlin Conservatory, since 1904 teaching at Cornell College (Iowa). Has written many pieces utilizing Indian themes or topics, including the orchestral From the Wicketup and The Indian Flute, various piano-pieces and songs. A.

Miller, Russell King (Philadelphia, 1871). American organist, pupil of Von Sternberg, S. P. Warren and B. O. Klein, since 1901 at Temple Keneseth Israel in Philadelphia and from 1909 instructor at the School for the Blind, besides much recital-work. Has written for the organ a Scherzo Symphonique (1895), a Festival March (1903, A. G. O. prize), a Concert-Overture (1909), a Festival Postlude, Impromptu and Cortège (1904), etc., besides anthems, songs and piano-pieces. A.

Milleville, Francesco (?1565-?). 17th C.

Milligan, Harold Vincent (Astoria, Ore. 1888). American organist, pupil of Carl, C. R. Gale, Johnstone and Noble, since about 1910 in leading New York churches (latterly the Fifth Avenue Baptist and West End Synagogue) and prominent in the Am. Guild of Organists. He has made many recital-tours. Author of a life of S. C. Foster (1920), many magazine-articles and collections of works of the Colonial period (18th C.). A.

Milligen, Simon van (Rotterdam, 1849). Dutch composer and critic, pupil of F. W. G. Nikolai and Bargiel, from about 1870 teaching in Middelburg, then organist at Groningen, for 15 years town-director at Gouda and, after a sojourn in Paris, critic for the Amsterdam Handelsblad. Has written the operas Brinio and Darthula, 1898, the choral work Snowa, an overture, a string-quartet, cantatas, etc.

Millöcker, Karl (Vienna, 1842-1899, n. do.). Talented Austrian conductor and operetta-composer, trained at the Vienna Conservatory, from 1864 theater-director at Gratz and from 1866 in Vienna, at first at the Harmonie, but after 1869 at the Theater an der Wien. Wrote about 25 sparkling operettas (from 1865), including especially Der Bettelstudent, 1881 (in Italian as Il Guitarrero), besides many farces and clever piano-pieces.

Mills, Charles Henry (Nottingham, 1873). English organist and teacher, trained at the Guildhall School (London), in 1892-93 touring in America as pianist, from 1894 organist in England at various places, including Aberdeen (city-organist) from 1900 and at Salford in 1906-07. Coming then to America, he first taught at Syracuse University, from 1908 was head of the music-department of the University of Illinois (Urbana) and since 1914 has held a similar place at the University of Wisconsin (Madison). Mus.D. of McGill University in 1911. Has written an overture, music for a Shakespearian masque and for Aristophanes' Clouds, the cantatas Ode to St. Cecilia and The Wreck of the Hesperus, etc. A.

Mills, Robert Watkin (Painswick, 1856). Gifted English bass-baritone, pupil of Edwin Holland, Blasco, Barnby, Randegger and Blume, from 1884 in much request for oratorio and festivals, after 1894 also in Canada and the United States. G.

Mills, Sebastian Bach (Cirencester, 1838-1898, Wiesbaden). Able English pianist, pupil of his father, Potter, Bennett and the Leipzig Conservatory, later of Liszt, in 1855 becoming organist at Sheffield Cathedral (R. C.), but appearing elsewhere as pianist (Gewandhaus, 1858). From 1859 he was active and influential in America, where he introduced a long list of fine works not previously heard and became also a favorite teacher. In 1859, '67 and '78 he visited Germany with great success. Wrote much brilliant and graceful salon-music. G, A.

Milton, John (?1563-1647). 17th C. G.

Mincus, Ludwig (Vienna, 1827-?). Austrian violinist, in 1853-55 conductor for Prince Yussupov at Petrograd, from 1861 violinist and inspector at the Moscow Opera and teacher at the Conservatory, from 1872 for a time connected with the Petrograd Opera and then returning to Vienna. Wrote 16 ballets, including (for Paris) La Source, 1866 (with Delibes) and Nemea.

Mingotti, Angelo and Pietro (d. 1759), brothers. Managers of troupes of opera-singers that in 1732-56 appeared at various places in Austria and Germany (chiefly at Hamburg, 1744-54). They often engaged able singers (like Cuzzoni, Regina Valentini, Rosalie Holzbauer, etc.) and composers of eminence (like Gluck). See monographs by E. H. Müller, 1915, '17.

Mingotti, Regina, née Valentini (Naples, 1721-1808, Neuburg-on-Danube). Talented German-Italian operatic soprano, pupil of Porpora, when but about fifteen married to Pietro Mingotti (see above) and soon pushed by him in rivalry with Faustina Hasse at Dresden. In 1752-54 she was at Madrid under Farinelli, then at London and in Italy and in 1763-87 lived at Munich. G.

Minhejmer, Adam (1831-1904, Warsaw). From 1858 identified with Warsaw, first as ballet-master at the Grand Theater, from 1861 as teacher at the Conservatory and finally as theater-librarian. Wrote the operas Otto the Hunter, 1864, Stratiota, 1876, Mazeppa, 1890, and The Avenger, a ballet (with Moniuszko), music for plays, 4 overtures, church-music, a reorchestration of Chopin's concerto in E min. and other arrangements.

Minoja, Ambrogio (n. Lodi, 1752-1825, Milan). Italian conductor and singing-teacher, in 1789-1809 Lampugnani's successor as cembalist at La Scala in Milan and in 1814-24 teacher at the Conservatory. Wrote an opera (1787), a symphony, cantatas, some church-music, excellent solfeggi and a Lettere sopra il Canto, 1812.

Mioduszewski, Michael Martin (1787-?). From 1820 professor at Cracow University, editor of collections of Polish Catholic music (1838, supplements in '42, '53-54) and of Polish Christmas songs (1843, additions in 1853).

Mirande, Hippolyte (Lyons, 1862). French teacher and composer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1886 teaching at the Geneva Conservatory and Academy and since 1890 at the Lyons Conservatory, as well as secretary at the Opéra, critic for the Progrès and organist at the Synagogue. Has written the effective ballet Une Fête Directoire, 1895, the overtures Rodogune, Frithjof, Macbeth, Prométhée and La Mort de Roland, etc.

Mirecki, Franz (Cracow, 1791-1862, do.). Galician composer, pupil of Hummel and Cherubini, living from 1822 at Milan, from 1826 at Geneva and from 1838 at Cracow as head of a school for opera-singers. Wrote the operas The Gipsies, 1822, Evandro in Pergamo, 1824, I Due Forzati, 1826, Cornelio Bentivoglio, 1844, and A Night in the Apennines, 1845, 3 ballets, a mass, an edition of Marcello's Psalms with accompaniment, a string-quartet, a trio, 2 violin-sonatas, 6 piano-sonatas and many other pieces, besides a manual of instrumentation (1825).

Miry, Karel (Ghent, 1823-1889, do.). Belgian composer, pupil of Mengal and Gevaert, from about 1845 theater-conductor at Ghent and from 1857 teacher at the Conservatory. Wrote about 20 operas, operettas and ballets for Ghent, Antwerp and Brussels.

Miskow, Sextus (Nyborg, 1857). Danish composer, pupil of the Copenhagen Conservatory, since about 1880 active at Copenhagen as vocal teacher and critic for the Berlinske Tidende. Has written music for the drama Karl af Riise and the fairy-tale Snehvide (with Chr. Danning), a Nocturne for strings, horns and bassoons, an Andante Religioso for strings and harp, a violin-suite, Fantasiestücke for clarinet, part-songs and many songs (some with orchestra).

Missa, Edmond Jean Louis (Rheims, 1861-1910, Paris). French composer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory (2d Prix de Rome, 1881), winner later of the Prix Cressent (chamber-music), organist at St.-Thomas d'Aquin. Wrote the operas (mostly short or light) Juge et Partie, 1886, Lydia, 1887, Le Chevalier Timide, 1887, La Belle Sophie, 1888, La Princesse Nangara, 1892, Mariage Galant, 1892, Dinah, 1894, Ninon de Lenelos, 1895, Les Deux Peuples, 1896, Babette, 1900, and Muguette, 1903, various pantomimes, revues, etc., orchestral and chamber-music, piano-pieces and songs.

Mitterer, Ignaz Martin (St. Justina, 1850). Eminent Tyrolese priest and church-musician, pupil of local teachers and the Ratisbon Music School, from 1882 choirmaster at Ratisbon Cathedral and from 1885 director at Brixen Cathedral. He is counted one of the best modern exponents of the Palestrina style. Has written about 20 masses, 4 Requiems, a Stabat Mater, and over 100 other church-works, besides Die wichtigsten kirchlichen Vorschriften für Kirchenmusik, 1905 (4th ed.), and two manuals of practical choir-music (from 1896).

Mitterwurzer, Anton (Sterzing, 1818-1876, n. Vienna). Able Tyrolese operatic baritone, nephew and pupil of Gänsbacher, choirboy at St. Stephen's in Vienna, from about 1835 appearing at Innsbruck and other Austrian towns and in 1839-70 steadily employed at the Dresden Opera. He excelled in works by Marschner and Wagner.

Mittler, Franz (Vienna, 1893). Austrian composer of a string-quartet, a piano-trio, a cello-sonata, etc. He studied under Jul. Fischer, Labor, Heuberger and Procházka.

Mizler [von Kolof], Lorenz Christoph (Heidenheim, 1711-1778, Warsaw). Württemberger lawyer, educated at Leipzig University and from 1734 a magistrate there. In music he was a pupil of Bach, from 1737 lectured at the University, in 1736-54 conducted the Neu eröffnete musikal. Bibliothek, almost the first of musical periodicals, and in 1738 founded a Society of Musical Science, into which came men as important as Bach, Handel and Graun. After 1743 he lived in Poland. Med.D. of Erfurt Univ. in 1747. From 1739 he published several curious works on composition and a translation of Fux's Gradus (1842). G.

Mjasskovsky, Nicolai Jacovlevitch (n. Warsaw, 1881). Russian-Polish composer, pupil of the Petrograd Conservatory (1906-11), writing 5 symphonies, a sinfonietta for small orchestra, the symphonic poems Silence and Alastor, 3 string-quartets, a 'cello-sonata, 3 piano-sonatas and about 50 songs.

Mlynarski, Emil (Kibarty, 1870). Eminent Polish conductor and composer, trained at the Petrograd Conservatory, from 1889 touring as violinist in Russia, Germany and England, in 1893-94 assistant conductor at the Warsaw Opera and at the symphony-concerts, from 1894 professor at the Odessa Music School, from 1897 again at Warsaw, until 1903 chief conductor at the Opera, in 1901-05 also of the Philharmonic and in 1904-09 director of the Conservatory, then visiting many cities as guest-conductor. From 1910 he was conductor of the Scottish Orchestra at Glasgow and Edinburgh, often appearing with it in London or with London orchestras (Slavonic Festivals in 1912-13, a British Festival in 1915), but in 1918 returned to Warsaw as director of the opera and the Conservatory. Has written the symphony Polonia, 2 violin-concertos (Paderewski prize for the 1st, 1898), violin- and piano-pieces, besides the comic opera A Summer Night.

Möckel, Paul Otto (Strasburg, 1890). Alsatian pianist, trained at the Strasburg and Cologne Conservatories, taking the Ibach prize in 1908 and then touring as virtuoso (with special emphasis on recent composers, such as Debussy and Cyril Scott), from 1912 Robert Freund's successor as head of the Zurich Conservatory and from 1922 at Stuttgart. He married the violinist Catharina van Bosch.

Mocquereau, André (n. Cholet, 1849). Distinguished specialist on Gregorian music, from 1875 a Benedictine at Solesmes and, after study under Pothier, teacher there of choral singing, in 1903 removing with the Order to Quarr Abbey in the Isle of Wight (n. Ryde) and becoming prior. He has been foremost in bringing to impressive culmination the researches of Guéranger, Jausions and Pothier. His great work is the Paléographie Musicale, issued in sections at intervals since 1889, giving photographic facsimiles of manuscripts of prime historical importance, with transcription of the neumes into quadrate notes and often special essays on the general problem of neume-interpretation. The anthologies thus far published are as follows:

1, 10th cent. from St. Gall; 2-3, (gradual) summary of over 200 MSS. 9-17th cents.; 4, 9-10th cents. from Einsiedeln; 5-6, 12th cent. from Brit. Museum; 7-8, 11th cent. from Montpellier; 9, 12-13th cents. from Lucca, with collation from Toledo; 10, 9-10th cents.

from Laon; 11, 10th Cent. from Chartres. The essays included are Origine et classement des différentes écritures neumatiques (in 1); Les neumes-accents, De l'influence de l'accent tonique latin et du cursus sur la structure mélodique et rythmique de la phrase grégorienne (in 2-4); Du rôle et de la place de l'accent tonique latin dans le rythme grégorien (in 7-8); Les signes rythmiques Sangalliens et Solesmiens, L'introduction de la messe In Medio et la mélodie authentique du Credo selon l'editio Vaticana (in 10). The views advanced regarding accent and rhythm have aroused much discussion. Additional publications include L'art grégorien, son but, ses procédés, ses caractères; Petit traité de psalmodie; La psalmodie romaine et l'accent tonique latin, 1895; Méthode de chant grégorien, 1899; Rythmique grégorienne, 1st vol. 1908; De la transposition sur lignes des notations neumatique et alphabétique, 1909 (in the Riemann Festschrift, with G. Beyssac).

The investigations of the Solesmes circle have become the basis for the Editio Vaticana of the Catholic service-books begun in 1904.

Modernus, Jacobus. 16th C.

Moderwell, Hiram Kelly (Fort Wayne, Ind. 1888). American critic, educated at Harvard University, since 1913 writing for magazines in New York and for the Boston Transcript (from 1915). Author of The Theatre of To-Day, 1914, and contributions to The Art of Music, 1914-17. A.

Mohaupt, Franz (n. Friedland, 1854-1916, Leipa). Bohemian composer, trained as school-teacher at Leitmeritz, becoming director of the Prague Orphan Asylum and from 1896 school-director at Leipa. Wrote the popular operas Der Graf von Gleichen, 1901, and Schwedennot (not given), an orchestral suite, a piano-quintet, several choral works, a mass, etc.

Möhler, Anton (b. 1866). Graduate of Tübingen University (Ph.D. 1898), now pastor at Steinhausen, Württemberg, author of a thesis on the relation of ancient to Gregorian music (1898), a history of ancient and medieval music (1900, 2d. ed. 2 vols. 1907), a Kompendium (1909, 2d ed. 1911) and an Aesthetik (1910, 2d ed. 1913) of Catholic church-music.

Mohr, Adolf (Munich, 1841). Bavarian conductor and composer, pupil of Von Bülow, Weitzmann and Wüerst, from about 1865 opera-conductor at Riga, Düsseldorf, Hamburg, etc. Has written the operas Die Loreley, Der Vetter aus Bremen and Der deutsche Michel (original text).

Mohr, Hermann (n. Hamburg, 1830-1896, Philadelphia). North German teacher, trained at the Eisleben Seminary, from 1850 in Berlin, where he founded the Luisenstadt Conservatory and led men's choruses, removing in 1886 to teach at the Philadelphia Musical Academy. Wrote the cantata Bergmannsgruss, choruses for men's voices, etc. A.

Möhring, Ferdinand (Alt-Ruppin, 1816-1887, Wiesbaden). Prussian organist and choral composer, pupil of the Berlin Academy, from 1840 organist and director of the Gesangverein at Saarbrücken, from 1845 organist and teacher at Neu-Ruppin. Wrote many effective men's choruses and part-songs, besides much other music, including 2 operas. Memoir by Möbius, 1893.

Moir, Frank Lewis (Market Harborough, 1852-1904, Deal). English vocal composer, writing over 200 songs, choruses and part-songs (Madrigal Soc. prize in 1881), church-music, the comic opera The Royal Watchman, etc.

Mojsisovics, Roderich von (Graz, 1877). Eminent Styrian conductor and composer, pupil of Degner and the Cologne and Munich Conservatories, from 1903 leader of a men's chorus at Brünn, from 1908 director of the Pettau Music School, in 1910-11 critic for the Leipzig Volkszeitung, and since 1912 head of the Styrian Musical Union at Graz. Has written the operas Tantchen Rosmarin, 1913, and Die roten Dominos (not yet given), the melodramas Ninon, 1907, and Wahnsinn, melodramatic harp-music for Sophocles' Œdipus Rex, the symphonies In den Alpen and Barock-Idylle, the symphonic poem Stella, a violin-concerto, a string-quartet, a string-trio Serenade, a violin-sonata, an organ-sonata, a Romantische Phantasie for organ and several other organ-pieces (including Festmusik with wind-instruments), an elaborate choral setting of the Chorus Mysticus (from Faust), a choral Weihnachtskantilene, many choruses and some piano-pieces. Author of lives of Degner (1909) and Reger (1911), analyses of Kienzl's Don Quixote, Pfitzner's Rose vom Liebesgarten and Liszt's Bergsymphonie and Heldenklage, program-books and essays in periodicals.

Mokranjac, Stevan (Negotin, 1855-1914, Uskup). The first Serbian composer of note, trained at Leipzig, from 1887 head of a choral society in Belgrade, with which he made tours, and from 1899 founder and director of a music-school there. He published a Serbian liturgy (1901) and 12 choral fantasias on national airs.

Molinari, Bernardino (Rome, 1880). Italian conductor, pupil of the Liceo S. Cecilia, Rome, since 1912 permanent conductor at the Augusteo and often called elsewhere for concert or opera. Has edited Monteverdi's Sonata sopra S. Maria (1919) and Carissimi's Giona.

Molinaro, Simone. 17th C. G.

Molique, Wilhelm Bernhard (Nuremberg, 1802-1869, Cannstatt). Eminent Bavarian violinist and composer, pupil of his father, Spohr and (as protégé of Maximilian I) Rovelli, from 1818 in the Vienna court-orchestra, from 1820 Rovelli's successor as concertmaster of the Munich court-orchestra, in 1826-49 in similar work at Stuttgart under Lindpaintner, then in London till 1866, when he retired to Cannstatt. At intervals from 1822 he made extended tours as virtuoso. He was also famous in ensemble and as able teacher. Wrote a symphony, 6 notable violin-concertos, a 'cello-concerto, a violin-concertino, 8 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, a flute-quartet, 2 piano-trios, violin-duets, concertinos for violin and flute, many violin-solos, 2 masses and the oratorio Abraham (1860). Valuable data on his life are in the hands of Walther Schulz of Stuttgart (catalogue with Breitkopf & Härtel). G.

Molitor, Gregor Ferdinand (Sigmaringen, 1867). Prior of the Benedictine abbey at Beuron (in the Donaulthal), writing masses, an oratorio (1922) and other vocal music, erecting the abbey organ and publishing a handbook of the harmonization of Gregorian melodies (1913).

Molitor, Raphael Fidelis (Sigmaringen, 1873), brother of the above. Benedictine monk, educated at the abbey at Beuron and in 1898-1904 organist there (also lecturer on canon law), then prior and later abbot of the abbey of St. Joseph near Coesfeld (Westphalia). Since 1904 he has been on the Papal commission for the Editio Vaticana and is recognized as a foremost authority on Gregorian music. Author of Reformchoral, 1901, Die nachtridentin. Choralreform, 2 vols. 1901-02, Choralwiegendrucke, 1904 (extending points made in Riemann's Notenschrift), Der gregorian. Choral als Liturgie u. Kunst, 1904, and essays in periodicals.

Mollenhauer, Eduard (Erfurt, 1827-1914, Owatonna, Minn.). Able Thuringian violinist, pupil of Ernst and Spohr, from about 1845 touring in Germany, then in Jullien's orchestra in London, with which he and his brother Friedrich (1818-1885) came to America in 1853, settling in New York and exercising a fruitful influence as players and teachers. Eduard wrote the opera The Corsican Bride, 1861, the comedies Breakers, 1881, and The Masked Ball, 3 symphonies, a violin-concerto and one for two violins, string-quartets, etc. A.

Mollenhauer, Emil (Brooklyn, 1855), son of Friedrich above. Eminent American violinist and conductor, pupil of his father, first appearing when but nine, from 1872 in the Thomas Orchestra and later in the Philharmonic and Symphony Societies, in 1885-88 in the Boston Symphony Orchestra, then conductor for the Germania or Boston Festival Orchestra, as well as directing municipal concerts in Boston, and since 1899 Lang's successor as conductor of the Handel and Haydn Society in Boston, from 1900 also of the Apollo Club and various other choral organizations. In 1904 and '15 he led the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the St. Louis and San Francisco Expositions. His broad musicianship has given him notable influence. A.

Moller, Joachim. See Burgk.

Molnár, Géza (Pest, 1872). Hungarian historical student, from 1900 teaching at the Pest Akademie and since 1905 connected with the University (since 1918 as professor). Author of various manuals and articles on Hungarian national music, on music-history in general and on musical science.

Molter, Johann Melchior (?-1765, Durlach). In 1722-33 and again from 1743 court-director at Durlach (for the margrave of Baden), in 1733-43 being church-director at Eisenach. He was a prodigiously fertile composer, credited with about 170 symphonies, 14 overtures, many quartet- and trio-concerti, etc. See notes by Schiedemair, 1913 (in I.M.G. Sammelbde.).

Momigny, Jérôme Joseph de (Philippeville, 1762-1838, Paris). Belgian organist, composer and theorist, from 1774 organist at St. Omer and Ste. Colombe, from 1785 at Lyons and from 1800 music-dealer in Paris, but with a sojourn at Tours. Author of a Cours Complet d'Harmonie et de Composition d'après une Théorie Neuve, 3 vols. 1806, reinforced by several later treatises (1808, '23, '34) and by many articles in the musical division of the Encyclopédie Méthodique, vol. ii, 1818. He extended the theory of overtones in the formation of scales and laid a notable foundation for the modern theory of phrasing. Wrote also chamber-music, sonatas for violin and for piano, an opera, cantatas, etc.

Monasterio, Jesús de (Potes, 1836-1903, Santander). Eminent Spanish violinist, appearing first when but nine, then pupil of the Brussels Conservatory, from 1852 teacher and soloist at Madrid and from 1861 widely known through tours in Spain, France, the Low Countries and Germany. With Guelbenzu he founded the Madrid Conservatory Quartet. He was invited to settle at Weimar as court-director and also was suggested as De Bériot's successor at Brussels, but chose to remain at Madrid as professor at the Conservatory, soloist in the court-orchestra and later conductor for the Société des Concerts. In 1894 he followed Arrieta as director of the Conservatory. Wrote effective violin-pieces, including Adieu à l'Alhambra, Scherzo Fantastique, Marche Funèbre et Triomphale, Chanson Mauresque (with orchestra), Études Artistiques, several choruses, some a cappella motets and songs. Memoir in I. M. G. Zeitschrift, 1904. G.

Mondonville, Jean Joseph Cassanea de (Narbonne, 1711-1772, n. Paris) [name de Mondonville adopted from his wife]. French violinist, from about 1730 active at Lille and from 1737 in the orchestra of the Concerts Spirituels at Paris, becoming conductor in 1755-62. From 1744 he was also choirmaster at the Royal Chapel at Versailles. Wrote several operas (from 1742), 3 oratorios, effective motets, trios, violin-sonatas (some with much use of 'flageolet-tones'), etc. Memoir by Galibert, 1856, and see Hellouin, Feuillet's d'Histoire, 1903. G.

Monestel, Alexander (San José, 1865). Costa Rican organist, trained at the Brussels Conservatory, from 1884 at the San José Cathedral, from 1902 in Brussels, chiefly at Notre Dame de Bien Secours and since 1917 in Brooklyn (St. John Baptist). Has written 14 masses and a Seven Words. A.

Monferrato, Natale. 17th C.

Moniuszko, Stanislaw (Govt. of Minsk, 1819-1872, Warsaw). Polish-Lithuanian organist, conductor and composer, pupil of Freyer and Rungenhagen, from about 1840 organist at St. John's in Vilna and from 1858 director of the Warsaw Opera and later professor at the Conservatory. Wrote about 20 operas, including Das Nachtlager in den Apenninen, 1840, Lotterie, 1846, Halka (1847, in concert), 1854

(the first Polish opera), Flis, 1858, The Countess, 1860, The Haunted Castle, 1865, The Paria, 1869, etc., incidental music for about 10 dramas (including Hamlet, Merry Wives of Windsor, etc.), the choral works Sonnets from the Crimea and Spectres, 7 masses, 2 Requiems, 4 'Ostrobramer' litanies, hymns, the overture Bajka, piano-pieces and nearly 400 songs, besides a text-book in harmony. Memoirs by Walicki, 1873, Wilczynski, 1900, and Jachimecki, 1921. In 1892 the Warsaw Musical Society established a Moniuszko section, designed to publish his complete works, to found a museum under his name, to gather biographical material and to offer scholarships and prizes. G.

Monk, Edwin George (Frome, 1819-1900, Radley). English organist, pupil mainly of Macfarren, from about 1840 in English parish churches, in 1844-46 at St. Columba College in Ireland, from 1848 at Radley (at the same time pursuing study at Oxford, becoming Mus.D. in 1856) and in 1859-83 at York Minster, succeeding Camidge. Wrote a service, anthems, several collections of canticles, hymns and chants, and choral settings of Milton's Ode on the Nativity and Gray's The Bard, besides compiling texts for three oratorios by Macfarren. G.

Monk, William Henry (London, 1823-1889, do.). English organist and vocal teacher, pupil of Thos. Adams, J. A. Hamilton and G. A. Griesbach, from about 1843 at various non-conformist churches in London, from 1847 choirmaster and from 1849 organist at King's College, where in 1874 he succeeded Hullah as professor. From 1852 he was also organist at St. Matthias (Stoke Newington), from 1851 teacher at the Blind School, from 1876 at the Nat. Training School and from 1878 at Bedford College, besides lecturing at the London Institution (1850-79) and in Edinburgh and Manchester. Mus.D. of Durham Univ. in 1882. Wrote some 10 anthems and many effective hymn-tunes and was musical editor of the famous Hymns Ancient and Modern (from 1861), of a Psalter and a Hymnal for Scotland, of The Parish Choir and other popular collections. G.

Monleone, Domenico (Genoa, 1875). Italian composer of the operas Cavalleria Rusticana, 1907 (revised as La Giostra dei Falcatori, 1914), Alba Eroica, 1910, Arabesca, 1913 (City of Rome prize), Suona la Ritirata, 1916, and Il Mistero, 1921.

Monn, Georg Matthias (1717-1750, Vienna). Austrian organist and composer, at his death at the Karlskirche in Vienna. He is said to have taught the young Albrechtsberger. Wrote masses, motets and works for ensemble (symphonies, trio-sonatas, quartet-fugues, etc.), the latter, dating from about 1740, being held by some to precede Stamitz in the adoption of the new instrumental style. See Denkmäler d. Tonkunst, xv, and, per contra, Denkm. d. Tonkunst in Oesterreich, xix, also Riemann, Stamitz oder Monn? 1908 (in Blätter für Haus- u. Kirchenmusik).

Monod, Edmond (Lyons, 1871). French pianist, pupil of B. Roth, Leschetizky and Mme. Stepanov, in 1899-1906 the latter's assistant in Berlin and since 1907 professor at the Geneva Conservatory. Author of Harmonie et Mélodie, 1906 (emphasizing melodic motion as the occasion of dissonance), M. Lussy et le Rythme Musical, 1912, and essays in the Lyons Revue Musicale.

Monpou, François Louis Hippolyte (Paris, 1804-1841, Orleans). French organist, holding several posts in Paris (as in 1818 at Tours Cathedral), pupil and assistant of Choron, but never really well trained. From 1828, however, he secured notice by settings of poems of the romantic school and from 1835 produced about 10 operas, all displaying a mixture of technical ignorance with some gifts for melody and dramatic effect. G.

Monsigny, Pierre Alexandre (n. St. Omer, 1729-1817, Paris). Eminent French composer, pupil in part of Gianotti, besides early training as violinist, from about 1750 manager or steward for the Duke of Orleans at Paris and later also in royal employ. His opera-writing began after hearing a French version of Pergolesi's Servà Padrona in 1754, though his first opera was not actually given till 1759. The series of works continued (mostly at the Comédie Italienne) till 1777, when he shrewdly ceased producing at the point of greatest success. In the Revolution he lost place and property. From 1798, however, he had a pension from the Opéra-Comique and in 1800-02 was inspector at the Conservatory. In 1813 he was chosen to follow Grétry in the Académie and in 1816 was admitted to the Légion d'Honneur. He was always hampered by the brevity and lateness of his technical training in composition. But he had positive gifts in melody, in delicate characterization and in refined dramatic appeal. He is counted as one of those who established the French comedy-opera as a distinct and enduring type. The list of his works includes 15 operas, viz.:

Les Aveux Indiscrets, 1759, Le Maître en Droit, 1760. Le Cadi Dupé, 1761, On ne s'avise jamais de tout, 1761. Le Roi et le Fermier, 1762, Rose et Colas, 1764, Aline, Reine de Golconde, 1766, L'Île Sonnante, 1768, Le Déserteur, 1769, Le Faucon, 1772, La Belle Arsène, 1773, Le Rendez-vous Bien Employé, 1774, Félix, 1777, besides Pagamin de Monègue and Philémon et Baucis, not given.

Memoirs by Quatremère de Quincy, 1818, Alexandre, 1819, Hédouin, 1820, and Pougin, 1908. G.

Montagnana, Antonio. Italian bass, in 1731-34 and '38 employed by Handel in London for several of his most taxing rôles. In 1734-36 he sang for the rival enterprise under Porpora. For him Handel wrote noted arias in Ezio, Sossarme and Orlando. G.

Montagnana, Domenico. Important Italian violin-maker at Cremona and Venice in about 1700-40, counted (with Bergonzi) among Stradivari's best pupils. He excelled in violas and 'cellos as well as violins. But his fame has been obscured by attributions of many of his instruments to Guarneri or Bergonzi. G.

Montal, Claude (n. Moulin, 1800-1865, Paris). Noted French piano-maker (blind), from 1834 taking prizes at competitions and from 1851 member of the Légion d'Honneur. Author of a manual on tuning (1834, enlarged, 1836) and a summary of advances in piano-making (1852). Biography by Guadet, 1845.

Montanari, G. (Salerno, 1881). Italian composer of the comedy Il Birichino di Parigi, 1913. He studied at the Naples Conservatory.

Montani, Nicola Aloysius (Utica, N. Y. 1880). American organist, pupil of Perosi, Capocci and Mocquereau, since 1907 at St. John the Evangelist's in Philadelphia, founding an a cappella Choral Club and the Am. Society of St. Gregory and editing The Catholic Choirmaster. Has written a Missa Solemnis, a Stabat Mater, other church-music, the cantata The Bells, an orchestral suite, etc. A.

Monte, Filippo de (1521-1603). 16th C. G.

Montéclair, Michel Pignolet de (Chaumont, 1666-1737, n. Paris). French double-bassist, a pioneer in the use of the modern instrument, playing in the orchestra of the Paris Opéra in 1707-37. Wrote 2 operas (1716, '32), cantatas, a Requiem, trio-sonatas, pieces for flute and violin, etc., and one of the earliest violin-methods (1720). G.

Montefiori, Tommaso Mosè (Leghorn, 1855). Italian composer of the operas Un Bacio al Portatore, 1884, and Cecilia, 1905. He studied with Mabellini and has long been a critic in Rome, at present editing the Tribuna.

Montemezzi, Italo (Verona, 1875). Able Italian composer, trained at the Milan Conservatory. Has written the operas Giovanni Gallurese, 1905, Hellera, 1909, L'Amore die Tre Re, 1913, and La Nave, 1918, besides the cantata Il Cantico dei Cantici, 1900, and the unfinished Principezza Lontana.

Monteux, Pierre (Paris, 1875). Eminent French conductor, trained at the Paris Conservatory, from 1894 making a name in Paris in both concert and opera, also appearing as guest in London, Berlin, Vienna and Pest. In 1916 he came to New York with the Russian Ballet and in 1917-19 was one of the conductors at the Metropolitan, besides leading municipal concerts in 1917 (summer). In the fall of 1918 he took charge of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for a short time (pending Rabaud's arrival) and in 1919-24 was permanent conductor. A.

Monteverdi, Claudio (1567-1643). 16th C. G.

Moody, Charles Harry (Stourbridge, 1874). English organist, pupil of T. W. Morgan, from 1893 at St. Michael's in Tenbury, Wells Cathedral (deputy), Wigan (1895-99) and Holy Trinity in Coventry, and since 1902 at Ripon Cathedral, besides leading a choral society and lecturing at the Diocesan College. Has written services, anthems and songs (using the pseudonym 'Coulthart Brayton'), besides Music and Emotion, The Evolution of Ecclesiastical Music and a history of Selby Abbey.

Moody, Fanny (Redruth, 1866). Talented English operatic soprano, pupil of Mme. Sainton-Dolby, from 1885 appearing in concert and from 1887 in opera, at first with the Carl Rosa troupes, but after her marriage in 1890 to the manager Charles Manners (q. v.) as the leading artist in their joint-company. She had the versatility to succeed in a great variety of rôles, including those of Wagner as well as current French and Italian composers. G.

Moór, Emanuel (b. 1862?). Hungarian pianist and composer, trained at Pest and Vienna, known only through a tour in America in 1885-87 as head of 'concerts artistiques' (with brilliant artists like Lilli Lehmann, Musin and Rummel) and a visit to London in 1894. He has lived at London, Lausanne and Munich, but in odd seclusion. Meanwhile, however, he has put forth a long list of works in many forms and these have found appreciative reception. In 1921, also, he invented a new type of piano, having two keyboards, the upper of which sounds tones an octave higher than the lower, the two being capable of being played independently or coupled (by using a special pedal). This instrument is thought to provide extraordinary extensions of effect, in regard to existing works and as to new writing adapted to its possibilities. His compositions include the operas Die Pompadour, 1902, Andreas Hofer, 1902, Hochzeitglocken, 1908, and Der Goldschmied von Paris, 7 symphonies, orchestral Improvisationen über ein eigenes Thema, Pensées Symphoniques, a suite, serenade and barcarolle for strings, 2 piano-concertos, 4 violin-concertos, 2 'cello-concertos, a triple concerto for piano, violin, 'cello and orchestra, a suite for double string-quintet, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, 7 violin-sonatas, 2 violin-suites, 3 'cello-sonatas, many piano-pieces, a mass, over 500 songs, etc.

Moor, Karl (b. 1873). Bohemian composer of the operas Vij, 1903, Hjördis, 1905, and Moses, 3 operettas and a piano-trio.

Moore, Graham Ponsonby (Ballarat, 1859-1916, in Australia). Australian pianist, pupil of Kullak, X. Scharwenka and Moszkowski, long professor at the Royal College, London. Wrote excellent pieces and études for his instrument.

Moore, John Weeks (Andover, N. H. 1807-1887, Boston). American printer and editor, from about 1840 (mostly at Manchester, N. H.) issuing many musical leaflets, manuals and collections. His most ambitious works were a Musician's Lexicon, 1845-46, and an Encyclopædia of Music, 1854 (appendix in 1875). A.

Moore, Thomas (Dublin, 1779-1852, n. Devizes). Famous Irish poet, who as an amateur musician composed or adapted melodies that he sang to his Irish Melodies and other sets of lyrics. He also undertook part-songs. G.

Moos, Paul (Buchau, 1863). Bavarian æsthetician, musically trained at the Munich Conservatory, but with much vacillation as to a career until about 1900, when, after life in Berlin and Italy, he settled in Ulm. Author of Moderne Musikästhetik in Deutschland, 1902, R. Wagner als Ästhetiker, 1906, numerous articles in various learned periodicals, Die psychologische Ästhetik, 1914, and Die deutsche Ästhetik d. Gegenwart, 1919 (especially on musical æsthetics).

Moraës, João de Silva (Lisbon, 1689-1747?, do.). Noted Portuguese church-musician, long choirmaster at Lisbon Cathedral. Wrote nearly 200 church-works, including Magnificats, Te Deums, a Stabat Mater, etc.

Morales, Cristobal [Cristoforo] (?1500-1553). 16th C. G.

Morales, Olallo Juan Magnus (Almeria, 1874), his mother being Swedish. Spanish conductor and composer, trained at Gothenburg, the Stockholm Conservatory and by Urban and Mme. Carreño, from 1901 active at Gothenburg, in 1904-05 conductor of the Lausanne Philharmonic, from 1905 director of choral and orchestral societies at Gothenburg, and since 1909 in Stockholm as critic for leading papers and from 1911 professor at the Conservatory. In 1902 he married the singer Clary Asplund. Has written a symphony, the overture Försonnar, an orchestral serenade and Andante Lugubre, a berceuse for flute, violin and strings, a piano-sonata, songs, etc.

Moralt. Four brothers, two born at Mannheim and two at Munich, all members of the court-orchestra at Munich, who together made up a noted Quartet. The leader was Joseph (1775-1828), who was concertmaster in the orchestra, and the others Johann Baptist (1777-1825), who wrote symphonies and much chamber-music, Georg (1781-1818) and Philipp (1780-1829). From about 1800 their performances of Haydn's works were famous. G.

Moran-Olden, Fanny [name originally Tappenhorn] (Oldenburg, 1855-1905, Berlin). North German operatic soprano, pupil of Haas and Auguste Götze, making her début in 1877 at Leipzig and Dresden, from 1878 a leading artist at Frankfort, from 1884 at Leipzig and in 1891-95 at Munich, with some tours (as to America in 1888-89). In 1879 she married Karl Moran and in 1897 another singer named Bertram.

Moreau, Jean Baptiste (?1656-1733). 17th C.

Morel, Auguste François (Marseilles, 1809-1881, Paris). Self-taught French composer, from 1836 active in Paris, and then at Marseilles, where in 1852-77 he was director of the Music School, returning finally to Paris. Wrote the opera Le Jugement de Dieu, 1860, the operetta La Fille d'Eschyle, 1848, the ballet L'Étoile du Marin, 1850, 2 symphonies, a string-quintet, 5 string-quartets, a piano-trio, cantatas, etc. He twice won the Prix Chartier for chamber-music.

Morelli, Giacomo (Venice, 1745-1819, do.). Librarian at St. Mark's, the discoverer of fragments of the lost Elements of Rhythm of Aristoxenos, which he published in 1785.

Morelot, Stéphen (Dijon, 1820-1899, n. do.). Dean of law at Dijon University and also an expert in church-music. From 1845 he joined Danjou in editing the Revue de la Musique Religieuse and in 1847 was sent by the government for research in Italy. Author of an essay on music in the 15th century (1856, with examples), a somewhat notable Éléments de l'Harmonie Appliqués à l'Accompagnement du Plain-Chant, 1861, Manuel de Psalmodie en Faux-Bourçons à 4, 1855 (harmonizations in old style), and many articles in the Revue and in La Maîtrise.

Morena, Berta (Mannheim, 1878). Gifted Badenese operatic soprano, pupil of Mme. Röhr-Brainin, since 1898 the leading prima donna at the Munich Opera, succeeding Terzina, in 1908-13 also appearing with great success at the Metropolitan, New York, and in 1914 at Covent Garden, London. Her vocal and dramatic powers are of the highest order.

Morera, Enrique (Barcelona, 1865). Spanish (Catalonian) composer of about 40 stage-works (operas and zarzuelas), many other vocal works, including arrangements of Catalonian folk-songs, a 'cello-concerto, many piano-pieces and dances. Sketch by Iglesias, 1921.

Moretti, Giovanni (Naples, 1807-1884, n. do.). Italian composer, pupil of the Naples Conservatory, becoming director at several theaters and finally at San Carlo in Naples. Wrote over 20 operas (from 1830), 12 masses, a Requiem and much other church-music.

Morgan, George Washbourne (Gloucester, 1823-1892, Tacoma, Wash.). English organist, pupil of Amott, beginning church-playing at twelve, first at Gloucester, then at London. From about 1845 he conducted the Gloucester Philharmonic (chorus), but removed to New York in 1853, where his chief positions were at Grace Church in 1855-68 and at the Brooklyn Tabernacle in 1870-82. He had a brilliant style and often appeared in recital (as in Boston in 1859 and '63, at the Philadelphia Centennial in 1876, etc.). Wrote a service, anthems, organ-pieces, songs, etc. A.

Morgan, John Paul (Oberlin, O. 1841-1879, Oakland, Cal.). Gifted, but short-lived, American organist, trained in New York and Leipzig, in 1865 one of the founders of the Oberlin Conservatory, in 1866-73 organist in New York and then laid aside by ill-health. Translator of Richter's Harmonie (1867). A.

Morgan, Maud (New York, 1864), daughter of George above. Able American harpist, first appearing when but eleven, pupil of her father, Toulmin and Oberthür, from about 1885 widely known through tours in America. For some years she led the Lenox Choral Society in New York, where she is a favorite teacher. A.

Morgan, Robert Orlando (Manchester, 1865). English pianist, pupil of the Guildhall School, London, where he has taught since 1887. Has written the comic opera Two Merry Monarchs, 1910, an oratorio, 2 cantatas for women's voices, 3 violin-sonatas, piano-pieces, choruses and songs, besides harmony-exercises.

Moriani, Napoleone (Florence, 1808-1878). Italian operatic tenor, whose rich voice gave him a brief career from 1833, for some years in Italy, in 1841 at Vienna, in 1844-45 at London, and in 1846 in Spain. G.

Mörke, Eduard (Stuttgart, 1877). Würtemberger conductor, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from before 1900 theater-conductor in America, at Rostock, Kiel, Stettin, Halle and latterly Berlin (Deutsches Opernhaus), besides acting as assistant at Bayreuth, at the Paris production of Salome (1907) and at the Halberstadt Festspiele. In 1923 he toured America with the Wagnerian Opera Company.

Morin, Jean Baptiste (Orleans, ?1677-1745, Paris). One of the first composers of French cantatas (1706-12), besides motets and the divertissement La Chasse au Cerf, 1709.

Moritz, Landgraf of Hesse (1572-1632). 17th C. G.

Moriacchi, Francesco (Perugia, 1784-1841, Innsbruck). Eminent Italian conductor and composer, pupil of L. Caruso, Mazetti, Zingarelli and Martini, from early youth writing much for the church, giving special attention to instrumentation, and beginning operatic composition in 1807 with such success that from 1810 he was director of the Italian Opera at Dresden, where from 1817 he was in competition with Weber. He was fluent and clever, without having much genius. But for a time he achieved a great reputation. Wrote about 25 operas, including Le Danaïde, 1810, Il Barbiere di Siviglia, 1814, Gianni di Parigi, 1818, etc., the oratorios Isacco, 1817, and La Morte di Abele, 1821, a Passion (1812), a Requiem (1827), many showy masses, cantatas, hymns, organ-pieces, etc. Memoir by Rossi-Scotti, 1860. G.

Morley, Thomas (1557-1603). 16th C. G.

Mornington, Earl of [Garrett Colley Wellesley] (Dangan, 1735-1781, London). Self-taught Irish glee-composer, educated at Dublin University (Mus.D. 1764), where he was also professor in 1764-74. In 1757 he started a choral society in Dublin. Wrote many catches, glees and madrigals (prizes from the Catch Club in 1776, '77 and '79), 2 antems and some other church-music. Complete edition of glees, etc., by Bishop, 1846. Three sons became famous, including the Duke of Wellington. G.

Morphy, Guillermo (Madrid, 1836-1899, do.). Tutor and private secretary of Alfonso XII of Spain, from 1869 (while in Paris in attendance on Queen Isabella) influenced by Gevaert to make researches in old Spanish lute-music, the fruit of which was the valuable Les Luthistes Espagnols du XVI<sup>e</sup> Siècle, 1902 (posthumous).

Morsch, Anna (Granssee, 1841-1916, Wiesbaden). Prussian piano-teacher, pupil of Tausig, Ehlerst and Krigar, from about 1865 active in Berlin (from 1885 with her own Institut) and from 1899 Breslauer's successor as editor of the Klavierlehrer, besides prominence in teachers' associations. Author of Der italien. Kirchengesang bis Palestrina, 1887 (2d ed. 1894), Deutschlands Tonkünstlerinnen, 1893, periodical articles and an edition of some of Kirchner's works.

Morse, Charles Henry (Bradford, Mass. 1853). American organist, trained at the New England Conservatory (Boston), where he taught from 1873, besides playing at various Boston churches, in 1875-84 the first music-director at Wellesley College, in 1885-91 founder and director of the Northwestern Conservatory, Minneapolis, in 1891-99 organist at Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, and in 1901-18 the first professor of music at Dartmouth College (N.H.). Has edited numerous collections of organ-pieces, choir-music and hymnals, with some church-works of his own. A.

Mortaro, Antonio. 16th C.

Mortelmans, Lodewijk (Antwerp, 1868). Gifted Belgian composer, pupil of the Antwerp and Brussels Conservatories. Has written the symphony Germania, the symphonic poem Wilde Jagd, pieces for strings, the cantata Sinai, the scena Ariadne (tenor and orchestra) and many songs that have secured high renown.

Mortier de Fontaine, Henri Louis Stanislas (Vishnevetz, 1816-1883, London). Polish-Russian pianist, from 1832 becoming known as virtuoso in Germany, France and Italy, from 1853 teaching in Petrograd, in 1860-68 in Munich and, after further tours, in London. He is said to have been the first to put Beethoven's op. 106 and many of Bach's works on recital-programs. G.

Mortimer, Peter (Puttenham, 1750-1828, Dresden). English Moravian, educated and employed at various places on the Continent, from about 1780 at Herrnhut. Author of the valuable treatise Der Choralgesang zur Zeit d. Reformation, 1821.

Mosca, Giuseppe (Naples, 1772-1839, Messina). Italian conductor and composer, pupil of Feneroli, in 1803-09 accompanist at the Italiens, Paris, in 1817-21 opera-director at Palermo and from 1823 at Messina. Wrote over 40 operas (from about 1790) and 2 ballets.

Mosca, Luigi (Naples, 1775-1824, do.), brother of the above. Italian composer, for a time accompanist at San Carlo, Naples, and later teacher at the Conservatorio S. Sebastiano. Wrote 14 operas, an oratorio, a mass, etc.

Moscheles, Ignaz (Prague, 1794-1870, Leipzig). Eminent Bohemian (Jewish) pianist, teacher and composer, pupil of Dionys Weber, Albrechtsberger and Salieri, appearing as both player and composer when but fourteen and soon after making so favorable an impression in Vienna that he was accepted as a true virtuoso and commissioned by Artaria to prepare a piano-arrangement of Beethoven's Fidelio (1814). For several years from 1816 he toured through Germany, France, Holland and England (from 1821), holding his own against even much older rivals (like Hummel). In 1824 he gave lessons to the young Mendelssohn at Berlin. In 1826 he married Charlotte Embden at Hamburg and soon after settled in London, where he was extremely popular as player and teacher. From 1832 he was on the directorate of the Philharmonic, for which he conducted Beethoven's 9th Symphony in 1837 and '38, besides being chosen to follow Bishop in 1845. In 1846, however, Mendelssohn, with whom he had maintained intimate relations, called him to be head of the piano-department in the new Leipzig Conservatory, where he became one of the strongest members of its brilliant faculty. His playing was extremely precise and clean-cut, with notable attention to varieties of touch and gradations of force, but with no little emotional fascination as well as conscientious thoughtfulness. He was highly gifted as an improvisator. As composer his works range from many pieces of a merely salon-character to concertos and sonatas that are both noble and graceful in conception. Though as player he had the power of merging himself in the form and spirit of many styles, as composer he was too ready to adopt the transient vogue of the facile and showy 'arrangement' or 'fantasia', based on an operatic theme. His works include a symphony (1832), the overture Joan of Arc, 8 piano-concertos (especially the 3d in G min., the 5th in C, the Fantastique, the Pathétique and the Pastoral), many pieces for piano with orchestra, including La Marche d'Alexandre, fantasias on Irish, Scottish and Danish airs, etc., a septet for strings, clarinet and horn, a sextet for strings and horns, variations for string-quintet, a piano-trio, numerous pieces for piano in combination with one or two instruments, several effective works for two pianos (especially Hommage à Handel), for 4 hands (sonatas in E and B min.), 4 piano-sonatas (notably the Caractéristique and the Mélancolique), the Allegri di Bravura, a large number of fine études, nearly 30 songs, etc. He translated Schindler's life of Beethoven (2 vols. 1841), making many additions. Memoir by his wife, 2 vols. 1872. Correspondence with Mendelssohn published by his son (1888) and also fragments of an autobiography (1899). G.

Mosel, Giovanni Felice (Florence, 1754-?). Italian violinist, pupil of his father and Nardini, appearing first at fifteen, from 1793 Nardini's successor as court-director at Florence and from 1812 playing in the Pergola orchestra. In 1795 he had and sold a valuable Stradivari violin originally made for the ducal chapel in 1690. Wrote some symphonies, quartets, trios and duets (from 1783). G.

Mosel, Ignaz Franz, Edler von (Vienna, 1772-1844, do.). Austrian civil official, also conductor, composer and writer, from 1812 the first conductor of the new Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde (being nearly the first to use a baton), from 1820 vice-director of the Opera and from 1829 court-librarian. He was ennobled in 1818. Wrote a few operas and singspiele (from 1813), cantatas, a mass, overtures, etc., besides editing some of Handel's oratorios. Author of Versuch einer Aesthetik d. dramat. Tonsatzes, 1813, a survey of a half-century of music in Vienna (Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung, 1818), a life of Salieri (1827), a study of the score of Mozart's Requiem (1829) and a history of the court-library (1835). See Batka, Moseliana, 1911-12 (in Musikbuch für Oesterreich). G.

Mosenthal, Joseph (Kassel, 1834-1896, New York). Able Hessian violinist, pupil of his father, Spohr, Bott and Kraushaar, from 1853 in New York, where in 1855-68 he was the second in the quartet at the Mason-Thomas Soirées. A.

Mosenthal, Salomon Hermann von (Kassel, 1821-1877, Vienna). Government official at Vienna from about 1845 (ennobled 1871), author of many texts for stage-works, including the libretti for Nicolai's Lustige Weiber (1849), Kretschmer's Folkunger (1874), Rubinstein's Makabäer (1875), Goldmark's Königen von Saba (1875), Brüll's Goldenes Kreuz (1875) and Landfriede (1877), etc.

Moser, Andreas (Semlin, 1859). Hungarian violinist, pupil of Joachim and (when debarred from a career as player by arm-weakness) his intimate and valued assistant. In 1888 he became a regular teacher at the Berlin Hochschule, after 1900 with the title professor. With Joachim he edited Bach's partitas and Beethoven's quartets, with Hugo Becker quartets by Mozart and Schubert, and with Schreck Bach's concertos and sonatas. Author of a biography of Joachim (1899, rewritten, 2 vols. 1908) and editor of Joachim's correspondence (with Brahms, 2 vols. 1908, and other, 3 vols. 1911-13). For the Kretschmar Festschrift (1918) he wrote J. Schop als Violinkomponist as prelude to a general history of the violin and violin-music.

Moser, Franz Josef (Vienna, 1880). Austrian composer, trained at the Musikfreunde Conservatory in Vienna, from about 1900 conductor at various places, from 1904 double-bassist at the Vienna Opera (where he is still employed), but also in 1906 Mottl's assistant at the Munich Opera and since 1910 on the teaching-staff of the Vienna Conservatory and the Academy, as well as tutor at the University. Has written 2 symphonies and one for small orchestra, the orchestral ballade Lokis Ritt, 1907, a serenade for 15 wind-instruments, a string-sextet, a piano-quintet, 3 string-quartets, the choral work Die Hermannsschlacht, 2 masses, other church-music, choruses, songs, etc.

Moser, Hans Joachim (Berlin, 1889), son of Andreas above. Versatile Prussian baritone, poet and musicologist, educated at various universities (Ph.D. Rostock, 1910), in music pupil of his father, Van Eyken, Jenner, Kahn, Noë and Felix Schmidt, from about 1910 active at Berlin in concert and oratorio and since 1919 docent at Halle University. Has written the scena Gesang der Vestalin, 1912, and 5 sets of songs. Besides other poetry he has brought out the fairy-tale Die liebe der Rosemarek, 1912

(with music), and a wholly new text for Weber's Euryanthe music (Die sieben Raben, produced 1915 at Berlin). Author of a life of Joachim, 1908 (distinct from his father's), Goethe u. d. musikal. Akustik, 1910 (in Lilienkron Festschrift), Technik d. deutschen Gesangskunst, 1911 (2d ed. 1921), a Gesch. d. deutschen Musik, 2 vols. 1920 (2d ed. 1922), Der evangel. Choral als rhythmisches Gebilde, 1921, Musikal. Zeitspiegel, 1922, various articles in periodicals on acoustics and rhythmic, and unpublished works on stringed instrument music in the Middle Ages and on Die Entstehung d. Durgedankens.

Möser, Karl (Berlin, 1774-1851, do.). Prussian violinist, pupil of Böttcher and Haacke, besides inspiration from Rode and Viotti, from about 1800 on extensive tours, after 1811 in the Berlin court-orchestra and head of his own Quartet (after 1840 with the title of royal director). In 1826 he conducted the first rendering in Berlin of Beethoven's 9th Symphony.

Mosewius, Johann Theodor (Königsberg, 1788-1858, Schaffhausen). Able Prussian conductor and teacher, from about 1810 operasinger at Königsberg, in 1814 becoming director, from 1816 (with his wife) prominent at the Breslau Opera, founder and leader of the Liedertafel there, as in 1825 of the noted Singakademie, besides from 1827 being professor and from 1832 music-director at the University, as well as Schnabel's successor as head of the Church Music Institute. In these and other ways he exerted a fruitful influence not only in Breslau, but elsewhere. He was one of the promoters of the Bach revival. Author of useful pamphlets on Mendelssohn's St. Paul (1836), on Bach's cantatas and other choral works (1845) and on the St. Matthew Passion (1852). Memoir by Kempe, 1859. G.

Moskwa, Prince de la [Joseph Napoléon Ney] (Paris, 1803-1857, St. Germain), son of Marshal Ney. French noble, brought up in Italy, but from about 1825 prominent in Paris in social, musical and intellectual circles, under the Third Empire becoming senator and general. In 1843 he joined Adam in founding the Société de Musique Vocale, which he long conducted and for which he collected a notable library of works from the 16-17th centuries. Wrote the operas Le Cent-Suisse, 1840, and Yvonne, 1855, and a fine mass (1831). G.

Mosonyi [Michael Brand] (Wieselburg, 1814-1870, Pest). Able Hungarian composer, originally trained along conventional lines, but about 1860 devoting himself to distinctively Hungarian styles and achieving eminence therein. From 1842 he lived at Pest. Wrote the operas Mazilian (in German, taken up by Liszt in 1857, but destroyed by the composer when some changes were suggested), The Fair Ilka, 1861, and Almos (not given), an early symphony (Pest), a funeral-symphony for Count Széchenyi (1860), the symphonic poem Triumph and Lament of the Hunved, an overture (with the national song Szozat), many piano-pieces designed to utilize national sentiment, etc., besides some music for the dedication of the Marienkirche at Gratz (1865). He contributed to Abrányi's musical journal.

Moszkowski, Alexander (Pilica, 1851), brother of the following. Polish critic in Berlin, writing for the Montagsblatt, Wespen and Lustige Blätter. Author of comical Humoresken (1893) and Dichtungen (1894) of 'Anton Notenquetscher', Die Kunst in 1000 Jahren, and a translation of Haweis' Music and Morals (1912), besides many other works.

Moszkowski, Moritz (Breslau, 1854), brother of the foregoing. Gifted Polish (-Silesian) pianist and composer, trained chiefly at the Dresden, Stern and Kullak (Berlin) Conservatories, teaching at the last for some years and from 1873 becoming noted as a brilliant and genial player (in England from 1886). In 1897 he removed to Paris. As composer he has much clever versatility, especially in imitating national types, combined with good musicianship and a wholesome vein of sentiment. Has written the opera Boabdil, der Maurenkönig, 1892, music for Grabbe's Don Juan und Faust (1896), the ballet Laurin, 1896, the symphonic poem Jeanne d'Arc, the orchestral works Phantastischer Zug and Aus aller Herren Länder, orchestral suites in F and G min., a Prelude and Fugue for strings, concertos for violin and for piano, a suite for 2 violins and piano, a violin-scherzo, 'cello-pieces, a large number of fine salon-pieces for piano, including noted Spanischen Tänze, Skizzen, Tarentella and concert-études, and some songs. G.

Motta, José Vianna da (Island of St. Thomas, 1868). Talented Portuguese pianist and composer, trained at the Lisbon Conservatory and by the Scharwenkas, Liszt, K. Schäffer and Von Bülow, attracting attention when but fourteen and from 1887 making extended tours in Europe, the United States (1892, '99) and South America. For many years he was court-pianist at Berlin, whence in 1915 he went to the Geneva Académie (succeeding Stavenhagen) and in 1917 to Lisbon. Has written the symphony An das Vaterland, a string-quartet, the choral work Lusiaden, many piano-pieces, including 5 Portuguese Rhapsodies, and arrangements of several works by Alkan (originally for pedalier-piano), including Prières, Préludes (4 hands) and Benedictus (2 pianos). He also edited Liszt's piano-works for the great Breitkopf & Härtel edition. Author of Studien bei Bülow, 1896, Einige Beobachtungen über Liszt, 1898, Die Entwicklung d. Klavierkonzerts and various magazine articles.

Mottl, Felix (n. Vienna, 1856-1911, Munich). Eminent Austrian conductor, trained at the Vienna Conservatory, becoming leader of the Wagnerverein at Vienna and also in 1875-76 assisting in the first performances at Bayreuth. From 1880 he was court-director at Karlsruhe, following Dessoff, and also conductor of the Philharmonic concerts there (till 1892). His leadership of the opera was marked by extraordinary energy and skill. Besides securing high technical perfection he also extended the repertoire so as to include all of Wagner's dramas and all of those of Berlioz (including the first complete rendering of Les Troyens in 1890). In 1886 he had brilliant success as chief conductor at Bayreuth, leading to a call to be opera-director at Berlin, which he declined, as also a similar call to Munich in 1898. But he served more or less as guest-conductor, as at London in 1893-94 and at Paris. In 1903 he left Karlsruhe for Munich, at first as general director, from 1904 as associate-director of the Conservatory (with Bussmeyer) and from 1907 as conductor of the Opera. In 1903-04 he visited New York to conduct Parsifal, but did not actually do so, owing to protests from the Wagner family. He did an enormous amount of arrangement and orchestration, such as a new version of Cornelius' Barbier von Bagdad (1884), followed by another, less radical, made with Levi (1885), a fresh edition of 4 overtures by Wagner (1907), the Peasants' Cantata of Bach (1908), as well as the 6th Brandenburg Concerto, a new version of Bellini's Norma (1910), instrumentations of 5 songs by Wagner, concertos by Handel and Rameau, songs by Mozart and Schubert, piano-pieces by Schubert and old dances by Lully, Rameau, Grétry and Gluck. He also prepared editions of Donizetti's Elisir d'Amore and of all the Wagner operas (1914). His own works included the operas Agnes Bernauer, 1880, and Fürst und Sänger, 1893, the festspiel Eberstein, 1881, the ballet Pan im Busch, 1900, a string-quartet (1898) and songs. He was twice married, in 1892 to the singer Henriette Standhartner and just before his death to Zdenka Fassbender (b. 1879), since 1906 leading soprano at Munich. Memoir by Ettlinger (in the Biograph. Jahrbuch), and see Kloss, Monographien moderner Musiker, 1909. G, A.

Mount-Edgecumbe, Richard, Earl of (1764-1839, Richmond). English amateur, composer of the opera Zenobia, 1800, and author of Musical Reminiscences, 1823 (on Italian opera in England from 1773). G.

Mouquet, Jules (Paris, 1867). Talented French composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1896) and since 1913 professor there. In 1905 he took the Prix Trémont and in 1907 the Prix Chartier. From 1908 he was vice-president of the Société des Compositeurs. Has written the oratorios Le Sacrifice d'Isaac and Le Jugement Dernier, the symphonic poem Persée et Andromède, the prelude Diane et Endymion, the sketch Au Village and other works for orchestra, a wind-septet, 2 string-quartets (one with harmonium), sonatas for violin, for 'cello, for flute (La Flûte de Pan) and for Mustel organ or harmonium, a Diversissement Grec for flute and harp, suites for organ and for harmonium, many pieces for various instruments and for piano and a textbook in harmony.

Mouret, Jean Joseph (Avignon, 1682-1738, Charenton). From soon after 1707 in the service of the Duchess of Maine, in 1728-34 conductor of the Concerts Spirituels and composer to the Comédie Italienne. Wrote numerous operas and other stage-pieces (from 1714) and some sacred music.

Mouton, Jean (?1475-1522). 16th C. G.

Mouzin, Pierre Nicolas [called Édouard] (Metz, 1822-1894, Paris). French teacher and composer, pupil of the Metz Music School, from 1842 teacher there and from 1854 director, and after 1871 teacher at the Paris Conservatory. Wrote 2 operas, symphonies, cantatas, church-music and songs, besides historical sketches of the Metz Music School and Orphéon.

Mozart, Johann Georg Leopold (Augsburg, 1719-1787, Salzburg). Able Bavarian violinist and composer, largely self-taught while studying law at Salzburg University, from 1743 playing in the court-orchestra of the Archbishop there, becoming later court-composer and in 1762 second conductor, besides from 1777 teaching at the cathedral choir-school. From about 1762, however, his absorbing care was the education and professional advancement of his two gifted children (see below). Author of the next to the earliest violin-method (1756, revised in 1770), which made him famous. Wrote also a few operas, several oratorios, much church-music, 18 symphonies, trio-sonatas and other concerted works, pieces for violin, for organ and for clavier, etc. Many works are included in the Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Bayern, ix. See memoirs or critiques by J. E. Engl, 1902, Friedländer (in Musik, iv) and Abert, 1917 (in Gluck-Jahrbuch). In 1747 he married Anna Maria Pertlin (or Bertlin) of St. Gilgen (on the Wolfgangsee). G.

Mozart, Maria Anna (Salzburg, 1751-1829, do.), daughter of the foregoing and sister of Wolfgang. She began clavier-lessons with her father when but a child, displaying the same precocity as her brother, so that in 1762-68 they toured together as prodigies. She then taught at Salzburg until her marriage in 1784 to Baron von Berchthold (d. 1801), warden of St. Gilgen. She became blind in 1820. She was a finished player and an excellent teacher. Her relation to Wolfgang was always most affectionate and sympathetic. G.

Mozart, Wolfgang Amadeus (Salzburg, [July 27] 1756-1791 [Dec. 5], Vienna), son of Leopold above. Distinguished Austrian pianist and composer, one of the most instinctive geniuses in musical history, with Haydn the chief exponent of the type or school of writing often called 'Viennese' or 'classical'. His precocity was phenomenal, so that at ten he was able to play at sight almost anything then written for clavier or violin and was composing for chorus and orchestra. But from the first he was also rigidly trained by his father in the entire routine of his art, besides being taken on a series of professional tours (1762-79) to Munich, Vienna, the Rhine Valley from Stuttgart to Cologne (especially Mannheim), the Low Countries, Paris, London and all the chief Italian cities. Most of his youth was spent in contact with the active musical world, not only making himself known, but gaining invaluable knowledge and experience (as from Christian Bach in London, from Martini in Bologna, from Cannabich and the Mannheim circle, from observations during the Gluck-Piccinni contest at Paris and from orchestras and opera-houses in various places). From at least as early as 1768 he was fairly launched upon the broad current of composition, choral, instrumental and dramatic.

Leopold Mozart was a dependent of the successive archbishops at Salzburg and felt obliged to hold his place as a means of livelihood. Under Sigismund he had leave to travel with his children and in 1770 Wolfgang was made concertmaster in the court-band. But under Hieronymus, who succeeded in 1771, the Mozarts were often treated with harsh disdain. The son came to dread the return to Salzburg. Yet no other occupation presented itself. In 1781, however, while attending the Archbishop in Vienna, he was abruptly and insultingly dismissed.

(The remaining ten years, after 1781, were filled with activity, mostly at Vienna, though with trips to Munich and Prague at intervals to bring out operas and in 1789 to Saxony and Prussia.) He was in great request as a pianist always and his varied works as composer were admired and applauded. Yet his lack of shrewdness in business and a certain volatility of disposition, combined with various other circumstances, left him always without a stated professional position except (from 1787) that of court-musician. An offer to become court-director at Berlin in 1789 he refused from patriotic motives. In 1782 he had married Constanze Weber at Vienna, whose vivacity and good will were combined with small practical wisdom and considerable ill-health. (At the same time that he was demonstrating an unparalleled fertility and richness of artistic inspiration, he was steadily becoming involved in a tangle of sordid cares and difficulties. The result was the sudden close of his career at thirty-five. All the circumstances of his death were pathetic, since to the physical and mental overstrain that laid him open to the deadly typhus was added a mysterious commission to write a Requiem for an unknown patron (in his disordered imagination interpreted as an evil device to provide for his own funeral), a commission that held his intensest ardor to the very end. Only a pitiful handful of friends stood by at last. The funeral was hasty and shabby (in the open street) and the burial was in the common grave of the city's paupers (place unmarked and soon lost).)

Despite the brevity of his life and the fact that he held no commanding official position, he was clearly recognized as a prince even in his own day. He was one of the most accomplished keyboard-performers of the time, excelling not only in dexterity, but in impressive warmth and dignity of interpretation, besides having great readiness in extemporization.) He naturally used the Viennese type of piano that had been perfected about 1775 and his style was the compact and polished one that went with that type. (He was equally expert upon the violin and the viola) (for which he had a special liking). His entire life seems to have been spent in the presence of musical thought. Though abounding in good-fellowship and perpetually indulging in jokes and apparent play, he was really always intent upon artistic creation and expression. Even his most elaborate works were usually fully conceived before being written out and on occasion he was able to produce with brilliant assurance without premeditation. (No previous composer—and few later—had shown such affluence, certainty and beauty of inspiration.)

To the neat precision of the prevailing form of his time he imparted a luscious charm of melody, harmony and inner structure that were distinctly his own. His instinct for balance and clarity was unerring, but in his hands even the simplest outline was charged with emotional warmth. (He attained his highest points in the great concertos, symphonies and operas of his last ten years.) It is evident that if he had continued longer he would have risen to still more sublime utterance. (As it was, he plainly outstripped the much older Gluck and Haydn and pointed the way for Beethoven and several other masters of the early 19th century. In particular, he showed an appreciation of the instrumental texture of the chamber- and orchestral ensemble that was prophetic.) Without working on any such deliberate plan of reform as that of Gluck, he yet powerfully aided the advance of the opera by his intuitive grasp of dramatic values and his exuberant wealth of resource in characterizing personages and in depicting situations. (In all his works appeared a fascinating union of genial vitality, absolute musicianship and sympathetic sentiment.)

(From the outset he sought expression in all the forms and fields of composition that were prominent in his day. He was thoroughly cosmopolitan in his sympathies, due largely to the breadth of his early experience, and was thus able to fuse together the best tendencies of many schools, at the same time ennobling them by the magic of his own individuality.) How immediate and powerful was his artistic impress is seen by its reaction on the veteran Haydn, on the younger Beethoven, on the circle of the first romanticists and even on comparatively recent composers. (His genius was the consummate flower of the 'classical' period proper.)

A summary of his more than six hundred works is as follows:

Vocal Works

Operas—La Finta Semplice, 1769 (Salzburg), Mitridate, 1770 (Milan), Lucio Silla, 1772 (Milan), La Finta Giardiniera, 1775 (Munich), Idomeneo, Rè di Creta, 1781 (Munich), Die Entführung aus dem Serail, 1782 (Vienna), Le Nozze di Figaro, 1786 (Vienna), Don

Giovanni [Il Dissoluto Punito], 1787 (Prague), Cost Fan Tutte, 1790 (Vienna), Die Zauberflöte, 1791 (Vienna), La Clemenza di Tito, 1791 (Prague).

Operettas, Dramatic Cantatas, etc.—Die Schuldigkeit des ersten Gebotes, 1767 (Salzburg, first part only by Mozart), Apollo et Hyacinthus, 1767 (Salzburg), Bastien et Bastienne, 1768 (Vienna), Ascanio in Alba, 1771 (Milan), Il Sogno di Scipione, 1772 (Salzburg), Il Rè Pastore, 1775 (Salzburg), Die Schauspieldirector, (1786) 1796 (Schönbrunn). Incomplete draft of Zaide (1780); incidental music for Thamos (1780?). About 45 arias and scenas, also duets, trios and quartets.

Oratorios and Cantatas—La Betulia Liberata, 1772 (Padua?), Davidde Penitente, 1785 (Vienna), 2 Masonic cantatas.

Church-Music—15 masses (1768–80); the Requiem (incomplete, finished by Süssmayer); 4 Litanies; 2 Vespers; Te Deum; 9 Offertories; Dixit et Magnificat; 4 Kyries; Psalm 130; various other canticles, motets, etc.

About 35 songs, 2 trios and about 20 vocal canons, mostly secular.

Orchestral Works

49 symphonies (from 1764!), including especially those in E-flat, G min. and C [Jupiter] (all 1788). [Two of the symphonies are now supposed to be by Abel and M. Haydn respectively.]

16 divertimenti; 11 serenades; 2 cassations; a nocturno; 10 short pieces. All these are written for small ensembles.

Concertos—about 25 for piano, with 1 for two pianos, 1 for three pianos and a piano-rondo; 7 for violin, with a concertone for two violins, 1 for violin and viola and 2 violin-rondos; 2 for flute, with 1 for flute and harp and a flute-andante; 1 for clarinet; 1 for bassoon; 4 for horn. [Four of the early clavier-concertos are now supposed to be studies from Schobert.]

A great variety of marches, dances, etc., for various combinations of instruments.

Chamber-Music

9 string-quintets (one with horn and one with clarinet); 1 for piano, oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon.

26 string-quartets (two with flute and one with oboe); 3 quartet-divertimenti, a serenade and an adagio and fugue; 2 piano-quartets.

7 piano-trios; a trio for piano, clarinet and viola; a divertimento for string-trio. Also a duet for two violins and 2 for violin and viola.

42 violin-sonatas; 2 sets of variations and an allegro for violin and piano.

Keyboard-Works

17 piano-sonatas; 4 fantasias; 5 sonatas and a set of variations for 4 hands; a sonata and a fugue for two pianos; 15 sets of variations; a suite; about 15 minor pieces, mostly dances; 35 cadenzas for the piano-concertos.

17 organ-sonatas, usually with string-trio, but 3 with some wind added.

Miscellaneous

Additional accompaniments for Handel's The Messiah, Alexander's Feast, Ode to St. Cecilia and Acis and Galatea.

A large number of vocal and instrumental fragments, longer or shorter, and some works of uncertain authenticity.

Thematic catalogues by André, 1805 (2d ed. 1828), and especially by Köchel, 1862 (supplement, 1889, revised and extended by Waldersee, 1905). Standard edition of works by Breitkopf & Härtel, 24 vols. 1876–86. Memoirs by Niemtschek, 1798 (2d ed. 1808), Nissen, 1828, Holmes 1845 (2d ed. 1878), Jahn, 4 vols. 1856–59 (4th ed. by Deiters, 1905–07), Nohl, 1863 (3d ed. by Sakolowski, 1906), and '80, Wilder, 1880 (4th ed. 1889), Meinardus, 1882, Gehring, 1883 (2d ed. 1911), Klasen, 1897, Fleischer, 1899, Breakspeare, 1902, Prout, 1903, Mirow, 1904, Hartog, 1905, Bellaigue, 1906, Lentner, 1906, Von der Pfordten, 1908, Storck, 1908, Hutschenruijter, 1909, L. Schmidt, 1912, Wyzewa and Saint-Foix, 2 vols. 1912, Schurig, 2 vols. 1913, and Kreitmaier, 1919. The great biography is that by Jahn, but the investigations of Wyzewa and Saint-Foix have shed new light on the youthful period.

Mozart's wife was left in sore straits, but she was able to gain something from concerts at which she appeared as player and singer, and in 1799 she sold to André all the scores still in her hands. In 1809 she married the Danish official G. N. von Nissen and after his retirement in 1820 they lived at Salzburg, where he died in 1826 and she in 1842. Of the two surviving children Wolfgang Amadeus (1791–1844) appeared as pianist in 1805, from 1814 was long a teacher and conductor at Lemberg and finally moved to Vienna and then to Karlsbad. He wrote 2 piano-concertos, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, sonatas for violin and for piano, etc.

In 1838 a Mozart prize-scholarship was established out of the surplus from a festival given by the Frankfort Liederkrantz. It is awarded every four years. Many famous artists have won it, including Bruch, Humperdinck, etc. In 1842 there was founded at Salzburg the Mozarteum, a municipal institution to maintain a standing orchestra, a music-school and a museum. Since 1880 annual reports have been issued and from 1888 local branches were established in German and Austrian cities. G.

Mraczek, Joseph Gustav (Brünn, 1878). Moravian violinist and composer, trained by his father and at the Brünn Music School and the Vienna Conservatory, in 1896–97 touring as virtuoso, in 1897–1902 concertmaster at the Brünn Stadttheater and since 1898 professor at the Music School there. Has written the operas Der gläserne Pantoffel, 1902, Der Traum, 1909, Die Insel Aebeli, 1914, and Ikdar, 1921, the pastoral Der Liebesrat, music for Kismet (1912, and 7 numbers as Orientalische Skizzen for small orchestra), the orchestral interlude Ruslans Traum, the very effective symphonic burlesque Max und Moritz, 1911, a piano-quintet, violin- and piano-pieces. Sketch by E. H. Müller, 1918.

Muck, Karl (Darmstadt, 1859). Distinguished Hessian conductor, educated in philology at Heidelberg and Leipzig Universities (Ph.D. 1880), trained musically by his father, by Kissner and at the Leipzig Conservatory. In 1880 he appeared at the Gewandhaus as pianist, but at once turned to theater-conducting at Zurich, Salzburg, Brünn and Gratz, in 1886 being secured by Angelo Neumann for the German Opera at Prague and also for his Ring traveling-troupe (especially in 1889 in Russia and in 1891 at Berlin) and from 1892 established at Berlin as chief conductor at the Opera, often also leading the court-orchestra. He frequently served as guest-conductor elsewhere throughout Europe (notably at the Silesian Festivals in 1894–11, at Covent Garden in 1899, alternating with Mottl at the Vienna Philharmonic in 1903–06, and succeeding Paur in the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1906–08, besides from 1901 directing Parsifal steadily at Bayreuth). In 1912 he removed again to Boston to direct the Symphony Orchestra, making a profound impression until in the progress of the World War he was abruptly arrested as an enemy alien in 1918, interned in the South and in the fall of 1919 deported. He was then active as conductor at various places, since 1922 with the Hamburg Philharmonic. He is one of the ablest and most experienced of living conductors, his repertory including more than 100 operas at Berlin alone and the whole range of symphonic music as well. G, A.

Mudie, Thomas Molleson (London, 1809–1876, do.). English pianist and composer, one of the first pupils of the Royal Academy and in 1832–44 professor there, besides being organist for Lord Monson at Gaton, in 1844–63 teacher in Edinburgh and then living in London. Wrote 4 symphonies, much chamber-music (including a quintet and trio, both with piano), many piano-pieces, anthems and other vocal music. G.

Muffat, August Gottlieb (Passau, 1690–1770, Vienna), son of the following. Able Bavarian organist, pupil of Fux, from 1717 court-organist at Vienna (assistant till 1751), retiring in 1763. Wrote organ-versets and toccatas, besides many clavier-pieces (see Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Oesterreich, iii). Handel derived some themes from him. G.

Muffat, Georg (?1645–1704). 17th C. G.

Mugellini, Bruno (Potenza, 1871–1912, Bologna). Italian pianist, pupil of Tofano, Busi and Martucci, appearing from about 1890, from 1898 teacher at the Bologna Liceo and in 1911 Bossi's successor as director there. Wrote the opera Catullo, the prize symphonic poem Alla Fonte del Clitumno, other orchestral pieces, a piano-quartet, a 'cello-sonata, piano-sonatas and pieces, church-music and editions of Bach's clavier-works, Clementi's Gradus, etc.

Mugnone, Leopoldo (Naples, 1858). Excellent Italian conductor, trained at the Naples Conservatory, from about 1885 at the Costanzi in Rome, where he gained such eminence as to lead Verdi to draw him to Milan for the première of Falstaff (1893). He has been foremost in promoting Wagnerian works in Italy. Has written the operas Don Bizarro e le sue Figlie, 1875, Il Birichino, 1892, and Vita Bretonna, 1905.

Mühldorfer, Wilhelm Karl (Gratz, 1836–1919, Cologne). Styrian conductor and composer, trained as an actor at Mannheim (where his father was court-inspector of theaters), from 1855 theater-conductor at Ulm, from 1867 assistant at Leipzig and in 1881–1906 conductor at the Cologne Opera. Wrote the operas Im Kyffhäuser, 1868, Der Commandant von Königstein, 1869, Prinzessin Rebenblüthe, 1879, Der Goldmacher von Strassburg, 1886, and Iolanthe, 1890, music for several plays, the ballets Waldsamkeit, 1869, Aschenbrödel, 1870, and Der Alpenstrauß, 1871, overtures, part-songs and songs.

Mühlfeld, Richard (Salzungen, 1856–1907, Meiningen). Noted Saxon clarinetist, at first trained as violinist and from 1873 playing in the Meiningen court-band, but in 1876 changing to the clarinet (self-taught). In 1884–96 he was leading player at the Bayreuth festivals. Erahms wrote several works especially for him (opp. 114, 115, 120).

Mühling, August (n. Dessau, 1786–1847, Magdeburg). Able Saxon organist and composer, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1809 town-director at Nordhausen and from 1823 at Magdeburg as conductor of the concerts, teacher in the Seminary and organist at the Ulrichskirche (after 1843 at the Cathedral). He was noted as player and improvisator. Wrote the oratorios Abbadona, David, Bonifacius and Die Leidensfeier Jesu, Psalms, motets, many choruses and part-songs, vocal canons, songs, 2 symphonies, 2 overtures, a bassoon-concerto, a quintet for strings and flute, 3 string-quartets, many organ- and piano-pieces. His son Julius (1810–1880) in 1843 succeeded him at the Ulrichskirche and as concert-director.

Mukle, May Henrietta (London, 1880). Gifted English 'cellist, first appearing when but nine, pupil of the Royal Academy, London, and of Hambleton, since about 1900 touring all over the world either as soloist or with chamber-music groups, besides appearing with many orchestras. In 1908 she joined Maud Powell in a Trio of which her sister Anna was the pianist. Besides visiting America often, Australia (1903) and South Africa (1905), in 1918 she assisted at the first chamber-recitals at Honolulu. Has written a few 'cello-pieces. A.

Mulert, Friedrich von (Mitau, 1859). German-Russian 'cellist, pupil of the Petrograd Conservatory, lately professor at the Kiev Music School. Has written 3 'cello-concertos, 2 suites with orchestra (Im alten Stil, Kinderleben), variations, dances, berceuses, etc.

Müller, Adolf [name originally Schmid] (Tolna, 1801–1886, Vienna). Hungarian actor and composer of light stage-works, including 2 operas, about 60 singspiele, over 500 operettas, farces and incidental pieces, a multitude of ephemeral piano-works, etc. From 1828 he was director at the Theater an der Wien in Vienna.

Müller, Adolf (Vienna, 1839–1901, do.), son of the above. From 1875 conductor at the German Opera in Rotterdam and then director of the Theater an der Wien at Vienna. Wrote the operas Heinrich der Goldschmied, Waldmeisters Brautfahrt and Van Dyk and about 10 operettas, including Lady Charlatan, 1894, General Gogo, 1896, and Der Blondin von Namur, 1898.

Müller, August (1810–1867, Darmstadt). Noted double-bassist, long in the Darmstadt court-band with the title of concertmaster. Wrote striking variations, etc.

Müller, August Eberhard (Northeim, 1767–1817, Weimar). Able Hanoverian organist, conductor and composer, pupil of J. C. F. Bach, in 1789–92 at the Ulrichskirche in Magdeburg, then for a time conductor in Berlin, from 1794 at the Nikolaikirche in Leipzig, besides from 1800 assisting J. A. Hiller at the Thomasschule and in 1804 succeeding him as cantor there and in the Thomas- and Nikolaikirchen, and from 1810 court-director at Weimar. Wrote 2 piano- and 11 flute-concertos, a piano-trio, many sonatas for violin, for piano and for organ, organ-suites, chorale-variations and other pieces, several church-cantatas, motets, singspiele, etc., besides a noted piano-method (1805, being 6th ed. of Löhlein's), a flute-method, a guide to Mozart's concertos (with original cadenzas). His piano-method was the basis of Kalkbrenner's (1830). G.

Müller, Bernhard (Sonneberg, 1824–1883, Meiningen). Saxon church-musician, trained at Hildburghausen, from 1850 cantor at Salzungen, leading a noted choir that made tours, and later ducal inspector of school-music.

Müller, Carl Christian (Meiningen, 1831–1914, New York). Saxon theorist and composer, pupil of A. Zöllner, Butzert and the Pfeiffers (Meiningen), migrating to New York in 1854, at first as workman in a piano-factory, then as leader of the orchestra at Barnum's Museum, in 1875–95 as teacher at the College of Music and later at other schools. Wrote a symphony, an orchestral suite, the overture Nathan der Weise, a string-quartet, a violin-sonata, 3 organ-sonatas the choral work Die Kraniche des Ibcus, organ- and piano-pieces, etc., besides translating Sechter's Grundsätze d. Composition (1871, and later eds.), with supplementary tables (1882–93). A.

Müller, Christian. In 1720–70 the leading Dutch organ-maker (Haarlem organ, 1738). G.

Müller, Erich (Dresden, 1892). Saxon historical student, trained at Leipzig University (Ph.D. 1914), author of studies on the Mingotti opera-troupe (1914, '17), Scalabrini (1917), Finazzi (1917), Mraczek (1918) and others in prospect (including letters of Schütz, Gluck, Handel and Haydn), besides in 1919–21 being editor of the Berlin Maske und Palette. In 1917 he conducted the first modern festival at Dresden, for which he prepared a program-book. In 1920 with Kurt Kreiser) he was instrumental in establishing the Hugo Riemann prize at Leipzig.

Müller, Franz Karl Friedrich (Weimar, 1806–1876, do.). Saxon civil official, one of the earliest of Wagner's defenders. Author of Tannhäuser, 1853, Wagner u. d. Musikdrama, 1861, Der Ring d. Nibelungen, 1862, Tristan u. Isolde, 1865, Lohengrin, 1867, and Die Meistersinger, 1869, besides Im Foyer, 1868 (sketches of the Weimar Theater).

Müller, Friedrich (n. Altenburg, 1786–1871, Rudolstadt). Gifted Saxon clarinetist and composer, from 1803 in the Rudolstadt court-band, becoming director in 1831–54, succeeding Eberwein. Wrote 2 symphonies, overtures, 2 clarinet-concertos, 2 concertinos, variations (with strings), a quartet for clarinet and strings, horn-quartets and tertets, variations for bassoon and orchestra, etc.

Müller, Die Gebrüder. Two Quartets, each made up of brothers, those in the second being sons of the leader of the first. All were born at Brunswick, which was the headquarters of the first group.

(1) Sons of Aegidius Christoph Müller (1765-1841), violinist in the Brunswick court-band: Karl Friedrich (1797-1873), Franz Ferdinand Georg (1808-1855), Theodor Heinrich Gustav (1799-1855) and August Theodor (1802-1875). They were trained by their father (Karl also studying with Möser in Berlin and beginning to tour as soloist in 1817), and before 1830 had attained rare perfection in ensemble, though not permitted to appear as a group till 1831 (following a change in the ducal government), then gradually extending their fame throughout Germany and to Vienna, Paris, Holland, Copenhagen, Riga, Petrograd, etc. At Brunswick Georg became court-director, August Theodor symphony-conductor and Karl concertmaster.

(2) Sons of Karl above: Karl (1829-1907, Stuttgart), Hugo (1832-1886), Bernhard (1825-1895, Rostock) and Wilhelm (1834-1897, New York). When the first Quartet was broken up in 1855 by the death of two members, the second at once came into prominence, until 1866 at Meiningen, where Karl was also concertmaster, but with increasing travels besides. From 1866 they followed Karl to Rostock, where he became town-director, but in 1873 the Quartet disbanded, Wilhelm then going to Berlin to play in the court-orchestra and teach at the Hochschule and Karl removing to Stuttgart and later to Hamburg (see below). The second group did not attain the same rank as the first, though for a time quite as popular. At times from 1867, when Karl could not leave Rostock, his place as leader was taken by the young Leopold Auer. Karl (often called Müller-Berghaus from his wife's maiden-name) became noted as the composer of a symphony, the overture Fiesco, a Hungarian violin-concerto, 2 string-quartets, violin- and cello-pieces, an operetta, the cantata Jephthas Tochter, etc. G.

Müller, Hans (Cologne, 1854-1897, Berlin), son of the poet and novelist Wolfgang Müller von Königswinter. Able historical student, trained at Bonn and Leipzig Universities (Ph. D.), with much travel after 1879 and a short period as librarian at Karlsruhe in 1885. From 1886 he taught music-history at the Berlin Hochschule, gaining the title of royal professor in 1889. Author of monographs on Wilhelm von Hirschau (1884), Hucbald (1884) and Mensural Music (1886), besides articles in the Vierteljahrsschrift.

Müller, Heinrich (1631-1675). G.

Müller, Heinrich Fidelis (Fulda, 1827-1905, do.). Rhenish priest, long choirmaster at Co-logne Cathedral, writing Christmas and Passion oratorios, Die heilige Elisabeth, masses, motets, choruses, etc.

Müller, Hermann (Dortmund, 1868). Learned Westphalian priest and church-musician, since 1893 at Paderborn, where, besides other duties, in 1894-1901 he was cathedral-choirmaster. Since 1910 he has been president of the Cäcilienverein and editor of its organs. Has written various articles on historical questions in church-music.

Müller, Ivan (Reval, 1786-1854, Bückeburg). German-Russian clarinetist, from 1809 in Paris, becoming noted as the inventor and maker of improved clarinets (with 13 keys) and also of the new alto-clarinet (to replace the basset-horn). He finally joined the Bückeburg court-band. Wrote 3 quartets for clarinet and strings, a concertante for two clarinets, 6 flute-concertos, clarinet-pieces, etc.

Müller, Johannes (Coblenz, 1801-1858, Berlin). Professor of physiology at Bonn University in 1824-33 and then at Berlin University. Author of monographs on the vocal organs (1837, '39) and sections on voice and hearing in his Handbuch d. Physiologie, 2 vols. 1833-40.

Müller, Karl (n. Erfurt, 1818-1894, Frankfort). Saxon choral conductor, pupil of Götze for a time violinist in the Weimar court-band under Hummel, from 1837 at Düsseldorf associated with Rietz, from 1846 director at Münster and from 1860 conductor of the Cäcilienverein in Frankfort. Wrote overtures, the cantatas Tasso in Sorrent and Rinaldo, etc.

Müller, Karl Wilhelm Ernst (Leipzig, 1866). Saxon organist and composer, trained at Leipzig University and Conservatory, from 1896 singing-teacher at the Realgymnasium there, in 1905-07 cantor at the Andreaskirche and since 1907 organist at the Universitätskirche (in 1916 declining a call to be cathedral-organist at Berlin), besides since 1893 writing for the Zeitung. In 1916 he gained the title of royal professor. Has written a symphony, a symphonic epilogue to Ahasver, 2 orchestral suites (one with chorus), a choral Hymnus, motets, chorale-cantatas, pieces for violin, piano and organ, songs, etc.

Müller, Otto (Augsburg, 1837-1920, Vienna). Bavarian church-musician, trained at Munich University and Conservatory, after activity in Switzerland and at Paris, from 1869 in Vienna, where he was organist and director under P. Heidenreich and later teacher at the Church Music School. Wrote several masses, a Stabat Mater, an a cappella Te Deum, organ-pieces and various chamber-works.

Müller, Peter (n. Hanau, 1791-1877, Langen). Hessian pastor, teacher and composer, from 1817 music-teacher at the Friedberg Seminary and from 1839 pastor at Staden. Wrote the operas Die letzten Tage von Pompeii, 1853, and Claudine von Villa Bella, 7 string-quartets, a quartet, organ-preludes, men's choruses and notable Jugendlieder.

Müller, Richard (Kamenz, 1853). Noted Saxon singing-teacher, educated at Leipzig University (Ph.D.), pupil of Luise Ress, from 1890 teaching at the Dresden Conservatory and Teachers' Seminary and since 1904 active as a private specialist in voice-building.

Müller, Wenzel (Tyrnau, 1767-1835, n. Vienna). Prolific Moravian composer, pupil of Dittersdorf, first composing at twelve, from 1783 theater-conductor at Brünn, from 1786 at Vienna (Marinelli's), from 1808 at Prague and from 1813 at Vienna again (Leopoldstädter Th.), producing hundreds of facile, tuneful works, including about 200 stage-pieces that had wide popularity. His daughter Therese (1791-1876), married in 1813 to the tenor J. C. Grünbaum, was a noted operatic soprano at the Vienna and Berlin Operas. Memoir by Krone, 1906, and see Riemann, Opernhandbuch, 1887. G.

Müller-Berghaus. See under Müller, Gebrüder (2).

Müller-Brunow, Bruno (1853-1890, Leipzig). Vocal teacher in Leipzig, author of Tonbildung oder Gesangsunterricht, 1890 (3d ed. 1901), with the assertion of the 'primary tone' theory as against that of 'registers'.

Müller-Hartung, Karl Wilhelm (Sulza, 1834-1908, Berlin). Thuringian conductor and teacher, pupil of Kühmstedt, from 1857 opera-conductor at Dresden, from 1859 Kühmstedt's successor as music-master at the Eisenach Seminary, from 1865 director of church-music at Weimar, from 1869 opera-conductor there and in 1872 founder of the Orchester- und Musikschule. In 1889 he gave up all but the last and retired in 1903. From 1864 he held the title of royal professor. Wrote good organ-sonatas, church-music, men's choruses, etc., and a text-book in harmony (1879).

Müller-Hermann, Johanna (Vienna, 1878). Austrian composer, pupil of Adler, Zemlinsky and J. B. Förster, becoming teacher at the New Conservatory in Vienna. Has written a Heroische Ouvertüre, a prelude to Ibsen's Brand, a choral symphony (with soloists), the choral work Der sterbende Schwann, various other choral works, a string-quintet, a string-quartet, sonatas for violin and for 'cello, many duets and songs.

Müller-Reuter, Theodor (Dresden, 1858-1919, Leipzig). Saxon conductor and teacher, pupil of the Wiecks, Jul. Otto, Meinardus and the Hoch Conservatory, Frankfurt, from 1879 teacher at the Strasburg Conservatory, from 1887 in Dresden, where from 1888 he led the Orpheus and from 1889 also the Dreissig Singakademie, and from 1893 conductor of the concert-series at Krefeld, where in 1902-18 he was director of the Conservatory, gaining the title of royal professor in 1907. He then lived near Leipzig. Has written the operas Ondolina, 1883, and Der tolle Graf, 1887, the choral works Ruth, Das Lied des Sturmes and Hackelberends Begräbnis, a Pater Noster, many choruses, songs, the orchestral suite Auf dem Lande, orchestral arrangements from Bach, Schubert and Brahms, a piano-trio, various piano-pieces and études, etc. Author of a useful Lexikon d. deutschen Konzert-Litteratur, 1909 (1st vol.), besides studies of works by Beethoven and Liszt and notes on music in the Lower Rhine region.

Müller von der Ocker, Fritz (Brunswick, 1868). North German violinist, pupil of H. Riedel, from about 1890 playing in the Magdeburg orchestra under Kauffmann and becoming leader of the Kitzel Quartetverein and the Volks-Singakademie. Has written the operas Die Nixe, 1907, Lurley, 1912, Jung Joseph, 1913, and Die Nilbräut, an operetta, the choral work Frau Minne, many instrumental pieces, etc.

Mundy, John (?-1630), and William. 16th C. G.

Münnich, Richard (n. Berlin, 1877). Prussian school-musician and historical student, trained at Berlin University (Ph.D. 1902) and pupil of Grabert, since 1908 active in various Berlin institutions. In 1905 he found the lost musical collections of the Johanniss- and Katharinenkirchen at Danzig. Author of a dissertation on Kuhnau, 1902 (I. M. G. Sammelbde.) and an essay on the relation of Riemann's theory to Oettingen and Stumpf, 1909 (in Riemann Festschrift).

Münzer, Georg (Breslau, 1866-1908, Berlin). Silesian writer, educated at Berlin University (Ph.D. 1890), till 1902 teacher and critic at Breslau and then at Berlin. Author of a life of Marschner (1901), analyses of Wagner's Ring and of Liszt's symphonic poems, several essays on the music of the Meistersinger (from 1907), Beiträge zur Konzertgesch. Breslaus, 1890, etc.

Munzinger, Karl (Balsthal, 1842-1911, Bern). Swiss teacher, pupil of A. Walther and the Leipzig Conservatory, from about 1865 director of the Bern Music School and conductor of the Cäcilienverein. Wrote the prize-cantata Murtenschlacht. Sketch by Niggli, 1894.

Muratore, Lucien (Marseilles, 1878). Eminent French operatic tenor, pupil of the Marseilles Conservatory, at first an actor with Réjane and Bernhardt, but from 1902 active in opera at Paris and in 1913 joining the Chicago Opera Company, returning to France for warduty in 1915 and in 1917 singing at Buenos Aires. In 1913 he married the soprano Lina Cavalieri. He has assisted at many premières, including Hahn's Carmélite (1902), Missa's Mugnette (1903), Massenet's Ariane (1906), Bacchus (1909) and Roma (1912), Fevrier's Monna Vanna (1909) and Hüe's Miracle (1910). A.

Muris, Johannes de. 14th C. G.

Murphy, Lambert (Springfield, Mass. 1885). American tenor, pupil of Cushman, Luckstone and Witherspoon, from 1910 taking minor rôles at the Metropolitan, New York, touring with the Boston and Chicago Orchestras and singing often at festivals.

Murschhauser, Franz Xavier Anton (1663-1738). 17th C. G.

Murska, Ilma di (1836-1889, Munich). Brilliant Croatian operatic soprano, pupil of Mme. Marchesi, making her début in 1862 at Florence and becoming rapidly known at Pest, Berlin, Hamburg, Barcelona, London (from 1865), Paris, etc., with a world-tour in 1873-76. About 1880 she came to New York as teacher, but soon returned to Munich. Her voice had wide range and notable flexibility. She was thrice married. G.

Musard, Philippe (Paris, 1793-1859, do.). Noted French dance-musician, pupil of Reicha, from 1833 coming into prominence as leader at various balls and dance-concerts in Paris and from 1840 often also in London. Until his disablement through paralysis in 1852 he was extraordinarily popular both as conductor of his fine orchestra and as composer of effective quadrilles and galops. G.

Musin, Ovide (n. Liège, 1854). Eminent Belgian violinist, trained at the Liège and Paris Conservatories (several prizes), making his début at Spa in 1870 and from 1873 entering upon the touring career, at first on the Continent, in 1877-82 with London as a center, from 1883 in America and from 1892 visiting Australia, New Zealand, China, Japan, etc. In 1897-1908 he was professor at the Liège Conservatory (succeeding Thomson), but with annual sojourns in New York. Since 1908 he has directed his own school in New York. He has received numerous honors and decorations. In 1891 he married Annie Louise Hodges-Tanner (1856-1921), an accomplished singer from Wisconsin, who joined him in many of his later tours. Has written many striking violin-solos, many transcriptions, The Belgian School of the Violin, 4 vols. 1916 (uniting his own and Léonard's methods), etc., besides autobiographic Memories. G. A.

Musiol, Robert Paul Johann (Breslau, 1846-1903, Fraustadt). Silesian writer, from 1873 teacher and cantor at Röhrsdorf, near Fraustadt (Posen), retiring in 1891. Author of a dictionary of musical terms, a music-history catechism (1877, 3d ed. by R. Höfmann, 1905), short lives of Fritze (1883), Theodor Körner (1893) and Brückler (1896), and editor of dictionaries by Tonger (Grüninger) and Jul. Schuberth (10th ed. 1877), besides many articles in magazines.

Mussorgsky, Modest Petrovitch (Karev, 1835-1881, Petrograd). Eminent Russian (Ukrainian) pianist and composer, mostly self-taught. His original ambition was military and it was only after entering on service with a famous regiment that meeting Dargomizky brought him under the influence of Cui and Balakirev in 1857. Resigning then from the army, he struggled with poverty and from 1863 was forced to support himself by clerical work in one of the government offices in Petrograd. Meanwhile he steadily sought to advance in ambitious composition, not always with much success, owing to his imperfect training, but with a growing display of genuine artistic power, often bitter and gloomy, but intensely passionate and essentially earnest. Though undertaking works in the largest forms, he is counted at his best in his songs and some other short works. In everything the national color and flavor are conspicuous. His works include Operas—Boris Godunov, 1874 (his dramatic masterpiece), Chovantchina, 1885 (left almost complete in vocal score, finished and orchestrated by Rimsky-Korsakov), and fragments of Salammô (1863), The Marriage (1868) and The Fair at Sorochinsk (1887). Choral works—The Overthrow of Sennachireb, 1867, Jesus Narinus, 1877. Also a chorus from Edipus. For orchestra—Intermezzo in modo classico in B min.; Scherzo in B; Fantasia, Night on the Bare Mountain; Turkish March. For piano—Pictures from the Exhibition (10 sketches based on pictures by the architect Hartmann); Méditation; Une Larme; The Seamstress; On the South Shore of the Crimea; In the Country; A Child's Joke; Intermezzo. Songs—Saul, 1863; Night: Peasant Cradle-Song; Savishna (The Idiot's Song), 1865; Gopak; The Wish; The Seminarist, 1866; Mushrooming; Hebrew Song; The Little Feast; The Goat; The Maggie; The Swaggerer; The Classicist, 1867; The Orphan; The Nurse and Child; The Gallery 1870 (pamphlet); The Nursery, 1868-70 (7 pictures of child-life); Left Behind; No Sunlight, 1874-75 (cycle of 6); Dances of Death, 1875 (4). Also the posthumous The Quiet Heights. Oh, the Honor!; Dawn; The Vision; Down the Don; The Dnieper; The Flea; Callistratus; The Traveler, Memoirs by Stassov, 1881, Trisonov, 1893 (both in Europ. Bote). Baskin, 1887, P. d'Alheim, 1896 (3d ed.), Mme. Olenin-d'Alheim, 1908, Calvocoressi, 1908, and Montagu-Nathan, 1917, and see Rivières, Études, 1911, and article by Newmarch in Mus. Quarterly, 1913. G.

Mustel, Victor (Havre, 1815-1890, Paris). Famous French harmonium-maker, from 1844 employed in Alexandre's factory and from 1853 developing his own business, which did not prosper greatly until 1866, but then gained international renown. His special inventions include improvements in 'expression' through knee-levers, the 'harpe éolienne' (a celeste-effect produced by high additional tones), the 'typophone' (an instrument with a graduated set of tuning-forks [cf. the adiaphon, the celesta, etc.]) and the 'metaphone' (a device to soften the harmonium-tone by a sliding leather-shutter). G.

Müthel, Johann Gottfried (n. Lauenburg, 1720-after 1790, Riga). Noted North German organist and composer, pupil of Kunzen, J. S. Bach and Altnikol, in 1738-50 in court-service at Schwerin, from 1753 conductor for Baron von Vietinghoff at Riga and from 1753 also organist at the Hauptkirche (at first as assistant). He was one of Bach's last pupils and was present when he died. His skill as player and composer was widely recognized (as by Burney), though his style was severe and often difficult. Wrote 4 clavier-concertos, a duet for 2 pianos, 3 sonatas, variations and other pieces, a book of odes and songs, etc. G.

Muzio, Claudia (Pavia, 1892). Gifted Italian operatic soprano, familiar with the stage from childhood (her father being stage-manager in New York and London), pupil of Mme. Casaloni in piano, harp and voice, from 1912 appearing in all Italian cities, in South America, Paris, London (1914) and New York (since 1916). She sang at the premières of Zandonai's Melenis (1912) and Carini's Baronessa (1913). A.

Muzio, Emanuele (n. Parma, 1825-?). Italian conductor and composer, pupil of Provesi and Verdi, from 1852 conducting Italian opera in Brussels, London and New York and after 1875 teaching in Paris (Carlotta Patti and Miss Kellogg among his pupils). Wrote the operas Giovanna la Pazza, 1852, Claudia, 1853, Le Due Regine, 1856, and La Sorrentina, 1857, piano-pieces and many songs. Memoir by Belforti, 1895.

Myer, Edmund John (York Springs, Pa. 1846). American singing-teacher, since 1878 active in New York, with summer-classes at Chautauqua, N. Y., and at Seattle, Wash. Author of manuals on vocalics (from 1883). A.

Myrberg, August Melcher (Gothenburg, 1825-?). Swedish choral conductor and composer, trained at Gothenburg University (Ph.D. 1854) and in Germany, in 1852-90 active in Stockholm and Upsala as director of various singing-societies, including from 1865 the Per Bricole (following Söderman). Wrote the choral works Kung Hakes Död, Skördefesten, etc., part-songs, many songs and some instrumental pieces.

Mysliweczek, Josef (n. Prague, 1737-1781, Rome). Able Bohemian composer, pupil of Habermann, Segert and Pescetti, beginning to write at Prague about 1760 and from 1764 gaining much popularity in Italy. Wrote about 30 operas (from 1764), almost wholly for Italy, 4 oratorios, 6 symphonies (on the months January to June), violin-concertos, 12 quartets, 6 trios, clavier-sonatas (highly praised by Mozart), arias, etc. G.

Mysz-Gmeiner, Lula (Kronstadt, 1876). Eminent Transylvanian contralto, pupil of Rud. Lassel, G. Walter and Mmes. Herzog-Welti, Gerster and Lilli Lehmann, making her début at Berlin in 1900 and soon becoming noted in concert and song-recital in all the principal European cities. In 1900 she married the Austrian naval officer Ernst Mysz. A sister and brother are also accomplished singers and another sister is an able pianist.

Naaf, Anton E. August (1850–1918, Vienna). Bohemian writer, from about 1875 editing various musical journals, including the Vienna Lyra (from 1882). Wrote lyrics used by Abt, Speidel, etc.

Nachbaur, Franz (n. Friedrichshafen, 1835–1903, Munich). Gifted Württemberger operatic tenor, pupil of Pischek, Orth and Lamperti, from about 1855 touring in French towns with a German troupe, gradually becoming known in Germany and in 1866–90 in high favor at the Munich Opera, in 1878 visiting Italy and in 1882 England. He sang the rôle of Walther at the première of Die Meistersinger (1868) and that of Froh in Das Rheingold (1869). G.

Nachéz, Tivadar (Pest, 1859). Brilliant Hungarian violinist, pupil of Sabatil, Joachim and Léonard, from 1880 touring from Paris as a center, in 1889 settling in London and since 1916 living at Santa Barbara, Cal. Has written 2 violin-concertos, a suite, effective Hungarian rhapsodies and dances, many other pieces and arrangements (including concertos by Vivaldi and Nardini), a Requiem and songs. G. A.

Nadaud, Gustave (Roubaix, 1820–1893, Paris). Popular French poet and composer, writing over 300 chansons, words and music, and 4 operettas. His wit was often ironic or satirical, with keen political allusions. Memoir by Vaillart, 1911.

Nadermann, François Joseph (Paris, 1773–1835, do.). Noted French harpist, pupil of Krumpholz, from 1816 in court-service and from 1825 professor at the Conservatory. Wrote 2 harp-concertos, quartets for two harps, violin and 'cello, trios, duets, sonatas, etc. He and his brother Henri succeeded to the harp-making business of their father, but clung to the old patterns that Érard was making obsolete.

Nagel, Wilibald (Mülheim an der Ruhr, 1863). Rhenish music-historian, educated in Berlin and at Zurich University (Ph.D.), from about 1885 lecturer at the latter, in 1893–96 making researches in England, in 1898–1913 teacher at the Technical High School at Darmstadt, then at Zurich, in 1917–21 editor of the Neue Musikzeitung at Stuttgart and later teacher at the Hochschule für Musik there. Author of a study of the Genoeva-legend in drama and music (1888), Gesch. d. Musik in England, 2 vols. 1894–97 (to 1700), Annalen d. englischen Hofmusik, 1509–1649, 1894, a life of Brahms and analyses of his sonatas (1915), Gesch. d. Musik am Darmstädter Hofe, 1579–1800, 1901, Beethoven u. seine Klaviersonaten, 2 vols. 1903–05, a life of Graupner (1909, I. M. G. Sammelbde.), Graupner als Sinfoniker, 1912, analyses of Brahms' piano-sonatas (1915) and a life of Wilh. Mauke (1919), besides many articles. He edited the 6th ed. of Köstlin's Geschichte (1910). G.

Nägeli, Johann Hans Georg (Wetzikon, 1773–1836, do.). Influential Swiss publisher, writer and promoter of popular education in singing. In 1791 he started the first music-selling and circulating establishment in Switzerland, soon adding the publication of many useful editions (especially works by Bach, Handel, Beethoven, etc.). From about 1805 he began efforts in Zurich to develop popular singing and to train children. Adopting soon the pedagogical principles of Pestalozzi, he became one of the earliest advocates of school-music as a specialty, for which he drafted manuals and collections. In 1807 he visited Paris and in 1819–25 lectured often in Germany (sometimes getting into controversy, as with Thibaut). He founded a Swiss Society for Music-Cultivation, of which he was long president, and was prominent in other associations. In 1833 Bonn Univ. gave him an honorary doctorate. Wrote a large number of choruses and songs for popular or educational use. Author of various text-books in singing, popular Vorlesungen über Musik, 1826, and Der Streit zwischen d. alten u. neuen Musik, 1827 (against Thibaut). Memoirs by an unknown writer, 1837, Ott-Usteri, 1838, Von Bieri, 1844, Augustin Keller, 1848, and Schneebeli, 1873. On his relations with Beethoven, see Kling, 1912. G.

Nagiller, Matthäus (Münster, 1815–1874, Innsbruck). Tyrolese composer, pupil of the Vienna Conservatory, from 1842 teaching at Paris, Berlin and Munich, and conducting choral societies at Bozen and Innsbruck. Wrote the opera Friedrich mit der leeren Tasche, 1859, music for Widmann's Nausikaa, symphonies, overtures, etc.

Nagler, Franziskus (n. Riesa, 1873). Saxon choral conductor and composer, trained as choirboy at Leipzig and Dresden, later at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1898 organist and cantor at Limbach and since 1902 at Leisnig. Has written the choral works Hildegunde and Die heilige Nacht (original text), many striking choruses, motets, small church-cantatas, sing-spiele, children's festivals, songs, etc.

Naich, Hubert. 16th C. G.

Nanino, Giovanni Maria (?1545–1607), and Giovanni Bernardino (?1550–1623?). 16th C. G.

Nantier-Didié, Constance Betsy Rosabella (Île de la Réunion, 1831–1867, Madrid). French operatic mezzo-soprano, from 1849 heard at Turin, Paris and other French cities, in 1853–64 regularly at London, but with trips to Paris, Russia, Spain and America (1856). G.

Napier, William (?1740–1812, London). Scottish music-publisher in London (for a time also violinist in the court-band) from about 1770, issuing many ballad-operas, a noted collection of Scottish songs (1790–94) and many instrumental works of the Mannheim school. G.

Napoleão, Arthur (Oporto, 1843), son of an Italian father and Portuguese mother. Precocious Portuguese pianist, pupil of his father, playing at six in Oporto, at seven at Lisbon, at nine in London, at ten in Paris, at eleven at Berlin, in 1857-58 in South America and in 1858-61 in the United States and the West Indies, then returning to Europe, but giving up the virtuoso-career in 1866 and in 1868 removing to Rio de Janeiro, where he founded the leading South American music- and piano-selling business. In 1876 and 1880 he was conductor at anniversary festivals. Has written some piano-pieces. G, A.

Napoleatano, Danielo (n. Nola, 1868). Italian composer of the opera Il Profeta di Korasan, 1893, and others not yet given, the hymn Igea, 1900, etc.

Nápravnik, Eduard Frantsovitch (n. Königsgrätz, 1839-1915, Petrograd). Eminent Bohemian conductor and composer, trained at Prague in the Organ School and the Maydl Institute, from 1856 teaching at the latter and from 1861 director for Prince Yussopov at Petrograd. From 1863 he became organist at the imperial theaters and assistant to Liadov (the elder) as conductor at the Opera, succeeding him in 1869, besides in 1870-82 directing the concerts of the Musical Society (succeeding Balakirev), not to mention much other work as concert-conductor. Up to 1898 he had led over 3000 performances at the Opera, including 62 premières. His administration of the Opera was conspicuously successful. The orchestra became one of the best in Europe and the repertory was made to represent both native and the finest of foreign composers. In addition, he showed himself an industrious and altogether competent composer, though of no special originality. His works include Operas—The Nijni-Novgorodians, 1868, Harold, 1886, Dubrovsky, 1895, Francesca da Rimini, 1902. Music for Tolstoy's Don Juan.

For orchestra—4 symphonies (including The Demon, 1879); the overtures Vlasta and Solennelle; the symphonic poem The East; 6 Dances Nationales; 2 marches; a suite; Pièces Espagnoles; 2 Pièces Russes. With piano: Concerto-symphonie; Fantaisie Russes. With violin: Suite; Fantaisie.

Chamber-music—string-quintet; 3 string-quartets; piano-quartet; 2 piano-trios; violin-sonata; 2 suites for 'cello; minor pieces for violin or 'cello.

For piano—5 Musical Pictures; 4 Bagatelles; Dance Suite; various small pieces.

Vocal works—13 a cappella choruses for mixed voices; 3 choruses for men's voices. Ballads (with orchestra): The Voyagode, The Cossack, Tamara. About 35 solo-songs; 4 duets.

Biographies by Weymann, 1888, and Find-eisen, 1898. G, A.

Narbaez, Luiz de. 16th C.

Nardini, Pietro (n. Montelupo, 1722-1793, Florence). Eminent Italian violinist, the ablest pupil of Tartini, in 1753-67 court-player at Stuttgart, then at Leghorn or Padua (with the dying Tartini) and from 1770 court-director at Florence. He excelled in purity and sweetness of tone, besides having grace and finish as a composer. Wrote 6 violin-concertos, 6 string-quartets, 6 trios for flutes and bass, 6 violin-sonatas and 6 for two violins, etc. (examples published by Alard, David and Jensen). Memoir by Raimondo, 1793, and see Rangoni, Saggio sul Gusto della Musica, 1770, and Altmann in the Kretzschmar Festschrift, 1918. G.

Nares, James (n. Staines, 1715-1783, London). English organist, pupil of Gates, Croft and Pepusch, for a time assistant to Pigott at St. George's, Windsor, from 1734 organist at York Minster (following Salisbury) and from 1756 Greene's successor as organist and composer at the Chapel Royal (also choirmaster in 1757-80). Mus.D. of Cambridge Univ. in 1757. Wrote the ode The Royal Pastoral, 1767, over 50 anthems, 2 services, 6 organ-fugues, many catches, canons and glees (collection, c. 1780), many lessons for harpsichord, methods for harpsichord and for singing, etc. G.

Naret-Koning, Johann Joseph David (Amsterdam, 1838-1905, Frankfort). Able Dutch violinist, pupil of Buntin and David, from 1859 concertmaster in the Mannheim orchestra and also conductor of the Musikverein and Sängerbund, and from 1871 concertmaster at the Frankfort Opera and second in the noted Heermann Quartet. He received the title of royal professor in 1896.

Narodny, Ivan (Werro, 1874). Russian critic, from 1893 active in Petrograd, from 1905 in Berlin and later in New York, where he has written for Musical America and contributed an essay on the dance to The Art of Music, 1917. In 1908 he married the concert-soprano Maria Mieler (b. Livonia, 1888). A.

Nasolini, Sebastiano (Piacenza, 1768-1816?, Naples). Italian composer of nearly 40 operas produced at several Italian cities and at Dresden and London (from 1788).

Nassare, Pääbo (1664-?). 17th C.

Natale, Pompeo. 17th C.

Nathan, Isaac (Canterbury, 1791-1864, Sydney). English (Jewish) composer of songs and the ballad-operas Sweethearts and Wives, 1823, The Alcaid, 1824, etc. In 1815-22 he set Byron's Hebrew Melodies and other poems. In 1841 he removed to Australia, where he taught singing and edited a periodical. Author of Musurgia Vocalis, 1823, and a life of Malibran (1836). G.

Natorp, Bernhard Christian Ludwig (Werden, 1774-1846, Münster). Westphalian clergyman, from 1798 at Essen, from 1808 at Potsdam and from 1819 at Münster. He was influential with Nägeli, Naue and others in furthering popular education in singing, especially in schools and churches. Author of text-books (1813-20), collections of church-melodies (1822) and chorales (1829, preludes and interludes by Rinck), and essays on congregational song (1817, '22), besides a work on Rinck's preludes (1834).

Nau, Maria Dolores Benedicta Josefina (New York, 1818-?). Spanish-American operatic soprano, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1836 singing at the Paris Opéra, at first in minor rôles, but after 1844 in leading ones. In 1842-44 she was absent in the provinces and at Brussels and London, in 1849-50 was at the Princess' Theatre in London and in 1848-49 and in 1854-55 made notable tours in America. In 1856 she retired. G.

Naudin, Emilio (Parma, 1823-1890, Boulogne). French-Italian operatic tenor, pupil of Panizza, making his début about 1845 at Cremona and gradually becoming known outside of Italy, as at Vienna, Petrograd, London (from 1858), Paris and Madrid. Meyerbeer designated him to sing at the première of L'Africaine (1865). His repertory was extensive, including the earlier of Wagner's works. G.

Naue, Johann Friedrich (Halle, 1787-1858, do.). Saxon organist and teacher, pupil of Türk, from 1813 organist and music-director at Halle University (Mus.D. of Jena Univ. in 1835). His inherited fortune was spent in gathering a fine musical library (partly sold to the Berlin Library) and in promoting large festivals at Halle in 1829 and '35. He coöperated with Nägeli, Natorp and others in stimulating interest in music in schools and churches. Author of a new musical church-service (1818) and a Choralbuch (1829, with historical introduction), besides some church-music, a choral march and piano-pieces.

Nauenburg, Gustav (Halle, 1803-after 1862, do.). Saxon baritone and vocal teacher, pupil of Bernhard Klein, from 1832 active at Halle, where Franz wrote several songs for him. Besides good vocal exercises, he wrote much for the Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung, Cäcilia, etc., and Ideen zu einer Reform d. christl. Kirchenmusik, 1854.

Naumann, Emil (Berlin, 1827-1888, Dresden), grandson of the following. Noted Prussian music-historian and church-composer, pupil of Schnyder von Wartensee, Mendelssohn and the Leipzig Conservatory, besides study at Bonn University, at once undertaking composition in large forms, with such success that from 1856 he was director at the court-church in Berlin, in 1873 removing to Dresden and lecturing at the Conservatory and in 1880 going to Leipzig to succeed Rust as organist at the Thomaskirche. Ph.D. of Berlin Univ. and from 1869 royal professor. Wrote the oratorio Christus der Friedensbote, 1848, the cantata Der Zerstörung Jerusalems, the operas Judith and Loreley, 1889, the singspiel Die Mühlenheze, a mass, a Dank- und Jubelcantate, 1866, Psalms for the entire church-year, motets, songs, etc., besides some works for orchestra. His chief books are Die Einführung d. Psalmengesangs in d. evangel. Kirche, 1856, Die Tonkunst in d. Kulturgeschichte, 2 vols. 1869-70, Deutsche Tondichter, 1871 (6th ed. 1895), Italianische Tondichter, 1876 (2d ed. 1883), and Illustrierte Musikgeschichte, 1880-85 (rewritten and extended by Eugen Schmitz, 1908, '18), but from 1872 he wrote much besides, including Das goldene Zeitalter d. Tonkunst in Venedig, 1876, Musikdrama oder Oper?, 1876 (anti-Wagner), Zukunftsmusik u. d. Musik d. Zukunft; 1877, Der moderne musikal. Zopf, 1880, etc. G.

Naumann, Johann Gottlieb (n. Dresden, 1741-1801, do.). Prolific and once-famous Saxon composer, gaining most of his training in Italy (from Tartini, Pitscher and Martini), from 1763 titular court-composer at Dresden, from 1776 court-director and after 1786 'oberkapellmeister'. But he made many sojourns abroad, as in Italy in 1765-68 and '72-74, at Stockholm in 1776-78 and '82-84, at Paris in 1790 and at Berlin in 1793 and '97. In 1774 he declined an alluring call to Berlin and in 1786 another to Copenhagen. As composer he continued the style of Hasse and Graun without adding much of significance, but he was in high repute for the time. Wrote 23 operas (from 1763), including Cora, 1780?, the ballet Medea, 1789, over 10 oratorios, including Davidde in Terebinto, 1793, 21 masses, several Psalms, a Te Deum, an excellent setting of Klopstock's Vater Unser, many motets and other church-works, the elegy Klopstocks Grab, many vocal trios, duets and solos, 18 symphonies, sonatas for piano, for violin and for harmonium, etc. Memoirs by Meissner, 1803-04 (2d ed. 1824), E. Naumann, 1841 (in Allgem. Deutsche Biographie), G. Schweitzer, 1843-45, G. H. von Schubert, 1844, Nestler, 1901, and Engländer, 1916. Catalogue of works by Mannstein, 1841. G.

Naumann, Karl Ernst (Freiberg, 1832-1910, Jena), grandson of the above. Saxon organist and chamber-composer, trained at Leipzig University (Ph.D. 1858) and under Hauptmann, Richter, Wenzel, Langer and Joh. Schneider, in 1860-1906 music-director and organist at Jena University, from 1877 holding the title of professor. Wrote a serenade for strings and wind (nonet), 2 string-quintets, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, a viola-sonata and other chamber-pieces, with a Pastorale for small orchestra. Edited works by Bach and Haydn. Memoir by F. Stein, 1910 (in I. M. G. Zeitschr.)

Nauwach, Johann. 17th C.

Nava, Gaetano (Milan, 1802-1875, do.). Famous Italian singing-teacher, pupil of the Milan Conservatory and from 1837 professor there. Wrote a method, many solfeggi and vocalises and some church-music. Among his pupils was Santley. G.

Navál, Franz (Laibach, 1865). Austrian operatic tenor, pupil of Gänsbacher, appearing first at Frankfort in 1888, in 1895-98 at the Berlin Opera and then at the Vienna Opera (except in 1903-04 at the Metropolitan, New York).

Navrátil, Karl (Vienna, 1836-1914, do.). Austrian lawyer, civil official and composer, pupil in theory of Nottebohm, becoming famous as a teacher (Schütt, Rückauf and Mme. Essipov among his pupils). Wrote an overture, other works for orchestra, 2 piano-quintets, 2 string-quartets, 2 piano-trios, sonatas for violin and for 'cello, a mass, Psalm 30, motets, songs and piano-pieces.

Navrátil, Karl (Prague, 1867). Gifted Bohemian composer, pupil of Ondříček and Adler, since about 1890 active at Prague. Has written the operas Hermann and Salambo, a symphony, the symphonic poems Der weisse Berg, Lipany, Jan Hus, Zizka and Zalko, concertos for violin and for piano, a viola-sonata, men's choruses and many songs. Author of a life of Smetana, essays on Hugo Wolf, etc. He is an honorary member of the Dutch Maatschappij. G.

Naylor, Edward Woodall (Scarborough, 1867), son of the following. English organist, pupil of his father and the Royal College, London, from 1889 organist in London churches and since 1898 at Emmanuel College, Cambridge. Has written the opera The Angelus, 1909 (Ricordi prize), the cantata Arthur the King, 1902, the dramatic scena Merlin and the Gleam, 1892, a piano-trio, services, anthems and part-songs. Author of Shakespeare and Music, 1896, an analysis of the Fitzwilliam book of virginal-pieces (1905) and various essays for the Musical Association, in the Musical Antiquary, etc. Mus.D. of Cambridge Univ. in 1897. G.

Naylor, John (n. Leeds, 1838–1897, at sea). Able English organist, pupil of S. S. Wesley and R. S. Burton, from 1856 organist at churches in Scarborough and after 1883 at York Minster, besides from 1892 conducting the Musical Society there. Mus.D. of Oxford Univ. in 1872. Wrote the cantatas Jeremiah, 1884, The Brazen Serpent, 1887, Meribah, 1890, and Manna, 1893, services, anthems, organ-pieces, tunes, part-songs, etc. He died en route for Australia. G.

Naylor, Sidney (London, 1841–1893, do.). English pianist and conductor, from about 1860 organist in various London churches, but chiefly known as concert-player, as skillful accompanist and (from 1874, when he joined Carl Rosa) as conductor of concerts and opera. From 1870 he was much associated with the tenor Sims Reeves. In 1868 he married the soprano Blanche Cole. Wrote some church-music.

Neale, John and William (?–1769?), father and son. Pioneer music-publishers in Dublin (from about 1735) and managers of many concerts. They built the Musick Hall where in 1741–42 Handel gave memorable concerts. G.

Neate, Charles (London, 1784–1877, Brighton). Gifted English pianist, pupil of Wm. Sharp, Field, Woelf and Winter, besides some intimacy with Beethoven in 1815. He first appeared in London in 1800, from 1813 was active in the new Philharmonic Society and from 1817 was well known as player and teacher. Wrote a quintet for piano, wind and bass, 2 piano-trios, a 'cello-fantasia, 2 piano-sonatas, etc. G.

Nebelong, Johan Hendrik (Copenhagen, 1847). Fine Danish organist, pupil of Holm, Thielemann and W. H. Barth, since 1864 active in Copenhagen, from 1881 at the Johannes Kirke. From 1867 he gave notable organ-concerts. In 1885 he founded the Organists' Union and a pension-fund.

Nedbal, Oscar (Tábor, 1874). Talented Bohemian violist, conductor and composer, trained at the Prague Conservatory, in 1891–1906 playing in the famous Bohemian Quartet (with K. Hoffmann, Suk and Wihan), in 1896–1903 also conductor of the Philharmonic in Prague and in 1906–19 conductor of the Tonkünstler-Orchester in Vienna and at times of the Volksoper. Has written the effective operettas Die keusche Barbara, 1910, Polenblut, 1913, Das Winzerfest, 1917, Die schöne Saskia, 1917, and Eriwan, 1918, the ballets Der faule Hans, 1902, Grossmütterchens Märchenschätze, 1908, Prinzessin Hyazintha, 1911, Des Teufels Grossmutter, 1912, and Andersen, 1914, an orchestral Scherzo-Caprice, a suite, a violin-sonata, piano-variations, other pieces for violin and for piano, songs, etc. G. (and see under Bohemian Quartet).

Neeb, Heinrich (n. Giessen, 1807–1878, Frankfurt). Hessian teacher, pupil of P. Müller and Aloys Schmitt, from about 1835 conducting several organizations in Frankfurt (including the Teutonia). Wrote the operas Domenico Baldi, Der Cid, 1857, Die schwarzen Jäger, 1858, and Rudolf von Habsburg, the cantata Das deutsche Lied, several effective ballads, many songs, some string-quartets, piano-pieces, etc.

Neeffe, Christian Gottlob (Chemnitz, 1748–1798, Dessau). Saxon conductor, pupil of J. A. Hiller, in 1776–77 working in theaters in Leipzig and Dresden, then with Seyler's and the Grossmann-Helmuth troupes, settling at Bonn in 1779, where in 1781 he took Van der Eeden's place as court-organist and later succeeded him as director at both chapel and theater, with the young Beethoven as deputy and pupil, but in 1785–94 was subordinated to Reicha and finally went to Dessau as theater-conductor. Wrote 8 stage-works, the ode Dem Unendlichen and others, several symphonies or partitas, a double concerto for piano and violin, 24 piano-sonatas (some with violin), etc. Autobiography in Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung, 1799, and memoir by Lewy, 1902. G.

Nef, Karl (St. Gall, 1873). Swiss historical student, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory and University (Ph.D. 1896), in 1898–1909 editor of the Basel Musikzeitung and since 1900 lecturer or professor at the University there. Author of a thesis on the Swiss Collegia Musica (1897) a life of F. F. Huber (1898), Zur Gesch.d. deutschen Instrumentalmusik, 1902 (later 17th cent.), Basel in d. Musikgesch. 1902, Die Musik im Kanton St. Gallen 1803–1903, 1903, a catalogue of instruments in the Basel Museum (1906), the Festschrift of the Basel Congress of the I. M. G. (1907), a bibliography of Swiss books about music (1908), an introduction to music-history (1920), a Gesch.d. Symphonie u. Suite, 1921, and many essays in periodicals. He also edited some of Rosenmüller's sonatas for the German Denkmäler.

Neff, Fritz (Durlach, 1873–1904, Munich). Gifted, but short-lived, South German composer, pupil of Thuille and Mottl, writing the choral works Ein schön deutsch Reiterlied (men's voices), Chor der Toten, Schmied Schmerz and Die Weihe der Nacht, and some songs (including Die Polenschenke for bass with orchestra).

Neisser, Arthur (Berlin, 1875). Prussian critic and writer, pupil of R. J. Eichberg, W. Berger, Lerch and Wolfrum (Ph.D. of Munich Univ. 1900), since 1900 correspondent in Paris for German papers, then in Italy. Author of short lives of Verdi, Massenet, Mahler and Goldmark, an Opernführer, an Entwicklungsgesch. d. deutschen Musik seit 60 Jahren, 1911, and a translation of the text of Cilèa's Gloria into German.

Neithardt, August Heinrich (Schleiz, 1793–1861, Berlin). Able Saxon bandmaster and choral conductor, from 1813 in military service as oboist, becoming bandmaster of the Gardejäger Battalion in 1816–22 and of the Kaiser Franz Regiment in 1822–40, doing much for the improvement of military music. In 1843 he was made trainer for the Domchor at Berlin, the first steps toward which had been taken under Mendelssohn in 1842, and from 1845 was its efficient director, soon giving it an international reputation. In 1846 he visited Petrograd and in 1857 Rome in search of music and points of administration. For it he edited a continuation of Commer's Musica Sacra (vols. v, vii, xii). Wrote much excellent military music, men's choruses and songs, besides the opera Manfred und Juliette, 1834. G.

Neitzel, Otto (Falkenburg, 1852–1920, Cologne). Able Pomeranian pianist, conductor and composer, trained at the Kullak Academy and Berlin University (Ph.D. 1875), from 1875 touring with Lucca and Sarasate, from 1878 director of the Strasburg Musikverein and from 1879 also of the Opera, from 1881 teacher at the Moscow Conservatory, and from 1885 at the Cologne Conservatory, besides writing for the Zeitung there. In 1919 he was made a member of the Berlin Academie. He appeared in the United States as pianist, conductor and lecturer in 1906–07. Wrote the operas Angela, 1887, Dido, 1888 (original text), Der alte Dessauer, 1889, Die Barbarina, 1904, Der Richter von Kaschau, 1916 (original text) and Walhall in Not, 1905 ('satyrspiel'), recitatives for Nicolai's Lustige Weiber, the cantatas Vaterland and Priesterwald, a piano-concerto, a capriccio for piano and orchestra, Das Leben ein Traum for violin and orchestra, etc. Author of an opera Führer (3 vols. 1890–93, 4th ed. 1908), a life of Saint-Saëns (1898), Beethovens Sinfonien nach ihrem Stimmungsgehalt erläutert, 1901, Aus meiner Musikantenmappe, 1913, translations of several opera-librettos and (with L. Riemann) annotations to Hupfeld's catalogue of phonorolls (1909). Biography in Dette's analysis of Die Barbarina (1913).

Nejedlý, Zdenek (Leitomischl, 1878). Eminent Bohemian musicologist, trained by Fibich and at Prague University (Ph.D. 1900), in 1905 becoming lecturer and from 1909 professor at the latter, besides editing the journals Smetana and Hudební Slovník. Author of lives of Fibich (1901), Smetana (1902), Hostinsky (1907), J. F. Förster (1910) and Mahler (1912, a careful monograph), Wagner (1917), Novák (1921) and Smetana (1922), works on Smetana's operas (1909), on later Czechic operas (1911), on Beethoven's string-quartets (1911), and on Strauss' Rosenkavalier (1911) and Ariadne auf Naxos (1912), a catechism of Czechic music (1903), a history of early music in Bohemia (3 vols. 1904, '97, '13 [to the 15th cent.]), and a monograph on Závěs [14th cent.] (1905, I. M. G. Sammelbde.).

Nekes, Franz (n. Essen, 1844–1914, Aix-la-Chapelle). Important Rhenish priest and church-musician, for many years (till 1910) cathedral-choirmaster at Aix and instructor in the Organists' School. Wrote many masses (O crux ave, Jubilate, S. Foillani, etc.), a Passion, offertories, many motets, antiphons and men's choruses. He was a contributor to the Gregoriusblatt.

Nelle, Wilhelm (n. Hameln, 1849–1918, Münster). Hanoverian clergyman, pupil in music of Franz and Otto Scherzer, from 1874 holding charges in Westphalia and the Rhineland. In 1895 he founded the Kirchengesangsverein for that section and continued its president, besides being active in many other ways. Editor of a notable Choralbuch, 1892 (with Hollenberg, 3d ed. 1908), Festmelodien d. Kirchenjahres, 1895 (2d ed. 1904), and Gesch. d. deutschen evangel. Kirchenliedes, 1904.

Neuna, Pomponio. 16th C. G.

Nepomuceno, Alberto (Ceará, 1864). Brazilian composer, pupil of Herzogenberg, Kleffel and Guilman, since about 1895 active at Rio Janeiro, where he is director of the Conservatory. Has written the operas Arthemis and Abul, pieces with orchestra for violin, 'cello or piano, a National Hymn (prize, 1891). He has also published Brazilian folk-songs. A.

Neri, Filippo (1515–1595). 16th C.

Neri, Massimiliano. 17th C.

Nérini, Émile (b. 1882). French composer of the short operas Manoël, 1905, Le Soir de Waterloo, 1910, L'Épreuve Dernière, 1912, and music for Les Trois Baisers (1909) and Maliarda (1912).

Neruda, Franz (Brünn, 1843–1915, Copenhagen), brother of Wilma below. Eminent Moravian 'cellist, pupil of his father (cathedral-organist), beginning to tour with his sister when but a child, in 1864–76 playing in the court-orchestra at Copenhagen, from 1868 founder and head of the Kammermusikverein there and from 1892 conductor of the Musikverein (following Gade) and also of the Stockholm Musikverein. He gained the title of royal professor in 1894. Wrote the orchestral suite Aus dem Böhmerwald, Slovakische Märsche for orchestra, a 'cello-concerto, a string-quartet, pieces for 'cello, for organ and for piano, and songs. G.

Neruda, Johann Baptist Georg (n. Prague, 1707-1780, Dresden). Bohemian violinist, in 1750-72 concertmaster in the court-band at Dresden. Wrote an opera, symphonies, chamber-music, etc. G.

Neruda, Wilma Maria Franziska (Brünn, 1839-1911, Berlin), sister of Franz above. Eminent Moravian violinist, pupil of her father and Jansa, making her début at seven in Vienna and for years constantly on tour throughout Europe (in England from 1849), especially in Russia and from 1864 in Paris. Here she married the Swedish conductor Ludwig Norman, but separated from him in 1869. From 1870 she was chiefly in England, where she was extremely popular. In 1888 she married Sir Charles Hallé and was much associated with him till his death in 1895. After 1900 she lived mostly in Berlin, though in 1896 a large circle of admirers gave her a villa at Asolo (Italy). In 1890-91 she went with Hallé on his great world-tour and in 1899 she visited America. Throughout her long career she held her place as one of the finest executants and interpreters. Her valuable Stradivari violin (1709) was presented to her in 1876 by a group of English noblemen. G.

Nessler, Victor E. (n. Schlettstadt, 1841-1890, Strasburg). Popular Alsatian composer, pupil of Th. Stern and of Leipzig teachers, at Leipzig directing various singing-clubs and from 1870 becoming chorusmaster or conductor at leading theaters. Wrote the operas Irmgard, 1876, Der Rattenfänger von Hameln, 1879, Der wilde Jäger, 1881, Der Trompeter von Säckingen, 1884, Otto der Schütz, 1886, and Die Rose von Strassburg, 1890, the fairy-opera Dornröschen, Brutfahrt, 1867, the operettas Die Hochzeitsreise, 1867, Nachwächter und Student, 1868, and Am Alexandertag, 1869, the choral works Der Blumen Rache, Von der Wiege bis zum Grabe (part-song cycle), Sängers Frühlingsgruss (men's voices) and Psalm 137, men's part-songs and many popular or comic songs. In his later years he lived at Strasburg. G.

Nesvadba, Joseph (Vyskeř, 1824-1876, Darmstadt). Bohemian conductor, from about 1848 engaged at theaters in Karlsbad, Olmütz, Brünn, Gratz, Prague (Bohemian Opera, 1857-58), Berlin (Italian Opera, 1859-60) Hamburg (1861-63) and from 1864 at the court-theater in Darmstadt. Wrote the opera Blaubart, 1844, several ballets, Bohemian choruses and songs.

Nesvera, Joseph (n. Horowitz, 1842-1914, Olmütz). Able Bohemian composer, from about 1870 choir-master in Prague, from 1878 at Königsgrätz Cathedral and from 1885 at Olmütz Cathedral. Wrote the operas Bratránek, Mlynarski, 1884, The Forest-Breath, 1896, Perdita, 1897, and The Mountain-Monk, 1906, the oratorio Job, 1913, masses, Psalm 130, other church-music, a symphony, an orchestral suite, a serenade for strings, minor orchestral pieces, a violin-concerto, an Idyll for string-septet, a violin-suite and other pieces, dances, bagatelles and études for piano, many Bohemian choruses and songs. G.

Nettl, Paul (Hohenelbe, 1889). Bohemian music-historian, trained in both law and music at Prague University (Ph.D. 1915), becoming lecturer there. Author of studies on the Vienna dance-music and on points in the history of Bohemian music. He is music-conservator for the Czecho-Slovak Republic.

Netzer, Joseph (Imst, 1808-1864, Gratz). Tyrolese conductor and composer, pupil of Gänsbacher and Sechter, in 1844-45 Lortzing's assistant at the Leipzig Opera and in the Euterpe, from 1846 conductor at the Theater an der Wien, Vienna, from 1849 at Mayence and from 1853 at Gratz. Wrote the operas Die Belagerung von Gothenburg (1839), Mari, 1841, Die Eroberung von Granada (1844) and Die seltene Hochzeit, 1846, some symphonies, overtures, string-quartets and many songs. Memoir by Kessler (no date).

Neubauer, Franz Christoph (Horzin, 1760-1795, Bückeburg). A Bohemian violinist whose short life was a restless one (at Munich in 1784, then at Vienna, in 1789 musician to Prince Weiburg in Hesse and finally with J. C. F. Bach at Bückeburg). Wrote fluent symphonies and much chamber-music, piano-sonatas, an operetta (1784) and other vocal music.

Neubeck, Ludwig (Schwerin, 1882-1915, do.). Able North German conductor, pupil of Meissner and Humperdinck, from 1904 engaged at theaters in Schwerin, Lucerne (1905-08), Görlitz (1908-10) and Metz (1910-12), from 1912 director of the Opera at Kiel and conductor of the choral society, besides from 1915 acting as inspector at the Conservatory. In 1909 he assisted at Bayreuth and in 1909-11 at the Prinzregententheater in Munich, and in 1911 was guest-conductor at Brunswick and in 1913 at Copenhagen. Wrote only an orchestral Huldigungsmarsch, music for Die Jungfrau von Orleans, a string-quartet and some minor pieces.

Neuendorff, Adolf (Hamburg, 1843-1897, New York). Talented North German conductor and composer, from 1855 in America, pupil of Weinlich, Matzka, Schilling and Anschütz, appearing as violinist in New York in 1859 and as pianist in 1860, then going on a tour (as violinist) to Brazil. In 1864 he followed Anschütz as conductor of German opera at Milwaukee, from 1867 was director in New York (Stadt Theatre, Academy of Music, Germania Theatre), giving both Italian and German works (American premières of Lohengrin and Walküre in 1871 and '77), and in 1878 was one of the conductors of the Philharmonic prior to Thomas. In 1883 the Germania failed and ruined him financially. He moved to Boston, serving as conductor with Josef Hofmann in 1887-88, with the Juch Company in 1889-91 and in New York in 1892 (English opera). In 1893-95 he was in Vienna, his wife, Mme. Januschowsky, being engaged at the Opera. From 1896 he was again in New York as director at Temple Emanuel and in 1897 conductor at the Metropolitan. Wrote the comic operas The Rat-Charmer of Hamelin, 1880, Don Quixote, 1882, Prince Woodruff, 1887, and The Minstrel, 1892, 2 symphonies, several overtures, cantatas, choruses and songs. A.

Neuhoff, Ludwig (Berlin, 1859–1909, n. Brescia). Gifted Prussian composer, pupil of K. Sander and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1898 living in Italy for his health. Wrote a symphony, a 'cello-concerto, a string-quartet, a violin-sonata, 2 organ-sonatas, an a cappella mass, the choral work Am Meeresstrande, choruses and songs.

Neukomm, Sigismund, Chevalier von (Salzburg, 1778–1858, Paris). Noted Austrian composer, as a boy in the cathedral-choir at Salzburg, pupil of Weissauer and both Michael and Joseph Haydn (a great favorite of the latter), developing into a good pianist and a sound, but uninspired composer. His life was extraordinarily diversified, involving many changes of residence and extended travels. In 1806–09 he went by way of Stockholm to Russia, where for a time he conducted German opera at the court. In 1809 he was with Haydn at his death in Vienna. Then he moved to Paris, where from 1812 he followed Dussek as pianist to the restless Talleyrand (with whom he attended the Congress of Vienna in 1814–15) and in 1815 was ennobled and admitted to the Légion d'Honneur. In 1816, with the Duc de Luxembourg, he went to Brazil and there was court-director till 1821, returning with Dom Pedro to Lisbon. Soon he went back to Talleyrand, but in 1826 toured in Italy, in 1827 was in Holland and Belgium, in 1829–30 was twice in England, in 1832 visited Germany, in 1833–34 Italy again, then France and Algiers and in 1836 was held back by illness from going to America. After 1838 he was active chiefly in Paris and London, but in 1842 he led a Mozart Festival at Salzburg, in 1849 was in Munich and even in 1856 started for the Orient. Everywhere he was welcomed as a genial man of the world, refined and superior, quite as much as a musician. He wrote an immense number of works (about 1000 in all), including 10 operas, 7 oratorios, 15 masses, much other church-music, a symphony, overtures, chamber-music, a piano-concerto and many pieces, nearly 60 organ-works, about 200 songs, etc. Autobiography, 1859. G.

Neumann, Angelo (Vienna, 1838–1910, Prague). Austrian stage-tenor and impresario, from 1859 engaged as singer at Prague, Cracow, Odenburg, Presburg, Danzig and Vienna, (Opera, 1862–76). In 1876–82 he managed the Leipzig Opera under Förster, developing striking presentations that he began to take elsewhere, as to Berlin and London. In 1882 he organized a traveling troupe to give Wagnerian works with excellent artists. In 1882–85 he was manager of the Bremen Opera and then of the German Opera at Prague, which he made famous, for several festival-series bringing whole troupes from a distance (as from Dresden or Berlin). Author of Erinnerungen an R. Wagner, 1907.

Neumann, Franz (Prerau, 1874). Moravian conductor and composer, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, at first chorusmaster at Karlsruhe and Hamburg, then conductor at Ratisbon, Linz and Reichenberg, from 1904 second conductor at the Frankfort Opera and since 1919 director of the Brünn Opera. Has written the operas Die Brautwerbung, 1901, Leyer und Schwert (published 1901), Liebelei, 1910, Herbststurm, 1919, and Beatrice Caraccio, 1922, 2 ballets, the choral work Heimgedunden, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, men's choruses and songs.

Neumark, Georg (1621–1681). 17th C. G.

Neumeister, Erdmann (n. Weissenfels, 1671–1756, Hamburg). Saxon clergyman, from 1715 at the Johanniskirche in Hamburg. He strongly influenced the development of the sacred cantata by adapting Biblical works to the recitative-aria form of the current secular cantata in four complete series of cantata-texts (1700–14), which at once became the basis for composition by Bach, Telemann and others.

Neupert, Edmund (Christiania, 1842–1888, New York). Able Norwegian pianist, pupil of his father, Kullak and Kiel, for a time teaching at the Kullak Academy and the Stern Conservatory in Berlin, from 1868 at the Copenhagen Conservatory and in 1880–81 at the Moscow Conservatory in association with N. Rubinstein. From 1882 he was in New York, where his brilliant playing made a deep impression. Wrote valuable études and effective salon-pieces. A.

Neusiedler, Hans (?1508–1563) and Melchior (1507–1590). 16th C. G.

Neuville, Valentin (Rexpoede, 1863). Flemish composer, pupil of the Brussels Conservatory, long organist at St. Nizier in Lyons. Has written the operas Le Trêfle à Quatre, Tiphaine, 1899, Madeleine, L'Aveugle, 1901, Les Willis, 1902, and L'Enfant, the oratorio Notre Dame de Fourvières, 2 symphonies, 2 string-quartets, a mass, motets, organ- and piano-pieces and songs.

Nevada, Emma (Austin or Alpha, Nev., 1862). Brilliant American operatic soprano, pupil of Mme. Marchesi, making her début at London in 1880, followed by various engagements in Italy and at Paris (1883), in 1884–85 with Mapleson in New York and later at Chicago, but since 1889 wholly in Europe (from Spain to Russia). She sang at the première of Mackenzie's Rose of Sharon (1884). In 1885 she married the English surgeon Raymond Palmer and has made her home in Paris. Her daughter Mignon (b. c. 1887) since 1905 has been well received as soprano in Italy and at Lisbon, London and Brussels. G. A.

Nevin, Arthur Finley (Edgeworth, Pa. 1871), brother of the following. American composer, pupil of the New England (Boston) and Klindworth (Berlin) Conservatories and of Boise and Humperdinck, from 1897 living at Edgeworth, in 1911–14 at Charlottesville, Va., and for a time on the music-staff of the University of Kansas (Lawrence). From 1903 he was much engaged with the music of the Indians, at one time sojourning on a Montana reservation, from 1907 giving many lectures on the subject (see Musical Quarterly, 1916) and finding the basis for his first opera. Has written the operas Poia, 1910 (Berlin, the first American work given at the Royal Opera), and the short A Daughter of the Forest, 1918, the masque A Night in Yaddo-Land, the cantatas The Djinn and Roland, other choral works, the orchestral suites Miniature, Lorna Doone and Love-Dreams, At the Spring for strings, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, 3 piano-suites and other pieces, and about 25 songs. A.

Nevin, Ethelbert Woodbridge (Edgeworth, Pa. 1862–1901, New Haven, Conn.), brother of the above. Gifted American pianist and composer in small forms, pupil of Lang, Emery, Klindworth, Von Bülow and others, from about 1885 living now in America and then in Europe (see Musical Quarterly, 1917), with increasing ill-health. Wrote many graceful piano-pieces, including the suite In Tuscany and Water-Scenes, effective songs (especially The Rosary, 1898), the song-cycle Captive Memories, 1900, the choral work The Quest and the pantomime Lady Floriane's Dream, 1898. Memoir by Thompson, 1913. G, A.

Newcomb, Ethel (Whitney Point, N. Y. 1879). American pianist, pupil of Leschetizky and in 1904–08 his assistant, from 1903 appearing at Vienna and from 1904 in England, and since 1908 favorably known in Germany and America as soloist and in ensemble, especially in Beethoven programs. A.

Newman, Ernest (Liverpool, 1868). Eminent English critic and writer, originally in business at Liverpool, but in 1903–05 teaching music at the Midland Institute at Birmingham and then becoming rapidly known for his keen critiques for the Manchester Guardian, Birmingham Post (1906–19) and London Observer, as well as much other writing. Author of Gluck and the Opera, 1895, A Study of Wagner, 1899, Musical Studies, 1905, A Musical Molley, 1919, lives of Wagner (1904, '14), Elgar (1906), Hugo Wolf (1907) and Strauss (1908), and translations of Weingartner's Dirigieren, Schweitzer's Bach and many Wagner opera-texts. He contributed to The Art of Music, 1914–17, and has edited The New Library of Music and 50 Songs of H. Wolf. A.

Newmarch, Rosa Harriet, née Jeaffreson (Leamington, 1857). English writer, not specially active in the musical field till 1897, when a trip to Russia and contact with Stassov and others led her to specialize on Russian music. Author of articles in the Grove Dictionary (1904–10) and the Dict. of National Biography, Poetry and Progress in Russia, 1907, The Russian Opera, 1914 (growing out of lectures in 1900–05), The Russian Arts, 1916, lives of Tchaikovsky (1900), H. J. Wood (1904) and Sibelius (1905), and translations of Deiters' Brahms (1887), Habets' Borodin et Liszt (1895), M. Tchaikovsky's life of his brother (1908) and d'Indy's Franck (1910). From 1908 she prepared notes for the Queen's Hall programs and has also edited the series Living Masters of Music.

Nibelle, Adolphe André (Gien, 1825–1895, Paris). French composer of many light operas, beginning with Le Loup-Garou, 1858, the symphony-cantata Jeanne d'Arc and Heures Musicales (24 songs).

Nichelmann, Christoph (Treuenbrietzen, 1717–1762, Berlin). Prussian clavierist, pupil of Bach and Quantz, in 1744–56 assistant accompanist in the court-band at Berlin (under K. P. E. Bach). Wrote many concertos and pieces for clavier, a serenata, etc. G.

Nicholl, Horace Wadham (Tipton, 1848–1922, New York). Able English composer, pupil of his father and Samuel Prince, in 1867–71 organist at Dudley and Stoke-on-Trent, then removing to America, where till 1878 he was organist in Pittsburgh. In 1878 he settled in New York, at first continuing activity as organist (St. Mark's), from 1883 serving as reader for the publisher Schirmer and in 1888–95 associated with Boekelman as teacher at a school in Farmington, Conn. Wrote the oratorios Adam, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, the choral works Elsie and Cloister Scene, a mass, anthems, songs, 2 symphonies, the symphonic poem Tartarus, an orchestral suite, fantasia and sketch (Hamlet), a piano-concerto, Preludes and Fugues for piano, other piano-pieces, elaborate organ-works, including the symphonic poem Life, 18 Preludes and Fugues (contrapuntally intricate), sonatas for violin and for 'cello, etc., besides a text-book in harmony. G, A.

Nicholls, Agnes (Cheltenham, 1877). Gifted English soprano, pupil of the Royal College, London, and of John Acton, from 1895 appearing in both opera and concert, but not emphasizing the former till 1901, when and in 1904–08 she was engaged at Covent Garden, besides going to South Africa and Australia with the Quinlan troupe. Meanwhile she has become a favorite in concert and oratorio. In 1904 she visited America, singing at the Cincinnati Festival. In 1904 she married the pianist and composer Hamilton Harty. G.

Nichols, Marie (Chicago, 1879). American violinist, pupil of Mollenhauer, Halir and Debroux, since 1899 appearing throughout the United States with leading orchestras and also in London, Paris and Berlin. She lives in Boston.

Nicholson, Sydney Hugo (London, 1875). Able English organist, pupil of the Royal College, London, and of Knorr, besides graduating at Oxford University, from 1896 engaged at High Barnet, in 1903 associated with Lloyd at Eton College, from 1904 at Carlisle Cathedral (nominally as acting-organist), from 1909 at Manchester Cathedral and since 1919 at Westminster Abbey (succeeding J. F. Bridge). Has written a service and other church-music, the choral ballads John Gilpin and Ivy, the cantata 1914 (sonnets by Brooke) and several cantatas for children, A Miniature for four soloists and string-quartet, a Festival March for orchestra, a piano-quintet, organ-pieces, etc.

Nicodé, Jean Louis (n. Posen, 1853-1919, Dresden). Talented and genial Prussian pianist, conductor and composer, pupil of his father, Hartkäs, Kiel and the Kullak Academy, Berlin, from about 1875 teacher and recitalist in Berlin, in 1878 touring in Galicia and Rumania with Mme. Artôt, then settling in Dresden, till 1885 teaching at the Conservatory, in 1885-88 conducting the Philharmonic concerts. In 1893 he started a fresh series of concerts, in 1896 organizing the Nicodé-Chor and continuing till 1900. At intervals he acted as guest-conductor elsewhere, as for the Leipzig Riedel-Verein in 1897. In 1918 he received the title of professor and in 1919 was made a member of the Berlin Académie. Wrote the symphonic poems Maria Stuart, Die Jagd nach dem Glück, Das Meer (with solo, men's chorus and organ) and Gloria, Sinfonische Variationen, Italienische Volkstänze und Lieder, Jubiläumsmarsch, Faschingsbilder (all for orchestra), 2 suites and 2 other pieces for small orchestra, a Romanza for violin and orchestra, 2 'cello-sonatas, a piano-sonata, Ein Liebesleben (cycle of 10 piano-pieces), piano-études and pieces, the a cappella works for men's voices Morgenwanderung im Gebirge, Nach Sonnenuntergang and a Requiem, besides the hymn Erbarmen for alto and orchestra and some songs. Sketches by Schäfer, 1907, and Taubmann, 1909 (in Monographien moderner Musiker). G.

Nicolai, Karl Otto Ehrenfried (Königsberg, 1810-1849, Berlin). Eminent Prussian conductor and composer, pupil of Zelter and B. Klein, from 1833 organist at the chapel of the Prussian Embassy at Rome, where he made studies of old Italian music under Baini, and in 1837-38 director at the Kärthnerthor Theater in Vienna. From 1838 he was again in Rome, producing a series of operas in the prevailing Italian style and in 1841-47 succeeded Kreutzer as court-director at Vienna, where he also founded in 1842 the Philharmonic Concerts, gaining renown as leader in both positions. In 1847 he became court-director at Berlin and leader of the Domchor, but his career was cut short by apoplexy just as he had completed his ablest work, the comic Lustige Weiber. Wrote the operas Rosmunda d'Inghilterra, 1838 (or Enrico II), Il Tempulario, 1840 (or Der Tempeler, also Teodosia), Edoardo e Gildippe, 1841, Il Proscritto, 1841 (or Die Heimkehr des Verbannten), and Die lustige Weiber von Windsor, 1849, a mass (1843), a Te Deum, a Requiem, several motets, 2 symphonies, overtures on Ein feste Burg (1844) and for Christmas, a piano-concerto, a string-quartet, a 'cello-sonata, a piano-sonata, part-songs and songs. He collected a fine library, which went to the Berlin Library. Memoirs by Mendel, 1868, Schroeder, 1892 (diary, with notes), and Kruse, 1911 (besides critical articles in 1908 and '11). His letters were published in the Deutsche Rundschau, 1897, and his Gesammelte Aufsätze in 1913 (ed. by Kruse). G.

Nicolai, Willem Frederik Gerard (Leyden, 1829-1896, The Hague). Able Dutch teacher and composer, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory and by Joh. Schneider, from 1852 teaching at The Hague Conservatory and from 1865 Lübeck's successor as director, exercising a useful influence also as conductor and as editor of the journal Cicilia (from about 1870). Wrote the oratorio Bonifacius, the choral works The Song of the Bell (text from Schiller), The Swedish Nightingale, 1880 (for 25th anniversary of the Jenny Lind pension-fund), Jehovah's Wrath, 1892, and Hanske van Gelder, a symphony, several overtures, songs, etc. He was president of the Maatschappij, officier in the Légion d'Honneur and otherwise honored.

Nicolau, Antonio (Barcelona, 1858). Spanish conductor and composer, pupil of Pujol and G. Balart, from about 1880 active in Paris as director of the concerts of the Catalan Society and later at Barcelona, where he is director of the Conservatory. Has written the opera Un Rapt, 1887, the choral work Captant, 1904, the orchestral El Triomphe de Venus, 1882, etc.

Nicole, Louis (Geneva, 1863). Swiss composer, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and of Litolf, from 1890 for many years in Athens as lecturer at the Conservatory and of late years in London. Has written the opera Le Fiancé de Claire, 1893, the symphonic poem Edelweiss, the choral works La Bataille du Léman, Psalm 148, a Stabat Mater, violin- and piano-pieces, besides an arrangement of the Greek Hymn to Apollo (found at Delphi, 1893).

Nicolini [Ernest Nicolas] (St. Malo, 1834-1898, Pau). French operatic tenor, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, in 1857-59 singing at the Opéra-Comique, then on Italian stages, from 1862 at the Salle Ventadour, Paris, and from 1871 at Drury Lane and Covent Garden, London, becoming associated with Patti and sharing many of her tours, finally marrying her in 1886. His first appearance in London was in 1866 and in America in 1881. G.

Nicolini, Giuseppe (Piacenza, 1762-1842, do.). Italian composer, pupil of Insanguine, from 1793 writing nearly 60 operas for various Italian stages with much transient success and from 1819 maestro at Piacenza Cathedral, then adding 7 oratorios, over 30 masses, many Psalms, motets, etc., with string-quartets, piano-sonatas, arias and canzonets.

Nicolini [Nicolino Grimaldi] (Naples, ?1673-?). Noted Italian artificial stage-singer, from 1694 favorably known in Italy, in 1708-17 popular in England (from 1711 in Handel's operas) and then again in Italy till after 1725. He was famous for his vigorous and expressive acting as well as a vocalist. G.

Nicolson, Richard (?-1639). 17th C. G.

Niecks, Frederick (Düsseldorf, 1845). Abie Rhenish teacher and writer, at first trained as violinist under Langhans, Grünwald, Auer and others, first appearing at thirteen and playing in the Düsseldorf orchestra till 1867 (toward the last as concertmaster). In 1868 he removed to Scotland, becoming organist at Dumfries and violist in Mackenzie's Quartet at Edinburgh. From 1875 he began to write for the Musical Record and from 1879 was on the staff of the Musical Times. In 1890 he lectured at the Royal Institution in London and in 1891 became professor at Edinburgh University, a position that he made notable by varied activity until his retirement in 1914. Author of a dictionary of terms (1884), an excellent life of Chopin (1888), and a history of program-music (1907), besides valuable essays for the Musical Association. Mus.D. of Dublin Univ. in 1898 and also LL.D. of Edinburgh Univ. G.

Niedermeyer, Louis (Nyon, 1802-1861, Paris). Influential Swiss teacher and church-composer, pupil of Moscheles, Aloys Förster, Fioravanti and Zingarelli, producing his first opera in Italy and in 1821-23 teaching in Geneva. From 1823 he was active in Paris (except two years, about 1830, at the Gaggia school in Brussels). None of his essays in opera were successful and from about 1850 he turned to sacred composition, in 1854 revived Choron's enterprise (suspended since 1830) as the École de Musique Religieuse and in 1857 founded the journal La Maitrise (with Ortigue, who from 1858 continued as sole editor). Wrote excellent masses, motets and anthems, many graceful songs, organ- and piano-pieces. Author (with Ortigue) of a Méthode d'Accompagnement du Plain-Chant, 1856 (2d ed. 1876), and Accompagnement pour Orgue des Offices de l'Église, 1861. His school continues, with governmental subvention, as the École Niedermeyer. G.

Niedt, Friedrich Erhardt (Jena, 1674-1717, Copenhagen). Saxon theorist, author of a Musikalische Handleitung, 3 parts, 1700, '07, '17, the 3d posthumous, edited by Mattheson, who also enlarged the 2d in 1721, adding 60 organ-specifications. This work was used by Bach and part of it incorporated into his own rules for composition. Another text-book by Niedt was a Musikal. A B C, 1708. G.

Nielsen, Alice (Nashville, Tenn. 1876). American operatic soprano, pupil of Ida Valerga (San Francisco), appearing in light opera in 1893-1902, then studying further in Rome and appearing in grand opera from 1903, at first in Italy, from 1904 at Covent Garden, London, from 1906 in America with the San Carlo Company and in 1909-14 with the Boston, Chicago and Metropolitan (New York) Companies, besides concert-tours with Nordica, Riccardo Martin and others. In 1892 she married Benjamin Nentwig in Kansas City. A.

Nielsen, August Carl (Island of Fünen, 1864). Eminent Danish violinist, conductor and composer, trained at the Copenhagen Conservatory and (as Ancker Scholar) in Paris and Italy, from 1890 playing in the court-orchestra at Copenhagen, from 1904 second court-director (till 1912 under Rung and then under Hoeberg) and since 1915 conductor of the Musical Union and co-director of the Conservatory. He has often served as guest-conductor (Stockholm, Helsingfors, Amsterdam, etc.). He is a Knight of Dannebrog and member of the Stockholm Academy. Has written the operas Saul und David, 1903, and Maskeraden, 1907, the choral works Hymnus Amoris and An den Schlaf, 4 symphonies (including De Fire Temperamenter and L'Inestinguibile), the overture Helios, the orchestral phantasy Pan und Syrinx, a Symphonische Suite, a suite for strings, 3 string-quartets, a violin-romanza with orchestra, a violin-sonata, a fantasia for oboe and clarinet, piano-pieces and songs.

Nielsen, Ludolf (n. Copenhagen, 1876). Able Danish violinist and composer, pupil of the Copenhagen and Leipzig Conservatories, with study in 1907 as Ancker Scholar, in 1897-1907 soloist and assistant-conductor of the Tivoli orchestra in Copenhagen and member of the Björvig Quartet, and later conductor of the Euphrosyne (society). Has written the operas Isabella, 1915, and Uhret, the choral work St. Hans, 3 symphonies, the symphonic poems Ragnar Lodbrog, Sommernatsstemning, In Memoriam, Fra Bjaergene and Babelstaarnet (with soli, double chorus and brass lontano), an overture, pieces for violin or 'cello with orchestra, the recitation Herbstabend with orchestra, 2 string-quartets, choruses, songs, etc.

Niemann, Albert (n. Magdeburg, 1831-1917, Berlin). Distinguished Prussian operatic tenor, pupil of F. Schneider, Nusch and Duprez, from 1849 singing at Dessau in chorus and minor parts, from 1860 engaged at the Hanover Opera and in 1866-89 regularly at the Berlin Opera, but with many appearances elsewhere (in 1886-88 at the Metropolitan, New York). He became one of the typical interpreters of the great Wagnerian rôles, combining great vocal warmth and power of declamation with noble and expressive acting. He sang at the Paris performances of Tannhäuser (1861) and at the Ring premières at Bayreuth (1876). Sketch by Sternfeld, 1904. G.

Niemann, Gustav Adolf (n. Heide, 1841-1881, Helsingfors), brother of the following. Holsteiner violinist, pupil of his father and David, from 1865 concertmaster of the Helsingfors orchestra and active in promoting chamber-music.

Niemann, Rudolf Friedrich (n. Heide, 1838-1898, Wiesbaden), brother of the above. Holsteiner pianist, trained at the Leipzig and Paris Conservatories and by Von Bülow and Kiel, from about 1865 active at Hamburg and from 1883 at Wiesbaden, where from 1895 he taught at the Fuchs Conservatory. In 1873-82 he made long tours as accompanist of Wilhelmj. Wrote a violin-sonata, piano-variations and pieces, songs, etc.

Niemann, Walter (Hamburg, 1876), son of the foregoing. Eminent North German critic and writer, trained by his father and Humperdinck and at the Leipzig Conservatory and University (Ph.D. 1901), from 1904 editor of the Neue Zeitschrift at Leipzig, in 1906-07 teacher at the Hamburg Conservatory and in 1907-17 critic for the Leipzig Neueste Nachrichten. Author of a dissertation on ligatures in mensural music (1901) Musik u. Musiker d. 19. Jahrh. 1905, Die Musik Skandinaviens, 1906, Das Klavierbuch, 1907 (4th ed. 1918), a life of Grieg (1908, with Schjelderup), Die musikal. Renaissance d. 19. Jahrh. 1911, Taschenlexikon für Klavierspieler, 1912 (4th ed. 1918) Die Musik d. Gegenwart, 1913 (8th ed. 1919), a life of Sibelius (1917), Die nordische Klaviermusik, 1918, Meister d. Klaviers, 1919, and Die Virginalmusik, 1919, a life of Brahms (1920), besides rewriting Kullak's Aesthetik d. Klavierspiels, 4th ed. (1905, 5th ed. 1916), and editing K. P. E. Bach's Art d. Klavier zu spielen (1906, 2d ed. 1917), Klauwell's Formen d. Instrumentalmusik (1918) and various old works for collections. Has also written many interesting characteristic piano-pieces, including variations, suites, idylls, nocturnes, miniatures and dances, often based on poetic suggestions or the sentiment of places and regions, besides a few pieces for strings.

Niessen, Wilhelm (Cologne, 1867-1918, Warstein). Rhenish conductor, trained at the Stern Conservatory and Berlin University (Ph.D. 1891), in 1891-93 conductor of his own choral society in Berlin as well as of orchestral concerts, from 1893 theater-director at Augsburg, Göttingen, Meran, Trieste, etc., from 1895 conductor at Glogau of the Singakademie and men's chorus as well as director at the Synagogue, and from 1900 at Münster as leader of various concerts, including the annual Cäcilienfest, and of the noted Liedertafel, besides from 1902 lecturing at the University and in 1907 becoming music-director there. In 1910 he directed a large festival at Dortmund and in 1913 one at Münster. Wrote the opera Sesostris, some choral works, etc.

Niessen-Stone, Matja von (Moscow, 1870). Able German-Russian soprano, pupil of Jensen, Mmes. Lilli Lehmann, Souvestre-Paschalis, Gerster, etc., in 1890-96 touring in concert in Germany, Austria, Hungary and Russia, from 1896 teaching at the Music School at Odessa, from 1901 at that at Riga, in 1905 concertizing in Belgium and England and since 1906 living in New York, where in 1908-09 she sang at the Metropolitan and has also taught at the Institute of Musical Art.

Nietzsche, Friedrich (n. Lützen, 1844-1900, Weimar). The famous philologist and philosophical writer, in 1869-79 professor at the University of Basel. He was musically expert, writing the choral works An das Leben, 1887, and Hymnus an die Freundschaft, 1874, piano-pieces and songs. But he is more notable for his curious reversal of attitude toward Wagner, strongly favoring him in Die Geburt d. Tragödie aus d. Geiste d. Musik, 1872 (2d ed. 1874), and Wagner in Bayreuth, 1876, but violently denouncing him in Der Fall Wagner, 1888, Nietzsche contra Wagner, 1889, and Götzendämmerung, 1889. Doubtless his approaching mental derangement was the reason. On his relations to Wagner see lives and critiques by Kulke, 1890, Förster-Nietzsche, 1895-1905, Zeitler, 1900, Joël, 1904, Lasserre, 1907, Bélart, 1907, '10, '12, Eckertz, 1910, D. Halévy, 1910, Dahms, 1922, etc.

Niewiadomski, Stanislas (Soposzyn, 1859). Galician conductor and critic, pupil of Mikuli, Krenn and Jadassohn, from 1887 teacher at the Lemberg Conservatory, critic and from 1918 conductor of the Opera. Since 1918 he has edited the Gazeta Muzyczna and in 1919 went to Warsaw as teacher and critic. He has translated Hanslick's Vom Musikalisch-Schönen and written songs.

Niggli, Arnold (Aarburg, 1843). Able Swiss writer and civil officer at Aarau. Besides contributing to numerous periodicals, author of essays on Chopin, Schubert, Faustina Hasse, Mara, Paganini and Meyerbeer in Waldersee's Sammlung, on Schumann and Haydn in a set of lectures at Basel, and on Jensen (1900), a history of the Swiss Musical Society (1886) and of the Eidgenössische Sängerverein (1892, Jubilee Festschrift), and analyses in the Musikführer.

Nikel, Emil (Sohrau, 1851-1921, Breslau). Silesian priest and church-musician, trained at the Ratisbon Music School, long subdean of Breslau Cathedral and teacher at the Seminary. He was made royal professor in 1905, monsignore in 1906 and Theol.D. in 1908 (by Breslau Univ.). Wrote 5 masses, 2 Requiems, 2 Te Deums, 4 litanies, 4 Psalms, a Passion, many canticles and motets, hymns, choruses, etc., the cantata Cäcilias Gebet, organ-preludes, etc., besides a Gesch. d. gregorian. Choralis, 1908.

Nikisch, Artur (S. Miklos, 1855-1922, Leipzig). Distinguished Hungarian violinist and conductor, trained at the Vienna Conservatory, from 1874 playing in the court-orchestra at Vienna, from 1878 at Leipzig, at first as assistant under Neumann's management and later co-ordinate with Seidl and Sucher, from 1882 as director under Stägemann's management. From 1889 he had great success as leader of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, from 1893 was at the Pest Opera and head of the Philharmonic there, and from 1895 was conductor of the Gewandhaus Orchestra in Leipzig (following Reinecke) and also of the Berlin Philharmonic (till 1907). He often appeared elsewhere, especially at London, and in 1912 toured in the United States with the London Orchestra, as earlier he had several times taken the Berlin Orchestra to Paris and Switzerland. In 1902-07 he was inspector at the Leipzig Conservatory. From 1901 he held the title of royal professor. Wrote a symphony, a fantasia on themes from Nessler's Trompeter, a string-quartet, a violin-sonata and the cantata Christnacht. His wife, née Amalie Heussner (b. c. 1860), sang soubrette-roles at Kassel and Leipzig until her marriage in 1885. She has written the comic opera Daniel in der Löwengrube, 1914, the operettas Meine Tante, deine Tante, 1911, and Immer der andere, 1915, besides music for 2 fairy-plays and the text for Mraczek's Abelö (1915). Sketches by Pfohl, 1900, Lipaiev, 1904, Segnitz, 1920, and Dette, 1922. G, A.

Nilsson, Christine (n. Wexiö, 1843-1921, Stockholm). Eminent Swedish operatic soprano, pupil (as protégée of the Baroness Leuhusen) of F. Berwald and Wartel, making her stage-début at Paris in 1864, remaining at the Théâtre Lyrique till 1867, when she visited London and then alternated between there and the Paris Opéra. From 1870 she toured extensively, till 1872 in America under Strakosch and then in different parts of Europe (Sweden in 1876), with trips to America in 1873-74 and '84. In 1888 she retired from the opera, but sang in concert in 1891. Her voice had great clarity and sweetness, though not large. She excelled in parts that called for simple naïveté or for unimpassioned pathos. In 1872 she married Auguste Rouzeau (d. 1882) and in 1887 Count Vallejo y Miranda (d. 1902). In 1916 a great national tribute was paid to her by the opera-houses of Scandinavia, with a reception and the presentation of a medal. See Charnacé, Les Étoiles du Chant, 1868-69, and memoir by C. Beyron, 1921. G, A.

Nin, Joaquín (Havana, 1859). Gifted Cuban pianist, pupil of Carlos Vidiella, Moszkowski and d'Indy, from about 1885 making tours throughout Europe and since 1903 much engaged in reviving the use of the harpsichord and its music. In 1906-08 he taught at the Schola Cantorum, continuing there and at Brussels University as honorary professor and living in Brussels. Has written the opera L'Autre, besides the small brochures Pour l'Art, 1909, Idees et Commentaires, 1912, and Clavecin ou Piano.

Nini, Alessandro (Fano, 1805-1880, Bergamo). Italian composer, pupil of Palmerini, in 1830-37 head of a singing-school in Petrograd and from 1843 maestro at Bergamo Cathedral. Wrote the operas Ida della Torre, 1837, La Marescialla d'Ancre, 1839, Cristina di Svezia, 1840, Margherita di York, 1841, Odalisca, 1842, Virginia, 1843, and Il Corsaro, 1847, besides two not given, and much church-music, including a noted a cappella Miserere.

Nisard, Théodore [Théodore Eléazar Xavier Normand] (n. Mons, 1812-1887, Paris). Eminent French priest (abbé) and writer, for a time from 1842 organist and subcantor at St.-Germain in Paris and then absorbed in literary work. Author of a portentous list of essays and monographs on Gregorian music (from 1840), including the notable Dict. Liturgique, Historique et Pratique de Plain-Chant, 1854 (with Ortigue), and many biographical notices of composers old and new. He was the first to publish a transcription of the antiphony of Montpellier, discovered by Danjou in 1847. G.

Nissen, Georg Nicolaus von (Hadersleben, 1761-1826, Salzburg). Danish diplomatic official at Vienna and later Salzburg, from 1809 married to Mozart's widow. Author of a life of Mozart (1828). G.

Nissen, Henriette (Gothenburg, 1819-1879, Harzburg). Talented Swedish operatic soprano, pupil of Chopin and M. Garcia, appearing from 1843 at Paris (Th. Italiens) and soon throughout Europe, especially at London (1845-48), Leipzig (from 1849 at the Gewandhaus) and Berlin, where she succeeded to Jenny Lind's popularity. She continued touring till 1859 and then taught at the Petrograd Conservatory. In 1850 she married Siegfried Salomon, the Danish composer. Wrote a method (1881).

Nivers, Guillaume Gabriel (1617-after 1700). 17th C.

Nixon, Henry Cotter (London, 1842), son of the following. English composer, pupil of Henry Smart, Steggall and Macfarren, from about 1860 organist at various churches at Hull, Woolwich, St. Leonard's (1872-77), etc. Has written the symphonic poem Palamon and Arcite, the overture Titania, 1880, a Concertstück for piano and orchestra, a piano-trio (prize, 1880), sonatas for violin and for cello, madrigals, songs, etc. G.

Nixon, Henry George (Winchester, 1796-1849, London). English organist from 1817, mostly in London (at St. George's R. C. Cathedral, Southwark, from 1839). Wrote 5 masses, a Te Deum, vespers for festivals, motets, a cantata, etc. G.

Noack, Friedrich (Darmstadt, 1890). Hessian historical student, trained at Berlin University (Ph.D. 1916) and the Institut für Kirchenmusik, since 1920 active at Darmstadt as teacher and choral conductor. Author of a monograph on Graupner (1916) and editor of works by him, by Briegel and other composers of the 17-18th centuries.

Noack, Sylvain (Rotterdam, 1881). Gifted Dutch violinist, pupil of Spoor and Elderling, from 1900 playing in the Concertgebouw Orchestra at Amsterdam, from 1905 teacher at the Conservatory and second in its Quartet, in 1905-06 at Rotterdam and then till 1908 concertmaster in the Aix orchestra and leader of a Quartet. From 1908 he was second concertmaster and frequent soloist in the Boston Symphony Orchestra, besides (with Roth, Féris and Schroeder) forming the Boston String Quartet, and since 1919 has been concertmaster of the Philharmonic in Los Angeles. A.

Noble, Thomas Tertius (Bath, 1867). Eminent English organist, trained at the Royal College, London, from 1881 at All Saints' in Colchester, from 1890 assistant at Trinity College, Cambridge, from 1892 at Ely Cathedral and in 1898-1913 at York Minster. In 1913 he came to New York as organist at St. Thomas' and has made tours as recitalist (as at the Panama Exposition, San Francisco, 1915). While at York he started an orchestra which he led till 1912, revived the choral society in 1901 and from 1906 led the Hovingham Festivals (succeeding their founder, Canon Pemberton). Has written the comic opera Killibegs, 1911, music for Aristophanes' Wasps (1897), for the York Pageant (1909) and for the burlesque Jupiter (1897), the choral works The Sound of War and Gloria Domini, an orchestral Morris-Dance, a violin-suite and several violin-pieces, an organ-concerto, a Toccata and Fugue, 2 marches, variations, intermezzo and various other organ-works, with arrangements from Pleyel, Camidge, Corelli, etc., 10 services (3 for Communion), about 30 anthems (including many a cappella and some arrangements), processional, carols and vesper-hymns, part-songs, songs and some piano-pieces. G. A.

Noderman, Preben Magnus Christian (Hjöring, 1867). Danish organist, educated at Lund University (Ph.D. 1894), pupil of Malling, from 1899 at the Petri Kyrka in Malmö and since 1903 director at Lund Cathedral. Has written the operas König Magnus, 1898, and Gunnlöfs Saga, the operetta Prins Inkognito, 1909 (or Die Jungfernstadt), violin-pieces, organ-preludes, piano-pieces, motets, choruses, children's plays, songs, etc., besides a concert-version of Gluck's Orfeo (1906). Author of Studier i svensk Hymnologi, 1911, and an edition of Celsius' Orpheus, with essay on the dramatic treatment of the Orpheus myth.

Nodnagel, Ernst Otto (Dortmund, 1870-1909, Berlin). Westphalian critic, pupil of Wolfrum and the Berlin Hochschule, in 1899-1903 writing for the Ostpreuss. Zeitung at Königsberg and teaching at the Conservatory. Wrote the symphonic poems Vom tapfern Schneiderlein and L'Adultera, an overture, an orchestral serenade, various songs with orchestra (Neurotika, Impressionen, etc.) and ultra-modern Lyrische Rezitative. Author of Jenseits von Wagner u. Liszt, 1902, Versimpelung d. Musikkritik oder Kannegiesser als Erzieher, 1903 (against Em. Krause and Dömpke), Stimmbildung u. Staat, 1903, Aus d. Gernerke, 1904, Käthe Elsinger, 1905 (novel), guides to several modern operas (Ingwelde, Moloch, Pfeifertag, Elsi) and analyses of Beethoven's 2d and 5th Symphonies.

Noelte, A. Albert (Starnberg, 1882). Bavarian critic, in 1898-1908 in America, where for a short time he wrote for the Boston Advertiser, and then in Munich, writing for the Abendzeitung, etc. Has written the operas François Villon, 1920, and Die Herzogin von Padua, a dramatic scena, the symphonic poems Hektors Abschied and Tod und Lucifer, an orchestral Rhapsodie, a prelude and fugue for strings, songs with orchestra, etc.

Noetzel, Hermann (Wiesbaden, 1880). Hessian composer, living at Munich. Has written the comic opera Meister Guido, 1918, a symphony, 3 overtures, an orchestral suite and songs.

Nogueras, Costa. Spanish composer of the operas Flor de Almendro, 1901 (zarzuela), Ines de Castro, 1905, and Valerí, 1906.

Nohl, Karl Friedrich Ludwig (Iserlohn, 1831-1885, Heidelberg). Industrious Westphalian lecturer and writer, pupil of Dehn and Kiel, in 1860-65 lecturing at Heidelberg University (Ph.D. 1860), where from 1880 he was also professor. In 1865-68 he lectured at Munich University and in 1872-80 was privately employed at Heidelberg. Author of lives of Beethoven (3 vols. 1864-77) and Mozart (1863, 2d ed. 1877), each supplemented by sets of letters (Beethoven, 1865, '67, with studies of sketch-books, 1866, '68, and Mozart, 1865) and also by contemporaneous criticisms (Beethoven, 1877, and Mozart, 1880), some further works on Beethoven (1870, '71, '75), shorter lives of Wagner (1869) and (in Reclam edition) of Beethoven, Haydn, Liszt, Mozart, Spohr, Wagner and Weber, Der Geist d. Tonkunst, 1861, Die Zaubrerflöte, 1862, Glück u. Wagner, 1870, Musikerbriefe, 1867 (2d ed. 1873), Musik u. Musikgeschichte, 1876, Beethoven, Liszt u. Wagner, 1874, Unsere geistige Bildung, 1877, Wagners Bedeutung für d. nationale Kunst, 1883, Das moderne Musikdrama, 1884, Die geschichtliche Entwicklung d. Kammermusik, 1885, and (Reclam ed.) Allgem. Musikgeschichte (new ed. by Chop, 1919). G.

Nohr, Christian Friedrich (Langensalza, 1800-1875, Meiningen). Thuringian violinist, pupil of Spohr, Umbreit and Hauptmann, from 1830 concertmaster in the Meiningen court-band. Wrote the operas Der Alpenhirt, 1831, Die wunderbaren Lichter, 1833, Liebeszauber, 1837, Der vierjährige Posten, 1851, and Der Graf von Gleichen, 1862, the oratorios Martin Luther, 1850, Frauenlob and Helvetia, orchestral pieces, quintets, quartets, many violin-pieces and songs.

Nola, Giovanni Domenico da. 16th C. G.

Nolthenius, Hugo (Amsterdam, 1848). Dutch classical teacher in the Utrecht Gymnasium, but also a trained musician, pupil of Viotta and Averkamp. In 1876-77 he directed the Students' Union in Amsterdam, in 1878 the Calliope at Bussum and in 1888-91 the Wagnerverein at Utrecht, and since 1894 has edited the Weekblad voor Musiek. Author of Bayreuth, 1891, a sketch of Mengelberg (1920), and a translation of Wolzogen's Wagner u. d. Tierwelt (1890).

Norblin, Louis Pierre Martin (Warsaw, 1781-1854, Connamtré). Able French-Polish 'cellist, in 1811 playing at the Paris Opéra and in 1826-46 professor at the Conservatory.

Nordblom, John Erik (Upsala, 1788-1848, do.). Swedish organist and singing-teacher, pupil of Häffner, from about 1810 gymnasium-teacher at Gäfle, from 1824 instructor in church-music at the Stockholm Academy and from 1833 at Upsala as music-director at the University (following Häffner), from 1835 also cathedral-organist and in 1846 founder of a vocal institute. Wrote many noted songs (8 books, 1818-41), men's choruses (1834) and an extended vocal method (3 parts, 1836-40), besides instrumental works.

Norden, N. Lindsay (Philadelphia, 1887). Able American organist and chorus-conductor, trained by Spicker, F. W. Robinson and Weld and at Columbia University, serving as organist in New York from 1904, from 1906 at St. Mary's, Brooklyn, from 1915 at All Saints' there and since 1917 at the 2d Presbyterian Church in Philadelphia. In 1912 he formed the Æolian Choir in Brooklyn to specialize in Russian church-music, bringing out over 80 works, most of them freshly edited and some not before given outside of Russia. In 1916 he succeeded Gilchrist as director of the Mendelssohn Club in Philadelphia. Has written a choral setting of Bryant's Thanatopsis, the overture King Melville, canticles, anthems and a book of Children's Songs. A.

Nordica, Lillian [name originally Norton] (Farmington, Me. 1859-1914, Batavia, Java). Distinguished American operatic soprano, pupil of John O'Neill and the New England Conservatory (Boston), with later study under Sangiovanni and Kniese, making her début in concert at Boston in 1876 and in opera at Brescia in 1879, besides touring in America with Thomas and in England with Gilmore. In 1880-84 she became known on various stages in Europe (Petrograd, 1881, Paris, 1882) and in America. In 1882 she married Frederick A. Gower (d. 1885) and in 1884-87 sang hardly at all in public. From 1887 she appeared regularly at Covent Garden, London, and in 1888 began a brilliant career at the Metropolitan, New York. From 1894 she gradually added various Wagnerian rôles, beginning with Elsa at Bayreuth, and soon devoted herself chiefly to them. In 1910-11 she was with the Boston Opera Company. Both in England and in America she was a favorite in large concerts and festivals. Her death occurred on a projected concert-trip around the world, her last appearance being late in 1913 at Melbourne. She made a deep impression by her superb voice and hearty magnetism rather more than by her purely dramatic gifts, though these were not slight. Starting as a singer of the Italian school, she had the resource and adaptability to become one of the able interpreters of Wagner. In 1896-1904 she was the wife of the Hungarian singer Zoltan Doeme, and from 1909 of the New York financier George W. Young. G, A.

Nordquist, Johan Conrad (Venersborg, 1840). Eminent Swedish conductor, trained first at the Stockholm Academy and later by study abroad on a stipend from the government, in 1864-67 bandmaster in the army, in 1868-74 teacher at the Stockholm Gymnasium, from 1875 organist at the Storkyrka there, in 1870-72 and '80-1900 teacher at the Conservatory, from 1876 chorus-master at the Opera, from 1879 assistant-conductor, in 1885-1892 and again in 1897-1908 court-director (including the Opera), after 1908 continuing ensemble and orchestral work at the Conservatory. Has written some pieces for orchestra (including marches for the funeral of Charles XV in 1872 and the golden wedding of Oscar II in 1897), piano-pieces and songs.

Nordraak, Rikard (Christiania, 1842-1866, Berlin). Gifted Norwegian student, pupil of Kiel and Kullak, but chiefly notable for his intense national feeling, which he communicated to Grieg at Copenhagen in 1864-65. Wrote music for Björnson's Maria Stuart i Skottland and Sigurd Slembe, striking piano-pieces and various patriotic choruses and songs (including the national hymn Ja, vi elsker). G.

Noren, Heinrich Gottlieb (Gratz, 1861). Styrian violinist, pupil of Massart, later also of Gernsheim and Klauwell, from about 1880 concertmaster at various places in Belgium, Spain, Russia and Germany, from 1896 head of his own school in Krefeld, from 1902 teacher at the Stern Conservatory in Berlin, from 1907 living near Dresden, from 1911 in Berlin and latterly at Rottach (Tegernsee). His work as composer gained sudden publicity in 1907, when variations on a theme from Strauss' Heldenleben led to legal action by the latter, though the work was meant as a compliment. Has written the symphony Vita, the orchestral variations Kaleidoscop (noted above), 2 orchestral serenades, a violin-concerto, Elegische Gesangsene for 'cello and orchestra, a piano-trio, Skizzen for violin, 'cello and harmonium, a Divertimento for two violins and piano, a violin-suite, a violin-sonata, pieces for violin and for 'cello, many men's choruses and songs, besides the opera Der Schleier der Beatrice (not yet given).

Norlind, Johan Henrik Tobias (n. Malmö, 1879). Able Swedish musicologist, trained chiefly at the Leipzig and Munich Conservatories and Munich, Berlin, Upsala and Lund Universities (Ph.D. 1909), from 1903 director of high schools at Tomelilla and Grevie and since 1909 also lecturer at Lund University. He has held several governmental commissions to study college-libraries in Sweden and to make observations of education abroad. From 1902 he was secretary of the Swedish section of the Internat. Musik-Gesellschaft and contributed important articles to its Sammelbände. Author also of Svensk Musikhistoria, 1901 (2d ed. 1918), Om Språket och Musiken, 1902 (on history of recitative), Musiken vid svenska Skolor under 1600 telet, 1906-07, a life of Beethoven (1907), Skolsång och Söckengång i Sverige, 1909, Latinska Skolsånger i Sverige och Finland, 1909, Studier i svenska Folklore, 1911, Svenska Allmogens Lif, 1912, a valuable Allmänt Musiklexikon, 2 vols. 1916, lives of Geijer and Jenny Lind (both 1919) and a music-history (1920).

Norman, Ludwig (Stockholm, 1831-1885, do.). Eminent Swedish conductor and composer, pupil of Lindblad and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1857 teacher in the Stockholm Academy and finally its president, from 1859 conductor of the new Philharmonic, in 1861-1879 director of the Opera and in 1879-84 conductor of symphony-concerts. In 1864-69 he was husband of the violinist Wilma Neruda. Wrote 4 symphonies, 4 overtures (including Antony and Cleopatra), incidental music for Torkel Knutson, 4 orchestral marches, a piano-concerto, an octet, sextet, quintet and 6 quartets for strings, a sextet, quartet and 2 trios for piano and strings, a suite for two violins, 4 sonatas for violin, 1 each for viola and for 'cello, the oratorio Die Könige in Israel (incomplete), 9 cantatas, 7 sets of a cappella choruses, many piano-pieces, songs and duets (including Swedish folk-songs). Author of critical essays (1888). List of works by Bagge.

Norris, Homer Albert (Wayne, Me. 1860–1920, New York). American organist, pupil of the New England Conservatory (Boston) and of Guilman, Dubois, Godard and Gigout, from 1892 at the Ruggles Street Church in Boston and in 1904–13 at St. George's in New York. He was active in promoting acquaintance with French methods of teaching composition, publishing text-books in harmony (1896) and counterpoint (1899). Wrote the oratorio St. John the Baptist, the cantata Nain, a setting of Whitman's The Flight of the Eagle for three soli, about 60 songs, pieces for organ and for piano. A.

Norris, Thomas (n. Salisbury, 1741–1790, n. Stourbridge). English tenor and organist, choirboy under Stephens, from 1765 organist at St. John's College, Oxford, and from 1776 at Christ Church Cathedral there. From 1760 he was a favorite singer at provincial festivals and at the Handel Commemorations. Wrote several anthems, glees and catches, besides 6 symphonies for small orchestra. G.

Noskowski, Sigismund (Warsaw, 1846–1909, do.). Able Polish conductor and composer, trained at the Warsaw Musical Institute and by Kiel and Raif, at first music-master at the Warsaw Blind Institute (where he invented a notation for the blind), from 1876 town-director at Constance and from 1881 again in Warsaw, in 1881–92 conductor of the Musical Society, from 1904 assistant-conductor of the Philharmonic and from 1906 also assistant at the Opera, besides teaching at the Conservatory from 1888. Wrote the operas Livia Quintilla, 1900, Wyrok, 1907, and The Battle at the Boundary-Wall, 1909, the ballet The Feast of Fire, 1902, music for Kraszewski's The Cottage near the Town, 2 operettas, many cantatas, the choral ballad Jasio, 3 symphonies (including From Spring to Spring, 1903), the symphonic poem The Steppe, the overture The Eye of the Sea, orchestral variations on an original theme (Mountain Fantasy) and also on a theme from Chopin's Prelude in A, Gipsy Dances for orchestra, 3 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, piano-pieces, part-songs and songs, with 2 collections of folk-songs (1892, 1900), and text-books in harmony (1902) and counterpoint (1908).

Nössler, Karl Eduard (Reichenbach, 1863). Saxon organist, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1885–87 conductor at the Bremen Opera, from 1888 organist at the Frauenkirche and since 1893 at the Cathedral (succeeding Reinthaler), besides from 1887 conducting men's choruses. He has the title of royal professor. Has written a symphony, an overture, the fairy-play Dornröschen, the patriotic hymn Der Schutz- und Schirmherr, motets, choruses, songs and piano-pieces.

Noté, Jean (Tournai, 1860–1922, Brussels). Gifted Belgian operatic baritone, pupil of the Ghent Conservatory, appearing in 1886 at Lille, then at Brussels, Lyons and Marseilles, from 1893 at the Paris Opéra and in 1908–09 at the Metropolitan, New York. He sang at the premières of Bruneau's Messidor (1897), Roussseau's Cloche du Rhin (1898), Vidal's La Burgonde (1898), Hùe's Roi de Paris (1901) and Hillemacher's Orsola (1902). His repertory extends from Rossini to Wagner.

Notker (830–912). 9th C. G.

Nottebohm, Martin Gustav (Lüdenscheld, 1817–1882, Gratz). Eminent Westphalian Beethoven specialist, pupil of L. Berger, Dehn, Mendelssohn, Schumann and Sechter, from 1846 living in Vienna. Published two of the Skizzenbücher (1865, '80), a thematic catalogue (1864, 2d ed. 1868, reprint with biography by Kastner, 1913), Beethoveniana, 1872, with Neue Beethoveniana (in Musikal. Wochenblatt from 1875, collected by Mandyzewski, 1887), and Beethoven's Studien, 1873 (exercises under Haydn, Albrechtsberger, etc., one vol. only). Author also of a thematic catalogue of Schubert's works (1874) and Mozartiana, 1880. He rendered more or less assistance on the standard editions of Bach, Handel, Mendelssohn and Mozart as well as that of Beethoven. Wrote a piano-quartet, piano-trios and some piano-pieces. G.

Noufflard, Georges Frédéric (1846–1897, Lugano). French critic and writer, long resident in Florence. Author of a life of Berlioz (1885), and works on his Symphonie Fantastique (1888), on Verdi's Otello (1887) and on Wagner's Lohengrin and his conception of his own work (2 vols. 1891–93, incomplete).

Nougues, Jean (Bordeaux, 1876). French composer, writing an opera at fifteen and then studying at Paris and making a sensation with the showy Quo Vadis? in 1909. Has written the operas Le Roi du Papagey (1891), Yannha, 1901, Thamyras, 1904, La Mort de Tintagiles, 1905, Quo Vadis?, 1909, Chiquito, 1909, L'Auberge Rouge, 1910, La Vendetta, 1911, L'Aiglon, 1912, and L'Éclaircie, 1914, the ballets La Danseuse de Pompéi, 1912, and Narcisse, 1913, and the pantomime Le Désire, la Chimère et l'Amour, 1906.

Nourrit, Adolphe (Paris, 1802–1839, Naples). Gifted, but short-lived, French operatic tenor, pupil of Garcia, making his début at Paris in 1821 and in 1825–37 his father's successor as leading artist at the Opéra, resigning through jealousy of Duprez and, though touring with success in Belgium, southern France and Italy, finally committing suicide. His eminence as singer and actor was attested by the number of works specially written for him or at whose premières he assisted, including La Muette de Portici (1828), Guillaume Tell (1829), Robert le Diable (1832), La Juive (1835), Les Huguenots (1836), etc. In 1827-37 he taught at the Conservatory. He wrote texts for many effective ballets. Memoirs by Quicherat, 1867, and Boutet de Monvel, 1903. G.

Nováček, Ottokar Eugen (Weisskirchen, 1866-1900, New York). Brilliant Hungarian violinist, pupil of his father, Dont and the Leipzig Conservatory (Mendelssohn prize, 1885), appearing often while but a boy and after 1885 at the Gewandhaus, besides joining the Brodsky Quartet (second violin, then viola). In 1891 he played with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and from 1892 was violist in the Symphony Society in New York and also in the revived Brodsky Quartet, with some work at the Metropolitan. Heart-disease forced his retirement in 1899. Wrote a piano-concerto, 3 string-quartets, Caprices, Bulgarian Dances, Perpetuum Mobile, etc., for violin, Caprices for piano, and some songs—all marked by great originality and technical skill. G., A.

Novaes, Guiomar (São João da Boa Vista, 1895). Gifted Brazilian pianist, early studying with Chifarelli and appearing when but nine at São Paulo, then (on a scholarship from the government) pupil of the Paris Conservatory, winning first prize in 1911 and beginning concert-tours in Europe, Brazil and (from 1915) the United States, everywhere highly regarded as executant and interpreter. In 1922 she married Dr. Octavio Pinto of São Paulo. A.

Novák, Vítězslav (Kamenitz, 1870). Eminent Bohemian composer, trained at the Prague Conservatory and since 1909 professor there, having previously been from about 1895 a private teacher and also national school-inspector. He has become one of the leading representatives of the national style. Has written the operas The Sprite of the Castle, 1915, Karlstein, 1916, and the short Burghobold, 1919, the symphonic poems In der Tatra, Von ewiger Sehnsucht and Toman and die Waldfee, the overtures Maryša and Lady Godiva, a serenade and other pieces for orchestra, a piano-quintet, 2 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, a Trio quasi una ballata, a piano-trio, the tone-poem Pan for piano, 2 piano-suites (Exotica and Slovácka), a Sonata Eroica, Ballade, serenades, barcaroles, eclogues and other piano-pieces, the choral works Der Sturm and die Totenbraut, and many songs. G.

Novello, Clara Anastasia (London, 1818-1908, Rome), daughter of the following. Able English soprano (chiefly in oratorio), early studying at York and at the Paris Conservatory (one year only), in 1833-37 a favorite in London and at festivals, in 1837-39 touring on the Continent and then studying with Micheroux for the opera, in 1841-43 appearing on the stage in Italy and at London. In 1843 she married Count Gigliucci and withdrew from activity till 1850, when she was heard in opera till 1853 and in concert till 1860. These later appearances, especially at some of the large English festivals, were her greatest triumphs. From 1860 she lived in Italy. Her Reminiscences were published by her daughter, with memoir by A. D. Coleridge (1910). G.

Novello, Vincent (London, 1781-1861, Nice). Influential English organist, church-composer, editor and publisher, pupil of Webbe and deputy under him and Danby, in 1797-1822 organist at the chapel of the Portuguese embassy in London and in 1840-43 at the Moorfields (R. C.) Chapel, besides serving as player at some festivals. In 1812 he was accompanist at the Italian Opera and in 1813 one of the founders of the Philharmonic Society, which he sometimes conducted. He held similar relations with more than one choral society. From about 1810 he became notable as collector, arranger and (from 1811) publisher of a vast amount of sacred and secular music, both English and foreign, thus not only founding the famous business of Novello & Co., but contributing powerfully to the development of musical knowledge and taste in England. Wrote masses, motets, anthems, glees, songs and the cantata Rosalba. After 1849 he lived at Nice. He was intimate not only with many noted musicians, but with a large literary circle. G.

Novello & Company. Famous publishing-firm in London, founded in 1811 by Vincent Novello (see above) and first developed strongly by his son Joseph Alfred (1810-1896). He began in 1846 to issue octavo vocal scores printed from type and in 1849 made improvements in engraved sheet-music, so that popular prices for both were possible. J. A. Novello retired in 1856 and Henry Littleton (1823-1888) followed, in 1867 acquiring the business of Ewer & Co. and changing the firm-name to Novello, Ewer & Co. (original name resumed in 1898), he being succeeded by his sons and sons-in-law. In 1846 the firm took over Mainer's periodical (begun in 1844) and have since issued it as The Musical Times, making it one of the best musical journals. Besides an enormous business in instrumental and vocal music of all kinds, they have also published many important books about music. The New York branch is now known as the H. W. Gray Co. G.

Novello-Davies, Clara (Cardiff, 1863). Welsh singer and teacher, from 1881 conductor of the Royal Welsh Ladies' Choir, with which she made concert-tours in Great Britain, France, America and South Africa, winning first prizes at the Chicago and Paris Expositions in 1893 and 1900. She has lately taught in New York.

Noverre, Jean Georges (Paris, 1727-1810, St. Germain). French dancer, ballet-master at the Opéra-Comique from 1749, in London in 1755-57 and at the Opéra in 1776-80. From about 1755 he gradually developed the dramatic possibilities of the ballet, making it a significant form of art and one susceptible of elaborate musical treatment. Author of Lettres sur le Danse et les Ballets, 4 vols. 1760. Memoirs by C. E. Noverre, 1882, and Abert, 1908 (in Peters Jahrbuch). G.

Novotný, Wenzel (Pocáterl, 1849-1922, Prague). Bohemian critic, pupil of the Prague

Organ School, for some years editor of the journal Dalibor and translator of about 100 opera-texts, including all of Wagner's works. Wrote violin-pieces and songs, besides collecting Bohemian folk-songs.

Nowakowski, Jozef (n. Radomsk, 1800–1865, Warsaw). Noted Polish pianist, trained at the Warsaw Musical Institute, from 1833 widely known through tours and from about 1840 teacher at the Alexander Institute in Warsaw. Wrote 2 symphonies, 4 overtures, 2 piano-quintets, a string-quartet, many piano-polo-naises with orchestra, fantasias, études, etc., and a method.

Nowowiejski, Felix (Wartenburg, 1877). Able Polish-Prussian conductor and composer, trained at the Stern Conservatory (Berlin), the Ratisbon Music School and by Bellermann and Bruch, from 1899 winning several prizes (the Meyerbeer twice and the Paderewski) and holding scholarships from the German government in 1900 and 1902. After directing choral societies in Berlin, in 1909–10 he conducted symphony-concerts and the Musical Society at Cracow, then returning to Berlin and in 1918 going to Posen. Has written the opera Busola, 2 symphonies, the overtures Polish Wooing and Konrad Wallenrod, the orchestral fantasy Pergolesi, several marches, the oratorios Quo Vadis? and Die Auffindung des heil. Kreuzes, 1906, the choral Slawische Volksszene, choruses, songs and organ-pieces.

Noyes, Edith Rowena (Cambridge, Mass. 1875). American pianist, pupil of MacDowell and Chadwick, from 1895 active in Boston and in 1899 and 1909 giving American programs in Europe. Has written a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, many piano-pieces, anthems and songs, besides the operetta Last Summer, 1898, and the pageant-play Wauashakum, 1917. In 1909 she married Roy G. Greene. A.

Nucius, Johannes (?1556–1620?). 16th C. G.

Nuitter [Charles Louis Étienne Truinet] (Paris, 1828–1899, do.). Archivist of the Paris Opéra, preparing a complete catalogue of its collections and writing a Histoire et Description du Nouvel Opéra, 1884 (with Thoinan) and Origines de l'Opéra Français, 1886, besides many translations of opera-librettos.

Nux, Paul Véronge de la (Fontainebleau, 1853). French composer of the opera Zaire, 1889, the drama Labdacides, music for Aderer's Isora, etc. He studied at the Paris Conservatory, taking a second prize in 1876.

Oakeley, Herbert Stanley (Ealing, 1830–1903, Eastbourne). Able English organist, conductor and composer, educated at Oxford, pupil of Elvey, Joh. Schneider, the Leipzig Conservatory and Breidenstein, from 1865 professor at Edinburgh University (succeeding Donaldson), becoming emeritus in 1891. Besides his routine teaching he gave organ-recitals and greatly developed the Reid Concert (provided for in the foundation of the professorship), from 1868 expanding it into a festival under the leadership of Hallé. From 1887 he was president of the Cheltenham Festivals. Mus.D. from the Archbishop of Canterbury in 1871 and of Oxford and Dublin Univs. in 1879 and 1887; LL.D. of Aberdeen Univ. in 1881 and D.C.L. of Toronto Univ. in 1886. Knighted in 1876 and made composer to the Queen in 1881. Wrote an orchestral pastorate, 2 marches and a Suite in the Olden Style, 1893, 2 services, about 10 anthems, a motet (with orchestra), a cantata (for the Queen's Jubilee, 1887), part-songs and songs, a piano-sonata and some pieces. Memoir by E. M. Oakeley, 1904. G.

Ober, Margarete (Berlin, 1885). Eminent Prussian operatic mezzo-soprano, pupil of Stolzenberg and Arndt, from 1906 achieving sudden fame at Frankfurt and Stettin and from 1907 steadily engaged at the Berlin Opera, but in 1913–16 also regularly singing at the Metropolitan, New York. Her voice is remarkably rich and her dramatic power of the highest order. She sang at the premières of Massenet's Thérèse (1908) and Nevin's Poia (1910). A.

Oberhoffer, Emil (Munich, 1867). Able Bavarian conductor, pupil of his father, Kistler and Philipp, migrating to America about 1895, from 1897 conductor of the Apollo Club in St. Paul and from 1901 of the Philharmonic Club in Minneapolis, the latter leading to the founding in 1903 of the Minneapolis Orchestra, which under his leadership (till 1922) became one of the best in the United States. He has also served as organist in Minneapolis and as teacher at the University of Minnesota there. A.

Oberhoffer, Heinrich (n. Treves, 1824–1885, Luxemburg). Rhenish church-musician, from 1844 organist at Treves and from 1856 at St. Michel in Luxemburg and professor in the Seminary there, besides from 1862 editing the Cäcilia at Treves. Wrote choral works for men's voices with orchestra, an cappella mass, motets, other church-music, men's choruses, organ-pieces, an organ-method and a text-book in composition. Memoir by Fisquet.

Oberleithner, Max von (Schönberg, 1868). Moravian composer of the operas Erlöst, 1899 (short), Ghitana, 1901, Abbé Mouret, 1908, Aphrodite, 1912, Der eiserne Heiland, 1917, Cäcilia, 1919, and Das Heidentor, 1920.

Oberthür, Karl (Munich, 1819–1895, London). Famous Bavarian harpist and composer, pupil of Elise Brauchle and G. V. Röder, from 1837 playing in orchestras at Zurich, Wiesbaden and Mannheim and in 1844 removing to England, where he became prominent as teacher and soloist, making some tours on the Continent. Wrote the overtures Macbeth and Rübezahl, the legend Loreley and a concertino for harp and orchestra, the prelude Shakespeare, 2 trios for harp, violin and 'cello, a harp-quartet, a trio-nocturne for harps, many fine pieces for harp-solo, piano-pieces, a mass of S. Filippo di Neri (with harp), 3 cantatas, 2 operas (given at Wiesbaden), part-songs and songs. G.

Obrecht, Jacob (?1430–1505). 15th C. G.

Obriest, Aloys (San Remo, 1867–1910, Stuttgart). Italian (Saxon) conductor, trained by Müller-Hartung and A. Becker and at Berlin University (Ph.D. 1892), from 1892 theater-conductor at Rostock, Bränn and Augsburg, from 1895 court-director at Stuttgart (following Zumpe) and from 1900 in charge of the Liszt Museum at Weimar and head of the committee for publishing Liszt's complete works. He made a fine collection of old instruments (now in the Bach Museum at Eisenach). Author of a thesis on Melchior Franck (1892). He committed suicide after having shot the singer Anna Sutter in a fit of jealousy.

O'Carolan, Turlough (n. Nobber, 1670–1738, County Roscommon). Famous Irish bard, blind from 1691 and then an itinerant singer and harpist, everywhere welcome. Composed about 200 songs (collections published from 1747). G.

Ochs, Siegfried (Frankfort, 1858). Eminent Hessian choral conductor, trained at the Berlin Hochschule, and by Urban and Von Bülow, in 1882 founding at Berlin the Philharmonischer Chor, which he has made famous through his exceptional gifts as trainer and by the breadth and freshness of his programs. Has written the able comic opera Im Namen des Gesetzes, 1888, 2 operettas, men's choruses, vocal canons, duets and many songs, besides revising some of Bach's cantatas for the Eulenburg edition.

Ochs, Traugott (n. Sondershausen, 1854–1919, Berlin). Saxon conductor and teacher, pupil of Stade, Erdmannsdörfer, Kiel and the Berlin Institut für Kirchenmusik, from 1880 teacher at the Neuzeile Seminary, from 1883 organist at Wismar and from 1889 also leader of the Singakademie there, from 1893 at Guben as organist, conductor of the Musikverein and teacher in the schools, in 1899 director of the Brunn Conservatory and conductor of the Musikverein, from 1900 town-director at Bielefeld and from 1904 head of his own school there, in 1907–10 court-director at Sondershausen and in charge of the Conservatory, and after 1911 directing his own school at Berlin. Wrote a Requiem, the choral Deutsches Aufgebot for men's voices, part-songs, organ-pieces and a method for men's voices.

Ochsenkuhn, Sebastian (1521-1574). 16th C. G. Odington, Walter de. 13-14th C. G.

Odo (?-942). 10th C. G.

Oegin, Erhart. 16th C. G.

Oelschlegel, Alfred (Anscha, 1847-1916, Leipzig). Bohemian theater-conductor at Hamburg, Teplitz, Würzburg, Karlsbad and Vienna (Karltheater), then bandmaster at Klagenfurt and finally leader of the orchestra at Franzensbad. Wrote the operettas Prinz und Maurer, 1884, Der Schelm von Bergen, 1888, and Der Landstreicher, 1893, and the opera Kynast, 1898.

Oelsner, Friedrich Bruno (n. Annaberg, 1861). Saxon violist and violinist, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and of De Haan, from 1880 playing viola in the Darmstadt court-band and since 1882 also teaching violin at the Conservatory. Has written the short operas Vardhâmana, 1893, and Der Brautgang, 1894, a cantata, a piano-trio and songs.

Oesten, Theodor (Berlin, 1813-1870, do.). Prussian piano-teacher, pupil of the Berlin Akademie, from about 1835 popular in Berlin, writing pleasing, but shallow salon-pieces. G.

Oesterlein, Nikolaus (Vienna, 1842-1898, do.). An ardent admirer of Wagner, gathering an extraordinary Wagner Museum at Vienna (catalogue, 4 vols. 1882-95), now removed to Eisenach, and writing Bayreuth, 1877, and an account of the purpose of his collection (1892).

Oetting, William H. (Pittsburgh, 1875). American organist, pupil of his father, Reimann, Egidi, Hutcheson and Boise, for a time teaching at the Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory (Berlin), since 1901 active at Pittsburgh as organist in several churches (now at the 6th Presbyterian), accompanist for the Apollo Club, recitalist at the Carnegie Institute in 1905-07 and one of the directors of the Musical Institute. Has written an overture, an orchestral romanza, an organ-sonata, an organ Prelude and Fugue, piano-pieces, several anthems, songs, etc. A.

Oettingen, Arthur Joachim von (Dorpat, 1836-1920, Leipzig). From 1863 lecturer or professor (physics) at Dorpat University and from 1894 at Leipzig University (honorary professor till 1919). Among his works is Das Harmoniesystem in dualer Entwicklung, 1866 (2d ed. 1913), which opposes Helmholtz at many points and supports the theory of dualism later made prominent by Riemann.

Offenbach, Jacques (Cologne, 1819-1880, Paris). Famous Rhenish (Jewish) 'cellist, conductor and composer of burlesque operettas, pupil of Vaslin, from 1834 playing at the Opéra-Comique and at popular concerts, besides beginning to write 'cello-pieces and chansonsnettes. From 1849 he was conductor at the Théâtre Français, in 1855-66 made a great success as owner of the Bouffes-Parisiens, in 1872-76 managed the Gaité and in 1876-77 toured with mixed success in America (see his Notes d'un Musicien en voyage, 1877). His style is often hasty and cheap, but seldom fails in cleverness, sparkle and obvious humor, with many touches of keen satire. Wrote in all over 100 stage-works, including Orphée aux Enfers, 1858, La Belle Hélène, 1864, Barbe-Bleue, 1866, La Vie Parisienne, 1866, La Grande Duchesse, 1867, Madame Favart, 1879, and the more elaborate and significant Les Contes d'Hoffmann, 1881, the last of which has had marked success in Germany and America as well as at Paris. Sketches or memoirs by Mirecourt, 1867, Wolff, 1877, Martinet, 1887, Berlioz, 1903 (in Musiciens et la Musique), Bekker, 1909, and Hanne-mann, 1919 (in Neue Musikzeitung). G.

Oginski, Michael Casimir (Warsaw, 1731-1803, do.), and Michael Cleophas (n. Warsaw, 1765-1833, Florence), uncle and nephew. Polish nobles, holding high position in Lithuania. The former maintained a notable musical establishment. The latter wrote 14 striking polonaises (including the one commonly called the Death Polonaise), marches and French songs. G.

Okeghem, Jean de [Joannes] (?1430-1495). 15th C. G.

Oldberg, Arne (Youngstown, O. 1874). Eminent American pianist and composer, pupil of Hylstedt, Koehling, Gleason, Middelschulte, Leschetizky and Rheinberger, since 1899 professor at the Music School of Northwestern University (Evanston, Ill.). Has written symphonies in F min. and C min., the overtures Paolo and Francesca, 1908, and Festival, 1909, orchestral variations with organ (1912), the fantasy At Night, 1916, the rhapsody June, 1915, concertos for piano, for organ and for horn, 3 piano-quintets (one with wind), a string-quartet, a piano-suite, a sonata and many other piano-works. A.

Oliphant, Thomas (Condie, 1799-1873, London). A Scotsman, from 1830 member and soon secretary of the Madrigal Society in London, author of a history of the Society (1834), an essay on madrigals (1836) and a collection of madrigal-texts (1837), besides a translation of the libretto of Fidelio. G.

Ollone, Max d' (Besançon, 1875). French composer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1897), writing the opera Le Retour, 1913, the lyric scene Jeanne d'Arc, the oratorio François d'Assisi, the cantata Frédérigonde, the pantomime Bacchus et Silène, 1901, the symphonic poems La Vision de Dante, Les Villes Maudites, Dans la Cathédral, Au Cimetière, Lamento, Les Funérailles du Poète and Libération, a fantasia for piano and orchestra, some chamber-music and songs.

Olmada, Federico (Burgo de Osma, 1865-1907?, Burgos). Gifted Spanish church-musician, long choirmaster at Burgos Cathedral. Wrote in all about 350 works, including 4 masses, organ-pieces, works for orchestra and chamber-ensemble, songs, etc., besides Discursos sobre la Orquesta Religiosa, 1896, Pío X y el Canto

Romano, 1904, and Folklore de Castilla, 1902. He also edited the sacred music journal La Voz de la Musica.

Olsen, Ole (Hammerfest, 1850). Strong Norwegian composer, pupil of Lenderman and the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1867-70 at intervals leader in traveling-troupes of players, from 1874 teacher in Christiania, where in 1878-80 he succeeded Svendsen as conductor of the Musik-förening and from 1884 was increasingly active in military music, since 1900 being national inspector. Has written the operas (all to original texts) Sven Orådd, 1892 (singspiel), Leila, 1908, Stig Hvide and Stallo, music for Weilen's Erik XIV, the oratorio Nidaros, 1897, the cantatas Ludwig Holberg, Griffenfeld, Broderbud and Tourist, a symphony, the symphonic poems Asgaardreien and Alfedans, and Rumänische Lieder. G.

O'Mara, Joseph (Limerick, 1866). Irish operatic tenor, pupil of Perini, Moretti and Edwin Holland, making his début in London in 1891 and engaged by Harris there in 1893-96 (including the première of Stanford's Shamus O'Brien in 1896), then joining the Moody-Manners Company. He has spent three years on tour in the United States. He is now head of his own operatic and concert-troupe. G.

Ondříček, Franz (Prague, 1859-1922, Milan). Eminent Bohemian violinist, pupil of his father and the Prague and Paris Conservatories (1st prizes at both), appearing precociously as a boy and formally in 1882-84 in Paris, then setting out upon extensive tours throughout the world, including America (1896) and Asia, receiving many honors and decorations. In 1907 he settled in Vienna, where in 1908 he formed a Quartet (with Silbiger, Junck and Jelinek) and from 1910 taught advanced students at the Conservatory. His playing, originally intense and passionate, gradually acquired ideal poise and nobility. In 1885 he married the Bohemian singer Anna Hlavaček. Wrote a Rapsodie Bohème for violin and orchestra, fantasias, pieces and a cadenza for the Brahms Concerto, besides a method on an anatomical and physiological basis (1908, with Dr. Mittelmann). G.

O'Neill, Norman (London, 1875). Gifted English composer, pupil of Somervell and the Hoch Conservatory (Frankfurt), from 1897 active in London as teacher and theatrical composer, since 1909 conductor at the Haymarket, besides touring with troupes in England and at Paris. In 1899 he married the accomplished pianist Adine Rückert. Has written the overtures In Autumn, Hamlet, 1903, In Springtime, 1906, and Humoresque, a Scotch Rhapsody, Miniatures and Hornpipe, a suite for strings and Miniatures for small orchestra, incidental music for Hamlet (1904), for Carr's A Lonely Queen (1905), for A Tragedy of Truth (1906), for Phillips' The Lost Heir (1908), for King Lear (1909), for Maeterlinck's Blue Bird (1909), for Dunsany's The Gods of the Mountain (1911), for Freedom (1918) and many other plays, the choral works Waldemar and The Swinburne Ballet, 2 ballads with orchestra, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, 2 piano-trios, trio-variations, a violin Romance and Scherzo, a 'cello-sonata, piano-variations (one set, on an Irish air, also for orchestra), various piano-pieces and many songs. G., A.

Onofri, Alessandro (Spoleto, 1874). Italian composer of the operas Biancafiore, 1910, and L'Assiula, 1912, and the operettas La Famiglia Modello, 1914, and Il Bacciuolo di Rosa, 1916. At one time he lived in America and was choir-master at St. Patrick's in Boston.

Onslow, George (Clermont-Ferrand, 1784-1852, do.). English-French composer, in early life only moderately musical, but becoming an amateur 'cellist and later a most profuse composer, his early teachers being Hüllmandel, Dussek and Cramer, with Reicha later. Wrote 3 comic operas (1824-37), a scena for bass, 4 symphonies, a nonet for strings and wind, a piano-septet, a piano-sextet, 34 string-quintets (his most successful works), 36 string-quartets, 10 piano-trios, 6 violin-sonatas, 3 'cello-sonatas and piano-pieces. Being cultivated and wealthy, he had many friends, so that for a time his music had a considerable vogue. In 1842 he succeeded Cherubini as member of the Académie. G.

Oosterzee, Cornelia van (Batavia, Java, 1863). Gifted Dutch composer, pupil of S. de Lange, Radecke, Nicolai and Urban, writing the opera Das Gelöbniß, 1910, the symphonic poem Königssidyllen (based on Tennyson), a prelude to Iolanthe, an orchestral Nordische Phantasie, 2 Phantasiestücke for piano-trio, choruses and songs. She lives in Berlin.

Opelt, Friedrich Wilhelm (Rochlitz, 1794-1863, Dresden). Saxon financial official, author of two studies in the mathematics of tone and rhythm (1834, '52).

Opienski, Heinrich (Cracow, 1870). Polish (Galician) critic and conductor, trained by Zelenski, d'Indy, Urban, Riemann and Nikisch, from about 1895 writing for the Echo in Warsaw and inspector of the Philharmonic, in 1907 teacher of music-history at the Music School and since 1908 conductor at the Opera. In 1914 he became Ph.D. of Leipzig Univ. Has written the opera Maria, music for Calderon's Constant Prince (1905), a cantata in memory of Mickiewicz, the symphonic poems Lilla Weneda and Eine Königsliebe, violin-pieces and songs, besides adding instrumentation to Paderewski's Tatra-Album. Author of three books on Chopin (1910-12), a hand-book of music-history (1912), monographs on Jacobus Reys (1909), in the Riemann Festschrift and Valentin Greff (1914), a history of Polish music (1918) and articles in periodicals.

Oppel, Reinhard (n. Giessen, 1878). Hessian historical student, pupil of the Hoch Conservatory (Frankfurt), with work at Munich University (Ph.D. 1911), in 1903-09 organist at Bonn and since 1911 teacher in music-schools at Kiel. Author of essays in the Bach-Jahrbuch, 1906-19, on Buxtehude in the Monatsschr. für Gottesdienst and in the I. M. G. Zeitschrift, 1911. Has written a string-quartet, a string-trio, 2 violin-sonatas and a suite, organ- and piano-pieces, church-music, choruses and songs. In 1922 an association was formed to exploit his works.

Orban, Marcel (Louvain, 1884). Belgian composer, pupil of the Louvain Conservatory and the Paris Schola Cantorum, since 1905 writing a symphony, 4 symphonic sketches, a string-quartet, quartet-variations, a violin-sonata, Croquis Maritimes and other piano-pieces, choruses and songs.

Ordenstein, Heinrich (Worms, 1856-1921, Karlsruhe). Able Hessian pianist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory and by Paul, making tours from 1875 with Peschka-Leutner and Grünzmacher or alone, in 1879-82 teaching at Karlsruhe and Berlin, and in 1884 establishing the notable Karlsruhe Conservatory, the success of which gained him the title of professor and court-councillor (1907). Author of Führer durch d. Klavierliteratur, 1912 and Gesch. d. Musik in Karlsruhe, 1916.

Orefice, Giacomo (Vicenza, 1865-1923, Milan). Italian composer of the operas Mariska, 1889, Consuelo, 1895, Il Gladiatore, 1898, Chopin, 1901, Cecilia, 1902, Mosè, 1905, Il Pane d'Altrui, 1907, and Radda, 1912, and the ballet La Sou-brette, 1907. He was long a teacher in the Milan Conservatory.

Orel, Dobrosław (Ronov, 1870). Bohemian musicologist, pupil of Novák, Hostinsky and Adler, with study at Vienna University (Ph.D. 1914), devoting himself to studies in the history of Bohemian church-music (1914-22) and the editing of service-books (1912-13, with Hejčl and Springer). From 1914 he taught at the Prague Conservatory, but since 1919 has been professor in a theological seminary and the Comenius University. In 1909-18 he edited the journal Cyrril at Prague.

Orem, Preston Ware. American organist and editor, pupil in Philadelphia of Clarke and Jarvis, in 1889-95 at St. Paul's in Los Angeles and in 1901-10 at the Walnut Street Presbyterian Church in Philadelphia, besides from 1895 teaching at the Philadelphia and Combs Conservatories and since 1900 serving as editor for the Presser Company and conductor of the Presser Choral Society. Has written a piano-quintet and quartet, an orchestral suite, a violin-romance, piano-pieces and many arrangements, besides a text-book in harmony. A.

Orgeni, Aglaja [Anna Maria Aglaja Görgér St. Jörgen] (Tisemenice, 1843). Brilliant Galician operatic soprano, pupil of Mme. Viardot-Garcia, in 1865 appearing at Berlin and in 1866 at London as a gifted coloratura-singer, soon becoming widely known in opera and concert and from 1886 making a high reputation as teacher at the Dresden Conservatory, gaining the title of professor in 1908. G.

Orlandi, Ferdinando (Parma, 1777-1848, do.). Italian composer and singing-teacher, pupil of Paër and the Conservatorio dei Tur-chini, Naples. Wrote about 25 operas of transient popularity (1802-13) until overshadowed by Rossini. From 1801 he taught at the Milan Conservatory, from 1821 at Munich and in 1823-28 at Stuttgart.

Orlandini, Giuseppe Maria (Bologna, 1688-1750?, Florence). Italian composer, pupil of Scorpioni, writing over 40 operas (from 1708) and some instrumental music. He was a member of the Bologna Accademia and for a time court-director at Florence. On his Il Giocatore (1719) see articles by Sonneck in Musical Antiquary, 1913, and I. M. G. Zeitschrift, xiv.

Ornithoparcus, Andreas. 16th C. G.

Ornstein, Leo (Kremenchug, 1895). Highly original Russian pianist, pupil of the Petrograd Conservatory and the Institute of Musical Art (New York), from 1911 appearing in New York and later often in America and at various places in Europe. To his fine technical endowment he unites ultra-modern sympathies, so intense as to cause much difference of opinion over his programs. Has written many piano-pieces, some songs, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, 2 violin-sonatas, and 2 cello-sonatas. See biography by Martens, 1917, and article by Buchanan, 1918 (in Musical Quarterly). A.

Orologio, Alessandro. 16th C. G.

Ortigue, Joseph Louis d' (Cavaillon, 1802-1866, Paris). French writer on church-music, often at governmental commission. In 1857 he joined Niedermeyer in starting La Matrise, which he edited alone in 1858-60, besides writing for many other journals. Author of De la Guerre des Dilettanti, 1829 (on the advent of Rossini), De l'École Italienne et l'Académie Royale de Musique, 1839 (regarding Berlioz' Benvenuto Cellini), Abécédaire du Plain-Chant, 1841, Dictionnaire Liturgique, Historique et Théorique de Plain-Chant, 1854-60 (with Nisard), Intro. à l'Étude Comparée des Tonalités et Principalement du Chant Grégorien et la Musique Moderne, 1853, Traité Théorique et Pratique de l'Accompagnement du Plain-Chant, 1856 (with Niedermeyer), La Musique de l'Église, 1861, etc. G.

Ortiz, Diego. 16th C. G.

Ortlieb, Eduard (n. Rottweil, 1807-1861, Kannstadt). Württemberger priest and church-musician, from 1840 at Drachenstein and from 1860 at Gmünd, working to eliminate operatic influence from Catholic music. In 1845 he started the Haydn-Verlag at Stuttgart to issue more dignified works and in 1852-57 edited the Organ für kirchliche Tonkunst. Wrote 4 masses, a Requiem, motets, etc. Memoir by Brinzinger, 1911 (in Volksfreund).

Orto, Marbriano de. 15th C. G.

Osborn-Hannah, Jane (Wilmington, O., ?1880). American operatic soprano, trained for concert by Carpi, Shakespeare, Marchesi and Sbriglia, making her stage-début at Leipzig in 1906, remaining there till 1909, with appearances at Berlin and London, from 1910 at the Metropolitan, New York, and in 1912-13 with the Chicago Opera Company. In 1897 she married Frank S. Hannah, then consul at Strasburg. A.

Osborne, George Alexander (Limerick, 1806-1893, London). Popular Irish pianist and composer, pupil of Pixis, Fétis and Kalkbrenner, from 1826 living in Paris, where he was intimate with Chopin, Berlioz and many other artists, and from 1843 teaching in London. Wrote a piano-sextet, a piano-quartet and 3 trios, many fine duets for violin and piano (33 in conjunction with De Bériot), a 'cello-sonata and much effective salon-music for piano. G.

Osgood, Emma Aline (Boston, 1849-1911, Philadelphia). Favorite American concert-soprano, early singing in Boston, in 1873 touring with the Mendelssohn Quintette Club, in 1875-90, after study with Randegger, well known in England. Later she married E. M. Dexter in Philadelphia, becoming a teacher there. A.

Osgood, George Laurie (Chelsea, Mass. 1844-1923, Godalming). Eminent American concert-tenor and choral conductor, pupil of Paine, Haupt, Sieber and Lamperti, in 1871 touring in Germany, in 1872 with the Thomas Orchestra in America and then active in Boston as an able teacher and leader of many choral societies, especially the Boylston Club (1875-93). From 1903 he lived in Europe, latterly at Godalming (England). Author of a Guide to the Art of Singing and editor of The Boylston Collection, besides a book on Mind and Melody (not yet out). Has written anthems, choruses, part-songs and about 50 songs. A.

Osiander, Lucas (1534-1604). 16th C. G.

Ostrčil, Ottokar (Smichow, 1879). Talented Bohemian composer, trained at the Prague Conservatory and by Fibich, acting also as the latter's assistant, besides studying at Prague University. Since 1909 he has led an amateur orchestra, has been professor at the Commercial Academy, and in 1921 became conductor at the Bohemian opera. Has written the operas Wlasta's End, 1904, Kunala's Eyes, 1908, and The Blossom, the ballad The Orphan Child, a symphony, an orchestral suite, Peasants' Festival, The Tale of Schemnick and an Impromptu (all for orchestra), a string-quartet and 2 melodramas. Sketch by Payer, 1912.

O'Sullivan, Denis (San Francisco, 1868-1908, Columbus, O.). Gifted Irish-American baritone, pupil of Ugo Talbo, Karl Formes, Vannuccini, Santley, Shakespeare, and Sbriglia, appearing from 1895 in Great Britain in both concert and opera (première of Stanford's Shamus O'Brien in 1896) and touring in light opera in America in 1897-99. In England he was especially valued as the sympathetic interpreter of songs in many languages. G., A.

O'Sullivan, Patrick (Louisville, Ky. 1874). Irish-American pianist, pupil of W. Frese, Bauer, Ph. Scharwenka and W. Berger, from 1904 appearing in Paris and Berlin, from 1911 conductor of the Irish Choral Society in Chicago and since 1915 teacher at the Louisville Conservatory.

Has written Heraklius and Fantaisie Irlandaise for orchestra (the latter with piano), Epithalamium for chorus and string-quartet, piano-pieces and songs, besides a collection of 65 Irish duets.

Othegraven, August von (Cologne, 1864). Rhenish choral composer, pupil of the Cologne Conservatory (Mozart prize) and since 1889 teacher there, gaining the title of professor in 1914. Has written the fairy-drama Die schlafende Prinzessin, 1907, the operetta, Poldis Hochzeit, 1912, the oratorio Marienleben, 1919, the choral works Der Milchbrunnen, Meine Götting and Abend auf Golgotha, many shorter choruses with orchestra or a cappella, choral settings of folk-songs, etc.

Othmayr, Kaspar (1515-1553). 16th C. G.

Otis, Philo Adams (Berlin Heights, O. 1846). American business man in Chicago, always active in music (pupil of Buck and Eddy), from 1872 an officer of the Apollo Club and from 1893 of the Symphony Orchestra, besides interest in many other enterprises. Has written 2 sacred cantatas and other church-music. A.

Ott, Hans and Johannes. 16th C. G.

Ottani, Bernardino (Bologna, 1736-1827, Turin). Prolific Italian composer, pupil of Martini, from 1758 maestro at S. Giovanni in Monte in Bologna, then at the Hungarian College and from 1779 at the Cathedral in Turin and also conductor at the Opera. Wrote 12 operas (1767-89), 2 oratorios, nearly 50 masses, Psalms, motets and other fine church-music.

Ottenheimer, Paul (Stuttgart, 1873). Württemberger conductor, trained at the Stuttgart Conservatory, from about 1895 theater-conductor at Augsburg, Treves, Linz, Gratz, Nuremberg and Prague, from 1913 opera-director at Darmstadt and in 1914 De Haan's successor as court-director. Has written the operettas Heimliche Liebe, 1911, and Der arme Millionär, 1913.

Otterström, Thorvald (Copenhagen, 1868). Danish composer, pupil of Sophie Menter, since 1892 teaching in Chicago. Has written an orchestral Canon, Choral and Fugue, an American Negro Suite, a piano-quintet, sonatas for violin and for 'cello, numerous canons and fugues for piano, concert-studies, various other piano-pieces, a collection of Negro slave-songs arranged for chorus and many arrangements of Indian songs for piano. A.

Otto, Ernst Julius (Königstein, 1804-1877, Dresden). Able Saxon choirmaster and composer, trained at the Dresden Kreuzschule and Leipzig University, from 1825 teaching at the Blochmann Musikinstitut in Dresden and in 1830-75 cantor at the Kreuzkirche, making the choir famous, besides being for many years choirmaster at the leading evangelical church and director of the Liedertafel. Wrote the operas Das Schloss am Rhein, 1838, Der Schlosser von Augsburg, the oratorios Des Heilands letzte Worte, Die Feier der Erlösten am Grabe Jesu and Hiob, 4 comic operas for amateurs, masses, festival cantatas, a Te Deum, motets, and especially a long series of capital choruses and part-songs for men's voices (including several cycles), fine songs and good piano-pieces. Memoir by Scheumann, 1904. G.

Otto, Georg (?1544-1619). 16th C. G.

Otto, Jakob August (Gotha, 1762-1830, Weimar). Saxon violin-maker, in court-service at Weimar, author of a work on the mechanical construction of stringed instruments (1817 and later revisions and translations). G.

Otto, Stephan (?1594-?). 17th C. G.

Otto, Valerius. 17th C.

Otto-Alvsleben, Melitta (Dresden, 1842-1893, do.). Saxon operatic soprano, pupil of Thiele, from 1860 appearing at the Dresden Opera in coloratura rôles and also in concert, from 1873 a favorite in England, in 1875-76 at Hamburg and in 1877-83 again at Dresden (visiting America in 1879 to sing at the Cincinnati Festival). In 1866 she married the customs-official Max Otto of Dresden. G.

Oudin Eugène Espérance (New York, 1858-1894, London). French-American baritone, originally a practicing lawyer, but from 1886 appearing in light opera in New York and in 1891 in London (première of Sullivan's Ivanhoe), but making his best English success in song-recitals, though in 1893-94 he made a fine impression in grand opera in Russia. His sudden death cut short a career of much promise. G.

Oudrid y Segura, Cristóbal (Badajoz, 1829-1877, Madrid). Spanish composer, from 1850 writing over 30 zarzuelas (some with Barbieri, Gaztambide, Rogel, Caballero, etc.), from 1867 chorusmaster at the Italian Opera in Madrid and from 1872 conductor at the Zarzuela or Oriente Theaters.

Oulibichev [Ul'byšev], Alexander Dimitrievitch d' (Dresden, 1794-1858, n. Nijni Novgorod). Russian-Saxon diplomat and Mozart enthusiast. Author of a significant life of Mozart (3 vols. 1844, 2d German ed. 1859), which contained remarks as to Beethoven's later works that were severely attacked by Lenz, leading to a further work by Oulibichev, Beethoven, ses Critiques et ses Glossateurs, 1857, which was still more condemned. G.

Ouseley, Frederick Arthur Gore (London, 1825-1889, Hereford). Eminent English clergyman, organist, theorist and composer, educated at Oxford University (M. A. 1849, Mus.D. 1854), from 1856 vicar at Tenbury and warden of the new St. Michael's College there, to the development of which he gave lavishly of both energy and means. From 1855 he held the posts of professor of music at Oxford (following Bishop) and also of precentor at Hereford Cathedral. He was noted as teacher of strict composition and as organist, excelling in extemporization. Author of three fine text-books on harmony (1868, 3d ed. 1883), counterpoint and fugue (1868, 2d ed. 1884) and form, etc. (1875, 2d ed. 1886) with many articles in Grove's Dictionary, 1st ed. (1880-89) and collections of services (1853), of chants (1872, with E. G. Monk), etc. Wrote the oratorios The Martyrdom of St. Polycarp, 1854, and Hagar, 1873, 11 services, nearly 90 anthems, 2 organ-sonatas, over 30 preludes and fugues, many other organ-pieces, a string-sextet, 2 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, 2 piano-trios, other piano-pieces, many part-songs, glees, songs, etc., besides an edition of O. Gibbons' works. Mus.D. of Durham and Cambridge Univs. (1856, '62) and LL.D. of Cambridge and Edinburgh (1883, '85). His title as baronet descended to him from his father, who was British ambassador in Persia and Russia. He collected a notable library, which he left to St. Michael's College. Memoirs by Havergal, 1889, and Joyce, 1896, and see article on St. Michael's in Musical Times, 1900. G.

Pabst, August (Elberfeld, 1811-1885, Riga). Rhenish cantor at Königsberg and later head of the Riga Conservatory. Wrote 4 operas, including Die letzten Tage von Pompeji, 1851.

Pabst, Louis (Königsberg, 1846), son of the above. Prussian pianist, from 1862 touring in Germany, England (1867) and Russia (from 1869), after 1876 appearing in Austria and Germany. In 1885 he went to Australia, but in 1894 was again in England and from 1897 in Russia, settling in Moscow as teacher in the Philharmonic music-school. In 1875 he started a music-school at Riga and in 1887 one at Melbourne, besides a musical society. Has written piano-pieces, a trio, songs and 2/melodramas.

Pabst, Paul (Königsberg, 1854-1897, Moscow), brother of the foregoing. Prussian pianist, pupil of Liszt, from 1878 teacher at the Moscow Conservatory and from 1883 its director, as well as in 1881-82 conductor of the Imperial Society concerts. Wrote a piano-concerto, a piano-trio (memorial of A. Rubinstein) and many effective transcriptions from the latter's Demon, Tchaikovsky's Eugen Onegin and Ma-zepa and other operas.

Pacchiarotti, Gasparo (Fabriano, 1744-1821, Padua). Famous Italian artificial operatic soprano, trained as choirboy at Forlì, from 1760 taking secondary parts at Venice, Vienna and Milan and from 1769 becoming one of the foremost artists in Italy and from 1778 in London, holding his place till his retirement in 1792. His voice was remarkably fine and his skill as a musicianly interpreter exceptional. With A. Calegari he drafted a vocal method (not published till 1836). Memoir by G. E. Pacchierotti, 1844. G.

Pacchierotti, Ubaldo (1876-1916, Milan). Italian composer of the operas La Lampada, 1899, L'Albatro, 1905, Eidelberga Mia, 1908, and Il Santo, 1913.

Pacchioni, Antonio Maria (1654-1738). 17th C. G. Pace, Pietro. 17th C. G.

Pacelli, Asprilio (?1570-1623). 17th C. G.

Pache, Johannes (n. Dresden, 1857-1897, Limbach). Saxon choral conductor, in his later years organist and cantor at Limbach. Wrote the choral works Niedervaldfahrt, Des Liedes Heimat, Mondaufgang, Lenzwinne and Lenzesauber, all for men's chorus and orchestra, songs and the comic opera Tobias Schwalbe.

Pache, Joseph (n. Waldenburg, 1861). Silesian choral conductor, pupil of the Munich Conservatory and of Klindworth, Bruch, Barth and Hey, removing in 1891 to America and, after teaching and leading choral societies in or near New York, since 1894 conductor of the Oratorio Society in Baltimore, besides starting a women's chorus there and for seven years directing a chorus in York, Pa. A.

Pachelbel, Johann (1653-1706). 17th C. G.

Pachelbel, Wilhelm Hieronymus (Erfurt, 1655-1764, Nuremberg), son of the preceding, Saxon organist, from 1706 at the Jacobkirche in Nuremberg and from 1725 at the Sebalduskirche. See organ-works given in Denkmäler d. Tonkunst in Bayern, ii. He may have followed his father at the Sebalduskirche in 1706. G.

Pachler-Koschak, Marie Leopoldine (Graz, 1792-1855, do.). Fine Styrian pianist, noted because highly commended by Beethoven in 1817 for her interpretation of his works. In 1816 she married the lawyer Karl Pachler. See sketch by her son, Faust Pachler, 1865, as to her connection with Beethoven.

Pachmann, Vladimir de (Odessa, 1848). Eminent Russian pianist, pupil of his father and the Vienna University, in 1869 appearing in Russia, but not again until 1877 (Germany) and from 1880 (Vienna, Paris), then becoming known throughout Europe and in England (from 1882), besides visits to America (from 1891). His technical skill has always been extraordinary, especially in delicacy and refinement of tone, and he has keen sympathy with works of romantic sentiment, but his interpretations tend to be whimsical and uneven at best, while generally lacking in majesty, profundity and sustained passion. Many eccentricities of stage-manner, also, detract from the finest effectiveness. With all these drawbacks, however, his individuality is impressive. In 1885 he received the Order of Danebrog from the King of Denmark and in 1916 the Beethoven medal from the London Philharmonic. In 1884-95 he was the husband of the Australian pianist Maggie Oakley (later wife of Fernand Labori), who joined in his first American tour. In 1912 he intermitted his trips to America (till 1923), but continued playing in London at intervals. G.

Pachulski, Heinrich (n. Siedlce, 1859). Russian (Polish) pianist, pupil of Strobl, Zelenski and the Moscow Conservatory, since 1886 teacher at the latter. Has written an orchestral suite, Marche Solennelle (with piano) and fantasia (with piano), 2 piano-sonatas, 12 preludes, concert-études and good transcriptions from Tchaikovsky's orchestral works, besides songs, etc.

Pachymeres, Georgios (1242-1310?). 13th C.

Pacini, Giovanni (Catania, 1796-1867, Pescia). Noted Sicilian composer, pupil of his father, Marchesi, Mattei and Furlanetto, beginning to write for the stage at sixteen and maintaining a steady and facile production throughout his life. In 1835 he started a Musical Institute at Viareggio which had great success (later removed to Lucca). In 1854 he visited Paris. His style was modeled on that of Rossini, with a peculiar melodic fluency of his own, though unsustained by solid structure. Wrote in all over 80 operas (from 1813), including Cesare in Egitto, 1822, Niobe, 1826, Saffo, 1840 (his best work), Medea, 1843, La Regina di Cipro, 1846, Nicolò de' Lapi, 1855, etc., several oratorios, many occasional cantatas, hymns and choruses, many masses, Requiems and other sacred music, a Dante symphony, an octet for strings and wood-wind, several string-quartets, 2 piano-trios, other chamber-music, duets, arias and songs. Author of various essays, addresses and text-books and an autobiography (1865, revised by Cicconetti, 1872, and by Magnani, 1875). Memoir, 1896 (anonymous). G.

Pacius, Friedrich (Hamburg, 1809–1891, Helsingfors). Eminent North German violinist, pupil of Spohr, from 1834 active at Helsingfors, where he was music-director at the University, from 1835 head of a choral society and from 1845 conductor of important symphony-concerts. These undertakings, with his own works, made the city the center for progressive musical culture in Finland. Wrote the operas Kung Karls Jakt, 1852 (the first Finnish opera) and Loreley, 1887, music for Topelius' Prinsessan af Cyprien (1860), a violin-concerto, a fantasia for violin and orchestra, many choruses and excellent songs (many national). In 1856 he received the Order of Vasa, in 1860 was named professor and in 1877 made Ph.D.

Padelford, Frederick Morgan (Haverhill, Mass. 1875). Since 1891 professor of English at the University of Washington (Seattle), author of a monograph on Old English Musical Terms, 1899. A.

Paderevski, Ignaz Jan (Kurilovka, 1860). Distinguished Polish (-Russian) pianist, composer and statesman, trained at the Warsaw Conservatory and under Kiel, Urban, Leschetizky and Mme. Essipov, making a small Russian tour in 1876 and appearing at Vienna in 1887, in Paris in 1888, in London in 1890 and in America in 1891, establishing himself as one of the greatest masters of the keyboard, soon acclaimed in Germany and then known through tours in all parts of the world. In 1883–84 he taught at the Strasburg Conservatory (where he met Modjeska and was led by her to enter upon the virtuoso-career). In 1909–13 he was head of the Warsaw Conservatory. His intense interest in Poland was early manifested in princely gifts and during the World War led to his active participation in all efforts to achieve Polish independence. In 1919–20 he served as premier in the new Republic. He then retired to his estate in California, though without losing his connection with Polish affairs, but in 1922–23 made a triumphant return to the concert-stage. Has written the operas Manru, 1901, and Sakuntala (not yet given), a symphony (1909), a piano-concerto, a Fantaisie Polonoise for piano and orchestra, sonatas for violin and for piano, numerous piano-pieces (Krakowiak, Élégie, several Danses Polonoises, Chants du Voyageur, toccatas, variations and fugue, etc.) and some songs. Sketches by Finck, 1895, Vaughan, 1907, and Hadden, 1913 (in Modern Musicians). G. A.

Padilla, Lola Artôt de (Sèvres, 1885), daughter of the following. Excellent French soprano, pupil of her mother, early singing in concert and in 1903 at the Opéra-Comique. After a long tour in 1905–08 she was engaged at the Komische Oper in Berlin and since 1909 at the Royal Opera. Her fine voice and her dramatic intensity make her specially successful in many characteristic modern works, in Mozart's operas and also in lieder-singing.

Padilla y Ramos, Mariano (Murcia, 1842–1906, n. Paris). Spanish operatic baritone, pupil of Mabellini, from about 1865 favorably known in Italy, Spain, Russia, Austria and Germany. In 1869 he married the eminent French soprano Désirée Artôt (q. v.). G (Artôt).

Paër, Ferdinando (Parma, 1771–1839, Paris). Eminent Italian conductor and composer, for a time pupil of Ghiretti (violin), from 1791 conductor at one of the Venice theaters, from 1797 at Vienna (where his wife sang at the Italian Opera), from 1802 court-director at Dresden (following J. G. Naumann), from 1807 court-director to Napoleon at Paris and in 1812–27 Spontini's successor as conductor at the Italiens (in 1824–26 in conjunction with his rival Rossini). In 1832 he was reinstated in charge of the court-music. He was admitted to the Légion d'Honneur in 1828 and to the Académie in 1831. Throughout his career he produced a constant stream of operas in the current Italian style, always with graceful melodiousness, but without much depth or nobility. After going to Vienna his style was somewhat influenced by that of Mozart. He was most successful in comedy. Wrote over 40 operas (from 1789), including I Pretendenti Burlati, 1790, Tamerlano, 1796, Camilla, 1799 (his best work), Sargino, 1803, Leonora, 1804 (same subject as of Beethoven's Fidelio), Didone Abbandonata, 1810, Agnese, 1819, and Le Maître de Chapelle, 1821 (still occasionally given), 3 oratorios, several cantatas, some motets, much other vocal music, the orchestral Symphonie Bacchante, Vive Henri IV (variations), military marches and dances, waltzes for wind, 3 piano-sonatas, a piano-fantasia with wood-wind, and some piano-pieces. Memoir by Colobran, 1839, and see Massé and Deschamps, Paër et Rossini, 1820. G.

Paganini, Niccolò (Genoa, 1782–1840, Nice). Extraordinary Italian violinist, pupil of Servetto, G. Costa, Ghiretti and Rolla, first appearing when but nine (playing original variations) and by 1797–98 fully embarked on concert-giving, until 1828 wholly in Italy (where in 1805–08 he held a court-position at Lucca) and then at Vienna, Berlin (1829), Paris and London (1831). His unparalleled virtuosity and his power to play upon popular enthusiasm made him conspicuous everywhere—a veritable sensation. His enormous gains were often squandered in gambling or dissipation, though he was not without thrifty capacity and some generous impulses. His marvelous feats of dexterity, his use of unusual tunings of the strings, his novel experiments with harmonics and pizzicato effects, his daring whimsicalities and his rather bizarre appearance—all these tended to create an uncanny impression, so that he was often alleged to be in league with the Evil One. Within certain limits, however, he had extreme artistic importance, especially in revealing the technical possibilities of his instrument and in devising means to bring them out. But he had small capacity in the interpretation of works of large calibre or in ensemble-playing. As composer he sought almost wholly to make that which he himself could render effective as display. Wrote 2 concertos, the famous 24 Caprici (solo), the Moto Perpetuo (with orchestra), variations on several airs (as God save the King, Il Carnevale di Venezia, Di tanti palpiti, Baracubà, etc.), 2 sonatas for violin and guitar, 3 quartets for strings and guitar, and one or two works not published. Several of his works have been edited by later masters, while both Schumann and Liszt transcribed the Caprici for piano and Brahms made a long series of variations on one of his themes. Memoirs or critiques by Guhr, 1829, Schottky, 1830, Schütz, 1830, Harrys, 1830, Du Rivage, 1830, Vineta, 1830, Anders, 1831, Conestabile, 1851, Fétis, 1851, Bruni, 1873, Niggl, 1882, Stratton, 1907, Prod'homme, 1907, Bonaventura, 1911, Kapp, 1913, etc. G.

Page, John (?—1812, London). English choir-singer, from 1790 at St. George's, Windsor, from 1795 deputy at the Chapel Royal and St. Paul's in London and from 1801 regularly at the latter. Edited the important Harmonia Sacra, 3 vols. 1800 (about 75 anthems of the 16–18th cents.), A Collection of Hymns, 1804, Festive Harmony, 4 vols. 1804 (madrigals, glees, etc.), the music performed at Nelson's funeral in 1806 and some of Handel's Chandos Anthems (1808, with Sexton). G (with contents of Harmonia Sacra).

Page, Nathaniel Clifford (San Francisco, 1866). American composer of light operas, cantatas and songs, mostly self-taught, since 1895 in New York (except in 1905–10, when he was on the Ditson staff in Boston). His works include the opera The First Lieutenant, 1889, music for The Moonlight Blossom (1899), A Japanese Nightingale (1903) and many other plays, the orchestral Dream Suite (1896), Village Scenes, Fantaisie Symphonique, etc., some piano-pieces and many songs. He has also edited several song-collections. A.

Pagella, Giovanni (Spezia, 1872). Italian church-musician, self-taught, with study at the Paris Schola Cantorum and the Ratisbon Music School, since about 1900 organist and maestro at S. Giovanni Evangelista in Turin. Has written over 15 masses, many litanies and motets, the sacred dramas Job and Judith, 2 organ-sonatas, an arrangement of Palestrina's Missa Pope Marcelli a 4, secular choruses and songs.

Pahissa, Jaime (Barcelona, 1880). Spanish (Catalonian) composer, pupil of Morera, writing the operas La Presó de Lleida, 1906, Canigó 1910, Gala Placidia, 1913, La Morisca, 1919, and Marianela, 1922, the symphonic poems El Combate, El Camino and En las Costas Mediterráneas, a sinfonietta, an overture and other orchestral pieces, besides works for piano, violin and voice.

Pailliard. Noted family of Swiss makers of music-boxes, established at Ste. Croix (n. Yverdon) in 1814 and greatly developed from 1850, when a branch was established at New York by M. J. Pailliard (d. 1868). A.

Paine, John Knowles (Portland, Me. 1839–1906, Cambridge, Mass.). Eminent American organist, teacher and composer, pupil of Kotzschmar, Haupt Teschner and Wieprecht, in 1861 giving organ-concerts in Germany and America and from 1862 at Harvard University, where from 1875 he was full professor and also in 1862–82 University organist. His gifts as player and teacher, with the soundness of his artistic culture, gave him great and fruitful influence. Wrote the opera Azara (original text, 1901, given in concert, 1906), the oratorio St. Peter, 1873, the cantatas The Realm of Fancy, 1882, Phoebus, Arisel, 1882, The Nativity, 1883, and Song of Promise, 1888, a mass (1867), music for Sophocles' Edipus Tyrannus (1881) and Aristophanes' Birds (1901), choral Hymns for the expositions at Philadelphia (1876), Chicago (1893) and St. Louis (1904), symphonies in C min. (1876) and A (Spring), 1880) the symphonic poems The Tempest (1877) and An Island Fantasy, 1888, the overture As You Like It (1878), a Duo Concertante for violin and 'cello with orchestra (1878), a string-quartet, a piano-trio and a larghetto and scherzo for trio, a violin-sonata, a 'cello romanza and scherzo, various fantasias and pieces for organ and for piano, 2 piano-sonatas, motets, part-songs and songs. His lectures on music-history were edited by A. A. Howard in 1907. G, A.

Paine, Richmond Peck (New Bedford, Mass. 1858). Able American organist and choral conductor, pupil of N. H. Allen, from 1878 organist at Hartford, Meriden and New Britain (Conn.) and in 1905–15 conductor of the Litchfield County Choral Union, developing the Norfolk (Conn.) Festivals into remarkable artistic importance. A.

Paisiello, Giovanni (Taranto, 1741–1816, Naples). Eminent Italian composer, trained at the Conservatorio di S. Onofrio (Naples), from 1759 teaching there and from 1763 rapidly advancing into popularity in the field of comic opera, soon competing with Piccinni and Cimarosa. From 1776 he was composer to Empress Catharine II at Petrograd, in 1784–99 court-director at Naples, in 1802–03 in Napoleon's service at Paris, and then again at the Naples court. He was extraordinarily prolific as composer, with a marked readiness in clear and simple melody, but no special gift of pathos, passion or sublimity. He avoided the florid embellishments that had been the rule and made much of trios, quartets and similar con-certain numbers, foreshadowing the final that later became significant. Of his over 100 operas among the most popular were Il Marchese di Tulipano, 1766, L'Idolo Cinese, 1767, L'Olimpiade, 1768, La Serva Padrona, 1769, La Contessa de Numi, 1773, Il Barbiere di Siviglia, 1776, Nitteti, 1781, Il Rè Teodoro, 1784, La Molinara, 1788, Nina, 1789, Zenobia, 1790, Didone Abbandonata, 1795, and Proserpine, 1803, besides over 30 masses, a Requiem, a Passion (1784), a Te Deum, many canticles and motets, 12 symphonies, a funeral march, 6 piano-concertos, a harp-concerto and sonata, 12 piano-quartets, 6 string-quartets, many sonatas and pieces for piano, etc. Memoirs and critiques by Arnold, 1810, Gagliardo, 1816, Lesueur, 1816, Quatremère de Quincy, 1817, Dominici, 1818, Schizzi, 1833, Palma, 1891, Pupino, 1908, Panareo, 1910, and Abert, 1919 (in Archiv für Musikwissenschaft). G.

Paix, Jacob (1556-1617?). 16th C. G.

Paladilhe, Émile (Montpellier, 1844). Able French composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1860), in 1892 succeeding Guiraud as a member of the Académie. Has written the operas Suzanne, 1878, Diana, 1885, Patrie, 1886, and Les Saintes Maries de la Mer, 1892 (sacred drama), the slighter Le Passant, 1872, and L'Amour Africain, 1875, the cantata Le Czar Ivan IV, 1860, a symphony, an overture, 2 masses and other church-music, and many popular songs. G.

Palestrina, Giovanni Pierluigi da (1525-1594). 16th C. G.

Palicot, Georges. French composer of the operas Alcyone, 1891, La Vendetta, 1903 (in concert), Rose de Provence, 1904, and La Balafre, 1907, besides some pantomimes.

Pallavicino, Benedetto. 16th C. G.

Pallavicino, Carlo (1630-1688). 17th C. G.

Palm, Karl Herman (in Vestergötland, 1863). Swedish clergyman and organist, in 1898-1904 cathedral-organist at Upsala and since 1911 pastor there. Author of a life of Harald Vallerius (1904, in Kyrkesången) and Om Folktonen i den Lutherska Församlingens ången, 1910, besides editing collections of folk- and war-songs and writing part-songs and songs.

Palme, Rudolph (Barby, 1834-1909, Magdeburg). Saxon organist, pupil of A. G. Ritter, long at the Heilige Geistkirche in Magdeburg and holding the title of royal professor. Wrote a large amount of organ-music, including 2 sonatas, a concert-fantasia (with men's chorus), chorale-preludes, 7 books of transcriptions, Der angehende Organist, Der praktische Organist, Das erste Orgelbuch, an Orgelschule, Das Orgelregistrieren, 1908, popular collections of choruses, part-songs and church-music.

Palmer, Horatio Richmond (Sherburne, N. Y. 1834-1907, Yonkers, N. Y.). American choral conductor, from 1861 issuing popular song-books at Chicago and from 1874 in New York, where in 1874-81 he led the Church Choral Union and in 1887-91 was dean of music at the Chautauqua (N. Y.) Summer Institute. Author of elementary text-books, etc. He received the title of Mus.D. from the (old) Univ. of Chicago in 1880 and from Alfred Univ. in 1881. A.

Palmgren, Selim (Björneborg, 1878). Able Finnish pianist, conductor and composer, trained at the Helsingfors Conservatory and by Ansgore, W. Berger and Busoni, from about 1900 touring as player in Finland and Scandinavia, besides in 1902-04 leading a choral society in Helsingfors and in 1909-12 conducting orchestral concerts at Åbo. In 1909 he married the soprano Mikki Pakarinen. Has written the operas Daniel Hjort, 1910, and Peter Schlehmühl, music for the fairy-play Takkino, the symphonic poem Floden, 2 piano-concertos, a piano-sonata, a Finnish suite, a Fantaisie, Finnische Lyrik (12 pieces), a theme and variations, other works for piano, men's choruses and songs.

Paloschi, Giovanni (1824-1892, Milan). Long editor for Ricordi, translating texts, issuing a musical calendar (1876, '78) and a handy dictionary of operas (4th ed. 1898) and writing for the Gazzetta Musicale.

Palotta, Matteo (Palermo, ?1689-1758, Vienna). Italian church-musician, pupil of the Conservatorio di S. Onofrio (Naples), in 1733-41 and from 1749 in court-service at Vienna, writing various masses, motets, etc., in a notably pure and elevated style, besides a treatise on plain-song. G.

Pals, Leopold van der (Petrograd, 1884), son of a Dutch father and a Danish mother. Dutch-Russian composer of strong modern tendencies, pupil of Johannsen and Dénéreaz, from 1907 living in Berlin and since 1915 at Arlesheim (near Basel). Has written a symphony, the symphonic poems Wieland der Schmied and Pans Tod, the orchestral sketches Frühling and Herbst, concert-pieces for violin and orchestra, piano-pieces, etc.

Paminger, Leonhard (1495-1567). 16th C. G.

Pander, Oscar von (Agershof, 1883). Livonian conductor, pupil of Rud. Louis and Gernsheim, in 1912-13 chorusmaster at the German Opera in Charlottenburg, in 1913-14 at the Mayence Opera, for a time at Lübeck, in 1915-16 at Kiel, from 1916 at Halle, from 1919 at Darmstadt and since 1920 and '21 leader of concerts at Offenbach and of the Rühl Gesangverein at Frankfurt. He has orchestrated Mussorgsky's Dances of Death, etc.

Pane, Domenico del. 17th C. G.

Panizza, Ettore (Buenos Aires, 1875). Argentine conductor, trained at the Milan Conservatory, from 1899 engaged in Italian theaters, in 1907-13 at Covent Garden in London and since 1916 at La Scala in Milan. Has written the operas Il Fidanzato del Mare, 1897, Medio Evo Latino, 1900, and Aurora, 1908, and translated Berlioz' Instrumentation (1913, 3 vols.). A.

Panny, Joseph (n. Vienna, 1794-1838, Mayence). Austrian violinist, pupil of his father, Bremberger and Eybler, from 1824 becoming known at Vienna and Venice (contacts with Paganini) and from 1829 by tours in Germany and Norway, finally starting a music-school in 1836 at Mayence. Wrote quartets, trios, solos for violin, 'cello and clarinet, some church-music, an opera and other vocal music. G.

Panofka, Heinrich (Breslau, 1807–1887, Florence). Silesian violinist and noted singing-teacher, pupil of Mayseder, Joachim Hoffmann and Bordogni, from 1827 appearing as violinist in Vienna, Munich, Berlin and Paris (1834), but from about 1840 turning to vocal instruction as a career. In 1842 (with Bordogni) he started a school in Paris, but in 1844 removed to London, where he was soon popular as teacher and for a time as assistant-conductor at Her Majesty's. In 1852 he returned to Paris and after 1866 lived in Florence. Author of vocal text-books and many vocalises, besides a violin-sonata, many pieces and a translation of Baillot's method. G.

Paneron, Auguste Mathieu (Paris, 1796–1859, do.). Able French singing-master, trained at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1813) and by Mattei and Salieri, from 1818 teaching in Paris. For a time he was accompanist at the Opéra-Comique and from 1826 professor at the Conservatory. Author of a comprehensive vocal method and a variety of excellent vocalises, besides other text-books. Also wrote about 200 graceful songs, the cantata Hermine, 1813, 4 short operas (1820–27), several masses, motets, etc. G.

Panum, Hortense (Kiel, 1856). Danish-German music-historian, pupil of Winding, Bendix, Rosenhoff and Tappert. Since 1907 she has taught at the Copenhagen Conservatory. Author of a Musikhistorie, 1897–1905 (in part by Behrend), a history of music in Denmark (2 vols. 1904–06), Haydn, Mozart og Beethoven, 1908, elaborate works on medieval and Danish instruments (1915, '18) and many articles in the I. M. G. Sammelbde. and other journals, besides a collection of Hausmusik and a small manual of music-history.

Panzner, Karl (Teplitz, 1866). Eminent Bohemian conductor, trained at the Dresden Conservatory and by A. Rubinstein, at first aiming to be a pianist. From about 1890 he was theater-director at Kottbus, Sondershausen and Elberfeld, from 1893 Paur's successor as opera-conductor at Leipzig, from 1899 at Bremen as director of the Philharmonie and from 1904 also of the Lehrer-Gesangverein (with several tours), besides in 1907–09 leading the Mozart-Orchester in Berlin, and since 1909 municipal director at Düsseldorf (following Buths) and also conductor in 1909–10 of the Hamburg Philharmonic. At various times he has served a guest-conductor, as at Barcelona, Paris, Petrograd, Rome and New York (1906). He holds the title of professor. Sketch by Gareiss, 1909 (in Monographien moderner Musiker).

Paolucci, Giuseppe (Siena, 1726–1776, Assisi). Italian Franciscan, pupil of Martini, in 1756–69 maestro at Venice and from 1771 at S. Francesco in Assisi. Author of an important treatise on counterpoint (3 vols. 1765–72). Memoir by Lindner, 1862 (in Echo). G.

Papavoine (?–1793, Marseilles). French violinist, from about 1750 at Rouen, from 1760 in the orchestra of the Italiens at Paris, after 1780 at the Hague and then at Marseilles. Wrote several concerted pieces for strings (some with wood-wind), violin-sonatas, clavier-pieces, an opera (1760) and many pantomimes.

Pape, Johann Heinrich (Sarstedt, 1789–1875, n. Paris). Hanoverian piano-maker, from 1811 active in Paris, at first with Pleyel and from 1815 independently. He experimented incessantly with novel sizes and shapes, with down-striking hammers, with compass stretched to eight octaves, with overstringing, with improved hammer-felts, etc. He was made a member of the Légion d'Honneur. G.

Papini, Guido (n. Florence, 1847). Italian violinist, pupil of Giorgetti, appearing from 1860 in Florence and later playing in the Società del Quartetto, from 1874 making annual tours to England and from 1876 to Paris, in 1893–96 professor at the Dublin Royal Academy and then settled in London. Has written concertos for violin and for 'cello, a piano-quartet, piano-trios, many pieces, exercises and a method. G.

Papperitz, Benjamin Robert (Pirna, 1826–1903, Leipzig). Saxon organist and theorist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory and from 1851 teacher there, as well as in 1868–99 organist at the Nikolaikirche, gaining the title of professor in 1882. Wrote organ-pieces, choruses and songs.

Paque, Guillaume (Brussels, 1825–1876, London). Able Belgian 'cellist, pupil of the Brussels Conservatory, after 1849 in Paris and at the Barcelona Conservatory, then at the Madrid Opera, from 1851 in England, playing in various orchestras. Wrote fantasias and transcriptions. G.

Paque, Marie Joseph Léon Désiré (Liège, 1867). Belgian composer, pupil of the Liège Conservatory, from about 1890 teaching successively at Liège, Sofia, Athens, Lisbon and Geneva, now in Paris. Has written the opera Vaïma, a Requiem, 2 violin-sonatas, 4 violasuites, 3 piano-sonatas, organ-pieces and songs.

Paradies [Paradisi], Pietro Domenico (Naples, 1710–1792, Venice). Italian harpsichord-teacher, pupil of Porpora, from about 1730 engaged in dramatic composition in Italy and from 1747 teaching in London, where he became popular. Wrote several operas, including Felonte, 1747, 12 clavier-sonatas and other pieces. G.

Paradis, Maria Theresia von (Vienna, 1759–1824, do.). Gifted Austrian pianist (blind), pupil of Koželuch, Salieri, Righini, Fribert and Vogler, from 1784 widely known through tours. Wrote (by means of a special notation) the fairy-opera Rinaldo und Alcina, 1797, an operetta, a melodrama, a funeral-cantata for Louis XVI (1794), a piano-trio, sonatas, variations, songs, etc. G.

Paray, Paul (Tréport, 1886). Talented French pianist and conductor, pupil of the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1911), since 1921 one of the conductors and vice-president of the Lamoureux concerts. Has written the oratorio Jeanne d'Arc, the cantata Janitzza, 1911, the orchestral suite Adonis Troublé, a string-quartet, sonatas for violin and for cello, Impressions for piano (variations) and about 20 songs.

Parent, Armand (Liège, 1863). Eminent Belgian violinist, trained at the Liège Conservatory (many prizes), from 1881 concertmaster at Pau and under Bilse in Berlin, in 1883-89 concertmaster in the Colonne Orchestra at Paris, in 1892 founder of his own Quartet (with Loiseau, Vieux and Fournier), which soon attained high rank, and of late years teacher at the Schola Cantorum. He has been active in promoting interest in recent French composers and in Brahms. Has written a string-quintet, 2 string-quartets, a violin-sonata, many fine études and pieces, etc.

Parent, Charlotte Francès Hortense (London, 1837). French-English pianist, pupil of Mme. Farrenc and since 1882 head of a school for piano-teachers in Paris. Author of a fine method (1872, 5th ed. 1907) and a guide to piano-literature (2 vols. 1901, '07).

Parepa-Rosa, Euphrosyne [Parepa de Boyescu] (Edinburgh, 1836-1874, London), daughter of a Wallachian noble and the sister of the English singer Edward Seguin. Gifted British soprano, trained largely by her mother, from 1852 appearing in opera at Malta, in Italy, at Madrid and Lisbon and from 1857 making a fine impression throughout England in both opera and oratorio, besides some tours on the Continent. She visited America in 1865-66, '67-70 and '71, each time in company with Carl Rosa, whom she married in 1867 and with whom she formed a troupe to give opera in English. In 1871 and '73 she sang at Cairo and in 1872 at the Lower Rhine Festival at Düsseldorf. Her greatest successes were in oratorio. Her first husband was Capt. Carvell (d. 1865), whom she married in 1863. G.

Parish-Alvars, Elias (Teignmouth, 1808-1849, Vienna). Able English (Jewish) harpist, pupil of Dizi, Labarre and Boesha, from 1831 touring throughout Europe and from 1847 settled at Vienna, becoming court-harpist. Wrote 2 notable harp-concertos, a concertino for two harps, fantasias, transcriptions and many pieces, including the Voyage d'un Harpiste en Orient (with Greek, Bulgarian, Turkish and other national melodies). He did much to extend the field of harp-playing. G.

Parisini, Federico (Bologna, 1825-1891, do.). Italian teacher and writer, pupil of the Bologna Liceo and later teacher there, in 1878-90 president of the Accademia Filarmonica and from 1881 Gaspari's successor as librarian at the Liceo. Author of a life of Martini (1887), a collection of his letters (1888), a catalogue of the Liceo library (2 vols. 1890-92, the first prepared by Gaspari) and a text-book in harmony. Also wrote 5 operettas and some church-music.

Parke, John (London, 1745-1829, do.). English oboist, pupil of Simpson and Baumgarten, from 1768 prominent in London in opera and concert, as well as at many provincial festivals and later in the court-band, retiring in 1815. Wrote several concertos. His brother William Thomas (1762-1847) was also a noted oboist. He extended the compass of playing to G in alt and wrote concertos, some overtures and songs, besides Musical Memoirs, 2 vols. 1830. G.

Parker, Bertie Patterson (Great Dunmow, 1871), brother of William F. below. Excellent English 'cellist, trained at the Royal Academy, London, and since 1907 professor there, besides playing in the Philharmonic and Symphony Orchestras. He is also a member of the noted Wessely Quartet. In 1912 he visited America with the orchestra under Nikisch and in 1914 went to Belgium and Austria with the Quartet.

Parker, Horatio William (Auburndale, Mass. 1863-1919, Cedarhurst, N. Y.). Distinguished American composer, pupil of Emery, Orth, Chadwick, Rheinberger and Abel, from 1885 instructor at St. Paul's and St. Mary's Schools at Garden City, N. Y., from 1886 also organist at St. Andrew's, New York, from 1888 at Holy Trinity there, with some teaching at the National Conservatory, and in 1893-1901 at Trinity in Boston. In 1894 he was made professor at Yale University in New Haven, Conn., for some years without giving up work in Boston. Under his direction the Yale School of Music became significant. He also founded a symphony orchestra in 1896 and reorganized an earlier choral society, thus making possible many concerts of magnitude. In 1893 the production of his Hora Novissima brought to light his conspicuous gifts in choral composition and before long gave him international fame. Many of his later works received fine recognition, and his two operas won prizes of unprecedented magnitude in 1911 and 1914. In 1902 he was made Mus.D. by Cambridge Univ. His works include Operas—Mona, 1912 (Metropolitan, New York), Fairyl-land, 1915 (Los Angeles Festival of the Nat. Federation of Women's Clubs). The text of both is by Brian Hooker.

Oratorios—Hora Novissima, 1893, The Legend of St. Christopher, 1898, Morven and the Grail, 1915. Hora Novissima was given in England at the Worcester Festival of 1899, being the first American work to be included in such programs.

Cantatas and other choral works—The Ballad of a Knight and his Daughter, 1884, King Trojan, 1885, Idylle, 1891 (from Goethe), Normannenzug (men's voices), The Kobolds, 1891, Harold Harfargat, 1891, The Dream-King and his Love, 1893, The Holy Child, 1893, Commencement Ode, 1895, A Wanderer's Psalm, 1900, Hymnos Andron, 1901 (ode for the Yale Bicentenary), A Star Song, 1901, Spirit of Beauty, 1905 (ode for dedication of the Albright Art Gallery in Buffalo), The Shepherd's Vision, King Gorm the Grim, The Norseman's Raid (men's voices), A Song of the Times, Greek Pastoral Scenes (women's voices and small orchestra), The Leap of Roushan Beg (men's voices), The Dream of Mary, 1918, A. D. 1919. Also Psalm 23 (women's voices with harp and organ), Adiant Angelorum Chori, 1899 (a cappella motet, prize from New York Musical Art Society), over 20 other choruses, mostly for men's voices, and Morning, Evening and 2 Communion Services, besides the masque Cupid and Psyche, 1916 (for jubilee of Yale Art School).

Solos with orchestra—Cáhal Mór of the Wine-Red Hand (baritone), Union and Liberty, 1905 (for inauguration of Roosevelt as President), Crépuscule (mezzo-soprano), Red Cross Hymn (contralto).

About 50 songs.

For orchestra—symphony in C min. (1885); symphonic poem, op. 56: overtures in E-flat (1883), A (1884), B-flat, Venetian (1884) and Collegiate; scherzo in G (1884); A Northern Ballad (1899); music for the Yale Pageant of 1916; organ-concerto (1902).

Chamber-music—string-quintet in D min.; string-quartet in F; suite for piano-trio; violin-suite.

Organ-sonata in E-flat; 30 organ-pieces.

18 piano-pieces.

Author of Music and Public Entertainment, 1911. G. A.

Parker, James Cutler Dunn (Boston, 1828–1916, do.). Able American organist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1854 teaching in Boston, from 1862 conductor of a choral club, in 1864–91 organist at Trinity Church and for many years also for the Handel and Haydn Society, in 1871–97 professor at the New England Conservatory and also examiner for Boston University. Wrote the choral works Redemption Hymn, 1877, St. John, and The Life of Man, the cantata The Blind King, 1886, services, other church-music and piano-pieces. Author of two text-books in harmony (1855, '70) and a translation of Richter's Harmonie. Mus.D. of Alfred Univ. A.

Parker, William Frye (Great Dunmow, 1855), brother of Bertie P. above. English violinist, pupil of the Royal Academy, London, and since 1882 professor there, besides in 1881–1904 teaching at the Guildhall School. He first appeared as soloist in 1871, in 1895–1910 was concert-master of the Philharmonic and has lately conducted one or two orchestral organizations.

Parkina [Elizabeth Parkinson] (Kansas City, Mo. 1882–1922, Colorado Springs). American soprano, pupil of Mme. Marchesi, making her stage-début at Paris in 1902, engaged at Covent Garden, London, in 1904–07 and widely known in England at festivals and in concert. In 1905 she made a brilliant tour in Australia. A.

Parlow, Kathleen (Calgary, 1890). Canadian violinist, pupil of Henry Holmes and Auer, first appearing in London when but fifteen and more formally in 1908 at Petrograd. After touring in northern Europe she visited America in 1910 and then almost every year. In 1911–12 she played many times with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. A.

Parma, Victor. Croatian composer of the operas Xenia, 1897, The Old Song, 1898, The Amazons of Zarin, 1904, The Head of the House, 1907, and The Temple of Apollo, 1909.

Parodi, Lorenzo (Genoa, 1856). Italian critic and composer, trained at Genoa and by Guiraud, long teacher in or director of the Liceo Zanella in Genoa and critic for the Caffaro. Has written the oratorios Joannes Baptista and Calvario, a Stabat Mater, masses, hymns, cantatas in memory of Donizetti and Verdi, an Overture Trionfale, a Suite Greca, etc. Author of Musicologia, L'Estetica del Canone and a manual of instrumentation.

Parratt, Walter (Huddersfield, 1841). Eminent English organist, trained by his father (organist at Huddersfield in 1812–62), and Cooper, so precocious that at ten he played Bach's entire Wohltemperiertes Clavier from memory and at eleven was already in church service. From 1854 he was at St. Paul's in Huddersfield, from 1861 organist to Lord Dudley at Witley Court (n. Worcester), from 1868 at Wigan, from 1872 Stainer's successor at Magdalen College, Oxford, with many other duties at Jesus, Trinity and Exeter Colleges, at St. Giles' and as leader of the Oxford Choral Society, and in 1882–1922 at St. George's, Windsor (following Elvey). Since 1883 he has been professor at the Royal College, London, in 1908–18 was professor of music at Oxford, since 1893 has been musician to the Queen (or King), and from 1916 music-dean at London University. He has also been prominent in many other fields, as in the Royal College of Organists and among the Freemasons (Grand Organist). In 1892 he was knighted and in 1894 made Mus.D. by Oxford Univ. Has written music for Agamemnon (1880), Elegy to Patroclus (1883) and The Story of Orestes (1886), some organ-pieces, anthems and songs. Author of the chapter on music in Ward's Reign of Queen Victoria, 1887, of many articles in Grove's Dictionary (from 1889), etc., and editor of Choral Songs in Honor of Queen Victoria (1899). Sketch in Musical Times, 1902. G.

Parry, Charles Hubert Hastings (Bournemouth, 1848–1918, n. Littlehampton). Distinguished English composer and writer, pupil of Elvey, W. S. Bennett, Macfarren, Pierson and E. Dannreuther. His impulse to composition asserted itself in early boyhood and continued to expand in manifold directions most clearly from about 1875. From 1883 he was choragus at Oxford University and in 1899–1908 professor there, and in 1894 he succeeded Grove as director of the Royal College in London. In 1898 he was knighted and in 1903 created a baronet. Mus.D. of Cambridge in 1883, of Oxford in 1884 and of Dublin in 1891, besides other degrees. He was exceedingly active in numerous associations and institutions, and gave lectures in many places. His literary work was exceptionally fine, both in the marshalling of the material and in its presentation, his publications including Studies of Great Composers, 1886, Summary of Musical History, 1893, The Art of Music, 1893 (enlarged, 1896), The Seventeenth Century, 1902 (vol. iii of the Oxford History of Music), a life of Bach (1910) Style in Musical Art, 1911, an introduction for The Art of Music (1914), and many poetical texts for choral and other works

(as for Judith), besides masterly articles in Grove's Dictionary (from 1880). His compositions include

- For orchestra—symphonies in G (1882), F (1883), C, English (1889), E min. (1889) and B min. (1914); overtures, Guillem de Cabestanh, 1879, and To an Unwriten Tragedy, 1893; Suite Moderne, 1886; Characteristic Variations in E min. 1897; Intermezzo Religioso, 1868, for strings; Suite in F, 1894, do.; piano-concerto, in F-sharp min. 1880.
- Chamber-music—string-quintet in E-flat (1880); string-quartet in G (1880); piano-quartet in F min. (1879); piano-trios in E min. (1878), B min. (1884) and G (1890); wind-nonet in B-flat (1880); violin-sonata in D (1889); violin partita in D min. (1877) and suite in F (1907); violin-romanza in F (1879) and 12 pieces (1895); 'cello-sonata in A (1880).
- For piano—sonatas in F and A min. and maj.; fantasia-sonata; 2 sets of variations (one on theme from Bach); 3 books of Sonnets and Songs without Words; Charakterbilder (7 studies); Miniatures; Grosses Duo (two pianos); Characteristic Popular Tunes of the British Isles (4 hands). Also for organ, Chorale Preludes, Pantasias, etc.
- Incidental music to Aristophanes' Birds (1883) and Frogs (1892); Ogilvie's Hypatia (1893); Hobbes' Repentance (1899); Æschylus' Agamemnon (1900); Aristophanes' Clouds (1905) and Acharnians (1914).
- Oratorios—Judith, 1888 (Birmingham), Job, 1892 (Gloucester), King Saul, 1894 (Birmingham).
- Other choral works—Scenes from Shelley's Prometheus Unbound, 1880 (Gloucester); The Glories of our Blood and State, from Shirley's Contention of Ajax and Ulysses, 1383 (Gloucester); Milton's Ode to a Solemn Music, 1887 (Bach Choir); Pope's Ode on St. Cecilia's Day, 1889 (Leeds); Milton's L'Allegro ed il Penseroso, 1890 (Norwich); Psalm 130, 1891 (Hereford); Choric Song, from Tennyson's Lotus-Eaters, 1892; Bridges' Invocation to Music, 1895 (Leeds); Magnificent, 1897 (Hereford); Bridges' Song of Darkness and Light, 1898 (Gloucester); Te Deum, 1900 (Hereford); War and Peace, 1903 (text by A. C. Benson and the composer); Voices Clamantium, 1903 (Hereford); The Love that Casteth out Fear, 1904 (Gloucester); The Pied Piper of Hamelin, 1905 (Norwich); The Soul's Ransom, 1906 (Hereford); The Vision of Life, 1907 (Cardiff); Beyond these Voices there is Peace, 1908 (Worcester); Hymn to the Nativity, 1912 (Hereford); English Te Deum, 1913 (Gloucester). Also O Lord, Thou hast cast us out, 1867; Swinburne's Eton, 1891; Benson's Ode to Music, 1901; anthem and processional for the coronation of Edward VII (1903); Te Deum for coronation of George V (1911); morning and evening services; a few anthems; about 25 part-songs.
- Scena for bass, The Soldier's Tent, 1900 (Birmingham). Over 80 songs, of which about 60 are contained in ten sets of English Lyrics (from 1886).
- About 15 hymn-tunes, mostly in Hymns Ancient and Modern (ed. of 1904).

His most effective works are those for chorus. Here his energetic invention of themes, rhythms and harmonies, his polyphonic skill and his virile conception of poetic and dramatic values had free play. But his vigorous intellectuality and thorough musicianship are everywhere evident. See notices in Musical Times, 1918, G, A.

Parry, John (d. 1782). Welsh harper, long in the service of Sir W. W. Wynne, in 1746 appearing in London and Cambridge. In 1742 he issued the earliest collection of Welsh airs, followed by two others. G (see also v. 495).

Parry, John (Denbigh, 1776–1851, London). Welsh clarinettist, in 1797–1807 bandmaster in the militia, then active as musical playwright for Vauxhall Gardens in London (till 1837) and in 1834–48 critic for the Morning Post. In 1820 and '22 he conducted Eisteddfodau, in 1821 being acclaimed Bardd Alaw (Master of Song). He was concerned in the founding of the Cambrian Society and in 1831–49 was treasurer of the Royal Society of Musicians. Author of a history of the harp, an account of a festival at Westminster Abbey in 1834 and several collections of Welsh melodies (1839–48). G.

Parry, Joseph (Merthyr Tydfil, 1841–1903, Penarth). Gifted Welsh composer, in boyhood and youth with but slight musical opportunity, but finally sent to the Royal Academy, London, on a fund raised in both Great Britain and America, winning medals in 1870–71, and continuing at Cambridge (Mus.D. 1878). From 1872 he taught at University College in Aberystwyth and from 1888 was lecturer at South Wales University College in Cardiff. In 1896 the Eisteddfod awarded him £600 for his services to Welsh music. Wrote the operas Blodwen, 1878, Virginia, 1883, Arienwen, 1890, Sylvia, 1895, and King Arthur (1897), the oratorios Emmanuel, 1880, and Saul of Tarsus, 1892, various other choral works, overtures, an orchestral ballade, a string-quartet, etc., besides collections of Welsh music. G.

Parsons, Albert Ross (Sandusky, O. 1847). Eminent American piano-teacher, pupil of Ritter, the Leipzig Conservatory, Tausig, Kullak and Weitzmann, since 1872 prominent in New York, till about 1885 serving as organist at Holy Trinity and the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church. From 1885 he taught at the Metropolitan College of Music, in 1890 was president of the Music Teachers' Nat. Association and from 1893 head of the Am. College of Musicians. He has been active in archæological and literary studies (Dante, Shakespeare) and in genealogy. Author of two works on piano-practice (1893, 1917), a study of Parsifal (1893), translations of Wagner's Beethoven (1870) and Lessmann's Liszt, and editions of Chopin's and Schumann's works. A.

Pasdeloup, Jules Étienne (Paris, 1819–1887, Fontainebleau). Eminent French conductor, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, where from 1841 he had intermittent duties as teacher, meanwhile serving as civil official and seeking recognition as composer. In 1851 he founded the Société des Jeunes Artistes du Conservatoire, an orchestra of students which he brought to efficiency in programs largely made up of works not well known. In 1861 he started the Concerts Populaires on a still broader scale and with notable success until interrupted by the war of 1870–71 and overshadowed by other enterprises. After their termination in 1884 he was given a remarkable benefit-concert at the Trocadéro, yielding almost 100,000 fr. His later efforts in 1885–87 were feeble. During the time of his success he became one of the leaders of the Orphéon (1857–72), directed concerts at the Hôtel de Ville and the Louvre and in 1868–70 was manager of the Théâtre Lyrique, where in 1869 he gave Wagner's Rienzi. G.

Paskievitch, Vassily. Russian violinist, from 1763 playing at the Petrograd Opera and later court-composer under Catherine II (from 1789 director of the court-balls). Wrote the operas The Evil-Bringer, 1772, Fedul, 1794, Oleg, 1794 (with Canobbio and Sarti), The Two Antons, 1804, and The Miser, 1811, music for Derzhavin's The Song and some songs. [The opera Fevey, 1786, once attributed to him, is by Briks.]

Päslér, Karl (n. Waldenburg, 1863). Silesian historical student, educated at Berlin University (Ph.D. 1889), with musical study at Breslau, in the Stern Conservatory (Berlin) and under Barth. Ill-health has confined his teaching activity to brief terms at the Stern Conservatory, in Königsberg and at the Berlin Hochschule. He gained the title of professor in 1910. Has written a trio, a violin-sonata, piano-pieces and songs, besides an arrangement of Bach's gamba-sonata in G min. for piano-trio, and edited Kuhnau's and Haydn's clavier-works.

Pasmore, Henry Bickford (Jackson, Wis. 1857). American organist and composer, pupil of J. P. Morgan, the Leipzig Conservatory, Shakespeare and Cummings, from about 1885 organist at St. John's in San Francisco and teacher at the University of the Pacific at San José. Has written 2 operas, a suite for organ and strings, the overture Miles Standish, a mass, some choral works, part-songs and songs. His three daughters make up the Pasmore Triad. A.

Pasquali, Nicolò (? -1757, Edinburgh). Italian violinist and composer, from about 1740 in Edinburgh. Wrote an opera, 2 oratorios, overtures with horns, trio-sonatas and violin-sonatas and songs. Author of a popular manual of thorough-bass (1757). G.

Pasqué, Ernst (Cologne, 1821-1892, Alsbach). Rhenish baritone, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1844 appearing at Mayence and Darmstadt, from 1856 manager at Weimar and in 1872-74 again at Darmstadt. Author of histories of opera at Darmstadt (1852, '68) and at Frankfurt (1872), Aus d. Tonwelt, 1878, a life of Vogler (1884), several opera-texts, novels, etc.

Pasquini, Bernardo (1637-1710). 17th C. G.

Passy, Ludvig Anton Edvard (Stockholm, 1789-1870, n. do.). Eminent Swedish pianist, organist and composer, pupil of L. Piccini, Field and Eggert, touring in Germany and from about 1815 in Stockholm as court-organist and leading teacher (Bauck, Wingen, Hallström and members of the royal family among his pupils), with the title of professor. Wrote 2 operas, 2 concertos and a fantasia for piano and orchestra, a symphony (not completed), 3 string-quartets, 2 piano-trios, organ-fugues, piano-pieces, arias and choruses with orchestra (including the ballade The Girl of the Charcoal-Kilns) and songs.

Pasta, Giuditta, née Negri (Saronno, 1798-1865, n. Como). Eminent Italian operatic soprano, pupil of the Milan Conservatory and of Scappa, appearing first in 1815 and more successfully in 1819. From 1822 till about 1835 she had phenomenal success, in spite of some vocal imperfections, because of the extraordinary truth and power of her dramatic art. For her Pacini wrote Niobe in 1826, Donizetti Anna Bolena in 1830 and Bellini Sonnambula and Norma in 1831. Her appearances in England in 1837 and 1850 and at Petrograd in 1840 were musically unfortunate. From 1829 she lived at a villa on Lake Como. Sketches by Bossini, 1833, and Angeloni, 1833. G.

Pasternack, Josef Alexander (Czenstochowa, 1881). Polish violist and conductor, trained at the Warsaw Conservatory, brought to America in 1895, from 1900 playing in the orchestra at the Metropolitan, New York, from 1910 director of the Sunday concerts there, in 1913-14 conductor at the new Century Opera and since then in charge of summer opera at Ravinia Park (near Chicago). A.

Pasterwitz, Georg von (n. Passau, 1730-1803, Kremsmünster). Bavarian Benedictine, pupil of Eberlin, in 1767-82 choirmaster at the Kremsmünster Abbey and then till 1795 living in Vienna. Wrote about 20 masses, a Requiem, much other church-music, 24 organ-fugues, 300 shorter pieces, several operatic works, including arias that were incorporated by other composers. See Huemer, Musik im Stifte Kremsmünster, 1877. G.

Paterson & Sons. Noted firm of music-publishers in Edinburgh, founded in 1819 by Robert Paterson (d. 1859), who was succeeded by sons and other relatives. They have issued much Scottish music. G.

Patey, Janet Monach, née Whytock (London, 1842-1894, Sheffield). Eminent English (Scottish) contralto, pupil of Wass, Mrs. Sims Reeves and Pinsuti, appearing first as a girl and making a fine reputation in concert and at festivals from 1865, from 1870 being counted the best of English altos (following Mme. Sainton-Dolby). She visited America in 1871, went to Paris in 1875 and made a tour in Australia in 1890-91. From 1866 she was the wife of John George Patey (1835-1901), who from 1858 was a favorite operatic and concert-baritone. G.

Paton, Mary Anne (Edinburgh, 1802-1864, n. Wakefield). Able Scottish soprano, of a musical family and appearing as both singer and violinist when but eight and in 1811-14 in London. From 1820 she became prominent in concert and from 1822 in opera (notably in 1824 at the English première of Der Freischütz and in 1826 at that of Oberon). In 1824-30 she was the wife of Lord Lennox and in 1831 married the tenor Joseph Wood, with whom in 1833-37 she made trips to America with great success. In 1844 she retired and in 1854-63 lived on the Continent. G, A.

Patterson, Annie Wilson (Lurgan, ?1867). Noted Irish organist, composer and writer, trained at the Royal Academy, Dublin, and by Stewart, in 1887-97 engaged in Dublin churches and since 1909 at Cork, in 1897-1908 living in London. In 1891-93 she directed a choral society at Dublin and in 1894 organized the national festival Feis Ceoil, which since 1897 has been held annually. In 1892-95 she was examiner for the University of Ireland (Mus.D.). Has written 2 operas, 3 cantatas, Irish tone-poems for orchestra and for piano, choruses and songs. Author of The Story of Oratorio, 1902, a life of Schumann (1903), Chats with Music-Lovers, 1908, How to Listen to an Orchestra, 1913, etc.

Patti, Adelina [Adela Juana Maria] (Madrid, 1843-1919, Craig-y-Nos, Wales). Distinguished Italian-Spanish operatic soprano, in many respects the most famous of the 19th century. She was brought up in New York, taught by her sister Carlotta, her half-brother Ettore Barili and Maurice Strakosch, besides being familiar with the stage through the activities of both father and mother as singers. Her formal débuts were in 1859 (New York), 1861 (London) and 1862 (Paris), after which she then entered upon a career of phenomenal brilliance in Europe and America which lasted forty years and even more. Her voice had extraordinary beauty and her skill in using it was consummate, but she had no large musicianship or great gifts as an actress. Her repertory was limited to about thirty rôles, mostly Italian. She was thrice married, in 1866-77 to Marquis de Caux, in 1886-96 to the tenor Nicolini and from 1899 to the Swedish Baron Cederström. Out of her ample wealth she built a famous castle at Craig-y-Nos in Breconshire, Wales. Sketches by Grave, 1865, Leyden, 1866, Charnacé, 1868, Vacano, 1875, Dalmazzo, 1877, Lauw, 1884, etc., with obituary by Klein, 1919, and book, 1920. G. A.

Patti, Carlotta (Florence, 1840-1889, Paris), sister of the above. Italian soprano, pupil of her parents and of Herz, spending her youth mostly in New York, where she appeared from 1861, mainly in concert (because of lameness debarred from an operatic career). From 1863 she became known in Europe, in 1879 married the Danish 'cellist De Munck and toured with him from Paris as a center. G.

Pattison, John Nelson (Niagara Falls, N. Y. 1845-1905, New York). American pianist, pupil of Thalberg, Reinecke, Henselt, Von Bülow and others, from about 1860 appearing in Germany, later in Italy and at Paris and from about 1870 touring in America with Parepa, Kellogg, Albani, Lucca, Ole Bull and others. In 1876 he gave recitals at the Philadelphia Exposition. Wrote the orchestral Niagara, an overture, a piano-concerto and many pieces. A.

Patton, Willard (Milford, Me. 1853). American vocal teacher, pupil of Buck, Bassini, Errani and Kohlmann from about 1875 concert-tenor and chorus-trainer in Maine and since 1883 teaching in Minneapolis. Has written the opera Pocahontas, the oratorio Isaiah, 1895, several cantatas, a Te Deum, operettas, choruses and songs, besides some orchestral pieces on national themes. A.

Pauer, Ernst (Vienna, 1826-1905, n. Darmstadt). Eminent Austrian pianist and pedagogue, pupil of Dirska, the younger Mozart, Sechter and F. Lachner, from 1847 choral conductor at Mayence, in 1851 playing in London and soon settled there, in 1859 becoming professor at the Royal Academy, in 1867 at the Nat. Training School and in 1883 at the Royal College. From 1861 he made a specialty of historical recitals and from 1870 lectured widely on various musical topics. In 1862 he represented Austria and Prussia at the London Exposition and later, in connection with tours on the Continent, received many official honors (from 1866 court-pianist of Austria). From 1878 he served as examiner at Cambridge University. Edited a notable series of collections of piano-music, English, French, German and Italian (almost 30 vols. in all) and prepared Novello primers on piano-playing, forms and music-aesthetics, besides many works of a pedagogical class. Wrote a symphony, a quintet for piano and wind, a piano-quartet, sonatas for violin, for 'cello and for piano, characteristic pieces and many fine piano-arrangements of symphonies and overtures (especially of Beethoven, Mendelssohn and Schumann). G.

Pauer, Max von (London, 1866), son of the above. Able English pianist, pupil of his father and V. Lachner, from 1885 touring on the Continent and in England, from 1887 teaching at the Cologne Conservatory and since 1897 at the Stuttgart Conservatory, where since 1908 he has been director (following De Lange). In 1893 he was made court-pianist at Darmstadt and from 1898 has held the title of professor. Has edited a new edition of Lebert and Stark's piano-method (1904) and written arrangements of symphonies by Haydn and Mozart. G.

Paul, Oscar (Freiwaldau, 1836-1898, Leipzig). Able Silesian writer, trained at Leipzig University (Ph.D. 1860) and Conservatory, becoming lecturer at the former in 1866 and teacher at the latter in 1869. Besides being a specialist in theory and history he was an expert in piano-making (representative of Germany at the Vienna Exposition of 1873). He was long critic for the Leipzig Tageblatt and in 1869-70 started two short-lived musical journals. Author of Die absolute Harmonik d. Griechen, 1866, Gesch. d. Claviers, 1868, translation of Boethius' De Musica (1872), Handlexikon d. Tonkunst, 1873, and Lehrbuch d. Harmonik, 1880, besides bringing out Hauptmann's Harmonik in 1868. G.

Pauli, Heinrich (Münster, 1865). Westphalian organist, trained at the Ratisbon Music School, in 1892-1904 cathedral-organist at Treves, where he then founded the journal Der Organist, besides issuing an organ-method.

Paulke, Karl (Bentschen, 1881). Prussian choral conductor, pupil of Geisler and the Berlin Hochschule, from 1907 cantor and teacher at Luckau, and since 1911 at Meiningen, where from 1914 he has been court-conductor, from 1915 director of church-music and also conductor of the Bach-Verein. Author of Musikpflege in Luckau, 1918, and a monograph on Römheld, 1919 (in Archiv für Musikwissenschaft.), besides collections of church-music, choruses and songs.

Paulli, Simon Holger (Copenhagen, 1810–1891, do.). Able Danish violinist and conductor, pupil of Schall and Wexschall, from 1828 playing in the court-orchestra at Copenhagen, from 1849 concertmaster and assistant-conductor and in 1864–83 director, besides in 1865–70 leading the Musical Union and in 1872–77 the Cecilia. From 1866 he was associated with Gade and Hartmann in directing the new Conservatory, where he started a chamber-music society in 1868. He conducted the first performances in Denmark of Wagner's Lohengrin, Meistersinger and Tannhäuser (1870–75). Wrote a singspiel, several ballets, an overture, violin-études and songs. Memoir by F. Bendix, 1913.

Paulus, Olaf (Christiania, 1859–1912, Stavanger). Norwegian organist and choral conductor, from 1889 cathedral-organist at Stavanger. In 1902 he visited America to lead festivals at Minneapolis and St. Paul. Wrote effective men's choruses and part-songs, piano-pieces and songs, besides issuing a collection of Finnish songs (1888).

Paulus de Florentia. 14th C.

Paumann, Conard (?1410–1473). 15th C. G.

Paur, Emil (Czernowitz, 1855). Eminent Austrian conductor, pupil of his father and the Vienna Conservatory, from 1870 violinist in the Vienna court-orchestra, from 1876 conductor at Kassel and then at Königsberg, from 1880 court-director at Mannheim and in charge of subscription-concerts, from 1891 conductor of the Leipzig Opera, from 1893 of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (succeeding Nikisch), in 1898–1902 of the New York Philharmonic (succeeding Seidl) and also in 1899–1900 directing Wagnerian works at the Metropolitan, in 1902–04 visiting-conductor at different places in Europe, in 1904–10 conductor of the Pittsburgh Orchestra and in 1912–13 for a time at the Berlin Opera. While in New York he was in 1899–1902 head of the National Conservatory (following Dvořák). Has written the symphony In der Natur, a violin-concerto, a string-quartet, a violin-sonata, piano-pieces and songs. His wife, née Marie Bürger (1862–1899), was an accomplished pianist. G, A.

Pauwels, Jean Engelbert (Brussels, 1768–1804, do.). Belgian violinist, trained at Brussels and by Lesueur, from 1788 also playing at the Italiens, in 1790–91 opera-conductor at Strasburg, then soloist at the Brussels Opera and from 1794 conductor, besides from 1799 leading notable orchestral concerts. Wrote 3 operas (from 1791), concertos for violin and for horn, 3 string-quartets, violin-duets, etc.

Pavesi, Stefano (n. Crema, 1779–1850, do.). Italian composer, pupil of the Conservatorio dei Turchini, Naples, from 1818 maestro at Crema Cathedral and also from 1803 writing about 60 operas, mostly for Venice, including Ser Marc' Antonio, 1810, and La Donna Bianca d'Avanello, 1830. Memoir by Sanseverino, 1851.

Payer, Hieronymus (n. Vienna, 1787–1845, do.). Austrian conductor, from about 1810 at the Theater an der Wien, from 1818 at Amsterdam, from 1825 concertizing at Paris and elsewhere on the physharmonica and in 1832–38 at the Josephstädter Theater in Vienna. Wrote some operas and operettas, much church-music, organ-concertos and fugues, piano-trios, etc.

Payne, Albert (Leipzig, 1842). English-Saxon publisher and writer, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1862 associated in business with his father in Leipzig and in 1886 beginning the issue of pocket-facsimiles of chamber-music scores. By 1892 this had grown to 212 numbers and was then transferred to Eulenburg (q.v.), who has greatly extended the enterprise. Author (under the pen-name 'A. Ehrlich') of handy manuals of famous pianists (1893), violinists (1893) and singers (1895), Das Streichquartett in Wort u. Bild, 1898, and Die Geige in Wahrheit u. Fabel, 1899. His wife, née Marie Mahlknecht (b. 1845), in 1870–77 was a successful opera-singer at Leipzig and Hamburg.

Peace, Albert Lister (Huddersfield, 1844–1912, Liverpool). Eminent English organist, precociously developed and playing in church when but nine, pupil of H. Horn and Parratt, from 1866 at Trinity Congregational Church in Glasgow, from 1870 also at the University, from 1879 at Glasgow Cathedral and from 1897 at St. George's Hall in Liverpool (following Best). His executive ability was phenomenal, extending over the whole range of organ-music. Mus.D. of Oxford Univ. in 1875. Wrote the cantata St. John the Baptist, Psalm 138, services, anthems, 3 organ-sonatas (in antique form), concert-fantasias and many shorter works, besides editing the Scottish Hymnal, 1885, and other service-books. G.

Pearce, Charles William (Salisbury, 1856). English organist, in 1871–73 at St. Martin's in Salisbury, from 1874 at St. Luke's (Old-Street) in London and in 1885–1916 at St. Clement's (Eastcheap). From 1882 he was professor at Trinity College and in 1908–12 dean of music at London University, besides in 1888–91 and '95–97 being examiner for Cambridge Univ., in 1901–94 for London Univ., in 1905–07 for Victoria Univ. (Manchester) and in 1911–13 for Durham Univ. Mus.D. of Cambridge Univ. in 1884. Author of several text-books in counterpoint, piano-playing and singing, besides writing church-music, organ-pieces and songs.

Pearce, Stephen Austen (London, 1836–1900, Jersey City, N. J.). Able English organist, trained by J. L. Hopkins and at Oxford University (Mus.D. 1864), from 1864 at St. Katharine's (Regent Sq.) in London and later at St. John's. In 1872 he removed to New York, where he was organist in a series of churches, including St. George's, the Fifth Avenue Collegiate (1879–85), Zion (1885–88), Ascension, St. Stephen's (R.C.) and the First Presbyterian in Jersey City.

He also taught singing at Columbia University and harmony at the College of Music, lectured at the General Theological Seminary (as also in Baltimore at the Peabody Institute and Johns Hopkins Univ.), from 1874 was critic for the Post, the Musical Courier and other papers, contributed to the Encyclopædia Americana and gave many piano- and organ-recitals. Wrote the children's opera La Belle Américaine, the oratorio Celestial Visions, the cantata The Psalm of Praise, an overture, an orchestral Allegro, piano-pieces and songs, besides editing several piano-methods and a dictionary of terms. A.

Pearsall, Robert Lucas (Clifton, 1795-1856, Wartensee). Gifted English vocal composer, pupil of Panny, Ett and others, spending most of his life on the Continent (from 1843 at Wartensee on Lake Constance). Wrote about 60 remarkable madrigals and part-songs, a large amount of fine church-music (both Anglican and Catholic), including a Requiem, Tenebræ, Psalms 57, 68 and 77, canticles, motets, etc., the cantata Saul and the Witch of Endor, 1808, a short ballet-opera, the overture Macbeth, etc., besides editing a Magnificat of Lassus and assisting on the St. Gall Gesangbuch (1863). He was expert in the application of the old vocal polyphony. A notable example of his skill is the 10-part ballade Sir Patrick Spens. See article by Squire in I. M. G. Sammelbde. viii. G.

Pechatschek, Franz (Wildenschwert, 1763-1816, Vienna). Bohemian violinist, pupil of Lambert and Dittersdorf, from 1783 active in Vienna as theater-conductor and leader of effective dance-music. Wrote much stage-music, masses and other church-music, symphonies, an overture, violin-pieces, etc. His son Franz (1793-1840) was also a noted violinist, from 1818 concertmaster at Hanover and from 1827 at Karlsruhe. G.

Pedersén, Mogens (? 1580-1630?). 17th C.

Pedrell, Carlos (Minas, 1878), nephew of the following. Uruguayan composer, pupil of his uncle and the Schola Cantorum (Paris), since 1906 active at Buenos Aires as school-inspector and lecturer, in 1915 founding a Sociedad Nacional de Músicos. Has written the operas Ardid de Amor, 1917, and Cuento de Abril, an overture and other effective orchestral pieces, choruses and many songs. A.

Pedrell, Felipe (Tortosa, 1841-1922, Barcelona). Distinguished Spanish composer and musicologist, wholly self-taught, beginning to be known as composer from 1874 and from 1888 as indefatigable historical student. In 1895-1903 he was professor at the Madrid Conservatory and in 1896-1903 lecturer at the Ateneo, besides in 1888-96 editing the Ilustración Musical Hispano-Americana. From 1903 he lived at Barcelona, where he edited La Música Religiosa. In 1894 he was admitted to the Spanish Academy. His seventieth birthday in 1911 was widely honored, especially by ecclesiastical dignitaries, and marked by a notable Festschrift. His books include a dictionary of terms (1894), the beginning of a general biographical lexicon of Spanish musicians (one vol. only, 1894-97), an introduction to instrumentation (1902), a sketch of old Spanish instruments (1902), a catalogue of the Barcelona Library (1908-09), a monograph on John I of Aragon (1909, in the Riemann Festschrift), Musicalerías, 1906, and collected essays (2 vols. 1911). More important yet are the collections Hispaniæ Schola Musica Sacra, 8 vols. from 1894, Teatro Lírico Español, 5 vols. 1897-98, Salterio Sacro Hispano, 1905, Antología de Organistas Clásicos de España, 2 vols. 1905-08, and the works of Vittoria (8 vols. 1903-13). Has also written the operas El Último Abencerraje, 1874, Quasimodo, 1875, Mazeppa and Tasse à Ferrare, 1881 (both short), Cléopâtre, 1881, La Celestina, 1904, and the trilogy (with Prologue) Los Pirineos, including El Conde de Foix, Rayo de Luna and La Jornada de Panissars, 1902, with the uncompleted El Rey Lear (1879) and the cantata Matinada, 1905, the choral works Cançon Latine, Messe di Gloria and Hymne à Ste. Thérèse, an a cappella Requiem, motets, antiphons and songs besides the symphonic poems Excelsior, El Conde Arnau and Glose (with chorus), the suite I Trionfi, the symphonic Cant de la Montanya, a Marche à Mistral, etc. Sketches or critiques by Tebaldini, 1897, Mitjana, 1901, Oliva, 1901, Belaguer, 1902, and Curzon, 1912 (in Nouvelle Revue), with bibliography by Reiff, 1921 (in Archiv. f. Musikwissenschaft.). G. A.

Pedrollo, Arrigo (n. Vicenza, 1878). Italian conductor and composer, pupil of his father and the Milan Conservatory. Has written the operas Terra Promessa, 1908, Juana, 1914, Sofonisba, Rosmunda, La Veglia, 1920 (short), L' Uomo che Ride, 1920, and Maria di Magdala, the mimodramas Oriente and Giuditta, 1916, a Sinfonia Descrittiva, a piano-quartet, a violin-sonata, Poemeti for chorus, 1918, etc.

Pedrotti, Carlo (Verona, 1817-1893, do.). Able Italian conductor and composer, pupil of Foroni, in 1840-45 conductor at the Italian Opera in Amsterdam, from 1869 at the Turin Opera and head of the Conservatory, besides leading popular concerts there, and from 1883 director of the new Liceo Rossini at Pesaro. Wrote the operas Lina, 1840, Clara del Mainland, 1840, Matilde, 1841, La Figlia del Arciere, 1844, Romeo di Monfort, 1846, Fiorina, 1851, Il Parrucchiere della Reggenza, 1852, Gelmina, 1853, Genoveffa del Brabante, 1854, Tutti in Maschera, 1856, Isabella d'Arragona, 1859, La Guerra in Quattro, 1861, Mazeppa, 1861, Marion Delorme, 1865, Il Favorito, 1870, and Olema la Schiava, 1872, besides some church-music and songs. G.

Peellaert, Baron de [Augustin Philippe Marie Ghislain] (Bruges, 1793-1876, Brussels). Belgian army-officer (from 1814), writing about 15 operas (from 1815), operettas, masses, many songs and 2 piano-trios. Autobiography, 1867.

Peerson [Pearson, Pierson], Martin (?1590-1651). 17th C. G.

Pelletan, Fanny (1830-1876, Passy). A cultivated French amateur who furnished means for the publication of standard editions of Gluck's two Iphigénies (edited by Damcke) and Alceste (edited by Saint-Saëns).

Pembaur, Joseph (Innsbruck, 1848-1923, do). Able Tyrolese composer, trained at the Vienna and Munich Conservatories, from 1875 director of the Music School at Innsbruck and leader of various choral societies, retiring in 1918. Wrote the opera Der Bauer von Langwell, 1898, the choral works Gott der Weltenschöpfer, Die Wettertanne, Bilder aus dem Leben Walthers von der Vogelweide, Spätherbst, Totengräberhochzeitlied, Zapfenstreich, Thermopylæ, Die Schlacht am Berg Isel and Ew'ge Ruh in Gott dem Herrn, a Requiem for the Tyrolese in the World War (1916), a Deutsche Festmesse and 7 a cappella masses, the melodrama Das klagende Lied, many a cappella men's choruses, many songs, the symphony In Tirol, an organ-sonata and piano-pieces. Author of manuals of harmony (1901) and conducting (1907).

Pembaur, Joseph (Innsbruck, 1875), son of the above. Tyrolese pianist and conductor, pupil of his father and the Munich and Leipzig Conservatories, in 1897-1900 teaching at the former and since 1902 at the latter, gaining the title of professor in 1912. In 1907-08 he conducted the Riedel-Verein, in 1910 followed Noë as director of an amateur orchestra and since 1921 has taught at the Conservatory. Author of Von d. Poesie d. Klavierspiels, 1912, and notes on two of Beethoven's sonatas (1915).

Pembaur, Karl (Innsbruck, 1876), son of Joseph (Sr.) above and brother of the preceding. Tyrolese organist and conductor, pupil of his father and the Munich Conservatory, since 1901 court-organist at Dresden and at first chorus-master and since 1913 second conductor at the Opera, besides from 1903 conducting the Liedertafel and in 1910-13 the Schumann (choral society). Has written the singspiel Seien Sie vorsichtig, a cappella men's choruses, a choral serenade, a mass, etc.

Peña y Goñi, Antonio (San Sebastian, 1846-1896, Madrid). From 1866 influential critic for the Madrid Imparcial and author of studies of Verdi (1875), Barbieri (1875) and Gounod (1879), Impresiones Musicales, 1878, and discussions of Spanish opera (1881, '85), besides writing a mass, the Basque cantata Viva Hernani, etc.

Peñalosa, Francisco. 16th C.

Pénavaire, Jean Grégoire (Leprieux, 1840-1906, Paris). French composer, pupil of Sivori, Morel, Elwart and Fétis, long theater-conductor in Nantes. Wrote 4 comic operas (1873-81), a ballet (1874), the symphonic poem La Vision des Croisés (with chorus), the overtures Torquato Tasso and Miguel Cervantes and other orchestral pieces.

Penfield, Smith Newell (Oberlin, O. 1837-1920, New York). American organist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory and by Delioux, from 1870 teaching in Rochester, Savannah and Brooklyn, and after 1882 in New York, where for many years he was organist at the Broadway Tabernacle. He was prominent in the state and national teachers' associations. Mus.D. of New York University in 1885. Wrote an overture, a string-quartet, Psalm 18, anthems, organ- and piano-pieces, songs, etc. A.

Penha, Michael (Amsterdam, 1888). Dutch 'cellist, pupil of the Amsterdam Conservatory and of H. Becker and Salmon, appearing at Amsterdam from 1907 and then touring in Europe, South and Central America and the United States (from 1916).

Penna, Lorenzo (1613-1693). 17th C.

Penny, George Barlow (Haverstraw, N. Y. 1861). American organist, pupil of Pinner, Buck, Goetschius and Eddy, from 1890 teacher at the University of Kansas (Lawrence), from 1903 at Topeka (Kan.) as city-organist, conductor of a choral society and teacher at Washburn College, and since 1911 organist at St. Andrew's in Rochester, N. Y., conductor of the Oratorio Society, head of the Conservatory and instructor at the University and Theological Seminary. Has written some church-music. A.

Pente, Emilio (Padua, 1860). Italian violinist, pupil of the Milan Conservatory, from 1884 teacher and critic at Padua, where he recovered many lost manuscripts of Tartini, in 1893 at Florence as teacher and (from 1895) as concert-player, winning such success, especially with historical programs, that till 1904 he toured throughout Italy and in Austria and Germany. Since 1905 he has worked in London, from 1909 as professor at the Guildhall School. He is a member of the Florence Accademia and of the Order of the Crown. Has edited many works of Tartini, including 2 concertos, quartets, trios, about 20 sonatas (with Angelelli and Zanon), etc., and written some original violin-music.

Pentenrieder, Franz Xaver (Kaufbeuren, 1813-1867, Munich). Bavarian organist, pupil of Kalcher and Stunz, succeeding the former as court-organist in 1826 and the latter as one of the court-directors and chorumaster at the Opera, besides being choir-master at the Ludwigskirche. Wrote the operas Die Nacht auf Paluzzi, 1840, and Das Haus ist zu verkaufen, 1846, cantatas, masses and motets.

Peppercorn, Gertrude (n. Guildford, 1878). English pianist, pupil of the Royal Academy (London), favorably known in Great Britain from 1896 and in the United States from 1907.

Pepusch, Johann Christoph (Berlin, 1667-1752, London). Eminent Prussian organist and theorist, largely self-taught, from boyhood holding a minor post at the Berlin court and in 1798 migrating by way of Holland to London, where he was soon active as violinist, cembalist and composer at Drury Lane. In 1712-18 he was musician to the wealthy Duke of Chandos and then married the singer Marguérite de l'Épine (whose fortune made him independent). From about 1715 he was connected with the Lincoln's Inn Theatre. In 1724 he joined Berkeley in a project for founding a college in the Bermudas, but abandoned it after being shipwrecked on the way. From 1737 he was organist at the Charterhouse (school). From 1710 he was the active promoter and leader of the Academy of Antient Music, to which much of his library was bequeathed. Mus.D. of Oxford Univ. in 1713. Wrote the masques Venus and Adonis, 1715, Apollo and Daphne, 1716, The Death of Dido, 1716, and The Union of the Three Sister Arts, 1723, music for Gay's famous Beggar's Opera (1728) and Polly (1729) and for The Wedding (1729), various odes, cantatas, anthems, concertos and sonatas. Author of a Treatise on Harmony, 1731, containing a belated attempt to revive the hexachordal system, and an essay on the Greek genera (1746). G.

Perabo, Johann Ernst (Wiesbaden, 1845–1920, Boston). Able Hessian pianist, brought up in New York, pupil of his father and the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1865–66 concertizing in the United States and then settling in Boston as a leading player and teacher. Wrote effective piano-pieces and transcriptions. G. A.

Pereira, Domingos Nuñez (d. 1729) and Marco Soares (d. 1655). 17th C.

Perepeltsin, Polycarp de (Odessa, 1818–1887, Petrograd). Originally a cavalry-officer, but also pupil of Lipinski, author of a dictionary (1884), a history of Russian music (1885), a musical almanac (1887) and various articles.

Perez, Davide (Naples, 1711–1778, Lisbon). Spanish-Italian composer, trained at the Conservatorio di Loreto (Naples), in 1735 beginning opera-writing and from 1739 choirmaster at Palermo, where he was also assistant court-director in 1741–48. From 1752 he was court-director at Lisbon. Wrote over 30 operas, including Siroe, 1740, Semiramide, 1749, Demofonte, 1752, and Solimano, 1757, excellent masses, motets, Psalms, Responsori de' Morti, etc. G.

Perez, Juan Ginez (1548–1612). 16th C. G.

Perez Casas, Bartolomé (Lorea, 1873). Able Spanish conductor, originally a clarinettist and bandmaster, then pupil of the Madrid Conservatory, founder of the Sociedad de Instrumentos de Viento and in 1915 (with the Circulo des Bellas Artes) of the Philharmonic Orchestra. Has written the lyric drama Lorenzo, the symphonic poem Calisto y Melibea, a Murcian suite, a piano-quartet, etc.

Perfall, Karl, Freiherr von (Munich, 1824–1907, do.). Able Bavarian choral conductor and composer, pupil of Hauptmann, from 1850 leader of the Liedertafel at Munich and in 1854–64 of the new Oratorienverein, and from 1864 music-intendant to the court (in 1867–93 in charge of the Opera). Wrote the operas Sakuntala, 1853, Das Conterfei, 1863, Raimondin, 1881, and Junker Heinz, 1886, 3 fairy-cantatas, 3 festspiele, men's choruses, etc. Author of histories of the Munich Opera (1892, '94) and Die Entwicklung d. modernen Theaters, 1899.

Perger, Richard von (Vienna, 1854–1911, do.). Able Austrian conductor and composer, pupil of Schnidtl, Zellner and especially Brahms (whose influence dominated his style), from 1890 Gernsheim's successor as head of the Rotterdam Conservatory and conductor of the Winter Concerts, in 1895–99 conductor of the Gesellschaft concerts in Vienna (following Gericke) and in 1899–1907 director of the Conservatory. Wrote the comic opera Der Richter von Granada, 1889 (original text), the singspiel Die 12 Nothelfer, 1891, the fairy-tale Das stählerne Schloss, 1904, a violin-concerto, a 'cello-serenade with strings, a string-quintet, 3 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, a string-trio, a trio-serenade and several songs. Author of a life of Brahms (1908) and a history of the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde (1912).

Pergolesi, Giovanni Battista (Jesi, 1710–1736, Pozzuoli). Gifted Italian composer, pupil of the Conservatorio dei Poveri (Naples), cut off by consumption after but a few years of activity. In comic opera he showed abilities that were ahead of his time and his sacred music was melodious and well written. Wrote in all about 12 operas, including Il Maestro di Musica, 1731, the famous intermezzo La Serva Padrona, 1733, and L'Olimpiade, 1735, 3 oratorios, the cantatas Orfeo, Giasone and others, the noted Stabat Mater, 4 masses, much other church-music, a symphony, a violin-concerto, 30 trios, a 'cello-sonata, etc. Memoirs by Boyer, 1772, Blasis, 1817, Villarsosa, 1831, '40, Fracassetti, 1843, Schletterer, 1880 (in Waldersee's Vorträge), Faustini-Fasini, 1900, Radiciotti, 1910, and Barchiesi, 1911. G.

Peri, Achille (Reggio Emilia, 1812–1880, do.). Italian composer, pupil of Gregori, Rabitti and Carafa, from 1840 opera-conductor at Reggio and later cathedral-maestro there. Wrote the operas Il Solitario, 1841, Dirce, 1843, Ester d'Engaddi, 1843, Tancredi, 1848, Orfeo e Diavolo, 1854, I Fidanziati, 1856, Vittore Pisani, 1857, Giuditta, 1860 (counted his best, rewritten 1866), L'Espiazione, 1861, and Rienzi, 1862.

Peri, Jacopo (1561–1633). 16th C. G.

Perinello, Carlo (Trieste, 1877). Italian-Austrian theorist and composer, pupil of Jadasohn, from 1904 teaching at the Trieste Conservatory and since 1911 at the Milan Conservatory. Has written the opera Rosmunda, a symphony, the symphonic poem Il Cigno Moriente, a piano-quintet, a string-quartet, a violin-romanza, piano-variations and other pieces, various songs (some with orchestra) and a Miserere for men's voices. Author of lives of Verdi (1900) and Casella (1904), translator of Jadasohn's Kontrapunkt (1898) and one of the editors of the Raccolta Nazionale.

Perini, Flora (Rome, 1887). Brilliant Italian operatic mezzo-soprano, pupil of Falcil, from 1908 active in Italy, Spain, South America, (from 1910), Russia and the United States (from 1915). She sang at the premières of Buciaro's Sogno d'Alma (1914) and Granados' Goyescas (1916). She is wife of Amleto Polattri. A.

Perne, François Louis (Paris, 1772-1832, do.). French music-savant, originally a chorus-singer and double-bassist at the Paris Opéra, but from about 1800 gradually absorbed in historical research, with some able sacred composition. From 1811 he followed Catel as harmony-professor at the Conservatory, where from 1816 he was inspector-general and in 1820-22 librarian. Important articles by him on Greek notation, music in the Greek Church, Deprés, Hieronymus of Moravia, the Troubadours, etc., appeared in the Revue Musicale, with an essay in Michel's Chansons de Châtelain de Coucy, 1830. Wrote church-music, a noted triple fugue (reversible), a text-book in harmony (1822), piano-methods, etc. G.

Perosi, Lorenzo (Tortona, 1872). Distinguished Italian composer, trained by Saladino and at the Milan Conservatory and the Ratisbon Music School, from 1895 maestro at Imola, in 1897-98 at S. Marco in Venice and then of the Papal Choir in Rome, though latterly with many absences, partly due to growing mental unrest. Has written the trilogy La Passione di Cristo, 1897 (including La Cena del Signore, L'Orazione al Monte and La Morte del Redentore), La Trasfigurazione, 1898, La Risurrezione di Lazaro, 1898, La Risurrezione di Cristo, 1898, Il Natale del Redentore, 1899, L'Entrata di Cristo in Gerusalemme, 1900, La Strage degli Innocenti, 1900, Mosè, 1901, Transitus Animæ, 1907, In Patris Memoriam, 1910, Dies Iste, 1912, and Giorni di Tribolazione, 1916, a Requiem (1898), a Te Deum, a Stabat Mater (1904), a Vespertina Oratio, about 25 masses, over 120 motets, Psalms and other church-works, many organ-trios and pieces, a symphony, the symphonic poems Dovei non Piangere and La Festa del Villaggio, 4 orchestral suites (including one with seven movements, each named after an Italian city), a suite for small orchestra, orchestral variations, concertos for violin and for piano, a suite for piano-trio, a violin-sonata, pieces for violin and for viola, etc. Sketches and critiques by Seytre, 1901, and Rolland, 1914 (in Musiciens d'Aujourd'hui). G., A.

Perosi, Marziano (b. 1875), brother of the above. Italian composer of the opera Pompei, 1912, the cantata Notte e Giorno, 1909, the elegy L'Addolorata, 1901, 3 symphonies for organ and orchestra, etc.

Perotinus Magnus. 12th C.

Perotti, Giovanni Agostino (Vercelli, 1769-1855, Venice). Italian church-musician, pupil of Mattei, from about 1790 opera-accompanist at Vienna and London, but from 1801 in Venice, where from 1812 he took Furlanetto's place as maestro at S. Marco and in 1817 succeeded him. Wrote an oratorio, many Psalms, much good church-music and the opera La Contadina Nobile, 1795.

Perrin, Émile César Victor (Rouen, 1814-1885, Paris). French impresario, in 1848-57 manager of the Opéra-Comique at Paris and in 1862-70 of the Opéra. Later he was at the Français. G.

Perrin, Harry Crane (Wellingborough, 1865). English organist, educated at Dublin under Bates, Pearce and Stewart (Mus.D. of Dublin Univ. in 1901), from 1886 organist at St. Columba's College (Dublin), from 1888 at Lowestoft, from 1892 at St. Michael's in Coventry and in 1898-1908 at Canterbury Cathedral. Since 1908 he has been director of the music-division of McGill University in Montreal. Has written some orchestral pieces, cantatas, church-music and songs. A.

Perrin, Pierre (?1620-1675). 17th C. G.

Perron, Karl (Frankenthal, 1858). Excellent Rhenish operatic baritone, pupil of Hey, Hasselbeck and Stockhausen, from 1880 highly regarded as a concert-singer, from 1884 engaged at the Leipzig Opera and in 1891-1913 at the Dresden Opera. In 1889 and '96 he appeared at Bayreuth.

Perry, Edward Baxter (Haverhill, Mass. 1855). American pianist (blind), pupil of J. W. Hill, Kullak, Clara Schumann, Pruckner and Liszt, in 1881-83 teacher at Oberlin College (Ohio) and from 1885 till 1917 almost constantly engaged in giving lecture-recitals throughout the entire United States (in 1897-98 in Europe). Since 1917 he has been music-dean in the Woman's College, Montgomery, Ala. Has written numerous piano-pieces, a string-quartet, analyses of piano-works and many articles. A.

Perry, George Frederick (Norwich, 1793-1862, London). English organist, trained as choirboy under Beckwith, from 1822 for a time conductor at the Haymarket Theatre in London and also organist at the Quebec (Street) Chapel, in 1846 going to Trinity (Gray's Inn Road). In 1832-47 he was concertmaster in the Sacred Harmonic Society's orchestra. Wrote the oratorios Elijah, 1818, The Death of Abel, The Fall of Jerusalem, 1830, and Hezekiah, 1848, the cantata Belshazzar's Feast, 1836, 2 stage-pieces, an overture, anthems, songs, etc. G.

Persiani, Fanny, née Tacchinardi (Rome, 1812-1867, Passy). Highly gifted Italian operatic soprano, pupil of her father (q.v.), from 1832 famous throughout Italy, from 1838 alternating between Paris and London and making some tours elsewhere (to Russia in 1850). Her voice was not large or mellow, but her handling of it was extraordinarily finished and exact. Donizetti wrote Lucia for her in 1835. From 1830 she was wife of the opera-composer Giuseppe Persiani (1799-1869). G.

Persinger, Louis (Rochester, Ill. 1887). Brilliant American violinist, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and of Nikisch and Ysaÿe, from 1904 touring in America, in 1907-08 concertmaster at the Vauxhall concerts in Brussels and of the Blüthner Orchestra in Berlin, with concertizing in Germany, Austria and Denmark in 1909-11 and a striking tour through America in 1912-13. In 1914-15 he was concertmaster of the Berlin Philharmonic and since 1915 of the San Francisco Orchestra, besides leading the Chamber Music Society and the Music School Orchestra. In 1913 he married the pianist Angela Gianelli. A.

Persuis, Louis Luc Loiseau de (Metz, 1769-1819, Paris). French violinist and conductor, from 1787 in Paris, where, besides teaching at the new Conservatory in 1795-1802, from 1793 he played at the Opéra, becoming in 1804 chorus-master, in 1810 conductor (succeeding Rey), in 1814 inspector-general and in 1817 director (succeeding Choron). From about 1805 he was also one of the leaders of the court-orchestra and from 1816 intendant (succeeding Choron). Wrote about 15 operas (from 1783), ballets, occasional cantatas and church-music. G.

Perti, Jacopo Antonio (1661-1756). 17th C. G.

Pescetti, Giovanni Battista (Venice, ?1704-1766, do.). Italian organist and composer, pupil of Lotti, from 1725 active as opera-composer at Venice, in 1737-40 in London (perhaps longer) and then again in Venice, where from 1762 he was second organist at S. Marco. Wrote over 10 operas, an oratorio, church-music and clavier-sonatas. G.

Peschka-Leutner, Minna (Vienna, 1839-1890, Wiesbaden). Eminent Austrian operatic soprano, pupil of Proch and Mme. Bockholtz-Falconi, appearing in 1856-61 at Breslau and Dessau, in 1863 at Vienna, from 1865 at Lemberg and Darmstadt, in 1868-76 at Leipzig, then at Hamburg and in 1883-87 at Cologne. In 1872 she visited London and America (also in 1881). She was a favorite in coloratura-rôles. G.

Pesenti, Martino (1600-1648?). 17th C.

Pessard, Émile Louis Fortuné (Paris, 1843-1917, do.). French composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1866), and from 1881 harmony-teacher there. In 1878-80 he was inspector in the city schools and later active in the educational work at St. Denis of the Légion d'Honneur, of which he was officer. From 1895 he was also critic for the L'Événement. Wrote the comic operas La Cruche Cassée, 1870, Le Char, 1878, Le Capitaine Fracasse, 1878, Tabarin, 1885, Tartarin sur les Alpes, 1888, Don Quichotte, 1889, Les Folies Amoureuses, 1891, Une Nuit de Noël, 1893, Mlle. Carabin, 1893, Le Muet, 1894, La Dame de Trèfle, 1898, L'Armée des Vierges, 1902, and L'Épave, 1903, suites for orchestra, a piano-trio, piano-pieces, masses and songs. G.

Petchnikov, Alexander (Yelets, 1873). Gifted Russian violinist, pupil of the Moscow Conservatory, from 1895 appearing with great success in Berlin and in 1906-07 in America. In 1913-21 he taught at the Munich Conservatory, gaining the title of royal professor in 1910.

Peters, C. F. Famous music-publishing firm at Leipzig, founded in 1814 by Carl Friedrich Peters (d. 1827) through the purchase of the Bureau de Musique started in 1800 by Franz Anton Hoffmeister (d. 1812) and Ambrosius Kühnel (d. 1813). Peters was succeeded by C. G. S. Böhme in 1828 and at his death in 1855 by Julius Friedländer, who in 1863 was joined by Max Abraham (1831-1900). The last developed from 1868 the great 'Edition Peters' that soon became celebrated. He also opened the public Bibliothek Peters in 1893, which is now administered under municipal oversight (original endowment 400,000 mks.). Since 1900 Abraham's nephew Heinrich Hinrichsen (b. 1868) has been head of the firm. G.

Peters, Guido (Gratz, 1866). Styrian pianist and composer, pupil of the Vienna Conservatory, from 1901 teaching at the Munich Conservatory and since 1905 at Vienna. Has written 3 symphonies (1st, Ländliche), an octet, 2 string-quartets, a 'cello-sonata and songs, etc.

Peters, Richard Henry (Brighton, 1867). English organist, from about 1890 active in Newfoundland and Canada, from 1900 organizer and leader of choral festivals at Spartanburg, S. C. and since 1910 organist at Emmanuel Church in Baltimore, besides conducting a choral society at York, Pa. Mus.D. of Toronto Univ. in 1892. Has written the oratorio Elisha, the cantata St. Cecilia's Day, anthems, organ-pieces, etc. A.

Petersen, Peter Nikolaus (n. Bremen, 1761-1830, Hamburg). Noted North German flutist at Hamburg who improved his instrument by adding several keys. Wrote variations, duets, études and a method.

Petersilea, Carlyle (Boston, 1844-1903, n. Los Angeles). American pianist, taught by his father and at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1866 teaching in Boston (from 1871 at his own Academy and from 1886 at the New England Conservatory) and in 1892 removing to California. A.

Peterson, Franklin Sivewright (Edinburgh, 1861-1914, Melbourne). Scottish organist and teacher, pupil of K. A. Fischer, from 1884 organist in Edinburgh, besides teaching at the Ladies' College from 1893 and acting as examiner at the University. From 1901 he was professor at the University of Melbourne (Australia). Author of elementary text-books (from 1895).

Peterson-Berger, Olof Wilhelm (Ullånger, 1867). Eminent Swedish composer, trained at the Stockholm Conservatory and by Scholtz and Kretschmer, in 1892-94 teaching in Dresden and since 1895 settled in Stockholm, where in 1908-11 he assisted at the production of Wagnerian works at the Opera. Since 1896 he has been critic for the Dagens Nyheter. Has written the music-dramas Ran, 1903, and Arnljot, 1910, the fairy-opera Lychan, 1902, the festspiel Sveagaldrar, 1897 (25th anniversary of the accession of Oscar II) [all these to original texts], the symphonies Baneret, 1904, and Sunnanfjärd, 1913, the orchestral intermezzo Karneval i Stockholm, the baritone-ballad Florez och Blanzeflor, 2 violin-sonatas and many effective and popular songs. Author of Soensk Musikkultur, 1911, Wagner som Kulturförelse, 1913, translations of Nietsches Geburt d. Tragödie (1902), of selections from Wagner's prose writings (1902) and of the text of his Tristan (1909), etc.

Petr, Viatcheslav Ivanovitch (b. 1845). Russian-Bohemian student of ancient music, since 1885 lecturer on philology at Kiev University. Author of various essays on Greek music.

Petrieus, Johannes (?–1550). 16th C. G.

Petrella, Errico (Palermo, 1813–1877, Genoa). Noted Sicilian composer, trained at the Naples Conservatory and from 1829 active in producing works that for a time vied with those of his close contemporary Verdi. Of his 25 operas the best were Le Miniere di Freiberg, 1839, Le Precauzioni, 1851, Marco Visconti, 1854, Elnava, 1856, Ione, 1858, La Contessa d'Amalfi, 1864, Giovanni II di Napoli, 1869, and Manfredo, 1873. Memoirs by Guardione, 1908, and Siciliano, 1913. G.

Petrelli [Eleanora Louise Marianne Petrov, née Wigström] (Sientuna, 1835–1904, Chicago). Swedish soprano, from about 1857 wife of a wealthy Russian and then pupil of Lamperti, Mmes. Viardot-Garcia and Nissen-Salomon, becoming noted as concert-singer in Russia, Germany and Scandinavia and in 1886 establishing a successful vocal school in Chicago. See notice by Schöldström, 1904 (in the Stockholm Aftonbladet).

Petri, Henri Willem (Zeist, 1856–1914, Dresden). Excellent Dutch violinist, pupil of Dahmen, Joachim and the Brussels Conservatory, concertmaster at Sondershausen from 1877, at the Hanover Opera from 1881–82, of the Gewandhaus Orchestra at Leipzig from 1882 and of the court-orchestra at Dresden from 1889 (succeeding Lauterbach). He organized a famous Quartet and till 1912 was a leading teacher in the Dresden Conservatory. Wrote effective violin-pieces and études, and edited concertos and studies by many masters. G.

Petrini, Franz (Berlin, 1744–1819, Paris). Noted Prussian harpist, pupil of his father, from 1765 in court-service at Schwerin and after 1770 teacher at Paris. Wrote 4 concertos, 8 sonatas, duets, variations and a method.

Petrov, Ossip Afanassievitch (Elizabethgrad, 1807–1878, Petrograd). Eminent Russian operatic bass, discovered by chance in 1830 by the manager of the Petrograd Opera and thenceforth engaged there for nearly fifty years (continued active till four days before his death). Among the premières at which he assisted were those of Glinka's Life for the Czar (1836) and Russian and Ludmilla (1842), Dargomijsky's Russalka (1856) and Stone Guest (1872), Rimsky-Korsakov's Pskovityanka (1873) and Mussorgsky's Boris (1874). See the Recollections of his 50th anniversary (1876) and memoirs by Stassov, 1894 (in his Works), and Kompaneisky, 1903 (in Russ. Musical Gazette).

Petrucchi, Ottaviano dei (1466–1539). 16th C. G.

Petz, Johann Christoph (?–1716). 17th C.

Petzet, Walter (Breslau, 1866). Eminent Silesian pianist, pupil of Kleffel, the Munich Conservatory and Von Bülow, in 1887–96 teaching in America (Minneapolis, Chicago and New York), from 1896 at the Helsingfors Conservatory (following Busoni), from 1898 at the Karlsruhe Conservatory, from 1910 at the Weimar Conservatory, from 1913 in Berlin, where he was connected with the Scharwenka schools and wrote for the Signale, and since 1916 critic for the Dresden Nachrichten. He has had the title of professor since 1909. In Karlsruhe and at Weimar he made notable success with renderings of the entire series of Beethoven's sonatas and with chamber-recitals. He is also a specialist in the works of Brahms. Has written 2 symphonic poems, 2 piano-concertos, many pieces and songs, besides editing Czerny's Daily Exercises.

Petzold, Johann. 17th C.

Peurl, Paul. 17th C.

Pevernage, Andreas (1543–1591). 16th C. G.

Pezze, Alessandro (Milan, 1835). Italian 'cellist, pupil of the Milan Conservatory, from about 1855 in the La Scala orchestra, in 1857–67 at Her Majesty's in London and in 1870–73 at Covent Garden, then teaching at the Royal Academy. At the Popular Concerts he was often associated with Piatti or took his place. G.

Pfannstiehl, Bernhard (Schmalkalden, 1861). Remarkable Thuringian organist (blind), pupil of Kniese and the Leipzig Conservatory (thrice taking the Mendelssohn prize), from 1896 at the Johanniskirche in Leipzig (at the City Hospital), from 1903 at the Petrikirche in Chemnitz and since 1912 at the Kreuzkirche in Dresden, with the title of church-music director. He is an accomplished player both of Bach and of the most modern works. See sketch by K. Hasse, 1910 (in Die Orgel).

Pfeiffer, Georges Jean (Versailles, 1835–1908, Paris). French pianist and composer, pupil of his mother, Maleden and Damecke, from 1862 active in Paris as composer and as critic for the Voltaire, besides following his father as a leading partner in the piano-making firm of Pleyel, Wolff et Cie. Wrote the comic operas Le Légataire Universel, 1901, and L'Enclume, 1884, the operetta Capitaine Roche, 1862, the ballet Madame Bonaparte, 1900, the oratorio Agar, a symphony, the symphonic poem Jeanne d'Arc, the overture Le Cid, 3 piano-concertos and a Légende for piano and orchestra, a piano-quintet (Prix Chartier), a piano-quartet, a piano-trio, sonatas for violin and for 'cello, a sonata for two pianos, many other piano-works, etc. G.

Pfeiffer, Michael Traugott (n. Würzburg, 1771–1850, Aarau). Bavarian pedagogue, well trained in Switzerland, from 1804 conducting schools in Solothurn and Lenzburg on Pestalozzian principles with such success that from 1812 he and Nägeli were associated in publications on teaching school-music and in 1822 he was made teacher of singing and organ at the new cantonal seminary at Aarau. See art. on Nägeli and memoir by J. Keller, 1894.

Pfeiffer, Theodor (Heidelberg, 1853). Able Badense pianist, pupil of the Stuttgart Conservatory and of Von Bülow, since 1889 teaching at Baden-Baden and also since 1899 at the Mannheim Conservatory, from 1905 with the title of royal professor. Wrote many important piano-studies, various fine pieces, an a cappella mass, men's choruses and songs. Author of Studien bei H. von Bülow, 1894 (6th ed. 1909, and Nachtrag by Vianna da Motta, 1895).

Pfeil, Anna Doris (Copenhagen, 1847). Able Danish operatic soprano, pupil of Wartel, in 1867-85 a leading artist at the Copenhagen Opera. In 1873 she married the singer Erhard Hansen.

Pfeil, Heinrich (Leipzig, 1835-1899, do.). Saxon book-dealer and editor, writing effective men's choruses, short histories and biographies, etc., and in 1862-87 editing the Sängerhalle.

Pfitzner, Hans Erich (Moscow, 1869). Eminent German-Russian conductor and composer, trained at the Hoch Conservatory (Frankfurt), in 1892-93 teacher at the Coblenz Conservatory, in 1894-96 at intervals assistant-conductor at the Stadttheater in Mayence, from 1897 teacher at the Stern Conservatory in Berlin and also from 1903 conductor at the Theater des Westens, in 1907-08 conductor of the Kaim Orchestra at Munich and from 1908 Stockhausen's successor as head of the Strasburg Conservatory, city-director and also in 1910-16 director of the Opera. In 1919-20 he was conductor for the Munich Konzertverein and has since directed opera at Coburg and taught advanced classes at the Berlin Hochschule. He received the title of royal professor in 1913 and that of general director (Bavaria) in 1920, is Ph.D. of Strasburg Univ. and in 1919 was made a member of the Berlin Academie. He is counted one of the most distinguished of the followers of Wagner. Has written the operas Der arme Heinrich, 1895 (thought to be his best work hitherto), Die Rose vom Liebesgarten, 1901, and Palestrina, 1917, music for Ibsen's Fest auf Solhaug (1889), Kleist's Käthchen von Heilbronn (1908) and Ilse von Stach's Christelflein (1906, revised 1917), the choral works Der Blumen Rache, 1888, Columbus and Von deutscher Seele, 1922, the baritone scenas Herr Oluf and Die Heiẗzelmännchen, a revised version of Marschner's Templer und Jüdin (1912), a piano-concerto (1922), an orchestral scherzo (1888), a piano-quintet (1908), a string-quartet, a piano-trio, sonatas for violin and for 'cello, about 50 songs (some with orchestra), etc. He has also edited Hoffmann's Undine (1906). Author of Bühnentradiation, 1905, '07 (in Süddeutschen Monatsheften), Vom musikal. Drama, 1915 (collected essays), Futurestengefahr, 1917 (against Busoni's Aesthetik), and Die neue Aesthetik d. musikal. Impotenz, 1919 (against Paul Bekker). Sketches or critiques by Cossmann, 1904, Louis, 1904 and '09, A. Seidl, 1921, and C. Wandrey, 1922. In 1918 a Pfitzner-Verein was formed at Munich, in 1919 issuing a catalogue of his works. G. A.

Pfitzner, Walther (Leipzig, 1882), nephew of the above. Saxon pianist, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, first appearing in 1896, from 1905 theater-conductor at Teplitz, Bautzen, Bremen and Kiel, from 1911 teaching in Berlin and from 1915 teacher and choral conductor at Bethany College (Lindsborg, Kan). Has written a symphonic fantasia, 2 'cello-intermezzi and songs. A.

Pfughaupt, Robert (Berlin, 1833-1871, Aix). Prussian pianist, from 1857 living at Weimar and from 1862 at Aix. He left a fund to the Allgem. Deutscher Musikverein which was used to found a Beethoven prize-scholarship. His wife, née Sophie Stitchepin (1837-1867), was an accomplished pianist.

Pfohl, Ferdinand (Elbogen, 1863). Eminent Bohemian critic, pupil of Paul, with study at Leipzig University, in 1891-92 writing for Daheim and since 1892 on the staff of the Hamburg Nachrichten, besides from 1908 teacher and co-director in the Vogt Conservatory there. In 1913 he gained the title of royal professor. Author of Die moderne Oper, 1894, Die Nibelungen in Bayreuth, 1896, lives of Nikisch (1900), Grammann (1910) and Wagner (1911), and two books on primitive music in Africa (1891, 1902), besides Führer to Fidelio and various Wagner operas. Has also written the symphonic poems Pierrot Lunaire, Die versunkene Glocke and Frau Holle, the symphonic fantasy Das Meer, an orchestral Ballettszene, the choral work Twardowsky, characteristic piano-pieces and songs.

Pfordten, Hermann L., Freiherr von der (Munich, 1857). Bavarian musicologist, educated at Munich and Leipzig Universities, at first (1882) specializing in modern philosophy, but soon changing to music-history and science. Since 1907 he has been professor at Munich University. Author of Handlung u. Dichtung d. Bühnenwerke Wagners, 1893 (6th ed. 1913), Musikal. Essays, 1899, Deutsche Musik, 1917 (2d ed. 1920), and lives of Vogl (1900), Mozart (1908), Beethoven (1913), Schubert (1913), Weber (1919) and Schumann (1920).

Pfundt, Ernst Gotthold Benjamin (n. Torgau, 1806-1871, Leipzig). Noted Saxon timpanist, pupil of Wieck (his uncle), at first a pianist and chorusmaster at the Leipzig Opera, but from 1835 timpanist in the Gewandhaus Orchestra, continuing there till his death. He invented the machine-head and wrote a method (1849, 3d ed. 1894).

Phalèse, Pierre (?1510-1573). 16th C. G.

Phelps, Ellsworth C. (n. Middletown, Conn. 1827-1913, Brooklyn). American organist and school-musician, from 1846 active in New London (Conn.) and Syracuse (N. Y.) and in 1857-1900 in Brooklyn. Wrote the symphonies Hiwatha and Emancipation, 4 symphonic poems, 2 overtures, a choral elegy, Psalm 145, 2 comic operas, the cantata David, etc. A.

Philidor, André Danican- (?-1730). 17th C. G.

Philidor, Anne Danican- (1681-1728), son of the above. French flutist and oboist, playing in the court-band of Louis XIV from 1704 and in 1725 founding the famous Concerts Spirituels, which he conducted till 1727. Wrote 3 pastorals (1697-1701) and some music for instruments. His cousin Pierre (1681-1731) was also flutist and violinist in the court-band, writing many suites and trios for the transverse flute (1717-18). G.

Philidor, François André Danican- (Dreux, 1726-1795, London), son of André above. Famous French composer, pupil of Campra. Throughout his life he was an eager chess-player and until about 1755 was known only as an expert in that game (from 1745 in Amsterdam, in 1748 in Aix and from 1749 in London, where he published his Analyse du Jeu d'Échecs). Then recalled to Paris by Diderot and others he suddenly made a hit with a series of comic operas and ballets (from 1756), with a few grand operas, many of which gained great popularity. He had notable power in construction and in instrumentation, with a readiness to devise effects not previously tried, but without the melody or sentiment of his competitors Monsigny and Grétry. Throughout his life he held a pension from the London Chess Club and made an annual sojourn in London. Of his over 30 stage-works the more striking were Le Maréchal Ferrant, 1761, Tom Jones, 1764, Ernelinde, 1767 (his chief serious opera), Persée, 1780, L'Amitié au Village, 1785, and Bélisaire, 1796 (completed by Berton), and he also wrote a mass (1766, in memory of Rameau), a Te Deum, many motets, 12 Ariettes Périodiques for voice with instruments and an Art de la Modulation (quartets for strings and oboe). Memoirs by Lardin, 1847, Allen, 1863, Pougin, 1874-75 (in Chronique Musicale), and Piot, 1875 (in Bulletin of the Belgian Académie). G.

Philipp, Isidor (Pest, 1863). Eminent Hungarian pianist and teacher, brought up in Paris, pupil of the Conservatory and of Heller, Saint-Saëns and Th. Ritter, from about 1885 appearing with the leading Paris orchestras, in the provinces and then more widely (in London from 1890). In 1890 he began trio-concerts with Loeb and Berthelier and in 1897-1901 revived the Société des Instruments à Vent (founded in 1879 by Taffanel). He has become internationally famous as a teacher and since 1903 has been professor at the Conservatory. He is a member of the Légion d'Honneur and holds other honors. Has written an orchestral suite, a Réverie Melancolique, a Sérénade Humoristique, many fine piano-pieces, valuable exercises and studies, besides notable two-piano arrangements from Bach, Mendelssohn and several French composers. He has also contributed to the Ménestrel and other journals. G, A.

Philips, Peter (?1560-1633?). 17th C. G.

Phillips, Adelaide (Stratford, 1833-1882, Karlsbad). Gifted English alto, brought up in America and trained at first by her mother as dancer and actress, but from 1850 (on advice from Jenny Lind) pupil of Garcia and others in Europe, making her début in opera at 1854 and then continuing popular in both Europe and America till 1881, singing in both Italian and English. She was particularly successful in oratorio. G, A.

Phillips, Harold Dockray. English organist (b. Oxford), trained as choirboy at Peterborough Cathedral and later at Cambridge, playing there at Caius College and then at Esher (Surrey) and at St. Andrew's (Holborn) in London. In 1903 he removed to Toronto (St. Paul's) and from 1906 taught and gave recitals at the Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore, besides from 1914 playing at the First Church, Scientist, and writing for the News. From 1920 he was in New York and from 1922 in Pittsburgh. Has written a symphony, a string-quartet, 2 piano-trios, an organ-sonata and 2 cantatas. A.

Phillips, Montague Fawcett (London, 1885). English organist, pupil of the Royal Academy, London, since about 1905 at the parish church at Esher (Surrey). Has written the opera The Rebel Maid, 1921, a symphony, the overtures Boadicea and Festival, an orchestral scherzo, a piano-concerto, a string-quartet, a violin-fantasia (with orchestra), the choral work The Death of Admiral Blake, organ- and piano-pieces, part-songs and songs.

Pinot, Dominicus. 16th C. G.

Piatti, Alfredo Carlo (Bergamo, 1822-1901, do.). Distinguished Italian 'cellist, pupil of Zanetti and the Milan Conservatory, appearing in Italy from 1837 and touring outside from 1843 as far as Paris, London (1844) and Russia (1845). From 1846 he spent much time in London, where in 1846-49 he was engaged at the Opera and from about 1850 was constantly in request at concerts, especially from 1859 at the Popular Concerts. After 1880 he divided his time between London and his villa at Cadenabbia (Lake Como). In 1894 Grove and Mackenzie arranged a festival in London to mark the fiftieth anniversary of the appearance there of the companion-artists Joachim and Piatti. The previous year he was given a triumphant reception in Italy. These honors simply registered the universal regard of musicians and public for his extraordinary gifts and artistic standing. Wrote 2 concertos, a concertino, 6 sonatas and many lesser pieces, besides editing sonatas by Boccherini, Locatelli and Marcello and Kummer's method. Memoir by Latham, 1901. G.

Piccinni, Alessandro. 16th C.

Piccinni, Louis Alexandre (Paris, 1779-1850, do.), grandson of Nicola below. French stage-composer, from 1800 variously employed in Paris as violinist, accompanist or chorusmaster (at the Opéra in 1816-26), in 1827 at Boulogne, about 1840 head of the Toulouse music-school and then at Strasburg and Baden-Baden. Wrote over 200 stage-pieces, including some operas (from 1804). G.

Piccinni, Luigi (Naples, 1766–1827, Passy), son and pupil of Nicola below, whom he followed to Paris in 1782 and then to Naples in 1789. In 1796–1801 he was conductor at Stockholm. Wrote about 15 operas for French and Italian stages. G.

Piccinni, Nicola (Bari, 1728–1800, Passy). Distinguished Italian composer, trained by Leo and Durante at the Conservatorio di S. Onofrio in Naples and setting out in 1754 on a career of opera-production of unique fertility and ready success. During the next twenty-two years he brought out over 70 works, serious and comic, with only one lapse in popular applause (1773) and amid general recognition as the most gifted writer of opera buffa that had appeared, superseding even the favorite Logroscino. In 1776, yielding to inducements from the French court, he removed to Paris and laboriously undertook to adapt himself to a new language and a new public. Here he was at once involved in the aggravated controversy already aroused over the ideas and innovations of Gluck, the opponents of the latter exalting him as representing the style that should not be disturbed. Though personally averse to such rivalry, he was forced as director of the newly-formed Italian troupe to produce fresh works, most of which were successful and so fed the feud between the Gluckists and the Piccinnists. In 1779, however, the manager of the Opéra induced both Gluck and Piccinni to undertake the same subject, Iphigénie en Tauride. Gluck's version was immediately prepared and was acknowledged to be his masterpiece, while Piccinni's (owing partly to difficulties in the libretto furnished) did not come out till 1781 and, though fairly successful, was musically and dramatically inferior. This was the beginning of a marked decline in his ascendancy, which was hastened by the appearance in Paris of Sacchini. Yet in 1784 he was made chief singing-master at the new École Royale de Musique (the precursor of the Conservatory) and remained active till driven out in 1789 by the Revolution. At Naples he was given a stipend by the King, but fell under suspicion of republicanism and for four years was confined to his house under guard. His extreme poverty he sought to mitigate by writing sacred music for sale to churches and convents. In 1798 political events allowed him to return to Paris and he there received substantial aid and honor for a brief time, only soon to be overwhelmed by fresh troubles. Just at the end he was named one of the inspectors at the Conservatory (in addition to the five regular ones), but he hardly entered on his duties. Of his more than 130 dramatic works the most successful were Le Donne Dispettose, 1754, Il Curioso, 1755, Zenobia, 1756, Alessandro nell'Indie, 1758, Siroe, 1759, L'Olimpiade, 1761, Demetrio, 1762, Demofoonte, 1762, Berenice, 1764, Artaserse, 1766, Catone in Utica, 1770, Antigono, 1771, Ipermestra, 1772, Alessandro nell'Indie, 1775 (2d form), Roland, 1778, Atys, 1780, Iphi- génie en Tauride, 1781, Didon, 1783, etc., and his greatest hit was with the comic La Cecchina, ossia La Buona Figliuola, 1760. He also wrote at least 3 oratorios, a mass and some other sacred works. A full list is given by Cametti in the Rivista Musicale, 1901. Memoirs by Ginguené, 1801, Desnoiresterres, 1872, and Abert, 1913 (in Peters Jahrbuch). G.

Piccollelli, Giovanni di. Author of a sumptuous work on the violin and its predecessors, Liutai Antichi e Moderni, 1885, and supplement, 1886, besides a lecture on instruments in the museum of the Florence Conservatory (1889). G.

Piccolomini, Maria (Siena, 1834–1899, Florence). Noted Italian operatic soprano, pupil of Signora Mazzarelli and Raimondi, from 1852 appearing in Italy, from 1856 in London and Paris, in 1858 in America and retiring in 1863, after marriage to the Marquis Gaetani. Her musical gifts were slight, but she had piquancy and cleverness. G.

Pichel [Pichl], Wenzel (n. Tabor, 1741–1805, Vienna). Bohemian violinist and prolific composer, pupil of Pokorny and Segert, besides intimacy with Dittersdorf and Nardini, after activity at Prague and in the opera-orchestra at Vienna, from 1775 in the service of Archduke Ferdinand at Milan and Vienna (from 1796). Wrote in all about 700 works, including nearly 90 symphonies, 13 orchestral serenades, concertos for violin and for clarinet, many octets, septets, quintets, quartets (often with barytone) and much other chamber-music, about 20 operas, masses, motets, Psalms, etc. (complete list in Diabacz' Künstler-Lexikon, 1815). G.

Pick-Mangiagalli, Riccardo (Strakonitz, 1882). Gifted Italian-Bohemian pianist and composer, pupil of the Milan Conservatory. Has written the lyric comedy Basi e Bote (1920), the dance-play Mahit, 1923, the mimetic orchestral pieces Il Salice d'Oro, Il Carillon Magico and Sumitra, the symphonic poems La Berceuse and Sortilegi, 2 orchestral preludes and a Nocturno e Rondo Fantastico, a string-quartet, a violin-sonata, many highly poetic piano-pieces, etc. Sketch by Gatti, 1921 (in Musical Times).

Picquot, L. Author of an able monograph on Boccherini (1851).

Piel, Peter (n. Bonn, 1835–1904, Boppard). Rhenish church-musician, from 1863 teacher at the Boppard Seminary, writing many masses, motets, Magnificats, other choir-music, organ-pieces, a text-book in harmony (1889, 10th ed. 1911), etc.

Pielke, Walter (Dessau, 1848). Saxon tenor and voice-specialist, educated first at Tübingen and Leipzig Universities and the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1874–80 singing at the Leipzig Opera and in oratorio, but retiring because of throat-trouble. He then studied at Jena and Munich Universities (M.D. 1884) and took up clinical practice at Hamburg and Berlin (from 1887), from 1907 instructing school-teachers in vocal science and since 1910 teaching at the Institut für Kirchenmusik. Author of various articles (from 1911) on registers, 'covered' tones, etc.

Pierné, Henri Constant Gabriel (Metz, 1863). Eminent French conductor and composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (many prizes, including the Prix de Rome, 1882). In 1890-98 he followed Franck as organist at Ste.-Clotilde and in 1910, after being assistant from 1903, succeeded Colonne as conductor of his famous orchestra. In 1900 he was made a member of the Légion d'Honneur, besides holding other distinctions. Has written the operas Le Chemin de l'Amour, Les Elfes, Don Luis, Lizarda (these four, 1883-93, not given), La Coupe Enchantée, 1895 (reduced to one act, 1905), Vendée, 1897, La Fille de Tabarin, 1901, On ne badine pas avec l'Amour, 1910, and Cydalise, 1919, various ballets and pantomimes, music for Lorraine's Yanthis, Silvestre and Morand's Izeyl (both 1894), Rostand's La Princesse Loiraine and La Samaritaine (1897), Crawford's Francesca da Rimini, and Loti's Ramuntcho, 1908, the oratorios La Croisade des Enfants, 1902, Les Enfants à Bethléem, 1907, and St. François d'Assise, 1912 (prize from the Académie), the choral scenes Pandore and La Nuit de Noël de 1870, 1895, the cantata Édith, 1882, the choral symphonic poem L'An Mil, 1898, an Overture Symphonique, 2 orchestral suites, the orchestral Marche Solennelle, Pantomime and Scherzo-Caprice, a Poème Symphonique and Fantaisie-Ballet for piano and orchestra, Les Cathédrales for organ and orchestra, a Konzertstück for harp and orchestra, a violin-sonata, other instrumental pieces with or for piano, and some songs. Sketches by W. Weber, n.d. and Séré, 1911 (in Musiciens d'Aujourd'hui). G.

Piero di Firenze. 14th C.

Pierre, Constant Victor Désiré (Passy, 1855). French writer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1881 assistant-secretary there, critic for various papers and now editor of Le Monde Musical. Author of many historical essays, as on popular Noël's (1886), the Marseillaise (1887), instrument-making (1890-93), the orchestra, scenery and singing at the Opéra (1889-95), the Conservatory (1895-1900), the Chapelle Royale (1899), the Concerts Spirituels (1900), etc.

Pierson [Pearson], Henry Hugo (Oxford, 1816-1873, Leipzig). Gifted English composer, pupil of Attwood, Rinck, Tomaschek and Reissiger, spending his whole career in Germany except for a brief term as professor in Edinburgh University in 1844. From 1847 he lived at Hamburg and later at Leipzig. Wrote the operas Der Elfensieg, 1845, Leila, 1848, Contarini, 1872, and Fenice, 1883, the oratorios Jerusalem, 1852, and Hezekiah, 1869 (incomplete), music for Part II of Faust (1854), the symphony Macbeth, the overtures Twelfth-Night, Romeo and Juliet, Julius Cæsar and Romantische, a funeral-march for Hamlet, the dirge Salve Æternum, a communion-service and much other church-music, effective part-songs and songs (many works appearing under the pseudonym 'Edgar Mansfeldt'). G.

Piéton, Loyset. 15th C.

Pietuchov, Michail Onissoporovitch (Petrograd, 1843-1895, do.). Russian civil official, author of an essay on Berlioz in Russia (1881), studies upon the instrument-collection of the Petrograd Conservatory and a translation of Helmholtz' Tonempfindungen (1875).

Pijper, Willem (Zeist, 1894). Gifted Dutch composer of 2 symphonies, sonatas for violin and for 'cello and songs. He was a pupil of Wagenaar.

Pilkington, Francis. 17th C. G.

Pilo, Mario (Pallanza, 1859-1920, Mantua). Lecturer on æsthetics at Bologna University and also at the college in Belluno, author of works on æsthetics (1892, '94), Psicologia Musicale, 1903, and articles in the Rivista Musicale.

Pilotti, Giuseppe (Bologna, 1784-1838, do.). Italian church-musician, pupil of Mattei, early showing ability in counterpoint, from about 1820 maestro at Pistoia and in 1826 Mattei's successor at S. Petronio in Bologna, besides from 1829 teaching at the Liceo. Wrote much good church-music, including 8-part Psalms and a Dies Iræ, 2 short operas (1810, '16) and a work on instrumentation. Elogy by Bonetti, 1838.

Pinelli, Ettore (Rome, 1843). Able Italian violinist and conductor, pupil of Ramacciotti and Joachim, since 1866 active at Rome, where he soon started (with Sgambati) a chamber-music society and in 1874 an oratorio-society, besides a music-school that in 1877 became the Liceo Musicale under the Accademia S. Cecilia. He also alternated with Sgambati in directing the court-concerts. Has written an overture, a Rapsodia Italiana, a string-quartet, etc.

Pinello de Gerardis, Giovanni Battista (1544-1587). 16th C. G.

Pinsuti, Ciro (n. Florence, 1829-1888, do.). Noted Italian singing-teacher, pupil of his father, Potter, Blagrove, Rossini and the Bologna Liceo, from 1848 established in England, at first dividing his time between London and Newcastle and from 1856 professor at the Royal Academy, but with many sojourns in Italy. In 1878 he was ennobled by the King of Italy. Wrote about 250 melodious songs, effective part-songs, etc., and the operas Il Mercante di Venezia, 1873, Mattia Corvino, 1877, and Margherita, 1882. G.

Pipegrop, Heinrich [Baryphonus] (1581-1655). 17th C.

Pipelare, Matthäus. 16th C.

Pirani, Eugenio (Bologna, 1852). Able Italian pianist, trained at the Bologna Liceo and by Kiel and Kullak, from 1873 teaching at the latter's Academy and beginning extensive concert-tours, from 1898 critic for the Kleines Journal in Berlin, from 1901 touring with the singer Alma W. Powell, with whom since 1904 he has conducted a school in Brooklyn, N. Y. In 1876 he participated in the Cristofori celebration at Florence and in 1888 was one of the German committee at the Bologna Exposition. He is member of several Italian Academies. Has written the symphonic poem Fête au Château, 1901, orchestral Airs Bohémiens and a set of variations, Scene Veneziane for piano and orchestra, 2 piano-trios, a two-piano fantasia, piano-pieces and études, etc., besides 2 operas and a ballet. Author of a High-School of Piano-Playing, 1908 (4th ed. 1918). A.

Pirro, André (St. Dizier, 1869). Eminent French musicologist, educated at the St. Dizier Collège. Since 1896 he has taught at the Schola Cantorum in Paris and had part in its direction, besides from 1904 lecturing at the École des Hautes Études Sociales and in 1912 succeeding Rolland as head of its music-division. Author of L'Orgue de J. S. Bach, 1897 (prize from the Acad. des Beaux-Arts), a life of Bach (1906), the notable L'Esthétique de J. S. Bach, 1907, Des cartes et la Musique, 1907, lives of Buxtehude (1912), Schütz (1913) and many early French organists (in Guilman's Archives), and many articles in periodicals.

Pisa, Agostino. 17th C.

Pisari, Pasquale (Rome, 1725-1778, do.). Able Italian church-composer, pupil of Biordi, from 1752 a singer (bass) in the Papal Chapel. He was remarkably expert in contrapuntal writing after the style of Palestrina. Wrote many masses, motets, etc., including a famous Dixit Dominus a 16 and a complete series of services for the year for the court-chapel at Lisbon. Most of these are unpublished. G.

Pisaroni, Benedetta Rosamunda (Piacenza, 1793-1872, do.). Famous Italian operatic contralto (at first soprano, but changing in 1813), pupil of Pino, Moschini and Marchesi, appearing from 1811 throughout Italy and later in Paris (1827), London (1829) and Cadiz (1830-32). Though her voice was noble and her acting impressive, her homeliness of face checked her success. G.

Pischek, Johann Baptist (n. Melnik, 1814-1873, Sigmaringen). Excellent Bohemian operatic baritone, making his début at Prague in 1835 and, after experience in Austria and Hungary, from 1844 permanently engaged at the court-opera in Stuttgart, but with many visits to German cities and (from 1845) to London. Besides having a large operatic repertory, he was a favorite in concert and oratorio. G.

Pisendel, Johann Georg (Karlsruhe, 1687-1755, Dresden). Able Bavarian violinist, pupil of Torelli, Pistocchi, Vivaldi and Montanari, with study at Leipzig University, from 1712 playing in the court-band at Dresden, traveling thence to Paris, Berlin and Italy, and from 1728 Volumier's successor as concertmaster. He had many contacts with Bach. Wrote various concertos for violin or for ensemble, embodying interesting combinations or features from both Italian and French sources. Monograph by O. Bournot in preparation. G.

Piskaček, Adolf (Prague, 1874). Bohemian composer of the operas Diva Bára, 1910, and Uhglu, 1914, 2 operettas and a ballet.

Pistocchi, Francesco Antonio (1659-1726). 17th C. G.

Pitoni, Giuseppe Ottavio (1657-1743). 17th C. G.

Pitra, Jean Baptiste (n. Autun, 1812-1889, Frascati). French Benedictine, long in the Solesmes monastery, in 1863 made cardinal and in 1879 bishop of Frascati. His specialty was Byzantine ecclesiastical history, writing on Greek hymnody (1867, '79), besides other learned works.

Pitt, Percy (London, 1870). Eminent English conductor and composer, trained at the Leipzig and Munich Conservatories, in 1894-95 chorus-master at the Mottl concerts in London, from 1896 organist at Queen's Hall, from 1902 chorus-master at Covent Garden, in 1906 assistant-conductor and since 1907 Messager's successor as chief. Has written a symphony (1906), the symphonic poems Le Sang des Crépuscules and Anactoria (viola and orch.), 2 orchestral serenades, several suites, 2 Rhapsodies (English and Oriental), an overture to The Taming of the Shrew, a clarinet-concerto, a ballade for violin and orchestra, music for Richard II, Phillips' Paolo and Francesca and Austin's Flodden Field, a quintet, a trio, other chamber-music, the choral works Hohenlinden, Swerting the Saxon and The Blessed Damozel, the ballet-pantomime Sakura, scenas for baritone and soprano, many songs and piano-pieces, etc. G. A.

Pittman, Josiah (London, 1816-1886, do.). English organist, pupil of S. S. Wesley, Moschles and Von Wartensee, from 1831 playing at various churches in London (notably at Lincoln's Inn in 1852-64) and from 1865 accompanist at Her Majesty's and in 1868-80 at Covent Garden. He was intimate with Mendelssohn and shared in the revival of Bach's music in England. Author of The People in the Church, 1858, vocal scores of many operas, collections of operatic arias and of Scottish songs, etc., with some services and anthems. For years he lectured at the London Institution. G.

Pittrich, George Washington (Dresden, 1870). Saxon conductor and composer, pupil of the Dresden Conservatory, from 1890 teacher there and chorus- and ballet-master at the Opera, in 1898-99 opera-conductor at Hamburg, in 1899-1901 at Cologne, from 1901 at Frankfurt, from 1904 at Dresden (Zentraltheater), from 1912 at the Wintergarten in Berlin and now at Nuremberg. Has written the short opera Marga, 1894, incidental music to many plays, a ballet (1901), 5 Christmas-tales (baritone and orchestra) orchestral pieces, a clarinet-concerto, a fantasia for piano and strings, etc.

Piutti, Karl (Elgersburg, 1846-1902, Leipzig). Excellent Thuringian organist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1875 teacher there and from 1880 organist at the Thomaskirche, following Rust. Wrote 3 sonatas, 2 fugal fantasias, many chorale-preludes, improvisations and other pieces, Pfingstfeier, Festhymnus, In Memoriam, Psalms 103, 100 and 116, a cappella motets, songs and piano-pieces, besides a textbook in theory.

Piutti, Max (n. Erfurt, 1852-1885, Jackson, Mich.). Thuringian teacher, trained at Leipzig and Stuttgart, in 1874-83 at Wells College (Aurora, N. Y.). He projected a work on folk-songs which ill-health prevented him from finishing. A.

Pixérécourt, René Charles Guilbert de (n. Nancy, 1773-1844, do.). French writer of the librettos for 21 comic operas, 17 singspiele and over 60 melodramas (the latter with original music). Author of a life of Dalayrac (1810). Some of his texts were collected in 1827.

Pixis, Johann Peter (Mannheim, 1788-1874, Baden-Baden). Badenese pianist, pupil of his father and appearing when but nine, from about 1815 a popular teacher at Munich, Vienna, Paris (from 1825) and finally Baden-Baden. Wrote a symphony, a piano-concerto, a string-quintet, a piano-quintet, a quartet, 7 trios, piano-sonatas, variations, transcriptions and pieces, 2 flute-sonatas, etc., besides 4 stage-works. He joined Czerny, Herz, Thalberg, Chopin and Liszt in making the set of variations known as the Hexaméron. Memoir by Batka, 1903 (in the collection Kranz). His brother Friedrich Wilhelm (1786-1842) from 1810 was opera-conductor at Prague and later violin-teacher at the Conservatory. G.

Pizzetti, Ildebrando (Parma, 1880). Highly gifted Italian composer, pupil of the Parma Conservatory, where he made special studies in the modal qualities of Greek and Gregorian music, since 1918 Tacchinardi's successor as director of the Florence Conservatory. Has written the operas Fedra, 1915, and Débora e Jaële, 1922, choruses and a dance for d'Annunzio's La Nave (1905-07), a Requiem in memory of King Humbert (1923), a Lamento for tenor and chorus, 1920, several choral songs, church-music, solo-songs, a Sinfonia del Fuoco, 1914, an Overture per una Farsa Tragica, 1911, a string-quartet (1904), a violin-sonata and a Poema Emiliana, a 'cello-sonata (1921) and some delicate piano-pieces. Author of an essay on Greek music (1914) sketches of contemporary musicians (1914), a work on Bellini (1916), Intermezzi Critici, 1921, and many articles.

Pizzi, Emilio (Verona, 1862). Gifted Italian composer, trained at the Milan Conservatory, from 1885 winner of various prizes for operas and chamber-music, in 1897-1900 head of the Bergamo Istituto and maestro at S. Maria Maggiore (following Cagnoni). In 1900 he removed to London. Has written the opera Guglielmo Ratcliff, 1889, the shorter Lina, 1885, Editta, 1890, Gabriella, 1893, Rosalba, 1899 (these two written for Patti), the comic Bric-à-Brac Will, 1895, Vanita ed Amore, 1900, and Vendetta, 1906, the oratorio Death and Resurrection (not yet given), a mass, 2 string-quartets, violin- and piano-pieces and songs.

Plaichinger, Thila (Vienna, 1868). Noted Austrian operatic soprano, pupil of Gänsbacher, appearing at Hamburg in 1893, from 1894 at the Strasburg Opera and in 1894-1901 engaged at the Berlin Opera, besides often as guest elsewhere (at Bayreuth from 1896). She excels in rôles requiring intensity and passion. Since 1910 she has taught at the Berlin Hochschule.

Plaidy, Louis (n. Oschatz, 1810-1874, Grimma). Noted Saxon piano-pedagogue, pupil of Agthe and Haase, at first aiming to be a violinist and from 1831 active as such at Leipzig, but soon developing into an exceptional piano-trainer, in 1843-65 at the new Conservatory. Wrote famous Technische Studien and the small manual Der Klavierlehrer, 1874. G.

Planchet, D. Charles (Toulouse, 1862). Gifted French composer, trained at the École Niedermeyer in Paris, where since 1898 he has taught. From about 1885 he was organist at Versailles Cathedral (St.-Louis) and since 1898 choir-master at Ste.-Trinité in Paris. In 1905 he won the Prix Chartier and is secretary of the Société des Compositeurs. Has written the symphonic poem Breiz, 2 'cello-concertos, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, violin- and organ-pieces, the choral works Le Grand Ferré and Eslavage Africain (men's voices), a solemn mass and songs. For Lavignac's Encyclopédie he wrote a study on conducting.

Plançon, Pol Henri (Fumay, 1854-1914, Paris). Distinguished French operatic bass, pupil of Duprez and Sbriglia, in 1877-79 appearing at Lyons, from 1880 at Paris, where in 1883-93 he was engaged at the Opéra, in 1891-1904 regularly at Covent Garden, London, and in 1893-1906 also at the Metropolitan, New York, in all these making a deep impression as both musician and actor. His most famous rôle was that of Mephistopheles, but his repertory was extremely varied and he was as much a favorite in concert as on the stage. He assisted at the premières of Saint-Saëns' Étienne Marcel (1879) and Ascanio (1890), Stanford's Much Ado (1901) and Bunnings' Princess Osra (1902). G.

Planquette, Jean Robert (Paris, 1848-1903, do.). Noted French composer of light operettas, pupil of Duprato, from about 1870 writing popular songs for cafés-chantants and from 1874 nearly 25 bright and taking stage-works, including Les Cloches de Corneville, 1877, Les Voltigeurs de la 32me, 1880, Rip van Winkle, 1882, Surcouf, 1887, Paul Jones, 1889, Panurge, 1895, and Mam'zelle Quat'Sous, 1897. His vogue was as great in London as in Paris. G.

Plantade, Charles Henri (Pontoise, 1764-1839, Paris). French singing-master and facile composer, pupil of Langlé, Hüllmandel and Petrin, from 1797 at the St. Denis Institut and in 1802-07 and '15-28 at the Conservatory. At the instance of Queen Hortense (who was his pupil at St. Denis) in 1807-10 he was court-conductor for Louis Bonaparte in Holland and was in the Queen's service at Paris in 1810-15. In 1812-15 he was also chorusmaster at the Opéra and in 1816-30 court-choirmaster under Louis XVIII. Wrote numerous popular songs, church-music for the Chapelle Royale, about 10 operas (1791-1814) and a harp-sonata. G.

Planté, François (Orthez, 1839). Gifted French pianist, trained at the Paris Conservatory, so precocious that he gained a first prize at eleven and in 1850-53 played in solo-recitals and also with Alard and Franchomme in trio. In 1855-72 he studied in seclusion (in the Pyrenees), then reappeared at Paris and soon secured a foremost place there, in London and throughout the Continent. About 1900 he withdrew from activity (indeed, his death was reported in 1898), but in 1915 gave some concerts in Paris (but screened from the audience). Sketch by Commettant, 1874. G.

Plass, Ludwig (Osterode, 1864). Noted Hanoverian trombonist, trained early in military music and later at the Berlin Hochschule, from 1893 in the court-band and from 1905 Kosleck's successor as leader of the Imperial Cornett-Quartett. From 1914 he made a specialty of 'tower-music', collecting the literature of this use of trombones on various occasions. Author of Die deutsche orchestrale Tonkunst in Gefahr, 1900, and various articles on music for brass-wind, besides editing Krekeler's work on the post-horn (1905) and making a report on wind-instruments at the Berlin trade-exhibition of 1906.

Platania, Pietro (Catania, 1828-1907, Naples). Italian composer and teacher, pupil of the Naples Conservatory, from 1863 director of the reorganized Palermo Conservatory and in 1888-1902 of the Naples Conservatory. Wrote the operas Matilde Bentivoglio, 1852, Piccarda Donati, 1857, La Vendetta Slava, 1865, Spartaco, 1891, and Giulio Sabino, a Requiem, Psalm 67, a hymn to the Queen (1878), several symphonies, including L'Italia, one in memory of Pacini (1868) and one a greeting to King Humbert (1878), etc. Author of a text-book in theory. Memoir by Guardione, 1908.

Platel, Nicolas Joseph (Versailles, 1777-1835, Brussels). Eminent French 'cellist, pupil of Duport and Lamare, in 1796-97 in the Feydeau orchestra at Paris, then at Lyons, in 1801-05 the chief player in Paris, then touring for years, from 1813 in the opera-orchestra at Antwerp and from 1824 in the same work at Brussels, also teaching at the Conservatory (Servais, Batta and De Munck among his pupils). Wrote 5 concertos, 3 sonatas, 8 sets of variations and many pieces for 'cello, besides 3 string-trios, duets for violin and 'cello and some songs.

Platti, Giovanni. Italian chamber-musician, about 1740 in the service of the Bishop of Bamberg and Würzburg (Bavaria), writing notable clavier-concertos and sonatas, etc. See Torrefranca in Rivista Musicale, 1910.

Platzbecker, Heinrich August (n. Jülich, 1860). Rhenish composer of clever operettas (from 1889), humorous choruses, songs, etc., author of analyses of Lohengrin and Bungert's Kirke, and editor of the Dresden Salonblatt. In 1918 he gained the title of professor.

Playford, John (1623-1686). and Henry (1657-1720?). 17th C. G.

Pleyel, Ignaz Joseph (n. Vienna, 1757-1831, n. Paris). Noted Austrian composer, pupil of Wanhal and Haydn (as protégé of Count Erdödy), with further study in Rome. Until 1783 he remained in Count Erdödy's service, was then deputy-choirmaster at Strasburg Cathedral, becoming chief in 1789, in 1791-92 visited London to conduct the Professional Concerts (in unexpected, but friendly rivalry with Haydn) and soon after was driven from Strasburg by revolutionary agitators. From 1795 he lived in Paris, where for a time he undertook music-selling, but in 1807 established a piano-factory that later became important (see below), finally retiring to his country-place in the suburbs. In 1805 he paid a visit to Vienna and was received with honor. He wrote an astonishing amount of instrumental music, much of which was mechanical and superficial, but at first with a degree of facile grace. The list includes nearly 30 symphonies, a septet, a sextet, many quintets, over 60 quartets, trios, concertos for violin, for 'cello and for piano, violin-sonatas, piano-sonatas (2 and 4 hands), etc., besides an opera (1785), an operetta (1776), a hymn in praise of the Revolution (1792, extorted by persecution) and a few songs. His son Camille (1788-1855) also wrote trios, a quartet, etc., besides being a good pianist, but is most notable as his father's successor in the piano-business. Camille's wife, née Marie Félicité Denise Moke (1811-1875), was from 1826 phenomenally successful as pianist and from 1848 teacher at the Brussels Conservatory. G.

Pleyel et Cie. Eminent firm of piano-makers in Paris, founded in 1807 by Ignaz J. Pleyel (see above), assisted on the technical side by the expert J. H. Pape. In 1821 Camille Pleyel entered the firm, with the pianist Kalkbrenner after 1824, aided by helpful advice from Chopin after 1831. During this period was established the reputation for refined tone that the firm has always had, and this was still further extended under the management of A. D. B. Wolff (1821-1887), who entered in 1850 (the firm in 1855 becoming Pleyel, Wolff et Cie.) and who later established the Pleyel-Wolff prize. G.

Plüddemann, Martin (Kolberg, 1854-1897, Berlin). Pomeranian choral conductor, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory and of Hey, from 1887 director of the Ratibor Singakademie and from 1890 teacher at the Gratz Music School. Wrote very effective men's choruses, fine ballades and songs, besides progressive pamphlets. Sketch by Batka, 1895 (emphasizing his ballades).

Pocchi, Franz, Count von (Munich, 1807-1876, do.). Italian-Bavarian nobleman, poet and composer of the opera Der Alchemist, 1840, 2 piano-sonatas and many choruses, songs and piano-pieces for children that aroused Schumann's warm interest.

Pochhammer, Adolf (Rheine, 1864). Westphalian teacher, pupil of Raif, Tiersch, the Hamburg Conservatory, Riemann, Bussard and Marie Retzer, from about 1890 at the Wiesbaden Conservatory, with some choral conducting, from 1897 at the Frankfort Music School and since 1902 head of the Music School at Aix. Author of elementary text-books (1895, 1901) and many analyses for the Musikführer and the Opernführer.

Pochon, Alfred (Yverdon, 1878). Eminent Swiss violinist, appearing as a boy of eleven, then pupil of Thomson, under whom he taught from 1898 at the Brussels Conservatory, besides playing with him in his Quartet and under Ysaÿe in the orchestra. In 1902 he was De Coppet's agent in assembling the Flonzaley Quartet, in which he was at first leader alternately with Betti and later regularly second. A.

Podbertsky, Theodor (Munich, 1846-1913? do.). Bavarian choral composer of about 300 fine men's choruses. In 1901-10 he led two choral societies in Munich.

Poglietti, Alessandro (?-1683). 17th C. G.

Pohl, Karl Ferdinand (Darmstadt, 1819-1887, Vienna). Able Hessian writer, in 1849-55 organist at Vienna, in 1863-66 engaged in research in London and then archivist for the Musikfreunde in Vienna. Author of a history of the glass-harmonica (1862), Mozart u. Haydn in London, 2 vols. 1867, a history of the Musikfreunde (1871) and the beginning of a monumental biography of Haydn (1875-82), besides annual summaries of musical events for the Signale. G.

Pohl, Richard (Leipzig, 1826-1896, Baden-Baden). Distinguished Saxon critic, trained at Göttingen and Leipzig Universities, for a short time teaching mathematics at Gratz and in 1852-54 living at Dresden, then in close intimacy with Liszt and his circle at Weimar and from 1864 at Baden-Baden. For some years he was one of the editors of the Neue Zeitschrift. Author of Akustische Briefe für Musiker, 1853, Bayreuther Erinnerungen, 1877, Autobiographisches, 1881, two studies of Wagner (1883), similar works on Liszt (1883) and Berlioz (1884), Die Höhenzüge d. musikal. Entwicklung, 1888, with further works on Berlioz (1900) and Wagner (1904), both edited by his second wife. He translated Berlioz' literary works, wrote additional texts for Schumann's Manfred and Liszt's Prometheus and published the comedy Musikalische Leiden, 1856, and a volume of poems (1859). He also wrote a melodrama, choruses, songs and some instrumental music. His first wife, née Johanna Eyth (1824-70), was noted as a harpist at Weimar and Karlsruhe. In his critical articles he used the pen-name 'Hoplit.' G.

Pohlenz, Christian August (Saalgaß, 1790-1843, Leipzig). Able Saxon organist and conductor, from about 1820 organist of the Thomaskirche at Leipzig and in 1827-34 conductor of the Gewandhaus concerts (preceding Mendelssohn) and also leader of the Singakademie and other choral societies. Wrote men's choruses and songs. G.

Pohlh, Karl (Teplitz, 1864). Eminent Bohemian pianist and conductor, pupil of Liszt, from about 1885 touring extensively as virtuoso, from about 1890 opera-conductor at Gratz, in 1897-98 Mahler's assistant at the Vienna Opera and also engaged at Covent Garden, London, then court-conductor at Coburg, from 1900 director of the Stuttgart Opera and symphony-concerts, 1907-12 conductor of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, in 1913 at the Hamburg Opera and since 1914 at the Brunswick Opera. Has written the symphonic poem Per Aspera ad Astra, piano-pieces, choruses and songs.

Poirée, Élie Émile Gabriel (n. Paris, 1850). French critic, librarian of the Bibliothèque Ste. Génévieve, author of L'Évolution de la Musique, 1884, Tannhäuser, 1895 (with A. Ernst), Essais de Technique et d'Esthétique Musicales, 2 nos. 1898-99 (the 1st on Die Meistersinger), Le Chant Gnostico-Magique des Sept Voyelles, 1901 (with Ruelle), a study of the 2d Delphic Hymn (1901) and a life of Chopin (1907), besides a string-quartet (1908).

Poise, Jean Alexandre Ferdinand (Nîmes, 1828-1892, Paris). French composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory, from 1853 producing about 15 tuneful operettas, beginning with Bonsoir, Voisin. G.

Poisot, Charles Émile (Dijon, 1822-1904, do.). French pianist, pupil of L. Adam, Thalberg, Halévy and others, from 1850 active as composer at Paris, in 1868 founder and then director of the Dijon Music School, as well as of a choral society in 1872. He was one of the promoters of the Société des Compositeurs. Wrote several operas and operettas, the cantata Jeanne d'Arc, church-music, etc., besides historical essays.

Poizl, Johann Nepomuk (Haukenzell, 1783-1865, Munich). Bavarian composer, pupil of Danzi, from 1823 substitute for Rumling as court-superintendent and in 1825-48 his successor. Wrote 14 operas and singspiele, including Der Wettkampf von Olympia, 1815 (repeated by Weber at Dresden in 1820), and three in which he undertook to adopt the new romantic style, the oratorio Der Erntetag, Psalm 95, a Stabat Mater, 2 Misereres, etc. See essay by Reipschläger, 1911.

Polacco, Giorgio (Venice, 1875). Distinguished Italian conductor, trained by Coccon and at the Milan Conservatory, from about 1895 favorably known in Italy, then for several years in South America (Buenos Aires and Rio de Janeiro), with three years at La Scala, Milan, and many appearances as guest-conductor elsewhere (including especially Petrograd), in 1906 at Mexico City and San Francisco and in 1911-12, at Puccini's desire, in charge of the Savage productions of The Girl of the Golden West. From 1912 he was on the staff of the Metropolitan, New York, in 1915 succeeded Toscanini as chief conductor there and also from 1913 at Covent Garden, London, and since 1918 with the Chicago Opera Company. His repertory includes over 150 works of all schools. A.

Polak, A. J. (1840–1907, Rotterdam). A Dutch merchant who published several studies in musical science, including acoustics (1900–09) and the harmonization of exotic melodies (1905).

Pölschau, Georg (Cremon, 1773–1836, Berlin). A Livonian who before 1800 moved to Hamburg, where he bought up the music left by K. P. E. Bach in 1788 and also a residue from the Hamburg opera-library and, moving to Berlin in 1813, still further extended his collections, most of which went to the Berlin Library and the rest to the Singakademie (of which he had been librarian since 1833). G.

Poldini, Eduard (Pest, 1869). Hungarian composer of the short comic opera Der Vagabund und die Prinzessin, 1903, several fairy-plays for children, and many graceful piano-pieces. He lives near Vevey (Switzerland).

Pole, William (Birmingham, 1814–1900, London). Eminent English civil engineer, in 1859–76 professor at University College, London, but also always active in music. For thirty years he was organist at a London church, took a Mus.D. at Oxford in 1867 and in 1878–90 was examiner for London University. Author of a report on instruments at the Exhibitions of 1851 and 1862, The Philosophy of Music, 1879 (re-issued, 1895), a short Story of Mozart's Requiem, 1879, and various articles in Grove's Dictionary (1st ed. 1880–89). Wrote Psalm 100, 1861, a mass and a motet (both a 8), organ-pieces, etc. Besides other accomplishments he was an authority on whist. G.

Polidoro, Federico (Naples, 1845–1903, n. do.). Able Italian lecturer and writer, trained at the Naples Conservatory, where from 1874 he taught music-history and aesthetics. He was a frequent contributor to various journals, especially the Gazzetta Musicale (using the pseudonym 'Acuto') and the Archivio Musicale, including studies of leading composers, discussions of important topics in his special fields, etc. He was honored by several Academies, for which he wrote many papers. In 1889 the Naples Academy gave a prize for his essay on the influence of the Netherlands in Italy. Published separately a life of Cimarosa (1902).

Polinski, Alexander (Włostow, 1845–1916, Warsaw). Polish critic and writer, pupil of Noskowski, Zelenski and Minchejmer, from 1904 professor of music-history at the Warsaw Conservatory. He was musical editor of the Encyclopedya Powszechna, 16 vols. 1898–1904, and wrote much for various journals. Author of books on church-music (1890), the history of Polish music (1907), etc.

Polko, Elise, née Vogel (Leipzig, 1822–1899, Munich). Prolific Saxon writer, gifted as a singer and originally trained by Garcia for the opera, but after marrying the engineer Eduard Polko rarely sang even in concert. Besides many romances and novels, wrote Musikal.

Märchen, 3 vols. 1852, Faustina Hasse, 2 vols. 1860 (novel), Die Bettleroper, 3 vols. 1864, Alle Herren, 1866 (predecessors of Bach at the Thomasschule), Verklungene Akkorde, 1868, Erinnerungen an Mendelssohn, 1868, Paganini u. d. Geigenbauer, 1876, Vom Gesang, 1876, Aus d. Künstlerwelt, 1878, Die Klassiker d. Musik, 1880 (Handel, Bach, Gluck, Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven), and Meister d. Tonkunst, 1896. Most of these have passed through several editions.

Pollak, Egon (Prague, 1879). Gifted Bohemian conductor, trained at the Prague Conservatory and at first chorusmaster at the Opera there. From 1905 he was conductor at the Bremen Opera, from 1910 at Leipzig, from 1912 at Frankfurt and since 1917 at Hamburg, besides engagements from 1914 in London and Paris and from 1915 at Chicago. He is notable for his interpretation of Strauss' works.

Pollarolo, Antonio (Venice, 1680–1746, do.), son of the following. Italian church-musician, all his life connected with S. Marco in Venice, from 1702 as helper of his father, from 1723 as assistant-maestro and from 1740 as Lotti's successor as chief. Wrote 7 oratorios, much church-music and 13 operas (from 1700). G.

Pollarolo, Carlo Francesco (1653–1722). 17th C. G.

Polledro, Giovanni Battista (n. Turin, 1781–1853, do.). Excellent Italian violinist, pupil of Pugnani, making his début in 1797 at Turin and playing in the court-band there, in 1804 at Bergamo, from 1805 making long tours and living for five years at Moscow, from 1814 concertmaster at Dresden and in 1824–44 court-director at Turin. Wrote a Sinfonia Pastorale, 8 violin-concertos, a bassoon-concerto, trios and other pieces for strings, a mass, a Miserere, etc. G.

Polleri, Giovanni Battista (Genoa, 1855). Italian teacher, in 1877–94 employed in America, then organist in Genoa and since 1898 director of the Conservatory there. Has written organ-fugues and fantasias, masses and other choir-music, choruses and piano-pieces.

Pollini, Bernhard [Baruch Pohl] (Cologne, 1838–1897, Hamburg). Noted impresario, from 1857 baritone with a traveling opera-troupe, of which he became manager. From about 1865 he was in charge of the Lemberg theater, then of Italian opera at Petrograd and Moscow, and from 1874 of the Hamburg Opera, besides from 1876 administering the Altona theater and from 1894 also the Thalia in Hamburg. His success in all these latter brought him the title of Hofrat.

Pollini, Cesare, Cavaliere de' (Padua, 1858–1914, do.). Italian teacher and writer, trained in law at Padua University, pupil of Bazzini, from 1883 director of the Padua Liceo. Author of a dictionary of terms, a text-book in theory, a summary of Italian music-history and many translations or reprints in the Teatro Illustrato of works by Ambros, Hirschfeld, Langhans and Riemann. He was a promoter of the latter's views of harmony. Sketch by Sacerdoti, 1912.

Pollini, Francesco Giuseppe (Laibach, 1763-1846, Milan). Noted Austrian pianist, pupil of Mozart and Zingarelli, from 1807 professor at the new Milan Conservatory. Wrote 3 sonatas, 3 toccatas, caprices, a rondo, many variations, pieces for 4 hands or two pianos and a notable method, besides a Stabat Mater. He was the first to write certain passages on three staves, so as to present a melody with florid ornamentation. To him Bellini dedicated Sonnambula in 1831. G.

Pollitt, Arthur W. (Liverpool, 1878). English composer, trained at the Royal College, Manchester. Has written 2 overtures, 2 cantatas, an organ-sonata and other pieces, church-music, part-songs and songs.

Pollitzer, Adolf (Pest, 1832-1900, London). Able Hungarian violinist, pupil of J. Böhm, Preyer and Alard, from 1851 concertmaster in London, first at His Majesty's and later with the New Philharmonic and the Royal Choral Society. From 1861 he taught at the London Academy of Music and in 1890 succeeded Wylde as principal. He was especially successful in ensemble and as teacher. Wrote a concerto and a Konzertstück, caprices, etc., besides many edited works. G.

Pomazansky, Ivan Alexandrovitch (n. Kiev, 1848). Russian harpist, pupil of the Petrograd Conservatory, from 1868 in the opera-orchestra there (also chorumaster). Has written an overture, a cantata, many fine songs and piano-pieces.

Pommer, Josef (Mürzzuschlag, 1845-1918, Gröbmung). Styrian teacher of philosophy and science, long professor in the Vienna Realgymnasium (Mariahilf), and an industrious collector of folk-songs and yodels, especially from Styria. In 1890 he founded (with Göllerich) the Deutsche Volkslied-Gesellschaft in Vienna, of which he was president. In 1899 he started the periodical Das deutsche Volkslied. He was also one of the editors of the large work Das Volkslied in Oesterreich.

Pommer, William Henry (St. Louis, 1851). American teacher, trained at the Leipzig and Vienna Conservatories, from 1875 active in St. Louis as teacher, organist and school-supervisor (except sojourns in Columbia and Milwaukee in 1883-90) and since 1907 professor at the University of Missouri (Columbia). Has written a piano-quintet, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, some choral works and songs. A.

Ponchard, Louis Antoine Éléonore (Paris, 1787-1866, do.). Noted French operatic tenor, pupil of Garat, in 1812-37 a favorite at the Opéra-Comique and from 1819 professor at the Conservatory. He was the first opera-singer admitted to the Légion d'Honneur. His wife, née Marie Sophie Callault (1792-1873), was also at the Opéra-Comique in 1818-36. Memoir by Méreaux, 1866.

Ponchielli, Ildebrando (n. Cremona, 1834-1886, Milan). Distinguished Italian composer, trained at the Milan Conservatory, beginning writing for the stage in 1851 while yet a student and more formally in 1856. From 1872, when his revised I Promessi Sposi was brought out at Milan, he had a series of successes that set him almost as high in Italian regard as Verdi himself. The full list of his works includes Il Sindico, 1851 (operetta, with three other students), I Promessi Sposi, 1856 (revised, 1872), La Savoyarda, 1861 (rewritten as Lina, 1877), Roderico, 1864, Bertrando del Bornio (not given), La Stella del Monte, 1867, Le Due Gemelle, 1873 (ballet), Clarina, 1873 (ballet), Il Parlatore Eterno, 1873 (farce), I Litiganti, 1874 (remodeled as Alduna, 1884), La Gioconda, 1876 (the work by which he is best known generally), Il Figliuol Prodigo, 1880, Marion Delorme, 1885, and I Mori di Venezia, 1914 (completed by A. Cadorna). Also wrote a cantata in honor of Donizetti (1875, when his remains were received at Bergamo), the funeral march Il 29 Maggio (in memory of Manzoni), a Hymn in memory of Garibaldi (1882) and a few other works, including church-music written after 1881, when he became maestro at Bergamo Cathedral. See A. Mandelli, Le Distrazioni di Ponchielli, 1897. G.

Poniatowski, Josef Michal Xawery Franciszek Jan (Rome, 1816-1873, Chislehurst, England), Prince of Monte Rotondo (title conferred in 1847), the natural son of Prince Stanislas (d. 1833) and nephew of Marshal Josef Anton (d. 1813). Polish-Italian singer (tenor) and composer, pupil of Ceccherini and the Florence Liceo, from 1848 Tuscan diplomat at Paris and from 1870 following Napoleon III to England. His fluent operas included Gioanni da Procida, 1838, Don Desiderio, 1839, Ruy Blas, 1842, Bonifazio, 1844, I Lambertazzi, 1845, Malek Adel, 1846, Esmeralda, 1847, La Sposa d'Abido, 1847, Pierre de Médicis, 1860, Au travers du Mur, 1861, L'Aventurier, 1865, La Contessina, 1868, and Gelmina, 1872. G.

Pönitz, Franz (Bischofsverda, 1850-1913, Berlin). Fine Prussian harpist, pupil of L. Grimm, even as a boy of seven appearing in Berlin and touring, from 1861 member of the court-orchestra (chamber-musician from 1891). Wrote a string-quartet, a sinfonietta for violin, 'cello and harmonium, many harp-pieces, including the fantasia Vineta (with orchestra), and the opera Cleopatra.

Pons, Charles. French composer of the operas L'Épreuve, 1904, Laura, 1906, Mourette, 1909, Le Voile du Bonheur, 1911, and Française, 1913, music for L'Enfant du Temple (1907), the scenes Loïn du Bal, 1913, and Le Retour des Bergers de la Crèche, the oratorio La Samaritaine, an a cappella mass, piano-pieces, etc.

Ponte. See DU PONT.

Pontécoulant, Lou's Adolphe le Doucet, Marquis de (Paris, 1794-1882, n. do.). French writer, in 1812-15 in active military service under Napoleon, then in America and in 1822 engaged in an insurrection in Brazil, then again in Paris (but concerned in the Belgian uprising in 1830) and thenceforth devoted to various studies. From about 1837 he turned to music-history, especially as to instrument-making, publishing a general work on the latter (1857, enlarged ed. as Organographie, 1861), reports upon the Expositions of 1862 (London) and 1867 (Paris), an account of the instruments at the Paris Conservatory (1864) and Les Phénomènes de la Musique, 1868.

Pontoglio, Cipriano (n. Bergamo, 1831-1892, Milan). Italian composer, pupil of Cagnoni, long head of a music-school in Milan. Wrote the operas Lamberto Malatesta, 1857, Tebaldo Brusato, 1865 (revised 1872 as L'Assedio di Brescia), La Schiava Greca, 1868, Notte di Natale, 1872, and Edoardo Stuart, 1887, and the ballet Rolla.

Poole, Elizabeth (London, 1820-1906, n. do.). English mezzo-soprano, on the stage from childhood, from 1834 appearing in opera (trip to America in 1839) and from 1841 engaged at Drury Lane, besides becoming a favorite ballad-singer. She retired in 1870. G.

Poole, Henry Ward (Salem, Mass. 1825-?). An American mining-engineer who in 1849 made a notable enharmonic organ (see Am. Journal of Science, 1850). A.

Popov, Ivan Gregorovitch (Ekaterinodar, 1859). Russian composer, pupil of the Moscow Conservatory, since 1900 director of the music-school at Stavropol (Caucasus). Has written a symphony, the symphonic poem In Freedom, the overture Ivan the Terrible, an Oriental Suite, an Armenian Rhapsody and Spanish Dances for orchestra, an andante for strings, harp and harmonium, songs, etc.

Poppen, Hermann Meinhard (Heidelberg, 1885). Able Badenese teacher and conductor, trained at Heidelberg University, where from 1909 he was Wolfrum's assistant, from 1914 music-director at Jena University (following Fritz Stein), in 1918 at Karlsruhe as conductor of the court-choir (following Brauer) and since 1919 Wolfrum's successor as music-director at Heidelberg University and head of the Bach-Verein. Has written choruses and a short life of Reger (1918).

Popper, David (Prague, 1843-1913, Baden-Baden). Eminent Bohemian 'cellist, pupil of the Prague Conservatory, from about 1860 in the court-band at Löwenburg, from 1863 establishing himself by extensive tours as a player of the first rank, in 1868-73 in the opera-orchestra at Vienna and member of the Hubay Quartet, then touring again and from 1896 professor at the National Academy at Pest. In 1872-86 he was husband of the pianist Sophie Menter. Wrote 4 'cello-concertos, the suite Im Walde, an Ungarische Rhapsodie, a Sérénade Orientale, various dances, variations and pieces, a string-quartet, a Requiem for 'cello-trio and orchestra, two sets of advanced études, etc. His works are among the most popular in 'cello-literature. G.

Porges, Heinrich (Prague, 1837-1900, Munich). Able Bohemian critic and editor, trained at Prague, from 1863 associated with Brendel in the editing of the Neue Zeitschrift at Leipzig and becoming active in the Wagnerian circle, and from 1867 at Munich as literary editor of the Süddeutsche Presse and from 1880 critic for the Neueste Nachrichten, piano-teacher at the Conservatory and from 1886 conductor of his own Gesangverein. Besides numerous articles, author of Die Aufführung von Beethovens 9. Symphonie unter Wagner in Bayreuth, 1872, Die Bühnenproben zu d. 1876er Festspielen, 1877, and a study of Tristan und Isolde (1906, edited by Wolzogen). Memoir and letters by Batke, 1903 (in Kranz). His daughter Else wrote the text of Humperdinck's Königskinder.

Porpora, Niccolò Antonio (Naples, 1686-1766, do.). Distinguished Italian composer and singing-teacher, trained at the Conservatorio S. Loreto (Naples), beginning opera-writing in 1708 while still a student, from 1712 conducting his own vocal school at Naples with remarkable success and from 1719 teacher at the Conservatorio S. Onofrio, in 1725-28 teacher at the Conservatorio della Pietà at Venice, in 1728-29 in Dresden as director of the Opera and teacher in the royal family, in 1729-36 in London in fruitless competition with Handel, from 1736 again in Venice and later head of the Conservatorio della Pietà, in 1745-48 at Vienna (Haydn came under his influence in 1748), in 1748-52 one of the court-directors at Dresden (in sharp rivalry with Hasse) and then once more at Naples, where in 1760 he succeeded Abos as maestro at the Cathedral and became head of the Conservatorio S. Onofrio. Though a fertile and often successful composer of operas, his chief renown was won as an unparalleled master in the field of vocal training, not only forming numerous artists of the first order, but establishing what came later to be called 'the old Italian school of singing'. In this field he gathered up the accomplishments of his own and previous times and fused them into a system that was then transmitted through his many pupils. Of his more than 50 operas the more notable were Berenice, 1710, Faramondo, 1719, Issipile, 1723, Ezio, 1728, Tamerlano, 1730, Ariadne, 1733, Partenope, 1742, etc., 6 oratorios, many masses and much other church-music, many solo-cantatas, quartets for strings, violin-sonatas, a trio-sonata, harpsichord-fugues, etc. Memoirs by Villarsosa, 1840, and Clément, 1868 (both in collections of biographies). G.

Porro, Pierre Jean (Béziers, 1750-1831, Montmorency). Noted French guitarist, from 1783 active in Paris and in 1787-1803 editor of the Journal de Guitarre. Wrote many pieces, a method and a collection of church-music. Memoir by Donnadieu, 1897.

Porsile, Giuseppe (Naples, 1672-1750, Vienna). Italian composer, from before 1700 and till 1711 choirmaster at Barcelona, from 1713 music-master in the royal family at Vienna and in 1720-40 court-composer there. Wrote 6 operas, many feste teatrali, over 10 oratorios, other vocal music, etc.

Porta, Bernardo (Rome, 1758–1832, Paris). Italian composer, from 1788 active in Paris, writing 14 operas, string-trios, quartets for strings and flutes, flute-trios, etc.

Porta, Costanzo (?1530–1601). 16th C. G.

Porta, Francesco della (?1590–1666). 17th C. G.

Porta, Giovanni (Venice, ?1690–1755, Munich). Italian composer, from 1716 choral teacher at the Conservatorio della Pietà in Venice and from 1737 court-director at Munich. Wrote over 30 operas (from 1712), masses, Psalms, etc.

Porter, Walter (?1595–1659). 17th C. G.

Portmann, Johann Gottlieb (n. Dresden, 1739–1798, Darmstadt). Saxon singer at Darmstadt, author of three text-books in harmony (1785–98) and critical articles in the Allgem. Deutsche Bibliothek (from 1791). G.

Portugal, Marcos Antonio [Portugal de Fonseca] (Lisbon, 1762–1830, Rio de Janeiro). Eminent Portuguese composer, pupil of Borselli and Sousa-Carvalho, from 1782 accompanist at the Madrid Opera and from 1784 writing many light works for the Lisbon stage, from 1793 in Italy, producing over 20 operas and establishing his reputation, 1799 conductor at the Lisbon Opera, with still further production, from 1810 at Rio de Janeiro as court-director for John VI (driven thence from Portugal in 1807), in 1813–15 (with his brother Simão) head of the new Vera Cruz Conservatory and then in ill-health at Rio. Of his more than 40 operas the best-known were La Confusione per Somiglianza, 1793, Demofonte, 1794, Le Donne Cambiate, 1797, and Fernando nel Messico, 1798, but several others were reproduced in Germany and at London, Paris and Petrograd. He also wrote about 20 operettas and farces, many masses, Te Deums, Psalms and other church-music. The finale of his La Speranza (c.1808) was for some years used as a national hymn. Memoir by Carvalhaes, 1910. G.

Posch, Isaak. 17th C.

Posse, Wilhelm (Bromberg, 1852). Prussian harpist, pupil of L. Grimm and the Kullak Academy (Berlin), in 1872–1903 engaged at the Berlin Opera and since 1890 teacher at the Hochschule, from 1910 holding the title of royal professor. Has written many fine pieces and études, with arrangements from works by Liszt.

Possenti, Pellegrino. 17th C.

Pothier, Joseph (n. St. Dié, 1835). Distinguished French Benedictine and authority on Gregorian music, from 1862 at the Solesmes monastery and since 1898 abbot at that of St. Wandrille (now removed to Dongelberg, Belgium). His training as an expert came from Guéranger and he in turn became the teacher of Mocquereau. In 1904 he was made the head of the commission on the great Editio Vaticana. His publications include Les Mélodies Grégoriennes, 1880 (3d ed. 1890), Liber Gradualis, 1883, Hymni de Tempore et de Sanctis, 1885, Processionale Monasticum, 1888, Liber Antiphonarius, 1891, Liber Responsorialis, 1895, Cantus Mariales, 1902, Méthode du Chant Grégorien, 1902, and many articles in the Revue du Chant Grégorien. He projected the invaluable series of the Paléographie Musicale issued since 1889 by Mocquereau. G.

Potjes, Edouard. Belgian composer of the operas Ariane, 1903, and Lorenzo Murano, 1912.

Pott, August (Norheim, 1806–1883, Gratz). Able Hanoverian violinist, pupil of Kiesewetter and Spohr, from 1824 appearing at Kassel and throughout Germany and Denmark, from 1832 concertmaster in the court-orchestra at Oldenburg, later becoming court-director and in 1861 retiring to Gratz. Wrote 2 concertos, duets, variations, etc. G.

Potter, Philip Cipriani Hambly (London, 1792–1871, do.). Eminent English pianist, conductor and composer, trained by his father, Atwood, Calcott, Crotch, Woelfl and Aloys Förster, with some advice from Beethoven, from 1822 teacher at the Royal Academy, London, and in 1832–59 Crotch's successor as principal, besides in 1855–70 conducting the Madrigal Society. In 1858–65 he was treasurer of the Society of British Musicians. He was the first to play the 1st, 3d and 4th of Beethoven's concertos in England. Wrote 9 symphonies, 4 overtures, 3 piano-concertos, a piano-sextet (with flute), string-quartets, 3 piano-trios, a 'cello-concertante, a horn-sonata, 2 duos and a fantasia and fugue for two pianos, 3 piano-sonatas, rondos, variations and études, the cantata Medora e Corrado, an Ode to Harmony, additional accompaniments for Handel's Acis and Galatea (1831), etc., besides editing Mozart's piano-works. Elogy by Macfarren, 1883 (Musical Assoc. Proc.). G.

Pottgiesser, Karl (Dortmund, 1861). Westphalian composer, pupil of Riemann, since 1890 living at Munich. Has written the opera Heimkehr, 1903, the festspiel Siegfried von Xanten und Kriemhild, 1892, the comedy Aldegevers Erben, the oratorio Gott ist die Liebe, a choral setting of I Cor. 13, a Trinklied (men's voices), many a cappella men's choruses, songs, a symphony, the symphonic poem Brand, a Festvorspiel and Festmarsch, 1910 (Munich Exposition), orchestral variations of O Sanctissima and Weber's Wiegenlied, etc. In 1903 he published letters of Joh. Elias Bach in Musik.

Potulov, Nikolai Michailovitch (1810–1873). Russian church-musician, author of a text-book in the music of the Greco-Russian Church (1872), a collection of church-songs (5 vols.) and harmonizations of ritual music according to the theories of Prince Odojewski.

Pouëigh, Marie Octave Géraud Jean (Toulouse, 1876). French critic and composer, trained at the Toulouse and Paris Conservatories and under d'Indy, since 1902 writing for various papers in Paris, editing folk-songs from Languedoc and Gascony for Les Chansons de France (1907–08) and (using the pen-name 'Octave Séré') publishing Musiciens Français Aujourd' huit, 1911 (covering 27 composers). Has also written the opera Le Meneur de Louves (not yet given), the choral works Les Lontains, 1910, and La Ronde du Blé d'Amour, an orchestral Marche Triomphale and the suite Fün, 1905, a violin-sonata (1905), Pointes Sèches for piano and songs (some with orchestra).

Pougin, Arthur [François Auguste Arthur Paroisse-Pougin] (Châteauroux, 1834-1921, Paris). Distinguished French critic, historian and biographer, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1855 employed as conductor at two or three theaters and also till 1863 as violinist at the Opéra-Comique, but then wholly engaged in literature, including much work as critic or editor for the Ménestrel, France Musicale, L'Art Musical, Théâtre, Chronique Musicale, etc. In 1876 he started the short-lived Revue de la Musique. He was musical editor of Larousse's Dictionnaire Universel, 1866-78, prepared the supplement to Fétis' Biographie Universelle (2 vols. 1878-80) and brought out the revised edition of Clément and Larousse's Dictionnaire Lyrique (1897-1904). Author of lives of Meyerbeer, 1864, Halévy, 1865, Wallace, 1866, L. Kreutzer, 1868, Bellini, 1868, Grisar, 1870, Rossini, 1871, Auber, 1873, Rode, 1874, Boieldieu, 1875, Rameau, 1876, Adam, 1876, Verdi, 1881, Viotti, 1888, Méhul, 1889, Rousseau, 1901, Hérold, 1906, Monsigny, 1908, Malibran, 1911, Alboni, 1912, and Massenet, 1914, besides groups of sketches as Musiciens Français du XVIII<sup>e</sup> Siècle, 1864, Musiciens du XIX<sup>e</sup> Siècle, 1911, Figures de l'Opéra-Comique, 1875, Les Vrais Createurs de l'Opéra Français, 1881, and Acteurs et Actrices d'Autrefois, 1897, and, further, numerous notes in the Almanach de la Musique, 1866-68. Among his other books are De la Littérature Musicale en France, 1867, Dictionnaire Historique et Pittoresque du Théâtre, 1885, L'Opéra Comique pendant la Révolution, 1891, La Musique en Russie, 1896 (2d ed. 1904), L'Opéra sous le Règne de Lully and a comprehensive work on the violin and violinists. G.

Poulenc, Francis (b. 1889). French pianist, pupil of Mines, writing the comic opera Le Gendarme Incompris, various piano-works, including suites, (Rhapsodie Nègre, etc.), a 4-hand sonata, a sonata for two clarinets, song-cycles with small orchestra, etc. He is one of 'the Six' (see Honegger).

Powell, John (Richmond, Va. 1882). Gifted American pianist and composer, pupil of his sister, F. C. Hahr, Leschetizky and Navrátil, making his début in Vienna in 1907 and then touring in Germany, France and England, in 1912 returning to the United States and there often playing with leading orchestras. Has written a Negro Rhapsody, 1918, a piano-concerto, a violin-concerto (1912), a string-quartet (1910), 2 violin-sonatas (the 1st Virginesque, 1908, the 2d, 1919), 3 piano-sonatas (Psychologique, 1912, Noble and Teutonica, 1914), the piano-suites In the South and At the Fair, variations and double fugue on a theme by F. C. Hahr and some songs.

He makes effective use of plantation-themes and similar folk-song material. A.

Powell, Maud (Peru, Ill. 1868-1920, Uniontown, Pa.). Distinguished American violinist, trained by Wm. Lewis, Schrädick, Dancla and Joachim. She was heard in Chicago when but a child, played in London and toured with Miss Sherrington at fifteen and made her formal début in Berlin and New York in 1885. From that time for over thirty years she was an incessant traveler through America and Europe, besides a tour in South Africa in 1905-06. Her repertoire was very extensive and her range of interest and insight remarkably comprehensive. As virtuoso and interpreter she was not only a master, but also in poise, intelligence and sentiment a model. From 1904 she was the wife of H. Godfrey Turner of New York. G., A.

Power, Lionel. 15th C. G.

Pradher [Pradère], Louis Barthélemy (Paris, 1781-1843, Gray). French pianist and teacher, trained at the Paris École Royale and Conservatory, from 1802 teaching at the latter and forming many eminent pupils, besides work in the royal family and the court. In 1829 he married the opera-singer Félicité More (1800-1876) and retired. Wrote several comic operas (1800-24), a piano-concerto, a piano-trio, sonatas, rondos, fantasias, variations, a rondo for two pianos and many sets of songs.

Praeger, Ferdinand Christian Wilhelm (Leipzig, 1815-1891, London). Saxon pianist, pupil of Hummel and Pape, in 1831-34 at The Hague and then removing to London, where he became noted as teacher. He was correspondent for the Neue Zeitschrift and a strong partisan for Wagner. Wrote the symphonic poem Life and Love, Battle and Victory, 1885, the overture Abellino, a prelude to Manfred, a piano-trio and many pieces, besides the much-debated Wagner as I Knew Him, 1885. G.

Praetorius, Christoph (? -1690). 16th C.

Praetorius, Hieronymus (1560-1629). 16th C. G.

Praetorius, Michael (1571-1621). 16th C. G.

Pratella Balilla, Francesco (Lugo, 1880). Italian composer, pupil of Signorini and the Pesaro Liceo, from 1908 teacher at the Cesena music-school and since 1910 director of the Lugo Istituto. Has written the operas Lilia, 1913, La Sina di Vargoun, 1919, and L'Aviatore, 1920, 5 orchestral poems (collected as Romagna), an Inno a Vita, 1913, a piano-trio, organ-, violin- and piano-pieces. He is one of the editors of the Raccolta Nazionale and author of several works in theory and history (from 1910).

Pratt, John (Cambridge, 1772-1855, do.). English organist, pupil of Randall and from 1799 his successor at King's College (Cambridge) and from 1813 at St. Peter's College, besides being from 1799 organist to the University. Wrote a few anthems and issued collections of anthems and tunes. G.

Pratt, Silas Gamaliel (Addison, Vt. 1846-1916, Pittsburgh). Versatile American composer, pupil of the Kullak Academy (Berlin) and of Dorn, Kiel and Liszt, from 1871 identified with Chicago, though with sojourns in Europe, in 1888–1902 teaching at the Metropolitan Conservatory in New York and from 1906 head of his own Institute in Pittsburgh. In 1872 he was active in the formation of the Chicago Apollo Club. At intervals he gave orchestral concerts in Chicago, brought out two operas there and in 1876 and '85 conducted works in London. Wrote the operas Zenobia, 1882, Lucille, 1887 (originally Antonio), The Triumph of Columbus, 1892 (in concert-form), and Ollanta (original text), the cantata The Last Inca, the symphonies The Prodigal Son, Lincoln, Centennial and one other, the symphonic poems Magdalena's Lament, Sandalphon and A Tragedy of the Deep (the loss of the 'Titanic', 1912), the overtures Anniversary, 1876, and The Voyage of Columbus, 2 orchestral suites, various other orchestral pieces (largely commemorative), about 50 piano-pieces, choruses, part-songs and songs. A.

Pratté, Anton Edvard (Hadjá, 1799–1875, Odensnäs). Noted Bohemian harpist, brought up in Sweden, from about 1820 active in Linköping and later in Norrköping, 1835–36 leading a choral society in the latter. Wrote a harp-concerto and various pieces, some orchestral works, the cantata Fridsroster, a choral melodrama, etc. In 1843 he issued a pamphlet attacking Ole Bull.

Predieri, Luca Antonio (Bologna, 1688–1769, Naples). Italian composer, pupil of his uncle and Vitali, apparently succeeding the former as maestro at S. Petronio in Bologna, from 1739 second court-director at Vienna (at first under Fux) and in 1746–51 chief. Wrote over 20 operas and serenades (from 1710), 9 oratorios, masses, etc. Like his uncle he was a member of the Bologna Accademia and in 1723 its president. G.

Preindl, Joseph (Marbach, 1756–1823, Vienna). Austrian church-musician, pupil of Albrechtsberger, from 1780 choirmaster at the Peterskirche in Vienna and from 1809 his teacher's successor as choirmaster at St. Stephen's. Wrote many masses, motets, a Requiem, a Te Deum, a Lamentations, etc., several piano-works and text-books in singing and composition (1827, 2d ed. 1832). G.

Preiss, Kornelius (Troppau, 1884). Silesian writer, originally a geologist (Ph.D. of Graz Univ. in 1907), pupil of Nešvera and L. A. Seydler, since 1908 teaching music-history in the Gratz Music School and from 1919 also in the Gymnasium. Author of 15 Meyerbeer-Studien, 1907–14, Haydn in Graz u. Steiermark, 1908, Beiträge zur Gesch. d. Operette, 1908, Gedenkrede auf Mendelssohn, 1909, Rubinstein's pianistische Bedeutung, 1914, and lives of Millöcker (1905), Seydler (1906), Drechsler (1910), Volkmann (1912), Goldmark, Ferd. Hiller and Rubinstein (in Musikal. Porträts, 1913) and R. Stöhr (1914).

Preizt, Franz (Zerbst, 1856–1916, do.). Able Saxon organist, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1876 touring as virtuoso, from 1879 teacher at the Stern Conservatory in Berlin and from 1885 at Zerbst as cantor at the court-church, teacher at the Gymnasium, from 1894 conductor of the Oratorienverein and from 1897 ducal director. Wrote an a cappella Requiem, motets, Psalms, vocal trios and duets, songs, organ-preludes, arrangements for violin and organ of some of Bach's clavier-preludes, music for Kaiser's Gustaf Adolf and Bunger's 500 Jahre in Treue, etc.

Premier, Stanislaus (St. Veit, 1880). Carinthian priest and church-musician, educated in theology at Laibach, pupil in music of the Vienna Conservatory and University, since 1909 choirmaster at Laibach Cathedral, besides from 1910 editing the Ceekveni Glasbeniki, directing the Organ School and from 1913 acting as diocesan inspector of music. Has written 2 masses, a Requiem, the cantata Sonnenlied des Heiligen Franziskus, 1917, motets, organ-preludes, etc., and edited many collections for church-use.

Prentice, Thomas Ridley (Ongar, 1842–1895, London). English pianist, pupil of the Royal Academy, London, from 1863 increasingly popular as a teacher, from 1880 at the Guildhall School, besides from 1881 being active in the new school at Blackheath. In 1869–74 he directed series of popular concerts at Brixton and from 1880 similar concerts in Kensington. Author of a series of text-books for piano-students (1883–86) and a manual of Hand-Gymnastics. Also wrote the cantata Linda (women's voices), anthems, part-songs, songs, piano-pieces and an edition of 6 cantatas by Carissimi. G.

Preobrashensky, Antonin Viktorovitch (b. 1870). From 1898 teacher at the Moscow Synodal School and since 1902 librarian of the Imperial Choir at Petrograd. Author of a dictionary (1877) and a bibliography (2d ed. 1900) of Russian church-music, besides articles in periodicals.

Pressel, Gustav Adolf (Tübingen, 1827–1890, Berlin). Württemberger composer, pupil of Silcher and Sechter, living first at Stuttgart and from 1868 near Berlin. Wrote the operas Die St. Johannisnacht, 1860, and Der Schneider von Ulm, 1866, the ballad Barbarossa and very popular songs. He sought to show that Mozart completed his Requiem entire.

Pressenda, Johannes Franciscus (n. Alba, 1777–1854, Turin). Good Italian violin-maker, trained by Storioni, from 1820 working at Turin, where his instruments were favored by Polledro and Ghebart, so that they became widely used. G.

Presser, Theodore (Pittsburgh, 1848). American music-publisher, pupil of the New England Conservatory (Boston), with study in Germany, from 1869 teaching at schools in Ohio and Virginia, and since 1884 active in Philadelphia, founding the Theo. Presser Company, which has grown to large proportions. In 1883 he started The Etude, a monthly for teachers. In 1906 he founded the Presser Home for Retired Music Teachers, now located in a fine building in Germantown. This enterprise, with other philanthropies, is administered by the Presser Foundation, a corporation of which James Francis Cooke is president. A.

Prévost, Eugène Prosper (Paris, 1809-1872, New Orleans). French conductor, trained at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1831), producing two small operas while still a student, in 1835-38 theater-conductor at Havre, from 1838 active as conductor and vocal teacher at New Orleans, with sojourns in New York (Niblo's Garden) in 1842 and in Paris (Bouffes-Parisiens and the Champs-Élysées concerts) in 1862-67. His chief works, aside from casual arrangements, were the comedy-operas Le Grenadier de Wagram, 1831, Cosimo, 1834, Le Bon Garçon, 1837, Blanche et René, Esmeralda (both New Orleans), L'Illustre Gaspard, 1863, the cantata Bianca Capello, 1831, and some sacred music. G. A.

Preyer, Gottfried von (Hausbrunn, 1807-1901, Vienna). Able Austrian organist and conductor, pupil of Sechter, from 1835 at the Evangelical Church in Vienna and in 1846-63 court-organist, besides being from 1838 teacher at the Conservatory and in 1844-48 its director, from 1853 choirmaster at St. Stephen's and in 1844-76 second court-director. Wrote 3 operas, the oratorio Noah, 1842, several masses, other church-music, including Hymnen d. griechisch-katholischen Kirche, 1847, choruses, effective songs, a symphony, a string-quartet, organ- and piano-pieces. G.

Preyer, Karl Adolph (Pforzheim, 1863). Badenese pianist, trained at the Stuttgart Conservatory and under Navrátil, Urban and Barth, emigrating in 1884 to America, where in 1889-91 he taught at Baker University (Kan.) and since 1893 at the University of Kansas (Lawrence), becoming dean of fine arts in 1915-23, besides activity as player. Has written a piano-quintet, 2 violin-sonatas, a piano-sonata, many pieces and fine studies, songs, etc. A.

Preyer, Wilhelm Thierry (Manchester, 1841-1897, Wiesbaden). English physiologist, in 1869-94 professor at Jena University, author (among other works) of Ueber d. Grenzen d. Tonwahrnehmung, 1876.

Pribik, Joseph (b. 1853). Bohemian conductor and composer, trained at the Prague Conservatory and by Libenski, from 1880 opera-conductor at Kharkov, Lemberg, Kiev, Tiflis and Moscow, and from 1894 of the symphony-orchestra at Odessa. Has written 2 orchestral suites, a quintet, a quartet, a trio, piano-sonatas and pieces, cantatas and songs.

Prieger, Erich (Kreuznach, 1849-1913, Bonn). Notable Rhenish historian and promoter of musical interests, living alternately at Bonn and Berlin. He was intimate with Kiel, Vierling and Franz, and devoted himself much to studies about Bach and Beethoven. He showed that the St. Luke Passion of the former was probably unauthentic (1889), wrote upon Rust as Beethoven's forerunner (1894) and effected the presentation of Beethoven's Lenore at Berlin in its original form (1905). Author of Anregung d. Aesthetik von Baumgarten, 1875 (Ph.D. thesis), and program-notes for the Bonn festivals. In 1897 he purchased the great Artaria collection of musical autographs and presented it to the Berlin Library (this included invaluable Beethoven material).

Prill, Emil (Stettin, 1867), brother of the two following. Eminent Pomeranian flutist, pupil of his father, Gantenberg, J. Andersen and the Berlin Hochschule, from 1888 teacher at the Kharkov Music School, then in the Philharmonic and Laube Orchestras at Hamburg and since 1892 at the Berlin Opera, besides from 1903 teaching at the Hochschule. He gained the title of royal professor in 1912. Has written a Tarentelle for flute and orchestra, transcriptions, a series of Orchesterstudien (flute-passages in large works), 2 methods (with or without the Böhm system) and a Führer to flute-literature.

Prill, Karl (Berlin, 1864), brother of the foregoing and the next. Eminent Prussian violinist, pupil of his father, Helmich, Wirth and Joachim, touring from boyhood and early soloist under Brenner and Laube, in 1883-85 concertmaster under Bilse, from 1885 at Magdeburg as both concertmaster and conductor, from 1891 concertmaster at the Gewandhaus in Leipzig and since 1897 at Vienna as concertmaster at the Opera and for the Philharmonic, professor at the Conservatory and leader of his own Quartet. He has received numerous official honors.

Prill, Paul (Berlin, 1860), brother of the two preceding. Excellent Prussian 'cellist and conductor, pupil of his father, Handwerg, Sturm, Manecke, Bargiel and the Berlin Hochschule, in 1882-85 playing in the Bilse Orchestra, from 1886 opera-conductor at Rotterdam, from 1889 at Hamburg, from 1892 at Nuremberg, from 1901 court-director at Schwerin, in 1906-07 conductor of the Mozart-Orchester in Berlin, in 1908-15 conductor of the Konzertverein-Orchester in Munich and then city-director in Cottbus.

Primavera, Giovanni Leonardo. 16th C. G.

Prioris, Johannes. 15th C. G.

Pringsheim, Klaus (Munich, 1883). Able Bavarian conductor of both opera and concert, pupil of Thuille, Stavenhagen and Mahler, in 1906-07 chorusmaster at the Vienna Opera, from 1907 conductor at the Grand Théâtre in Geneva, from 1909 at the German Opera in Prague, in 1914-15 at Breslau and since 1918 at the Grosses Schauspielhaus in Berlin. He also lectures at the University on questions of music-sociology. Has written the opera Lojko Sodar, music for plays produced at the Rheinhardt theaters and many songs, with orchestra or piano, besides magazine-articles.

Printz, Wolfgang Caspar (1641-1717). 17th C.

Proch, Heinrich (Böhmisch-Leipa, 1809-1878, Vienna). Able Bohemian conductor and singing-teacher, at first aiming to be a violinist, from 1837 director at the Josephstadt Theater in Vienna and in 1840-70 at the Opera. Among his famous pupils were Tietjens, Peschka-Leutner and Materna. Wrote the opera Ring und Maske, 1844, 3 operettas, a noted set of vocal variations with flute and many popular songs, besides translations of several Italian operalibretti. In 1874 he was conductor for the short-lived Komische Oper in Vienna. G.

Procházka, Rudolf, Freiherr von (Prague, 1864). Important Bohemian civil official, writer and composer, trained as a lawyer at Prague University, pupil of Wittich, Grünberger and Fibich. Besides being Imperial Hauptmann for the Prague district, he has held various posts related to music, such as musical inspector, chief of the commission for the licensing of teachers and recorder of the Bohemian Musical Society (till 1918) and of its Conservatory. In 1911 he carried through a notable exposition in celebration of the centenary of the Conservatory, preparing the official catalogue. Author of Versuch einer Reform d. deutschen Lyrik, 1888, Die böhmischen Musikschulen, 1890, Mozart in Prag, 1892 (3d ed. 1914), Arpeggien, 1897 (2d ed. 1901 as Musikal. Streiflichter), Das romantische Musik-Prag, 1914, lives of Franz (1894) and Joh. Strauss (1900, 2d ed. 1903) and a complete redaction of Kothe's Musikgesch. (8th ed. 1909). Has also written the allegorical opera Das Glück, 1898, the melodramatic 'mystery' Christus, the choral works Die Palmen and Seerosen, a great variety of choruses (some a cappella), Harfner-Variationen for orchestra (theme from Mozart) Sinfonische Lieder, the string-quartet In Memoriam, many violin- and piano-pieces and numerous songs. Sketches by Hunnius, 1903, and Janetschek, 1915 (in Neue Zeitschrift).

Prod'homme, Jacques Gabriel (Paris, 1871). Eminent French critic and writer, trained at the École des Hautes Études Sociales, since 1895 on the staff of various papers in Paris and in 1897-1900 living at Munich as editor of the Deutsch-französische Rundschau, besides steadily contributing to various leading journals in different countries. In 1913 he was sent by the government to report on musical affairs in Belgium, Holland and Germany. His chief works are a life of Berlioz (1905) and studies of his Faust (1896) and Enfance du Christ (1898), Les Symphonies de Beethoven, 1907 (6th ed. 1914), a life of Paganini (1907), Écrits de Musiciens, 1912, and La Jeunesse de Beethoven, 1920, besides sketches of Wagner and Liszt in Portraits d'Hier (1910) and metrical translations of the texts of Tristan and Parsifal (1914). With Bertrand he prepared a study of Die Götterdämmerung (1902), with others made a translation of Wagner's prose writings (1907-13, 9 vols.), with Dandelot drafted the fullest life of Gounod (1911, 2 vols.) and with Kienlin translated the text of Die Zauberflöte (1912). From 1898 he was the secretary of the French section of the Internationale Musik-Gesellschaft and many of his valuable papers have appeared in one or the other of its journals.

Profe, Ambrosius (1589-1661). 17th C. G.

Prohazka, Karl (n. Vienna, 1869). Austrian composer, pupil of Anna Assmayer, Krenn, d'Albert and Herzogenberg, in 1894-95 teacher at the Strasburg Conservatory, in 1901-05 conductor of the Warsaw Philharmonic and since 1908 professor at the Vienna Conservatory. Has written orchestral variations, a string-quintet, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, a violin-sonata, the choral work Frühlingsfeier, a motet for double chorus, organ and orchestra, Unter den Sternen, Weihnachtslieder and several other choruses for men's or women's voices, some 4-hand piano-pieces and songs.

Prokofiev, Sergei (b. 1891). Russian composer of ultra-modern type, pupil of the Petrograd Conservatory (Rubinstein prize, 1910). Has written the operas The Player, 1916, and The Love for Three Oranges, 1921, the ballet Le Bouffon, 1921, an orchestral Scythian Suite, a Sinfonietta, a 'cello-ballade, 3 piano-concertos, 2 sonatas and 2 suites. In 1918-22 he was in America. See Musical Times, 1916-17.

Prokop, Ladislav. Bohemian composer of the operas Forest-Dream, 1907, and The Question, 1910.

Proksch, Josef (Reichenberg, 1794-1864 Prague). Able Bohemian piano-teacher (bind, from 1807), pupil of Koželuch and disciple of Logier, from 1830 conducting a famous school in Prague which was maintained later by his son Theodor (1843-1876) and his daughter Marie (1836-1900). With him were also associated his two brothers, one an organist, the other a violinist. Wrote a concerto for three pianos, transcriptions for 4-8 pianos, sonatas, masses, cantatas, choruses and several text-books in theory and piano-playing.

Proske, Karl (n. Leobschütz, 1794-1861, Ratisbon). Eminent Silesian priest and authority on church-music, originally trained as a physician, but from 1823 pursuing theology and in 1830 becoming canon and choirmaster of the Chapel of Our Lady at Ratisbon. From 1850 he published a monumental series of editions of the choral works of the 16-17th centuries, especially Musica Divina, 4 vols. 1853-63 (later extended by Schrems and Haberl to 8 vols.), and Selectus Novus Missarum, 1855-59. His extensive library was acquired by the Bishop's Library and since 1909 has been open to students. Memoirs by Mettenleiter, 1868, and Weinmann, 1909, and see account of the library in the Riemann Festschrift, 1909. G.

Prosniz, Adolf (Prague, 1829-1917, Vienna). Bohemian pianist and teacher, pupil of Tomaschek and Proksch, in 1869-1900 teacher at the Vienna Conservatory (advanced piano-playing and music-history). Author of a valuable manual of music-history (3 vols. 1889, 1900, '15) and a summary of piano-literature (2 vols. 1884, 1907), besides a text-book in theory (now in 6th ed.).

Protheroe, Daniel (n. Swansea, 1866). Able Welsh choral conductor and composer, beginning leadership at sixteen and, after moving to America in 1886, founder of a singing-society at Scranton, Pa. In 1894 he went to Milwaukee, where in 1899 he took charge of the Arion, with other activities as singer and trainer, and from 1904 added duties in Chicago, whither in 1909 he removed, but keeping engagements in both cities. He has often served as judge in competitions in America and also at the Eisteddfodau in Wales. Mus.D. of the Grand Cons. (N. Y. City) in 1905. Has written the symphonic poem In the Cambrian Hills, 2 string-quartets, the cantatas St. Peter, A Song of Hope, The Story of Bethlehem, Lady Fair and others, a mass, many men's choruses, notably The Nun of Nidaros, Britons and some a cappella anthems and songs, besides a Hymnal for the Welsh Presbyterian Church, ritual-music for the Scottish Rite (Masonic) and text-books in harmony and conducting. A.

Prout, Ebenezer (n. Peterborough, 1835–1909, London). Eminent English critic, theorist, composer and writer, chiefly self-taught, in 1861–73 organist at Union Chapel (Islington), in 1861–85 piano-teacher at the Crystal Palace School, from 1876 theory-teacher at the Nat. Training School, from 1879 also at the Royal Academy (following Sullivan) and from 1884 also at the Guildhall School, besides in 1876–90 conducting the Hackney Choral Association with fine success. In 1894 he removed to Dublin to succeed Stewart as professor at the University. In 1871–74 he edited the Monthly Musical Record, from 1874 was critic for the Academy and in 1879–89 for the Athenæum. Mus.D. of Dublin and Edinburgh Univs. in 1895. Wrote 4 symphonies, the overtures Twelfth-Night and Rokeby, 2 orchestral suites, an orchestral Minuet and Trio, 2 organ-concertos, a piano-quintet, 2 string-quartets, 2 piano-quartets, sonatas for clarinet and for organ, a concert-duo for piano and harmonium, the cantatas Hereward, 1878, Alfred, 1882, The Red Cross Knight, 1887, Queen Aimée, 1885 (women's voices) and Damon and Phintias, 1889 (men's do.), Psalms 100 and 126, services and a Magnificat with orchestra, the odes or scenas The Song of Judith (contralto) and Freedom (baritone), many anthems, organ-arrangements, etc. Author of very notable text-books in instrumentation (1876), harmony (1889, rewritten, 1903), counterpoint and fugue (1890, '91, '92), form (1893, '95) and orchestration (2 vols. 1898–99), most of which have had several editions. He also prepared additional accompaniments for several of Handel's oratorios (notably Samson, 1880) and a new redaction of The Messiah (1902). His son Louis Beethoven (b. 1864) has taught at the Crystal Palace and Guildhall Schools in London and written Psalm 93 and text-books in composition. G.

Provenzale, Francesco. 17th C.

Pruckner, Dionys (Munich, 1834–1896, Heidelberg). Able Bavarian pianist, pupil of Nicst and Liszt, appearing at the Gewandhaus at seventeen and from 1856 touring from Vienna and from 1859 settled at Stuttgart, where he taught at the Conservatory and from 1864 was court-pianist, receiving the title of professor in 1868. From 1861 he gave chamber-recitals with Singer and Goltermann. G.

Pruckner, Karoline (Vienna, 1832–1908, do.). Noted Austrian vocal teacher, originally successful (from 1850) as operatic soprano, but in 1855 abruptly losing her voice. After careful study in 1870 she started a vocal school in Vienna and published two fine vocal text-books (1872, '97).

Prudent, Émile [Beunie-] (Angoulême, 1817–1863, Paris). Gifted French pianist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from about 1835 becoming widely known throughout Europe as a player after the style of Thalberg, besides teaching in Paris. Wrote 2 piano-concertos, a piano-trio, concert-études and graceful salon-pieces. G.

Prüfer, Arthur (Leipzig, 1860). Able Saxon musicologist, trained in both law and music at Leipzig (Ph.D. 1890) and Berlin Universities, since 1895 lecturer or adjunct professor at the former. Author of Ueber d. ausserkirchlichen Kunstgesang in d. evangel. Schulen d. 16. Jahrh. 1890, an essay on Schein (1895), a study of the Bayreuth enterprise (1899, rewritten, 1909), Bach u. d. Tonkunst d. 19. Jahrh. 1902, Schein u. d. weltliche Lied d. 17. Jahrh. 1908, Wagner in Bayreuth, 1910, an introduction to Die Feen (1912), Wagner u. Jakob Grimm, 1913, and Die Musik als tönende Faust-Idee, 1920, besides editing correspondence between Winterfeld and Krüger (1898), the standard edition of Schein's works (8 vols. from 1901) and selections therefrom. He has also written for periodicals.

Prume, François Hubert (n. Liège, 1816–1849, do.). Gifted Belgian violinist, pupil of the Liège and Paris Conservatories, teaching at the former in 1833–39 and after 1844, with wide tours in the interval. Wrote 3 violin-concertos, a Konzertstück, La Mélancolie, an Andante and Polonaise, 5 Grandes Études (all with orchestra), etc. G.

Prumier, Antoine (Paris, 1794–1868, do.). Noted French harpist, trained at the Paris Conservatory, from about 1815 playing at the Italiens and in 1835–40 at the Opéra-Comique, besides teaching at the Conservatory. Wrote about 100 fantasias, variations, etc. His son Ange Conrad (1820–1884) was also a skillful harpist, from 1840 at the Opéra-Comique, later at the Opéra and in 1870 Labarre's successor as professor at the Conservatory. G.

Prunières, Henri (Paris, 1886). Eminent French musicologist, pupil of Rolland (Dr. ès Lettres), since 1909 lecturer at the École des Hautes Études Sociales in Paris and from 1919 editor of the Revue Musicale. Author of a life of Lully (1910) and valuable studies of early French opera (1913) and the ballet de cour (1914), with numerous essays in periodicals on Lully, Rossi and others, on chamber-music in the time of Francis I, on the origin of the overture, etc. His researches have thrown much new light on the period of Lully.

Prüwer, Julius (Vienna, 1874). Able Austrian conductor, pupil of Friedheim, Rosenthal, Fuchs, Krenn and H. Richter, from 1893 active at Bielitz, in 1894-96 at the Cologne Opera and since 1896 city-director at Breslau, introducing many new works. He has served as guest-conductor elsewhere (as at Petrograd in 1898) and in 1907 toured with the Breslau forces in Strauss' Salome. Author of a Führer to Elektra.

Puccini, Giacomo (Lucca, 1858). Distinguished Italian composer, somewhat tardy in his musical development, though coming from a family that had been musical for generations, but finally pupil of the Lucca Istituto and the Milan Conservatory, from 1883 rapidly securing notice by several minor works and ten years later becoming famous with Manon Lescaut and La Bohème. He has not exhausted his powers by rapid production, but has yet maintained his place as the ablest of the Italian composers of opera in his period. Has written the operas Le Villi, 1884, Edgar, 1889, Manon Lescaut, 1893, La Bohème, 1896, Tosca, 1900, Madama Butterfly, 1904 (first given in a short form), La Fanciulla del West, 1910 (New York), La Rondine, 1917, and the short works Il Tabarro, Suor Angelica and Gianni Schicchi, all 1918, a solemn mass, the cantata Juno, 1877, a Capriccio Sinfonico, 1883, and some chamber-music. Sketches and critiques by Brüggemann, 1904, Dry, 1906, Csáth, 1912, Torrefranca, 1912 and A. Weissmann, 1922. G. A.

Puccitta, Vincenzo (Civitavecchia, 1778-1861, Milan). Italian composer, pupil of the Conservatorio della Pietà, (Naples), from 1800 producing about 30 facile operas, mostly on Italian stages. He made sojourns in Lisbon and London and in 1813-17 was associated as accompanist with Mme. Catalani at the Italiens in Paris. G.

Puchalsky, Vladimir Viatcheslavitch (Minsk, 1848). Russian pianist, pupil of the Petrograd Conservatory, in 1876-1913 director of the Music School at Kiev. Has written the opera Valleria, a Little Russia Fantasy for orchestra, ritual-music, songs and piano-pieces.

Puchat, Max (Breslau, 1859-1919, in the Karwendel Mts.). Silesian conductor and composer, pupil of Kiel and Liszt (Mendelssohn prize, 1884), from 1886 city-director at Hamm, from 1896 conductor of the Oratorienverein at Paderborn, in 1903-05 in America as leader of the Milwaukee Musikverein, then living in Munich and from 1910 head of his own school at Breslau. Wrote the symphonic poems Euphorion, 1888, Leben und Ideal, 1892, and Tragödie eines Künstlers, 1894, an Ouverture über ein nordisches Thema, a Fuga Solemnis for orchestra, a piano-concerto, a string-quartet and many songs.

Pudor, Heinrich (Dresden, 1865), son of the proprietor of the Conservatory, to the ownership of which he succeeded in 1887-90. Saxon cellist and multifarious writer of eccentric tendencies. He was early a player in the Gewandhaus and opera-orchestras in Leipzig and in 1898-1900 in similar work in Glasgow and Petrograd, but for years he traveled much and has always been in literary pursuits, from 1900 in Berlin and then at Leipzig, where from 1906 he has edited Die Kultur der Familie. Among his books are Wiedergeburt in d. Musik, 1892 (collected essays), Die alten u. d. neuen Wege in d. Musik, 1892, Der Konzertsaal d. Gegenwart u. Zukunft, etc.

Puget, Paul Charles Marie (Nantes, 1848). French composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1875), writing the operas Le Signal, 1886, and Beaucoup de Bruit pour Rien, 1899, music for Musset's Lorenzaccio and Collin's Ulysse et les Sirènes, songs, etc.

Pugnani, Gaetano (Turin, 1731-1798, do.). Eminent Italian violinist, pupil of Somis and Tartini, in 1752-54 playing in the court-band at Turin, then for years more or less on tour, with sojourns in London and Paris, and from 1770 court-director at Turin, besides training many famous pupils (including especially Viotti). Wrote 9 violin-concertos, 14 sonatas, 13 octet-sinfonie (strings and wood-wind), 6 quintets (strings and flutes), 6 string-quartets, many trio-sonatas, violin-duets, etc., besides 7 operas (from 1772), a ballet and 2 cantatas. Memoirs by Fayolle, 1810, and Carutti, 1895 (in his Miscellanea). G.

Pugni, Cesare (Milan, 1805-1870, Petrograd). Prolific Italian composer, pupil of the Milan Conservatory, from about 1825 producing a chain of 10 operas, about 300 ballets and some 40 masses, at first in Italy, but from 1840 at Petrograd, where from 1851 he was ballet-composer at the Opera.

Pugno, Stéphane Raoul (Paris, 1852-1914, Moscow), son of an Italian father. Distinguished Italian-French pianist, precociously developed and appearing often as a child, then pupil of the École Niedermeyer and the Conservatory (three first prizes, but shut out from competing for the Prix de Rome because not a full Frenchman), from 1871 organist and from 1878 choirmaster at St.-Eugène, and in 1892-1901 professor at the Conservatory. From 1877 he wrote several light operas and ballets with success, but did not disclose his transcendent powers as pianist till 1893, when he played at a Conservatory concert and was thenceforth marked as one of the most comprehensive and highly gifted artists in piano-history. Through repeated tours he became generally known in Europe and America (from 1897). He also made a deep impression in ensemble, especially in sonata-recitals with Ysaÿe. Wrote an orchestral suite, a piano-sonata and various pieces, the incomplete opera La Ville Morte (finished by Nadia Boulanger), the oratorio La Résurrection de Lazare, 1879, the comic operas À qui la Trompe, 1877, Ninetta, 1882, Le Sosie, 1887, La Valet de Cœur, 1888, Le Retour d'Ulysse, 1889, La Vocation de Marius, 1890, and La Petite Poucette, 1891, the ballets La Fée Cocotte, 1881, Papillons, 1881 (with Lippacher), Viviane, 1886, La Danseuse de Corde, 1892, and Le Chevalier aux Fleurs, 1897 (with Messager), and the mimodrame Pour le Drapeau, 1895. G.

Pujol, Juan Bautista (1836-1898, Barcelona). Able Spanish pianist, long a teacher at the Barcelona Conservatory, writing various piano-pieces and a method (1896).

Puliti, Leto (Florence, 1818-1875, do.). Italian scientist and student of music-history, contributing able essays to the Atti of the Florence Istituto Musicale, especially a life of Ferdinando de' Medici (1884), embodying important data about Cristofori. He also composed for orchestra, piano and voice.

Puppo, Giuseppe (Lucca, 1749-1827, Florence). Accomplished, but restless and unstable Italian violinist, trained in Naples, from about 1780 in London, in 1784-1811 in Paris, playing at several theaters, and then wandering from place to place in Italy, at first as conductor at S. Carlo in Naples. Wrote 3 concertos, duets, études and some piano-fantasias. G.

Purcell, Daniel (?1660-1717). 17th C. G.

Purcell, Henry (1658-1695). 17th C. G.

Puschmann, Adam (1532-1600). 16th C.

Puteanus, Ericius (1574-1646). 17th C.

Pyne, James Kendrick (Bath, 1852), son of J. K. Pyne (1810-1893), for more than a half-century organist at the Abbey Church in Bath. Eminent English organist, pupil of his father and S. S. Wesley, holding regular church-positions from his eleventh year, from about 1868 Wesley's assistant at Gloucester and conductor of a choral society, in 1873-74 organist at Chichester Cathedral, in 1875 at St. Mark's in Philadelphia, in 1875-1908 at Manchester Cathedral and also from 1877 city-organist, from 1893 professor at the Royal College in Manchester and from 1901 connected with Manchester (Victoria) University as lecturer, organist and music-dean successively, retiring from most activities in 1913. In 1877 he was organist for the Manchester Exposition, in 1884 displayed his collection of early instruments at the London Exhibition and in 1888 was one of the judges at the Brussels Exposition. Mus.D. by the Archbp. of Canterbury in 1900 and recipient of numerous honors otherwise. Has written much choir- and organ-music (notably a Festal Communion Service) and a set of Lancashire songs.

Pyne, Louisa Fanny (1832-1904, London). Brilliant English operatic and concert soprano, pupil of G. Smart, when but ten appearing in concert with her sister and in 1849 making her stage-début at Boulogne and London, at once becoming a favorite. In 1854-57 she toured with her sister and others in America. In 1858-62 she was head of an English-opera troupe that had good success and then sang at Her Majesty's, retiring on her marriage in 1868 to the baritone Frank Bodda, but continuing to teach. G.

Quadflieg, Gerhard Jakob (n. Aix, 1854–1915, Elberfeld). Rhenish church-musician, pupil of the Ratisbon Music School, from 1881 teacher or director (1898) of the Elberfeld Gymnasium and for some years also church-organist. Wrote 8 masses, 2 Passions, motets, organ-pieces and accompaniments for the Graduale, etc.

Quadrio, Francesco Saverio (n. Sondrio, 1695–1756, Milan). Italian priest, author of a history of poetry (1739–46) containing discussions of the opera, oratorio and cantata.

Quagliati, Paolo. 17th C. G.

Quantz, Johann Joachim (Hanover, 1697–1773, Potsdam). Famous North German flutist, taught in youth on several instruments, also pupil of Zelenka, Fux, Buffardin and Gasparini, from 1714 gaining various experience at Radeburg, Pirna, Dresden, Warsaw (in service of the King of Poland), Prague, Rome and other Italian cities, Paris and London, from 1728 becoming the teacher of the Crown Prince Frederick, who in 1741, after becoming King, appointed him chamber-musician and court-composer at Potsdam. Wrote about 500 pieces for flute, including concertos, sonatas, quartets, trios, etc., a method, some settings in chorale-form of odes by Gellert, etc. He added a second key to his instrument and invented the tuning-slide. G.

Quaranta, Costantino (Brescia, 1813–1887, do.). Italian church-musician, pupil of the Milan Conservatory, from about 1840 maestro at Brescia Cathedral. Wrote much church-music, an Ave Maria with orchestra and the opera Ettore Fieramosca, 1839.

Quarenghi, Guglielmo (Casalmaggiore, 1826–1882, Milan). Italian 'cellist, trained at the Milan Conservatory, from 1850 playing in the La Scala orchestra, from 1851 teaching at the Conservatory and from 1879 maestro at the Cathedral. Wrote 'cello-pieces, transcriptions and a fine method (1876), besides an opera (1863) and some church-music. His Metodo contains an account of the instruments preceding the 'cello and data about the viol and its use. G.

Quarles, James Thomas (St. Louis, 1877). Eminent American organist, pupil of Galloway, Kroeger and Widor, from 1893 engaged at various St. Louis churches, especially from 1900 at the Lindell Avenue (M.E.) Church, and also from 1907 for large Masonic bodies, in 1913–23 at Cornell University (Ithaca, N. Y.) and then at the University of Missouri (at Columbia). While in St. Louis in 1907–13 he was organist for the Symphony Orchestra, in 1908–10 conductor of the Choral Art Society and from 1906 teacher or dean at Lindenwood College, besides being recitalist at the Exposition of 1903, as also at the San Francisco Exposition of 1915. He has given extended series of recitals annually and toured at intervals. A.

Quatremère de Quincy, Antoine Chrysostome (Paris, 1755–1849, do.). Able French archæologist, long secretary of the Académie, writing numerous memorial addresses on its members (including Paisiello, Monsigny, Méhul, Gossec, Catel and Boieldieu), besides a pamphlet on the Opéras Bouffons (1789).

Queisser, Friedrich Benjamin (n. Leipzig, 1817–1893, Dresden), brother of the following. Saxon trumpeter, from 1835 in military service and in 1842–85 member of the court-band at Dresden, besides for many years teaching at the Conservatory. He was one of the last to use the bass-trumpet and as such was valued by Wagner.

Queisser, Karl Traugott (n. Leipzig, 1800–1846, do.), brother of the above. Noted Saxon trombonist and violist, from 1817 in the Leipzig town-band and other orchestras, including from 1830 that of the Gewandhaus, where his solo-playing was famous. Various concertos, etc., were written expressly for him. G.

Quercu, Simon de. 16th C.

Quinault, Jean Baptiste Maurice (?–1744, Gien). French composer of the ballet Les Amours des Déesses, 1729, and about 20 other ballets and intermèdes for the Paris Opéra.

Quinault, Philippe (1635–1688). 17th C.

Quittard, Henri Charles Étienne (Clermont Ferrand, 1864–1919, Paris). French specialist on the music of the 17th century, pupil of Franck, writing many essays in learned journals, including monographs on Dumont, the Coupéris, etc.

Raabe, Peter (Frankfort-an-der-Oder, 1872). Eminent Prussian conductor, trained at the Berlin Hochschule, from 1894 winning experience at Königsberg, Zwickau and Elberfeld, from 1899 in charge of the Dutch Opera at Amsterdam, in 1903-04 conductor of the Kaim Orchestra at Munich and in 1906-07 of the Kaim concerts at Mannheim, from 1907 court-director at Weimar (also after 1910 curator of the Liszt Museum there) and since 1920 city-director at Aix-la-Chapelle. At times he has been guest-conductor in England and the Low Countries. He is chairman of the editorial board for the standard edition of Liszt's works and in 1916 received a Ph.D. at Jena University for a thesis on Die Entstehung d. Orchesterwerke Liszts. Author also of the Festschrift for the Jubilee of the Weimar Hofkapelle in 1909 and Grossherzog Karl Alexander u. Liszt, 1918.

Raafi, Anton (n. Bonn, 1714-1797, Munich). Able Rhenish operatic tenor, pupil of Ferrandini and Bernacchi, from 1738 favorably known in Italy, from 1742 in Germany and at Vienna, from 1753 at Lisbon and Madrid, in 1759 accompanying Farinelli to Naples and from 1770 in the service of the Elector Palatine, first at Mannheim and from 1779 at Munich. In 1778 he visited Paris with Mozart and the latter wrote Idomeneo for him (1781). G.

Rabaud, Henri Benjamin (Paris, 1873). Eminent French conductor and composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (Prix de Rome, 1894), making his reputation at the Opéra-Comique, but also from 1908 at the Opéra, where in 1914-18 he was chief. In 1918-19 he followed Muck as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and then returned to succeed Fauré as director of the Paris Conservatory. Has written the operas La Fille de Roland, 1904, Le Premier Glaive, 1908, and Mâruf, Savetier de Caire, 1914, music for French versions of The Merchant of Venice and Antony and Cleopatra (1916-17), the oratorio Job, 1900, with a baritone scena on the same subject (1905), the cantata Daphné, 1894, Psalm 4, 1901, a setting of Hugo's Hymne à la France Éternelle (1916), 2 symphonies (1895, '99), the symphonic poem La Procession Nocturne, 1899, a Divertissement sur des Chansons Russes, 1901, an Églogue (Poème Virgilien), a string-quartet, a 'cello-concertino (with piano), a concert-allegro and other pieces for 'cello, piano-pieces, songs and a 'cello-method. A.

Rabich, Ernst (Herda, 1856). Thuringian choral conductor and editor, pupil of Thureau, Von Milde and Sophie Breymann, since 1880 identified with Gotha as court-organist, instructor at the Teachers' Seminary, leader of the great Liedertafel (900 voices), of the Gymnasium chorus and the Kirchengesangverein, in 1889 founder of a Church Choir Union and in 1897-1915 editor of Haus- und Kirchenmusik, as well as of the significant series of varied handbooks entitled Musikatisches Magazin (62 vols. to 1914). Since 1897 he has held the title of professor. Has written the choral works Die Martinswand, Die Frühlingsfeier, Dornröschen, Columbus, Das hohe Lied der Arbeit, Des Volkes Gruss and Kaiser-Hymne (last four for men's voices), a cappella men's choruses, collections of motets (Psalter u. Harfe), of secular choruses and of master-songs (solo), piano-pieces, etc.

Rabl, Walther (Vienna, 1873). Austrian conductor and composer, trained by J. F. Hummel and Navrátil and at Vienna University (Ph.D. 1897), from 1897 assistant at the Prague and Dresden Operas, in 1903-06 opera-director at Düsseldorf, then at Essen and Dortmund and since 1915 city-director at Magdeburg. Has written the opera Liane, 1903, a symphony, a quartet for piano, clarinet, violin and 'cello (Vienna prize, 1897), a violin-sonata, Sturmlieder for soprano and orchestra, songs with 'cello, etc. Sketch by Eccarius-Sieber, 1907 (in Monographien moderner Musiker).

Rachmaninov, Sergei Vassilievitch (Onega, 1873). Distinguished Russian pianist, conductor and composer, pupil of the Petrograd and Moscow Conservatories, from 1892 becoming known as a player, in 1893-96 teaching at the Maryinski Institute in Moscow, in 1897-98 private opera-conductor for Mamontov, in 1904-06 conductor at the Moscow Opera, then for two years living at Dresden, but with several tours as pianist, and in 1908-11 was active in Russia as vice-president of the Russian Musical Society. In 1912-13 he led symphony-concerts in Moscow. His first visit to America was in 1909-10 and in 1918, having been driven out of Russia by the social confusion, he settled in New York. His renown rests both upon his gifts in interpretation and impression at the keyboard and upon the originality and nobility of his compositions. Has written the short operas Aleko, 1893, The Miser Knight, 1900, and Francesca da Rimini, 1906, 3 symphonies (1895, 1906, '15—the last The Bells, with chorus), the symphonic poem Die Toteninsel, 1907-08, 4 piano-concertos (the 3d and 4th, 1909, '17), the orchestral Die Felsen and Capriccio Bohémien, a Trio Élégiacque for piano, violin and 'cello, a 'cello-sonata, pieces for violin and for 'cello, a fantasia, a suite and some pieces for piano 4 hands, a piano-sonata, many notable Morceaux, Preludes and Études-Tableaux, besides variations on a theme by Chopin, the choral work Spring, several choruses, 12 anthems, a setting of the Liturgy of St. Chrysostom and many beautiful songs. Sketches by Lipiaiev, 1913, and Montagu-Nathan, 1917 (in Contemporary Russian Composers). G, A.

Radecke, Albert Martin Robert (n. Waldenburg, 1830-1911, Wernigerode), brother of Rudolf below. Eminent Silesian violinist, conductor and teacher, trained at the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1850-53 remaining as player in the Gewandhaus Orchestra, David's assistant in conducting the Singakademie (1852) and conductor at the Opera (1853), then in Berlin, from about 1855 active as pianist, organist and ensemble-player and in 1858-63 leading large choral and orchestral concerts, in 1863-87 director of the Opera, from 1871 installed as court-director and from 1874 a much-honored member of the Akademie. In 1883-88 he succeeded Stern as head of the Stern Conservatory and in 1892-1907 was Haupt's successor as director of the Institut für Kirchenmusik. In the latter his admirers in 1905 established a Radecke Scholarship in honor of his 75th birthday. Wrote a symphony, the overtures König Johann and Am Strande, other orchestral pieces (Festmarsch, scherzos, a capriccio and a Nachtstück), 2 pianotrios, the short 'liederspiel' Die Mönkguter, fine part-songs and very effective songs.

Radecke, Ernst (Berlin, 1866-1920, Winterthur), son of the above. Prussian director, educated at Jena, Munich and Berlin Universities (Ph.D. 1891), pupil of his father and the Stern Conservatory, in 1891-93 chorusmaster at the Leipzig Opera, from 1893 town-director at Winterthur (Switzerland) and head of the Music School, and from 1908 also lecturer at Zurich University. In 1906 he received the title of royal professor. Author of an essay on Das deutsche weltliche Lied in d. Lautenmusik d. 16. Jahrh. 1891, a life of Kahn (1904) and an analysis of Beethoven's Eroica Symphony for the Musikführer, besides editing Eschmann's Aphorismen (1899).

Radecke, Rudolf (n. Waldenburg, 1829-1893, Berlin), brother of Robert above. Silesian choral conductor, trained at the Breslau Institut and the Leipzig Conservatory, from 1859 in Berlin, in 1864-71 teaching at the Stern Conservatory, from 1864 leading the Cäcilien-Verein and from 1868 his own society, besides from 1869 conducting a music-school. Wrote part-songs and songs.

Radeglia, Vittorio (Constantinople, 1863). Italian-Turkish composer of the operas Colomba, 1887, Suprema Vis, 1902, and Amore Occulto, 1904.

Radicati, Felice Alessandro (Turin, 1778-1823, Vienna). Able Italian violinist, pupil of Pugnani, from about 1800 widely recognized in Italy, France and England as a superior artist. His wife, née Teresa Bertinotti, was a singer at the Vienna Opera in 1805-07. Returning at length to Italy, from 1815 he was conductor of the Bologna orchestra, teacher at the Liceo and later maestro at S. Petronio. He gave a fruitful impulse to the cultivation of chamber-music in Italy. Wrote a violin-concerto, 2 string-quintets, 5 quartets, 3 trios, many duets and solo-pieces, besides some operas and farces. G.

Radicicotti, Giuseppe (Jesi, 1858). Since 1895 professor of history at the Liceo at Tivoli, giving special attention to the musical history of the Marches (the region east of Tuscany and Umbria). Author of monographs on music in Sinigaglia (1893), Urbino (1899), Recanati (1904) and Tivoli (1907), on Il Genio Musicale dei Marchigiani, 1905, on the Roman drama in the second quarter of the 19th century (1904), etc., with many articles in periodicals, besides a life of Pergolesi (1910) and an unpublished dictionary of the musicians of Le Marche.

Radoux, Charles (Liège, 1877), son of the following. Gifted Belgian composer, pupil of his father at the Liège Conservatory, where he taught from 1900, besides taking the Prix de Rome in 1907. Has written the opera Oudelette, 1912, the shorter dramas Le Poème de Roseclair, Les Sangliers des Ardennes, 1905, the choral works Adieu, Absence, Retour, La Bretagne, Édipe à Colone, 1901, Chanson d'Halewyn, Genève de Brabant, 1907, À Grétry, 1908, Venise, Les Fées, Les Aventures d'un Papillon et d'une Bête à Bon Dieu, arrangements of old Noël's, Cramignons, etc., the orchestral pieces Danse Tzigane, Burlesque, Vision and Triptyque Champêtre, violin-variations, a Scène Grecque for 'cello and a Lamentation for English horn (all these with orchestra).

Radoux, Jean Théodore (Liège, 1835-1911, do.). Belgian bassoonist and composer, pupil of Halévy and the Liège Conservatory, where he taught from 1856, won the Prix de Rome in 1859 and from 1872 was director. Wrote the comic operas Le Béarnais, 1866, and La Coupe Enchantée, 1872, the oratorio Cain, 1877, the cantatas Le Juif Errant, 1859, La Fille de Jephthé and Le Printemps, the symphonic pictures Ahasvérus and Le Festin de Balthazar, the overture Épopée Nationale, 1863, a Te Deum (1863) and other church-music, men's choruses and songs. Author of a life of Vieuxtemps (1891).

Radziwill, Prince Anton Heinrich (Vilna, 1775-1833, Berlin). Famous Lithuanian noble, musical amateur and art-patron, from 1815 governor of Posen. In 1814 Beethoven dedicated to him his overture, op. 115, and from 1825 he was acquainted with Chopin and later his good friend. Wrote notable incidental music for Faust (part given in 1810, published, 1835), French romances (1802), duets, men's part-songs and a Complainte de Maria Stuart for 'cello. He was a fine singer and 'cellist. G.

Raff, Joseph Joachim (Lachen, 1822-1882, Frankfurt). Distinguished Swiss composer, in early life a school-teacher, meanwhile educating himself in music. In 1843 he attracted Mendelssohn's notice and soon after that of Liszt, the latter of whom he accompanied on a concert-tour, while in 1848 Von Bülow played his Konzertstück in Stuttgart. In 1850 he removed to Weimar and thenceforth was intimately associated with Liszt and his circle, serving as the master's assistant in various ways, even to the revision and scoring of many of his works, and zealously advocated the ideas of the Liszt-Wagner coterie in articles for the Neue Zeitschrift. In 1856 he went to Wiesbaden in pursuit of the actress Doris Genast (1826-1912), whom he married in 1859, and there he became noted as a piano-teacher. From 1877 he was director of the Hoch Conservatory at Frankfurt. Throughout his life he was an incessant composer in a variety of forms. He made himself thoroughly familiar with the technique of construction and so could produce with rapidity and finish. His mind also teemed with ideas, often of great beauty, warmth and even nobility. But until he was past forty he had had a hard struggle for a livelihood, so that dozens of clever works were evolved chiefly to make money and have little enduring value. Even his strongest efforts are apt to have passages of rather cheap quality, due to the fact that his self-criticism lagged behind his creative prodigality. His inborn sturdiness of conception, his eager imagination and his fluent command of melody and harmony, however, often carried him to real heights, especially in some of his works for orchestra. His works include (opus-nos. in brackets)

For Orchestra

- Symphonies—1, An das Vaterland [96], 2, in C [140], 3, Im Walde, in F [153], 4, in G min. [167], 5, Lenore, in E [177], 6, Gelebt, gestrebt, gelitten, gestritten, gestorben, umworben, in D min [189], 7, In der Alpen, in B-flat [201], 8, Frühlingsklänge, in A [205], 9, Im Sommer, in E min. [208], 10, Zur Herbstzeit, in F min. [213], 11, Der Winter, in A min. [214] (completed by Erdmannsdörfer).
Overtures—Jubel [103], Fest, in A [117], Konzert, in F [123], Fest, for wind (on student-songs) [124], on Ein' feste Burg [127], for Romeo und Juliet, Macbeth, Othello and The Tempest (all revised by MacDowell).
Suites—1, in C [101] 2, In ungarischer Weise, in F [194] 3, Italienische, in E min., 4, Aus Thüringen, in B-flat [204].
Sinfonietta for 8 wood-winds and 2 horns [188]; Festmarsch [139]; Abends, rhapsody in B-flat; Elegie; Fugue (unfinished).
With piano—Concerto in C min. [185]; Suite in E-flat [200]; Ode au Printemps [76].
With violin—Concertos in B min. [161] and A min. [206]; La Fée d'Amour [67].
With 'cello—Concertos in D min. [193] and G.

Chamber-Music

- String-octet in C [176]; string-sextet [178]; piano-quintet in A min. [107]; string-quartets in D min. [77], A [90], E min. [136], A min. [137], G [138], C min. (Suite älterer Form), D (Die schöne Müllerin) and C (Suite in Kanonform) [192]; piano-quartets in G and C min. [202]; piano-trios [102, 112, 155, 158].
Violin-sonatas in E min. [73], A [78], D [128], G min. (Chromatische in einem Satze) [129] and C min. [145]; violin-suite [210]; fantasias from Der Fliegende Holländer, Tannhäuser und Lohengrin [63]; 17 other pieces [58, 85, 203].
*Cello-sonata [183]; 3 other pieces [59, 86]. Also 2 horn- or 'cello-romances [182].

For Piano

- Sonata and Fugue in E-flat min [14]; Fantaisie-Sonata in D min. [168]; 3 Sonattillas [99].
Suites [69], in C [71], E min. [72], D [91], G min. [162], and G [163].
Capriccios—Hommage au Nérromanticisme [10]; À la Bohémienne [40]; in F min. [64], D min. [92], B-flat min. [146] and D-flat [197].
Fantasies—Dramatique [19]; Polonaise [106]; [119, 142 (in F-sharp)].

Scherzos—An Menen Scarlattis [26]; in E-flat [148]. Numerous transcriptions, largely from operas, and fantasias on themes by various composers [4, 7, 11, 13, 18, 28, 34-37, 39, 42-46, 61-62, 65, 68, 70, 81, 121].

- 6 Pièces Caractéristiques [2, 23]; Sérénades [1, 30]; Nocturne [109]; Élégies [133, 149]; Rhapsodies Élégi-aques [22]; Rhap. Ungarische [113]; Rhap. Spanische [120]; Cavatina in A-flat and La Fileuse [157]; various Études [8, 25, 84, 88, 130, 190]; Allegro Agitato [151].
Valse [24, 94, 116, 156, 159, 166, 169, 181]; Mazurkas [30, 38, 83]; Tarantelles [31, 144]; Saltarello [108]; Barcarolle [143].

Many other salon-pieces.

For two pianos—Chaconne in A min. [150]; Fantaisie in G min. [207] (also for piano and strings).

Vocal Works

Operas—König Alfred, 1851, Dame Kobold, 1870 [154] (both Weimar). Also, not given, Die Eifersüchtigen (original text), Die Parole, Benedetto Marcello and Samson.

Music to Genast's Bernhard von Weimar (1858). The scenes Die Jägerbraut and Die Hirtin [199].

Oratorio—Wellende, Gericht, Neue Welt, text from the Revelation, 1882 (Leeds) [212].

Choral Works—Wacht auf! [180]; Deutschlands Auferstehung, 1863 [100]; Psalm 130 [141]; Im Kahn und Der Tanz [171]; Morgentied und Einer Entschlafenen [186]; Die Tageszeiten [209]; Die Sterne; Dornröschen; various other choruses [97, 122, 184, 195, 198]; some church-music.

Songs—Traumkönig und sein Lieb [66]; the cycles Liebesfrühling [29], Sangesfrühling [30] [98], Maria Stuart [11] [172], Blumensprache (6) [191] and Blondel de Nesle [211]; about 30 other solo-songs. Also duets, etc.

Arrangements

Bach's Chaconne in D min. (for orchestra). Bach's 6 'cello-sonatas, 3 orchestral suites and movements from his violin-sonatas (for piano). Also marches from Handel's Saul and Jephtha.

Author of Die Stellung d. Deutschen in d. Gesch. d. Musik, 1885 (in Weimar. Jahrbücher), besides contributions to the Neue Zeitschrift. Catalogue of works by Schäfer, 1888, and sketch by Gandolfi, 1904. G.

Rahlwes, Alfred (Wesel, 1878). Rhenish choral conductor, trained at the Cologne Conservatory, from 1899 theater-conductor at Stuttgart, Liegnitz and Königsberg, from 1902 leader of the Liedertafel and Philharmonische Chor at Elbing and since 1910 at Halle as conductor of the Franz-Singakademie and from 1913 Rebke's successor as music-director at the University. Has written the comic opera Jungfer Potiphar, 1907, the men's chorus Meereszauber and other choruses, songs, a piano-quintet and an edition of Handel's Semele.

Raida, Karl Alexander (Paris, 1852). German-French conductor and composer of light opera, pupil of the Stuttgart and Dresden Conservatories, in 1878-92 at the Viktoria, Kroll, Walhalla and other theaters in Berlin, founding two societies of dramatic art, in 1895-97 conductor at the new Deutsches Theater in Munich and since 1900 editor for the publisher Proft, but now living in Berlin. Has written many effective operettas, ballets, farces, etc., besides books of travel, etc.

Raif, Oscar (Zwolle, 1847-1899, Berlin). Dutch pianist, pupil of his father and Tausig, from 1875 teacher at the Berlin Hochschule, holding the title of royal professor. Wrote a piano-concerto, a violin-sonata and some piano-pieces. G.

Raimann, Rudolf (Veszprim, 1861–1913, Vienna). Hungarian composer of the opera Enoch Arden, 1905, and about 15 operettas, etc., for Hamburg, Vienna, Munich and Pest, besides piano-pieces and songs.

Raimondi, Ignazio (Naples, ?1733–1813, London). Italian violinist, in 1762–80 conducting concerts at Amsterdam and after 1791 in London. Wrote the comic opera La Muette, 1791, the descriptive symphonies Les Aventures de Télémaque, 1777, an La Battaglia, other orchestral pieces, many quartets, trios, violin-sonatas, etc. G.

Raimondi, Pietro (Rome, 1786–1853, do.). Industrious and ingenious Italian composer, trained at the Conservatorio della Pietà in Naples, from 1807 active at Genoa, but with trips elsewhere, in 1824–32 opera-director at Naples and from 1825 teacher at the Conservatory, from 1832 teacher at the Palermo Conservatory and in 1852–53 for a few months maestro at St. Peter's in Rome. Wrote about 60 operas and other stage-works (from 1807), several oratorios, many masses and other church-music, including 4 Requiems and settings of all the Psalms in Palestrina-style. He had extraordinary contrapuntal facility, so that several of his works were susceptible of varied renderings (as, notably, 3 oratorios that could be given either separately or simultaneously), and many were otherwise almost incredibly intricate. Memoir by Cicconetti, 1867. G.

Rains, Leon (New York, 1870). American operatic bass, pupil of Saenger and Bouhy, in 1897–99 touring in the United States with the Damrosch Company and then with Melba, since 1899 engaged at the Dresden Opera, but with many appearances elsewhere (Metropolitan, New York, in 1908). A.

Raisa, Rosa [Burchstein] (Bielostok, 1893). Brilliant Polish operatic soprano, trained at the Naples Conservatory, making her début in 1913 at Parma and then at Rome and London, since 1914 with the Chicago Opera Company, but also appearing often in South America. A.

Raison, André. 17th C.

Ramann, Lina (Kitzingen, 1833–1912, Munich). Able Bavarian teacher and writer, pupil of Frau Brendel, from 1853 teaching at Gera and also in America, from 1858 head of a teachers' seminary at Glückstadt (Holstein) and in 1865–90 director (with Ida Volkmann) of a noted music-school in Nuremberg, then removing to Munich. Wrote two works on musical education (1868, '69) a volume of essays, Aus d. Gegenwart, 1868 (originally contributed to the Hamburg Jahreszeiten), Bach u. Händel, 1869, a life of Liszt (3 vols. 1880–94), with other studies of Liszt (1880, '86) a translation of his literary works (6 vols. 1880–83) and a Liszt-Pädagogium, 5 vols. (his piano-works, emended and annotated). Wrote also some piano-pieces and a Grundriss d. Technik. Memoir by Ille-Beeg, 1914. G.

Rameau, Jean Philippe (Dijon, 1683–1764, Paris), son of an organist. Distinguished French organist, theorist and composer, precocious as a player, but mostly self-taught, with some useful experience in 1701 as violinist in an itinerant theatrical troupe. From 1702 he was organist successively at Avignon, Clermont (now C.-Ferrand), Paris (1705–08), Avignon Cathedral, Lyons and Clermont again, attracting attention by the excellence of his playing. In 1723 he settled in Paris and, while holding his place as a leading organist (at Ste.-Croix-de-la-Bretonnerie), at once was noted as an innovator in harmonic method and after 1733 as an effective composer of opera. Under the powerful patronage of La Pouplinière the success of his Castor et Pollux in 1737 led to his popular recognition as the natural successor of Lully and ultimately to his appointment by Louis XV as Compositeur de Cabinet. His prominence, however, for a time provoked sharp controversy. Thenceforward he devoted himself assiduously to writing for the stage, though without neglecting the development of his ideas as theorist. His operas often suffer from the poverty of their librettos and seem pale by comparison with many in the next period, but have real substance and interest in relation to the growth of French opera. The striking points in his theory of harmony are chord-building by thirds, the recognition of the identity of chords through all inversions and a general doctrine of chord-progression by means of a 'fundamental bass,' which may or may not correspond with the actual bass. Details in his system were undoubtedly imperfect, but he gave an impulse to the rational systemization of harmony that has done lasting good. His main publications in this field were the Traité d'Harmonie, 1722, Nouveau Système de Musique Théorique, 1726, Plan Abrégé d'une Méthode Nouvelle d'Accompagnement, 1730, Génération Harmonique, 1737, Démonstration du Principe de l'Harmonie, 1750, and Observations sur notre Instinct pour la Musique, 1754, besides others extending these, some articles in periodicals and various polemical pamphlets. His operas include the following:

Samson (about 1730, not given), Hippolyte et Aricie, 1733, Les Indes Galantes, 1735 (ballet), Castor et Pollux, 1737, Les Fêtes d'Hébé, 1739 (ballet), Dardanus, 1739, Le Temple de la Gloire, 1745, Les Fêtes de Polymnie, 1745 (ballet), La Princesse de Navarre, 1747 (ballet), Les Fêtes de l'Hymen et de l'Amour, 1747 (ballet), Zais, 1748 (ballet), Pugmilion, 1748 (ballet), Naïs, 1749, Platée, 1749 (ballet), Zoroastre, 1749 (music of Samson to new text), Acante et Céphise, 1751 (pastoral), La Guirlande, 1751 (ballet), Daphné et Eglé, 1753, Lysis et Délia, 1754, La Naissance d'Osiris, 1754, Anacréon, 1757 (ballet), Zéphire, 1757, Nélée et Mirthis, 1757, Le Retour d'Astrée, 1757, Les Surprises d'Amour, 1759, Les Sybarites, 1760, Les Paladins, 1760, and some divertissements.

He also published several sets of harpsichord-pieces (1706–41), often accompanied by important notes as to method of performance. A complete edition of these was edited by Riemann. In 1895 a standard edition of all his works was undertaken by Durand under the supervision of Saint-Saëns and Malherbe (18 vols. to 1914). This includes a volume of cantatas and two of motets. Memoirs by Chabanon, 1764, Maret, 1766, Poisot, 1864, Nisard, 1867, Pougin, 1876, Garraud, 1876, Grigne, 1876, Brenet, 1898, 1902-03, Laurencie, 1907-08, Laloy, 1908, etc. G.

Ramis de Pareja, Bartolomeo (?1440-1495?). 15th C.

Randegger, Alberto (Trieste, 1833-1911, London). Noted Italian-Austrian singing-master and conductor, pupil of Lafont and L. Ricci, from about 1850 active as theater-conductor in Dalmatia and Italy and from 1855 prominent in London as teacher (from 1868 in the Royal Academy and later also at the Royal College). Besides casual engagements in 1879-85 he was conductor for the Carl Rosa Company, in 1887-98 for Harris at Drury Lane and Covent Garden (Italian opera), in 1895-97 for the Queen's Hall Choral Society and in 1881-1905 Benedict's successor at the Norwich Festivals, in which he was specially successful. Wrote the operas Il Lazzarone, 1852, Bianca Capello, 1854, and The Rival Beauties, 1864, the cantata Fridolin, 1873, the scenas Medea, 1869, and Saffo, 1875, Psalm 150, 1872, the tenor ode The Prayer of Nature, 1887, many songs and a Primer of Singing. See Musical Times, 1899. G.

Randegger, Alberto Iginio (Trieste, 1880-1918, Milan), nephew of the above. Italian-Austrian violinist and composer, appearing in London when only sixteen, trained at the Royal Academy there and at the Milan Conservatory, from 1902 active in London and later at Trieste. Wrote the operas L'Ombra di Werther, 1899, Maria di Brevai (1907) and L'Amante Ideale, 1917, several orchestral works, a violin-concerto (1902), a violin-sonata, Bohemian Dances and other violin- and piano-pieces, and about 100 songs (with or without orchestra).

Randel, Andreas (n. Karlskrona, 1806-1864, Stockholm). Swedish violinist, pupil of Cherubini and Baillot, for many years playing in the court-orchestra at Stockholm (finally concert-master) and also teaching in the Conservatory. Wrote orchestral pieces, violin-concertos and fantasias, quartets and much vocal music, with some music for plays. He contributed to the effective use of national theme-material.

Randhartinger, Benedict (n. Melk, 1802-1893, Vienna). Able Austrian tenor, conductor and composer, as a boy Schubert's fellow-pupil under Salieri in the Vienna court-choir, to which, after experience as law-student and as secretary to Count Szecheny, he returned in 1832. From 1844 he was deputy-director under Assmayer and in 1862-66 his successor as court-director. He was a faithful friend of Schubert till his death. Wrote about 600 works, including 2 symphonies, a quintet, quartets, a trio, many masses and motets, a multitude of songs, an opera, etc. G.

Randolph, Harold (Richmond, Va. 1861). Gifted American pianist, trained at the Peabody Conservatory (Baltimore), from 1885 teaching there and in 1898 succeeding Hamerik as director. From 1885 he was also organist at the Cathedral (R. C.) and in 1890-96 at Emmanuel Church. With Hutcheson he has given many two-piano recitals and has appeared as soloist with all leading orchestras. He has also directed a Bach Choir in renderings of extended choral works. A.

Rangström, Ture (Stockholm, 1884). Swedish composer of modern tendency, pupil of Hey, Lindegren and Pfitzner, since 1907 a leading vocal teacher in Stockholm and critic for the Dagblad. Has written the opera Die Kronbraut, 1919, a symphony in memory of Strindberg (1915), the orchestral Dithyrambe, 1910, Ein Mittsommerstück, 1911, Ein Herbstgesang, 1912, and Es siegt das Meer, 1914, a Rhapsodie for string-quartet, a violin-suite, piano-preludes, many songs and ballads.

Rappold, Marie, née Winterroth (Brooklyn, 1880?). Excellent American operatic soprano, pupil of Saenger, from about 1900 appearing in concert and since 1905 a favorite at the Metropolitan, New York, as well as singing in 1909-10 at Bucharest and Paris, in 1911 at Milan and in 1916-17 with the Ellis troupe. She separated from her husband, Dr. Julius Rappold, in 1906 because he objected to her stage-career and in 1913 married the tenor Rudolf Berger. A.

Rappoldi, Eduard (Vienna, 1831-1903, Dresden). Eminent Austrian violinist, chiefly trained at the Vienna Conservatory, from 1854 in the court-orchestra there, from 1861 concert-master of the Rotterdam orchestra, from 1866 conductor successively at Lübeck, Stettin and Prague, in 1871-77 teacher at the Berlin Hochschule, in 1878-98 concertmaster at the Dresden Opera and also from 1893 teacher at the Conservatory. While in Berlin he played viola in the Joachim Quartet and in Dresden was active in promoting chamber-music. Wrote some symphonies, quartets, 2 violin-sonatas, a piano-sonata and pieces, etc. His wife, née Laura Kahrer (b. 1853), was a highly accomplished pianist, from 1870 counted one of the best in Germany. Their son Adrian (b. 1876) is a fine violinist and is since 1917 one of the directors of the Dresden Conservatory. G.

Raselius, Andreas (?1563-1602). 16th C. G.

Rasmadze, Alexander Salomonovitch (Penza, 1845-1896, Moscow). Russian writer, educated at Moscow University and the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1869-75 lecturer on music-history at the Moscow Conservatory and then editor of the Musikal. Boten, besides writing for other journals. Author of works on the Russian opera (1886) and the history of music in Russia (1888), besides writing effective songs and piano-pieces.

Rasse, François (Helchin, 1873). Belgian composer of the opera Deïdamie, 1906.

Rastrelli, Joseph (Dresden, 1799-1842, do.). Saxon conductor and composer, pupil of his father and Mattei, in 1829 assistant-conductor at the Dresden Opera and from 1830 court-director. Wrote 7 operas, including Salvator Rosa, 1832, and considerable church-music.

Rasumovsky, Andreas Kyrillovitch (in the Ukraine, 1752-1836?). Russian admiral and from 1792 ambassador at Vienna, where in 1788 he had married one of the famous Thun sisters. He was a good violinist and, like his brother-in-law Prince Lichnowsky, a patron of Beethoven. In 1808-16 he maintained a notable Quartet (playing second, with Schuppanzigh, Weiss and Lincke). Loss of a part of his palace by fire in 1815 led to his retirement into obscurity. To him Beethoven dedicated the three quartets, op. 59 (1808) and also (with Prince Lobkowitz) the 5th and 6th Symphonies (1809). G.

Rasumovsky, Demetrius Vassilievitch (Kiev, 1818-1889, Moscow). Russian priest and church-musician, from 1866 professor at the Moscow Conservatory, from 1863 writing a long series of treatises and monographs on the music of the Greco-Russian Church.

Ratez, Émile Pierre (Besançon, 1851-1905, Lille). French composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory, from 1881 violist at the Opéra-Comique, later chorusmaster for the Colonne Concerts, and from 1891 head of the Lille Music School. Wrote the operas Ruse d'Amour, 1885, Lydéric, 1895, and Le Dragon Vert, 1907, the symphonic poem Scènes Héroïques, an orchestral suite and sinfonietta, a piano-quintet, quartet and 3 trios, a string-trio, a violin-sonata and suite, pieces for violin, oboe, horn, etc., besides text-books in harmony and counterpoint.

Rath, Felix vom (Cologne, 1866-1905, Munich). Gifted Rhenish composer, pupil of Max Pauer, Reinecke and Thuille, from about 1885 living in Munich. Wrote a symphony, a piano-concerto, a piano-quartet, a violin-sonata, piano-pieces and songs, all of notable value.

Rau, Heribert. Author of the libretto of Marschner's Adolf von Nassau (1844) and of lives of Beethoven (1852, 4th ed. 1903) and Mozart (1856, 6th ed. 1911).

Rau, Karl August (Frankfort, 1890-1921, Karlsruhe). Hessian student of music-history, educated at Lausanne, Paris and Munich (Ph.D. 1913), from 1913 active at Bückeburg (except 1915 in Frankfort), where in 1917 he organized an Institut für musikwissenschaftliche Forschung. Author of a monograph on L. Vittori (1916) and a Musikgeschichte (1918).

Rauchenecker, Georg Wilhelm (Munich, 1844-1906, Elberfeld). Bavarian conductor and composer, pupil of Th. Lachner, Baumgartner and Jos. Walter, in 1860-62 violinist at Lyons, then conductor at Aix and Carpentras, from 1868 head of the Avignon Music School, from 1873 town-director at Winterthur (Switzerland), in 1884 conductor of the Berlin Philharmonic, from 1885 director of the Musikverein at Barmen and from 1889 orchestral conductor at Elberfeld and head of his own music-school. Wrote the operas Die letzten Tage von Thule, 1889, Ingo, 1893, Don Quixote, 1897, Sanna, 1898, Zlatorog, 1903, and Der Florentiner, 1910, 2 symphonies, a wind-octet, a string-sextet, 6 string-quartets, an Orientalische Fantasie for violin with string-quintet, etc.

Rauzel, Félix (St. Quentin, 1881). French church-musician, pupil of the Schola Cantorum in Paris and the École des Hautes Études Sociales, since 1911 choirmaster at St.-Eustache and also leader of the Société de Musique Ancienne at Lille. In 1908 (with Borrel) he started at Paris the Société Hændel for the study of early music. Has written litanies and organ-pieces, with articles in periodicals, and Les Orgues de l'Abbaye de St.-Mihiel, 1920.

Raupach, Hermann Friedrich (Stralsund, 1728-1778, Petrograd). Pomeranian composer, 1756 director of the Petrograd Opera, writing the operas Alceste, 1758 (in Russian), and Siroe, 1766, 3 ballets and choruses for Neue Lorbeern.

Rautenstrauch, Johannes (Grossenhain, 1876). Saxon historical student, educated at Leipzig University (Ph.D. 1906), now teacher at the Markranstädt Gymnasium, author of a monograph on the history of the Saxon Cantoreien (1906, enlarged 1907).

Rauzzini, Venanzio Matteo (Rome, 1747-1810, Bath). Italian tenor, from 1756 singing on various Italian stages, from 1767 at Munich and in 1774-78 in London, where and at Bath he was a favorite vocal teacher. Wrote 8 operas (from 1769), 4 quartets, 3 violin-sonatas, 4-hand piano-sonatas, etc. G.

Ravanello, Oreste (Venice, 1871). Excellent Italian organist and composer, pupil of Agostini, Girardi and the Liceo Marcello, Venice, from 1893 second organist at S. Marco and from 1895 first, from 1898 maestro at S. Antonio in Padua, from 1902 teacher at the Liceo Marcello and since 1914 Pollini's successor as director of the Padua Istituto. Has written about 25 masses, 2 Requiems, many motets, 2 cantatas, pieces for string-orchestra, a string-quartet, a piano-trio, a sonata for violin and organ, many organ- and piano-pieces, methods for the organ and the harmonium, and a work on Il Ritmo del Canto Gregoriano, besides for a time editing a collection of organ-works for church-use.

Ravel, Maurice (n. Pau, 1875). Eminent French composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory (many prizes, but not the Prix de Rome), from about 1900 increasingly recognized as one of the finest of the impressionists, but with a peculiar strength and firmness in the handling of detail. He presents some analogies with Debussy, but has also been much affected by Rimsky-Korsakov and other Russians. His works include

For orchestra—overture, Shéhérazade, 1898; Rapsodie Espagnole, 1907 (4 movements, the 3d from Sites Auriculaires below); the ballets Daphnis et Chloé, La Mère l'Oye (from piano-suite) and Adélaïde (from Valse Nobles below). Piano-concerto on Basque themes.

For voice and orchestra—Asie, La Flûte Enchantée and L'Indifférent from Klingsor's Shéhérazade (1904); Le Noël des Jouets, text original (1905); Trois Poèmes from Mallarmé (with piano, strings and wood-wind).

Operas—L'Heure Espagnole, 1911 (1-act comedy); La Cloche Engloutie (not yet given).

Oratorio—St. François d'Assisi.

Chamber-music—string-quartet in F (1903-04); piano-trio in A min. (1916); Introduction and Allegro for harp, flute, clarinet and string-quartet (1906).

For piano—Menuet Antique, 1896; Pavane pour une Enfant Défunte, 1899; Joux d'Eau, 1902; Sonatine 1905; Miroirs, 1906; Gaspard de la Nuit, 1908; Sérénade Grottesque; Menuet on the name of Haydn; Valses Nobles et Sentimentales; Prélude.

(2 pianos) Les Siles Auriculaires.

(4 hands) La Mère d'Oye (5 'pieces enfantines').

For voice and piano—Ballade de la Reine Morte d'Amour (de Marès), Un Grand Sommeil Noir (Verlaine); Sainte (Mallarmé); 2 Épigrammes (Marot); Si Morne (Verhaeren); Manteau des Fleurs (Gravollet); Les Grands Vents Venus d'Outre-Mer (de Régnier); 5 Histoires Naturelles (Renard); Sur l'Herbe; Vocalise en forme d'Habanera. Also 5 Greek folk-songs (arr.)

Arrangements—Debussy's Après-Midi d'un Faune (piano, 4 hands) and Nocturnes (2 pianos).

Sketches by Malherbe, 1910 (I. M. G. Sammelbde.), Séré, 1911, Manuel, 1914, and Jean-Aubry, 1916. G.

Ravenscroft, Thomas (1593-1635?). 17th C. G.

Ravera, Niccolò Teresio (Alessandria, 1851). Italian composer, trained at the Milan Conservatory (several prizes). Has written the operas Une Folle Journée, 1888, Lucette et Colin, 1888, Fiamma, 1890, Le Divorce de Pierrot, 1892, La Mare au Diable, 1895, Pierrette Somnambule, 1900, La Sottie de Bridoye, 1902, and Estelle. At one time he was conductor at the Théâtre Lyrique in Paris.

Ravina, Jean Henri (Bordeaux, 1818-1906, Paris). French pianist, pupil of the Paris Conservatory, from 1837 a popular player and teacher in Paris, but with trips to Russia in 1853 and to Spain in 1871. From 1861 he was a member of the Légion d'Honneur. Wrote much effective salon-music and many études, besides a concerto and 4-hand arrangements of Beethoven's symphonies. G.

Raway, Erasme (Liège, 1850-1918). Belgian priest, long in Brussels. Wrote not only church-music, but the orchestral pieces Symphonie Libre, Les Adieux, Ode Symphonique, etc., the 'dilogie' Freya, 1908, and songs.

Raymond, George Lansing (Chicago, 1839). American aesthetician, in 1893-1905 professor at Princeton University, among whose various books is the valuable Rhythm and Harmony in Poetry and Music, 1895. A.

Raymond, Georges Marie (Chambéry, 1769-1839, do.). French teacher of history and mathematics at Geneva and from 1811 head of the Chambéry Collège, author of various essays on church-music, acoustics, etc. (from 1811).

Rea, William (London, 1827-1903, Newcastle). English organist and conductor, pupil of Pittman, W. S. Bennett, Droyschok and the Leipzig Conservatory, from about 1850 giving chamber-concerts in London, besides from 1843 holding church-positions, and from 1856 leading choral and orchestral societies. In 1860-88 he was municipal organist at Newcastle and from 1864 also at Shields. Mus.D. of Durham Univ. in 1886. G.

Read, Angelo McCallum (n. St. Catherine's, 1854). Canadian organist and choral conductor, pupil of the Leipzig Conservatory, appearing there in 1883, since 1894 active at Buffalo and St. Catherine's as teacher and conductor. Has written the cantatas David's Lament, 1903, A Song of the Nativity and It is Finished!, an a cappella Ave Verum Corpus, an oratorio, a mass, other church-music, piano-pieces and some overtures. A.

Reay, Samuel (Hexham, 1822-1905, Newark). English organist, pupil of Henshaw and Stimpson, in 1841-47 the latter's successor at Newcastle, then chiefly in London and in 1864-1901 at Newark-on-Trent, where he was also schoolmaster at the Grammar School and leader of a choral society. Wrote Psalm 102, services, anthems, fine part-songs and madrigals, besides editing Songs and Ballads of Northern England, 1892. In 1879 at London he introduced the two comic cantatas of Bach. G.

Rebel, François (Paris, 1701-1775, do.), son of the next. French violinist, pupil of his father and in the orchestra of the Opéra when but thirteen. There he joined Francœur, with whom in 1733-44 he shared the leadership, in 1752-53 the office of inspector and in 1757-67 and 1772-75 that of manager or impresario, besides from 1749 being in court-service. Wrote about 10 operas with Francœur (1726-49) and some church-music. G.

Rebel, Jean Ferry (1661-1747). 17th C. G.

Rebello, João Lourenço (1609-1661). 17th C.

Reber, Napoléon Henri (Mulhouse, 1807-1880, Paris). Eminent Alsatian composer, trained at the Paris Conservatory and from 1851 professor there, in 1861 taking Halévy's place and from 1871 also acting as inspector of the branch schools. In 1853 he was elected to the Académie. His style was rich and solid, but not strikingly individual or original. Wrote the comedy-operas La Nuit de Noël, 1848, Le Père Gaillard, 1852, Les Papillottes de M. Benoist, 1853, Les Dames Capitaines, 1857, Le Ménétrier à la Cour and Naïm (grand opera), the ballet Le Diable Amoureux, 1840, 4 symphonies, an overture, the scènes lyriques Roland, a suite (small orchestra), a string-quintet, 3 string-quartets, a piano-quartet, 7 piano-trios, violin- and piano-pieces, several choruses (including an Ave Maria and an Agnus Dei with organ), over 30 songs and a series of vocalises, besides an excellent text-book in harmony (1862). G.

Rebiček, Josef (Prague, 1844-1904, Berlin). Able Bohemian violinist and conductor, trained at the Prague Conservatory, in 1861-63 in the Weimar court-band, then concertmaster at the Bohemian Opera at Prague, from 1868 in a like post at Wiesbaden, from 1882 concertmaster and also director at the Warsaw Opera, in 1891-93 conductor at the Pest Opera, then conductor at Wiesbaden and in 1897-1903 conductor of the Berlin Philharmonic, following Mannstädt. Wrote a symphony, the orchestral Huldigungs- festklänge (on Dutch themes), a violin-sonata, violin- and piano-pieces.

Rebikov, Vladimir Ivanovitch (Krasnoyarsk, 1866). Eccentric Russian (Siberian) composer, pupil of the Moscow Conservatory, with further study in Berlin and Vienna, in 1894 producing an opera at Odessa, in 1898-1902 active at Kishinev as head of a branch of the Russian Musical Society and then living in Berlin and Vienna. Except in a few early works, he has pushed the use of formlessness and discord to the extreme in trying to express emotionality without intellectuality. He has also experimented with short pieces for piano or voice in which tone and physical mimicry are combined. Has written the opera In the Thunderstorm, 1894, the 'psychological' dramas The Christmas-Tree, 1903, Thea, The Abyss, The Woman with the Dagger, Alpha and Omega, Narcissus, Arachne and Les Fables de Krylov, the fairy-opera Le Prince Charmant, the pantomime Little Snow-White, 1909, 2 orchestral suites, the 'psychological' tone-pictures Esclavage et Liberté, Chansons du Cœur, Aspirer et Atteindre, Cauchemar and Conte de la Princesse et du Roi des Grenouilles, a variety of piano-suites and pieces, pictorial, fantastic and fanciful (including Méломimiques), many vocal pieces of a similarly mimetic kind, etc. Author of essays Orphée et les Bacchantes and La Musique de 1860 and a translation of Gevaert's Instrumentation. See Montagu-Nathan's Contemporary Russian Composers, 1917.

Rebling, Gustav (Barby, 1821-1902, Magdeburg). Able Saxon organist, pupil of Fr. Schneider, from 1839 active in Magdeburg, at first at the Wallonenkirche, from 1853 choirmaster at the Cathedral and teacher at the Gymnasium and from 1858 organist at the Johanniskirche. In 1846-97 he directed a church choral society. Wrote Psalms, motets, 2 cello-sonatas, organ- and piano-pieces, etc.

Rebner, Adolf (Vienna, 1876). Excellent Austrian violinist, pupil of the Vienna and Paris Conservatories, since 1896 at Frankfort, for some years as concertmaster at the Opera and playing in the Museumsquartett, in 1904 following Heermann as professor at the Hoch Conservatory and also head of his own Quartet, which has had extended success.

Redern, Friedrich Wilhelm, Graf von (Berlin, 1802-1883, do.). From 1842 government superintendent of music, including the Domchor and the army-bands. Wrote the opera Christine, 1860, a cantata, 2 overtures, band-marches, etc.

Redhead, Richard (Harrow, 1820-1901, Hellingley). Useful English church-musician, trained by Vicary at Magdalen College, Oxford, from 1839 organist at All Saints, London (Margaret St.) and from 1864 at St. Mary Magdalene (Paddington). Wrote services, canticles, etc., and edited many collections of Anglican service-music (1840-81). G.

Redman, Harry Newton (Mt. Carmel, Ill. 1869). American composer, pupil of Chadwick, since 1897 teacher at the New England Conservatory (Boston). Has written 2 string-quartets, 2 violin-sonatas, piano-pieces and songs, besides piano-studies. A.

Rée, Anton (Aarhus, 1820-1866, Copenhagen). Danish pianist, pupil of J. Schitt and K. Krebs, with some lessons from Chopin, from 1839 concertizing in Vienna and Paris and from 1842 teacher and correspondent at Copenhagen. Author of Musik-historiske Momenter, piano-pieces and studies.

Rée, Louis (Edinburgh, 1861). Scottish pianist, pupil of the Stuttgart Conservatory and of Leschetizky, settling at Vienna. Has written a piano-concerto (1910), a two-piano Suite Champêtre and set of variations, 4-hand Walzer, many other piano-works and songs. He and his wife, née Susanne Pilz, are noted for their two-piano recitals.

Reed, Thomas German (Bristol, 1817-1888, n. London). Noted English conductor and manager, appearing as pianist when but ten, in 1838-51 his father's successor as director of the Haymarket Theatre in London and from 1855, with his wife, née Priscilla Horton (1818-1895), who was both actress and singer (contralto), manager of remarkably effective 'Entertainments' (plays, operettas, etc.), to which he added also at one time a series of comic operas, as a rule the musical accompaniments being given on the piano. His son Alfred continued the enterprise till 1895. G.

Reeve, William (London, 1757-1815, do.). English composer and producer of about 40 operettas, pantomimes, etc. (from about 1790), writing also glees and songs. From 1792 he was organist at St. Martin's (Ludgate) and from 1802 part-owner of Sadler's Wells Theatre. G.

Reeves, John Sims (Woolwich, 1818-1900, Worthing). Eminent English tenor, as a youth facile with several instruments, pupil of J. B. Cramer, Calcott, Hobbs, Cooke, Bordogni and Mazzucato, making his stage-début in 1839 (as baritone) and, more significantly, in 1846 at Milan. Till about 1865 he continued to sing in opera in England with good success. But his most brilliant triumphs were in oratorio and concert, especially at the provincial festivals, many important works being written specially for him. He did not retire till 1891 and sang more or less later, even making a South African tour in 1896. Author of Fifty Years of Artistic Life, 1889, and On the Art of Singing, 1900. Memoir by H. S. Edwards, n. d. G.

Reger, Max (n. Bayreuth, 1873-1916, Jena). Distinguished Bavarian pianist and composer, educated originally as a school-teacher, in music pupil of his father and especially Riemann, beginning composition while only a boy, in 1895-96 teacher at the Wiesbaden Conservatory, from 1897 living at Weiden and from 1901 at Munich, thence making tours as pianist in Germany, Austria and Switzerland and in 1905-06 teaching at the Conservatory and leading the Porges Gesangverein, in 1907-08 music-director at Leipzig University, from 1907 for nearly ten years professor at the Conservatory, besides in 1911-14 serving as court-director at Meiningen. Mus.D. of both Jena and Heidelberg Univs. and holder of many other honors. In spite of the brevity of his life the force and fertility of his genius have made him famous. His power of original invention, his amazing command of every resource of construction and the elevation and earnestness of his creative impulse combined to lead many to call him the successor of Brahms. But the richness of his equipment led him to indulge in much overcomplexity, amounting often to useless abstruseness. He lacked a due sense of proportion, gradation and the preparation of climaxes. His greatest success was in the field of organ-music. The list of his works is as follows (opus-nos. in brackets):

For orchestra—Sinfonietta [90]; Serenade [95]; Variations and Fugue on theme by J. A. Hiller [100]; Symphonischer Prolog zu einer Tragödie [108]; Eine Lustspiel-overtüre [120]; Konzert im alten Styl [123]; Romantische Suite [125]; 4 Tondichtungen nach Böcklin [128]; Ballet-Suite [130]; Variations and Fugue on theme by Mozart [132]; Eine vaterländische Overtüre [140]. Violin-concerto in A [101]; Romanzen in G and D, for violin [50]. Piano-concerto in F min. [114]. Chamber-music—String-sextet in F [118]. Piano-quintet in C min. [64]; quintet in A, for clarinet and strings [146]. String-quartets in G min. and A [54], D min. [74], E-flat [109] and F-sharp min. [121]. Piano-quartets in D min. [113] and A min. [133]. String-trio in A min. [77b]; piano-trios in B min. [2] and E min. [102]; serenades in G min. and D min., for string-trio [141] and in D, for flute, violin and viola [77a]. Violin-sonatas in D min. [1], D [3], A [41], C [72], F-sharp min. [84], E min. [122] and C min. [139]; 11 do. for violin solo [42, 91]; 2 violin-suites in F min. [93] and A min. [103a]; Prelude and Fugue for violin [117]; some other violin-pieces. "Cello-sonatas in F min. [5], G min. [28], F min. [78] and A min. [116]; 3 suites for 'cello solo [131]. 3 suites for viola solo. Clarinet-sonatas in A-flat and F-sharp min. [49] and B [107].

For organ—Sonatas in F-sharp min. [33] and D min. [60]. Suites in E min. [16] and G min. [92]. Fantasias and Fugues in C min. [29], on B-A-C-H [46] and Symphonische [57]; Prelude and Fugue in G-sharp min.; Variations and Fugue on original theme [73]; Introduction, Passacaglia and Fugue in E min. [127]; 9 easy Preludes and Fugues [56, 85]. 7 Fantasias on chorales [27, 30, 40, 52]. 52 easy chorale-preludes [67]. 65 pieces [7, 47, 59, 63, 65, 69, 79, 80, 129, 135, 145] and Romanza in A-flat. Variations on 2 patriotic songs. Arrangements of 15 of Bach's clavier preludes and fugues, of selected chorale-preludes and of the 2-part inventions as trios (with Straube).

For piano—(two pianos) Variations and Fugue on theme by Beethoven [86]; Introduction, Passacaglia and Fugue [96].

(4 hands) About 35 pieces [9, 10, 22, 34, 58, 94]; difficult arrangements of 8 of Bach's large organ-works [89, 99, 115, 134, 143] and of his orchestral suites and Brandenburg concertos.

(2 hands) About 100 pieces [11, 13, 17, 18, 20, 24, 25, 26, 32, 36, 44, 45, 53, 82]; arrangements of Hugo Wolf's overture Penthesilea and Italienische Serenade, of d'Albert's overture Esther, of songs by Wolf, Jensen and Brahms, etc.

[Op. 79 is a miscellaneous collection of pieces for piano, for organ, for violin, for 'cello and for voice.] Church-music—Der evangelische Kirchenchor (40 choruses); 4 chorale-cantatas (Vom Himmel hoch, O wie selig, O Haupt voll Blut und Wunden, Meinen Jesum lass ich nicht); 38 motets for the Catholic service; many other pieces, often a cappella; Psalm 100 [106]; Palmsontagsmorgen.

Other choral works—An den Gesang [21]; Gesang der

Verklärten [71]; Die Nonne [112]; Die Weihe der Nacht [119]; Römischer Triumphgesang [126]; Requiem and Der Einsiedler [144]; many other choruses and part-songs, often a cappella. Vocal solos—An der Hoffnung (alto and orch.) [124]; Hymne der Liebe (baritone do.) [136]; about 300 songs, mostly with piano.

He was also author of a Modulationslehre, 1903 (12th ed. 1919). Catalogue of works by Altmann, 1917. Sketches and studies by Braungart, 1907 (in Monographien moderner Musiker). Robert-Tornow, 1907, Junk, 1910, W. Fischer, 1911, Hehemann, 1911, Rabich, 1914, Grace, 1916 (in Musical Times), Poppen, 1917, Isler, 1917, H. Unger, 1921, K. Hasse, 1921, Segnitz, 1921, Lindner, 1922, and Bagier, 1923. G.

Regis, Johannes. 15th C. G.

Regnart, Jacob (1540-1600). 16th C. G.

Rehbaum, Theobald (Berlin, 1835-1918, do.). Prussian violinist and composer, trained in the Berlin Domchor and by H. Ries and Kiel, writing both text and music for the comic operas Don Pablo, 1880, Das steinerne Herz, 1885, Turandot, 1888, etc., several choral works (including Der Muse Sendung), songs and methods for violin and viola, besides translating and editing many stage-works. He held the title of professor.

Rehberg, Willy (Morges, 1863). Able Swiss pianist and conductor, pupil of his father, the Zurich Music School and the Leipzig Conservatory, in 1885-90 teaching at the latter and also in 1888-90 leading the court-orchestra and the Singakademie at Altenburg. From 1890 he was in Geneva teaching at the Conservatory and from 1892 also conducting the city-orchestra, in 1907 went to teach at the Hoch Conservatory in Frankfurt, from 1917 co-director of the Music High School in Mannheim (with Welcker) and since 1921 Suter's successor as head of the Basel Conservatory. Has written a violin-sonata, 2 piano-sonatas, etc.

Rehfeld, Fabian (Tuchel, 1842-1920, Berlin). Prussian violinist, pupil of Zimmermann and Grünwald, in 1873-98 concertmaster of the court-orchestra in Berlin, holding the title of chamber-musician from 1868 and that of professor from 1903. Wrote able concert-pieces, including the dramatic scene Vision, Saltarello, Andante Pathétique, etc., and songs.

Reicha, Anton (Prague, 1770-1836, Paris). Eminent Bohemian composer and theorist, pupil of his uncle (leader of the Bonn court-band), from 1788 flutist in the Bonn orchestra, in 1794-99 teacher in Hamburg and in 1801-08 in Vienna. At both Bonn and Vienna he was intimate with Beethoven. From 1808 he lived in Paris, gradually winning notice as composer and excellent teacher, and from 1818 was professor at the Conservatory (succeeding Méhul). In 1831 he was elected to the Légion d'Honneur and in 1835 to the Académie. The notable clarity of his mind is shown in his dextrous chamber-music and in the brilliance of his theoretical works, though some of his doctrines in the latter have been challenged. Wrote the operas Cagliostro, 1810,

Natalie, 1816, and Sapho, 1822 (besides 2 earlier), 2 symphonies, a decet for wind and strings, an octet do., 6 string-quintets, a quintet for clarinet and strings and 24 for wind, 20 string-quartets, 6 quartets for flute and strings, a quartet for flutes, a piano-quartet with woodwind, 6 string-trios, a 'cello-trio, 24 horn-trios, 22 flute-duets, 6 violin-duets, 12 violin-sonatas, and very numerous sonatas, fugues, variations, études, etc., for piano, including L'Art de Varier (57 variations). Author of Études ou Théories pour le Piano-forte, 1800, Traité de Mélodie, 1814 (11th ed. 1911), Cours de Composition Musicale, 1818, Traité de Haute Composition Musicale, 2 vols. 1824-26, L'Art du Compositeur Dramatique, 1833, and Petit Traité d'Harmonie Pratique, n. d. Memoirs by Delaire, 1837, and Bücken, 1912, with articles by the latter in Musik, 1913, and Zeitschr. f. Musikwissenschaft. 1919-20. G.

Reichardt, Alexander (Packs, 1825-1885, Boulogne). Gifted Hungarian operatic and concert-tenor, from 1845 appearing at Lemberg and Vienna and soon favorably known in Germany, England (from 1851) and at Paris (from 1857), after 1860 living at Boulogne, where he founded a Philharmonic Society and a music-school. Wrote some effective songs. G.

Reichardt, Johann Friedrich (Königsberg, 1752-1814, n. Halle). Eminent Prussian composer and writer, pupil of K. G. Richter and Veichtner, with study at Königsberg and Leipzig Universities, in 1771-74 traveling widely in Germany, in 1776-94 court-director at Berlin under Frederick the Great and his successor, and then living mostly at his estate at Giebichenstein (n. Halle), but with further activity in Berlin after 1797, a visit to Paris in 1802-03, a sojourn in Königsberg in 1806-08, a brief term as court-director under Jerome Bonaparte at Kassel and a visit to Vienna. In 1805-06 he edited the Berliner Musikal. Zeitung. During his long Berlin career he did much to raise the significance of both operatic and orchestral music and in 1783, after a trip to Italy, instituted the Concerts Spirituels (mainly to give works not generally known), for which he prepared analytical programs. His arrogant disposition made him many enemies, leading him in 1785-86 to visit Paris and England, and after 1791 his position became increasingly difficult because of his republican sympathies. His enterprise and vigor were supported by knowledge and technical ability, but he had no marked inspiration. His vocal works, however, have importance in the development of the singspiel and the song, as was heartily recognized by Mendelssohn. Wrote about 25 operas and singspiele (from 1772), including some in Italian and one in French, a Passion, Psalms, 2 Te Deums, many other choral works, both sacred and secular, more than 125 odes, songs and ballads (about 60 on texts by Goethe), 7 symphonies (including one on the battle of Leipzig), an overture di Vittoria, 14 piano-concertos, a violin-concerto, a concertante for string-quartet and orchestra, a quintet for piano, flutes and horns, 2 piano-quartets, 6 string-trios, 11 violin-sonatas, 17 piano-sonatas, a flute-sonata, etc. His books include Ueber d. deutsche komische Oper, 1774, Briefe eines aufmerksamen Reisenden, 2 pts. 1774-76, Schreiben über d. berlinische Musik, 1775, Ueber d. Pflichten d. Ripienviolinisten, 1776, a life of H. W. Gulden [Fiorino] (1779), Händels Jugend, 1785, Bemerkungen eines Reisenden, 1788, Vertraute Briefe über Frankreich, 1792-93, Lyceum d. schönen Künste, 1797, Vertraute Briefe aus Paris, 3 parts, 1804-05, Vertraute Briefe auf einer Reise nach Wien, 2 vols. 1810, and some slighter essays. He was one of the pioneers in musical journals, editing the Musikalisches Wochenblatt and Monatsschrift from 1792 (united in 1793) and also the Musikal. Almanach from 1796. Memoirs by Schletterer, 1865 (one vol. only), C. Lange, 1902, Pauli, 1903, and G. Heinrichs, 1922. G.

Reichel, Adolf Heinrich Johann (Tursnitz, 1817-1896, Bern). Prussian pianist, pupil of Dehn and L. Berger, from 1843 teacher in Paris, from 1857 at the Dresden Conservatory and director of the Dreyssig Singakademie and from 1867 city-director at Bern. Wrote piano-concertos, trios, fugues, sonatas, etc.

Reichel, Friedrich (n. Zittau, 1833-1889, Dresden). Saxon composer, pupil of Wieck, Otto and Rietz, from 1857 choral conductor in Dresden and from 1878 organist at the Johanniskirche. Wrote a Frühlingssymphonie, a wind-octet, 2 string-quartets, motets, men's part-songs and an operetta (1875).

Reicher-Kindermann, Hedwig (Munich, 1853-1883, Trieste), daughter of the tenor Kindermann. Gifted Bavarian operatic soprano, pupil chiefly of her parents, from 1870 appearing at Munich and soon elsewhere (Bayreuth in 1876), from 1880 with Neumann's troupe at Leipzig and from 1882 on tour. Her early death cut off an artist of great power and promise. In 1875 she married Emanuel Reicher at Munich. G.

Reichert, Arno Julius (Dresden, 1866). Since 1904 head of the music-division of the Dresden Library, author of a summary of the music produced by the Dresden court-orchestra in 1858-1908. Has written a comic opera, piano-pieces, many choruses and songs, besides editing about 450 folk-songs for chorus.

Reichert, Johannes (Dresden, 1876). Saxon conductor and composer, pupil of Draeseke, Nicodé and Buchmayer, in 1896-1906 orchestra-trainer at the Dresden Conservatory, in 1902-06 also chorusmaster at the Opera and from 1889 founder of a chorus for working-people. He prepared the program-notes for the court-orchestra in 1902-13 and in 1905-13 was music-master to the Crown Prince. Since 1906 he has also been conductor at Teplitz-Schönau. Has written an overture, an orchestral Lustige Suite and Eine Nachtmusik, the choral works Helges Traum, Traumsommernacht and Die Tonkunst, many choruses, a piano-sonata and pieces, and editions of Handel's Samson and Belshazzar.

Reichmann, Theodor (Rostock, 1849–1903, Marbach, Zellersee). Able North German operatic baritone, pupil of Mantius, Elsler, Röss and Lamperti, from 1869 becoming a favorite throughout Germany, in 1882–89 engaged at the Vienna Opera, in 1889–90 at the Metropolitan, New York, and from 1893 again at Vienna. He was chosen to 'create' the rôle of Amfortas in Parsifal at Bayreuth in 1882, continuing till 1892 and reappearing in 1902. G.

Reichwein, Leopold (Breslau, 1878). Silesian opera-conductor, from about 1900 at Mannheim, from 1909 at Karlsruhe and from 1913 at Vienna, in 1921 following Schalk as conductor of the Musikfreunde Concerts and of the Singverein. Has written the operas Vasantasena, 1903, and Die Liebenden von Kandahar, 1907, music for Faust (1909) and some songs.

Reid, John [name originally Robertson] (in Perthshire, 1721–1807, London). Officer in a Highland regiment, promoted major-general in 1781. By his will a fund of £70,000 passed in 1838 to the University of Edinburgh for the maintenance of a professor of music and an annual concert. G.

Reidarson, Per (Grimstad, 1879). Norwegian violinist and composer, pupil of S. Lie, Böhn, Elling and Gédalge, from about 1900 playing in orchestras in Bergen and Christiania, and since 1913 critic at the latter for the Tidens Tegn. Has written an overture, an orchestral rhapsody, the singspiel Sommereventur, 1910, and men's choruses.

Reifner, Vincenz (Theresienstadt, 1878). Bohemian composer, educated at Prague University (Ph.D.), pupil of Kistler, now living at Teplitz. Has written the symphonic poems Frühling, Dornröschen and Die Bremer Stadtmusikanten, a Ballettouverture, a choral Ballade, piano-pieces and songs.

Reijnvaan [Reynwaen], Jean Verschuere (Middelburg, 1743–1809, Flushing). Dutch lawyer, organist and carillonneur, author of a music-catechism (1788) and two parts of the pioneer Dutch music-dictionary (1789–95, to 'M' only). Also wrote 6 violin-sonatas, Psalms, motets and songs.

Reimann, Heinrich (Rengersdorf, 1850–1906, Berlin), son of the next. Eminent Silesian organist, critic and writer, educated at Breslau University in philology (Ph.D. 1875), in 1876–86 gymnasial instructor at Strehlen, Wohlau, Berlin, Ratibor, Glatz and Gleiwitz, then turning to musical pursuits at Berlin. He had already acted as choral conductor at Ratibor and begun critical writing in 1879. At Berlin he became assistant-librarian at the Royal Library, teacher at the Scharwenka-Klindworth Conservatory, organist for the Philharmonic and from 1895 at the Kaiser Wilhelm Memorial Church and critic for the Allgem. Musikal. Zeitung. In 1898 he founded a Bach-Verein. From 1897 he held the title of royal professor. Author of lives of Schumann (1887), Brahms (1897, 3d ed. 1903), Von Bülow (1909) and Bach (1912, completed by Schrader), Zur Theorie u. Gesch. d. byzantin. Musik, 1889, (in Vierteljahrsschrift für Musikwissenschaft), Wagneriana-Lisztiana, and Musikal. Rückblicke, 2 vols. 1900, besides editing vol. ii of Ambros' Geschichte in 1892, publishing valuable collections of folk-songs, etc., secular and sacred, and preparing an edition of the St. John Passion of Bach. He also acted as chief editor for the series Berühmte Musiker. G.

Reimann, Ignaz (Albendorf, 1820–1885, Rengersdorf). Silesian church-musician of enormous fertility (about 75 masses, 25 Requiems, 4 Te Deums, 37 litanies, over 80 offertoriums, 4 oratorios, etc., besides 9 overtures and other instrumental works). He was head-teacher and choir-master at Rengersdorf. G.

Reimann, Matthieu (1544–1597). 16th C. G.

Reinach, Salomon Theodore (St. Germain, 1858). Curator of the Museum of National Antiquities at St. Germain, professor at the École de Louvre and editor of the Revue des Études Grecques. Author of several essays regarding Greek music (Aristotle's Problems, Delphian Hymn to Apollo, etc.) and the article Musica in the Dict. des Antiquités. G.

Reinagle, Alexander (Portsmouth, 1756–1809, Baltimore). Versatile English musician, from 1786 removing to Philadelphia, where he was active as pianist, singer, conductor and manager of the New Theatre (from 1794), besides writing incidental music for some plays. G. A.

Reinecke, Karl Heinrich Carsten (Altona, 1824–1910, Leipzig). Distinguished North German pianist, conductor and composer, pupil of his father and later intimate with Mendelssohn and Schumann. At eleven he played in public and was soon equally expert on the piano and the violin. In 1843, after a tour in Denmark and Sweden, he went to Leipzig, whence in 1844 he made a trip with Wasielewski to Riga, Bremen and Hanover, in 1846–48 served as court-pianist at Copenhagen and in 1851 visited Italy and Paris with Von KönigsLöw. Hiller secured him for a time as teacher at the Cologne Conservatory, but from 1854 he conducted the choral and orchestral concerts at Barmen and in 1859–60 those of the Singakademie in Breslau, besides being music-director at the University. In 1860 he returned to succeed Rietz as conductor of the Gewandhaus Orchestra (till 1895) and also to teach at the Conservatory (till 1902), after 1897 serving as director of studies. During this period he made numerous tours as virtuoso. In his playing as in his composition he was distinctly a conservative, adhering to the classical traditions in the main. But his spirit had much sympathy with the more imaginative side of romanticism and he was far from being reactionary. His works are marked by perfect form and clarity, great contrapuntal dexterity and much melodic and harmonic beauty. They include especially the following (opus-nos. in brackets):

Orchestral Works

Symphonies in A [79], C min. [134] and G min. [227]. Also a Kindersymphonie [239].
 Overtures—Dame Kobold [51], Aladdin [70], Das Jahrmarktsfest zu Plundersweilern [92], Friedensfeier [105], Fest [148], Zur Jubelfeier [166], Zenobia [193], Die Künstler (with chorus) [218] and Prologus Sollemnis [223].
Deutscher Triumphmarsch [110]; Trauermarsch (for Wilhelm I) [200]; In Memoriam, Introduction, Fugue and Choral (for Ferd. David) [128] Zur Reformationsfeier (variations on Ein feste Burg) [191]; Serenade for strings [242].
 Concertos—for piano in F-sharp min. [72], E min. [120], C [144] and B [254]; for violin in G min. [141]; for 'cello in D min. [82]; for flute in D [283]; for harp [182]. Also Konzertstück in G min. for piano [33]; cadenzas for over 40 movements in piano-concertos by Bach, Beethoven, Mozart and Weber [87]; Romanze in A min. for violin [115]; Romanzero in A min. for 'cello [263].
 Arrangement of Schumann's Bilder aus Osten.

Chamber-Music

Octet in B-flat for wind [216]; sextet in B-flat do. [271]; piano-quintet in A [83].
 String-quartets in E-flat, A [29], F [30], C [132], D [211], and G min. [287]; piano-quartets in E-flat [34] and D [272].
 String-trio in C min. [249]; piano-trios in D [38], G and E min. [159] and C min. [230]; 2 serenades for piano-trio [126]; trio in A min., piano, oboe and horn [188]; trio in B-flat for piano, clarinet and horn [264].
 For violin and piano—sonata in E min. [116]; Die Jahreszeiten (4 pieces in form of a sonata) [257]; Miniatur-Sonaten in A min. and G [213]; 3 sonatinas [108]; suite in E min. [153]; Phantasie in A min. [160]; 6 easy duets [212].
 Sonatas for 'cello in A [42], D [89] and G [238]; 3 Phantasiestücke for viola [43]; sonata, Undine, for flute [167].

Piano-Works

Sonatas—Phantasie in form of a sonata [15]; in C min. (for left hand) [179]; in A min. (4 hands) [35]; 3 for two pianos [240, 275]. Also 3 sonatinas [47].
Alle und neue Tänze [57]; Preludes and Fugues [65]; Bilder aus dem Süden [86]; Mädchenbilder [88]; Aus der Jugendzeit [106]; Von der Wiege bis zum Grabe (16 pieces) [202]; Biblische Bilder [220]; Pastellbilder [258]; 12 studies in canon (4 hands) [130].

Vocal Works

Stage-works—opera, König Manfred, 1867 [93]; comic operas, Auf hohen Befehl, 1886 [184], and Das Gouverneur von Tours, 1891; short opera, Ein Abenteuer Handels, 1874 [104]. Also incidental music for Schiller's Tell [102].
 Choral works—the fairy-tales (for soli, women's voices and piano), Nussknacker und Mausekönig [46], Schneewittchen [133], Dornröschen [139], Aschenbrödel [150], Die wilden Schwäne [164], Glückskind und Pechvogel [177], Vom Bäumlein das andere Blätter hat gewollt [190], Schneeweissen und Rosenrot [208], Die Teufelchen auf der Himmelsweise [245] and Traumfiedel [278]; (for soli, men's chorus and orchestra) Sommertagsbilder [161] and Hakon Jarl [142]; Schlachtlied [56]; Der Jäger Heimkehr [90]; Festgesang [192]; Der deutsche Sang [237]; 20 canons for women's voices; many other choruses and part-songs, large and small. Oratorio, Belsazar [73]; Ein geistliches Abendlied (with orchestra) [50]; 2 masses [95, 114].
 For solo voice—concert arias (with orchestra), Mirjams Siegesgesang (soprano) [74], Almansor (baritone) [124] and Das Hindumädchen (alto) [151]; numerous duets and songs.

Author of Was sollen wir spielen?, 1886, Und manche liebe Schatten steigen auf, 1900, Meister d. Tonkunst, 1903, Aus d. Reich d. Töne, 1907, works on Mozart's concertos (1891) and on Beethoven's sonatas (1897, 6th ed. 1912), many analyses of orchestral and operatic works, articles for the Monthly Musical Record, etc.

Biographies by Wasielewski, 1893, and Segnitz, 1900. G.

Reinecke, Karl Leopold (Dessau, 1774–1820, Güsten). Saxon violinist, pupil of Rust and J. G. Naumann, from 1798 concertmaster at Dessau. Wrote several operas, some symphonies and chamber-music.

Reiner, Fritz (Pest, 1888). Able Hungarian conductor, trained at the Pest Academy, in 1909 chorusmaster at the Komische Oper in Pest and in 1911–14 conductor at the Volksoper (in 1910 opera-conductor at Laibach), in 1914–21 conductor at the Dresden Opera and from 1922 Ysaye's successor as conductor of the Cincinnati orchestra. Has written a string-quartet and songs.

Reiner, Jacob (?1560–1606). 16th C. G.

Reinhardt, Heinrich (Presburg, 1865–1922, Vienna). Noted Hungarian popular composer and critic, pupil of Mocker and Bruckner, from about 1890 writing for various Vienna papers and becoming editor of the Tageblatt. Wrote many effective operettas, including Das süsse Mädel, 1901, Ein Mädchen für alles, 1908, Prinzessin Grell, 1914, and Die erste Frau, 1918, and the operas Die Minnekinigin and Der Schuster von Delft. Author of Die Entwicklung d. Operette und Virtuositentum u. Künstlerschaft.

Reinhold, Hugo (Vienna, 1854). Gifted Austrian pianist and composer, trained at the Vienna Conservatory and long professor at the Akademie. Has written a symphony, an overture, an Intermezzo Scherzoso, a Prelude, Minuet and Fugue for strings, a suite for piano and strings, a string-quartet, a violin-sonata, various poetic piano-pieces (2 and 4 hands), men's choruses and songs. G.

Reinhold, Theodor Christlieb (1682–1755, Dresden). From 1720 cantor at the Kreuzschule in Dresden (teacher of J. A. Hiller) and composer of many motets. G.

Reinken, Jan Adam's (1623–1722). 17th C. G.

Reinsdorf, Otto (n. Dessau, 1848–1890, Berlin). Saxon editor, pupil of Kullak and Wüerst, from 1870 on the staff of the Neue Zeitschrift at Leipzig and of the Tonhalle, besides starting two other journals, in 1875–76 in similar enterprises at Vienna and then at Berlin. His ability was restless and erratic.

Reintaler, Karl Martin (Erfurt, 1822–1896, Bremen). Eminent Thuringian organist, conductor and composer, pupil of A. G. Ritter, Marx, Gerdali and Bordogni, from 1853 vocal teacher at the Cologne Conservatory and from 1857 at Bremen as city-director, organist at the Cathedral, conductor of the Singakademie and Liedertafel, etc. In 1882 he was elected to the Berlin Akademie and from 1888 had the title of royal professor. Wrote the operas Edda, 1875, and Käthchen von Heilbronn, 1881, the oratorio Jephtha, 1858, the choral works In der Wüste, Das Mädchen von Kolah, Die Rosen von Hildesheim and a Bismarck-Hymne, Psalms, men's choruses, songs and a symphony. Several of his works won prizes. G.

Reisenauer, Alfred (Königsberg, 1863–1907, Liebau). Gifted Prussian pianist, pupil of Köhler and Liszt, making his début at Rome in 1881 and, after law-study at Leipzig, from 1886 touring not only throughout Europe, but all over the world, including Siberia. In 1900–06 he taught advanced students at the Leipzig Conservatory. Wrote orchestral variations, a string-quartet, a piano-suite, piano-pieces and Uebungen and numerous excellent songs. Memoir by Countess Schwerin, 1909.

Reiser, August Friedrich (Gammertingen, 1840–1904, Haigerloch). Württemberger composer, pupil of his father, in 1880–86 editor of the Neue Musikzeitung at Cologne. Wrote 2 symphonies, overtures, the choral work Deutsche Kreigsscene aus dem 17. Jahrh. (men's voices), a mass, many choruses and songs. Memoir by Albert Reiser, 1907.

Reiset, Count de. French diplomat at various German courts, writing the operas La Meunière de Marly, 1863, Donna Maria, 1865, etc.

Reiset, Marie. See Grandval.

Reiss, Albert (Berlin, 1870). Eminent Prussian operatic tenor, at first an actor, but from 1897 making rapid success as singer at Königsberg, Posen, Wiesbaden and Munich. Since 1901 he has been engaged at the Metropolitan, New York, but with frequent appearances in London and on the Continent. He sang at the premières of Puccini's Fanciulla del West (1910), Damrosch's Cyran (1913), Parker's Mona (1912) and Fairyland (1915), De Koven's Canterbury Pilgrims (1917), etc. In 1916–17 he managed highly successful productions of Mozart's Bastien and Schauspieldirektor (in English), as well as other little-known light operas.

Reiss, Karl Heinrich Adolf (Frankfort, 1829–1908, do.). Hessian conductor, pupil of Hauptmann, from about 1850 theater-conductor at Mayence, Bern, Basel and Würzburg, from 1854 chief director at Mayence, from 1856 Spohr's assistant and in 1857 his successor as court-director at Kassel, and in 1881–86 opera-conductor at Wiesbaden. Wrote the opera Otto der Schütz, 1856.

